

PHILO

IN TEN VOLUMES (AND TWO SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUMES)
I

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY
F. H. COLSON, M.A.

LATE FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE

AND

THE REV. G. H. WHITAKER, M.A.

LATE FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD

MCMLXXXI

American ISBN 0-674-99249-0
British ISBN 0 434 99226 7

First printed 1929
Reprinted 1949, 1956, 1962, 1971, 1981

Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS OF VOLUME I

	PAGE
PREFACE TO VOLS. I AND II . . . . .	vii
GENERAL INTRODUCTION . . . . .	ix
TABLES OF REFERENCE . . . . .	xxiii
LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS . . . . .	xxxv
ON THE ACCOUNT OF THE WORLD'S CREATION GIVEN BY MOSES (DE OPIFICIO MUNDI)—
Introduction . . . . .	2
Text and Translation . . . . .	6
ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION OF GENESIS II., III. (LEGUM ALLEGORIA)—
BOOK I. Introduction . . . . .	140
Text and Translation . . . . .	146
BOOK II. Introduction . . . . .	220
Text and Translation . . . . .	224
BOOK III. Introduction . . . . .	295
Text and Translation . . . . .	300
APPENDICES . . . . .	475

PREFACE TO VOLS. I. AND II.

THE number of persons who have read or will read Philo's works from beginning to end is probably very small, but there are many more who may wish to refer to them occasionally and in both these classes there is always likely to be a large proportion who will welcome a translation. And if this be granted, it will hardly be disputed that the time has come for a new version. The only English version known to us is that of C. D. Yonge (1854), and this is out of print and copies appear to be scarce. Yonge's work has considerable merits, but there is much that requires correction, and he had before him a less trustworthy text than that which is available at the present day. Moreover, his way of reproducing Philo's long and involved sentences in the exact form of the Greek seems to us to make the treatises duller and heavier than they need be. We have adopted a somewhat different method, without, we hope, sacrificing faithfulness to the original.

We must not, however, omit to mention the German translation by various hands, edited till his death by Cohn, which is still in progress. We have found this useful in many ways, but our chief debt is to the notes and the references which they give to Plato and the later Greek philosophers. Though a translation is not a commentary, the reader of Philo is not fairly dealt with, if his attention is not called to the fact that the author is constantly quoting or adapting Plato and the Stoic writers. Our account of these quotations and adaptations is probably very incomplete, but it would have been far more so without the help which the German translators have given us.

PREFACE

The publication of the great edition of Cohn and Wendland (1896–1914), which has now superseded that of Mangey, has left us little difficulty with regard to the text. Generally speaking, we have both of us adopted the readings of this edition, even when we have felt some hesitation, though where that hesitation has amounted to something like conviction, we have occasionally with the aid of the very complete apparatus criticus supplied by the editors adopted readings which they had rejected, and in such cases our text is often nearer to the mss. than theirs. We have also introduced a few emendations of our own, all of which are indicated in the footnotes.

It should be understood that our translation is not a collaboration in the fullest sense of the word. Each of us has carefully read and criticized the work of the other, and many of these criticisms have been accepted as improvements or corrections. But on the whole each of us remains responsible for his own work both in text and translation and not for that of his colleague. In Volume I. the whole of the translation is by Mr. Whitaker and Mr. Colson's contribution, apart from the criticisms and suggestions just mentioned, is confined to the General Introduction, a share in the Tables of Reference and a considerable part of the notes in the Appendices. In Volume II. the three treatises De Cherubim, De Sacrificiis and De Gigantibus are translated by Mr. Colson and the other two by Mr. Whitaker.

F. H. C.

G. H. W.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

It has probably seldom happened that the characteristics of a man's home and birthplace have been so faithfully reflected in his writings as they are in the writings of Philo of Alexandria. A citizen of the place which was at once the chief home of the Jewish Dispersion and the chief centre of Hellenistic culture, he owes his position in the history of religious thought mainly to that remarkable fusion of Hellenism and Judaism which we find in his voluminous writings. He has many other claims on our consideration—he is one of the most spiritually-minded of thinkers—but this is the first and most obvious.

It is not necessary to discuss the little that is known of Philo's life. It will be enough to say that he came of a rich and influential Jewish family and was trained in Greek as well as Jewish learning. The one public event in his life was his taking part in an embassy sent by the Jews of Alexandria to Caligula to complain of the persecutions which they had been suffering. This is dated A.D. 39-40, and as Philo in writing his account of the mission at some time later speaks of himself as an old man,<sup>a</sup> it has been generally held that he was born about 20 B.C. The date of his death is uncertain, but it will be seen that his lifetime covers the lifetimes of Jesus Christ and John Baptist, and much of that of St. Paul. There is no intimation that he knew anything of their life or work.

<sup>a</sup> Leg. ad Gaium 31 ; cf. ibid. 182.

INTRODUCTION

The present introduction is intended to serve mainly for the first three of the six volumes of Cohn's text.<sup>a</sup> These three volumes containing twenty-two treatises will probably occupy five volumes of this translation. These treatises, which are fairly homogeneous, do not aim at any continuous or systematic body of thought. They are expositions of what Philo conceives to be the inner and spiritual meaning of various incidents and texts in Genesis. So far his method is consistent enough. Unfortunately, perhaps—though it is a fault which is rather lovable—he is an inveterate Rambler. This word does not mean that the thoughts are disconnected. In fact it is the mark of the true Rambler that his points are always connected, and that he is unable to restrain

<sup>a</sup> But it may be well to indicate the contents of the remaining three volumes of Cohn :

(a) Biographical treatises, viz., On Abraham. On Joseph. Two books on the Life of Moses (vol. iv.).

(b) Treatises on the Mosaic Legislation, viz., On the Decalogue (vol. iv.). Four books on the Special Laws (vol. v.).

(c) Philosophical treatises, viz., On the Virtues. On Rewards, Punishments and Curses (in vol. v.). On " Goodness is Freedom " (" Quod omnis probus liber sit "). On the Contemplative Life (a work largely on the Therapeutae, which has given rise to much controversy). On the Eternity of the World (sometimes regarded as spurious). The last two make up vol. vi., together with the following :

(d) Political treatises, viz., Against Flaccus. On the Embassy to Gaius.

[Besides these there are " On Providence " and " Questions on Genesis and Exodus." As these only survive in the Armenian and are only known through the Latin translation by Aucher, they will not form part of this translation.]

INTRODUCTION

himself from following up each connexion as it occurs. Philo takes his text and expounds its philosophical meaning and proceeds to illustrate it from some other text, in which he discerns the same idea. But this second text generally contains some other words in which he finds some other idea, too valuable to be passed over. The process might, of course, go on indefinitely, but even Philo feels that there must be some limit to it and ultimately returns to his main subject.

It may be well to illustrate this characteristic by a single specimen, neither worse nor better than hundreds of others. Let the reader turn to p. 409 of this volume, i.e. Leg. All. iii. lv. § 161, where Philo has arrived at the words of the Lord to the serpent, interpreted as the evil principle of pleasure, "earth shalt thou eat all the days of thy life." That Philo should pass at once to the implied contrast between the lower and the higher food of the soul is natural enough, and thus we are at once switched off to the Manna story of Ex. xvi. All the details of this are worked out; for instance, how the command to the wanderers to gather only the day's portion for the day suggests that humanity cannot receive God's gifts all at once, but only in due measure and proportion, and other thoughts which the reader may observe for himself. But then let him note how in 169, taking the text "this is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat; this is the word which the Lord prescribed," Philo at once identifies the "word" with the "bread" and extracts a new set of thoughts about the "word." So far, though the primary "serpent" has been forgotten, the secondary "manna" has on the whole held the field. But in 177 we are again switched off by the thought of the "word" or "logos" to one of Philo's more mystical ideas, that God Himself is greater than His Word, and this is supported by the prayer of Jacob where the phrase "God who feeds me" coupled with "the Angel who delivers me from evils" teaches us that health, bodily and spiritual, is God's direct gift, while rescue from evil comes to us indirectly. Then in 179, another transition, Jacob's prayer acknowledges God and is in contrast with the words of that inferior character Joseph,<sup>a</sup> "I will nourish thee (Jacob)." And so too Joseph's mother Rachel erred when she said to Jacob "give me children," and thus what has begun as an exposition of "earth shalt thou eat" ends with one of Philo's favourite ideas that God is the parent of virtue in the soul, though, unlike earthly parents, He begets not for Himself, but for us.

INTRODUCTION

The above may serve to illustrate, not only Philo's method, but the nature and value of his deductions from Scripture. Their ingenuity is undeniable; so also is their fancifulness and even perversity, when measured by the canons of sound exegesis; and the estimates of readers will vary according as they are attracted by the first or repelled by the second. But if we would appreciate Philo fully we must remember that he combines the strongest possible belief in the inspiration of the Scriptures with the freest possible criticism. Every word of the Scriptures, particularly <sup>a</sup> Philo's constant depreciation of Joseph and Rachel in favour of Judah and Leah is a curious feature and shows us how little consciousness he had of the charm which we feel in the story of the former pair. Was there some national or tribal prejudice at the bottom of it?

INTRODUCTION

those which he attributes to the "all-wise" Moses,<sup>a</sup> is to him inspired, and quite as much in the God-guided translation of the Seventy as in the original Hebrew, which he knew but little, if at all. This belief is part of his very nature, and his patriotic instincts served to confirm it. But at the same time he is profoundly conscious that the sacred words, when taken in their literal sense, are occasionally incredible, and not infrequently trivial, or at any rate inadequate, and therefore must conceal some "underlying thought,"<sup>b</sup> which patient meditation, aided by God's grace, cannot fail to extract.

It follows that the statements of fact in these inspired narratives need not be literally true. Creation cannot, he says, have taken place in six natural days, for days are measured by the sun's course and the sun is but a portion of creation.<sup>c</sup> The literal story of Adam's rib being made into Eve he flatly calls "mythical."<sup>d</sup> Sometimes perhaps he is over-critical. The account of Joseph being sent by his father to visit his brethren is incredible, for why should a great chief like Jacob send his favourite son on such an errand instead of one of his numerous servants?<sup>e</sup> If we ask whether in a broad sense he accepted the historicity of the narratives, the answer is that he probably did. Certainly his treatment of the lives of Abraham, Joseph and Moses in the books which deal with them biographically, books in which he shows that the lives have a lesson for <sup>a</sup> A glance at the table of references to the O.T. on pp. xxviii-xxxiv will show how vast is the preponderance of quotations from the Pentateuch over those from the other books.

<sup>b</sup> ὑπόνοια.

<sup>d</sup> μυθῶδες, Leg. All. ii. 19.

<sup>c</sup> Leg. All. i. 2.

<sup>e</sup> Quod Det. 13.

INTRODUCTION

edification apart from allegory, indicates that he took them as historical, though it is suspicious to find elsewhere the statement that "perhaps<sup>a</sup> there has been an actual man, Samuel, but we understand by him a mind devoted to God's service." On the whole, a still better answer is that he did not much care about the matter. But while in his eyes it is permissible to doubt the literal, if we accept the spiritual truth, to deny both is a deadly sin, and he records with some triumph how one such scoffer was shortly by God's judgement driven to suicide.<sup>b</sup> Further, though the law is allegorical, its literal injunctions must not be disobeyed. Sabbath and circumcision have their inner meaning, but the actual rites are to that inner meaning as body to soul, and the body demands our care as the dwelling of the soul.<sup>c</sup>

If we realize this and also make due allowance for the unfamiliarity of the Platonic and Stoical dress in which his thoughts are clothed, we shall find in them not a little richness and substance. The rambling<sup>d</sup> sermon, half-analysed above, would be better described as a mosaic of sermonettes, some eight or ten in number. When set forth in such a brief analysis as is here given, they may, perhaps, appear poor things. But if studied in full they will be found, each of them, to contain an idea or ideas, which to some minds will appear fanciful, to others profound,

<sup>a</sup> Or "probably" (twos), De Ebr. 144.

<sup>b</sup> De Mut. Nom. 62.

<sup>c</sup> De Mig. 82 f.

<sup>d</sup> Though in justice it should be said that these expositions in spite of their kaleidoscopic character often have some motif which does not exactly run through them, but always tends to re-appear. Thus in the one noticed the idea of "feeding" is never long absent.

INTRODUCTION

but to hardly any, trivial. And these ideas will be none the worse for their exegetical setting. The profoundest thoughts, when stated in the abstract, are apt to seem bald and dull. They are seen at their best when set in beautiful verse as Wordsworth's, or failing this when they are brought into association with some familiar and venerated saying, which we had not suspected of bearing any such meaning. Few forms of eloquence are more effective than that in which "a mere mustard-seed of a text grows into a many-branched discourse."<sup>a</sup> And it may perhaps be said that much of Philo's exegesis is of a kind which a modern preacher might easily adapt, not indeed as expressing the intention of the original, but as showing how "fresh truth and light may break out of the Word."<sup>b</sup>

Philo is, as is here suggested, quite independently of his merits as a thinker, interesting from the mere fact that he interprets the Old Testament in terms of Greek philosophy and thus makes a link between Judaism and Hellenism. But it would be a mistake to suppose that this was his purpose. His purpose was the same as Bunyan had in The Pilgrim's Progress and The Holy War, and Dante to some extent in his Divine Comedy, namely, to set forth an allegory of the history of the human soul and its relations to God. But while Scripture to Bunyan and mediaeval eschatology to Dante were merely foundations on which they could rear the fabric which their own imagination

<sup>a</sup> George Eliot, Felix Holt, ch. iv.

<sup>b</sup> The oft-quoted words of Pastor John Robinson's farewell address to the Pilgrim Fathers, "I am very confident that the Lord has more truth and light yet to brake out of His Holy Word," would have pleased Philo well.

INTRODUCTION

created, Philo, entirely devoid of creative genius,<sup>a</sup> could never get away from the rôle of interpreter. The fact that he clothed these interpretations in the language of Greek philosophy is merely incidental. The educational ideas, the logic, physics, psychology and ethics of his day were part of his mental make-up, and he necessarily expressed himself in their terms. But incidental as they are, it is necessary to understand them, if we are to understand Philo at all.

Underlying Philo's philosophy is the conviction of the value of general education as a stepping-stone to higher things. He accepts without question the ordinary course of education of his time, commonly called the Encyclicia, consisting of literature, rhetoric, mathematics, music and logic. He enlarges several times on its value as mental training. The Encyclicia are the ornaments of the soul conceived of as the house which is being fitted to receive the Divine Lodger,<sup>b</sup> the saplings which must be planted in young minds,<sup>c</sup> the milk which must precede the meat,<sup>d</sup> the source of that spiritual strength, the "much substance" which Israel must take for its sustenance, as it journeys out of the spiritual Egypt.<sup>e</sup> But above all the Encyclicia are symbolized by Hagar,<sup>f</sup>

<sup>a</sup> When he attempts an allegory of his own, as in De Sac. 20-44, it is poor stuff.

<sup>b</sup> De Cher. 101 f.

<sup>c</sup> De Agr. 18.

<sup>d</sup> ibid. 9.

<sup>e</sup> Quis Rer. 272.

<sup>f</sup> e.g. De Cher. 5 f. It is noteworthy that this comparison has a close parallel in one of the Homeric allegories, which were common in the philosophical schools. Some philosopher (the name is variously given) said that those who dwelt too long over the Encyclicia were like the suitors of Penelope, who, when unable to win the mistress, contented themselves with the maids. How far such allegorizing of Homer influenced Philo in his treatment of the Old Testament is an interesting problem.

INTRODUCTION

for as Abraham, when Sarah bore him no child, took the handmaiden, so the young soul as yet unable to mate with philosophy must have union with the school subjects, the lower or secular education.<sup>a</sup> True, this is only useful as a stepping-stone to philosophy. If it is persisted in too long or misused, as it well may be, particularly the rhetorical branch, it breeds the sophist Ishmael and must be cast out, as he and his mother were. But in its proper place it is valuable, and Philo's insistence on this makes him one of our chief authorities on the educational ideas of his time.

In philosophy proper Philo is an eclectic, drawing from nearly all the schools.<sup>b</sup> His insistence on the significance of particular numbers, 4, 7, 6, 10 and others, which to our minds is the most fantastic part of his system, is an inheritance from the Pythagoreans. He owes something to Aristotle, notably the fourfold nature of causation,<sup>c</sup> and the doctrine of the virtues as means between extremes.<sup>d</sup> His profound sense of human ignorance and weakness make him not <sup>a</sup> μέση παιδεία. The translators have had considerable doubt as to how to render this important phrase. In strict Stoic usage μέσα = ἀδιάφορα, i.e. things which are neither good nor bad. Still sometimes the word seems to acquire the rather different force of things midway between good and bad and therefore having a definite value, though not the highest. Philo seems to use it in this way. To translate μέση παιδεία by "intermediate" or "secondary" education would be clearly impossible in view of the modern professional use of these words.

<sup>b</sup> We need not conclude from this (though some have done so) that his philosophy is a mere chaos taking at random from the different schools. His position is rather that Moses is the primary source of philosophy, and that the "little systems" of the schools are but "broken lights" of him.

<sup>c</sup> De Cher. 125.

<sup>d</sup> e.g. Quod Deus 162.

INTRODUCTION

disinclined to borrow from the Sceptics.<sup>a</sup> Platonism is a more important element. The most famous of all Plato's doctrines, the theory of Ideas, is an essential part of Philo's cosmology, and like many others he was greatly fascinated by the mysterious theories of the Timaeus. Above all it was chiefly from Plato that he learned to think of the body as the tomb or prison-house of the soul, and the putting off of material things as the true freedom. There is also a vast amount of Stoicism in Philo, though whether the Stoic outweighs the Platonist would be a difficult question to decide. To take a few instances out of many, the doctrines of the four passions,<sup>b</sup> of the sevenfold division of bodily functions,<sup>c</sup> of the fourfold classification of material things,<sup>d</sup> of sense, "presentation" and "impulse" as the three sources of consciousness and activity in living beings and of the manner in which they work,<sup>e</sup> are all Stoic. So too he recognizes the value of freedom from passion (ἀπάθεια), of "living according to nature," and of the "indifference" of neutral things (ἀδιάφορα). He accepts as a worthy expression of his ideal of virtue the Stoic phraseology that "the morally beautiful" (τὸ καλόν) is the only good.<sup>f</sup> But on the whole he is opposed to the Stoic materialism, and in what is perhaps the kernel of Stoic ethics he is profoundly anti-Stoic. Though he adapts the famous para-

<sup>a</sup> See particularly De Ebr. 154 f.

<sup>b</sup> Grief, fear, desire, pleasure. Cf. Leg. All. ii. 99, "passion is four-legged."

<sup>c</sup> Five senses, speech and reproductive power. See Leg. All. i. 11.

<sup>d</sup> Inorganic matter, plants, animal, reasoning. See Leg. All. ii. 22 f.

<sup>e</sup> ibid. 23.

<sup>f</sup> See particularly De Post. 133.

INTRODUCTION

doxes of the wise man as the truly free man, the truly rich, the true king and true citizen,<sup>a</sup> he will have none of the Stoic apotheosis of the Sage. The creed which proclaims that "man is master of his fate and captain of his soul," which pictures the just and firm-willed man as standing unmoved among the ruins of the universe,<sup>b</sup> which Lucan expressed by declaring that Pompey's cause had as much moral support as Caesar's because, while the latter had heaven on his side, the former had the true Stoic Cato<sup>c</sup>—that creed had no attraction for Philo, or rather it was blasphemy. For there is nothing on which he harps more than on the sinfulness of ascribing any faculty or virtue to ourselves instead of to God.

In fact when Philo once begins to speak of the nature of God and our relations to Him—and seldom is there a chapter without some such meditation—the Hellene gives way almost entirely to the Hebrew, and what there is of Hellenic is much more Platonic than Stoic. His more mystical side, his absorption in the thought of the Divine and our union with it, are matters on which one can hardly enlarge here. But the ruling idea of his theology is that while God is absolutely removed from us, incomprehensible and only known as absolute being, He is also infinitely close to us, in fact at once transcendent and immanent. As is well known, Philo solved this antinomy by postulating, as intermediaries between the uncreated and the created, the Logos or Divine Reason, and also "Powers" or "Potencies," the two chief of which are goodness and sovereignty represented in the Old Testament by the names of "God" and

<sup>a</sup> De Sobr. 56 f.

<sup>b</sup> Hor. Odes, iii. 3. 1-8.

<sup>c</sup> Phars. i. 128, "Victrix causa deis placuit sed victa Catoni."

INTRODUCTION

“ Lord ” respectively. Of these intermediaries, the Logos has attracted more attention than any other Philonic question, mainly, no doubt, because of the similarity—and dissimilarity—of Philo’s conception to that of the Prologue of the Fourth Gospel. Whether either the Logos or the Potencies are thought of as distinct personalities, or as emanations or attributes, cannot be discussed here.

If Philo is a link between Judaism and Hellenism, he is also a link between Judaism and Christianity, and that in two different ways. In the first place, quite apart from the relation of his Logos to the Johannine there is a certain affinity between Philonism and the New Testament, which will at once attract and disappoint the student. Philo’s conceptions of Conscience as the inward Judge, of the Spirit, of Faith, of Sonship, of Immortality,<sup>a</sup> and many other conceptions of the same kind, are sufficiently like the uses of the same terms in the Epistles to make comparison fruitful. But except perhaps in the case of the first-named, where his attitude shows a great advance above his Stoic predecessors and a remarkable approximation to the Christian view, there are differences which to many will seem to outweigh the likeness. The same may be said of the comparatively few cases where Old Testament incidents are treated allegorically in both.<sup>b</sup> The same again of the far more numerous cases, where a word or phrase or an incidental thought seem to find an echo in the New Testament.<sup>c</sup> So far the connexion between Philo

<sup>a</sup> For a discussion of these conceptions see H. A. A. Kennedy, Philo’s Contribution to Religion (Hodder and Stoughton).

<sup>b</sup> e.g., the Brazen Serpent, Manna, the Rock, Melchisedek.

<sup>c</sup> e.g., “hungering and thirsting after excellence” (De

INTRODUCTION

and Christian thought is one that springs from their common heritage and atmosphere, and their common ideals and temperament. There is no direct contact or conscious borrowing. But when the first century or so of Christianity is passed we find something more. Philo becomes something of a power in the Church. It is true that the Christian mind eager to find in the Old Testament figures and types of Christ could not altogether welcome his kind of exegesis, and indeed Augustine, while acknowledging his acuteness, deploras this deficiency.<sup>a</sup> Still otherwise his treatment of the books made a great impression on some of the Fathers, and his Logos doctrine was, superficially at least, sufficiently like that of the Fourth Gospel to suggest that his was an "anima naturaliter Christiana." His influence is probably to be seen in Justin, and is obvious in the two great liberal Christians of Alexandria, Clement and Origen. Among the Latin Fathers, Ambrose uses him very considerably. Doubtless this feeling of his affinity to Christianity helped to preserve his works, when Fuga 139 with Matt. v. 6); "to call the things that are not into being" (Spec. Leg. iv. 187 with 1 Cor. i. 28); "the true wealth is stored up in heaven" (De Praem. 104 with Matt. vi. 20); "God swears by no other than Himself, for there is nothing greater than Him" (Leg. All. iii. 203 with Heb. vi. 13); the epithet "cutter" (τομεύς) applied to the Word or Reason (Quis Rer. Div. 130 with Heb. iv. 12 where the word is sharper (τομωτέρα) than any sword); the bridled or unbridled tongue (Som. ii. 275 with James i. 26); the sadness of the thought that the same tongue utters good and evil (De Dec. 93 with James iii. 10). These resemblances are particularly common in the Epistle of James, Mayor's edition gives over seventy such. A collection of parallels of this kind to the New Testament as a whole is given in Siegfried's Philo von Alexandria, pp. 303-330.

<sup>a</sup> Contra Faustum, xii. 39.

INTRODUCTION

so much of the post-Aristotelian philosophy has perished.

Philo, as a writer, has many faults besides those which have been already mentioned. He is sometimes painfully pedantic. He has an annoying way of piling up examples in support of a platitude, and the rhetorical speeches, which particularly in the biographical treatises he puts into the mouths of his personages, are stilted and frigid to the point of absurdity.<sup>a</sup> Yet, even when he is most pedantic, we have glimpses of a fine spiritual mind, and scattered throughout the books are passages of much beauty and eloquence. The translators hope that if they are spared to complete this version it may serve to win him some admirers among those to whom hitherto he has been little more than a name.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> As an example of the first we may take the examples of truth or falsehood in Leg. All. iii. 121; of the second the address of Joseph to Potiphar's wife in De Jos. 41 ff. The former of these might almost remind one of the discourse of the Rev. Mr. Chadband in Bleak House on "What is terewth." Of the latter Edersheim remarks that "it would have extinguished the most ardent passion."

<sup>b</sup> The translators think that an apology is due to one section of their prospective readers. They have not felt themselves capable of indicating in any way how far and where Philo shows dependence on the Palestinian tradition, which in its two different aspects is known as the Haggada and Halacha. Even if their combined knowledge of Hebrew and Jewish lore was much greater than it is, the absence of any written record of this tradition till a long time after Philo puts his dependence on these sources on a totally different footing from his dependence on the Greek philosophers, for which we can so often give chapter and verse. The Jewish scholar to whom this subject will naturally be of considerable interest will find some discussion of it in the article on Philo in the Jewish Encyclopaedia and a fuller treatment in Siegfried's Philo von Alexandria, pp. 142-159.

TABLES OF REFERENCE

THE student of Philo constantly finds that the treatment of some Old Testament personage or text recalls a similar treatment in some earlier book or some earlier part of the same book. But the author's rambling method renders it anything but easy to trace these earlier handlings. Accordingly, since it may be a long time before the translators are in a position to give a general index to the whole of Philo, they have compiled the subjoined tables from the indexes added by Leisigang as a seventh volume to Cohn and Wendland's text. It should be carefully noted that as these tables are intended for purposes of comparison merely, they do not contain any names or texts which only occur once. Furthermore this principle has been extended to cases where, though the name or text is repeated, the repetition belongs to the same context or treatment. Thus the sections numbered are merely those in which such treatment begins, and to make a proper comparison the student will constantly have to read several sections beyond those referred to.

ABBREVIATIONS USED

Abr. = De Abrahamo.

Aet. = De Aeternitate Mundi.

Agr. = De Agricultura.

Cher. = De Cherubim.

Conf. = De Confusione Linguarum.

INTRODUCTION

ABBREVIATIONS USED (continued)

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| Cong. = De Congressu Eru-ditionis gratia. Cont. = De Vita Contempla-tiva. Decal. = De Decalogo. Det. = Quod Deterius Potioriinsidiari solet. Deus = Quod Deus sit Immu-tabilis. Ebr. = De Ebrietate. Exs. = De Exsecrationibus. Fug. = De Fuga et Inventione. Gig. = De Gigantibus. Her. = Quis rerum divinarumheres sit. Jos. = De Josepho. L.A. i. ii. iii. = Legum Alle-goriarum. Mig. = De Migratione Abra-hami. | Mos. i. ii. = De Vita Mosisi. ii. Mut. = De Mutatione Nomi-num. Op. = De Opificio Mundi. Plant. = De Plantatione. Post. = De Posteritate Caini. Praem. = De Praemiis etPoenis. Prob. = Quod omnis probusliber. Sac. = De Sacrificiis Abelis etCaini. Sob. = De Sobrietate. Som. i. ii. = De Somniis i. ii. Spec. = De Specialibus Legi-bus. Virt. = De Virtutibus. |
|---|--|

NOTE.—Explanatory words in italics in the following list give Philo's etymology of the name.

Aaron generally = uttered thought, also "mountainous" and therefore "lofty." L.A. iii. 45, 103, 125, Det. 132, Ebr. 128, Mig. 78, 169, Mut. 208.

Abel = the mind which "refers all to God." Sac. and Det. passim, Mig. 74.

Abihu, v. Nadab.

Abram or Abraham. Besides a great number of references to him as "the wise," "the faithful," etc., illustrated by many texts and incidents, note particularly the interpretation of Abram = the uplifted father, Abraham = the elect father of sound, and for Philo's explanation of these phrases, L.A. iii. 83, Cher. 4, Gig. 62, Mut. 66, 71, Abr. 82. Abraham also stands for "virtue gained by instruction." Cong. 35, Mut. 12, Som. i. 160, 168, Abr. 52, Mos. i. 76.

Adam = the (earthly) mind contrasted with Eve = sense-perception. Op. 165, L.A. i. 25, ii. 13, iii. 50, 246, Cher. 10, 57, Plant. 46, Her. 52, Som. ii. 70. See also Eve.

INTRODUCTION

- Amalek = people licking up. L.A. iii. 186, Mig. 143.
 Amorites = vain talkers. L.A. iii. 232, Her. 302, 308.
 Asher = material wealth. Mig. 95, Som. ii. 35.
 Baal-Peor = solid hide. Conf. 55, Mut. 107.
 Balaam = foolish people. Cher. 32, Det. 71, Deus 181,
Conf. 64, 159, Mig. 115.
 Benjamin = son of days. Mut. 92, Som. ii. 36.
 Bezalel = in God's shadow. L.A. iii. 95, Plant. 26, Som. i. 206.
 Bilhah = swallowing. L.A. ii. 96, iii. 146, Cong. 30.
 Cain = possession, and thus the self-asserting principle. Cher.
 from 40 to end, Sac. and Det. passim, Post. 33, Conf. 122.
 Canaan = tossing—land of. Sac. 90, Cong. 83. The son of Ham. L.A. ii. 62, Sob. 44.
 Cherubim. Cher. 1-40 passim, Fug. 100.
 Dan = judgement. L.A. ii. 94, Agr. 95, Som. ii. 35.
 Dinah = judgement. Mig. 223, Mut. 194.
 Dothan = thorough quitting. Det. 28, Fug. 128.
 Eden = delight. L.A. i. 64, Cher. 12, Post. 32, Plant. 32.
 Edom = earthly. Deus 144, Mig. 146.
 Egypt and Egyptians = the body, passim. For "the king of Egypt" see Pharaoh.
 Enoch = thy gift. Post. 35, Conf. 122, Abr. 17.
 Enos = man. Det. 138, Abr. 8, Praem. 14.
 Ephraim and Manasseh = memory (fruit-bearing) and recol- lection respectively. L.A. iii. 90, Sob. 28, Mig. 205,
Cong. 40, Mut. 98.
 Er = leathern. L.A. iii. 69, Post. 180.
 Esau, a type of folly in general, nearly always in contrast to Jacob. L.A. iii. 2, 88, Sac. 17, 120, 135, Det. 45, Ebr. 9, Sob. 26, Mig. 153, Her. 252, Cong. 61, 175, Fug. 39.
 Euphrates = (fruitfulness), justice. L.A. i. 72, Som. ii. 255.
 Eve (often called "the woman") = sense-perception. Op. 165,
L.A. ii. 38, 70, iii. 50, 200, Cher. 57. = life. Agr. 95,
Her. 52. (Other passages where "mind" is regarded as male, "sense" as female, without specified reference to Adam and Eve.)
 Hagar = the lower education or learning of the schools
 (see General Introduction, pp. xvi, xvii). L.A. iii. 244.
Cher. 3, Sac. 43, Post. 130, Cong. 12 and passim, Fug. 202, Mut. 255.
 Hannah = her (i.e. Wisdom's) grace. Deus 5, Ebr. 145,
Mut. 143, Som. i. 254.

INTRODUCTION

- Haran=hole, and thus the place of outward sense. Mig. 188, Fug. 45, Som. i. 41, Abr. 72.
- Hebron=companion, and so the body. Det. 15, Post. 61.
- Isaac=laughter, joy, happiness. L.A. i. 82, Cher. 7, 106, Det. 46, 124, Plant. 168, Mut. 131, 157, Abr. 201, Praem. 31. As the self-taught = virtue given by nature, or taught by God or Virtue's self, very frequent, see particularly Cong. 36, Abr. 52.
- Ishmael=the sophist. Cher. 8, Sob. 8. = hearing (as lower than seeing). Fug. 208, Mut. 201.
- Israel=seeing God, whether of the man or the nation, very frequent. Often "He who sees" without the name.
- Issachar=reward, and thus worker. L.A. i. 80, Plant. 134, Ebr. 94, Som. ii. 34.
- Jacob—particularly = the supplanter; or the Practiser; very common. Often by either of these titles without the name.
- Jethro=the uneven or worldling. Sac. 50 (see Note), Ebr. 36, Mut. 103.
- Joseph=political, generally indicating a plane of life lower than the philosophical and sometimes even materialistic. L.A. iii. 179, 237, Cher. 128, Det. 5, Deus 119, Conf. 71, Mig. 203, Her. 256, Mut. 89, 215, Som. i. 78, 219, ii. 1-109 passim, Jos. passim.
- Judah=he who confesses (and praises) God. L.A. i. 80, ii. 95, iii. 26, 146, Plant. 134, Cong. 125, Mut. 136, Som. ii. 34.
- Laban=white, the lover of transient brightness. L.A. iii. 16, Cher. 67, Det. 4, Agr. 42, Ebr. 47, Mig. 28, 213, Her. 43, Fug. 9, 44, Som. i. 225.
- Leah=toiling virtue. L.A. iii. 180, Cher. 41 (see Note), Post. 135, Sob. 12, Mig. 145, Cong. 25, Mut. 254.
- Levi and Levites. L.A. ii. 51, Sac. 119-139 passim, Det. 132, Ebr. 65, Plant. 62, Her. 124, Fug. 88, Som. ii. 34, 273.
- Lot=turning away; (his daughters = Counsel and Assent). Post. 175, Ebr. 164, Mig. 13, 148, 175.
- Manasseh, see Ephraim.
- Midian=(from) judgement. L.A. iii. 12, Conf. 55, Mut. 106.
- Miriam=sense. L.A. ii. 66, iii. 103, Agr. 80.
- Moses—passim. (Cohn's index gives nearly 300 references.)
- Nadab and Abihu (whose destruction for presumption Philo strangely construes as an exaltation). L.A. ii. 57, Mig. 168, Her. 309, Fug. 59, Som. ii. 67.

INTRODUCTION

- Noah = rest. The story of his life is the basis of the treatises Deus from 70, Agr., Plant., Ebr., Sob. Besides these, L.A. ii. 60, iii. 77, Det. 105, Gig. 1, Cong. 90, Her. 260, Abr. 27.
- Nod = tossing. Cher. 12, Post. 32.
- Onan. Post. 180, Deus 16.
- Passover. L.A. iii. 154, Sac. 63, Mig. 25, Her. 192, Cong. 106.
- Pharaoh = the dispenser (of the good), or as king of Egypt = the earthly mind as king of the body. L.A. iii. 12, 212, 236, Sac. 48, Ebr. 111, 208, Conf. 88, Her. 60, Som. ii. 183, 211, 279, Abr. 103.
- Phinehas. L.A. iii. 242, Post. 182, Conf. 57, Mut. 108, Mos. i. 301.
- Rachel = superficiality. L.A. ii. 46, Post. 135, Ebr. 54, Sob. 12, Cong. 25.
- Rebecca = patience. L.A. iii. 88, Cher. 41, Sac. 4, Det. 30, 45, Post. 132, Plant. 169, Mig. 208, Cong. 37, Fug. 23, 194, Som. i. 46.
- Reuben = excellence of nature. Sac. 119, Mut. 98, Som. ii. 33.
- Samuel = appointed for God. Deus 5, Ebr. 144, Mig. 196, Som. i. 254.
- Sarah = sovereignty, Sarai = my sovereignty; the former is interpreted as generic sovereign wisdom or virtue, the latter as the same personal or specific. L.A. ii. 82, iii. 217, 244, Cher. 7, 41, Det. 59, Post. 28. See Ebr. 59, Mig. 126, Her. 258, Cong. 24, Fug. 128, Mut. 77, 255, Abr. 99, 206.
- Seth = watering. Post. 10, 124, 170.
- Shechem = shoulder, and so toil. L.A. iii. 25, Det. 9, Mig. 221, Mut. 193.
- Shem = generic good. Sob. 51, Mut. 189.
- Simeon = hearing. Ebr. 94, Mig. 224, Mut. 99.
- Sodom = blindness and barrenness. Ebr. 222, Conf. 27, Fug. 144, Som. ii. 192.
- Syria = lofty. L.A. iii. 18, Cong. 41, Fug. 44.
- Zipporah = bird. Cher. 41, Mut. 120.

INTRODUCTION

TEXTS FROM THE OLD TESTAMENT

GENESIS

- Gen. i. 1, 2. Aet. 19.
1. Op. 26, Her. 122.
2. Op. 32, L.A. i. 33, Gig. 22.
4, 5. Her. 163.
4. Op. 30, Som. i. 75, Abr. 156.
14. Op. 59, Plant. 118.
24. Op. 64, L.A. i. 11.
26. Op. 69, 72, Conf. 169, Fug. 68.
27. Op. 25, L.A. iii. 96, Plant. 19, Her. 164, 231,
Fug. 71, Som. i. 74.
31. Mig. 42, 135, Her. 159.
ii. 1. L.A. i. 1, Her. 122.
2, 3. Post. 64.
2. L.A. i. 2, 16, Her. 122.
3. L.A. i. 17, 18.
4, 5. Op. 129, L.A. i. 21.
4. L.A. i. 19, Her. 122.
6. Op. 131, L.A. i. 28, Post. 127, Fug. 178.
7. Op. 134, L.A. i. 31, iii. 161, Det. 80, Plant. 19,
Her. 56, Som. i. 34, Spec. iv. 123.
8. L.A. i. 41, 43, Plant. 32, Conf. 61.
9. L.A. i. 56, Plant. 44, Mig. 37.
10. L.A. i. 63, Post. 128, Som. ii. 241.
15. L.A. i. 53, 88.
19. Op. 148, L.A. ii. 9, Mut. 63.
21. L.A. ii. 19, 31, 35, Her. 257.
24. L.A. ii. 49, Gig. 65.
iii. 9. L.A. iii. 49, Som. i. 192.
14, 15. L.A. iii. 65.
14. L.A. iii. 107, 160, 161, Mig. 66.
15. L.A. iii. 182, Agr. 107.
19. L.A. iii. 252, Mig. 3.
23. L.A. i. 96, Cher. 1.
iv. 2. Cher. 40, Sac. 1, 11, 51, Agr. 21.
7. Agr. 127, Sob. 50, Mut. 195.
12. Det. 104, 112, Praem. 72.
13. Det. 141, Conf. 165.

INTRODUCTION

- Gen. iv. 15. Det. 177, Fug. 60.
 16. Cher. 12, Det. 163, Post. 1.
 17. Post. 33, Conf. 122.
 25. Cher. 54, Post. 10, 124, 170.
 26. Det. 138, Abr. 9.
 v. 1. Det. 139, Abr. 9.
 24. Mut. 34, Abr. 17, Praem. 16.
 vi. 5-7. Deus 20, Conf. 24.
 8. L.A. iii. 77, Deus 70, 109.
 9. Deus 117, Abr. 31.
 ix. 20, 21. Agr. 1, Plant. 140.
 20. Det. 105, Plant. 1.
 21. L.A. ii. 60.
 xi. 4. Post. 53, Conf. 107.
 6. Post. 53, Conf. 162.
 xii. 1-3. Mig. 1.
 1, 2. Her. 277.
 1. L.A. ii. 59, iii. 83, Det. 159, Mig. 43, Her. 69.
 2. Mig. 86, 106.
 3. Mig. 109, 118.
 4. Mig. 176, Som. i. 47.
 7. Det. 159, Abr. 77.
 xv. 5. L.A. iii. 39, Her. 76, 86.
 6. L.A. iii. 228, Deus 4, Mig. 44, Her. 90,
Mut. 186, Abr. 262, Virt. 216.
 18. Her. 313, Cong. 119, Som. ii. 255.
 xvii. 1. Gig. 63, Mut. 1, 18, Decal. 38.
 15-17. L.A. iii. 85, 217, Mut. 154, 175, 188.
 19. L.A. iii. 85, Mut. 253.
 xviii. 11, 12. L.A. iii. 218.
 11. Cher. 50, Det. 28, Post. 134, Ebr. 60, Fug. 128, 167, Som. ii. 185.
 17. L.A. iii. 27, Som. 56.
 22, 23. L.A. iii. 9, Cher. 18, Post. 27.
 22. Som. ii. 226.
 23. Mig. 132.
 24 ff. Sac. 122, Deus 161, Mig. 122, Her. 30,
Cong. 109, Som. i. 214.
 xix. 24. Som. i. 85, Abr. 138.
 26. L.A. iii. 213, Fug. 121.
 33. Post. 176, Ebr. 166.
 xx. 12. Ebr. 61, Her. 62.

INTRODUCTION

- Gen. xxi. 6. L.A. ii. 82, iii. 219, Det. 123, Mut. 138.
 33. Plant. 85, Mut. 190.
- xxii. 1-4. Mig. 139, 166, Som. i. 64, 195.
 16. L.A. iii. 203, Abr. 273.
- xxiii. 6. Mut. 152, Som. ii. 244, Abr. 261, Virt. 216.
 9. Post. 62, Som. ii. 26.
- xxiv. 16. Post. 132, Fug. 195.
 63. L.A. iii. 43, Det. 29.
- xxv. 6. Sac. 43, Mig. 94.
 23. L.A. iii. 88, Sac. 4, Cong. 129.
 27. L.A. iii. 2, Plant. 44, Cong. 62.
- xxvi. 2. Det. 46, Conf. 81, Mig. 29.
 5. Mig. 130, Abr. 275.
- xxvii. 20. Sac. 64, Deus 92, Ebr. 120, Fug. 169.
 30. Sac. 135, Ebr. 9.
 36. L.A. iii. 195, Post. 57.
- xxviii. 2. Post. 76, Fug. 48.
 17. Mig. 5, Som. i. 185.
 21. Plant. 90, Som. i. 163.
- xxix. 31. L.A. ii. 47, iii. 180, Post. 135, Her. 51, Mut.
 132, 255.
 35. L.A. i. 80, iii. 146, Plant. 134, Som. i. 37.
- xxx. 1. L.A. ii. 46, iii. 180.
 2. L.A. ii. 46, Post. 179.
 18. L.A. i. 80, Plant. 134.
 36. Sac. 46, Agr. 42.
 42. Her. 180, Fug. 9.
- xxxi. 14-16. Her. 44, Fug. 15.
 20, 21. L.A. iii. 16, Fug. 7.
- xxxii. 28. Ebr. 82, Mut. 44.
- xxxvii. 3. Det. 6, Som. i. 220, Jos. 32.
- xxxviii. 9. Post. 180, Deus 16.
 14, 15. Cong. 124, Mut. 134.
 18 ff. Cong. 126, Fug. 149, Som. ii. 44.
- xxxix. 1 ff. L.A. iii. 236, Deus 111, Ebr. 210, Mut. 173, Jos. 40.
 7. L.A. iii. 237, Mig. 19.
- xl. 8. Cher. 128, Mig. 19.
- xli. 43. Mig. 160, Som. ii. 16, 46.
 48. Mut. 90, Som. ii. 46.
- xlii. 11. Conf. 41, 147.
 36. L.A. i. 61, Som. ii. 207.

INTRODUCTION

- Gen. xlvii. 3. Sac. 48, Agr. 59.
xlviii. 15, 16. L.A. iii. 177, Deus 157, Conf. 181, Fug. 67.
xlix. 15. L.A. i. 80, Mig. 221.
16-18. L.A. ii. 94, Agr. 94.
22. Sob. 12, 68.
l. 19. Mig. 22, 160, Som. ii. 107, Jos. 266.
7. Mig. 159.

EXODUS

- Exod. i. 11. Post. 54, Som. i. 77.
i. 20. L.A. iii. 243.
21. L.A. iii. 3, Mig. 215.
ii. 12. L.A. iii. 37, Fug. 148.
23. L.A. iii. 212, Det. 94, Conf. 93, Mig. 15.
iii. 6. Fug. 141, Mut. 134.
14. Det. 160, Mut. 11, Som. i. 231.
15. Mut. 12, Abr. 51.
iv. 10. Sac. 12, Det. 38, Her. 4.
14. Det. 126, Mig. 79, Mut. 168.
v. 2. L.A. iii. 243, Post. 115, Ebr. 19, 77.
vii. 1. L.A. i. 40, Sac. 9, Det. 161, Mig. 84, Mut. 19,
Som. ii. 189, Post. 43.
15. Conf. 29, Som. i. 277.
viii. 26. Sac. 51, Fug. 18.
ix. 29. L.A. iii. 43, Ebr. 101, Mut. 21.
xii. 4. L.A. iii. 165, Her. 193.
11. L.A. iii. 154, Sac. 63, Mig. 25.
xiv. 30. Conf. 36, Som. ii. 280.
xv. 1. L.A. ii. 102, Ebr. 111, Som. ii. 269.
23-25. Post. 156, Mig. 36, Cong. 163.
xvi. 4. L.A. iii. 162, Fug. 137, Mut. 259.
15. L.A. iii. 173, Fug. 137.
xvii. 6. L.A. iii. 4, Sac. 67, Conf. 138, Mig. 183,
Som. ii. 221.
12. L.A. iii. 45, Prob. 29.
xix. 6. Sob. 66, Abr. 56.
xx. 18. Mig. 47, Decal. 47.
19. Post. 143, Her. 19, Som. i. 143.
21. Post. 14, Mut. 7, Mos. i. 158.
23. L.A. i. 51, Spec. i. 22.
xxi. 5. L.A. iii. 198, Cher. 72, Her. 186.

INTRODUCTION

- Exod. xxi. 12-14. Sac. 133, Conf. 160, Fug. 53, 75, 93, Spec.
iii. 120.
22, 23. Cong. 137, Spec. iii. 108.
xxii. 6. L.A. iii. 248, Her. 296.
xxiii. 1. Conf. 141, Spec. iv. 59.
2. Ebr. 25, Mig. 61, Spec. iv. 45.
xxiv. 10. Conf. 96, Som. i. 62, ii. 222.
18. Som. i. 36, Mos. ii. 70.
xxv. 10. Ebr. 85, Mut. 43.
xxviii. 4. Ebr. 85, Mut. 43.
26. L.A. iii. 118, Her. 303.
xxxi. 2 ff. L.A. iii. 95, Gig. 23, Plant. 26, Som. i. 206.
xxxiii. 7. L.A. ii. 54, iii. 46, Det. 160, Gig. 54, Ebr. 100.
11. Her. 21, Mos. i. 156.
13. L.A. iii. 101, Post. 13, Mut. 8, Spec. i. 41.
23. Post. 169, Fug. 165, Mut. 9.
xxxvi. 10. Sac. 83, Her. 131.

LEVITICUS

- Lev. ii. 11. Cong. 169, Spec. i. 291, ii. 182.
viii. 29. L.A. iii. 129, Mig. 67.
x. 1 f. L.A. ii. 57, Her. 309, Fug. 59.
8-10. Ebr. 2, 127, Spec. i. 98, iv. 191.
xi. 21. L.A. ii. 105, Her. 239.
42. L.A. iii. 139, Mig. 64.
xvi. 8. L.A. ii. 52, Plant. 61, Her. 179.
17. Her. 84, Som. ii. 189.
xvii. 11. Det. 80, Her. 56, Spec. iv. 123.
xix. 4. L.A. iii. 22, Spec. i. 25.
9. Som. ii. 23, Virt. 90.
23. L.A. i. 52, Plant. 95, Virt. 156.
24. Som. i. 33, Abr. 13, Virt. 158.
xxi. 11. Fug. 113, Spec. i. 113.
13, 14. Fug. 114, Som. ii. 185, Spec. 101.
xxiii. 27. Post. 48, Cong. 107.
xxv. 10. Sac. 122, Mut. 228.
23. Cher. 119, Spec. ii. 113.
xxvi. 10. Sac. 79, Her. 279.
12. Sac. 87, Mut. 266, Som. i. 148, ii. 248, Praem.
123.

INTRODUCTION

NUMBERS

- Num. vi. 2. Som. ii. 25.
5. Som. i. 253.
9. Agr. 175, Fug. 115.
12 f. L.A. i. 17, Deus 87.
xi. 16. Sac. 77, Sob. 19.
xii. 7. L.A. ii. 67, iii. 103, 204, 228.
xiv. 9. Post. 122, Mut. 265.
xix. 15. Det. 103, Conf. 167.
xxi. 8. L.A. ii. 79, Agr. 95.
16-18. Ebr. 113, Som. ii. 271, Mos. i. 255.
xxii. 31. Cher. 35, Deus 18.
xxiii. 19. Sac. 94, Deus 53, Conf. 98, Mig. 113, Som. i. 237.
xxv. 3. Conf. 55, Mut. 107.
7-13. L.A. iii. 242, Post. 182, Ebr. 73, Conf. 57, Mut. 108.
xxviii. 2. L.A. iii. 196, Cher. 84, Sac. 111, Deus 6,
Mig. 142.
xxix. 13 f. Mig. 202, Fug. 186.
xxx. 4-10. L.A. ii. 63, Det. 147, Spec. ii. 24.
xxxi. 28 f. Mig. 139, Her. 120, Som. ii. 29.
49, 50. Ebr. 114, Conf. 55, Mut. 109. xxxv. 25. Fug. 116, Spec. i. 161.

DEUTERONOMY

- Deut. i. 31. Sac. 101, Deus 54.
iv. 4. Fug. 56, Spec. i. 31, 345.
39. L.A. iii. 4, 32, Mig. 182.
v. 5. Her. 206, Som. ii. 229.
31. Sac. 8, Post. 28, Gig. 48, Deus 23, Conf. 31,
Som. ii. 227.
vi. 10, 11. Deus 94, Fug. 175.
viii. 15, 16. L.A. ii. 84, Som. ii. 222.
17, 18. Sac. 56, Agr. 172, Virt. 165.
x. 9. L.A. ii. 51, Plant. 63, Cong. 134, Fug. 102,
Som. i. 159.
xiv. 1. Conf. 145, Spec. i. 318.
xvi. 20. Cher. 15, Det. 18, Spec. iv. 66, 169.
xix. 14. Post. 89, Spec. iv. 149.
xx. 1. Agr. 78, Mig. 62.
5-7. Agr. 148, Virt. 28.

INTRODUCTION

- Deut. xx. 20. Agr. 12, Spec. iv. 229.
xxi. 15-17. L.A. ii. 48, Sac. 19, Sob. 21, Her. 49, Spec. ii. 136.
18-21. Ebr. 14, 28, 93, Mut. 206, Spec. ii. 232.
xxii. 8. Agr. 170, Spec. iii. 149.
xxiii. 1, 2. Deus 111, Ebr. 213, Conf. 144, Mig. 69,
Mut. 205, Som. ii. 184, Spec. i. 326.
12, 13. L.A. ii. 27, iii. 151.
15, 16. L.A. iii. 194, Virt. 124.
17. Mig. 224, Jos. 43, Spec. i. 326, iii. 51.
xxv. 11, 12. Som. ii. 68, Spec. iii. 175.
13-16. Her. 162, Som. ii. 193.
xxvii. 9. Her. 10, Som. i. 193, ii. 263.
17. L.A. iii. 107, Post. 84.
xxviii. 12. L.A. iii. 104, Deus 156, Her. 76, Praem. 107.
xxx. 11-14. Post. 85, Mut. 237, Som. ii. 180, Virt. 183, Praem. 80.
15. Deus 50, Fug. 58.
19, 20. Post. 12, 69, Deus 50, Cong. 134, Fug. 58.
xxxii. 4. Sob. 10, Mut. 182.
7-9. Post. 89, Plant. 59, Cong. 58.
15. Post. 121, Cong. 160.
32, 33. Ebr. 222, Som. ii. 191.
xxxiii. 1. Mut. 25, 125.
9. L.A. ii. 51, Ebr. 72, Fug. 89.

I SAMUEL

- 1 Sam. i. 28. Deus 6, Som. i. 254.
ii. 5. Deus 10, Mut. 143.
ix. 9. Deus 139, Mig. 38, Her. 78.

PSALMS

- Ps. xxiii. (xxii.) 1. Agr. 50, Mut. 115.
xxxvii. (xxxvi.) 4. Plant. 39, Som. ii. 242.

PROVERBS

- Prov. viii. 22. Ebr. 31, Virt. 62.

HOSEA

- Hos. xiv. 9, 10. Plant. 138, Mut. 139.

ON THE ACCOUNT OF THE WORLD'S CREATION GIVEN BY MOSES
(DE OPIFICIO MUNDI)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

A Book of Laws, says Philo, is fitly prefaced by a Cosmogony. The theme dealt with by a Cosmogony is, indeed, too lofty for adequate treatment. In Moses' treatment of it, two salient points at once meet the eye. The world's origin is ascribed to a Maker, who is Himself unoriginate, and who cares for what He has made.

By "six days" Moses does not indicate a space of time in which the world was made, but the principles of order and productivity which governed its making.

Before the emergence of the material world there existed, in the Divine Word or Reason, the incorporeal world, as the design of a city exists in the brain of the designer.

The efficient cause of the universe (we must remember) is Goodness; and Goodness, to be attained by it as its capacity permits, is its final cause.

The incorporeal world may be described as "the Word of God engaged in the act of creating." And the Word is the Image of God. In that, man (the part), and therefore the universe (the whole) was created.

"In the beginning" means for Philo the precedence of the incorporeal heaven and invisible earth. The pre-eminence of Life-breath and Light are shown,

ON THE CREATION

he says, by the one being called " the Spirit of God," and the other pronounced " good " or " beautiful." He sees darkness severed from light by the barrier of twilight ; and the birth of Time on " Day One." Philo strangely infers that a whole day was devoted to the creation of the visible heaven from the mention of a " second day " after that creation. Land and sea are then formed by the briny water being withdrawn from the sponge-like earth and the fresh water left in it ; and the land is bidden to bring forth trees and plants. It is bidden to do so before sun and moon are made, that men may not attribute its fruitfulness to these.

Coming now to the work of the fourth day, Philo brings out the significance of the number 4, and points to the boons conferred on body and mind by Light, which has given rise to philosophy by drawing man's vision upward to the heavenly bodies. He sees the purposes of these in their giving light, fore-showing coming events, marking the seasons, and measuring time.

The fifth day is fitly given to the creation of creatures endowed with five senses.

In connexion with the creation of man, Philo points out (a) the beauty of the sequence, ascending (in living things) from lowest to highest ; (b) the reference, not to body, but to mind, in the words " after our image " ; (c) the implication of exactness in the addition " after our likeness " ; (d) the co-operation of other agents implied in " let us make," such co-operation accounting (so Philo suggests) for the possibility of sin ; (e) four reasons for man coming last, viz.—

- (1) that he might find all ready for him ;

PHILO

- (2) that he might use God's gifts as such ;
- (3) that Man, a miniature Heaven, might correspond to the Heaven whose creation came first ;
- (4) that his sudden appearance might over-awe the beasts.

His place in the series is no sign of inferiority.

Turning to the Seventh Day, Philo notes its dignity, and enlarges on the properties of the number 7, (a) in things incorporeal (89-100) ; (b) in the material creation : (a) the heavenly bodies (101 f.) ; (β) the stages of man's growth (103-105) ; (γ) as 3 + 4 (106) ; (δ) in the progressions (107-110) ; (ε) in all visible existence (111-116) ; (ξ) in man, and all that he sees (117-121) and experiences (121-125) ; (η) in grammar and music (126 f.).

After speaking of the honour paid by Moses to the number 7, Philo, treating Gen. ii. 4 f. as a concluding summary, claims it as a proof that Gen. i. records a creation of incorporeal ideas. After a disquisition on the subject of fresh water, to which he is led by Gen. ii. 6, he goes on to deal with the earth-born man (Gen. ii. 7), whom he distinguishes from the man made after God's image. The being of the former is composite, earthly substance and Divine Breath. Proofs and an illustration are given of his surpassing excellence. The title of " the only world-citizen " is claimed for him, and its significance brought out. His physical excellence can be guessed from the faint traces of it found in his posterity. It is to call out his intelligence that he is required to name the animals. Woman is the occasion of his deterioration.

The Garden, the Serpent, the Fall and its consequences are dealt with in §§ 153-169. The Garden, we are told, represents the dominant power of the soul, and the Serpent represents Pleasure, and is eminently fitted to do so. His use of a human voice is considered. The praise of the "snake-fighter" in Lev. xi. 22 is referred to. Stress is laid on the fact that Pleasure assails the man through the woman. The effects of the Fall on the woman and on the man are traced.

ON THE CREATION

The treatise ends with a short summary of the lessons of the Cosmogony. These are :

- (1) the eternal existence of God (as against atheism) ;
- (2) the unity of God (as against polytheism) ;
- (3) the non-eternity of the world ;
- (4) the unity of the world ;
- (5) the Providence of God.

ΦΙΛΩΝΟΣ
ΠΕΡΙ ΤΗΣ ΚΑΤΑ ΜΩΥΣΕΑ ΚΟΣΜΟΠΟΙΙΑΣ

[I. 1] <sup>1</sup> I. Τῶν ἄλλων νομοθετῶν, οἱ μὲν ἀκαλλώπιστα καὶ γυμνὰ τὰ νομισθέντα παρ' αὐτοῖς εἶναι δίκαια διετάξαντο, οἱ δὲ πολὺν ὄγκον τοῖς νοήμασι προσπεριβαλόντες, ἐξετύφωσαν τὰ πλήθη, μυθικοῖς <sup>2</sup> πλάσμασι τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἐπικρύψαντες. Μωυσῆς δ', ἐκότερον ὑπερβάς, τὸ μὲν ὡς ἄσκεπτον καὶ ἀταλαίπωρον καὶ ἀφιλόσοφον, τὸ δ' ὡς κατεψευσμένον καὶ μεστὸν γοητείας, παγκάλην καὶ σεμνοτάτην ἀρχὴν ἐποίησατο τῶν νόμων, μήτ' εὐθὺς ἂ χρὴ πράττειν ἢ τοῦναντίον ὑπειπὼν μήτ', ἐπειδὴ προτυπῶσαι τὰς διανοίας τῶν χρησομένων τοῖς νόμοις ἀναγκαῖον ἦν, μύθους πλασάμενος ἢ <sup>3</sup> συναινέσας τοῖς ὑφ' ἐτέρων συντεθεισῖν. ἢ δ' ἀρχή, καθάπερ ἔφην, ἐστὶ θαυμασιωτάτη, κοσμοποιίαν περιέχουσα, ὡς καὶ τοῦ κόσμου τῷ νόμῳ καὶ τοῦ νόμου τῷ κόσμῳ συνάδοντος, καὶ τοῦ νομίμου ἀνδρὸς εὐθὺς ὄντος κοσμοπολίτου, πρὸς τὸ βούλημα τῆς φύσεως τὰς πράξεις ἀπευθύνοντος, καθ' ἣν καὶ ὁ σύμπας κόσμος διοικεῖται.

---

<sup>a</sup> "World" means, of course, the "Universe" or "Kosmos." See App. p. 475.

ON THE ACCOUNT OF THE WORLD'S CREATION GIVEN BY MOSES

I. WHILE among other lawgivers some have nakedly and without embellishment drawn up a code of the things held to be right among their people, and others, dressing up their ideas in much irrelevant and cumbersome matter, have befogged the masses and hidden the truth under their fictions, Moses, disdaining either course, the one as devoid of the philosopher's painstaking effort to explore his subject thoroughly, the other as full of falsehood and imposture, introduced his laws with an admirable and most impressive exordium. He refrained, on the one hand, from stating abruptly what should be practised or avoided, and on the other hand, in face of the necessity of preparing the minds of those who were to live under the laws for their reception, he refrained from inventing myths himself or acquiescing in those composed by others. His exordium, as I have said, is one that excites our admiration in the highest degree. It consists of an account of the creation of the world, implying that the world is in harmony with the Law, and the Law with the world, and that the man who observes the law is constituted thereby a loyal citizen of the world,<sup>a</sup> regulating his doings by the purpose and will of Nature, in accordance with which the entire world itself also is administered.

PHILO

- 4 τὸ μὲν οὖν κάλλος τῶν νοημάτων τῆς κοσμοποιίας
οὐδεὶς, οὔτε ποιητῆς οὔτε λογογράφος, ἀξίως ἂν
[2] ὑμνῆσαι δύναίτο· καὶ γὰρ | λόγον καὶ ἀκοὴν ὑπερβάλλει, μείζω καὶ σεμνότερα ὄντα ἢ ὡς θνητοῦ
5 τινος ὀργάνοις ἐναρμοσθῆναι. οὐ μὴν διὰ τοῦθ'
ἡσυχαστέον, ἀλλ' ἔνεκα τοῦ θεοφιλοῦς καὶ ὑπὲρ
δύναμιν ἐπιτολμητέον λέγειν, οἴκοθεν μὲν οὐδέν, ὀλίγα δ' ἀντὶ πολλῶν, ἐφ' ἃ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην
διάνοιαν φθάνειν εἰκὸς ἔρωτι καὶ πόθῳ σοφίας
6 κατεσχημένην. ὡς γὰρ τῶν κολοσσιαίων μεγεθῶν
τὰς ἐμφάσεις καὶ ἡ βραχυτάτη σφραγὶς τυπωθεῖσα δέχεται, οὕτως τάχα που καὶ τὰ τῆς ἀναγραφείσης
ἐν τοῖς νόμοις κοσμοποιίας ὑπερβάλλοντα κάλλη,
καὶ ταῖς μαρμαρυγαῖς τὰς τῶν ἐντυγχανόντων
ψυχὰς ἐπισκιάζοντα, βραχυτέροις παραδηλωθήσεται χαρακτῆρσιν, ἐπειδὴν ἐκείνο μνηυθῆ πρότερον, ὅπερ οὐκ ἄξιον ἀποσιωπῆσαι.
- 7 II. Τινὲς γάρ, τὸν κόσμον μᾶλλον ἢ τὸν κοσμο-ποιὸν θαυμάσαντες, τὸν μὲν ἀγέννητόν τε καὶ αἰδίον ἀπεφήναντο, τοῦ δὲ θεοῦ πολλὴν ἀπραξίαν ἀνάγκως κατεψεύσαντο, δέον ἔμπαλιν, τοῦ μὲν τὰς δυνάμεις
ὡς ποιητοῦ καὶ πατρὸς καταπλαγῆναι, τὸν δὲ μὴ
8 πλεον ἀποσεμνῦναι τοῦ μετρίου. Μωυσῆς δέ, καὶ φιλοσοφίας ἐπ' αὐτὴν φθάσας ἀκρότητα, καὶ χρησιμοῖς τὰ πολλὰ καὶ συνεκτικώτατα τῶν τῆς φύσεως ἀναδιδασθεῖς, ἔγνω δὴ ὅτι ἀναγκαιότατόν
ἔστιν ἐν τοῖς οὐσι τὸ μὲν εἶναι δραστήριον αἷτιον,

ON THE CREATION, 4-8

Now it is true that no writer in verse or prose could possibly do justice to the beauty of the ideas embodied in this account of the creation of the kosmos. For they transcend our capacity of speech and of hearing, being too great and august to be adjusted to the tongue or ear of any mortal. Nevertheless they must not on this account be passed over in silence. Nay, for the sake of the God-beloved author we must be venturesome even beyond our power. We shall fetch nothing from our own store, but, with a great array of points before us, we shall mention only a few, such as we may believe to be within reach of the human mind when possessed by love and longing for wisdom. The minutest seal takes in under the graver's hand the contours of colossal figures. So perchance shall the beauties of the world's creation recorded in the Laws. transcendent as they are and dazzling as they do by their bright gleams the souls of readers, be indicated by delineations minute and slight. But first we must draw attention to a matter which ought not to be passed over in silence.

II. There are some people who, having the world in admiration rather than the Maker of the world, pronounce it to be without beginning and everlasting, while with impious falsehood they postulate in God a vast inactivity; whereas we ought on the contrary to be astonished at His powers as Maker and Father, and not to assign to the world a disproportionate majesty. Moses, both because he had attained the very summit of philosophy, and because he had been divinely instructed in the greater and most essential part of Nature's lore, could not fail to recognize that the universal must consist of two parts, one part

PHILO

- τὸ δὲ παθητόν· καὶ ὅτι τὸ μὲν δραστήριον ὁ τῶν ὄλων νοῦς ἐστὶν εἰλικρινέστατος καὶ ἀκραιφνέστατος, κρείττων ἢ ἀρετῆ, καὶ κρείττων ἢ ἐπιστήμη, καὶ κρείττων ἢ αὐτὸ τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ καλόν·
- 9 τὸ δὲ παθητόν, ἄψυχον καὶ ἀκίνητον ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ, κινήθην δὲ καὶ σχηματισθὲν καὶ ψυχωθὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ νοῦ, μετέβαλεν εἰς τὸ τελειότατον ἔργον, τόνδε τὸν κόσμον· ὃν οἱ φάσκοντες ὡς ἔστιν ἀγένητος λελήθασιν τὸ ὠφελιμώτατον καὶ ἀναγκαιότατον τῶν εἰς εὐσέβειαν ὑποτεμνόμενοι, τὴν πρόνοιαν.
- 10 τοῦ μὲν γὰρ γεγονότος ἐπιμελεῖσθαι τὸν πατέρα καὶ ποιητὴν αἰρεῖ λόγος· καὶ γὰρ πατὴρ ἐκγόνων καὶ δημιουργὸς τῶν δημιουργηθέντων στοχάζεται τῆς διαμονῆς, καὶ ὅσα μὲν ἐπιζήμια καὶ βλαβερὰ μηχανῇ πάσῃ διωθεῖται, τὰ δὲ ὅσα ὠφέλιμα καὶ λυσιτελεῖ κατὰ πάντα τρόπον ἐκπορίζει ἐπιποθεῖ· πρὸς δὲ τὸ μὴ γεγονὸς οἰκείωσις οὐδεμία τῷ μὴ
- 11 πεποιηκότι. ἀπεριμάχητον δὲ δόγμα καὶ ἀνωφελές, ἀναρχίαν ὡς ἐν πόλει κατασκευάζον τῷδε τῷ κόσμῳ, τὸν ἔφορον ἢ βραβευτὴν ἢ δικαστὴν οὐκ ἔχοντι, ὑφ' οὗ πάντ' οἰκονομεῖσθαι καὶ πρυτανεύεσθαι θέμις.
- 12 ἀλλ' ὁ γε μέγας Μωυσῆς
 [3] ἀλλοτριώτατον τοῦ | ὄρατοῦ νομίσας εἶναι τὸ ἀγένητον—πᾶν γὰρ τὸ αἰσθητόν, ἐν γενέσει καὶ μεταβολαῖς, οὐδέποτε κατὰ ταῦτα ὄν—τῷ μὲν ἀοράτῳ καὶ νοητῷ προσέειμεν ὡς ἀδελφὸν καὶ συγγενὲς

ON THE CREATION, 8-12

active Cause and the other passive object ; and that the active Cause is the perfectly pure and unsullied Mind of the universe, transcending virtue, transcending knowledge, transcending the good itself and the beautiful itself ; while the passive part is in itself incapable of life and motion, but, when set in motion and shaped and quickened by Mind, changes into the most perfect masterpiece, namely this world. Those who assert that this world is unoriginate unconsciously eliminate that which of all incentives to piety is the most beneficial and the most indispensable, namely providence. For it stands to reason that what has been brought into existence should be cared for by its Father and Maker. For, as we know, it is a father's aim in regard of his offspring and an artificer's in regard of his handiwork to preserve them, and by every means to fend off from them aught that may entail loss or harm. He keenly desires to provide for them in every way all that is beneficial and to their advantage : but between that which has never been brought into being and one who is not its Maker no such tie is formed. It is a worthless and baleful doctrine, setting up anarchy in the well-ordered realm of the world, leaving it without protector, arbitrator, or judge, without anyone whose office it is to administer and direct all its affairs.

Not so Moses. That great master, holding the unoriginate to be of a different order from that which is visible, since everything that is an object of sensible perception is subject to becoming and to constant change, never abiding in the same state, assigned to that which is invisible and an object of intellectual apprehension the infinite and undefinable as united with it by closest tie ; but on that which

PHILO

αἰδιότητα, τῷ δ' αἰσθητῷ γένεσιν οἰκείον ὄνομα ἐπεφήμισεν. ἐπεὶ οὖν ὄρατός τε καὶ αἰσθητός ὃδε ὁ κόσμος, ἀναγκαίως ἂν εἶη καὶ γενητός· ὅθεν οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ καὶ τὴν γένεσιν ἀνέγραψεν αὐτοῦ, μάλα σεμνῶς θεολογήσας.

- 13 III. Ἐξ δὲ ἡμέραις δημιουργηθῆναί φησι τὸν κόσμον, οὐκ ἐπειδὴ προσεδεῖτο χρόνων μήκους ὁ ποιῶν—ἅμα γὰρ πάντα δρᾶν εἰκὸς θεόν, οὐ προστάττοντα μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ διανοούμενον—, ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ τοῖς γινομένοις ἔδει τάξεως. τάξει δὲ ἀριθμὸς οἰκείον, ἀριθμῶν δέ, φύσεως νόμοις, γεννητικώτατος ὁ ἕξ· τῶν τε γὰρ ἀπὸ μονάδος πρῶτος τέλειός ἐστιν, ἰσούμενος τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ μέρεσι καὶ συμπληρούμενος ἕξ αὐτῶν, ἡμίσεους μὲν τριάδος, τρίτου δὲ δυάδος, ἕκτου δὲ μονάδος, καὶ ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν ἄρρην τε καὶ θῆλυς εἶναι πέφυκε, καὶ τῆς ἑκατέρου δυνάμεως ἡρμοσται· ἄρρην μὲν γὰρ ἐν τοῖς οὐσι τὸ περιττόν, τὸ δ' ἄρτιον θῆλυ· περιττῶν μὲν οὖν ἀριθμῶν ἀρχὴ τριάς, δυὰς δ' ἀρτίων, ἡ δ'
- 14 ἀμφοῖν δύναμις ἕξάς. ἔδει γὰρ τὸν κόσμον, τελειότατον μὲν ὄντα τῶν γεγονότων, κατ' ἀριθμὸν τέλειον παγῆναι τὸν ἕξ, ἐν ἑαυτῷ δ' ἔχειν μέλλοντα τὰς ἐκ συνδυασμοῦ γενέσεις, πρὸς μικτὸν ἀριθμὸν τὸν πρῶτον ἀρτιοπέριττον τυπωθῆναι,

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Plato, Republic viii. 546 b, St. Augustine, De Civitate Dei, bk. xi. ch. 30.

ON THE CREATION, 12-14

is an object of the senses he bestowed "genesis," "becoming," as its appropriate name.

Seeing then that this world is both visible and perceived by the senses, it follows that it must also have had an origin. Whence it was entirely to the point that he put on record that origin, setting forth in its true grandeur the work of God.

III. He says that in six days the world was created, not that its Maker required a length of time for His work, for we must think of God as doing all things simultaneously, remembering that "all" includes with the commands which He issues the thought behind them. Six days are mentioned because for the things coming into existence there was need of order. Order involves number, and among numbers by the laws of nature the most suitable to productivity is 6, for if we start with 1 it is the first perfect number, being equal to the product of its factors (i.e.  $1 \times 2 \times 3$ ), as well as made up of the sum of them (i.e.  $1 + 2 + 3$ ), its half being 3, its third part 2, its sixth part 1.<sup>a</sup> We may say that it is in its nature both male and female, and is a result of the distinctive power of either. For among things that are it is the odd that is male, and the even female. Now of odd numbers 3 is the starting-point, and of even numbers 2, and the product of these two is 6. For it was requisite that the world, being most perfect of all things that have come into existence, should be constituted in accordance with a perfect number, namely six; and, inasmuch as it was to have in itself beings that sprang from a coupling together, should receive the impress of a mixed number, namely the first in which odd and even περιέξοντα καὶ τὴν τοῦ σπείροντος ἄρρενος, καὶ τὴν τοῦ ὑποδεχομένου τὰς γονὰς θήλεος, ἰδέαν.

PHILO

15 Ἐκάστη δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν ἀπένειμεν ἓνια τῶν τοῦ παντός τμημάτων, τὴν πρώτην ὑπεξελόμενος, ἣν αὐτὸς οὐδὲ πρώτην, ἵνα μὴ ταῖς ἄλλαις συγκαταριθμηῆται, καλεῖ, μίαν δ' ὀνομάσας ὀνόματι εὐθυβόλῳ προσαγορεύει, τὴν μονάδος φύσιν καὶ πρόσρησιν ἐνιδῶν τε καὶ ἐπιφημίσας αὐτῇ.

IV. λεκτέον δὲ ὅσα οἶόν τέ ἐστι τῶν ἐμπεριεχομένων, ἐπειδὴ πάντα ἀμήχανον· περιέχει γὰρ τὸν νοητὸν κόσμον ἐξαίρετον, ὡς ὁ περὶ αὐτῆς λόγος
 16 |μηνύει. προλαβὼν γὰρ ὁ θεός, ἅτε θεός, ὅτι
 [4] μίμημα καλὸν οὐκ ἂν ποτε γένοιτο δίχα καλοῦ παραδείγματος, οὐδέ τι τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀνυπαίτιον, ὃ μὴ πρὸς ἀρχέτυπον καὶ νοητὴν ἰδέαν ἀπεικονίσθη, βουληθεὶς τὸν ὄρατὸν κόσμον τουτονὶ δημιουργῆσαι, προεξετύπου τὸν νοητὸν, ἵνα, χρώμενος ἄσωμάτῳ καὶ θεοειδεστάτῳ παραδείγματι, τὸν σωματικὸν ἀπεργάσῃται, πρεσβυτέρου νεώτερον ἀπεικόνισμα, τοσαῦτα περιέξοντα αἰσθητὰ 17 γένη ὅσαπερ ἐν ἐκείνῳ νοητὰ. τὸν δ'

ἐκ τῶν ἰδεῶν συνεστῶτα κόσμον ἐν τόπῳ τινὶ λέγειν ἢ ὑπονοεῖν οὐ θεμιτόν· ἥ δὲ συνέστηκεν εἰσόμεθα, παρακολουθήσαντες εἰκόνι τινὶ τῶν παρ' ἡμῶν. ἐπειδὴν πόλις κτίζηται, κατὰ πολλὴν φιλοτιμίαν βασιλέως ἢ τινος ἡγεμόνος, αὐτοκρατοῦς

<sup>a</sup> Gen. i. 5: "And there was evening and there was morning, one day."

ON THE CREATION, 14-17

were combined, one that should contain the essential principle both of the male that sows and of the female that receives the seed.

Now to each of the days He assigned some of the portions of the whole, not including, however, the first day, which He does not even call "first," lest it should be reckoned with the others, but naming it "one"<sup>a</sup> He designates it by a name which precisely hits the mark, for He discerned in it and expressed by the title which He gives it the nature and appellation of the unit, or the "one."

IV. We must recount as many as we can of the elements embraced in it. To recount them all would be impossible. Its pre-eminent element is the intelligible world, as is shown in the treatise dealing with the "One." For God, being God, assumed that a beautiful copy would never be produced apart from a beautiful pattern, and that no object of perception would be faultless which was not made in the likeness of an original discerned only by the intellect. So when He willed to create this visible world He first fully formed the intelligible world, in order that He might have the use of a pattern wholly God-like and incorporeal in producing the material world, as a later creation, the very image of an earlier, to embrace in itself objects of perception of as many kinds as the other contained objects of intelligence.

To speak of or conceive that world which consists of ideas as being in some place is illegitimate ; how it consists (of them) we shall know if we carefully attend to some image supplied by the things of our world. When a city is being founded to satisfy the soaring ambition of some king or governor, who lays claim to despotic power and

PHILO

- ἐξουσίας μεταποιουμένου καὶ ἅμα τὸ φρόνημα λαμπροῦ, τὴν εὐτυχίαν συνεπικοσμοῦντος, παρελθὼν ἔστιν ὅτε τις τῶν ἀπὸ παιδείας ἀνὴρ ἀρχιτεκτονικὸς καὶ τὴν εὐκρασίαν καὶ εὐκαιρίαν τοῦ τόπου θεασάμενος, διαγράφει πρῶτον ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὰ τῆς μελλούσης ἀποτελεῖσθαι πόλεως μέρη σχεδὸν ἅπαντα, ἱερά, γυμνάσια, πρυτανεῖα, ἀγοράς, λιμένας, νεωσοίκους, στενωπούς, τειχῶν κατασκευάς, ἰδρύσεις οἰκιῶν καὶ δημοσίων ἄλλων οἰκο-
- 18 δομημάτων· εἶθ' ὡσπερ ἐν κηρῷ τῇ ἑαυτοῦ ψυχῇ τοὺς ἐκάστων δεξάμενος τύπους, ἀγαλματοφορεῖ νοητὴν πόλιν, ἧς ἀνακινήσας τὰ εἶδωλα μνήμη τῇ συμφύτῳ καὶ τοὺς χαρακτήρας ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐνσφραγισάμενος, οἷα δημιουργὸς ἀγαθός, ἀποβλέπων εἰς τὸ παράδειγμα, τὴν ἐκ λίθων καὶ ξύλων ἀρχεται κατασκευάζειν, ἐκάστη τῶν ἀσωμάτων ἰδεῶν τὰς σωματικὰς ἐξομοιῶν οὐσίας.
- 19 τὰ παραπλήσια δὴ καὶ περὶ θεοῦ δοξαστέον, ὡς ἄρα τὴν μεγαλόπολιν κτίζειν διανοηθεὶς ἐνενόησε πρότερον τοὺς τύπους αὐτῆς, ἐξ ὧν, κόσμον νοητὸν συστησάμενος, ἀπετέλει καὶ τὸν αἰσθητόν, παραδείγματι χρώμενος ἐκείνῳ.
- 20 V. καθάπερ οὖν ἡ ἐν τῷ ἀρχιτεκτονικῷ προδιατυπωθεῖσα πόλις χώραν ἐκτὸς οὐκ εἶχεν, ἀλλ' ἐνεσφράγιστο τῇ τοῦ τεχνίτου ψυχῇ, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον οὐδ' ὁ ἐκ τῶν ἰδεῶν κόσμος ἄλλον ἂν ἔχοι τόπον ἢ τὸν θεῖον λόγον τὸν ταῦτα διακοσμήσαντα· ἐπεὶ τίς ἂν εἴη τῶν δυνάμεων αὐτοῦ τόπος ἕτερος,

ON THE CREATION, 17-20

being magnificent in his ideas would fain add a fresh lustre to his good fortune, there comes forward now and again some trained architect who, observing the favourable climate and convenient position of the site, first sketches in his own mind wellnigh all the parts of the city that is to be wrought out, temples, gymnasia, town-halls, market-places, harbours, docks, streets, walls to be built, dwelling-houses as well as public buildings to be set up. Thus after having received in his own soul, as it were in wax, the figures of these objects severally, he carries about the image of a city which is the creation of his mind. Then by his innate power of memory, he recalls the images of the various parts of this city, and imprints their types yet more distinctly in it : and like a good craftsman he begins to build the city of stones and timber, keeping his eye upon his pattern and making the visible and tangible objects correspond in each case to the incorporeal ideas.

Just such must be our thoughts about God. We must suppose that, when He was minded to found the one great city, He conceived beforehand the models of its parts, and that out of these He constituted and brought to completion a world discernible only by the mind, and then, with that for a pattern, the world which our senses can perceive.

V. As, then, the city which was fashioned beforehand within the mind of the architect held no place in the outer world, but had been engraved in the soul of the artificer as by a seal ; even so the universe that consisted of ideas would have no other location than the Divine Reason, which was the Author of this ordered frame. For what other place could there be for His powers sufficient to receive and

PHILO

- ὅς γένοιτ' ἂν ἰκανός, οὐ λέγω πάσας ἀλλὰ μίαν, ἄκρατον ἠντινοῦν δέξασθαι τε καὶ χωρῆσαι;
- 21 δύναμις δὲ καὶ ἡ κοσμοποιητικὴ, πηγὴν
 [5] ἔχουσα | τὸ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθόν. εἰ γὰρ τις ἐβελήσειε τὴν αἰτίαν ἧς ἔνεκα τότε τὸ πᾶν ἐδημιουργεῖτο διερευνᾶσθαι, δοκεῖ μοι μὴ διαμαρτεῖν σκοποῦ φάμενος, ὅπερ καὶ τῶν ἀρχαίων εἶπέ τις, ἀγαθὸν εἶναι τὸν πατέρα καὶ ποιητὴν· οὐ χάριν τῆς ἀρίστης αὐτοῦ φύσεως οὐκ ἐφθόνησεν οὐσία, μηδὲν ἐξ αὐτῆς ἐχούση καλόν, δυναμένη δὲ πάντα
- 22 γίνεσθαι. ἦν μὲν γὰρ ἐξ αὐτῆς ἄτακτος, ἄποιος, ἄψυχος, <ἀνόμοιος>, ἑτεροϊότητος, ἀναρμοστίας, ἀσυμφωνίας μεστή· τροπὴν δὲ καὶ μεταβολὴν ἐδέχετο τὴν εἰς τὰναντία καὶ τὰ βέλτιστα, τάξιν, ποιότητα, ἐμψυχίαν, ὁμοιότητα, ταυτότητα, τὸ εὐάρμοστον, τὸ σύμφωνον, πᾶν ὅσον τῆς κρείττονος ἰδέας.
- 23 VI. Οὐδενὶ δὲ παρακλήτω—τίς γὰρ ἦν ἕτερος;—μόνῳ δὲ αὐτῷ χρησάμενος, ὁ θεὸς ἔγνω δεῖν εὐεργετεῖν, ἀταμιεύτοις καὶ πλουσiais χάρισι, τὴν ἄνευ δωρεᾶς θείας φύσιν οὐδενὸς ἀγαθοῦ δυναμένην ἐπιλαχεῖν ἐξ ἑαυτῆς. ἀλλ' οὐ πρὸς τὸ μέγεθος εὐεργετεῖ τῶν ἑαυτοῦ χαρίτων—ἀπερίγραφοι γὰρ αὐταί γε καὶ ἀτελεύτητοι—, πρὸς δὲ τὰς τῶν εὐεργετουμένων δυνάμεις· οὐ γὰρ ὡς πέφυκεν ὁ θεὸς εὖ ποιεῖν, οὕτως καὶ τὸ γινόμενον εὖ πάσχειν, ἐπεὶ τοῦ μὲν αἱ δυνάμεις ὑπερβάλλουσι, τὸ δ', ἀσθενέστερον ὄν ἢ ὥστε δέξασθαι τὸ μέγεθος

<sup>a</sup> Plato, Timaeus 29 E.

ON THE CREATION, 20-23

contain, I say not all but, any one of them whatever uncompounded and untempered? Now just such a power is that by which the universe was made, one that has as its source nothing less than true goodness. For should one conceive a wish to search for the cause, for the sake of which this whole was created, it seems to me that he would not be wrong in saying, what indeed one of the men of old did say, that the Father and Maker of all is good; and because of this He grudged not a share in his own excellent nature to an existence which has of itself nothing fair and lovely, while it is capable of becoming all things. For of itself it was without order, without quality, without soul, (without likeness); it was full of inconsistency, ill-adjustment, disharmony: but it was capable of turning and undergoing a complete change to the best, the very contrary of all these, to order, quality, life, correspondence, identity, likeness, perfect adjustment, to harmony, to all that is characteristic of the more excellent model.<sup>a</sup>

VI. Now God, with no counsellor to help Him (who was there beside Him?) determined that it was meet to confer rich and unrestricted benefits upon that nature which apart from Divine bounty could obtain of itself no good thing. But not in proportion to the greatest of His own bounties does He confer benefits—for these are without end or limit—but in proportion to the capacities of the recipients. For it is not the nature of creation to receive good treatment in like manner as it is the nature of God to bestow it, seeing that the powers of God are overwhelmingly vast, whereas creation, being too feeble to entertain their abundance, would

PHILO

- αὐτῶν, ἀπέειπεν ἄν, εἰ μὴ διεμετρήσατο σταθμησάμενος εὐαρμόστως ἐκάστῳ τὸ ἐπιβάλλον.
- 24 εἰ δέ τις ἐθελήσειε γυμνοτέροις χρήσασθαι τοῖς ὀνόμασιν, οὐδὲν ἄν ἕτερον εἴποι τὸν νοητὸν κόσμον εἶναι ἢ θεοῦ λόγον ἤδη κοσμοποιούντος· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἡ νοητὴ πόλις ἕτερόν τί ἐστιν
 ἢ ὁ τοῦ ἀρχιτέκτονος λογισμὸς ἤδη τὴν [νοητὴν]
 25 πόλιν κτίζειν διανοουμένου. τὸ δὲ δόγμα τοῦτο Μωυσέως ἐστίν, οὐκ ἐμόν· τὴν γοῦν ἀνθρώπου
 γένεσιν ἀναγράφων ἐν τοῖς ἔπειτα διαρρηθῆναι
 ὁμολογεῖ, ὡς ἄρα κατ' εἰκόνα θεοῦ διετυπώθη
 (Gen. i. 27). εἰ δὲ τὸ μέρος εἰκῶν εἰκόνας, δῆλον
 ὅτι καὶ τὸ ὅλον· εἰ δ' ὁ σύμπας αἰσθητὸς οὐτοσὶ κόσμος, ὃ μείζον τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης ἐστίν, μίμημα
 θείας εἰκόνας, δῆλον ὅτι καὶ ἡ ἀρχέτυπος σφραγίς, ὃν φαμεν νοητὸν εἶναι κόσμον, αὐτὸς ἄν εἴη [τὸ
 παράδειγμα, ἀρχέτυπος ἰδέα τῶν ἰδεῶν] ὁ θεοῦ λόγος.
- 26 VII. Φησὶ δ' ὡς “ ἐν ἀρχῇ ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν,” τὴν ἀρχὴν παραλαμβάνων,
 [6] | οὐχ ὡς οἴονται τινες, τὴν κατὰ χρόνον· χρόνος
 γὰρ οὐκ ἦν πρὸ κόσμου, ἀλλ' ἡ σὺν αὐτῷ γέγονεν
 ἢ μετ' αὐτόν· ἐπεὶ γὰρ διάστημα τῆς τοῦ κόσμου κινήσεώς ἐστιν ὁ χρόνος, προτέρα δὲ τοῦ κινουμένου κινήσις οὐκ ἄν γένοιτο, ἀλλ' ἀναγκαῖον
 αὐτὴν ἢ ὕστερον ἢ ἅμα συνίστασθαι, ἀναγκαῖον
 ἄρα καὶ τὸν χρόνον ἢ ἰσῆλικά κόσμου γεγονέναι
 ἢ νεώτερον ἐκείνου· πρεσβύτερον δ' ἀποφαίνεσθαι
 27 τολμᾶν ἀφιλόσοφον. εἰ δ' ἀρχὴ μὴ παραλαμβάνεται

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 475.

ON THE CREATION, 23-27

have broken down under the effort to do so, had not God with appropriate adjustment dealt out to each his due portion.

Should a man desire to use words in a more simple and direct way, he would say that the world discerned only by the intellect is nothing else than the Word of God when He was already engaged in the act of creation. For (to revert to our illustration) the city discernible by the intellect alone is nothing else than the reasoning faculty of the architect in the act of planning to found the city. It is Moses who lays down this, not I. Witness his express acknowledgement in the sequel, when setting on record the creation of man, that he was moulded after the image of God (Gen. i. 27). Now if the part is an image of an image, it is manifest that the whole is so too, and if the whole creation, this entire world perceived by our senses (seeing that it is greater than any human image) is a copy of the Divine image, it is manifest that the archetypal seal also, which we aver to be the world descried by the mind, would be the very Word of God.<sup>a</sup>

VII. Then he says that "in the beginning God made the heaven and the earth," taking "beginning" not, as some think, in a chronological sense, for time there was not before there was a world. Time began either simultaneously with the world or after it. For since time is a measured space<sup>a</sup> determined by the world's movement, and since movement could not be prior to the object moving, but must of necessity arise either after it or simultaneously with it, it follows of necessity that time also is either coeval with or later born than the world. To venture to affirm that it is elder born would be to do violence to philosophic sense. And since the word "beginning"

PHILO

- τανῦν ἢ κατὰ χρόνον, εἰκὸς ἂν εἶη μηνύεσθαι τὴν κατ' ἀριθμὸν, ὡς τὸ "ἐν ἀρχῇ ἐποίησεν" ἴσον εἶναι τῷ πρῶτον ἐποίησε τὸν οὐρανόν· καὶ γὰρ εὐλογον τῷ ὄντι πρῶτον αὐτὸν εἰς γένεσιν ἐλθεῖν, ἄριστόν τε ὄντα τῶν γεγονότων καὶ τοῦ καθαρωτάτου τῆς οὐσίας παγέντα, διότι θεῶν ἐμφανῶν τε καὶ αἰσθητῶν ἔμελλεν οἶκος ἕσεσθαι ἱερώτατος.
- 28 καὶ γὰρ εἰ πάνθ' ἅμα ὁ ποιῶν ἐποίει, τάξιν οὐδὲν ἦττον εἶχε τὰ καλῶς γινόμενα· καλὸν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἐν ἀταξία. τάξις δ' ἀκολουθία καὶ εἰρμός ἐστι προηγουμένων τινῶν καὶ ἐπομένων, εἰ καὶ μὴ τοῖς ἀποτελέσμασιν, ἀλλὰ τοι ταῖς τῶν τεκταινομένων ἐπινοίαις· οὕτως γὰρ ἔμελλον ἠκριβῶσθαι τε καὶ ἀπλαγεῖς εἶναι καὶ ἀσύγχυτοι.
- 29 Πρῶτον οὖν ὁ ποιῶν ἐποίησεν οὐρανὸν ἀσώματον, καὶ γῆν ἀόρατον, καὶ ἀέρος ἰδέαν, καὶ κενοῦ· ὧν τὸ μὲν ἐπεφήμισε σκότος, ἐπειδὴ μέλας ὁ ἀῆρ τῇ φύσει, τὴν δ' ἄβυσσον, πολὺβυθον γὰρ τό γε κενὸν καὶ ἀχανές· εἶθ' ὕδατος ἀσώματον οὐσίαν, καὶ πνεύματος, καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἐβδόμου φωτός, ὁ πάλιν ἀσώματον ἦν καὶ νοητὸν ἡλίου παράδειγμα, καὶ πάντων ὅσα φωσφόρα ἄστρα κατὰ τὸν οὐρανὸν
- 30 ἔμελλε συνίστασθαι. VIII. προνομίας δὲ τό τε πνεῦμα καὶ τὸ φῶς ἤξιοῦτο· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ὠνόμασε θεοῦ, διότι ζωτικώτατον τὸ πνεῦμα, ζωῆς δὲ θεὸς

<sup>a</sup> Cf. 114 τοῦ καθαρωτάτου τῆς οὐσίας οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> Or "divine beings."

ON THE CREATION, 27-30

is not here taken as the chronological beginning, it would seem likely that the numerical order is indicated, so that "in the beginning He made" is equivalent to "He made the heaven first": for it is indeed reasonable that it should come into existence first, being both best of created things and made from the purest of all that is,<sup>a</sup> seeing that it was destined to be the most holy dwelling-place of manifest and visible gods.<sup>b</sup> For, even if the Maker made all things simultaneously, order was none the less an attribute of all that came into existence in fair beauty, for beauty is absent where there is disorder. Now order is a series of things going on before and following after, in due sequence, a sequence which, though not seen in the finished productions, yet exists in the designs of the contrivers; for only so could these things be fashioned with perfect accuracy, and work without leaving their path or clashing with each other.

First, then, the Maker made an incorporeal heaven, and an invisible earth, and the essential form of air and void. To the one he gave the name of "Darkness," since the air when left to itself, is black. The other he named "abyss," for the void is a region of immensity and vast depths. Next (He made) the incorporeal essence of water and of life-breath and, to crown all, of light. This again, the seventh in order, was an incorporeal pattern, discernible only by the mind, of the sun and of all luminaries which were to come into existence throughout heaven. VIII. Special distinction is accorded by Moses to life-breath and to light. The one he entitles the "breath" of God, because breath is most life-giving, and of life God is the author, while

PHILO

- αἴτιος, τὸ δὲ φῶς <φησιν> ὅτι ὑπερβαλλόντως καλόν (Gen. i. 4). τοσοῦτω γὰρ τὸ νοητὸν τοῦ ὄρατου λαμπρότερόν τε καὶ αὐγοειδέστερον, ὅσῳ περ ἥλιος, οἶμαι, σκότους, καὶ ἡμέρα νυκτός, καὶ [τὰ κριτήρια] νοῦς, ὁ τῆς ὅλης ψυχῆς ἡγεμών, ὀφθαλ-
- 31 μῶν σώματος. τὸ δὲ ἄορατον καὶ νοητὸν φῶς [7] ἐκείνο θείου λόγου γέγονεν εἰκὼν τοῦ | διερμηνεύσαντος τὴν γένεσιν αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἔστιν ὑπερουράνιος ἀστήρ, πηγὴ τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀστέρων· ἦν οὐκ ἂν ἀπὸ σκοποῦ καλέσειεν ἂν τις παναύγειαν· ἀφ' ἧς ἥλιος καὶ σελήνη καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι πλάνητές τε καὶ ἀπλανεῖς ἀρύτονται, καθ' ὅσον ἐκάστῳ δύναμις, τὰ πρόποντα φέγγη· τῆς ἀμιγοῦς καὶ καθαρᾶς αὐγῆς ἐκείνης ἀμαυρουμένης, ὅταν ἄρξῃται τρέπεσθαι κατὰ τὴν ἐκ νοητοῦ πρὸς αἰσθητὸν μεταβολήν· εἰλικρινές γὰρ οὐδὲν τῶν ἐν αἰσθήσει.
- 32 IX. Εὖ μέντοι καὶ τὸ φάναι ὅτι “σκότος ἦν ἐπάνω τῆς ἀβύσσου” (Gen. i. 2). τρόπον γὰρ τινα ὁ ἀήρ ὑπὲρ τὸ κενόν ἔστιν, ἐπειδὴ πᾶσαν τὴν ἀχανῆ καὶ ἐρήμην καὶ κενὴν χώραν ἐπιβὰς ἐκπεπλήρωκεν, ὅση πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τῶν κατὰ σελήνην
- 33 καθήκει. μετὰ δὲ τὴν τοῦ νοητοῦ φωτὸς ἀνάλαμψιν, ὃ πρὸ ἡλίου γέγονεν, ὑπεχώρει τὸ ἀντίπαλον σκότος, διατειχίζοντος ἀπ' ἀλλήλων αὐτὰ καὶ διστάντος θεοῦ, τοῦ τὰς ἐναντιότητος εὖ εἰδότης καὶ τὴν ἐκ φύσεως αὐτῶν διαμάχην. ἴν' οὖν μὴ αἰεὶ συμφερόμεναι στασιάζωσι καὶ πόλεμος ἀντ' εἰρήνης ἐπικρατῇ, τὴν ἀκοσμίαν ἐν κόσμῳ τιθεῖς, οὐ μόνον ἐχώρισε φῶς καὶ σκότος, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὄρους ἐν μέσοις ἔθετο διαστήμασιν, οἷς

ON THE CREATION, 30-33

of light he says that it is beautiful pre-eminently (Gen. i. 4) : for the intelligible as far surpasses the visible in the brilliancy of its radiance, as sunlight assuredly surpasses darkness and day night, and mind, the ruler of the entire soul, the bodily eyes. Now that invisible light perceptible only by mind has come into being as an image of the Divine Word Who brought it within our ken : it is a supercelestial constellation, fount of the constellations obvious to sense. It would not be amiss to term it "all-brightness," to signify that from which sun and moon, as well as fixed stars and planets draw, in proportion to their several capacity, the light befitting each of them : for that pure and undiluted radiance is be-dimmed so soon as it begins to undergo the change that is entailed by the passage from the intelligible to the sensibly discerned, for no object of sense is free from dimness.

IX. Right too is his statement that "darkness was above the abyss" (Gen. i. 2). For in a sense the air is over the void, inasmuch as it has spread over and completely filled the immensity and desolation of the void, of all that reaches from the zone of the moon to us. After the kindling of the intelligible light, which preceded the sun's creation, darkness its adversary withdrew : for God, in His perfect knowledge of their mutual contrariety and natural conflict, parted them one from another by a wall of separation. In order, therefore, to keep them from the discord arising from perpetual clash, to prevent war in place of peace prevailing and setting up disorder in an ordered universe, He not only separated light and darkness, but also placed in the intervening spaces boundary-marks, by which He held back each

PHILO

- ἀνείρξε τῶν ἄκρων ἐκάτερον· ἔμελλε γὰρ γειτνιῶντα σύγχυσις ἀπεργάζεσθαι, τῷ περὶ δυναστείας ἀγῶνι κατὰ πολλὴν καὶ ἄπαστον φιλονεικίαν ἐπαποδύμενα, εἰ μὴ μέσοι παγέντες ὄροι διέζυξαν καὶ
- 34 διέλυσαν τὴν ἀντεπίθεσιν. οὗτοι δ' εἰσὶν ἐσπέρα τε καὶ πρωῖα, ὧν ἡ μὲν προευαγγελίζεται μέλλοντα ἥλιον ἀνίσχειν, ἡρέμα τὸ σκότος ἀνείργουσα, ἡ δ' ἐσπέρα καταδύντι ἐπιγίνεται ἡλίῳ, τὴν ἀθρόαν τοῦ σκότους φορὰν πράως ἐκδεχομένη. καὶ ταῦτα μέντοι, πρωῖαν λέγω καὶ ἐσπέραν, ἐν τῇ τάξει τῶν ἀσωμάτων καὶ νοητῶν θετέον· ὅλως γὰρ οὐδὲν αἰσθητὸν ἐν τούτοις, ἀλλὰ πάντα ἰδέαι καὶ μέτρα καὶ τύποι καὶ σφραγίδες, εἰς γένεσιν ἄλλων
- 35 ἀσώματα σωμάτων. ἐπεὶ δὲ φῶς μὲν ἐγένετο. σκότος δ' ὑπεξέστη καὶ ἀνεχώρησεν, ὄροι δ' ἐν τοῖς μεταξὺ διαστήμασιν ἐπάγησαν ἐσπέρα καὶ πρωῖα, κατὰ τὰναγκαῖον τοῦ χρόνου μέτρον ἀπετελεῖτο εὐθύς, ὃ καὶ ἡμέραν ὃ ποιῶν ἐκάλεσε, καὶ ἡμέραν οὐχὶ πρώτην, ἀλλὰ μίαν, ἣ λέλεκται διὰ τὴν τοῦ νοητοῦ κόσμου μόνωσιν μοναδικὴν ἔχοντος φύσιν.
- 36 X. Ὁ μὲν οὖν ἀσώματος κόσμος ἤδη πέρασ εἶχεν ἰδρυθεὶς ἐν τῷ θείῳ λόγῳ, ὃ δ' αἰσθητὸς
- [8] | πρὸς παράδειγμα τούτου ἐτελειογονεῖτο. καὶ πρῶτον αὐτοῦ τῶν μερῶν, ὃ δὴ καὶ πάντων ἄριστον, ἐποίει τὸν οὐρανὸν ὃ δημιουργός, ὃν ἐτύμως στερέωμα προσηγόρευσεν ἅτε σωματικὸν ὄντα· τὸ γὰρ σῶμα φύσει στερεόν, ὅτι περ καὶ τριχῇ διαστατόν· στερεοῦ δὲ καὶ σώματος ἔννοια

ON THE CREATION, 33-36

of their extremities : for, had they been actual neighbours, they were sure to produce confusion by engaging with intense and never-ceasing rivalry in the struggle for mastery. As it was, their assault on one another was broken and kept back by barriers set up between them. These barriers are evening and dawn. The latter, gently restraining the darkness, anticipates the sunrise with the glad tidings of its approach ; while evening, supervening upon sunset, gives a gentle welcome to the oncoming mass of darkness. We must, however, place these, dawn and evening I mean, in the category of the incorporeal and intelligible : for there is in these nothing whatever patent to the senses, but they are simply models and measuring-rules and patterns and seals, all of these being incorporeal and serving for the creation of other bodies. When light had come into being, and darkness had moved out of its way and retired, and evening and dawn had been fixed as barriers in the intervals between them, as a necessary consequence a measure of time was forthwith brought about, which its Maker called Day, and not " first " day but " one," an expression due to the uniqueness of the intelligible world, and to its having therefore a natural kinship to the number " One."

X. The incorporeal world, then, was now finished and firmly settled in the Divine Reason, and the world patent to sense was ripe for birth after the pattern of the incorporeal. And first of its parts, best of them all, the Creator proceeded to make the Heaven, which with strict truth he entitled firmament, as being corporeal : for the body is naturally solid, seeing that it has a threefold dimension. What else

PHILO

τίς ἑτέρα πλὴν τὸ πάντῃ διεστηκός; εἰκότως οὖν ἀντιθεῖς τῷ νοητῷ καὶ ἄσωμάτῳ τὸν αἰσθητὸν 37 καὶ σωματοειδῆ τοῦτον στερέωμα ἐκάλεσεν. εἴτ' εὐθέως οὐρανὸν προσεῖπεν αὐτόν, εὐθυβόλως καὶ πάνυ κυρίως, ἥτοι διότι πάντων ὄρος ἢ διότι πρῶτος τῶν ὄρατῶν ἐγένετο. ὀνομάζει δὲ καὶ ἡμέραν μετὰ τὴν γένεσιν αὐτοῦ δευτέραν, ὅλον ἡμέρας διάστημα καὶ μέτρον ἀνατιθεῖς οὐρανῷ, διὰ τὴν ἐν αἰσθητοῖς ἀξίωσίν τε καὶ τιμὴν.

38 XI. Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτ', ἐπειδὴ τὸ σύμπαν ὕδωρ εἰς ἅπασαν τὴν γῆν ἀνεκέχυτο, καὶ διὰ πάντων αὐτῆς ἐπεφοιτῆκει τῶν μερῶν, οἷα σπογγίᾳς ἀναπεπωκυίας ἰκμάδα, ὡς εἶναι τέλματα καὶ βαθὺν πηλόν, ἀμφοτέρων τῶν στοιχείων ἀναδεδευμένων καὶ συγκεχυμένων τρόπον φυράματος εἰς μίαν ἀδιάκριτον καὶ ἄμορφον φύσιν, προστάττει ὁ θεὸς τὸ μὲν ὕδωρ, ὅσον ἄλμυρόν καὶ ἀγονίας αἴτιον ἔμελλεν ἔσεσθαι σπαρτοῖς καὶ δένδρεσιν, ἐπισυναχθῆναι συρρυνὲν ἐκ τῶν τῆς ἀπάσης γῆς ἀραιωμάτων, τὴν δὲ ξηρὰν ἀναφανῆναι, τῆς τοῦ γλυκέος νοτίδος ἐναπολειφθείσης εἰς διαμονὴν—κόλλα γάρ τίς ἐστίν ἢ μεμετρημένη γλυκεῖα νοτὶς τῶν διεστηκότων—καὶ ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ παντάπασιν ἀφανασθεῖσαν αὐτὴν ἀγονον καὶ στεῖραν γενέσθαι, καὶ ὅπως οἷα μήτηρ μὴ μόνον θάτερον εἶδος τροφῆς βρῶσιν, ἀλλ' ἐκάτερον ὡς ἂν ἐκγόνοις βρῶσιν τε

* οὐρανός = "heaven," ὄρος = "boundary," ὄραν = "see."

ON THE CREATION, 36-38

indeed do we conceive a solid object and a body to be, but that which extends in each direction? Fitly then, in contradistinction to the incorporeal and purely intelligible, did He call this body-like heaven perceived by our senses "the solid firmament." After so designating it He went on forthwith to speak of it as "heaven." He did so with unerring propriety, either because it is the "boundary" of all things, or because it came into being first of things "visible."<sup>a</sup> When the heaven had been created he names a second day, thus assigning to heaven the whole space and interval of a day. He does this by reason of the position of dignity which heaven occupies among the objects of sense.

XI. At this stage, then, water in all its volume had been poured forth over all the earth, and had found its way through all its parts, as through a sponge saturated with moisture. It had produced swamps and deep mud, earth and water being mingled together and kneaded, like a mass of dough, into a single element without shape or distinction of its parts. So God next bids all the briny water, which would have been the cause of barrenness to crops and trees, to be gathered together by flowing to the same point from the pores of the whole earth, and the dry land to appear. The moisture of the fresh sweet part was left behind to secure its permanence, since, when supplied in fit quantity, this sweet moisture served as a cohesive to the separate parts. This was to prevent it from being entirely dried up, and so becoming unproductive and barren, and enable it like a mother to provide, as for offspring, not one only of the two kinds of nourishment, namely solid food, but both kinds, food and

PHILO

καὶ πόσιν, παρέχῃ· διὸ φλέβας μαστοῖς ἑοικυίας ἐπλημμύρει, αἱ στομωθεῖσαι ποταμοὺς καὶ πηγὰς
 39 ἔμελλον ἀναχεῖν. οὐδὲν δὲ ἦττον καὶ τὰς ἀφανεῖς ἐνίκμους διαφύσεις εἰς ἅπασαν τὴν ἀρετῶσαν καὶ βαθύγειον ἀπέτεινε πρὸς εὐφορίαν ἀφθονωτάτην καρπῶν. ταῦτα διαταξάμενος, ὄνόματ' αὐτοῖς ἐτίθετο, τὴν μὲν ξηρὰν καλῶν γῆν, τὸ δ' ἀποκριθὲν
 40 ὕδωρ θάλασσαν. XII. εἶτα διακοσμεῖν ἄρχεται τὴν γῆν· κελεύει γὰρ αὐτὴν χλοηφορεῖν καὶ σταχυοφορεῖν, παντοίας βοτάνας ἀνιείσαν καὶ πεδία εὐχόρτα, καὶ πάνθ' ὅσα χιλὸς μὲν κτήνεσιν ἀνθρώποις δ' ἔμελλεν ἔσεσθαι τροφή. προσέτι μέντοι καὶ τὰς δένδρων ιδέας ἀπάσας ἀνέφυεν. οὐδὲν, οὔτε τῶν τῆς ἀγρίας, οὔτε τῶν τῆς ἡμέρου λεγομένης ὕλης, παρείς. ἐβεβρίθει δὲ πάντα καρποῖς
 [9] | εὐθύς ἅμα τῇ πρώτῃ γενέσει, κατὰ τὸν ἐναντίον
 41 τρόπον ἢ τὸν νυνὶ καθεστῶτα. νυνὶ μὲν γὰρ ἐν μέρει γίννεται τὰ γιγνόμενα χρόνοις διαφέρουσιν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀθρόα καιρῶ ἐνί· τίς γὰρ οὐκ οἶδεν ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν ἐστὶ σπορὰ καὶ φυτεία, δεῦτερον δὲ τῶν σπαρέντων καὶ φυτευθέντων αὔξησις, ἣ μὲν εἰς τὸ κάτω ρίζας ἀποτείνουσα οἰοῖναι θεμελίους, ἣ δ' εἰς τὸ ἄνω πρὸς ὕψος αἰρομένων καὶ στελεχομένων; ἔπειτα βλαστοὶ καὶ πετάλων ἐκφύσεις, εἶτ' ἐπὶ πᾶσι καρποῦ φορά· καὶ πάλιν καρπὸς οὐ τέλειος, ἀλλ' ἔχων παντοίας μεταβολάς, κατὰ τὴν ἐν μεγέθει ποσότητα, καὶ τὰς ἐν πολυμόρφοις ιδέαις ποιότητας· ἀποτίκτεται μὲν γὰρ ὁ καρπὸς ἑοικῶς ἀμερέσει ψήγμασιν ὑπὸ βραχύτητος μόλις ὄρατοῖς, ἅπερ οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ φαίη τις ἂν εἶναι πρῶτα αἰσθητά. μετὰ δὲ ταῦτ' ἐκ τοῦ κατ' ὀλίγον, ἔκ τε τῆς ἐποχτευομένης τροφῆς, ἣ ἄρδει τὸ
 30

ON THE CREATION, 38-41

drink. Wherefore the earth had abounding veins like breasts. These when opened would pour forth rivers and springs. No less did He cause the hidden courses of moisture also to penetrate to the rich deep loam with a view to unstinted fertility. Having thus ordered these elements He gave them names. The dry land he called "earth," and the water separated from it "sea." XII. He next begins to put the earth in order: for he bids it bear grass and corn, and send forth herbs of all kinds, and rich pastures, and whatsoever would be provender for cattle and food for men. Beside these he caused all kinds of trees to grow, leaving out no tree at all, whether of wild growth or what we call garden trees. And, after a fashion quite contrary to the present order of Nature, all were laden with fruit as soon as ever they came into existence. For now the processes take place in turn, one at one time, one at another, not all of them simultaneously at one season. For everyone knows that sowing and planting come first, the growth of the things sown and planted second, the former causing roots to reach downwards like foundations, the latter taking place as they rise upwards, grow tall, and develop trunks and stems. After this come sproutings and puttings forth of leaves, and then to crown all, bearing of fruit; and here again fruit not full grown, but subject to all manner of changes both in quantity and quality, that is to say, in the matter of size and of ever varying character. For the first shape it takes is that of indivisible flakes so small that they can scarcely be seen, which a man would not be wrong in describing as "first perceptibles." After this as the result of gradual growth and as the result of nourishment conveyed δένδρον, κακ τῆς εὐκρασίας τῶν πνευμάτων, ἃ ψυχραῖς ἅμα καὶ μαλακωτέραις αὔραις ζωπυρεῖται καὶ τιθηνεῖται, συναύξεται πρὸς ὄγκον ἐπιδιδούς τελειότατον· σὺν δὲ τῷ μεγέθει καὶ τὰς ποιότητας ἀλλάττει, καθάπερ ὑπὸ γραφικῆς ἐπιστήμης χρώμασι διαφόροις ποικιλλόμενος.

PHILO

- 42 XIII. Ἐν δὲ τῇ πρώτῃ γενέσει τῶν ὄλων, καθάπερ ἔφην, ὁ θεὸς ἅπασαν τὴν τῶν φυτῶν ὕλην ἐκ γῆς ἀνεδίδου τελείαν, καρποὺς ἔχουσαν οὐκ ἀτελεῖς ἀλλ' ἀκμάζοντας, εἰς ἐτοιμοτάτην καὶ ἀνυπέρθετον χρῆσιν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν ζώων τῶν
- 43 αὐτίκα γενησομένων. ὁ μὲν δὴ προστάττει τῇ γῆ ταῦτα γεννηῆσαι· ἡ δ', ὡσπερ ἐκ πολλοῦ κυοφοροῦσα καὶ ὠδίνουσα, τίκτει πάσας μὲν τὰς σπαρτῶν, πάσας δὲ τὰς δένδρων, ἔτι δὲ καρπῶν ἀμυθῆτους ιδέας. ἀλλ' οὐ μόνον ἦσαν οἱ καρποὶ τροφαὶ ζώοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ παρασκευαὶ πρὸς τὴν τῶν ὁμοίων αἰεὶ γένεσιν, τὰς σπερματικὰς οὐσίας περιέχοντες, ἐν αἷς ἄδηλοι καὶ ἀφανεῖς οἱ λόγοι τῶν ὄλων εἰσὶ, δῆλοι καὶ φανεροὶ γινόμενοι καιρῶν
- 44 περιόδου. ἐβουλήθη γὰρ ὁ θεὸς δολιχεύειν τὴν φύσιν, ἀπαθανατίζων τὰ γένη, καὶ μεταδιδούς αὐτοῖς αἰδιότητος· οὐ χάριν καὶ ἀρχὴν πρὸς τέλος ἦγε καὶ ἐπέσπευδε, καὶ τέλος ἐπ' ἀρχὴν ἀνακάμπτειν ἐποίει· ἔκ τε γὰρ φυτῶν ὁ καρπός, ὡς ἂν ἐξ ἀρχῆς τέλος, καὶ ἐκ καρποῦ τὸ σπέρμα περιέχοντος ἐν ἑαυτῷ πάλιν τὸ φυτόν, ὡς ἂν ἐκ τέλους ἀρχή.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 475.

ON THE CREATION, 41-44

by irrigation, which waters the tree, and as the result of the well-tempered breezes which are quickened by cold and softened by milder temperature, it develops towards its complete size : and as it becomes larger, it becomes different in appearance as well, as though it were being ever made to take varied hues by a painter's cunning hand.

XIII. Now in the original creation of all things, as I have said already, God caused all shrubs and plants to spring out of the earth perfect, having fruits not unripe but at their prime, to be perfectly ready for the immediate use and enjoyment of the animals that were forthwith to come into being. God then enjoins the earth to give birth to all these, and the earth, as though it had been long pregnant and in travail, brings forth all kinds of things sown, all kinds of trees, and countless kinds of fruits besides. But not only were the several fruits nourishment for animals, but also a provision for the perpetual reproduction of their kind, containing within them the seed-substances. Hidden and imperceptible in these substances are the principles or nuclei<sup>a</sup> of all things. As the seasons go round these become open and manifest. For God willed that Nature should run a course that brings it back to its starting-point, endowing the species with immortality, and making them sharers of eternal existence. For the sake of this He both led on the beginning speedily towards the end, and made the end to retrace its way to the beginning. For it is the case both that the fruit comes out of the plants, as an end out of a beginning, and that out of the fruit again, containing as it does the seed in itself, there comes the plant, a beginning out of an end.

PHILO

45 XIV. Τῇ δὲ τετάρτῃ ἡμέρᾳ μετὰ τὴν γῆν τὸν οὐρανὸν ἐποίκιλλε διακοσμῶν· οὐκ ἐπειδὴ τοῦτον ἐν ὑστέρω γῆς ἔταπτε, τῇ μὲν ἐλάττονι φύσει προνομίαν διδούς, τὴν δὲ κρείττονα καὶ θειοτέραν δευτερείων ἀξιῶν· ἀλλ' εἰς ἔνδειξιν ἐναργεστάτην κράτους ἀρχῆς. προλαβὼν γὰρ περὶ τῶν οὕτω

[10] γεγονότων | ἀνθρώπων, οἳοι τὰς γνώμας ἔσονται, στοχασταὶ τῶν εἰκότων καὶ πιθανῶν, ἐν οἷς πολὺ τὸ εὐλογον, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τῆς ἀκραιφνοῦς ἀληθείας· καὶ ὅτι πιστεύσουσι μᾶλλον τοῖς φαινομένοις ἢ θεῶ, σοφιστείαν πρὸ σοφίας θαυμάσαντες· κατιδόντες τε αὖθις τὰς ἡλίου καὶ σελήνης περιόδους, δι' ὧν θέρη χειμῶνες καὶ ἔαρος καὶ μετοπώρου τροπαί· τῶν ἐκ γῆς ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος φυομένων καὶ γιγνομένων ἀπάντων αἰτίας ὑπολήψονται τὰς τῶν κατ' οὐρανὸν ἀστέρων περιπολήσεις· ἵνα μηδενὶ γενητῶ τὰς πρώτας ἀνατιθέναι τινὲς τολμῶσιν, ἢ διὰ θράσος ἀναίσχυντον, ἢ δι' ἀμαθίαν ὑπερβάλ-

46 λουσαν, “ ἀναδραμέτωσαν,” φησί, “ ταῖς διανοίαις ἐπὶ τὴν πρώτην τῶν ὄλων γένεσιν, ὅτε πρὸ ἡλίου καὶ σελήνης παντοῖα μὲν φυτά, παντοίους δὲ καρποὺς ἤνεγκεν ἡ γῆ· καὶ, θεασάμενοι ταῖς διανοίαις, ἐλπίζέτωσαν ὅτι καὶ αὖθις οἴσει κατὰ πρόσταξιν τοῦ πατρός, ὅταν αὐτῷ δοκῇ, μὴ προσδεηθέντι τῶν κατ' οὐρανὸν ἐκγόνων, οἷς δυνάμεις μὲν ἔδωκεν, οὐ μὴν αὐτοκρατεῖς. οἷα γὰρ ἡνίοχος ἡνιῶν, ἢ κυβερνήτης οἰάκων ἐνεληγμένους, ἄγει ἢ ἂν ἐθέλη κατὰ νόμον καὶ δίκην ἕκαστα, μηδενὸς

ON THE CREATION, 45-46

XIV. On the fourth day, the earth being now finished, he ordered the heaven in varied beauty. Not that He put the heaven in a lower rank than the earth, giving precedence to the inferior creation, and accounting the higher and more divine worthy only of the second place ; but to make clear beyond all doubt the mighty sway of His sovereign power. For being aware beforehand of the ways of thinking that would mark the men of future ages, how they would be intent on what looked probable and plausible, with much in it that could be supported by argument, but would not aim at sheer truth ; and how they would trust phenomena rather than God, admiring sophistry more than wisdom ; and how they would observe in time to come the circuits of sun and moon, on which depend summer and winter and the changes of spring and autumn, and would suppose that the regular movements of the heavenly bodies are the causes of all things that year by year come forth and are produced out of the earth ; that there might be none who owing either to shameless audacity or to overwhelming ignorance should venture to ascribe the first place to any created thing, ' let them,' said He, ' go back in thought to the original creation of the universe, when, before sun or moon existed, the earth bore plants of all sorts and fruits of all sorts ; and having contemplated this let them form in their minds the expectation that hereafter too shall it bear these at the Father's bidding, whensoever it may please Him.' For He has no need of His heavenly offspring on which He bestowed powers but not independence : for, like a charioteer grasping the reins or a pilot the tiller, He guides all things in what direction He pleases as law and right demand, προσδεόμενος ἄλλου· πάντα γὰρ θεῶ δυνατά.

PHILO

47 XV. ἥδ' ἐστὶν αἰτία δι' ἣν προτέρα μὲν ἐβλάστησε καὶ ἐχλοηφόρησεν ἡ γῆ. ὁ δ' οὐρανὸς διεκοσμεῖτο αὐθις ἐν ἀριθμῷ τελείῳ, τετράδι, ἣν δεκάδος τῆς παντελείας οὐκ ἂν δι-αμάρτοι τις ἀφορμὴν εἶναι λέγων καὶ πηγῆν· ὁ γὰρ ἐντελεχεία δεκάς, τοῦτο τετράς, ὡς ἔοικε, δυνάμει· εἰ γοῦν οἱ ἀπὸ μονάδος ἄχρι τετράδος ἐξῆς συντεθείεν ἀριθμοί, δεκάδα γεννήσουσιν, ἥτις ὄρος τῆς ἀπειρίας τῶν ἀριθμῶν ἐστὶ, περὶ ὃν ὡς καμπτήρα εἰλοῦνται καὶ ἀνακάμπουσι.

48 Περιέχει δ' ἡ τετράς καὶ τοὺς λόγους τῶν κατὰ μουσικὴν συμφωνιῶν, τῆς τε διὰ τεττάρων, καὶ διὰ πέντε, καὶ διὰ πασῶν, καὶ προσέτι δις διὰ πασῶν· ἐξ ὧν σύστημα τὸ τελειότατον ἀπο-γεννᾶται. τῆς μὲν διὰ τεττάρων ὁ λόγος ἐπίτριτος, τῆς δὲ διὰ πέντε ἡμιόλιος, διπλάσιος δὲ τῆς διὰ πασῶν, τετραπλάσιος δὲ τῆς δις διὰ πασῶν· οὓς ἅπαντας ἡ τετράς ἔχει περιλαβοῦσα, τὸν μὲν ἐπί-τριτον ἐν τῷ τέσσαρα πρὸς τρία, τὸν δ' ἡμιόλιον
[11] ἐν τῷ | τρία πρὸς δύο, τὸν δὲ διπλάσιον ἐν τῷ δύο πρὸς ἓν ἢ τέσσαρα πρὸς δύο, τὸν δὲ τετρα-
49 πλάσιον ἐν τῷ τέσσαρα πρὸς ἓν.

XVI. ἔστι δὲ καὶ δύναμις ἄλλη τετράδος, λεχθῆναί τε καὶ νοηθῆναι θαυμασιωτάτη. πρώτη γὰρ αὕτη τὴν τοῦ στερεοῦ φύσιν ἔδειξε, τῶν πρὸ αὐτῆς ἀριθμῶν τοῖς ἀσωμάτοις ἀνακειμένων· κατὰ μὲν γὰρ τὸ ἐν τὰττεται τὸ λεγόμενον ἐν γεωμετρίᾳ σημεῖον, κατὰ δὲ τὰ δύο γραμμῆ, διότι ῥύσει μὲν ἐνὸς δυάς, ῥύσει δὲ σημείου συνίσταται γραμ-μῆ· γραμμῆ δ' ἐστὶ μῆκος ἀπλατές· πλάτους δὲ προσγενομένου γίνεται ἐπιφάνεια, ἣ τέτακται κατὰ

ON THE CREATION, 46-49

standing in need of no one besides : for all things are possible to God.

XV. This is the reason why the earth put forth plants and bore herbs before the heaven was furnished. But the heaven was afterwards duly decked in a perfect number, namely four. This number it would be no error to call the base and source of 10, the complete number ; for what 10 is actually, this, as is evident, 4 is potentially ; that is to say that, if the numbers from 1 to 4 be added together, they will produce 10, and this is the limit set to the otherwise unlimited succession of numbers ; round this as a turning-point they wheel and retrace their steps.

4 also contains the ratios of the musical consonances, that produced by an interval of four notes, and that produced by an interval of five, and the octave and double octave as well. And it is out of these that the most perfect concord is produced. Of that produced by an interval of four notes the ratio is  $1\frac{1}{3}$ , of that produced by an interval of five  $1\frac{1}{2}$ , of the octave 2, of the double octave 4. All these the number 4 embraces in itself,  $1\frac{1}{3}$  in the ratio 4 : 3 ;  $1\frac{1}{2}$  in the ratio 6 : 4 ; 2 in the ratio 4 : 2 ; 4 in the ratio 4 : 1.

XVI. There is also another property of the number 4 very marvellous to state and to contemplate with the mind. For this number was the first to show the nature of the solid, the numbers before it referring to things without actual substance. For under the head of 1 what is called in geometry a point falls, under that of 2 a line. For if 1 extend itself, 2 is formed, and if a point extend itself, a line is formed : and a line is length without breadth ; if breadth be added, there results a surface, which comes under the category of 3 : to bring it to a solid surface needs one thing, depth, and the addition of this to 3 produces 4. The result of all this is that this number is a thing of vast importance. It was this number that has led us out of the realm of incorporeal existence patent only to the intellect, and has introduced us to the conception of a body of three dimensions, which by its nature first comes within the range of our senses. Anyone who does not understand what I am saying will catch my meaning if he calls to mind a very familiar game. Players with nuts are in the habit of setting out three nuts all on one level and of adding one to these, thus forming a pyramidal figure. The figure of the triangle on the level only reaches the number 3; the added nut produces, in numbers 4, but in figures a pyramid, a body rendered solid by its accession. In addition to these points we must remember also that first among numbers 4 is a square, made up of equal factors multiplying into one another, a measure of rightness and equality, and that alone among them it is such as to be produced from the same factors whether added or multiplied together, by addition out of 2 and 2, and by multiplication again out of twice 2, thus exhibiting a right fair form of consonance, such as has fallen to none of the other numbers; for example—6, sum as it is of two 3's, is not (as in the case of 4) produced by their being multiplied together, but a different number, 9, results.

ON THE CREATION, 49-52

There are several other powers of which 4 has the command, which we shall have to point out in fuller detail in the special treatise devoted to it. Suffice it to add just this, that 4 was made the starting-point of the creation of heaven and the world; for the four elements, out of which ἔδημιουργήθη, καθάπερ ἀπὸ πηγῆς ἑρρῦή τῆς ἐν ἀριθμοῖς τετράδος· καὶ πρὸς τούτοις αἱ ἐτήσιοι ὦραι τέτταρες αἱ ζῶων καὶ φυτῶν αἴτιαι γενέσεως, τετραχῆ τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ διανεμηθέντος εἰς χειμῶνα καὶ ἔαρ καὶ θέρος καὶ μετόπωρον.

- 53 XVII. Τοσαύτης οὖν ἀξιοθέντος ἐν τῇ φύσει προνομίας τοῦ λεχθέντος ἀριθμοῦ, κατὰ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον ὁ ποιητῆς διεκόσμηκε τὸν οὐρανὸν τετράδι, παγκάλῳ καὶ θεοειδεστάτῳ κόσμῳ, τοῖς φωσφόροις ἄστροις· εἰδὼς τε ὅτι τῶν ὄντων ἄριστον [12] τὸ φῶς ἐστίν, ἢ ὄργανον αὐτὸ τῆς ἀρίστης τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὀράσεως ἀπέφαινε· ὅπερ γὰρ νοῦς ἐν ψυχῇ, τοῦτ' ὀφθαλμὸς ἐν σώματι· βλέπει γὰρ ἑκάτερος, ὁ μὲν τὰ νοητά, ὁ δὲ τὰ αἰσθητά· χρεῖος δὲ ὁ μὲν νοῦς ἐπιστήμης εἰς τὸ γνωρίσαι τὰ ἀσώματα, ὀφθαλμὸς δὲ φωτὸς εἰς τὴν τῶν σωμάτων ἀντίληψιν, ὃ πολλῶν μὲν καὶ ἄλλων ἀγαθῶν αἴτιον γέγονεν ἀνθρώποις, διαφερόντως δὲ τοῦ
- 54 μεγίστου, φιλοσοφίας. ὑπὸ γὰρ φωτὸς ἄνω παραπεμφθεῖσα ἢ ὄρασις, καὶ κατιδοῦσα φύσιν ἀστέρων καὶ κίνησιν αὐτῶν ἐναρμόνιον, ἀπλανῶν τε καὶ πλανήτων εὖ διατεταγμένας περιφοράς, τῶν μὲν κατὰ ταῦτά καὶ ὡσαύτως περιπολούντων, τῶν δ' ἀνομοίως τε καὶ ὑπεναντίως διτταῖς περιόδοις χρωμένων, χορείας τε πάντων ἐμμελεῖς νόμοις τοῖς μουσικῆς τελείας διακεκοσμημένας, ἄλεκτον ἐμπαρεῖχε τῇ ψυχῇ τέρψιν τε καὶ ἡδονήν· ἢ δ' ἐστιωμένη θεαμάτων ἐπαλλήλων, ἐξ ἑτέρων γὰρ ἦν ἕτερα, πολλὴν ἀπληστίαν εἶχε

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 475.

ON THE CREATION, 52-54

this universe was fashioned, issued, as it were from a fountain, from the numeral 4 ; and, beside this, so also did the four seasons of the year, which are responsible for the coming into being of animals and plants, the year having a fourfold division into winter and spring and summer and autumn.

XVII. The aforesaid numeral, then, having been deemed worthy of such high privilege in nature, it was a matter of course that its Maker arrayed the heaven on the fourth day with a most divine adornment of perfect beauty, namely the light-giving heavenly bodies ; and, knowing that of all things light is best, He made it the indispensable means of sight, the best of the senses ; for what the intellect is in the soul, this the eye is in the body ; for each of them sees, one the things of the mind, the other the things of sense ; and they have need, the mind of knowledge, that it may become cognisant of incorporeal objects, the eye of light, for the apprehending of bodily forms.

Light has proved itself the source of many other boons to mankind, but pre-eminently of philosophy, the greatest boon of all. For man's faculty of vision, led upwards by light, discerned the nature of the heavenly bodies and their harmonious movement.<sup>a</sup> He saw the well-ordered circuits of fixed stars and planets, how the former moved in unchanging orbit and all alike, while the latter sped round in two revolutions out of harmony with each other. He marked the rhythmic dances of all these, how they were marshalled by the laws of a perfect music, and the sight produced in his soul an ineffable delight and pleasure. Banqueting on sights displayed to it one after another, his soul was insatiate in beholding.

PHILO

τοῦ θεωρεῖν· εἶθ', οἷα φιλεῖ, προσπεριειργάζετο, τίς ἢ τῶν ὄρατῶν δὴ τούτων οὐσία, καὶ εἰ ἀγένητοι πεφύκασιν ἢ γενέσεως ἔλαβον ἀρχήν, καὶ τίς ὁ τρόπος τῆς κινήσεως, καὶ τίνες αἱ αἰτίαι δι' ὧν ἕκαστα οἰκονομεῖται· ἐκ δὲ τῆς τούτων ζητήσεως
 τὸ φιλοσοφίας συνέστη γένος, οὐδ' τελειότερον ἀγαθὸν 55 οὐκ ἦλθεν εἰς τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον. XVIII. πρὸς δὴ τὴν τοῦ νοητοῦ φωτὸς ἰδέαν ἐκείνην ἀπιδῶν,
 ἢ λέλεκται κατὰ τὸν ἀσώματον κόσμον, ἐδημιούργει τοὺς αἰσθητοὺς ἀστέρας, ἀγάλματα θεῖα
 καὶ περικαλλέστατα, οὓς ὥσπερ ἐν ἱερῷ καθα-ρωτάτῳ τῆς σωματικῆς οὐσίας ἴδρυε τῷ οὐρανῷ, πολλῶν χάριν· ἐνὸς μὲν τοῦ φωσφορεῖν, ἐτέρου δὲ
 σημείων, εἶτα καιρῶν τῶν περὶ τὰς ἐτησίους ὥρας, καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἡμερῶν, μηνῶν, ἐνιαυτῶν, ἃ
 δὴ καὶ μέτρα χρόνου γέγονε καὶ τὴν ἀριθμοῦ 56 φύσιν ἐγέννησεν. οἷαν δ' ἕκαστον παρέχεται τῶν εἰρημένων χρεῖαν τε καὶ ὠφέλειαν, δῆλον μὲν ἐκ
 τῆς ἐναργείας, πρὸς δ' ἀκριβεστέραν κατάληψιν
 οὐκ ἄτοπον ἴσως καὶ λόγῳ τάληθές ἱχνηλατῆσαι.
 τοῦ δὴ σύμπαντος χρόνου διανεμηθέντος εἰς δύο τμήματα, ἡμέραν τε καὶ νύκτα,
 τῆς μὲν ἡμέρας τὸ κράτος ὁ πατὴρ ἀνεδίδου τῷ
 ἡλίῳ, οἷα μεγάλῳ βασιλεῖ, τῆς δὲ νυκτὸς σελήνῃ 57 καὶ τῷ πλήθει τῶν ἄλλων ἀστέρων. τὸ δὲ μέγεθος τῆς περὶ τὸν ἥλιον δυνάμεως καὶ ἀρχῆς ἐμφανε-στατήν (πίστιν ἔχει τὴν λεχθεῖσαν ἡδη· εἰς γὰρ ὧν
 καὶ μόνος, ἰδίᾳ καὶ καθ' αὐτὸν ἡμῖς τμήμα τοῦ
 [13] σύμπαντος χρόνου | κεκλήρωται τὴν ἡμέραν, οἱ δ'

ON THE CREATION, 54-57

And then, as usually happens, it went on to busy itself with questionings, asking What is the essence of these visible objects? Are they in nature unoriginate, or had they a beginning of existence? What is the method of their movement? And what are the principles by which each is governed? It was out of the investigation of these problems that philosophy grew, than which no more perfect good has come into the life of mankind. XVIII. It was with a view to that original intellectual light, which I have mentioned as belonging to the order of the incorporeal world, that He created the heavenly bodies of which our senses are aware. These are images divine and exceeding fair, which He established in heaven as in the purest temple belonging to corporeal being. This He did that they might serve many purposes. One purpose was to give light; another to be signs; a third duly to fix seasons of the year; and lastly for the sake of days, months, years, which (as we all know) have served as measures of time and given birth to number. The kind of useful service rendered by each of the bodies mentioned is self-evident; yet that the truth may be more precisely apprehended it may not be out of place to follow it step by step in a reasoned account.

All time having been divided into two portions, day and night, the Father assigned the sovereignty of the day to the sun, as to a great king, and that of the night to the moon and the host of the other stars. The greatness of the sway and government pertaining to the sun finds its clearest proof in what has been already mentioned: one and alone it has by itself separately had day apportioned to it, half of the whole of time; while all the rest with the moon have

PHILO

ἄλλοι πάντες μετὰ σελήνης θάτερον ὃ κέκληται
 νύξ· καὶ τοῦ μὲν ἀνατείλαντος, αἱ φαντασίαι τῶν τοσοῦτων ἀστέρων οὐκ ἀμαυροῦνται μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀφανίζονται τῇ τοῦ φέγγους ἀναχύσει, κατα-δύντος δέ, τὰς ἰδίας ἄρχονται διαφαίνειν ἀθρόοι ποιότητας.

58 XIX. γεγόνασι δ' ὅπερ
 αὐτὸς εἶπεν οὐ μόνον ἵνα φῶς ἐκπέμπωσιν ἐπὶ
 γῆν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅπως σημεῖα μελλόντων προ-φαίνωσιν· ἢ γὰρ ἀνατολαῖς αὐτῶν, ἢ δύσεσιν, ἢ ἐκ-λείψεσιν, ἢ πάλιν ἐπιτολαῖς ἢ ἀποκρύψεσιν, ἢ ταῖς ἄλλαις περὶ τὰς κινήσεις διαφοραῖς, ἄνθρωποι
 τὰ ἀποβησόμενα στοχάζονται, καρπῶν φοράς καὶ ἀφορίας, ζώων τε γενέσεις καὶ φθοράς, αἰθρίας
 καὶ νεφώσεις, νηνεμίας καὶ βίας πνευμάτων, ποταμῶν πλημμύρας καὶ κενώσεις, θαλάττης ἡρε-μίαν καὶ κλυδωνά, ὡρῶν τῶν ἐτησίων ὑπαλλαγάς,
 ἢ θέρους χειμαίνοντος, ἢ χειμῶνος φλέγοντος, ἢ
 ἔαρος μετοπωρίζοντος, ἢ μετοπώρου ἐαρίζοντος· 59 ἢ δὲ καὶ κλόνον καὶ σεισμὸν γῆς ἐκ τῶν κατ'
 οὐρανὸν κινήσεων στοχασμῶ προεσήμηνάν τινες,
 καὶ μυρία ἄλλα τῶν ἀθεστέρων, ὡς ἀψευδέστατα
 λελέχθαι ὅτι “ γεγόνασιν εἰς σημεῖα ” οἱ ἀστέρες·
 προσέτι μέντοι καὶ “ εἰς καιροὺς ”
 (Gen. i. 14), καιροὺς δὲ τὰς ἐτησίους ὥρας ὑπ-εἶληφεν εἶναι, καὶ μήποτ' εἰκότως· ἔννοια γὰρ καιροῦ τίς ἂν εἴη πλὴν χρόνος κατορθώσεως; αἱ
 δ' ὥραι πάντα τελεσφοροῦσαι κατορθοῦσι, σποράς,
 καὶ φυτείας καρπῶν, καὶ ζώων γενέσεις τε καὶ
 60 αὐξήσεις. γεγόνασι δὲ καὶ πρὸς μέτρα

“ Or “ Moses himself declared.”

ON THE CREATION, 57-60

had allotted to them the other half, which has received the name of night. And when the sun has risen, all that multitude of stars which were visible but now is not merely dimmed but becomes actually invisible through the pouring forth of its light ; and upon its setting they begin all of them to shine out in their own true characters.

XIX. The purpose of their existence is, as the Lord Himself pronounced,<sup>a</sup> not only to send forth light upon the earth, but also to give timely signs of coming events. For either by their risings or settings or eclipses, or again by the seasons of their appearance or disappearance, or by other alterations in their movements, men conjecture future issues, good harvests and bad, increase and decay of animal life, fair weather and foul, gales and calms, floodings and shrinkings of rivers, seas smooth and rough, irregularities of the seasons, either wintry summers, or scorching winters, or springs like autumn, or autumns like spring. Indeed it has happened that, by conjecture based on the movements of the heavenly bodies, men have notified in advance a disturbance and shaking of the earth, and countless other unusual occurrences, proving the complete truth of the words, "the stars were made for signs."

It is added, moreover, "and for appointed times" (Gen. i. 14). By "appointed times" Moses understood the four seasons of the year, and surely with good reason. For what idea does "appointed time" convey but "time of achievement"? Now the four seasons of the year bring about achievement by bringing all things to perfection, all sowing and planting of crops, and the birth and growth of animals.

The heavenly bodies were

PHILO

χρόνων· ἡλίου γὰρ καὶ σελήνης καὶ τῶν ἄλλων τεταγμέναις περιόδοις ἡμέραι καὶ μῆνες καὶ ἔνιαυτοὶ συνέστησαν. εὐθύς τε τὸ χρησιμώτατον, ἢ ἀριθμοῦ φύσις, ἐδείχθη, χρόνου παραφήναντος αὐτήν· ἐκ γὰρ μιᾶς ἡμέρας τὸ ἓν, καὶ ἐκ δυοῖν τὰ δύο, καὶ ἐκ τριῶν τὰ τρία, καὶ ἐκ μηνὸς τὰ τριάκοντα, καὶ ἐξ ἔνιαυτοῦ τὸ ἰσάριθμον ταῖς ἐκ δώδεκα μηνῶν ἡμέραις πλήθος, καὶ ἐξ ἀπείρου

61 χρόνου ὁ ἀπείρος ἀριθμὸς. εἰς τοσαύτας καὶ οὕτως ἀναγκαίᾳς διατείνουσιν ὠφελείας αἱ τῶν κατ' οὐρανὸν φύσεις τε καὶ κινήσεις ἀστέρων· εἰς πόσα δ' ἄλλα φαίην ἂν ἔγωγε τῶν ἡμῖν μὲν ἀδηλουμένων—οὐ γὰρ πάντα τῷ θνητῷ γένει γνώριμα—πρὸς δὲ τὴν τοῦ ὄλου συνεργούντων διαμονήν, ἃ θεσμοῖς καὶ νόμοις, οὓς ὤρισεν ὁ θεὸς ἀκινήτους ἐν τῷ παντί, συμβαίνει πάντη τε καὶ πάντως ἐπιτελεῖσθαι.

62 XX. Γῆς δὲ καὶ οὐρανοῦ διακοσμηθέντων τοῖς προσήκουσι κόσμοις, τῆς μὲν τριάδι, τοῦ δ' ὡς ἐλέχθη τετράδι, τὰ θνητὰ γένη ζωοπλαστεῖν ἐνεχείρει, τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐνύδρων ποιούμενος

[14] ἡμέρα | πέμπτη, νομίσας οὐδὲν οὕτως ἕτερον ἑτέρῳ συγγενὲς ὡς ζώοις πεντάδα. διαφέρει γὰρ ἔμφυχα ἀψύχων οὐδενὶ μᾶλλον ἢ αἰσθήσει· πενταχῇ δὲ τμητὸν αἰσθησις, εἰς ὄρασιν, εἰς ἀκοήν, εἰς γεῦσιν, εἰς ὄσφρησιν, εἰς ἀφήν· ἐκάστη μέντοι προσένειμεν ὁ ποιῶν καὶ ἐξαιρέτους ὕλας καὶ κριτήριον ἴδιον, ᾧ δικάσει τὰ ὑποπίπτοντα·

ON THE CREATION, 60-62

created also to furnish measures of time : for it is by regular revolutions of sun, moon, and the other bodies that days and months and years were constituted. This in itself involved the showing of their most useful service of all ; I mean number as part of the world's order, time by its mere lapse indicating it. For out of one day came " one," out of two " two," out of three " three," out of a month " thirty," out of a year the number equivalent to the days made up of twelve months, and out of infinite time came (the conception of) infinite number.

So many and so essential are the benefits within the scope of the constitutions and movements of the heavenly bodies. To how vast a number of other operations of nature, methinks, do they extend ! Operations obscure to us—for all things are not within the ken of mortals—yet working together for the permanence of the whole ; operations which are invariably carried out under ordinances and laws which God laid down in His universe as unalterable.

XX. Earth and heaven having been equipped with the array appropriate to either—earth on the third day, heaven, as has been recounted, on the fourth—the Creator took in hand to form the races of mortal creatures, beginning with aquatic creatures on the fifth day, deeming that there is no kinship so close as that between animals and the number 5. For living creatures differ from those without life in nothing more than in ability to apprehend by the senses ; and sense has a fivefold division, into sight, hearing, taste, smell, touch ; and to each of these their Maker assigned special aspects of matter, and an individual faculty of testing it, with which to assay objects coming under its notice. Colours are tested by

PHILO

- χρώματα μὲν [ἡ] ὄρασις, φωνὰς δὲ ἀκοή, χυλοὺς
 δὲ γεύσις, καὶ ὄσφρησις ἀτμούς, μαλακότητος δὲ
 καὶ σκληρότητος καὶ ὅσα θερμὰ ἢ ψυχρὰ λειό-
- 63 τητάς τε καὶ τραχύτητος ἀφή. παντοῖα
 οὖν ἰχθύων γένη καὶ κητῶν κελεύει συνίστασθαι, κατὰ τόπους διαφέροντα, καὶ τοῖς μεγέθεσι, καὶ
 ταῖς ποιότησιν· ἄλλα γὰρ ἐν ἄλλοις πελάγεσιν, ἔστι δ' ὅτε καὶ ταῦτά· πλὴν οὐ πανταχοῦ πάντα διεπλάττετο, καὶ μήποτ' εἰκότως· χαίρει γὰρ τὰ
 μὲν τινα τεναγῶδει καὶ οὐ πάνυ βαθεῖα θαλάττη, τὰ δ' ὑποδρόμοις καὶ λιμέσι, μήτ' ἐπὶ γῆν ἀνέρπειν
 μήτε πόρρω γῆς ἐπινήχεσθαι δυνάμενα, τὰ δὲ κατὰ μέσον καὶ βαθὺ πέλαγος διαιτώμενα τὰς προκεχυμένας ἄκρας ἢ νήσους ἢ πέτρας ἐκτρέπεται·
 καὶ τὰ μὲν εὐδία καὶ γαλήνη σφριγᾶ, τὰ δὲ κλύδωνι
 καὶ κυματώσει· ταῖς γὰρ συνεχέσι πληγαῖς γυμνα-ζόμενα, καὶ βία τὴν φορὰν ἀνωθοῦντα, κραταιότερά
 τέ ἐστι καὶ πιαίνεται μᾶλλον. εὐθύς
 δὲ καὶ τὰ γένη τῶν πτηνῶν ἐδημιούργει ὡς ἀδελφὰ τῶν καθ' ὕδατος—ἐκάτερα γὰρ νηκτά—
 μηδεμίαν ἰδέαν τῶν ἀεροπόρων ἀτελῆ καταλιπών.
- 64 XXI. Ἦδη δ' ὕδατος καὶ ἀέρος τὰ προσήκοντα
 τῶν ζῶων γένη, καθάπερ τινὰ κληῖρον οἰκεῖον, ἀπειληφότων, πάλιν ἐκάλει τὴν γῆν εἰς τὴν τοῦ
 ὑπολειφθέντος μέρους γένεσιν—ὑπολέλειπτο δὲ
 μετὰ τὰ φυτὰ ζῶων τὰ χερσαῖα—καὶ φησιν· ἐξαγαγέτω ἡ γῆ κτήνη καὶ θηρία καὶ ἔρπετὰ
 καθ' ἕκαστον γένος (Gen. i. 24). ἡ δὲ τὰ προσταχθέντα αὐτίκα ἀνίησι, τῇ τε κατασκευῇ διαφέροντα, καὶ ταῖς ῥώμασι, καὶ ταῖς ἐνυπαρχούσαις βλαπτικαῖς ἢ ὠφελητικαῖς δυνάμεσιν.

ON THE CREATION, 62-64

sight, sounds by hearing, savours by taste, perfumes by smell, while touch assays the softness and hardness of various substances, their smoothness and roughness, and recognizes things hot or cold.

So then he bids all kinds of fish and sea-monsters to take shape, creatures differing in their habitats and their sizes and qualities ; for different seas produce to some extent different fish ; not everywhere were all kinds formed. This is as we should have expected, for some kinds delight in a lagoon and not in a really deep sea, some in harbours and roadsteads. These can neither crawl up on to the land, nor swim far out from the land ; and those that haunt the depths of the open seas avoid jutting headlands or islands or rocks. Some thrive in calm unruffled waters, others in those that are stormy and broken by waves ; for, through the exercise of bearing their constant blows and of thrusting back their onset by sheer force, they put on flesh and grow lusty.

Directly after these He made all kinds of birds, as sister kinds to those in the waters, both being things that float. And He left incomplete no form of creature that travels in air.

XXI. Water and air having now duly received as a sort of lot of their own the living creatures appropriate to them, He again called upon the earth for the production of the portion that had been left out. When the plants had been created the land-animals had been wanting. So He saith " Let the earth bring forth cattle and wild beasts and creeping things after each kind " (Gen. i. 24). The earth forthwith puts forth, as it was bidden, creatures all differing in build and in the varying strength and capacity to hurt or to serve that was inherent in them.

PHILO

- 65 ἐπὶ δὲ πᾶσιν ἐποίει τὸν ἄνθρωπον· ὃν δὲ τρόπον, μικρὸν ὕστερον ἐρῶ, πρότερον ἐκεῖνο δηλώσας, ὅτι παγκάλῳ τῷ τῆς ἀκολουθίας εἰρμῷ κέχρηται, καθ' ἣν ὑφηγήσατο ζωογονίαν. ψυχῆς γὰρ ἡ μὲν ἀργοτάτη καὶ ἥκιστα τετυπωμένη τῷ γένει τῶν ἰχθύων προσκεκλήρωται, ἡ δ' ἀκριβεστάτη καὶ κατὰ πάντα ἀρίστη τῷ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἡ δ' ἀμφοῖν μεθόριος τῷ τῶν χερσαίων καὶ ἀεροπόρων· αὕτη γὰρ αἰσθητικώτερα μὲν ἐστὶ τῆς ἐν ἰχθύσιν,
- [15] 66 ἀμυδροτέρα δὲ τῆς ἐν ἀνθρώποις. διὸ | τῶν ἐμψύχων πρῶτους ἐγέννησεν ἰχθύας, πλέον μετέχοντας σωματικῆς ἢ ψυχικῆς οὐσίας, τρόπον τινὰ ζῶα καὶ οὐ ζῶα, κινητὰ ἄψυχα, πρὸς αὐτὸ μόνον τὴν τῶν σωμάτων διαμονὴν παρασπαρέντος αὐτοῖς τοῦ ψυχοειδοῦς, καθάπερ φασὶ τοὺς ἄλλας τοῖς κρέασιν, ἵνα μὴ ῥαδίως φθείρουντο· μετὰ δὲ τοὺς ἰχθύας τὰ πτηνὰ καὶ χερσαῖα· ἥδη γὰρ ταῦτα αἰσθητικώτερα, καὶ διὰ τῆς κατασκευῆς ἐμφαίνοντα τρανοτέρας τὰς τῆς ψυχώσεως ιδιότητας· ἐπὶ δὲ πᾶσιν, ὡς ἐλέχθη, τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ᾧ νοῦν ἐξαίρετον ἔδωρεῖτο, ψυχῆς τινα ψυχὴν καθάπερ κόρην ἐν ὀφθαλμῷ· καὶ γὰρ ταύτην οἱ τὰς φύσεις τῶν πραγμάτων ἀκριβέστερον ἐρευνῶντες ὀφθαλμοῦ λέγουσιν ὀφθαλμὸν εἶναι.
- 67 XXII. Τότε μὲν οὖν ἅμα πάντα συνίστατο. συνισταμένων δ' ὁμοῦ πάντων, ἡ τάξις ἀναγκαίως

ON THE CREATION, 65-67

To crown all he made man, in what way I will say presently, when I have first pointed out the exceeding beauty of the chain of sequence which Moses has employed in setting forth the bringing in of life. For of the forms of animal life, the least elaborately wrought has been allotted to the race of fish ; that worked out in greatest detail and best in all respects to mankind ; that which lies between these two to creatures that tread the earth and travel in the air. For the principle of life in these is endowed with perceptions keener than that in fishes, but less keen than that in men. Wherefore, of the creatures that have life, fishes were the first which he brought into being, creatures in whose being the body predominates over the soul or life-principle. They are in a way animals and not animals ; lifeless beings with the power of movement. The seed of the principle of life has been sown in them adventitiously, with a view only to the perpetuation of their bodies, just as salt (we are told) is added to flesh that it may not easily decay.

After the fishes He made the birds and land-creatures ; for, when we come to these, we find them with keener senses and manifesting by their structure far more clearly all the qualities proper to beings endowed with the life-principle.

To crown all, as we have said before, He made man, and bestowed on him mind par excellence, life-principle of the life-principle itself, like the pupil in the eye : for of this too those who investigate more closely than others the nature of things say that it is the eye of the eye.

XXII. At that time, indeed, all things took shape simultaneously. But, though all things took shape together, the fact that living organisms were after-

PHILO

λόγω ὑπεγράφετο, διὰ τὴν ἐσομένην αὐθις ἐξ ἀλλήλων γένεσιν. ἐν δὲ τοῖς κατὰ μέρος γινόμενοις τάξις ἥδ' ἐστίν, ἄρχεσθαι μὲν ἀπὸ τοῦ φαυλοτάτου τὴν φύσιν, λήγειν δ' εἰς τὸ πάντων ἄριστον· τί δὲ τοῦτ' ἔστι, δηλωτέον. τὸ σπέρμα τῶν ζώων γενέσεως ἀρχὴν εἶναι συμβέβηκε· τοῦθ' ὡς ἔστι φαυλότατον εἰκοὸς ἀφρῶ, θεωρεῖται· ἀλλ' ὅταν εἰς τὴν μήτραν καταβληθὲν στηρίξη, κίνησιν εὐθὺς λαβὼν εἰς φύσιν τρέπεται· φύσις δὲ βέλτιον σπέρματος, ἐπεὶ καὶ κίνησις ἡρεμίας ἐν γενητοῖς· ἢ δ' οἶα τεχνίτης, ἢ κυριώτερον εἰπεῖν ἀνεπίληπτος τέχνη, ζωοπλαστεῖ, τὴν μὲν ὑγρὰν οὐσίαν εἰς τὰ τοῦ σώματος μέλη καὶ μέρη διανέμουσα, τὴν δὲ πνευματικὴν εἰς τὰς τῆς ψυχῆς δυνάμεις, τὴν τε θρεπτικὴν καὶ τὴν αἰσθητικὴν· τὴν γὰρ τοῦ λογισμοῦ τανῦν ὑπερθετέον, διὰ τοὺς φάσκοντας θύραθεν αὐτὸν ἐπεισιέναι, θεῖον καὶ

68 αἶδιον ὄντα. οὐκοῦν ἤρξατο μὲν ἀπὸ σπέρματος εὐτελοῦς ἢ φύσις, ἔληξε δ' εἰς τὸ τιμιώτατον, τὴν ζώου καὶ ἀνθρώπου κατασκευήν. ταῦτό δὴ τοῦτο καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς τοῦ παντὸς γενέσεως συμβέβηκεν· ἠνίκα γὰρ ζῶα διαπλάττειν ἔδοξε τῷ δημιουργῶ, τὰ μὲν πρῶτα τῇ τάξει φαυλοτέρως ἦν, ἰχθύες, τὰ δ' ὕστατα ἄριστα, ἄνθρωποι, τὰ δ' ἄλλα μέσα τῶν ἄκρων, ἀμείνω μὲν τῶν

ON THE CREATION, 67-68

wards to come into existence one out of another rendered necessary an adumbration of the principle of order in the narrative. Now in particular creatures the order we find is this, that they begin at what is lowest in its nature, and end in the best of all ; what this best of all is we must go on to show. Now seed is the original starting-point of living creatures. That this is a substance of a very low order, resembling foam, is evident to the eye. But when it has been deposited in the womb and become solid, it acquires movement, and at once enters upon natural growth.<sup>a</sup> But growth is better than seed, since in created things movement is better than quiescence. But nature, or growth, like an artificer, or (to speak more properly) like a consummate art, forms living creatures, by distributing the moist substance to the limbs and different parts of the body, the substance of life-breath <sup>b</sup> to the faculties of the soul, affording them nourishment and endowing them with perception. We must defer for the present the faculty of reasoning, out of consideration for those who maintain that it comes in from without, and is divine and eternal.

Well, then, natural-growth started from so poor a thing as seed, but it ended in that which is of greatest worth, the formation of the living creature and of man. Now we find that this selfsame thing has occurred in the case of the creation of the universe also. For when the Creator determined to form living creatures, those first in order were inferior, if we may so speak, namely fishes, while those that came last in order were best, namely men ; and coming between the two extremes, better than those προτέρων, χείρω δὲ τῶν ἐτέρων, χερσαῖα καὶ πτηνά.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 480, note on L.A. ii. 22.

<sup>b</sup> Or "air."

PHILO

- 69 XXIII. Μετὰ δὴ τὰλλα πάντα, καθάπερ ἐλέχθη, τὸν ἄνθρωπον φησι γεγενῆσθαι, κατ' εἰκόνα θεοῦ καὶ καθ' ὁμοίωσιν (Gen. i. 26)· πάνυ καλῶς, ἐμφερέστερον γὰρ οὐδὲν γηγενὲς ἀνθρώπου θεῶ. τὴν δ' ἐμφέρειαν μηδεὶς εἰκαζέτω σώματος χαρακτῆρι· οὔτε γὰρ ἀνθρωπόμορφος ὁ θεός, οὔτε [16] θεοειδὲς τὸ ἀνθρώπειον | σῶμα. ἡ δὲ εἰκὼν λέλεκται κατὰ τὸν τῆς ψυχῆς ἡγεμόνα νοῦν· πρὸς γὰρ ἓνα, τὸν τῶν ὅλων ἐκείνον ὡς ἂν ἀρχέτυπον, ὁ ἐν ἐκάστῳ τῶν κατὰ μέρος ἀπεικονίσθη, τρόπον τινα θεὸς ὢν τοῦ φέροντος καὶ ἀγαλματοφοροῦντος αὐτόν· ὃν γὰρ ἔχει λόγον ὁ μέγας ἡγεμὼν ἐν ἅπαντι τῷ κόσμῳ, τοῦτον ὡς ἔοικε καὶ ὁ ἀνθρώπινος νοῦς ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ· ἀόρατός τε γὰρ ἐστίν, αὐτὸς τὰ πάντα ὁρῶν, καὶ ἄδηλον ἔχει τὴν οὐσίαν, τὰς τῶν ἄλλων καταλαμβάνων· καὶ τέχναις καὶ ἐπιστήμαις πολυσχιδεῖς ἀνατέμνων ὁδοὺς, λεωφόρους ἀπάσας, διὰ γῆς ἔρχεται καὶ θαλάττης,
- 70 τὰ ἐν ἐκατέρῳ φύσει διερευνώμενος· καὶ πάλιν πτηνὸς ἀρθεῖς, καὶ τὸν ἀέρα καὶ τὰ τούτου παθήματα κατασκευάμενος, ἀνωτέρω φέρεται πρὸς αἰθέρα καὶ τὰς οὐρανοῦ περιόδους, πλανήτων τε καὶ ἀπλανῶν χορείαις συμπεριποληθεὶς κατὰ τοὺς μουσικῆς τελείας νόμους, ἐπόμενος ἔρωτι σοφίας ποδηγετοῦντι, πᾶσαν τὴν αἰσθητὴν οὐσίαν ὑπερ-
- 71 κύψας, ἐνταῦθα ἐφίεται τῆς νοητῆς· καὶ ὢν εἶδεν

that preceded them, but inferior to the others, were the rest, namely land creatures and birds of the air.

XXIII. After all the rest, as I have said, Moses tells us that man was created after the image of God and after His likeness (Gen. i. 26). Right well does he say this, for nothing earth-born is more like God than man. Let no one represent the likeness as one to a bodily form ; for neither is God in human form, nor is the human body God-like. No, it is in respect of the Mind, the sovereign element of the soul, that the word " image " is used ; for after the pattern of a single Mind, even the Mind of the Universe as an archetype, the mind in each of those who successively came into being was moulded. It is in a fashion a god to him who carries and enshrines it as an object of reverence ; for the human mind evidently occupies a position in men precisely answering to that which the great Ruler occupies in all the world. It is invisible while itself seeing all things, and while comprehending the substances of others, it is as to its own substance unperceived ; and while it opens by arts and sciences roads branching in many directions, all of them great highways, it comes through land and sea investigating what either element contains. Again, when on soaring wing it has contemplated the atmosphere and all its phases, it is borne yet higher to the ether and the circuit of heaven, and is whirled round with the dances of planets and fixed stars, in accordance with the laws of perfect music, following that love of wisdom which guides its steps. And so, carrying its gaze beyond the confines of all substance discernible by sense, it comes to a point at which it reaches out after the intelligible world, and on descrying in that world

PHILO

ἐνταῦθα αἰσθητῶν ἐν ἐκείνῃ τὰ παραδείγματα καὶ τὰς ἰδέας θεασάμενος, ὑπερβάλλοντα κάλλη, μέθη νηφαλίῳ κατασχεθεῖς ὥσπερ οἱ κορυβαντιῶντες ἐνθουσιᾶ, ἑτέρου γεμισθεῖς ἡμέρου καὶ πόθου βελτίονος, ὑφ' οὗ πρὸς τὴν ἄκραν ἀψίδα παραπεμφθεῖς τῶν νοητῶν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἰέναι δοκεῖ τὸν μέγαν βασιλέα· γλιχομένου δ' ἰδεῖν, ἀθρόου φωτὸς ἄκρατοι καὶ ἀμιγεῖς αὐγαὶ χειμάρρου τρόπον ἐκχέονται, ὡς ταῖς μαρμαρυγαῖς τὸ τῆς διανοίας ὄμμα σκοτοδιναῖν.

ἐπεὶ δ' οὐ σύμπασα εἰκῶν ἐμφορῆς ἀρχετύπῳ παραδείγματι, πολλαὶ δ' εἰσὶν ἀνόμοιοι, προσεπεσημήνατο ἐπειπῶν<sup>1</sup> τῷ κατ' εἰκόνα τὸ καθ' ὁμοίωσιν, εἰς ἔμφασιν ἀκριβοῦς ἐκμαγείου τρανὸν τύπον ἔχοντος.

- 72 XXIV. Ἀπορήσειε δ' ἂν τις οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ, τί δήποτε τὴν ἀνθρώπου μόνου γένεσιν οὐχ ἐνὶ δημιουργῷ καθάπερ τᾶλλα ἀνέθηκεν, ἀλλ' ὡσανεὶ πλείοσιν· εἰσάγει γὰρ τὸν πατέρα τῶν ὄλων ταυτὶ λέγοντα· “ποιήσωμεν ἄνθρωπον κατ' εἰκόνα ἡμετέραν καὶ καθ' ὁμοίωσιν.” μὴ γὰρ χρεῖός ἐστιν, εἴποιμ' ἂν, οὐτινοσοῦν, ᾧ πάντα ὑπήκοα; ἢ τὸν μὲν οὐρανὸν ἠνίκα ἐποίει καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ τὴν θάλατταν, οὐδενὸς ἐδεήθη τοῦ συνεργήσοντος, ἄνθρωπον δὲ βραχὺ ζῶον οὕτως καὶ ἐπικῆρον οὐχ οἶός τε ἦν δίχα συμπράξεως ἑτέρων αὐτὸς ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ κατασκευάσασθαι; τὴν μὲν οὖν ἀληθεστάτην αἰτίαν θεὸν ἀνάγκη μόνον εἰδέναί, τὴν
73 δ' εἰκότι στοχασμῷ πιθανὴν καὶ εὐλογον εἶναι
[17] δοκοῦσαν οὐκ ἀποκρυπτέον. | ἔστι δὲ ἦδε. τῶν

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Wendland for εἰπῶν.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 475.

ON THE CREATION, 71-73

sights of surpassing loveliness, even the patterns and the originals of the things of sense which it saw here, it is seized by a sober intoxication, like those filled with Corybantic frenzy, and is inspired, possessed by a longing far other than theirs and a nobler desire. Wafted by this to the topmost arch of the things perceptible to mind, it seems to be on its way to the Great King Himself; but, amid its longing to see Him, pure and untempered rays of concentrated light stream forth like a torrent, so that by its gleams the eye of the understanding is dazzled.

And, since images do not always correspond to their archetype and pattern, but are in many instances unlike it, the writer further brought out his meaning by adding "after the likeness" to the words "after the image," thus showing that an accurate cast, bearing a clear impression, was intended.

XXIV. "One may not unfitly raise the question what reason there could be for his ascribing the creation in the case of man only not to one Creator as in the case of the rest but, as the words would suggest, to several. For he represents the Father of the universe as speaking thus, "Let us make man after our image and likeness." 'Can it be,' I would ask, 'that He to whom all things are subject, is in need of anyone whatever? Or can it be that when He made the heaven and the earth and the seas, he required no one to be his fellow-worker, yet was unable apart from the co-operation of others by His own unaided power to fashion a creature so puny and perishable as man?' The full truth about the cause of this it must needs be that God alone knows, but the cause which by probable conjecture seems plausible and reasonable we must not conceal. It ὄντων τὰ μὲν οὐτ' ἀρετῆς οὔτε κακίας μετέχει, ὥσπερ φυτὰ καὶ ζῶα ἄλογα, τὰ μὲν ὅτι ἄψυχά τέ

PHILO

 ἔστι καὶ ἀφαντάστῳ φύσει διοικεῖται, τὰ δ' ὅτι νοῦν καὶ λόγον ἐκτέμνηται· κακίας δὲ καὶ ἀρετῆς
 ὡς ἂν οἶκος νοῦς καὶ λόγος, ᾧ πεφύκασιν ἐνδiciaitāσθαι· τὰ δ' αὖ μόνης κεκοινώνηκεν ἀρετῆς ἀμέτοχα πάσης ὄντα κακίας, ὥσπερ οἱ ἀστέρες· οὔτοι γὰρ
 ζῶά τε εἶναι λέγονται καὶ ζῶα νοερά, μᾶλλον δὲ
 νοῦς αὐτὸς ἕκαστος, ὅλος δι' ὅλων σπουδαῖος
 καὶ παντὸς ἀνεπίδεκτος κακοῦ· τὰ δὲ τῆς μικτῆς
 ἔστι φύσεως, ὥσπερ ἄνθρωπος, ὃς ἐπιδέχεται τὰναντία, φρόνησιν καὶ ἀφροσύνην, σωφροσύνην
 καὶ ἀκολασίαν, ἀνδρείαν καὶ δειλίαν, δικαιοσύνην
 καὶ ἀδικίαν, καὶ συνελόντι φράσαι ἀγαθὰ καὶ κακά, 74 καλὰ καὶ αἰσχρά, ἀρετὴν καὶ κακίαν. τῷ δὲ
 πάντων πατρὶ θεῷ τὰ μὲν σπουδαῖα δι' αὐτοῦ μόνου ποιεῖν οἰκειότατον ἦν ἔνεκα τῆς πρὸς αὐτὸν συγγενείας, τὰ δὲ ἀδιάφορα οὐκ ἀλλότριον, ἐπειδὴ
 καὶ ταῦτα τῆς ἐχθρᾶς αὐτῷ κακίας ἀμοιρεῖ, τὰ
 δὲ μικτὰ τῇ μὲν οἰκεῖον τῇ δ' ἀνοίκειον, οἰκεῖον
 μὲν ἔνεκα τῆς ἀνακεκραμένης βελτίονος ἰδέας, 75 ἀνοίκειον δὲ ἔνεκα τῆς ἐναντίας καὶ χείρονος. διὰ
 τοῦτ' ἐπὶ μόνης τῆς ἀνθρώπου γενέσεώς φησιν
 ὅτι εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς “ ποιήσωμεν,” ὅπερ ἐμφαίνει συμπαράληψιν ἐτέρων ὡς ἂν συνεργῶν, ἵνα ταῖς μὲν ἀνεπιλήπτοις βουλαῖς τε καὶ πράξεσιν ἀν-

ON THE CREATION, 73-75

is this. Among existences some partake neither of virtue nor of vice, like plants and animals devoid of reason; the one sort because they are without animal life and furnished with a nature incapable of consciously receiving impressions; the other sort because from them mind and reason have been eliminated: for mind and reason are as it were the dwelling-place of vice and virtue, which are by nature constituted to make their abode in them. Others again have partnership with virtue only, and have no part or lot in vice. Such are the heavenly bodies; for these are said to be not only living creatures but living creatures endowed with mind, or rather each of them a mind in itself, excellent through and through and unsusceptible of any evil. Others are of mixed nature, as man, who is liable to contraries, wisdom and folly, self-mastery and licentiousness, courage and cowardice, justice and injustice, and (in a word) to things good and evil, fair and foul, to virtue and vice. Now it was most proper to God the universal Father to make those excellent things by Himself alone, because of their kinship to Him. To make those which are neither good nor bad was not alien to Him, since those too are free from vice which is hateful to Him. To make those of mixed nature was in one respect proper to Him, in another not so; proper, so far as the better principle which forms an ingredient in them is concerned, alien, in virtue of the contrary and worse principle. So we see why it is only in the instance of man's creation that we are told by Moses that God said "Let us make," an expression which plainly shows the taking with Him of others as fellow-workers. It is to the end that, when man orders his course aright, when his thoughts

PHILO

θρώπου κατορθοῦντος ἐπιγράφηται θεὸς ὁ πάντων ἡγεμών, ταῖς δ' ἐναντίαις ἕτεροι τῶν ὑπηκόων ἔδει γὰρ ἀναίτιον εἶναι κακοῦ τὸν πατέρα τοῖς ἐκγόνοις· κακὸν δ' ἢ κακία καὶ αἱ κατὰ κακίαν

76 ἐνέργειαι. πάννυ δὲ καλῶς, τὸ γένος ἄνθρωπον εἰπών, διέκρινε τὰ εἶδη φήσας ἄρρεν τε καὶ θῆλυ δεδημιουργῆσθαι, μήπω τῶν ἐν μέρει μορφὴν λαβόντων, ἐπειδὴ τὰ προσεχέστατα τῶν εἰδῶν ἐνυπάρχει τῷ γένει, καὶ ὡσπερ ἐν κατοπτρῷ διαφαίνεται τοῖς ὀξὺ καθορᾶν δυναμένοις.

77 XXV. | Ἐπιζητήσῃε δ' ἂν τις τὴν αἰτίαν, δι'
 [18] ἣν ὑστατόν ἐστιν ἄνθρωπος τῆς τοῦ κόσμου γενέσεως· ἐφ' ἅπασιν γὰρ τοῖς ἄλλοις αὐτὸν ὁ ποιητῆς καὶ πατήρ, ὡσπερ αἱ ἱεραὶ γραφαὶ μνηύουσιν, εἰργάσατο. λέγουσιν οὖν οἱ τοῖς νόμοις ἐπὶ πλέον ἐμβαθύναντες, καὶ τὰ κατ' αὐτοὺς ὡς ἐνὶ μάλιστα μετὰ πάσης ἐξετάσεως ἀκριβοῦντες, ὅτι τῆς αὐτοῦ συγγενείας μεταδοὺς ὁ θεὸς ἀνθρώπῳ τῆς λογικῆς, ἣτις ἀρίστη δωρεῶν ἦν, οὐδὲ τῶν ἄλλων ἐφθόνησεν, ἀλλ' ὡς οἰκειοτάτῳ καὶ φιλτάτῳ ζῶντι τὰ ἐν κόσμῳ πάντα προητοιμάσατο, βουλευθεὶς γενόμενον αὐτὸν μηδενὸς ἀπορηῆσαι τῶν πρὸς τε τὸ ζῆν καὶ τὸ εἶ ζῆν· ὧν τὸ μὲν παρασκευάζουσιν αἱ χορηγίαι καὶ ἀφθονίαι τῶν πρὸς ἀπόλαυσιν, τὸ δὲ ἢ θεωρία τῶν κατ' οὐρανόν, ἀφ' ἧς πληχθεὶς ὁ νοῦς ἔρωτα καὶ πόθον ἔσχε τῆς τούτων ἐπιστήμης· ὅθεν τὸ φιλοσοφίας ἀνεβλάστησε γένος, ὑφ' οὗ καίτοι θνητὸς ὢν ἄνθρωπος ἀπαθανατί-

ON THE CREATION, 75-77

and deeds are blameless, God the universal Ruler may be owned as their Source ; while others from the number of His subordinates are held responsible for thoughts and deeds of a contrary sort : for it could not be that the Father should be the cause of an evil thing to His offspring : and vice and vicious activities are an evil thing.

And when Moses had called the genus " man," quite admirably did he distinguish its species, adding that it had been created " male and female," and this though its individual members had not yet taken shape. For the primary species are in the genus to begin with, and reveal themselves as in a mirror to those who have the faculty of keen vision.

XXV. It is obvious to inquire why man comes last in the world's creation ; for, as the sacred writings show, he was the last whom the Father and Maker fashioned. Those, then, who have studied more deeply than others the laws of Moses and who examine their contents with all possible minuteness, maintain that God, when He made man partaker of kinship with Himself in mind and reason best of all gifts, did not begrudge him the other gifts either, but made ready for him beforehand all things in the world, as for a living being dearest and closest to Himself, since it was His will that when man came into existence he should be at a loss for none of the means of living and of living well. The means of living are provided by the lavish supplies of all that makes for enjoyment ; the means of living well by the contemplation of the heavenly existences, for smitten by their contemplation the mind conceives a love and longing for the knowledge of them. And from this philosophy took its rise, by which man, mortal though he be, is

PHILO

- 78 ζεται. καθάπερ οὖν οἱ ἐστιάτορες οὐ πρότερον ἐπὶ δεῖπνον καλοῦσιν, ἢ τὰ πρὸς εὐωχίαν πάντα εὐτρεπίσαι, καὶ οἱ τοὺς γυμνικοὺς ἀγῶνας καὶ σκηνικοὺς τιθέντες, πρὶν συναγαγεῖν τοὺς θεατὰς εἰς τε τὰ θέατρα καὶ τὰ στάδια, εὐτρεπίζουσιν ἀγωνιστῶν καὶ θεαμάτων καὶ ἀκουσμάτων πλῆθος· τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ ὁ τῶν ὄλων ἡγεμῶν, οἶά τις ἀθλοθέτης καὶ ἐστιάτωρ, ἄνθρωπον καλεῖν μέλλων ἐπὶ τε εὐωχίαν καὶ θεωρίαν, τὰ εἰς ἑκάτερον εἶδος προετρεπίσατο· ἵν' εἰς τὸν κόσμον εἰσελθὼν εὐθύς εὔρη καὶ συμπόσιον καὶ θέατρον ἱερώτατον, τὸ μὲν ἀπάντων πλήρες ὅσα γῆ καὶ ποταμοὶ καὶ θάλαττα καὶ ἀῆρ φέρουσιν εἰς χρῆσιν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν, τὸ δὲ παντοίων θεαμάτων, ἃ καταπληκτικωτάτας μὲν ἔχει τὰς οὐσίας, καταπληκτικωτάτας δὲ τὰς ποιότητας, θαυμασιωτάτας δὲ τὰς κινήσεις καὶ χορείας, ἐν τάξεσιν ἡρμοσμέναις καὶ ἀριθμῶν ἀναλογίαις καὶ περιόδων συμφωνίαις· ἐν αἷς ἀπάσαις τὴν ἀρχέτυπον καὶ ἀληθῆ καὶ παραδειγματικὴν μουσικὴν οὐκ ἂν ἀμαρτάνοι τις εἶναι λέγων, ἀφ' ἧς οἱ μετὰ ταῦτα ἄνθρωποι, γραψάμενοι <ἐν> ταῖς ἑαυτῶν ψυχαῖς τὰς εἰκόνας ἀναγκαιοτάτην καὶ ὠφελιμωτάτην τέχνην τῷ βίῳ παρέδοσαν.
- 79 XXVI. Ἦδε μὲν αἰτία πρώτη, δι' ἣν ἄνθρωπος ἐφ' ἅπασιν γεγενῆσθαι δοκεῖ· δευτέραν δ' οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ λεκτέον. ἅμα τῇ πρώτῃ γενέσει τὰς εἰς τὸ ζῆν παρασκευὰς ἀπάσας εὔρεν ἄνθρωπος, εἰς διδασκαλίαν τῶν ἔπειτα, μόνον οὐκ ἄντικρυς βούσεως τῆς φύσεως, ὅτι, μιμούμενοι τὸν ἀρχηγέτην τοῦ γένους, ἀπόνως καὶ ἀταλαιπώρως ἐν

ON THE CREATION, 78-79

rendered immortal. Just as givers of a banquet, then, do not send out the summonses to supper till they have put everything in readiness for the feast ; and those who provide gymnastic and scenic contests, before they gather the spectators into the theatre or the stadium, have in readiness a number of combatants and performers to charm both eye and ear ; exactly in the same way the Ruler of all things, like some provider of contests or of a banquet, when about to invite man to the enjoyment of a feast and a great spectacle, made ready beforehand the material for both. He desired that on coming into the world man might at once find both a banquet and a most sacred display, the one full of all things that earth and rivers and sea and air bring forth for use and for enjoyment, the other of all sorts of spectacles, most impressive in their substance, most impressive in their qualities, and circling with most wondrous movements, in an order fitly determined always in accordance with proportion of numbers and harmony of revolutions. In all these one might rightly say that there was the real music, the original and model of all other, from which the men of subsequent ages, when they had painted the images in their own souls, handed down an art most vital and beneficial to human life.

XXVI. Such is the first reason for which apparently man was created after all things : but we must mention a second that is not improbable. Directly he came into existence man found there all provisions for life. This was for the instruction of future generations. Nature seemed almost to cry aloud in so many words that like the first father of the race they were to spend their days without toil or trouble sur-

- ἀφθονωτάτη τῶν ἀναγκαίων εὐπορία διάξουσιν.
 [19] τουτὶ δὲ συμβήσεται, | ἐὰν μήτε αἱ ἄλογοι ἡδοναὶ ψυχῆς δυναστεύσωσι, γαστριμαργίαν καὶ λαγνείαν ἐπιτειχίσασαι, μήτε αἱ δόξης ἢ χρημάτων ἢ ἀρχῆς ἐπιθυμίαι τὸ τοῦ βίου κράτος ἀνάψωνται, μήτε στείλωσι καὶ κάμψωσι διάνοιαν αἱ λῦπαι, μήθ' ὁ κακὸς σύμβουλος φόβος τὰς ἐπὶ τὰ σπουδαῖα τῶν
 ἔργων ὄρμᾶς ἀναχαιτίσῃ, μήτ' ἀφροσύνη καὶ δειλία
 καὶ ἀδικία καὶ τὸ τῶν ἄλλων κακιῶν ἀμήχανον 80 πλήθος ἐπιθῆται. νυνὶ μὲν γὰρ πάντων ὅσα
 λέλεκται παρενημερησάντων, καὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων
 ἀνέδην ἐκκεχυμένων εἰς τε τὰ πάθη καὶ τὰ ἀκρά-τορας καὶ ὑπαιτίους ἄς οὐδ' εἰπεῖν θέμις ὀρέξεις, ἀπαντᾶται δίκη προσήκουσα τιμωρὸς ἀσεβῶν ἐπι-τηδευμάτων· ἔστι δ' ἡ δίκη τὸ τῶν ἀναγκαίων
 δυσπόριστον· μόλις γὰρ ἀνατέμνοντες τὴν πεδιάδα,
 καὶ πηγῶν ρεῖθρα καὶ ποταμῶν ἐποχτετεύοντες,
 σπείροντές τε καὶ φυτεύοντες, καὶ τὸν γεωπόνων
 κάματον μεθ' ἡμέραν καὶ νύκτωρ ἀτρύτως ἐκδεχόμενοι δι' ἔτους, συγκομίζουσι τὰ ἐπιτήδεια, καὶ
 ταῦτ' ἔστιν ὅτε λυπρὰ καὶ οὐ πάνυ διαρκῆ διὰ πολλὰς βλαβέντα αἰτίας· ἢ γὰρ ὄμβρων ἐπαλ-λήλων φοραὶ κατέσυραν, ἢ χαλάζης βάρος ἐπενεχθείσης ἀθρόως κατέκλασεν, ἢ χιῶν περιέψυξεν, ἢ βία πνευμάτων ρίζαις αὐταῖς ἀνέτρεψε· πολλὰ γὰρ
 ὕδωρ καὶ ἀήρ εἰς ἀγονίαν καρπῶν νεωτερίζουσιν.
 81 εἰ δὲ σωφροσύνη μὲν ἐξευμαρισθεῖεν αἱ ἄμετροι
 τῶν παθῶν ὄρμαί, δικαιοσύνη δὲ αἱ περὶ τὰδικεῖν
 σπουδαῖ τε καὶ φιλοτιμίαι, καί, συνελόντι φράσαι,
 ταῖς ἀρεταῖς καὶ ταῖς κατ' ἀρετὰς ἐνεργείαις αἱ

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 475, 476.

rounded by lavish abundance of all that they needed. And this will be so if irrational pleasures do not get control of the soul, making their assaults upon it through greediness and lust, nor the desires for glory or wealth or power arrogate to themselves the control of the life, nor sorrows lower and depress the mind ; and if fear, that evil counsellor, do not dispel high impulses to noble deeds, nor folly and cowardice and injustice and the countless host of other vices assail him. For in sooth as things now are, when all these evils which have been recounted have won the day, and men have flung themselves unrestrainedly into the indulgence of their passions and left uncontrolled their guilty cravings, cravings which it were sinful even to name, a fitting penalty is incurred, due punishment of impious courses. That penalty is difficulty in obtaining the necessaries of life. For men plough the prairie and irrigate it from spring and river ; they sow and plant ; and through the livelong year<sup>a</sup> unweariedly take up by day and night the ever renewed toil of the tiller of the earth ; and yet they are hard put to it to gather in their requisite supplies, and these at times of poor quality and barely sufficient, having suffered injury from many causes : either they were ravaged by recurring rainfalls, or beaten down in masses by the weight of hail that fell on them, or half frozen by snow, or torn up roots and all by violent winds ; for water and air can in many ways change the fruitfulness of crops into barrenness. But if the unmeasured impulses of men's passions were calmed and allayed by self-mastery, and their earnestness and eager striving after the infliction of wrongs were checked by righteousness ; if, in a word, the vices and the fruitless

PHILO

κακίαι καὶ αἱ κατ' αὐτὰς ἀνήνυτοι πράξεις, ἀνηρη-μένου μὲν τοῦ πολέμου τοῦ κατὰ ψυχὴν, ὃς ἀψευδῶς ἔστι πολέμων ἀργαλεώτατος καὶ βαρύτερος, εἰρή-νης δ' ἐπισχούσης, καὶ ταῖς ἐν ἡμῖν δυνάμεσιν
 εὐνομίαν παρασκευαζούσης ἡσυχῇ τε καὶ πράως, ἐλπίς ἂν ἦν τὸν θεόν, ἅτε φιλάρετον καὶ φιλόκαλον
 καὶ προσέτι φιλόανθρωπον, τὰγαθὰ αὐτόματα παρα-σχεῖν ἐξ ἑτοίμου τῷ γενεῖ· δῆλον γὰρ ὡς εὐμαρέστερον τοῦ τὰ μὴ ὄντα εἰς τὸ εἶναι παραγαγεῖν τὸ
 τῆν ἐκ τῶν ὄντων φοράν ἄνευ τέχνης γεωργικῆς ἐπιδαφιλεύσασθαι.

- 82 XXVII. Δευτέρα μὲν αἰτία ἦδε λελέχθω, τρίτη
 δ' ἔστι τοιάδε. ἀρχὴν καὶ τέλος τῶν γεγονότων
 ὁ θεὸς ἀρμόσασθαι διανοηθεὶς ὡς ἀναγκαῖα καὶ φίλτατα, ἀρχὴν μὲν οὐρανὸν ἐποίει, τέλος δὲ
 ἄνθρωπον, τὸν μὲν τῶν ἐν αἰσθητοῖς ἀφθάρτων
 τελειότατον, τὸν δὲ τῶν γηγενῶν καὶ φθαρτῶν
 [20] ἄριστον, βραχύν, | εἰ δεῖ τάληθές εἰπεῖν, οὐρανόν, πολλὰς ἐν αὐτῷ φύσεις ἀστεροειδεῖς ἀγαλματο-φοροῦντα, τέχναις καὶ ἐπιστήμαις καὶ τοῖς καθ' ἑκάστην ἀρετὴν ἀοιδίμοις θεωρήμασιν· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ
 ἐναντία φύσει τό τε φθαρτὸν καὶ τὸ ἀφθαρτον, εἶδους ἑκατέρου τὸ κάλλιστον ἀρχῇ καὶ τέλει προσἐνειμεν, ἀρχῇ μὲν οὐρανόν, ὡς ἐλέχθη, τέλει δὲ ἄνθρωπον.

- 83 XXVIII. Ἐπὶ πᾶσι μέντοι κάκεινο λέγεται πρὸς
 ἀπόδοσιν αἰτίας ἀναγκαίας· ἔδει, πάντων γεγο-

ON THE CREATION, 81-83

practices to which they prompt were to give place to the virtues and their corresponding activities, the warfare in the soul, of all wars veritably the most dire and most grievous, would have been abolished, and peace would prevail and would in quiet and gentle ways provide good order for the exercise of our faculties, and there would be hope that God, being the Lover of virtue and the Lover of what is good and beautiful and also the Lover of man, would provide for our race good things all coming forth spontaneously and all in readiness. For it is clear that it is easier without calling in the husbandman's art to supply in abundance the yield of growths already existing than to bring into being things that were non-existent.

XXVII. Let what has been said suffice for an account of the second reason. A third is this. God, being minded to unite in intimate and loving fellowship the beginning and end of created things, made heaven the beginning and man the end, the one the most perfect of imperishable objects of sense, the other the noblest of things earthborn and perishable, being, in very truth, a miniature heaven. He bears about within himself, like holy images, endowments of nature that correspond to the constellations. He has capacities for science and art, for knowledge, and for the noble lore of the several virtues. For since the corruptible and the incorruptible are by nature contrary the one to the other, God assigned the fairest of each sort to the beginning and the end, heaven (as I have said) to the beginning, and man to the end.

XXVIII. Finally, this is suggested as a cogent reason. Man was bound to arise after all created

PHILO

νότων, ὕστατον φῦναι τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἵνα τελευταῖος ἕξαπιναίως τοῖς ἄλλοις ζώοις ἐπιφανεῖς ἐμποιήσῃ κατάπληξιν· ἔμελλε γὰρ ἰδόντα πρῶτον τεθηπέναι
 καὶ προσκυνεῖν ὡς ἂν ἡγεμόνα φύσει καὶ δεσπότην·
 διὸ καὶ θεασάμενα πάντα διὰ πάντων ἡμερώθη,
 καὶ ὅσα τὰς φύσεις ἀγριώτατα κατὰ τὴν πρώτην
 εὐθύς πρόσοψιν ἐγένετο χειροηθέστατα, τὰς μὲν
 ἀτιθάσους λύττας ἐπιδεικνύμενα κατ' ἀλλήλων, 84 εἰς δὲ μόνον τὸν ἄνθρωπον τιθασειόμενα. παρ' ἣν
 αἰτίαν καὶ γεννήσας αὐτὸν ὁ πατήρ ἡγεμονικὸν
 φύσει ζῶον, οὐκ ἔργῳ μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ τῇ διὰ
 λόγου χειροτονία καθίστη τῶν ὑπὸ σελήνην ἀπάντων βασιλέα χερσαίων καὶ ἐνύδρων καὶ ἀεροπόρων·
 ὅσα γὰρ θνητὰ ἐν τοῖς τρισὶ στοιχείοις, γῆ, ὕδατι,
 ἀέρι, πάντα ὑπέταττεν αὐτῷ, τὰ κατ' οὐρανὸν ὑπεξελόμενος, ἅτε θειοτέρας μοίρας ἐπιλαχόντα.
 πίστις δὲ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἐναργεστάτη τὰ φαινόμενα·
 θρεμμάτων ἔστιν ὅτε πλήθη μυρία πρὸς ἀνδρὸς
 ἐνὸς ἄγεται τοῦ τυχόντος, οὔθ' ὄπλοφοροῦντος
 οὔτε σίδηρον οὔτε τι τῶν ἀμυντηρίων ἐπιφερομένου, διφθέραν δ' αὐτὸ μόνον ἔχοντος σκεπαστήριον καὶ βακτηρίαν ἕνεκα τοῦ διασημῆναί τε 85 καὶ ἐν ταῖς ὁδοιπορίαις εἰ κάμοι στηρίσασθαι· τὰς
 γοῦν πολυζώους ἀγέλας προβάτων, αἰγῶν, βοῶν,
 ἄγει ποιμὴν αἰπόλος βουκόλος, ἄνθρωποι μὴδὲ
 τοῖς σώμασιν ἐρρωμένοι καὶ σφριγῶντες, ὡς ἕνεκα
 γοῦν εὐεξίας ἐμποιῆσαι τοῖς ἰδοῦσι κατάπληξιν·
 καὶ αἱ τοσαῦται τῶν τοσοῦτων ἀλκαί τε καὶ
 δυνάμεις εὐοπλοῦντων—ἔχουσι γὰρ τὰς ἐκ φύσεως 68

things, in order that coming last and suddenly appearing to the other animals he might produce consternation in them ; for they were sure, as soon as they saw him, to be amazed and do homage to him as to a born ruler or master : and so on beholding him they were all tamed through all their kinds, those who were most savage in their natures at the first sight of him becoming at once most manageable, displaying their untamed pugnacity one against another, but to man and man alone showing gentleness and docility. On this account too the Father, when he had brought him into existence as a living being naturally adapted for sovereignty, not only in fact but by express mandate appointed him king of all creatures under the moon, those that move on land and swim in the sea and fly in the air. For all things mortal in the three elements of land and water and air did He make subject to men, but exempted the heavenly beings as having obtained a portion more divine. The clearest proof of man's rule is afforded by what goes on before our eyes. Sometimes vast numbers of cattle are led by one quite ordinary man neither wearing armour nor carrying an iron weapon nor anything with which to defend himself, with nothing but a sheepskin to cover him and a staff wherewith to show them which way to go and to lean on should he grow weary on his journeys. See, there is a shepherd, a goatherd, a cowherd leading flocks of sheep and goats, and herds of kine. They are men not even strong and lusty in body, unlikely, so far as healthy vigour goes, to create consternation in those who see them. And all the prowess and strength of all those well-armed animals, who possess the equipment which nature provides παρασκευὰς αἷς ἀμύνονται—καθάπερ δούλοι δεσπότην κατεπτήχασι, καὶ τὰ προσταττόμενα δρῶσι· ταῦροι μὲν καταζεύγνυνται πρὸς ἄροτον γῆς, καὶ

PHILO

 βαθείας αὐλακας ἀνατέμνοντες δι' ἡμέρας, ἔστι δ'
 ὅτε <καὶ νυκτός>, μακρὸν δόλιχον ἀποτείνουσι, γεωπόνου τινὸς ἐφεστῶτος· κριοὶ δὲ βρίθοντες
 βαθέσι μαλλοῖς, ὑπόποκοι κατὰ τὴν ἔαρος ὥραν,
 ὑπὸ ποιμένος κελευσθέντες ἴστανται μετ' ἡρεμίας,
 ἢ καὶ ἡσυχῇ κατακλινέντες ἐμπαρέχουσι ἀπο-κείρασθαι, τὸ ἔριον ἐθιζόμενοι καθάπερ αἱ πόλεις
 [21] τὸν ἐτήσιον ἀποδιδόναί | δασμὸν τῷ φύσει βασιλεῖ·
 86 καὶ μὴν τό γε θυμικώτατον ζῶον ἵππος ῥαδίως [ἄγεται] χαλιναγωγηθεῖς, ἵνα μὴ σκιρτῶν ἀφηνιάζη,
 καί, τὰ νῶτα κοιλάνας εὖ μάλα πρὸς τὸ εὐέδρον,
 δέχεται τὸν ἔποχον, καὶ μετέωρον ἀναβαστάσας
 ὀξύτατα θεῖ σπουδάζων, εἰς οὓς ἂν ἐπείγεται γίνεσθαι τόπους ἐκείνος, ἀφικνεῖσθαι καὶ διακομίζειν· ὁ δ' ἐφιδρυμένος ἄνευ καμάτων κατὰ πολλὴν ἡσυχίαν ἐτέρου σώματι καὶ ποσὶν ἀνύτει τὸν δρόμον.
 87 XXIX. Πολλὰ δ' ἂν ἔχοι τις λέγειν ἕτερα, βουλόμενος ἀπομηκύνειν, εἰς ἔνδειξιν τοῦ μηδὲν ἀπελευθεριάζειν ὑπεξηρημένον τῆς ἀνθρώπου ἡγε-μονίας· δείγματος δ' ἔνεκα καὶ τὰ ῥηθέντα ἀρκεῖ.
 χρῆ μέντοι μηδ' ἐκείνο ἀγνοεῖν ὅτι οὐ παρ' ὅσον ὕστατον γέγονεν ἄνθρωπος διὰ τὴν τάξιν ἡλάτ-88 τωται. μάρτυρες δ' ἡνίοχοι καὶ κυβερνήται· οἱ
 μὲν γάρ, ὑστερίζοντες τῶν ὑποζυγίων καὶ κατόπιν αὐτῶν ἐξεταζόμενοι, ἢ ἂν ἐθέλωσιν αὐτὰ ἄγουσι,
 τῶν ἡνιῶν ἐνειλημμένοι, καὶ τοτὲ μὲν ἐφίεντες πρὸς

and use it in self-defence, cower before him like slaves before a master, and do his bidding. Bulls are harnessed to plough the land, and cutting deep furrows all day long, sometimes all night as well, accomplish a long bout with some farm-hand to direct them : rams laden with thick fleeces of wool, when spring-time comes, stand peacefully or even lie down quietly at the shepherd's bidding, and offer their wool to the shears, growing accustomed, just as cities do, to render their yearly tribute to him whom nature has given them for king. Nay, even the horse, most spirited of all animals, is easily controlled by the bit to prevent his growing restive and running away. He hollows his back, making it a convenient seat, takes his rider on it and bearing him aloft gallops at a great pace intent on bringing himself and his rider to the destination which the latter is eager to reach. As for his rider, firmly seated on him, without trouble and in much composure, he gets through his journey using the body and feet of another.

XXIX. Anyone who wished to enlarge on the subject would have plenty more to say tending to prove that nothing whatever has been emancipated and withdrawn from the domination of men : this is sufficiently indicated by what has been said. There is a point, however, as to which ignorance must be avoided. The fact of having been the last to come into existence does not involve an inferiority corresponding to his place in the series. Drivers and pilots are evidence of this. The former, though they come after their team and have their appointed place behind them, keep hold of the reins and drive them just as they wish, now letting them fall into a

PHILO

ὄξυν δρόμον, τοτὲ δ' ἀναχαιτίζοντες, εἰ φορᾶ τοῦ δέοντος πλείονι θεοί· οἱ δ' αὖ κυβερνήται, πρὸς τὸ τῆς νεῶς ἔσχατον χωρίον πρῦμναν παρελθόντες, πάντων ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν εἰσιν ἄριστοι τῶν ἐμπλεόντων, ἄτε τῆς νεῶς καὶ τῶν ἐν αὐτῇ τὴν σωτηρίαν ἐν χερσὶ ταῖς αὐτῶν ἔχοντες. ἡνίοχον δὴ τινα καὶ κυβερνήτην ἐφ' ἅπασιν ὁ ποιητῆς ἐδημιούργει τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἵνα ἡνιοχῇ καὶ κυβερνᾷ τὰ περίγεια, ζώων καὶ φυτῶν λαβῶν τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν, οἷά τις ὑπαρχος τοῦ πρώτου καὶ μεγάλου βασιλέως.

- 89 XXX. Ἐπεὶ δ' ὁ σύμπας κόσμος ἐτελειώθη κατὰ τὴν ἐξάδος ἀριθμοῦ τελείου φύσιν, τὴν ἐπιούσαν ἡμέραν ἐβδόμην ἐσέμνυνεν ὁ πατήρ, ἐπαινέσας καὶ ἀγίαν προσειπών· ἑορτῇ γὰρ οὐ μιᾶς πόλεως ἢ χώρας ἐστὶν ἀλλὰ τοῦ παντός, ἣν κυρίως ἄξιον καὶ μόνην πάνδημον ὀνομάζειν καὶ τοῦ κόσμου
- 90 γενέθλιον. τὴν δ' ἐβδομάδος φύσιν οὐκ οἶδ' εἶ τις ἰκανῶς ἂν ὑμνήσαι δύναίτο, παντὸς οὖσαν λόγου κρείττονα· οὐ μὴν ὅτι θαυμασιωτέρα τῶν περὶ αὐτῆς λεγομένων ἐστί, διὰ τοῦθ' ἡσυχαστέον, ἀλλ' ἐπιτολημητέον, εἰ καὶ μὴ πάντα μηδὲ τὰ κυριώτατα οἶόν τε, τὰ γοῦν ταῖς ἡμετέραις δια-
- 91 νοίαις ἐφικτὰ δηλώσαι. διχῶς ἐβδομάς λέγεται, ἥ μὲν ἐντὸς δεκάδος, ἥτις ἐπτάκις μονάδι μόνῃ μετρεῖται, συνεστῶσα ἐκ μονάδων ἐπτά· ἥ δ' ἐκτὸς δεκάδος, ἀριθμὸς οὐ πάντως ἀρχὴ μονάς, κατὰ τοὺς διπλασίους ἢ τριπλασίους ἢ συνόλως ἀνα-

sharp trot, now pulling them up should they go with more speed than is necessary. Pilots again, taking their way to the stern, the hindmost place in the ship, are, one may say, superior to all on board, for they hold in their hands the safety of the ship and those on board it. So the Creator made man after all things, as a sort of driver and pilot, to drive and steer the things on earth, and charged him with the care of animals and plants, like a governor subordinate to the chief and great King.

XXX. Now when the whole world had been brought to completion in accordance with the properties of six, a perfect number, the Father invested with dignity the seventh day which comes next, extolling it and pronouncing it holy; for it is the festival, not of a single city or country, but of the universe, and it alone strictly deserves to be called "public" as belonging to all people and the birthday of the world. I doubt whether anyone could adequately celebrate the properties of the number 7, for they are beyond all words. Yet the fact that it is more wondrous than all that is said about it is no reason for maintaining silence regarding it. Nay, we must make a brave attempt to bring out at least all that is within the compass of our understandings, even if it be impossible to bring out all or even the most essential points. Now, 7 or 7th is a term used in two different senses. There is the 7 inside the number 10. This consists of 7 units, and is determined by the sevenfold repetition of the unit. There is the 7 outside the number 10. This is a number starting throughout from the number 1 and formed by doubling it and going on doubling (7 times) or trebling, or multiplying by any other number in regular pro-

PHILO

- λογοῦντας ἀριθμούς, ὡς ἔχει ὁ ἑξήκοντατέσσαρα |
 [22] καὶ ὁ ἑπτακόσια εἰκοσιεννέα, ὁ μὲν κατὰ τὸν ἀπὸ
 μονάδος διπλασίον παραυξηθεῖς, ὁ δ' αὖ κατὰ τὸν τριπλασίον. ἑκάτερον δὲ εἶδος οὐ παρέργως ἐπι-92 σκεπτέον. τὸ μὲν δὴ δεύτερον ἐμφανεστάτην ἔχει προνομίαν· αἰεὶ γὰρ ὁ ἀπὸ μονάδος συντιθέμενος
 ἐν διπλασίοις ἢ τριπλασίοις ἢ συνόλως ἀνα-λογοῦσιν ἑβδομος ἀριθμὸς κύβος τε καὶ τετράγωνός
 ἐστίν, ἀμφοτέρω τὰ εἶδη περιέχων τῆς τε ἀσωμάτου
 καὶ σωματικῆς οὐσίας, τῆς μὲν ἀσωμάτου κατὰ
 τὴν ἐπίπεδον ἢ ἀποτελοῦσι τετράγωνοι, τῆς δὲ
 σωματικῆς κατὰ τὴν στερεὰν ἢ ἀποτελοῦσι κύβοι.
 93 σαφειστάτη δ' οἱ λεχθέντες ἀριθμοὶ πίστις· αὐτίκα
 ὁ ἀπὸ μονάδος ἐν διπλασίονι λόγῳ παραυξηθεῖς ἑβδομος, ὁ τέσσαρα καὶ ἑξήκοντα, τετράγωνος μὲν
 ἐστὶν ὀκτάκις ὀκτῶ πολυπλασιασθέντων, κύβος δὲ τεσσάρων ἐπὶ τέσσαρα τετράκις· καὶ πάλιν ὁ ἐν
 τριπλασίονι λόγῳ παραυξηθεῖς ἀπὸ μονάδος ἑβ-94 δομος, ὁ ἑπτακόσια εἰκοσιεννέα, τετράγωνος μὲν
 πολυπλασιασθέντος ἐφ' αὐτὸν τοῦ ἐπτά καὶ εἴκοσι,
 κύβος δὲ τοῦ ἐννέα ἐφ' αὐτὸν ἐννάκις. καὶ αἰεὶ,
 τὸν ἑβδομον ποιούμενός τις ἀντὶ μονάδος ἀρχήν,
 καὶ παραύξων κατὰ τὴν αὐτὴν ἀναλογίαν ἄχρις
 ἑβδομάδος, εὐρήσει πάντως τὸν παραυξηθέντα κύβον τε καὶ τετράγωνον· ἀπὸ γοῦν τοῦ ἑξήκοντατέσσαρα ὁ συντεθεῖς ἐν διπλασίονι λόγῳ γεννήσει
 ἑβδομον τὸν τετρακισχίλια καὶ ἐνενηκοντάξ, τετρά-95 γωνον ὁμοῦ καὶ κύβον, τετράγωνον μὲν αὐτὸν πλευρὰν ἔχοντα τὸν ἑξήκοντατέσσαρα, κύβον δὲ τὸν ἑκκαίδεκα.
- 95 XXXI. Μεταβατέον δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ θάτερον ἑβδομάδος εἶδος τὸ περιεχόμενον ἐν δεκάδι, θαυμαστήν

ON THE CREATION, 91-95

gression ; as, for example, the number 64 is the product of doubling from 1 onwards, and the number 729 that of trebling. Each of these forms claims more than casual notice. The second form, clearly has a very manifest superiority. For invariably the 7th term of any regular progression, starting from unity and with a ratio of 2, 3, or any other number, is both a cube and a square, embracing both forms, that of the incorporeal and that of the corporeal substance, the form of the incorporeal answering to the surface which is formed by squares, that of the corporeal answering to the solid which is formed by cubes. The plainest evidence of this are the numbers already mentioned : for instance, the 7th from 1 reached by going on doubling, i.e. 64, is a square, being 8 times 8, and a cube, being 4 times 4, again multiplied by 4 : and again the 7th from 1 reached by progressive trebling, 729, is a square, being the product of 27 multiplied by itself, and the cube of 9, i.e. 9 times 9, again multiplied by 9. And invariably if one takes the 7th number for his starting-point instead of the unit, and multiplies in corresponding fashion up to a (fresh) 7th, he is sure to find the product both a cube and a square : for instance starting from 64 the number formed by continuous doubling will give us seventh 4096. This is at once a square and a cube—a square with 64 as its side and a cube with 16.

XXXI. We must pass on to the other kind of 7th, that which is contained within the decade. It ἐπιδεικνύμενον καὶ οὐκ ἐλάττονα τοῦ προτέρου φύσιν. αὐτίκα συνέστηκε τὰ ἑπτὰ ἐξ ἑνὸς καὶ δυοῖν καὶ τεττάρων ἐχόντων δύο λόγους ἀρμονικωτάτους, τὸν τε διπλάσιον καὶ τετραπλάσιον, τὸν μὲν τὴν διὰ πασῶν συμφωνίαν, τὸν δὲ τετραπλάσιον τὴν δις διὰ πασῶν ἀποτελοῦντα. περιέχει δὲ καὶ διαιρέσεις ἄλλας, ζυγάδην τρόπον τινὰ συνεστῶσας, ἑβδομάς· διαιρεῖται γὰρ πρῶτον μὲν εἰς μονάδα καὶ ἐξάδα, ἔπειτα εἰς δυάδα καὶ πεντάδα, καὶ τελευταῖον εἰς τριάδα καὶ τετράδα.

PHILO

96 μουσικωτάτη δὲ καὶ ἡ τούτων ἀναλογία τῶν ἀριθμῶν· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἐξ πρὸς ἓν ἔχει λόγον ἐξαπλάσιον, ὁ δ' ἐξαπλάσιος λόγος τὸ μέγιστον ἐν τοῖς οὐσι ποιεῖ διάστημα, ᾧ διέστηκε τὸ ὀξύτατον ἀπὸ τοῦ βαρυτάτου, καθάπερ ἀποδείξομεν, ὅταν ἀπὸ τῶν ἀριθμῶν μετέλθωμεν ἐπὶ τὸν ἐν ἀρμονίαις λόγον· τὰ δὲ πέντε πρὸς δύο πλείστην ἐν ἀρμονία δύναμιν ἐπιδείκνυται, σχεδὸν ἐνάμιλλον τῇ διὰ πασῶν, ὅπερ ἐν τῇ κανονικῇ θεωρίᾳ σαφέστατα [23] παρίσταται· τὰ δὲ τέσσαρα πρὸς τρία | τὴν πρώτην ἀρμονίαν ἀποτελεῖ, τὴν ἐπίτριτον, ἣτις ἐστὶ διὰ

97 τεσσάρων. XXXII. ἐπιδείκνυται δὲ καὶ ἕτερον κάλλος αὐτῆς ἑβδομάς ἱερώτατον νοηθῆναι. συνεστῶσα γὰρ ἐκ τριάδος καὶ τετράδος, τὸ ἐν τοῖς οὐσιν ἀκλινές καὶ ὀρθὸν φύσει παρέχεται· ὃν δὲ τρόπον, δηλωτέον. τὸ ὀρθογώνιον τρίγωνον, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ἀρχὴ ποιότητων, ἐξ ἀριθμῶν συνέστηκε τοῦ τρία καὶ τέσσαρα καὶ πέντε· τὰ δὲ τρία καὶ τέσσαρα, ἅπερ ἐστὶν ἑβδομάδος οὐσία, τὴν ὀρθὴν γωνίαν ἀποτελεῖ· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀμβλεῖα καὶ ὀξεία τὸ ἀνώμαλον καὶ ἄτακτον καὶ ἄνισον ἐμφαίνουσιν· ἀμβλυτέρα γὰρ καὶ ὀξυτέρα γίνεται ἑτέρα ἑτέρας·

ON THE CREATION, 95-97

exhibits a marvellous nature, not at all inferior to that of the former kind. For instance 7 consists of 1 and 2 and 4, which have two relations making specially for harmony, the twofold and the fourfold, the one producing the diapason harmony, while the fourfold relation produces double diapason.<sup>a</sup> 7 admits of other divisions besides these, in pairs like animals under a yoke. It is divided first into 1 and 6, then into 2 and 5, and last of all into 3 and 4. Most musical is the proportion of these numbers also : for 6 to 1 is a sixfold proportion, but the sixfold proportion makes the greatest distance that there is (in music), the distance from the highest to the lowest note, as we shall prove, when we pass from numbers to the proportion in harmonies. 5 : 2 exhibits the fullest power in harmonies, all but rivalling the diapason, a fact which is most clearly established in theoretical music. 4 : 3 yields the first harmony, the sesquitercian or diatessaron. XXXII. 7 (or "7th") exhibits yet another beauty belonging to it, a most sacred object for our mind to ponder. Being made up as it is of 3 and 4 it is a presentation of all that is naturally steadfast and upright in the universe. How it is this, we must point out. The right-angled triangle, the starting-point of figures of a definite shape, is made up of certain numbers, namely 3 and 4 and 5 : 3 and 4, the constituent parts of 7, produce the right angle : for the obtuse and acute angle are manifestations of irregularity and disorder and inequality : for one such angle can be more obtuse or more acute than another : whereas one right angle

<sup>a</sup> See Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities, article "Musica."

ὀρθή δ' οὐκ ἐπιδέχεται σύγκρισιν, οὐδ' ὀρθοτέρα γίνεται παρ' ἑτέραν, ἀλλ' ἐν ὁμοίῳ μένει, τὴν ἰδίαν φύσιν οὐποτ' ἀλλάττουσα. εἰ δὴ τὸ μὲν ὀρθογώνιον τρίγωνον σχημάτων καὶ ποιότητων ἐστὶν ἀρχή, τούτου δὲ τὸ ἀναγκαιότατον, τὴν ὀρθὴν γωνίαν, ἣ οὐσία τῆς ἑβδομάδος παρέχεται, τριάς ὁμοῦ καὶ τετράς, νομίζοιτ' ἂν εἰκότως ἦδε πηγὴ παντὸς σχήματος καὶ πάσης ποιότητος.

98 πρὸς δὲ τοῖς εἰρημένοις κακεῖνο λέγοιτ' ἂν δεόντως, ὅτι τὰ μὲν τρία ἐπιπέδου σχήματός ἐστιν ἀριθμός—ἐπειδὴ σημεῖον μὲν κατὰ μονάδα, γραμμὴ δὲ κατὰ δυάδα, ἐπίπεδον δὲ κατὰ τριάδα τέτακται—τὰ δὲ τέσσαρα στερεοῦ κατὰ τὴν τοῦ ἐνὸς πρόσθεσιν, βάθους ἐπιπέδῳ προστεθέντος· ἐξ οὗ δῆλόν ἐστιν ὅτι ἡ τῆς ἑβδομάδος οὐσία γεωμετρίας καὶ στερεομετρίας ἀρχὴ καί, συνελόντι φράσαι, ἀσωμάτων ὁμοῦ καὶ σωμάτων.

99 XXXIII. Τοσοῦτο δ' ἐν ἑβδομάδι πέφυκεν εἶναι τὸ ἱεροπρεπές, ὥστ' ἐξαιρετόν ἔχει λόγον παρὰ τοὺς ἐν δεκάδι πάντας ἀριθμούς· ἐκείνων γὰρ οἱ μὲν γεννῶσιν οὐ γεννώμενοι, οἱ δὲ γεννῶνται μὲν, οὐ γεννῶσι δέ, οἱ δὲ ἀμφότερα καὶ γεννῶσι καὶ γεννῶνται· μόνη δ' ἑβδομάς ἐν οὐδενὶ μέρει θεωρεῖται. τὴν δ' ὑπόσχεσιν ἀποδείξει βεβαιωτέον. τὸ μὲν οὖν ἐν γεννᾷ τοὺς ἐξῆς ἅπαντας ἀριθμούς ὑπ' οὐδενὸς γεννώμενον τὸ παράπαν· τὰ δ' ὀκτῶ γεννᾶται μὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ δις τέσσαρα, γεννᾷ δ' οὐδένα τῶν ἐν δεκάδι· ὁ δ' αὖ τέσσαρα τὴν ἀμφοῖν καὶ γονέων καὶ ἐγγόνων ἔχει τάξιν· γεννᾷ μὲν γὰρ τὸν ὀκτῶ δις γενόμενος, γεννᾶται δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦ δις

100 δύο. μόνος δ' ὡς ἔφην ὁ ἑπτὰ οὔτε γεννᾶν
[24] πέφυκεν οὔτε γεννᾶσθαι. δι' ἣν | αἰτίαν οἱ μὲν

ON THE CREATION, 97-100

does not admit of comparison with another, nor can it be more "right" than another, but remains as it is, never changing its proper nature. Now if the right-angled triangle is the starting-point of figures of a definite kind, and the essential factor in this triangle, namely the right angle, is supplied by the numbers which constitute 7, namely 3 and 4 together, 7 would reasonably be regarded as the fountain-head of every figure and every definite shape.

In addition to what we have already said we are bound to mention this further point, namely that 3 is the number belonging to a superficies—for a point falls under the head of 1, a line under that of 2, and a superficies of 3—while 4 belongs to a solid, by means of the addition of 1, depth being added to superficies. From this it is manifest that 7 is so constituted as to be the starting-point of all plane and solid geometry, or (to put it concisely) alike of things corporeal and incorporeal.

XXXIII. So august is the dignity inherent by nature in the number 7, that it has a unique relation distinguishing it from all the other numbers within the decade: for of these some beget without being begotten, some are begotten but do not beget, some do both these, both beget and are begotten: 7 alone is found in no such category. We must establish this assertion by giving proof of it. Well then, 1 begets all the subsequent numbers while it is begotten by none whatever: 8 is begotten by twice 4, but begets no number within the decade: 4 again holds the place of both, both of parents and of offspring; for it begets 8 by being doubled, and is begotten by twice 2. It is the nature of 7 alone, as I have said, neither to beget nor to be begotten. For this reason ἄλλοι φιλόσοφοι τὸν ἀριθμὸν τοῦτον ἐξομοιοῦσι τῇ ἀμήτορι Νίκη καὶ Παρθένῳ, ἣν ἐκ τῆς τοῦ Διὸς κεφαλῆς ἀναφανῆναι λόγος ἔχει, οἱ δὲ Πυθαγόρειοι τῷ ἡγεμόνι τῶν συμπάντων· τὸ γὰρ μήτε γεννῶν μήτε γεννώμενον ἀκίνητον μένει· ἐν κινήσει γὰρ ἡ γένεσις, ἐπεὶ <καὶ τὸ γεννῶν> καὶ τὸ γεννώμενον οὐκ ἄνευ κινήσεως, τὸ μὲν ἵνα γεννήσῃ, τὸ δὲ ἵνα γεννηθῇ· μόνον δ' οὔτε κινοῦν οὔτε κινούμενον ὁ πρεσβύτερος ἄρχων καὶ ἡγεμών, οὗ λέγοιτ' ἂν προσηκόντως εἰκὼν ἑβδομάς. μαρτυρεῖ δέ μου τῷ λόγῳ καὶ Φιλόλαος ἐν τούτοις· “Ἔστι γάρ, φησίν, ἡγεμών καὶ ἄρχων ἀπάντων θεὸς εἰς αἰὲ ὦν, μόνιμος, ἀκίνητος, αὐτὸς αὐτῷ ὅμοιος, ἕτερος τῶν ἄλλων.”

PHILO

- 101 XXXIV. Ἐν μὲν οὖν τοῖς νοητοῖς τὸ ἀκίνητον καὶ ἀπαθὲς ἐπιδείκνυται ἑβδομάς, ἐν δὲ τοῖς αἰσθητοῖς μεγάλην καὶ συνεκτικωτάτην δύναμιν, * * * οἷς τὰ ἐπίγεια πάντα πέφυκε βελτιοῦσθαι, σελήνης τε περιόδοις. ὃν δὲ τρόπον, ἐπισκεπτέον. ἀπὸ μονάδος συντεθεὶς ἐξῆς ὁ ἑπτὰ ἀριθμὸς γεννᾷ τὸν ὀκτῶ καὶ εἴκοσι τέλειον καὶ τοῖς αὐτοῦ μέρεσιν ἰσοῦμενον· ὁ δὲ γεννηθεὶς ἀριθμὸς ἀποκαταστατικός ἐστι σελήνης, ἀφ' οὗ ἤρξατο σχήματος λαμβάνειν αὐξήσιν αἰσθητῶς, εἰς ἐκείνο κατὰ μείωσιν ἀνακαμπτούσης· αὐξεται μὲν γὰρ ἀπὸ τῆς πρώτης μηνοειδοῦς ἐπιλάμψεως ἄχρι διχοτόμου ἡμέραις ἑπτὰ, εἶθ' ἑτέραις τοσαύταις πλησιφαῆς γίνεται, καὶ πάλιν ὑποστρέφει διαυλοδρομοῦσα τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδόν, ἀπὸ μὲν τῆς πλησιφαοῦς

<sup>a</sup> Or “Sovereign of the Universe.” Observe the sequel.

<sup>b</sup> A Pythagorean philosopher of the 5th century B.C.

<sup>c</sup> See App. p. 476.

ON THE CREATION, 100-101

other philosophers liken this number to the motherless and virgin Nikè, who is said to have appeared out of the head of Zeus, while the Pythagoreans liken it to the chief of all things <sup>a</sup>: for that which neither begets nor is begotten remains motionless; for creation takes place in movement, since there is movement both in that which begets and in that which is begotten, in the one that it may beget, in the other that it may be begotten. There is only one thing that neither causes motion nor experiences it, the original Ruler and Sovereign. Of Him 7 may be fitly said to be a symbol. Evidence of what I say is supplied by Philolaus <sup>b</sup> in these words: "There is, he says, a supreme Ruler of all things, God, ever One, abiding, without motion, Himself (alone) like unto Himself, different from all others."

XXXIV. In the region, then, of things discerned by the intellect only, 7 exhibits that which is exempt from movement and from passion; but in that of sensible things a most essential force [in the movements of the planets] from which all earthly things derive advantage, and in the circuits of the moon. How this is we must consider. Begin at 1 and add each number up to 7 and it produces 28. This is a perfect number and equal to the sum of its own factors.<sup>c</sup> And the number produced is the number which brings the moon back to her original form, as she retraces her course by lessening till she reaches the shape from which she began to make perceptible increase; for she increases from her first shining as a crescent till she becomes a half-moon in seven days, then in as many more she becomes full-moon, and again returns the same way like a runner in the double race-course, from the ἐπὶ τὴν διχότομον ἑπτὰ πάλιν ἡμέραις, εἶτ' ἀπὸ ταύτης ἐπὶ τὴν μηνοειδῆ ταῖς ἴσαις· ἐξ ὧν ὁ λεχθεὶς ἀριθμὸς συμπεπλήρωται.

PHILO

- 102 Καλεῖται δ' ἡ ἑβδομάς ὑπὸ τῶν κυρίως τοῖς ὀνόμασιν εἰωθότων χρῆσθαι καὶ τελεσφόρος, ἐπειδὴ ταύτη τελεσφορεῖται τὰ σύμπαντα. τεκμηριώσαιτο δ' ἂν τις ἐκ τοῦ πᾶν σῶμα ὀργανικὸν τρισὶ μὲν κεχρῆσθαι διαστάσεσι, μήκει πλάτει καὶ βάθει, τέτταρσι δὲ πέρασι, σημείῳ καὶ γραμμῇ καὶ ἐπιφανεῖα καὶ στερεῳ, δι' ὧν συντεθέντων ἀποτελεῖται ἑβδομάς. ἀμήχανον δ' ἦν τὰ σώματα ἑβδομάδι μετρεῖσθαι κατὰ τὴν ἐκ διαστάσεων τριῶν καὶ περάτων τεττάρων σύνθεσιν, εἰ μὴ συνέβαινε τὰς τῶν πρώτων ἀριθμῶν ἰδέας ἐνὸς καὶ δυοῖν καὶ τριῶν καὶ τεττάρων, οἷς θεμελιούται δεκάς, ἑβδομάδος φύσιν περιέχειν· οἱ γὰρ λεχθέντες ἀριθμοὶ τέσσαρας μὲν ἔχουσιν ὄρους, τὸν πρῶτον, τὸν δευτέρον, τὸν τρίτον, τὸν τέταρτον, διαστάσεις [25] δὲ τρεῖς· πρώτη μὲν διάστασις | ἡ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐνὸς ἐπὶ τὰ δύο, δευτέρα δὲ ἡ ἀπὸ τῶν δυοῖν ἐπὶ τὰ τρία, τρίτη δὲ ἡ ἀπὸ τῶν τριῶν ἐπὶ τὰ τέσσαρα.

- 103 XXXV. Δίχα δὲ τῶν εἰρημένων ἐναργέστατα παριστᾶσι τὴν τελεσφόρον δύναμιν ἑβδομάδος καὶ αἱ ἐκ βρέφους ἄχρι γήρως ἀνθρώπων ἡλικίαι μετρούμεναι ταύτη· κατὰ μὲν οὖν τὴν πρώτην ἑπταετίαν ἔκφυσις ὀδόντων ἐστί· κατὰ δὲ τὴν δευτέραν καιρὸς τοῦ δύνασθαι προῖεσθαι σπέρμα γόνιμον· τρίτη δὲ γενεῖων αὔξησης καὶ τετάρτη πρὸς ἰσχὺν ἐπίδοσις· πέμπτη δ' αὐτῶν γάμων ὥρα· ἕκτη δὲ συνέσεως ἀκμὴ· τῇ δὲ ἑβδόμῃ βελτίωσις ἀμφοῖν καὶ συναύξησης νοῦ καὶ λόγου· ὀγδόη δὲ ἡ ἐν ἑκατέρῳ τελείωσις· κατὰ δὲ τὴν ἐνάτην

ON THE CREATION, 101-103

full to the half-moon in seven days as before, then from the half to the crescent in an equal number of days : these four sets of days complete the aforesaid number.

Now by those who are in the habit of giving words their proper force seven is called also "perfection-bringing," because by this all things in the material universe are brought to perfection. Proof of this may be derived from the circumstance that every organic body has three dimensions, length, breadth, and depth, and four limits, point, line, surface, and solid ; by adding which together we get seven. It would have been impossible that bodies should be measured by seven in accordance with their formation out of the three dimensions and the four limits,<sup>a</sup> had it not been that the forms of the first numbers (1, 2, 3, and 4), the foundation of 10, already contained the nature of 7, for the numbers named have three intervals, that from 1 to 2, that from 2 to 3, and that from 3 to 4 ; and the four limits between which these intervals lie, 1, 2, 3, and 4.

XXXV. Beside the proofs already mentioned, the perfecting power of the number 7 is also shown by the stages of men's growth, measured from infancy to old age in the following manner : during the first period of seven years the growth of the teeth begins ; during the second the capacity for emitting seed ; in the third the growing of the beard ; and in the fourth increase of strength ; in the fifth again ripeness for marriage ; in the sixth the understanding reaches its bloom ; in the seventh progressive improvement and development of mind and reason ; in the eighth the perfecting of both these ; during the

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 476.

PHILO

ἐπιείκεια καὶ πραότης τῶν παθῶν ἐπὶ πλεόν
 ἡμερωθέντων· κατὰ δὲ τὴν δεκάτην τοῦ βίου τὸ εὐκταῖον τέλος, ἔτι τῶν ὀργανικῶν μελῶν συνεστηκότων· φιλεῖ γὰρ τὸ μακρὸν γῆρας ἕκαστον 104 ὑποσκελιζεῖν καὶ παραιεῖσθαι. τὰς ἡλικίας ταύ-τας ἀνέγραψε καὶ Σόλων ὁ τῶν Ἀθηναίων νόμο-θέτης ἐλεγεία ποιήσας τάδε·

Παῖς μὲν ἄνηβος ἐὼν ἔτι νήπιος ἔρκος ὀδόντων
 φύσας ἐκβάλλει πρῶτον ἐν ἔπτ' ἔτεσιν·
 τοὺς δ' ἐτέρους ὅτε δὴ τελέση θεὸς ἔπτ' ἐνιαυτούς,
 ἧβης ἐκφαίνει σήματα γιγνομένης·
 τῇ τριτάτῃ δὲ γένειον ἀεξομένων ἔτι γυίων
 λαχνοῦται, χροίης ἄνθος ἀμειβομένης·
 τῇ δὲ τετάρτῃ πᾶς τις ἐν ἑβδομάδ' ἐστὶν ἄριστος
 ἰσχύν, ἣν τ' ἄνδρες σήματ' ἔχουσ' ἀρετῆς·
 πέμπτῃ δ' ὠριον ἄνδρα γάμου μεμνημένον εἶναι
 καὶ παίδων ζητεῖν ἔξοπίσω γενεήν·
 τῇ δ' ἕκτῃ περὶ πάντα καταρτύεται νόος ἀνδρός,
 οὐδ' ἔρδειν ἔθ' ὁμῶς ἔργ' ἀπάλαμνα θέλει·
 ἐπτὰ δὲ νοῦν καὶ γλῶσσαν ἐν ἑβδομάσιν μέγ'
 ἄριστος
 ὀκτώ τ', ἀμφοτέρων τέσσαρα καὶ δέκ' ἔτη·
 τῇ δ' ἐνάτῃ ἔτι μὴν δύναται, μαλακώτερα δ' αὐτοῦ
 πρὸς μεγάλην ἀρετὴν γλῶσσά τε καὶ σοφίη·
 τὴν δεκάτην δ' εἴ τις τελέσας κατὰ μέτρον ἴκοιτο,
 οὐκ ἂν ἄωρος ἐὼν μοῖραν ἔχοι θανάτου.

105 XXXVI. Ὁ μὲν οὖν Σόλων ἑβδομάσι δέκα ταῖς εἰρημέναις καταριθμεῖ τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον. ὁ
 δ' ἰατρὸς Ἰπποκράτης ἡλικίας ἐπτὰ εἰναί φησι, [26] παιδίου, | παιδός, μειρακίου, νεανίσκου, ἀνδρός,
 πρεσβύτου, γέροντος, ταύτας δὲ μετρεῖσθαι μὲν

ON THE CREATION, 103-105

ninth forbearance and gentleness emerge, owing to the more complete taming of the passions ; during the tenth comes the desirable end of life, while the bodily organs are still compact and firm ; for prolonged old age is wont to abate and break down the force of each of them. These ages of men's life were described by Solon the lawgiver of the Athenians among others in the following lines :

In seven years the Boy, an infant yet unfledged, Both grows and sheds the teeth with which his tongue is hedged.

When heaven has made complete a second week of years,
Of coming prime of youth full many a sign appears.
In life's third term, while still his limbs grow big apace,
His chin shows down ; its early bloom now quits his face.
In the fourth heptad each one full of strength doth seem—
Strength, which of manly worth best earnest all men deem.
Let him in his fifth week of years a bride bespeak,
Offspring to bear his name hereafter let him seek.
The sixth beholds the man good sense all round attain ;
Not now can reckless deeds as once his fancy gain.
Now see him seventh and eighth, fresh heptads, duly reach
In insight strongest now, strongest in power of speech.
In his ninth week of years, strong still but softer far
For high achievement's venture speech and wisdom are.
Then should the man, ten bouts complete, attain life's end Fate, no untimely gift, death's call may fitly send.

XXXVI. Solon, then, reckons the life of man by the aforesaid ten weeks of years. And Hippocrates the physician, says that there are seven ages, those of the little boy, the boy, the lad, the young man, the man, the elderly man, the old man, and that these ἐβδομάσιν, οὐ μὴν ταῖς κατὰ τὸ ἐξῆς. λέγει δ' οὕτως· “Ἐν ἀνθρώπου φύσει ἑπτὰ εἰσιν ὦραι, ἃς ἡλικίας καλέουσι, παιδίον, παῖς, μειράκιον, νεανίσκος, ἀνὴρ, πρεσβύτης, γέρον· καὶ παιδίον μὲν ἐστὶν ἄχρις ἑπτὰ ἐτέων ὀδόντων ἐκβολῆς· παῖς δ' ἄχρι γονῆς ἐκφύσιος, ἐς τὰ δις ἑπτὰ· μειράκιον δ' ἄχρι γενείου λαχνώσιος, ἐς τὰ τρις ἑπτὰ· νεανίσκος δ' ἄχρις αὐξήσιος ὄλου τοῦ σώματος, ἐς τὰ τετράκις ἑπτὰ· ἀνὴρ δ' ἄχρις ἐνὸς δέοντος ἐτέων πενήκοντα, ἐς τὰ ἑπτὰκις ἑπτὰ· πρεσβύτης δ' ἄχρι πενήκοντα ἕξ, ἐς τὰ ἑπτὰκις ὀκτώ· τὸ δ' ἐντεῦθεν γέρον.”

PHILO

106 Λέγεται δὲ κακείνῳ πρὸς διασύστασιν ἑβδομάδος ὡς θαυμαστὴν ἐχούσης ἐν τῇ φύσει τάξιν, ἐπεὶ συνέστηκεν ἐκ τριῶν καὶ τεττάρων· τὸν μὲν τρίτον ἀπὸ μονάδος, εἰ διπλασιάζοι τις, εὐρήσει τετράγωνον, τὸν δὲ τέταρτον κύβον, τὸν δ' ἕξ ἀμφοῖν ἑβδομον κύβον ὁμοῦ καὶ τετράγωνον· ὁ μὲν οὖν ἀπὸ μονάδος τρίτος ἐν διπλασίῳ λόγῳ, <τέτταρα>, τετράγωνός ἐστιν, ὁ δὲ τέταρτος, ὀκτώ, κύβος, ὁ δὲ ἕβδομος, τέσσαρα πρὸς τοῖς ἕξήκοντα, κύβος ὁμοῦ καὶ τετράγωνος· ὡς εἶναι τελεσφόρον ὄντως τὸν ἑβδομον ἀριθμόν, ἀμφοτέρας τὰς ἰσότητας καταγγέλλοντα τὴν τ' ἐπίπεδον διὰ τετραγώνου κατὰ τὴν πρὸς τριάδα συγγένειαν, καὶ τὴν στερεὰν διὰ κύβου κατὰ τὴν πρὸς τετράδα οἰκειότητα· ἐκ τριάδος δὲ καὶ τετράδος ἑβδομάς.

107 XXXVII. Ἔστι δὲ οὐ τελεσφόρος μόνον, ἀλλὰ καί, ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, ἀρμονικωτάτη καὶ τρόπον τινὰ πηγὴ τοῦ καλλίστου διαγράμματος, ὃ πάσας μὲν τὰς ἀρμονίας, τὴν διὰ τεττάρων, τὴν διὰ

ON THE CREATION, 105-107

ages are measured by multiples of seven though not in regular succession. His words are : " In man's life there are seven seasons, which they call ages, little boy, boy, lad, young man, man, elderly man, old man. He is a little boy until he reaches seven years, the time of the shedding of his teeth ; a boy until he reaches puberty, i.e. up to twice seven years ; a lad until his chin grows downy, i.e. up to thrice seven years ; a young man until his whole body has grown, till four times seven ; a man till forty-nine, till seven times seven ; an elderly man till fifty-six, up to seven times eight ; after that an old man."

The following is also mentioned to commend the number 7 as occupying a wonderful place in nature, since it consists of  $3 + 4$  : if we multiply by 2, we shall find that the third number, counted from 1, is a square, and the fourth a cube, while the seventh (and 7 is made up of 3 and 4), is at once a square and a cube : for the third number in this multiplication by 2, namely 4, is a square, the fourth, 8, is a cube ; the seventh, 64, is at once a cube and a square. Thus the seventh number does indeed bring with it perfection, claiming both correspondences, that with the superficies by means of the square, in virtue of its kinship with 3, and that with the solid body by means of the cube, in virtue of its relationship with 4 ; and 3 and 4 make 7.

XXXVII. It is however not only a bringer of perfection, but, one may say, absolutely harmonious, and in a certain sense the source of the most beautiful scale, which contains all the harmonies, that yielded by the interval of four, by the interval of five, by

PHILO

- πέντε, τὴν διὰ πασῶν, πάσας δὲ τὰς ἀναλογίας, τὴν ἀριθμητικὴν, τὴν γεωμετρικὴν, ἔτι δὲ τὴν ἀρμονικὴν περιέχει. τὸ δὲ πλινθίον συνέστηκεν ἐκ τῶνδε τῶν ἀριθμῶν, ἕξ ὀκτῶ ἐννέα δώδεκα· ὁ μὲν ὀκτῶ πρὸς ἕξ ἐν ἐπιτρίτῳ λόγῳ, καθ' ὃν ἢ διὰ τεττάρων ἀρμονία ἐστίν· ὁ δὲ ἐννέα πρὸς ἕξ ἐν ἡμιολίῳ, καθ' ὃν ἢ διὰ πέντε· ὁ δὲ δώδεκα πρὸς ἕξ ἐν διπλασίῳ, καθ' ὃν ἢ διὰ πασῶν.
- 108 ἔχει δὲ ὡς ἔλεγον καὶ τὰς ἀναλογίας πάσας· ἀριθμητικὴν μὲν ἐκ τῶν ἕξ καὶ ἐννέα καὶ δώδεκα· οἷς γὰρ ὑπερέχει ὁ μέσος τοῦ πρώτου τρισίν, τούτοις ὑπερέχεται ὑπὸ τοῦ τελευταίου· γεωμετρικὴν δὲ ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων· ὃν γὰρ λόγον ἔχει
- [27] τὰ ὀκτῶ πρὸς ἕξ, | τοῦτον τὰ δώδεκα πρὸς ἐννέα· ὁ δὲ λόγος ἐπιτρίτος· ἀρμονικὴν δὲ ἐκ τριῶν, τοῦ
- 109 ἕξ καὶ ὀκτῶ καὶ δώδεκα. ἀρμονικῆς δ' ἀναλογίας διττὴ κρίσις· μία μὲν, ὅταν ὃν λόγον ἔχει ὁ ἔσχατος πρὸς τὸν πρῶτον τοῦτον ἔχη ἢ ὑπεροχὴν ἢ ὑπερέχει ὁ ἔσχατος τοῦ μέσου πρὸς τὴν ὑπεροχὴν ἢ ὑπερέχεται ὑπὸ τοῦ μέσου ὁ πρῶτος. ἐν-αργεστάτην δὲ πίστιν λάβοι τις ἂν ἐκ τῶν προκειμένων ἀριθμῶν, τοῦ ἕξ καὶ ὀκτῶ καὶ δώδεκα· ὁ μὲν γὰρ τελευταῖος τοῦ πρώτου διπλάσιος, ἢ δ' ὑπεροχὴ πάλιν διπλασία· τὰ μὲν γὰρ δώδεκα τῶν ὀκτῶ τέτταρσιν ὑπερέχει, τὰ δὲ ὀκτῶ τῶν ἕξ δυσί· τὰ δὲ τέσσαρα τῶν δυοῖν διπλάσια.
- 110 ἑτέρα δὲ βάσανος τῆς ἀρμονικῆς ἀναλογίας, ὅταν ὁ μέσος τῶν ἄκρων ἴσῳ μορίῳ <καὶ> ὑπερέχη καὶ ὑπερέχηται· ὁ γὰρ ὄγδοος μέσος ὢν ὑπερέχει μὲν τοῦ πρώτου τρίτῳ μορίῳ· ὑφαιρεθέντων γὰρ τῶν ἕξ, τὰ λοιπὰ δύο τρίτον ἐστὶ τοῦ πρώτου· ὑπερέχεται δ' ὑπὸ τοῦ τελευταίου τῷ ἴσῳ· εἰ γὰρ

ON THE CREATION, 107-110

the octave<sup>a</sup>; and all the progressions, the arithmetic, the geometric, and the harmonic as well. The scheme is formed out of the following numbers: 6, 8, 9, 12. 8 stands to 6 in the proportion 4:3, which regulates the harmony of 4; 9 stands to 6 in the proportion 3:2, which regulates the harmony of 5; 12 stands to 6 in the proportion 2:1, which regulates the octave. And, as I said, it contains also all the progressions, the arithmetic made up of 6 and 9 and 12—for as the middle number exceeds the first by 3, so it in its turn is exceeded to the same amount by the last; the geometric, made up of the four numbers (6, 8, 9, 12); for 12 bears the same proportion to 9 that 8 does to 6, and the proportion is 4:3; the harmonic, made up of three numbers (6, 8, and 12). There are two modes of testing harmonic progression. One is this. (Harmonic progression is present) whenever the relation in which the last term stands to the first is identical with that in which the excess of the last over the middle term stands to the excess of the middle term over the first. A very clear proof may be obtained from the numbers before us, 6 and 8 and 12: for the last is double the first, and the difference or excess is also double; for 12 exceeds 8 by 4, and 8 exceeds 6 by 2, and 4 is twice 2. Another way of detecting the presence of harmonic proportion is this. (It is present) whenever the middle term exceeds the one extreme and is itself exceeded by the other by the same fraction; for 8 being the middle term exceeds the first by one-third of the latter, for when we subtract 6 (from 8) the remainder, 2, is one-third of the first number, and 8 is exceeded by the last number by ὑφαιρεθείη τῶν δώδεκα τὰ ὀκτώ, τὰ λοιπὰ τέσσαρα γίνεται τοῦ τελευταίου τρίτον.

<sup>a</sup> See note on 95.

PHILO

- 111 XXXVIII. Ταῦτα μὲν ἀναγκαίως περὶ σεμνό-τητος, ἣν ἔχει τὸ διάγραμμα, ἢ πλινθίον, ἢ ὅ τι
 χρὴ καλεῖν, προειρήσθω· τοσαύτας ἰδέας καὶ ἔτι πλείους ἑβδομάς ἐν ἄσωμάτοις καὶ νοητοῖς ἐπι-δείκνυται. διατείνει δ' αὐτῆς ἡ φύσις καὶ ἐπὶ
 τὴν ὄρατὴν ἅπασαν οὐσίαν, οὐρανὸν καὶ γῆν, τὰ
 πέρατα τοῦ παντός, φθάσασα. τί γὰρ οὐ φιλἑβδομον τῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ μέρος, ἔρωτι καὶ πόθῳ
- 112 δαμασθὲν ἑβδομάδος; αὐτίκα τὸν οὐρανὸν φασιν
 ἑπτὰ διεζῶσθαι κύκλοις, ὧν ὀνόματα εἶναι τάδε· ἀρκτικόν, ἀνταρκτικόν, θερινὸν τροπικόν, χειμερινὸν τροπικόν, ἰσημερινόν, ζωδιακόν, καὶ προσ-
 ἔτι γαλαξίαν· ὁ γὰρ ὀρίζων πάθος ἐστὶν ἡμέτερον, ὡς ἂν ὀξυωπίας ἔχη τις ἢ τούναντίον, ἀποτεμνο-
 μένης τῆς αἰσθήσεως τοτὲ μὲν ἐλάττω τοτὲ δὲ
- 113 μείζω περιγραφῆν. οἳ γε μὴν πλάνητες, ἢ ἀντίρ-ροπος στρατιὰ τῇ τῶν ἀπλανῶν, ἑπτὰ δια-κοσμοῦνται τάξεσι, πλείστην ἐπιδεικνύμενοι συμ-πάθειαν πρὸς ἀέρα καὶ γῆν· τὸν μὲν γὰρ εἰς τὰς ἔτησίους ἐπικαλουμένας ὥρας τρέπουσι καὶ μετα-βάλλουσι, καθ' ἐκάστην μυρίας ὅσας ἐμποιοῦντες μεταβολάς, νηνεμίας, αἰθρίας, νεφώσεσι, βίαις ἑξαισίοις πνευμάτων· πάλιν τε ποταμοὺς πλημμυροῦσι καὶ μειοῦσι, καὶ πεδία λιμνάζουσι, καὶ τούναντίον ἀφαναίνουσι· καὶ πελαγῶν ἐργάζονται τροπὰς ἑξαναχωρούντων ἢ παλιρροίαις χρωμένων·
 εὐρεῖς γὰρ ἐστὶν ὅτε κόλποι θαλάττης ὑποσυρείσης
 ἀμπώτεσι, βαθὺς ἑξαίφνης αἰγιαλός εἰσι, καὶ
 μικρὸν ὕστερον ἀναχυθείσης, πελάγη βαθύτατα,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 475, note on 54.

ON THE CREATION, 110-113

the same fraction, for if 8 be subtracted from 12, the remainder 4 is one-third of the last number.

XXXVIII. Let what has been said suffice as a bare outline of the dignity pertaining to the figure or scheme or whatever we ought to call it : all these qualities and more still does 7 discover in the incorporeal and intellectual sphere. But its nature reaches further, extending to all visible existence, to heaven and earth, to the utmost bounds of the universe. For what part of the world's contents is not a lover of seven, overcome by passion and desire for it? Let us give some instances. They tell us that heaven is girdled by seven zones, whose names are these : arctic, antarctic, that of the summer solstice, that of the winter solstice, equinox, zodiac, and beside these the milky way. The horizon is not one of these, for it is a thing of subjective observation, our eyesight, as it is keen or the reverse, cutting off, now a smaller, now a larger, circumference. Moreover, the planets, the heavenly host that moves counter to the fixed stars,<sup>a</sup> are marshalled in seven ranks, and manifest large sympathy with air and earth. The one (the air) they turn and shift for the so-called annual seasons, producing in each of these seasons a thousand changes by times of calm, or fair weather, of cloudy skies, of unusually violent storms : they flood rivers and shrink them ; they turn plains into marshes, and dry them up again : they produce tides in the sea, as it ebbs and flows : for at times broad gulfs, through the sea's being withdrawn by ebbing, suddenly become a far-reaching stretch of sand, and a little later, as it is poured back, they become deep seas navigable not merely by small

PHILO

[28] οὐ βραχείαισι | ὀλκάσιν ἀλλὰ μυριοφόροις ναυσὶν ἐμπλεόμενα· καὶ μὲν δὴ τὰ ἐπίγεια πάντα, ζῶα τε αὖ καὶ φυτὰ καρποὺς γεννῶντα, αὖξουσι καὶ τελεσφοροῦσι τὴν ἐν ἐκάστοις φύσιν δολιχεύειν παρασκευάζοντες, ὡς νέα παλαιοῖς ἐπανθεῖν καὶ ἐπακμάζειν πρὸς χορηγίας ἀφθόνους τῶν δεομένων.

114

XXXIX. Ἄρκτος γε μὴν, ἣν φασὶ

πλωτήρων εἶναι προπομπόν, ἐξ ἑπτὰ ἀστέρων συνέστηκεν· εἰς ἣν ἀφορῶντες κυβερνήται τὰς ἐν θαλάττῃ μυρίας ὁδοὺς ἀνέτεμον, ἀπίστω πράγματι καὶ μείζονι ἢ κατὰ φύσιν ἀνθρωπίνην ἐπιθέμενοι· στοχασμῶ γὰρ τῶν εἰρημένων ἀστέρων τὰς πρὶν ἀδηλουμένας χώρας ἀνεύρον, νήσους μὲν οἱ τὴν ἡπειρον οἰκοῦντες, νησιῶται δὲ ἡπείρους· ἔδει γὰρ ὑπὸ τοῦ καθαρωτάτου τῆς οὐσίας οὐρανοῦ ζῶω τῷ θεοφιλεστάτῳ γῆς ὁμοῦ καὶ θαλάττης

115 ἀναδειχθῆναι τοὺς μυχοὺς ἀνθρώπων γένει· πρὸς δὲ τοῖς εἰρημένοισι καὶ ὁ τῶν πλειάδων χορὸς ἀστέρων ἑβδομάδι συμπεπλήρωται, ὧν αἱ ἐπιτολαὶ καὶ ἀποκρύψεις μεγάλων ἀγαθῶν αἷται γίνονται πᾶσι· δυομένων μὲν γὰρ αὖλακες ἀνατέμνονται πρὸς σπόρον· ἠνίκα δ' ἂν μέλλωσι ἐπιτέλλειν, ἄμητον εὐαγγελίζονται, καὶ ἐπιτείλασαι χαίροντας γεωπόνους πρὸς συγκομιδὴν τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐγείρουσι· οἱ δ' ἄσμενοι τὰς τροφὰς ἀποτίθενται

116

πρὸς τὴν καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν χρῆσιν· ὁ τε μέγας ἡγεμὼν ἡμέρας ἥλιος διττὰς καθ' ἕκαστον ἐνιαυτὸν ἀποτελῶν ἰσημερίας, ἔαρι καὶ μετοπώρῳ, τὴν μὲν ἔαριν ἔν κριῶ, τὴν δὲ μετοπωρινὴν ἐν ζυγῶ, ἐναργεστάτην παρέχεται πίστιν τοῦ περὶ τὴν ἑβδόμην θεοπρεποῦς· ἑκατέρα γὰρ τῶν ἰση-

ON THE CREATION, 113-116

barges but by ships of many tons burden. Yes, and the planets cause all things on earth, living creatures and fruit-yielding plants, to grow and come to perfection, enabling, as they do, the natural power in each of them to run its full round, new fruits blossoming and ripening on old trees, to supply abundantly those who need them.

XXXIX. The Great Bear, moreover, which is called the mariners' escort, consists of seven stars. Fixing their eyes on this, pilots cut those countless paths in the sea, undertaking an enterprise surpassing belief and human powers. For by keeping their eyes on the stars we have named they discovered countries hitherto unknown, dwellers on the continents discovering islands, and islanders continents. For it was meet that by heaven, purest of all things existing, should be revealed to the living creature best loved by God, even the human race, the secret recesses both of land and sea. Beside the cases already mentioned, the full tale of the band of Pleiades is made up of seven stars, whose appearances and disappearances are fraught with vast benefits to all men : for when they are setting, furrows are opened for sowing, and when they are about to rise, they announce reaping-time ; and when they have risen, they make glad the workers on the land and rouse them to gather in the crops that meet their needs ; and they blithely store up their food for daily use. The sun, too, the great lord of day, bringing about two equinoxes each year, in Spring and Autumn, the Spring equinox in the constellation of the Ram, and the Autumn equinox in that of the Scales, supplies very clear evidence of the sacred dignity of the 7th number, for each of the equinoxes occurs in a 7th μεριῶν ἐβδόμῳ γίνεται μηνί, καθ' ἃς καὶ ἑορτάζειν διείρηται νόμῳ τὰς μεγίστας καὶ δημοτελεστάτας ἑορτάς, ἐπειδήπερ ἀμφοτέραις τὰ ὅσα ἐκ γῆς τελειογονεῖται, ἔαρι μὲν ὁ τοῦ σίτου καρπὸς καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα σπαρτά, μετοπώρῳ δὲ ὁ τῆς ἀμπέλου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων πλείστων ἀκροδρῦων.

PHILO

- 117 XL. Ἐπεὶ δ' ἐκ τῶν οὐρανίων τὰ ἐπίγεια ἤρτηται κατὰ τινα φυσικὴν συμπάθειαν, ὁ τῆς ἐβδόμαδος λόγος ἀνωθεν ἀρξάμενος κατέβη καὶ πρὸς ἡμᾶς τοῖς θνητοῖς γένεσιν ἐπιφοιτήσας. αὐτίκα τῆς ἡμετέρας ψυχῆς τὸ δίχα τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ μέρος ἐπταχῆ σχίζεται, εἰς πέντε αἰσθήσεις καὶ τὸ φωνητήριον ὄργανον καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσι τὸ γόνιμον· ἃ δὴ πάντα, καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς θαύμασιν ὑπὸ τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ νευροσπαστούμενα, τοτὲ μὲν ἡρεμῆι τοτὲ δὲ κινεῖται τὰς ἀρμοττούσας σχέσεις καὶ
- 118 κινήσεις ἕκαστον. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ τοῦ σώματος εἴ τις ἐξετάζειν ἐπιχειρήσειε τὰ τ' ἐκτὸς καὶ ἐντὸς μέρη, καθ' ἑκάτερον ἐπτὰ εὐρήσει· τὰ μὲν οὖν ἐν φανερωῶ ταῦτ' ἐστί· κεφαλή, στέρνα, γαστήρ, |
- [29] διτταὶ χεῖρες, διτταὶ βάσεις· τὰ δ' ἐντὸς λεγόμενα σπλάγχνα στόμαχος, καρδία, πνεύμων, σπλήν,
- 119 ἦπαρ, νεφροὶ δύο. πάλιν δ' αὐτὸ τὸ ἡγεμονικώτατον ἐν ζώῳ κεφαλὴ τοῖς ἀναγκαιοτάτοις ἐπτὰ χρῆται, δυσὶν ὀφθαλμοῖς, ἀκοαῖς ἴσαις, αὐλοῖς μυκτῆρος δυσὶν, ἐβδόμῳ στόματι, δι' οὗ γίνεται θνητῶν μὲν, ὡς ἔφη Πλάτων, εἴσοδος, ἔξοδος δ' ἀφθάρτων· ἐπεισέρχεται μὲν γὰρ αὐτῷ σιτία καὶ ποτά, φθαρτοῦ σώματος φθαρταὶ τροφαί, λόγοι δ' ἐξίασιν ἀθανάτου ψυχῆς ἀθάνατοι νόμοι, δι' ὧν ὁ λογικὸς βίος κυβερνᾶται.

<sup>a</sup> Philo seems to have shared the belief of the later Jews

ON THE CREATION, 116-119

month, and during them there is enjoined by law the keeping of the greatest national festivals, since at both of them all fruits of the earth ripen, in the Spring<sup>a</sup> the wheat and all else that is sown, and in Autumn the fruit of the vine and most of the other fruit-trees.

XL. As, however, in accordance with a certain natural sympathy the things of the earth depend on the things of heaven, the principle of the number 7, after having begun from above, descended also to us and visited the races of mortals. For instance, if we leave the understanding out of sight, the remainder of our soul is divided<sup>b</sup> into seven parts, namely five senses, the faculty of speech, last that of generation. All these, as in marionette shows, are drawn with strings by the understanding, now resting, now moving, each in the attitudes and with the movements appropriate to it. In like manner, should a man go on to examine the outer and inner parts of the body, he will find seven under each head. The visible parts are head, breast, belly, two hands, two feet. The inward parts, called entrails, are stomach, heart, lung, spleen, liver, two kidneys. Once more, the head, the most princely part in an animal, employs seven most essential parts, two eyes, as many ears, two nostrils, seventhly a mouth. Through this, as Plato says,<sup>c</sup> mortal things have their entrance, immortal their exit; for foods and drinks enter it, perishable nourishment of a perishable body, but words issue from it, undying laws of an undying soul, by means of which the life of reason is guided.

that their sacred year began in the spring, and their civil year in the autumn.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 476.

<sup>c</sup> Timaeus 75 D. Plato's contrast, however, is between ἀναγκαῖα and ἀρίστα.

PHILO

- 120 XLI. Τὰ δὲ διὰ τῆς ἀρίστης τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὄψεως κρινόμενα μετέχει τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ κατὰ γένος· ἐπτὰ γὰρ ἔστι τὰ ὀρώμενα, σῶμα, διάστασις, σχῆμα, μέγεθος, χρῶμα, κίνησις, στάσις, καὶ
- 121 παρὰ ταῦτα οὐδὲν ἕτερον. συμβέβηκε μέντοι καὶ τὰς τῆς φωνῆς μεταβολὰς ἀπάσας ἐπτὰ εἶναι, τὴν ὀξεῖαν, τὴν βαρεῖαν, τὴν περισπωμένην, καὶ τέταρτον δασὺν φθόγγον, καὶ ψιλὸν πέμπτον, καὶ μακρὸν
- 122 ἕκτον, καὶ βραχὺν ἑβδομον. ἀλλὰ γὰρ καὶ κινήσεις ἐπτὰ εἶναι συμβέβηκε, τὴν ἄνω, τὴν κάτω, τὴν ἐπὶ δεξιᾷ, τὴν ἐπ' εὐώνυμα, τὴν πρόσω, τὴν κατόπιν, τὴν ἐν κύκλῳ, ἃς ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα τρα-
- 123 νοῦσιν οἱ τὴν ὄρχησιν ἐπιδεικνύμενοι. φασὶ δὲ καὶ τὰς διὰ τοῦ σώματος ἐκκρίσεις ὑπεστάλθαι τῷ λεχθέντι ἀριθμῷ· διὰ μὲν γὰρ ὀφθαλμῶν δάκρυα προχεῖται, διὰ δὲ μυκτῆρων αἱ ἐκ κεφαλῆς καθάρσεις, διὰ δὲ στόματος ὁ ἀποπτύομενος σίελος· εἰσὶ δὲ καὶ διτταὶ δεξαμεναὶ πρὸς τὰς τῶν περιττωμάτων ἀποχετεύσεις, ἡ μὲν ἔμπροσθεν, ἡ δὲ κατόπιν· ἕκτη δ' ἔστιν ἡ δι' ὄλου τοῦ σώματος ἐν ἰδρῶτι πρόχυσις, καὶ <ἑβδόμη> ἡ φυσικωτάτη σπέρματος πρόεσις διὰ τῶν γεννητικῶν.
- 124 φησὶ δὲ καὶ Ἰπποκράτης, ὁ τῆς φύσεως ἐπιγνώμων, ἐν ἑβδομάδι κρατύνεσθαι καὶ τὴν πῆξιν τῆς γονῆς καὶ τὴν ἀνάπλασιν τῆς σαρκός. πάλιν δ' αὖ γυναιξὶν ἡ φορὰ τῶν καταμηνίων εἰς ἐπτὰ τὰς πλείστας ἡμέρας χορηγεῖται. καὶ τὰ κατὰ γαστρὸς βρέφη μῆσιν ἐπτὰ τελειογονεῖσθαι πέφυκεν, ὡς παραδοξότατόν τι συμβαίνειν· γίνεται γὰρ τὰ

---

<sup>a</sup> Literally, "according to kind." The objects of sight, he means, are of seven kinds.

ON THE CREATION, 120-124

XLI. The objects which are distinguished by sight, the noblest of the senses, participate in the number of which we are speaking, if classified by their kinds <sup>a</sup> : for the kinds which are seen are seven—body, extension,<sup>b</sup> shape, size, colour, movement, quiescence, and beside these there is no other. The varieties of the voice too are seven in all, the acute, the grave, the circumflex, and fourthly the rough (or “ aspirated ”), and fifthly the thin (or “ unaspirated ”) utterance, and sixthly the long, and seventhly the short sound. Likewise there are seven movements, upward, downward, to the right, to the left, forward, backward, in a circle. These come out most distinctly in an exhibition of dancing. The discharges from the body also (it has been pointed out) are limited to the number named : for through the eyes tears pour out, through the nostrils purgings from the head, through the mouth expectorations of phlegm : there are also two receptacles for excretion of superfluities, one in front, one behind ; and in the sixth place there is perspiration exuding through the whole body, and in the seventh place the natural normal emission of seed through the genital organs.

Further Hippocrates, that expert in the processes of nature, says that in seven days both the solidifying of the seed and the formation of the embryo take place. Once again, for women the duration of the monthly cleansing is at the most seven days. Moreover the fruit of the womb is brought by nature to full ripeness in seven months, with a most strange result, namely that seven months’ children come <sup>b</sup> i.e., “ of how many dimensions.” The word may, perhaps, mean “ distance ” or “ separation,” i.e. from other bodies.

PHILO

- 125 ἐπτάμηνα γόνιμα, τῶν ὀκτωμηνιαίων ὡς ἐπίπαν
 ζωογονεῖσθαι μὴ δυναμένων. αἶ τε βαρεῖαι νόσοι
 σωμάτων, καὶ μάλισθ' ὅταν ἐκ δυσκρασίας τῶν
 ἐν ἡμῖν δυνάμεων πυρετοὶ συνεχεῖς ἐπισκῆψωσιν, ἐβδόμη μάλιστά πως ἡμέρα διακρίνονται· δικάζει
 γὰρ ἀγῶνα τὸν περὶ ψυχῆς, τοῖς μὲν σωτηρίαν ψηφίζομένη, τοῖς δὲ θάνατον.
- 126 XLII. Ἡ δὲ δύναμις αὐτῆς οὐ μόνον τοῖς
 εἰρημένοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ταῖς ἀρίσταις τῶν ἐπιστημῶν ἐπιπεφοίτηκε, γραμματικῇ τε καὶ μουσικῇ. λύρα
 μὲν γὰρ ἡ ἐπτάχορδος, ἀναλογούσα τῇ τῶν πλα-νήτων χορεία, τὰς ἐλλογίμους ἀρμονίας ἀποτελεῖ, σχεδόν τι τῆς κατὰ μουσικὴν ὀργανοποιίας ἀπάσης
 [30] | ἡγεμονὶς οὖσα. στοιχείων τε τῶν ἐν γραμματικῇ
 τὰ λεγόμενα φωνήεντα ἐτύμως ἐπτά ἐστίν, ἐπειδὴ
 καὶ ἐξ ἑαυτῶν ἔοικε φωνεῖσθαι καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις
 συνταττόμενα φωνὰς ἐνάρθρους ἀποτελεῖν· τῶν
 μὲν γὰρ ἡμιφώνων ἀναπληροῖ τὸ ἐνδέον ὀλοκλήρους κατασκευάζοντα τοὺς φθόγγους, τῶν δ' ἀφώνων τρέπει καὶ μεταβάλλει τὰς φύσεις ἐμπνέοντα τῆς ἰδίας δυνάμεως, ἵνα γένηται τὰ 127 ἄρρητα ῥητά. διό μοι δοκοῦσιν οἱ τὰ ὀνόματα
 τοῖς πράγμασιν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐπιφημίσαντες ἅτε σοφοὶ
 καλέσαι τὸν ἀριθμὸν ἐπτά ἀπὸ τοῦ περὶ αὐτὸν σεβασμοῦ καὶ τῆς προσούσης σεμνότητος· Ῥωμαῖοι δὲ καὶ προστιθέντες τὸ ἐλλειφθὲν ὑφ' Ἑλ-λήνων στοιχείον τὸ Σ τρανοῦσιν ἔτι μᾶλλον τὴν ἔμφασιν, ἐτυμώτερον σέπτεμ προσαγορεύοντες ἀπὸ
 τοῦ σεμνοῦ, καθάπερ ἐλέχθη, καὶ σεβασμοῦ.

* ἐπτά is Greek for "seven."

ON THE CREATION, 124-127

to the birth, whereas eight months' children as a rule fail to do so alive. Severe bodily sicknesses too, especially persistent attacks of fever due to internal disorder, generally reach the crisis on the seventh day ; for this day decides the struggle for life, bringing to some recovery, to others death.

XLII. The number 7 exerts its influence not only in the spheres that have been mentioned, but also in those noblest of sciences, grammar and music. For the seven-stringed lyre, corresponding to the choir of the Planets, produces the notable melodies, and it is not going too far to say that the lyre is the rule to which the making of all musical instruments conforms. And among the letters in grammar there are seven properly called vowels or "vocals," since as is obvious they can be sounded by themselves, and when joined with the others can produce articulate sounds ; for on the one hand they fill up what is lacking to the "semi-vowels," rendering the sounds full and complete, and on the other hand they change the nature of the "voiceless" (the consonants) by breathing into them something of their own power, that it may now be possible to pronounce letters before incapable of pronunciation. On these grounds I hold that those who originally fitted names to things, being wise men, called this number "seven" because of the "reverence" (σεβασμός) which it deserves, and the heavenly "dignity" (σεμνότης) pertaining to it. The Romans, who add the letter σ left out by the Greeks,<sup>a</sup> make this appear still more clearly, since they, with greater accuracy, call the number septem, owing to its derivation, as I have said, from σεμνός (reverend) and σεβασμός ("reverence").

128 XLIII. Ταῦτα καὶ ἔτι πλείω λέγεται καὶ φιλοσοφεῖται περὶ ἑβδομάδος, ὧν ἕνεκα τιμᾶς μὲν ἔλαχεν ἐν τῇ φύσει τὰς ἀνωτάτω, τιμᾶται δὲ καὶ παρὰ τοῖς δοκιμωτάτοις τῶν Ἑλλήνων καὶ βαρβάρων, οἳ τὴν μαθηματικὴν ἐπιστήμην διαπονοῦσιν, ἐκτετίμηται δ' ὑπὸ τοῦ φιλαρέτου Μωυσέως, ὃς τὸ κάλλος αὐτῆς ἀνέγραψεν ἐν ταῖς ἱερωτάταις τοῦ νόμου στήλαις, ταῖς δὲ διανοίαις τῶν ὑφ' αὐτὸν ἀπάντων ἐνεχάραξε, δι' ἑξ ἡμερῶν κελεύσας ἄγειν ἱερὰν ἑβδόμην, ἀπὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἀνέχοντας ἔργων, ὅσα κατὰ ζήτησιν βίου καὶ πορισμόν, ἐνὶ μόνῳ σχολάζοντας τῷ φιλοσοφεῖν εἰς βελτίωσιν ἡθῶν καὶ τὸν τοῦ συνειδότος ἔλεγχον, ὃς ἐνιδρυμένος τῇ ψυχῇ, καθάπερ δικαστῆς ἐπιπλήττων οὐ δυσωπεῖται, τὰ μὲν σφοδροτέραις ἀπειλαῖς τὰ δὲ καὶ μετριωτέραις νουθεσίαις χρώμενος, περὶ μὲν ὧν ἔδοξεν ἐκ προνοίας ἀδικεῖν ἀπειλαῖς, περὶ δ' ὧν ἀκούσια, διὰ τὸ ἀπροοράτως ἔχειν, νουθεσίαις ὑπὲρ τοῦ μηκέθ' ὁμοίως ὀλισθεῖν.

129 XLIV. Ἐπιλογιζόμενος δὲ τὴν κοσμοποιίαν κεφαλαιώδει τύπῳ φησίν· “ Αὕτη ἡ βίβλος γενέσεως οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς ὅτε ἐγένετο, ἧ ἡμέρα ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ πᾶν χλωρὸν ἄγρου πρὸ τοῦ γενέσθαι ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ πάντα χόρτον ἄγρου πρὸ τοῦ ἀνατεῖλαι ” (Gen. ii. 4, 5). ἄρ' οὐκ ἐμφανῶς τὰς ἀσωμάτους καὶ νοητὰς ἰδέας παρίστησιν, ἃς τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀποτελεσμάτων σφραγίδα εἶναι συμβέβηκε; πρὶν γὰρ

XLIII. These and yet more than these are the statements and reflections of men on the number 7, showing the reasons for the very high honour which that number has attained in Nature, the honour in which it is held by the most approved investigators of the science of Mathematics and Astronomy among Greeks and other peoples, and the special honour accorded to it by that lover of virtue, Moses. He inscribed its beauty on the most holy tables of the Law, and impressed it on the minds of all who were set under him, by bidding them at intervals of six days to keep a seventh day holy, abstaining from other work that has to do with seeking and gaining a livelihood, and giving their time to the one sole object of philosophy with a view to the improvement of character and submission to the scrutiny of conscience. Conscience, established in the soul like a judge, is never abashed in administering reproofs, sometimes employing sharper threats, sometimes gentler admonitions; threats, where the wrongdoing appeared to be deliberate; admonitions, to guard against a like lapse in the future, when the misconduct seemed unintentional and the result of want of caution.

XLIV. In his concluding summary of the story of creation he says: "This is the book of the genesis of heaven and earth, when they came into being, in the day in which God made the heaven and the earth and every herb of the field before it appeared upon the earth, and all grass of the field before it sprang up" (Gen. ii. 4, 5). Is he not manifestly describing the incorporeal ideas present only to the mind, by which, as by seals, the finished objects that meet our senses were moulded? For before the earth put forth its

PHILO

- χλοῆσαι τὴν γῆν, αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἐν τῇ φύσει τῶν
 πραγμάτων χλόη, φησίν, ἦν, καὶ πρὶν ἀνατεῖλαι 130 χόρτον ἐν ἀγρῶ, χόρτος ἦν οὐχ ὄρατός. ὑπο-νοητέον δ' ὅτι καὶ ἐκάστου τῶν ἄλλων ἃ δικά-[31] ζουσιν αἰσθήσεις τὰ πρεσβύτερα | εἶδη καὶ μέτρα,
 οἷς εἰδοποιεῖται καὶ μετρεῖται τὰ γινόμενα, προὔπ-ἦρχε· καὶ γὰρ εἰ μὴ κατὰ μέρος <ἀλλ' > ἄθροα
 πάντα διεξελήλυθε φροντίζων εἰ καὶ τις ἄλλος βραχυλογίας, οὐδὲν ἦττον τὰ ῥηθέντα ὀλίγα δείγ-ματα τῆς τῶν συμπάντων ἐστὶ φύσεως, ἥτις ἄνευ ἁσωμάτου παραδείγματος οὐδὲν τελεσιουργεῖ τῶν ἐν αἰσθήσει.
- 131 XLV. Τῆς δ' ἀκολουθίας ἐχόμενος καὶ τὸν
 εἰρμὸν τῶν ἐπομένων πρὸς τὰ ἡγούμενα διατηρῶν
 ἐξῆς λέγει· “πηγὴ δ' ἀνέβαιεν ἐκ τῆς γῆς καὶ
 ἐπότιζε πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γῆς” (Gen. ii. 6).
 οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι φιλόσοφοι τὸ σύμπαν ὕδωρ ἐν στοιχεῖον εἶναι φασὶ τῶν τεττάρων, ἐξ ὧν ὁ κόσμος ἐδημιουργήθη. Μωυσῆς δ', ὀξυωπεστέροις ὄμμασι
 καὶ τὰ μακρὰν εἰωθὼς εὖ μάλα θεωρεῖν καὶ καταλαμβάνειν, στοιχεῖον μὲν οἶεται εἶναι τὴν μεγάλην
 θάλατταν, μοῖραν τετάρτην τῶν συμπάντων, ἦν
 οἱ μετ' αὐτὸν Ὀκεανὸν προσαγορεύοντες τὰ παρ'
 ἡμῖν πλωτὰ πελάγη λιμένων ἔχειν μεγέθη νομίζουσι, τὸ δὲ γλυκὺ καὶ πότιμον ὕδωρ διέκρινεν
 ἀπὸ τοῦ θαλαττίου, προσκατατάξας αὐτὸ τῇ γῇ
 καὶ μέρος ταύτης ὑπολαβῶν, οὐκ ἐκείνου, διὰ τὴν λεχθεῖσαν αἰτίαν πρότερον, ἵν' ὡς ἂν ὑπὸ δεσμοῦ συνέχηται γλυκεῖα ποιότητι κόλλης τρόπον ἐνούσης·
 ξηρὰ γὰρ ἀπολειφθεῖσα, μὴ παραδουμένης νοτίδος

ON THE CREATION, 129-131

young green shoots, young verdure was present, he tells us, in the nature of things without material shape, and before grass sprang up in the field, there was in existence an invisible grass. We must suppose that in the case of all other objects also, on which the senses pronounce judgement, the original forms and measures, to which all things that come into being owe shape and size, subsisted before them ; for even if he has not dealt with everything in detail but in the mass, aiming as he does at brevity in a high degree, nevertheless what he does say gives us a few indications of universal Nature, which brings forth no finished product in the world of sense without using an incorporeal pattern.

XLV. Keeping to the sequence of the creation and carefully observing the connexion between what follows and what has gone before, he next says : " and a spring went up out of the earth and watered all the face of the earth " (Gen. ii. 6). Other philosophers say that all water is one of the four elements out of which the world was made. But Moses, wont as he is with keener vision to observe and apprehend amazingly well even distant objects, does indeed regard the great sea as an element, a fourth part of the whole, which his successors, reckoning the seas we sail to be in size mere harbours compared to it, call Ocean ; but he distinguished sweet drinkable water from the salt water, assigning the former to the land and looking on it as part of this, not of the sea. It is such a part, for the purpose already mentioned, that by the sweet quality of the water as by a uniting glue the earth may be bound and held together : for had it been left dry, with no moisture making its way in and spreading by many

PHILO

- διὰ τῶν ἀραιωμάτων πολυσχιδῶς ἐπιφοιτώσης,
 κὰν διελέλυτο· συνέχεται δὲ καὶ διαμένει τὰ μὲν
 πνεύματος ἐνωτικῆς δυνάμει, τὰ δὲ τῆς νοτίδος
 οὐκ ἐώσης ἀφαναινομένην κατὰ τρύφη μικρὰ καὶ 132 μεγάλα θρύπτεσθαι. μία μὲν αἰτία ἦδε, λεκτέον
 δὲ καὶ ἑτέραν στοχαζομένην ὥσπερ σκοποῦ τῆς ἀληθείας· οὐδὲν τῶν γηγενῶν ἄνευ ὑγράς οὐσίας συνίστασθαι πέφυκε· μηνύουσι δ' αἱ καταβολαὶ
 τῶν σπερμάτων, ἅπερ ἢ ὑγρά ἐστίν, ὡς τὰ τῶν ζώων, ἢ οὐκ ἄνευ ὑγρότητος βλαστάνει, τοιαῦτα
 δὲ τὰ τῶν φυτῶν ἐστίν· ἐξ οὗ δῆλον ὅτι ἀνάγκη
 τὴν λεχθεῖσαν ὑγρὰν οὐσίαν μέρος εἶναι γῆς τῆς πάντα τικτούσης, καθάπερ ταῖς γυναιξὶ τὴν φορὰν
 τῶν καταμηνίων· λέγεται γὰρ οὖν καὶ ταῦτα πρὸς
 ἀνδρῶν φυσικῶν οὐσία σωματικὴ βρεφῶν εἶναι.
 133 τῶν δ' εἰρημένων οὐκ ἀπάδει καὶ τὸ μέλλον
 λέγεσθαι· πάσῃ μητρὶ καθάπερ ἀναγκαιότατον μέρος ἢ φύσις πηγάζοντας ἀνέδωκε μαστοὺς προευτρεπισαμένη τροφὰς τῷ γεννησομένῳ· μήτηρ δ'
 ὡς ἔοικε καὶ ἡ γῆ, παρὸ καὶ τοῖς πρώτοις ἔδοξεν
 αὐτὴν Δήμητραν καλέσαι τὸ μητρὸς καὶ γῆς
 [32] ὄνομα συνθεῖσιν· οὐ | γὰρ γῆ γυναικα, ὡς εἶπε
 Πλάτων, ἀλλὰ γυνὴ γῆν μεμίμηται, ἣν ἐτύμως τὸ
 ποιητικὸν γένος παμμήτορα καὶ καρποφόρον καὶ
 πανδώραν εἴωθεν ὀνομάζειν, ἐπειδὴ πάντων αἰτία
 γενέσεως καὶ διαμονῆς ζώων ὁμοῦ καὶ φυτῶν
 ἐστίν. εἰκότως οὖν καὶ γῆ τῇ πρεσβυτάτῃ καὶ γονιμωτάτῃ μητέρων ἀνέδωκεν ἢ φύσις οἶα μαστοὺς ποταμῶν ρεῖθρα καὶ πηγῶν, ἵνα καὶ τὰ 104

ON THE CREATION, 131-133

channels through the pores, it would have actually fallen to pieces. It is held together and lasts, partly by virtue of the life-breath that makes it one, partly because it is saved from drying up and breaking off in small or big bits by the moisture. This is one reason, and I must mention another which is a guess at the truth. It is of the nature of nothing earth-born to take form apart from wet substance. This is shown by the depositing of seeds, which either are moist, as those of animals, or do not grow without moisture: such are those of plants. From this it is clear that the wet substance we have mentioned must be a part of the earth which gives birth to all things, just as with women the running of the monthly cleansings; for these too are, so physical scientists tell us, the bodily substance of the fetus. And what I am about to say is in perfect agreement with what has been said already. Nature has bestowed on every mother as a most essential endowment teeming breasts, thus preparing in advance food for the child that is to be born. The earth also, as we all know, is a mother, for which reason the earliest men thought fit to call her 'Demeter,' combining the name of 'mother' with that of 'earth'; for, as Plato<sup>a</sup> says, earth does not imitate woman, but woman earth. Poets quite rightly are in the habit of calling earth 'All-mother,' and 'Fruit-bearer' and 'Pandora' or 'Give-all,' inasmuch as she is the originating cause of existence and continuance in existence to all animals and plants alike. Fitly therefore on earth also, most ancient and most fertile of mothers, did Nature bestow, by way of breasts, streams of rivers and springs, to the end that both the plants might be <sup>a</sup> Menexenus 238 A.

PHILO

φυτὰ ἄρδοιτο καὶ ποτὸν ἄφθονον ἔχοι πάντα τὰ ζῶα.

134 XLVI. Μετὰ δὲ ταυτὰ φησιν ὅτι “ ἔπλασεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον χοῦν λαβὼν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἐνεφύσησεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοὴν ζωῆς ” (Gen. ii. 7). ἐναργέστατα καὶ διὰ τούτου παρ-
 ἴστησιν ὅτι διαφορὰ παμμεγέθης ἐστὶ τοῦ τε νῦν πλασθέντος ἀνθρώπου καὶ τοῦ κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα θεοῦ γεγονότος πρότερον· ὁ μὲν γὰρ διαπλασθεὶς αἰσθητὸς ἤδη μετέχων ποιότητος, ἐκ σώματος καὶ ψυχῆς συνεστῶς, ἀνὴρ ἢ γυνή, φύσει θνητός· ὁ δὲ κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα ἰδέα τις ἢ γένος ἢ σφραγίς, νοητός, ἀσώματος, οὐτ’ ἄρρεν οὔτε θῆλυ, ἀφθαρτος 135 φύσει. τοῦ δ’ αἰσθητοῦ καὶ ἐπὶ μέρους ἀνθρώπου τὴν κατασκευὴν σύνθετον εἶναι φησιν ἕκ τε γεώδους οὐσίας καὶ πνεύματος θείου· γεγενῆσθαι γὰρ τὸ μὲν σῶμα, χοῦν τοῦ τεχνίτου λαβόντος καὶ μορφήν ἀνθρωπίνην ἐξ αὐτοῦ διαπλάσαντος, τὴν δὲ ψυχὴν ἀπ’ οὐδενὸς γενητοῦ τὸ παράπαν, ἀλλ’ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ ἡγεμόνος τῶν πάντων· ὁ γὰρ ἐνεφύσησεν, οὐδὲν ἦν ἕτερον ἢ πνεῦμα θεῖον, ἀπὸ τῆς μακαρίας καὶ εὐδαίμονος φύσεως ἐκείνης ἀποικίαν τὴν ἐνθάδε στειλάμενον ἐπ’ ὠφελεία τοῦ γένους ἡμῶν, ἵν’ εἰ καὶ θνητόν ἐστι κατὰ τὴν ὀρατὴν μερίδα, κατὰ γοῦν τὴν ἀόρατον ἀθανα-τίζηται. διὸ καὶ κυρίως ἂν τις εἴποι τὸν ἄνθρωπον θνητῆς καὶ ἀθανάτου φύσεως εἶναι μεθόριον, ἐκατέρας ὅσον ἀναγκαῖόν ἐστι μετέχοντα, καὶ γεγενῆσθαι θνητὸν ὁμοῦ καὶ ἀθάνατον, θνητὸν μὲν κατὰ τὸ σῶμα, κατὰ δὲ τὴν διάνοιαν ἀθάνατον.

136 XLVII. Ἐκεῖνος δ’ ὁ πρῶτος ἄνθρωπος ὁ

ON THE CREATION, 133-136

watered and all animals might have abundance to drink.

XLVI. After this he says that " God formed man by taking clay from the earth, and breathed into his face the breath of life " (Gen. ii. 7). By this also he shows very clearly that there is a vast difference between the man thus formed and the man that came into existence earlier after the image of God : for the man so formed is an object of sense-perception, partaking already of such or such quality, consisting of body and soul, man or woman, by nature mortal ; while he that was after the (Divine) image was an idea or type or seal, an object of thought (only), incorporeal, neither male nor female, by nature incorruptible.

It says, however, that the formation of the individual man, the object of sense, is a composite one made up of earthly substance and of Divine breath : for it says that the body was made through the Artificer taking clay and moulding out of it a human form, but that the soul was originated from nothing created whatever, but from the Father and Ruler of all : for that which He breathed in was nothing else than a Divine breath that migrated hither from that blissful and happy existence for the benefit of our race, to the end that, even if it is mortal in respect of its visible part, it may in respect of the part that is invisible be rendered immortal. Hence it may with propriety be said that man is the borderland between mortal and immortal nature, partaking of each so far as is needful, and that he was created at once mortal and immortal, mortal in respect of the body, but in respect of the mind immortal.

XLVII. That first man, earth-born, ancestor of

PHILO

γηγενής, ὁ παντὸς τοῦ γένους ἡμῶν ἀρχηγέτης, ἑκάτερον ἄριστος ψυχὴν τε καὶ σῶμα γεγενῆσθαι
 μοι δοκεῖ καὶ μακρῶ τινι τοὺς ἔπειτα διενεγκεῖν
 κατὰ τὰς ἐν ἀμφοτέροις ὑπερβολάς· ὁ γὰρ ἀληθεία
 καλὸς καὶ ἀγαθὸς οὗτος ὄντως ἦν. τεκμηριώσαιτο δ' ἂν τις τὴν μὲν τοῦ σώματος εὐμορφίαν
 ἐκ τριῶν, ὧν ἔστι πρῶτον τόδε· ἄρτι τῆς γῆς
 [33] νεοκτίστου φανείσης κατὰ τὴν τοῦ πολλοῦ | ὕδατος
 διάκρισιν, ὃ προσερρήθη θάλαττα, τὴν ὕλην συνἔβαινε τῶν γινομένων ἀμιγῆ καὶ ἄδολον καὶ καθαρὰν
 ἔτι δ' ὄλκον καὶ εὐεργὸν εἶναι, ἐξ ἧς τὰ ἀπο-137 τελούμενα εἰκότως ἦν ἀνυπαίτια. δεύ-τερον δέ, οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ τυχόντος μέρους τῆς γῆς ἔοικεν ὁ θεὸς χοῦν λαβὼν τὸν ἀνθρωποειδῆ τοῦτον
 ἀνδριάντα πλάττειν ἐθελήσῃ μετὰ τῆς ἀνωτάτω
 σπουδῆς, ἀλλὰ διακρίνας ἐξ ἀπάσης τὸ βέλτιστον,
 ἐκ καθαρᾶς ὕλης τὸ καθαρώτατον καὶ διηθημένον
 ἄκρως, ὃ πρὸς τὴν κατασκευὴν μάλιστα ἤρμοζεν·
 οἶκος γάρ τις ἢ νεὼς ἱερὸς ἐτεκταίνετο ψυχῆς
 λογικῆς, ἣν ἔμελλεν ἀγαλματοφορήσειν ἀγαλ-138 μάτων τὸ θεοειδέστατον. τρίτον δέ, ὃ μηδὲ σύγκρισιν ἔχει πρὸς τὰ λεχθέντα, ὃ δημιουρ-γὸς ἀγαθὸς ἦν τὰ τε ἄλλα καὶ τὴν ἐπιστήμην, ὡς ἕκαστον τῶν τοῦ σώματος μερῶν καὶ ἰδίᾳ καθ'
 αὐτὸ τοὺς ἐπιβάλλοντας ἔχειν ἀριθμοὺς καὶ πρὸς
 τὴν τοῦ ὄλου κοινωνίαν εὐαρμόστως ἀπηκριβῶσθαι·
 μετὰ δὲ τῆς συμμετρίας καὶ εὐσαρκίαν προσανἔπλαττε καὶ εὐχροίαν ἠθογράφει βουλόμενος, ὡς
 ἔνι μάλιστα, κάλλιστον ὀφθῆναι τὸν πρῶτον ἀν-139 θρωπον. XLVIII. ὅτι δὲ καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν ἄριστος

* “ Beautiful and good ” meant to a Greek “ perfect,” “ as it should be.”

ON THE CREATION, 136-139

our whole race, was made, as it appears to me, most excellent in each part of his being, in both soul and body, and greatly excelling those who came after him in the transcendent qualities of both alike : for this man really was the one truly " beautiful and good." <sup>a</sup> The fair form of his body may be gathered from three proofs. The first is this. When, at the severing of the great mass of water, which received the name of " sea," the newly formed earth appeared, the material of the things to come into existence was, as a result, pure and free from mixture or alloy, and also supple and easy to work, and the things wrought out of it naturally flawless.

Secondly, God is not likely to have taken the clay from any part of the earth that might offer, or to have chosen as rapidly as possible to mould this figure in the shape of a man, but selecting the best from it all, out of pure material taking the purest and most subtly refined, such as was best suited for his structure ; for a sacred dwelling-place or shrine was being fashioned for the reasonable soul, which man was to carry as a holy image, of all images the most Godlike.

The third proof, incomparably stronger than the two that have been given, is this, that the Creator excelled, as well as in all else, in skill to bring it about that each of the bodily parts should have in itself individually its due proportions, and should also be fitted with the most perfect accuracy for the part it was to take in the whole. And together with this symmetry (of the parts) He bestowed on the body goodly flesh, and adorned it with a rich complexion, desiring the first man to be as fair as could be to behold. XLVIII. That in soul also he was most excellent is manifest ;

PHILO

ἦν, φανερόν· οὐδενὶ γὰρ ἐτέρῳ παραδείγματι τῶν ἐν γενέσει πρὸς τὴν κατασκευὴν αὐτῆς ἔοικε χρῆσασθαι, μόνῳ δ' ὡς εἶπον τῷ ἑαυτοῦ λόγῳ. διὸ φησιν ἀπεικόνισμα καὶ μίμημα γεγενῆσθαι τούτου τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐμπνευσθέντα εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον, ἔνθα τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὁ τόπος, αἷς τὸ μὲν σῶμα ἐψύχωσεν ὁ δημιουργός, τὸν δὲ βασιλέα λογισμὸν ἐνιδρυσάμενος τῷ ἡγεμονικῷ παρέδωκε δορυφορεῖσθαι πρὸς τὰς χρωμάτων καὶ φωνῶν χυλῶν τε αὐτῶν καὶ ἀτμῶν καὶ τῶν παραπλησίων ἀντιλήψεις, ἃς ἄνευ αἰσθήσεως δι' αὐτοῦ μόνου καταλαβεῖν οὐχ οἶός τε ἦν. ἀνάγκη δὲ παγκάλου παραδείγματος πάγκαλον εἶναι τὸ μίμημα. θεοῦ δὲ λόγος καὶ αὐτοῦ κάλλους, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ φύσει κάλλος, ἀμείνων, οὐ κοσμούμενος κάλλει, κόσμος δ' αὐτός, εἰ δεῖ τάληθές εἰπεῖν, εὐπρεπέστατος ἐκείνου.

- 140 XLIX. Τοιοῦτος μὲν ὁ πρῶτος ἄνθρωπος κατὰ τε σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν γεγενῆσθαι μοι δοκεῖ, τοὺς τε νῦν ὄντας καὶ τοὺς πρὸ ἡμῶν διενεγκῶν ἅπαντας· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἡμετέρα γένεσις ἐξ ἀνθρώπων, τὸν δὲ θεὸς ἐδημιούργησεν· ἐφ' ὅσον δὲ κρείττων ὁ ποιῶν, ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον καὶ τὸ γινόμενον ἄμεινον· ὥσπερ γὰρ τὸ ἀκμάζον αἰεὶ τοῦ παρηβηκότος βέλτιόν ἐστιν, εἴτε ζῶον εἴτε φυτὸν εἴτε καρπὸς εἴτ' ἄλλο τι τῶν ἐν τῇ φύσει τυγχάνοι, οὕτως ἔοικεν ὁ μὲν πρῶτος διαπλασθεὶς ἄνθρωπος ἀκμὴ τοῦ ἡμετέρου παντὸς ὑπάρξει γένους, οἱ δ' ἔπειτα μηκέθ' ὁμοίως ἐπακμάσαι, τῶν κατὰ γενεὰν ἀμαυροτέρας αἰεὶ τὰς
- 141 τε μορφὰς καὶ τὰς δυνάμεις | λαμβανόντων· ὅπερ
[34] ἐπὶ τε πλαστικῆς καὶ ζωγραφίας γινόμενον εἶδον· ἀποδεῖ γὰρ τὰ μιμήματα τῶν ἀρχετύπων, τὰ δ'

ON THE CREATION, 139-141

for the Creator, we know, employed for its making no pattern taken from among created things, but solely, as I have said, His own Word (or Reason). It is on this account that he says that man was made a likeness and imitation of the Word, when the Divine Breath was breathed into his face. The face is the seat of the senses. By the senses the Creator endowed the body with soul. To the senses, when He had installed the sovereign Reason in the princely part of man's being, He delivered it to be by them escorted to the apprehension of colours and sounds, as well as of flavours and scents and the like. The Reason, apart from perception by the senses, was unable by itself alone to apprehend these. Now the copy of a perfectly beautiful pattern must needs be of perfect beauty. But the Word of God surpasses beauty itself, beauty, that is, as it exists in Nature. He is not only adorned with beauty, but is Himself in very truth beauty's fairest adornment.

XLIX. Such was the first man created, as I think, in body and soul, surpassing all the men that now are, and all that have been before us. For our beginning is from men, whereas God created him, and the more eminent the maker is, so much the better is the work. For as that which is in bloom is always better than that whose bloom is past, be it animal or plant or fruit or aught else in nature, so the man first fashioned was clearly the bloom of our entire race, and never have his descendants attained the like bloom, forms and faculties ever feebler having been bestowed on each succeeding generation. I have observed the same thing happening in the case of sculpture and painting: the copies are inferior to the originals, and what is painted or moulded ἀπὸ τῶν μιμημάτων γραφόμενα καὶ πλαττόμενα πολὺ μᾶλλον, ἅτε μακρὰν ἀφεστῶτα τῆς ἀρχῆς· παραπλήσιον δὲ πάθος καὶ ἡ μαγνητὶς λίθος ἐπιδείκνυται· τῶν γὰρ σιδηρῶν δακτυλίων ὁ μὲν αὐτῆς ψαύσας βιαιότατα κρατεῖται, ὁ δὲ τοῦ ψαύσαντος ἦττον, ἐκκρέματα δὲ καὶ τρίτος δευτέρου, καὶ τέταρτος τρίτου, καὶ πέμπτος τετάρτου, καὶ ἑτέρων ἕτεροι, κατὰ μακρὸν στοῖχον, ὑπὸ μιᾶς ὀλοῦ δυνάμεως συνεχόμενοι, πλὴν οὐ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον· αἰεὶ γὰρ οἱ πόρρω τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀπηρητημένοι χαλῶνται, διὰ τὸ τὴν ὀλκὴν ἀνίσθαι μηκέθ' ὁμοίως σφίγγειν δυναμένην. ὅμοιον δὴ τι πεπονθέναι καὶ τὸ γένος τῶν ἀνθρώπων φαίνεται, καθ' ἑκάστην γενεὰν ἀμυδροτέρας λαμβανόντων τὰς τε τοῦ σώματος καὶ τὰς τῆς ψυχῆς δυνάμεις καὶ ποιότητας.

PHILO

142 Τὸν δ' ἀρχηγέτην ἐκείνον οὐ μόνον πρῶτον ἀνθρωπον ἀλλὰ καὶ μόνον κοσμοπολίτην λέγοντες ἀψευδέστατα ἐροῦμεν· ἦν γὰρ οἶκος αὐτῷ καὶ πόλις ὁ κόσμος, μηδεμιᾶς χειροποιήτου κατασκευῆς δεδημιουργημένης ἐκ λίθων καὶ ξύλων ὕλης, ὧ καθάπερ ἐν πατρίδι μετὰ πάσης ἀσφαλείας ἐνδιητᾶτο, φόβου μὲν ἐκτὸς ὄν, ἅτε τῆς τῶν περιγείων ἡγεμονίας ἀξιωθείς, καὶ πάντων ὅσα θνητὰ κατεπτηχότων καὶ ὑπακούειν ὡς δεσπότη δεδιδαγμένων ἢ βιασθέντων, ἐν εὐπαθείαις δὲ ταῖς ἐν εἰρήνῃ ἀπολέμῳ ζῶν ἀνεπιλήπτως.

143 Ἰ. ἐπεὶ δὲ πᾶσα πόλις εὐνομος ἔχει πολιτείαν, ἀναγκαίως συνέβαινε τῷ κοσμοπολίτῃ χρῆσθαι πολιτεία ἢ καὶ σύμπας ὁ κόσμος· αὕτη δὲ ἐστὶν ὁ τῆς φύσεως ὀρθὸς λόγος, ὃς κυριωτέρα κλήσει προσονομάζεται θεσμός, νόμος θεῖος ὢν, καθ'

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 476.

ON THE CREATION, 141-143

from the copies still more so, owing to their long distance from the original. Much the same appears in the case of the magnet: for the iron ring which touches it is held most forcibly, but that which touches this one less so. A third hangs on to the second, and a fourth on to the third, and a fifth on to the fourth, and so on in a long series, all held together by one attracting force, only not all alike, for those removed from the starting-point get looser all the time, owing to the attraction being relaxed and losing its power to grip as it did before. Mankind has evidently undergone something of the same kind. As generation follows generation the powers and qualities of body and soul which men receive are feebler.

If we call that original forefather of our race not only the first man but also the only citizen of the world<sup>a</sup> we shall be speaking with perfect truth. For the world was his city and dwelling-place. No building made by hand had been wrought out of the material of stones and timbers. The world was his mother country where he dwelt far removed from fear, inasmuch as he had been held worthy of the rule of the denizens of the earth, and all things mortal trembled before him, and had been taught or compelled to obey him as their master. So he lived exposed to no attack amid the comforts of peace unbroken by war.

L. Now since every well-ordered State has a constitution, the citizen of the world enjoyed of necessity the same constitution as did the whole world: and this constitution is nature's right relation, more properly called an "ordinance," or "dispensation," seeing it is a divine law, in accordance with which there was duly appor-

PHILO

- ὄν τὰ προσήκοντα καὶ ἐπιβάλλοντα ἐκάστοις ἀπενεμήθη. ταύτης τῆς πόλεως καὶ πολιτείας ἔδει τινὰς εἶναι πρὸ ἀνθρώπου πολίτας, οἱ λέγοντ' ἂν ἐνδίκως μεγαλοπολίται, τὸν μέγιστον περίβολον οἰκεῖν λαχόντες, καὶ τῷ μεγίστῳ καὶ τελειοτάτῳ
- 144 πολιτεύματι ἐγγραφέντες. οὗτοι δὲ τίνες ἂν εἶεν ὅτι μὴ λογικαὶ καὶ θεῖαι φύσεις, αἱ μὲν ἀσώματοι καὶ νοηταί, αἱ δὲ οὐκ ἄνευ σωμάτων, ὁποίους συμβέβηκεν εἶναι τοὺς ἀστέρας; οἷς προσομιλῶν καὶ συνδιαιτώμενος εἰκότως ἐν ἀκράτῳ διέτριβεν εὐδαιμονία· συγγενῆς τε καὶ ἀγχίσπορος ὢν τοῦ ἡγεμόνος, ἅτε δὴ πολλοῦ ῥυέντος εἰς αὐτὸν τοῦ θείου πνεύματος, πάντα καὶ λέγειν καὶ πράττειν ἐσπούδαζεν εἰς ἀρέσκειαν τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ βασιλέως, ἐπόμενος κατ' ἴχνος αὐτῷ ταῖς ὁδοῖς, ἃς λεωφόρους
- [35] ἀνατέμνουσιν ἀρεταί, διότι μόναις ψυχαῖς θέμις προσέρχεσθαι τέλος ἡγουμέναις τὴν πρὸς τὸν γεννήσαντα θεὸν ἐξομοίωσιν.
- 145 LI. Τοῦ μὲν οὖν πρώτου φύντος ἀνθρώπου τὸ καθ' ἑκάτερον ψυχὴν τε καὶ σῶμα κάλλος, εἰ καὶ πολλῷ τῆς ἀληθείας ἔλαττον, ἀλλ' οὖν κατὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν δύναμιν ὡς οἶόν τε ἦν εἶρηται. τοὺς δ' ἀπογόνους τῆς ἐκείνου μετέχοντας ἰδέας ἀναγκαῖον εἰ καὶ ἀμυδροὺς ἀλλ' οὖν ἔτι σώζειν τοὺς τύπους τῆς πρὸς τὸν προπάτορα συγγενείας· ἢ δὲ συγγένεια τίς; πᾶς ἄνθρωπος κατὰ μὲν τὴν διάνοιαν ὑκείωται λόγῳ θεῷ, τῆς μακαρίας φύσεως ἐκμαγεῖον ἢ ἀπόσπασμα ἢ ἀπαύγασμα γεγονώς, κατὰ δὲ τὴν τοῦ σώματος κατασκευὴν ἅπαντι τῷ κόσμῳ· συγκέκρται γὰρ ἐκ τῶν αὐτῶν, γῆς καὶ ὕδατος καὶ ἀέρος καὶ πυρός, ἐκάστου τῶν στοιχείων εἰσενεγκόντος τὸ ἐπιβάλλον μέρος πρὸς ἐκ-

ON THE CREATION, 143-146

tioned to all existences that which rightly falls to them severally. This State and polity must have had citizens before man. These might justly be termed people of the Great City, having had allotted to them as their dwelling-place the greatest compass, and having been enrolled in the greatest and most perfect commonwealth. And who should these be but spiritual and divine natures, some incorporeal and visible to mind only, some not without bodies, such as are the stars? Conversing and consorting with these man could not but live in unalloyed bliss, and being of near kin to the Ruler, since the divine Spirit had flowed into him in full current, he earnestly endeavoured in all his words and actions to please the Father and King, following Him step by step in the highways cut out by virtues, since only for souls who regard it as their goal to be fully conformed to God who begat them is it lawful to draw nigh to Him.

LI. Of the beauty of the first-made man in each part of his being, in soul and body, we have now said what falls perhaps far short of the reality but yet what for our powers was possible. It could not but be that his descendants, partaking as they did in the original form in which he was formed, should preserve marks, though faint ones, of their kinship with their first father. Now what is this kinship? Every man, in respect of his mind, is allied to the divine Reason, having come into being as a copy or fragment or ray of that blessed nature, but in the structure of his body he is allied to all the world, for he is compounded of the same things, earth, water, air, and fire, each of the elements having contributed the share that falls to each, to complete

PHILO

πλήρωσιν αὐταρκεστάτης ὕλης, ἣν ἔδει λαβεῖν τὸν
 δημιουργόν, ἵνα τεχνιτεύσῃ τὴν ὄρατὴν ταύτην 147 εἰκόνα· καὶ προσέτι πᾶσι τοῖς λεχθεῖ-σιν ὡς οἰκειοτάτοις καὶ συγγενεστάτοις χωρίοις ἐνδαιατᾶται, τόπους ἀμείβων καὶ ἄλλοτε ἄλλοις ἐπιφοιτῶν, ὡς κυριώτατα φάναι τὸν ἄνθρωπον πάντα εἶναι, χερσαῖον, ἔνυδρον, πτηνόν,
 οὐράνιον· ἥ μὲν γὰρ οἰκεῖ καὶ βέβηκεν ἐπὶ γῆς,
 χερσαῖον ζῶόν ἐστιν, ἥ δὲ δύεται καὶ νήχεται καὶ
 πλεῖ πολλάκις, ἔνυδρον—ἔμποροι καὶ ναύκληροι
 καὶ πορφυρεῖς καὶ ὅσοι τὴν ἐπ' ὀστρέοις καὶ ἰχθύσιν ἄγραν μετίασι τοῦ λεχθέντος εἰσὶ σαφειστάτη
 πίστις—ἥ δὲ μετέωρον ἀπὸ γῆς ἀνώφοιτον ἐξῆρται τὸ σῶμα, λέγοιτ' ἂν ἐνδίκως ἀεροπόρον εἶναι, πρὸς δὲ καὶ οὐράνιον, διὰ τῆς ἡγεμονικω-τάτης τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὄψεως ἡλίω καὶ σελήνῃ καὶ ἐκάστῳ τῶν ἄλλων ἀστέρων πλανήτων καὶ ἀπλανῶν συνεγγίζων.

148 LI. Παγκάλως δὲ καὶ τὴν θέσιν τῶν ὀνομάτων
 ἀνήψε τῷ πρώτῳ (Gen. ii. 19)· σοφίας γὰρ καὶ
 βασιλείας τὸ ἔργον, σοφὸς δ' ἐκεῖνος αὐτομαθῆς
 καὶ αὐτοδίδακτος, χερσὶ θείαις γενόμενος, καὶ προσέτι βασιλεύς· ἐμπρεπὲς δ' ἡγεμόνι προσ-αγορεύειν ἕκαστον τῶν ὑπηκόων. ὑπερβάλλουσα δ'
 [36] ὡς εἰκὸς | δύναμις ἀρχῆς ἦν περὶ τὸν πρῶτον
 ἐκεῖνον ἄνθρωπον, ὃν σπουδῆ διαπλάσας ὁ θεὸς
 ἡξίου δευτερείων, ὑπαρχον μὲν αὐτοῦ, τῶν δ'
 ἄλλων ἀπάντων ἡγεμόνα τιθείς, ὅποτε καὶ οἱ
 τοσαύταις γενεαῖς ὕστερον φύντες, ἤδη τοῦ γένους
 διὰ μακρὰς χρόνων περιόδους ἐξιτήλου ὄντος,
 οὐδὲν ἦττον ἔτι δεσπόζουσι τῶν ἀλόγων, καθάπερ

ON THE CREATION, 146-148

a material absolutely sufficient in itself for the Creator to take in order to fashion this visible image.

Moreover, man is at home in all the elements named, as in places fully congenial and akin to him, ever changing his sphere and haunting now one, now another of them. Thus we can say with strict propriety that man is all four, as being of land and water and air and sky. For in so far as he dwells and moves upon the ground, he is a land-animal ; so far as he often dives and swims and often sails, he is a water-creature—merchants and ship-masters and fishers for purple-fish and oyster-dredgers and fishermen generally are the clearest evidence of what I have said—; so far as his body ascends and is raised aloft from the earth, he would justly be said to be an air-walker. He may besides be said to be heavenly, for by means of sight, the most dominant of his senses, he draws near to sun and moon and each of the other planets and fixed stars.

LII. Quite excellently does Moses ascribe the bestowal of names also to the first man (Gen. ii. 19) : for this is the business of wisdom and royalty, and the first man was wise with a wisdom learned from and taught by Wisdom's own lips, for he was made by divine hands ; he was, moreover, a king, and it befits a ruler to bestow titles on his several subordinates. And we may guess that the sovereignty with which that first man was invested was a most lofty one, seeing that God had fashioned him with the utmost care and deemed him worthy of the second place, making him His own viceroy and lord of all others. For men born many generations later, when, owing to the lapse of ages, the race had lost its vigour, are none the less still masters of the creatures that are

- λαμπάδιον ἀρχῆς καὶ δυναστείας ἀπὸ τοῦ πρώτου 149 διαδοθὲν φυλάττοντες. φησὶν οὖν ὅτι
 πάντα τὰ ζῶα ἤγαγεν ὁ θεὸς πρὸς τὸν Ἀδάμ, ἰδεῖν βουλόμενος τίνας θήσεται προσθήσεις ἐκά-στοις, οὐχ ὅτι ἐνεδοίαζεν—ἄγνωστον γὰρ οὐδὲν
 θεῷ—ἀλλ' ὅτι ἤδει τὴν λογικὴν ἐν θνητῷ φύσιν κατεσκευακῶς αὐτοκίνητον, ὅπως ἀμέτοχος αὐτὸς
 ἦ κακίας. ἀπεπειράτο δ' ὡς ὑφηγητῆς γνωρίμου,
 τὴν ἐνδιάθετον ἔξιν ἀνακινῶν καὶ πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν
 τῶν οἰκείων ἀνακαλῶν ἔργων, ἵν' ἀπαυτοματίση
 τὰς θέσεις μὴτ' ἀνοικείους μὴτ' ἀναρμόστους, ἀλλ'
 ἐμφαινούσας εὖ μάλα τὰς τῶν ὑποκειμένων ιδιό-150 τητας. ἀκράτου γὰρ ἔτι τῆς λογικῆς φύσεως ὑπαρχούσης ἐν ψυχῇ, καὶ μηδενὸς ἀρρωστήματος ἢ νοσήματος ἢ πάθους παρεισεληλυθότος, τὰς φαν-τασίας τῶν σωμάτων καὶ πραγμάτων ἀκραιφνεστάτας λαμβάνων, εὐθυβόλους ἐποιεῖτο τὰς κλήσεις,
 εὖ μάλα στοχαζόμενος τῶν δηλουμένων, ὡς ἅμα
 λεχθῆναί τε καὶ νοηθῆναι τὰς φύσεις αὐτῶν.
 οὕτως μὲν ἐν ἅπασι τοῖς καλοῖς διέφερον ἐπ' αὐτὸ
 τὸ πέρασ φθάνων τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης εὐδαιμονίας.
- 151 LIII. Ἐπεὶ δ' οὐδὲν τῶν ἐν γενέσει βέβαιον,
 τροπὰς δὲ καὶ μεταβολὰς ἀναγκαίως τὰ θνητὰ
 δέχεται, ἐχρῆν καὶ τὸν πρῶτον ἀνθρωπον ἀπολαῦσαί τινος κακοπραγίας. ἀρχὴ δὲ τῆς ὑπαιτίου
 ζωῆς αὐτῷ γίνεται γυνή. μέχρι μὲν γὰρ εἰς ἦν, ὁμοιοῦτο κατὰ τὴν μόνωσιν κόσμῳ καὶ θεῷ,
 καὶ τῆς ἐκατέρου φύσεως ἐναπεμάττετο τῇ ψυχῇ

<sup>a</sup> Sec App. p. 476.

ON THE CREATION, 148-151

without reason, keeping safe a torch<sup>a</sup> (as it were) of sovereignty and dominion passed down from the first man.

So Moses says that God brought all the animals to Adam, wishing to see what appellations he would assign to them severally. Not that he was in any doubt—for to God nothing is unknown—but because He knew that He had formed in mortal man the natural ability to reason of his own motion, that so He Himself might have no share in faulty action. No, He was putting man to the test, as a teacher does a pupil, kindling his innate capacity, and calling on him to put forth some faculty of his own, that by his own ability man might confer titles in no wise incongruous or unsuitable, but bringing out clearly the traits of the creatures who bore them. For the native reasoning power in the soul being still unalloyed, and no infirmity or disease or evil affection having intruded itself, he received the impressions made by bodies and objects in their sheer reality, and the titles he gave were fully apposite, for right well did he divine the character of the creatures he was describing, with the result that their natures were apprehended as soon as their names were uttered. So greatly did he excel in all noble traits, thus attaining the very limit of human happiness.

LIII. But since no created thing is constant, and things mortal are necessarily liable to changes and reverses, it could not but be that the first man too should experience some ill fortune. And woman becomes for him the beginning of blameworthy life. For so long as he was by himself, as accorded with such solitude, he went on growing like to the world and like God, and receiving in his soul the impresτοὺς χαρακτῆρας, οὐ πάντας ἀλλ' ὅσους χωρῆσαι δυνατόν θνητὴν σύστασιν· ἐπεὶ δ' ἐπλάσθη καὶ γυνή, θεασάμενος ἀδελφὸν εἶδος καὶ συγγενῆ μορφήν ἠσμένισε τῇ θεᾷ καὶ προσιῶν ἠσπάζετο.

PHILO

152 ἡ δ' οὐδὲν ἐκείνου προσβλέπουσα ζῶον ἐμφερέστερον ἑαυτῇ γάνυται τε καὶ ἀντιπροσφθέγγεται μετ' αἰδοῦς· ἔρως δ' ἐπιγενόμενος καθάπερ ἐνὸς ζώου διττὰ τμήματα διεστηκότα συναγαγὼν εἰς ταῦτόν ἀρμόττεται, πόθον ἐνιδρυσάμενος ἑκατέρω τῆς πρὸς θάτερον κοινωνίας εἰς τὴν τοῦ ὁμοίου γένεσιν· ὁ δὲ πόθος οὗτος καὶ τὴν τῶν σωμάτων ἡδονὴν ἐγέννησεν, ἣτις ἐστὶν ἀδικημάτων καὶ [37] παρανομημάτων | ἀρχή, δι' ἣν ὑπαλλάττονται τὸν θνητὸν καὶ κακοδαίμονα βίον ἀντ' ἀθανάτου καὶ εὐδαίμονος.

153 LIV. Ἐτι δὲ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς μονήρη βίον ζῶντος, μήπω διαπλασθείσης τῆς γυναικός, φυτευθῆναι λόγος ἔχει παράδεισον ὑπὸ θεοῦ τοῖς παρ' ἡμῖν οὐδὲν προσεοικότα (Gen. ii. 8 f.)· τῶν μὲν γάρ ἐστιν αἴψυχος ἢ ὕλη, παντοίων δένδρων κατάπλεως, τῶν μὲν αἰιθαλῶν πρὸς τὴν ὄψεως ἀδιάστατον ἡδονὴν, τῶν δὲ ταῖς ἔαριναῖς ὥραις ἡβώντων καὶ βλαστανόντων, καὶ τῶν μὲν ἡμερον καρπὸν ἀνθρώποις φερόντων, οὐ πρὸς ἀναγκαίαν μόνον χρῆσιν τροφῆς ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς περιττὴν ἀπόλαυσιν ἀβροδιαίτου βίου, τῶν δ' οὐχ ὅμοιον, ὡς ἀναγκαίως θηρίοις ἀπενεμήθη· κατὰ δὲ τὸν θεῖον παράδεισον ἔμψυχα καὶ λογικὰ φυτὰ πάντ' εἶναι συμβέβηκε, καρπὸν φέροντα τὰς ἀρετὰς καὶ προσέτι τὴν ἀδιάφθορον σύνεσιν καὶ ἀγχίνοιαν, ἣ ἄγνωρίζεται τὰ καλὰ καὶ τὰ αἰσχροῦ, ζωὴν τ' ἄνοσον καὶ

ON THE CREATION, 151-153

sions made by the nature of each, not all of these, but as many as one of mortal composition can find room for. But when woman too had been made, beholding a figure like his own and a kindred form, he was gladdened by the sight, and approached and greeted her. She, seeing no living thing more like herself than he, is filled with glee and shamefastly returns his greeting. Love supervenes, brings together and fits into one the divided halves, as it were, of a single living creature, and sets up in each of them a desire for fellowship with the other with a view to the production of their like. And this desire begat likewise bodily pleasure, that pleasure which is the beginning of wrongs and violation of law, the pleasure for the sake of which men bring on themselves the life of mortality and wretchedness in lieu of that of immortality and bliss.

LIV. While the man was still leading a life of solitude, the woman not having been yet formed, a park or pleasaunce, we are told, was planted by God, quite unlike the pleasaunces with which we are familiar (Gen. ii. 8 f.) : for in them the wood is soulless ; they are full of trees of all sorts, some ever-blooming to give uninterrupted joy to the eye, some bursting forth with young life every spring : some again bearing cultivated fruit for man, not only for use by way of necessary nourishment, but also for his superfluities, for the enjoyment of a life of luxury ; while others yield a different kind of fruit, supplied to the wild beasts to satisfy their actual needs. But in the divine park or pleasaunce all plants are endowed with soul or reason, bearing the virtues for fruit, and beside these insight and discernment that never fail, by which things fair and ugly are recog-ἀφθαρσίαν καὶ πᾶν εἶ τι τούτοις ὁμοίτροπον.

PHILO

 154 ταῦτα δέ μοι δοκεῖ συμβολικῶς μάλλον ἢ κυρίως φιλοσοφείσθαι· δένδρα γὰρ ἐπὶ γῆς οὔτε πέφηνέ πω πρότερον οὔτ' αὐθις εἰκὸς φανείσθαι ζωῆς ἢ συνέσεως· ἀλλ' ὡς ἔοικεν αἰνίττεται
 διὰ μὲν τοῦ παραδείσου τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ἡγεμονικόν,
 ὅπερ ἐστὶ κατάπλεων οἶα φυτῶν μυρίων ὅσων
 δοξῶν, διὰ δὲ τοῦ δένδρου τῆς ζωῆς τὴν μεγίστην
 τῶν ἀρετῶν θεοσέβειαν, δι' ἧς ἀθανατίζεται ἡ ψυχὴ, διὰ δὲ τοῦ καλῶν καὶ πονηρῶν γνωριστικοῦ
 φρόνησιμ τὴν μέσην, ἣ διακρίνεται τᾶναντία 155 φύσει. LV. θέμενος δὲ τούτους τοὺς ὅρους ἐν ψυχῇ καθάπερ δικαστῆς ἐσκόπει, πρὸς
 πότερον ἐπικλινῶς ἕξει. ὡς δὲ εἶδε ρέπουσαν
 μὲν ἐπὶ πανουργίαν, εὐσεβείας δὲ καὶ ὁσιότητος
 ὀλιγωροῦσαν, ἐξ ὧν ἡ ἀθάνατος ζωὴ περιγίνεται, προὔβαλετο κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς καὶ ἐφυγάδευσεν ἐκ
 τοῦ παραδείσου, μηδ' ἐλπίδα τῆς εἰσαυθις ἐπανόδου
 δυσίατα καὶ ἀθεράπευτα πλημμελοῦση ψυχῇ
 παρασχῶν, ἐπεὶ καὶ ἡ τῆς ἀπάτης πρόφασις
 ἐπίληπτος ἦν οὐ μετρίως, ἦν οὐκ ἄξιον παρα-156 σιωπῆσαι. λέγεται τὸ παλαιὸν τὸ ἰοβόλον καὶ
 γηγενὲς ἔρπετον [ὄφεις] ἀνθρώπου φωνὴν προῖεσθαι,
 καὶ ποτε προσελθὸν τῇ τοῦ πρώτου φύντος
 ἀνδρὸς γυναικὶ τῆς βραδυτήτος καὶ τῆς ἄγαν
 εὐλαβείας ὀνειδίσαι, διότι μέλλει καὶ ὑπερτίθεται
 πάγκαλον ὀφθῆναι καὶ ἥδιστον ἀπολαυσθῆναι
 καρπὸν δρέπεσθαι, πρὸς δὲ καὶ ὠφελιμώτατον,
 ᾧ δυνήσεται γνωρίζειν ἀγαθὰ τε αὐ καὶ κακὰ·

---

<sup>a</sup> Or "the cause of their deception," i.e. the serpent, Pleasure.

ON THE CREATION, 153-156

nized, and life free from disease, and incorruption, and all that is of a like nature.

This description is, I think, intended symbolically rather than literally; for never yet have trees of life or of understanding appeared on earth, nor is it likely that they will appear hereafter. No, Moses evidently signifies by the pleasaunce the ruling power of the soul which is full of countless opinions, as it might be of plants; and by the tree of life he signifies reverence toward God, the greatest of the virtues, by means of which the soul attains to immortality; while by the tree that is cognisant of good and evil things he signifies moral prudence, the virtue that occupies the middle position, and enables us to distinguish things by nature contrary the one to the other.

LV. Having set up these standards in the soul, He watched, as a judge might, to see to which it would tend. And when He saw it inclining to wickedness, and making light of holiness and godly fear, out of which comes the winning of immortal life, He cast it forth, as we might expect, and drove it from the pleasaunce, giving the soul which committed offences that defy the healer's skill, no hope of a subsequent return, inasmuch as the reason given for their deception<sup>a</sup> was in a high degree blameworthy. This we must not leave unexplained. It is said that in olden time the venomous earthborn crawling thing could send forth a man's voice, and that one day it approached the wife of the first man and upbraided her for her irresoluteness and excessive scrupulosity in delaying and hesitating to pluck a fruit most beauteous to behold and most luscious to taste, and most useful into the bargain, since by its means she would have power to recognize

PHILO

τὴν δὲ ἀνεξετάστως, ἀπὸ γνώμης ἀβεβαίου καὶ
 [38] ἀνιδρύτου συναινέσασαν, ἐμφαγεῖν | τοῦ καρποῦ
 καὶ τῷ ἀνδρὶ μεταδοῦναι—καὶ τοῦτ' ἐξαπιναίως
 ἀμφοτέρους ἐξ ἀκακίας καὶ ἀπλότητος ἡθῶν εἰς
 πανουργίαν μετέβαλεν—· ἐφ' ᾧ τὸν πατέρα
 χαλεπήναντα—ἢ γὰρ πράξις ὀργῆς ἀξία, ἐπεὶ παρελθόντες τὸ ζωῆς ἀθανάτου φυτόν, τὴν ἀρετῆς παντέλειαν, ὑφ' ἧς μακραίωνα καὶ εὐδαίμονα βίον
 ἐδύναντο καρποῦσθαι, τὸν ἐφήμερον καὶ θνητὸν
 οὐ βίον ἀλλὰ χρόνον κακοδαιμονίας μεστὸν εἵλοντο
 —κολάσεις ὀρίσαι κατ' αὐτῶν τὰς προσηκούσας.

157 LVI. Ἔστι δὲ ταῦτα οὐ μύθου πλάσματα, οἷς
 τὸ ποιητικὸν καὶ σοφιστικὸν χαίρει γένος, ἀλλὰ
 δείγματα τύπων ἐπ' ἀλληγορίαν παρακαλοῦντα
 κατὰ τὰς δι' ὑπονοιῶν ἀποδόσεις. ἐπόμενος δέ
 τις εἰκότι στοχασμῷ φήσει προσηκόντως τὸν εἰρημένον ὄφιν ἡδονῆς εἶναι σύμβολον, ὅτι πρῶτον
 μὲν ζῶον ἄπουν ἐστὶ καὶ πρηνὲς πεπτωκὸς ἐπὶ
 γαστέρα, δεύτερον δ' ὅτι γῆς βώλοισι σιτίῳ χρῆται, τρίτον δ' ὅτι τὸν ἰὸν ἐπιφέρεται τοῖς ὁδοῦσιν, ᾧ 158 τοὺς δηχθέντας ἀναιρεῖν πέφυκεν. οὐδενὸς δὲ
 τῶν λεχθέντων ὁ φιλήδονος ἀμοιρεῖ· μόλις τε
 γὰρ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐπαίρει βαρυνόμενος καὶ καθελκόμενος, ἐκτραχηλιζούσης καὶ ὑποσκελιζούσης
 τῆς ἀκρασίας· σιτεῖται τε οὐκ οὐράνιον τροφήν,
 ἣν ὀρέγει τοῖς φιλοθεάμοσι διὰ λόγων καὶ δογμάτων
 σοφία, τὴν δ' ἀναδιδομένην ἐκ γῆς κατὰ τὰς
 ἐτησίους ὥρας, ἐξ ἧς οἰνοφλυγίαι καὶ ὀψοφαγίαι

ON THE CREATION, 156-158

things good and evil. It is said that she, without looking into the suggestion, prompted by a mind devoid of steadfastness and firm foundation, gave her consent and ate of the fruit, and gave some of it to her husband ; this instantly brought them out of a state of simplicity and innocence into one of wickedness : whereat the Father in anger appointed for them the punishments that were fitting. For their conduct well merited wrath, inasmuch as they had passed by the tree of life immortal, the consummation of virtue, from which they could have gathered an existence long and happy. Yet they chose that fleeting and mortal existence which is not an existence but a period of time full of misery.

LVI. Now these are no mythical fictions, such as poets and sophists delight in, but modes of making ideas visible, bidding us resort to allegorical interpretation guided in our renderings by what lies beneath the surface. Following a probable conjecture one would say that the serpent spoken of is a fit symbol of pleasure, because in the first place he is an animal without feet sunk prone upon his belly ; secondly because he takes clods of earth as food ; thirdly because he carries in his teeth the venom with which it is his nature to destroy those whom he has bitten. The lover of pleasure is exempt from none of these traits, for he is so weighted and dragged downwards that it is with difficulty that he lifts up his head, thrown down and tripped up by intemperance : he feeds not on heavenly nourishment, which wisdom by discourses and doctrines proffers to lovers of contemplation, but on that which comes up out of the earth with the revolving seasons, and which produces drunkenness, daintiness, and greed-

PHILO

καὶ λαιμαργίαι, <αἱ> τὰς γαστροὺς ἐπιθυμίας προσαναρρηγνῦσαι καὶ ἀναρριπίζουσαι [καὶ ἀνδραποδιζουσαι] πρὸς γαστριμαργίαν συναύξουσι καὶ ἀναρρηγνύουσι καὶ τοὺς ὑπογαστρίους οἴστρους· σιτοπόνων τε γὰρ καὶ ὀψαρτυτῶν κάματον ἐπι-λιχνεύει, καὶ τῆς ἀπὸ τῶν ἡδυσμάτων κνίσσης
 ἐν κύκλῳ τὴν κεφαλὴν περιάγων μεταλαμβάνειν [τῆς εἰδεχθείας] ὀρέγεται, καὶ ὁπότε πολυτελῆ τράπεζαν θεάσαιτο, καταβαλὼν αὐτὸν ὄλον ἐπὶ τὰ εὐτρεπισθέντα ἐκχεῖται, πάντων ἀθρόων σπου-δάζων ἐμφορεῖσθαι, τέλος οὐ κόρον ἀλλὰ τὸ μηδὲν
 ὑπολείπεσθαι τῶν εὐτρεπισθέντων ποιούμενος.
 ὅθεν οὐχ ἦττον ὄφειως ἐν τοῖς ὁδοῦσιν ἐπιφέρεται 159 τὸν ἰόν· οὗτοι γὰρ εἰσιν ἀπληστίας ὑπηρέται καὶ ὑπουργοί, πάνθ' ὅσα πρὸς ἔδωδὴν τέμνοντές τε
 καὶ λεαίνοντες, καὶ τὸ μὲν πρῶτον γλώττη παραδιδόντες τῇ χυλοῦς δικαζούσῃ πρὸς ἐπικρίσιν,
 [39] ἔπειτα δὲ φάρυγγι· | σιτίων δὲ ἀμετρία θανατῶδες
 φύσει καὶ ἰοβόλον, ἅτε πέψιν οὐκ ἐνδεχομένων
 διὰ τὴν τῶν ἐπεισιόντων φορὰν, ἣ γίνεται πρὶν 160 ἐξικμασθῆναι τὰ πρότερα. φωνὴν δ' ἀνθρώπειον
 ὄφιν λέγεται προῖεσθαι, διότι μυρίοις ὑπερμάχοις
 καὶ προαγωνισταῖς ἡδονὴν χρεῖται τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν
 καὶ προστασίαν αὐτῆς ἀνειληφόσιν, οἱ τολμῶσιν ἀναδιδάσκειν ὅτι πάντων τὸ κράτος ἀνήπται
 μικρῶν τε καὶ μεγάλων, οὐδενὸς ὑπεξηρημένου τὸ 161 παράπαν. LVII. ἀλλ' αἱ τε πρῶται τοῦ ἄρρενος πρὸς τὸ θῆλυ σύνοδοι ξιναγὸν ἔχουσι ἡδονήν, αἱ τε σποραὶ καὶ γενέσεις διὰ ταύτης
 συνίστανται, τὰ τε γεννώμενα οὐδενὶ πρῶτον

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Somniis i. 49 ἐν κύκλῳ <κινῶν> περιάγει τὴν κεφαλὴν.

ON THE CREATION, 158-161

ness. These, causing the cravings of the belly to burst out and fanning them into flame, make the man a glutton, while they also stimulate and stir up the stings of his sexual lusts. For he licks his lips over the labour of caterers and confectioners, and twisting his head<sup>a</sup> about all round strains to catch some of the steam and savour of the delicacies. Whenever he beholds a richly spread table, he flings down his whole person and tumbles upon the dishes set out, eager to devour all at once. His aim is not to sate his hunger, but to leave nothing that has been set before him undevoured. Hence we see that no less than the serpent he carries his poison in his teeth. These are the agents and ministers of excess, cutting and chewing all eatables, handing them over first to the tongue, the judge of savours, for its decision, then to the gullet. Immoderate eating is by its nature deadly and poisonous, for what is eaten has no chance of being assimilated, owing to the rush of the fresh viands which takes place before those already swallowed have been digested. Again the serpent is said to emit a human voice.<sup>b</sup> This is because pleasure employs ten thousand champions and defenders, who have undertaken to look after her and stand up for her, and who dare to spread the doctrine that she has assumed universal sovereignty over small and great, and that no one whatever is exempt therefrom.

LVII. And certainly the first approaches of the male to the female have pleasure to guide and conduct them, and it is through pleasure that begetting and the coming of life is brought about, and the offspring is

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 476.

PHILO

- οικειοῦσθαι πέφυκεν ἢ ταύτη, χαίροντα μὲν ἡδονῇ, τὴν δ' ἐναντίαν ἀλγηδόνα δυσχεραίνοντα· παρὸ καὶ ἀνακλαίεται τὸ βρέφος ἀποκηθέν, ἀλγῆσαν ὡς εἰκὸς τῇ περιμύξει· ἐκ γὰρ θερμοτάτου καὶ πυρωδεστάτου χωρίου τοῦ κατὰ τὴν μήτραν, ᾧ πολὺν χρόνον ἐνδιητήθη, προελθὼν ἕξαπιναίως εἰς ἀέρα, ψυχρὸν καὶ ἀσυνήθη τόπον, ἐπλήχθη καὶ τῆς ὀδύνης καὶ τοῦ δυσχεραίνειν ἀλγηδόνι τὰ κλαύματα δεῖγμα παρέσχεν ἔναρ-
- 162 γέστατον. σπεύδει τε, φασί, πᾶν ζῶον ὡς ἐπ' ἀναγκαιότατον καὶ συνεκτικώτατον τέλος ἡδονῆν καὶ μάλιστα ἄνθρωπος· τὰ μὲν γὰρ διὰ γεύσεως μόνον καὶ τῶν γεννητικῶν ἐφίεται ταύτης, ὁ δὲ ἄνθρωπος καὶ διὰ τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθήσεων, ὅσα θεάματα ἢ ἀκούσματα τέρψιν δύναται παρασχεῖν
- 163 ὡσί καὶ ὀφθαλμοῖς μεταδιώκων. λέγεται δὲ καὶ ἄλλα παμπληθῆ πρὸς ἔπαινον τοῦ πάθους καὶ ὡς ἔστιν οικειότατον καὶ συγγενέστατον ζώοις· LVIII. ἀπόχρη δὲ δείγματος ἔνεκα καὶ τὰ νῦν εἰρημένα, ὧν χάριν ἀνθρωπίνην φωνὴν ἔδοξεν ὁ ὄφιν προΐεσθαι. διό μοι δοκεῖ καὶ τοῖς κατὰ μέρος νόμοις, οὗ περὶ ζῶων ἔγραψεν ἃ τε χρὴ προσφέρεσθαι καὶ τὸναντίον, ἐπαινέσαι μάλιστα τὸν ὄφιομάχην ἐπικαλούμενον (Lev. xi. 22) —έρπετον δ' ἐστὶν ἔχον ἀνωτέρω σκέλη τῶν ποδῶν, οἷς ἀπὸ γῆς πέφυκε πηδᾶν καὶ μετέωρον
- 164 αἶρεσθαι καθάπερ τὸ τῶν ἀκρίδων γένος— ὁ γὰρ ὄφιομάχης οὐδὲν ἄλλ' ἢ συμβολικῶς ἐγκράτεια εἶναι μοι δοκεῖ, μάχην ἀκαθαίρετον καὶ πόλεμον ἄσπονδον ἐκφέρουσα πρὸς ἀκρασίαν καὶ ἡδονῆν· ἢ μὲν γὰρ εὐτέλειαν καὶ ὀλιγοδεῖαν καὶ ὅσον ἀναγκαῖον φιλαυστήρῳ καὶ σεμνῷ βίῳ διαφερόντως

ON THE CREATION, 161-164

naturally at home with nothing sooner than pleasure, delighting in it and feeling distress at pain its contrary. This is why the infant when born actually weeps aloud, chilled most likely by the cold all round it ; for when, leaving a place of fiery warmth in the womb, which for a long time it has tenanted, it suddenly issues into the air, a cold and unaccustomed place, it is taken aback and utters cries, a most clear sign of its pain and its annoyance at suffering. And they tell us that every living creature hastens after pleasure as its most necessary and essential end, and man above all : for while other creatures seek pleasure only through taste and the organs of reproduction, man does so through the other senses as well, pursuing with ears and eyes all such sights and sounds as can afford delight.

A very great deal more is said in praise of pleasure, and of the great closeness of its connexion and kinship with living creatures. LVIII. But what has now been said is enough to show why the serpent seemed to utter a human voice. It is for this reason, I think, that even in the detailed laws, where the lawgiver writes about animals, laying down which may be eaten and which may not, he especially praises the " snake-fighter " as it is called (Lev. xi. 22). This is a reptile with legs above its feet, with which it springs from the ground and lifts itself into the air like a grasshopper. For the snake-fighter is, I think, nothing but a symbolic representation of self-control, waging a fight that never ends and a fruitless war against intemperance and pleasure. Self-control welcomes beyond measure simplicity and abstemiousness and so much as is requisite for a severe and lofty mode of life ;

PHILO

ἀσπάζεται, ἢ δὲ περιεργίαν καὶ πολυτέλειαν, ἃ χλιδῆς καὶ θρύψεως αἷτια γίνεται ψυχῇ καὶ σώματι, δι' ὧν τὴν ὑπαίτιον καὶ θανάτου χαλεπωτέραν ζωὴν παρὰ τοῖς εὖ φρονούσι συμβέβηκε γίνεσθαι.

- 165 LIX. Τὰς δὲ γοητείας καὶ ἀπάτας αὐτῆς ἡδονὴν
 τῷ μὲν ἀνδρὶ οὐ τολμᾷ προσφέρειν, τῇ δὲ γυναικὶ
 [40] καὶ | διὰ ταύτης ἐκείνῳ, πάνυ προσφυῶς καὶ
 εὐθυβόλως· ἐν ἡμῖν γὰρ ἀνδρὸς μὲν ἔχει λόγον ὁ νοῦς, γυναικὸς δ' αἰσθήσεις· ἡδονὴ δὲ προτέραις ἐντυγχάνει καὶ ἐνομιλεῖ ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι, δι' ὧν
 καὶ τὸν ἡγεμόνα νοῦν φενακίζει· ἐπειδὴν γὰρ
 ἐκάστη τῶν αἰσθήσεων τοῖς φίλτροις αὐτῆς ὑπαχθῆ, χαίρουσαι τοῖς προτεινομένοις, ἐπὶ χρωμάτων μὲν καὶ σχημάτων ποικιλίαις ὄψις, ἐπὶ
 δὲ φωνῶν ἐμμελείαις ἀκοή, ἐν δὲ χυλῶν ἡδύτησι
 γεύσις, κὰν ταῖς τῶν ἀναθυμιωμένων ἀτμῶν εὐωδίαις ὄσφρησις, δεξάμεναι τὰ δῶρα θερα-παινίδων τρόπον προσφέρουσιν οἷα δεσπότη τῷ
 λογισμῷ, παράκλητον ἐπαγόμεναι πειθῶ περὶ
 τοῦ μηδὲν ἀπώσασθαι τὸ παράπαν· ὁ δ' αὐτίκα
 δελεασθεὶς ὑπήκοος ἀνθ' ἡγεμόνος καὶ δούλος
 ἀντὶ δεσπότη καὶ ἀντὶ πολίτου φυγὰς καὶ θνητὸς 166 ἀντ' ἀθανάτου γίνεται. συνόλως γὰρ οὐκ ἀγνοητέον ὅτι, οἷα ἑταίρις καὶ μαλχὰς οὔσα, ἡδονὴ
 γλίχεται τυχεῖν ἔραστοῦ καὶ μαστροποῦς ἀναζητεῖ,
 δι' ὧν τοῦτον ἀγκιστρεύσεται· μαστροπεύουσι δ'
 αὐτῇ καὶ προξενούσι τὸν ἐρῶντα αἰσθήσεις, ἃς
 δελεάσασα ῥαδίως ὑπηγάγετο τὸν νοῦν, ὧ τὰ
 φανέντα ἐκτὸς εἴσω κομίζουσαι διαγγέλλουσι
 καὶ ἐπιδεικνυνται, τοὺς τύπους ἐκάστων ἐνσφρα-γιζόμεναι, καὶ τὸ ὅμοιον ἐνεργαζόμεναι πάθος·

ON THE CREATION, 164-166

intemperance gives a like welcome to superfluity and extravagance, which induce softness and voluptuousness in soul and body, and these result in the culpable life, the life that in the view of right-minded people is worse than death.

LIX. Pleasure does not venture to bring her wiles and deceptions to bear on the man, but on the woman, and by her means on him. This is a telling and well-made point : for in us mind corresponds to man, the senses to woman ; and pleasure encounters and holds parley with the senses first, and through them cheats with her quackeries the sovereign mind itself : for when each sense has been subjugated to her sorceries, delighting in what she proffers, the sense of sight in variegated colours and shapes, that of hearing in harmonious sounds, that of taste in delicate savours, and that of scent in the fragrance of perfumes which it inhales, then all of them receive the gifts and offer them like handmaids to the Reason as to a master, bringing with them Persuasion to plead that it reject nothing whatever. Reason is forthwith ensnared and becomes a subject instead of a ruler, a slave instead of a master, an alien instead of a citizen, and a mortal instead of an immortal. In a word we must never lose sight of the fact that Pleasure, being a courtesan and a wanton, eagerly desires to meet with a lover, and searches for panders, by whose means she shall get one on her hook. It is the senses that act as panders for her and procure the lover. When she has ensnared these she easily brings the Mind under her control. To it, dwelling within us, the senses convey the things seen without, reporting them fully and making them manifest, impressing on it the forms of the several objects, and producing in it

PHILO

κηρῶ γὰρ εἰκῶς δέχεται τὰς διὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων φαντασίας, αἷς τὰ σώματα καταλαμβάνει δι' αὐτοῦ μὴ δυνάμενος, καθάπερ εἶπον ἤδη.

- 167 LX. Τὰ δ' ἐπίχειρα τῆς ἡδονῆς εὐθὺς εὐραντο οἱ πρῶτοι γενόμενοι δοῦλοι χαλεποῦ καὶ δυσιάτου πάθους· ἡ μὲν γυνή σφοδρὰς ἀνίας ἐνδεξαμένη τὰς ἐν ὠδίσι, καὶ τὰς παρὰ τὸν ἄλλον βίον λύπας ἐπαλλήλους, καὶ μάλιστα τὰς ἐπὶ τέκνοις γεννωμένοις καὶ τρεφομένοις καὶ νοσοῦσι καὶ ὑγιαίνουσι καὶ εὐτυχοῦσι καὶ ἀτυχοῦσιν, εἶτ' ἀφαίρεσιν ἐλευθερίας καὶ τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ συνόντος ἀνδρὸς δεσποτείαν, οὐ τοῖς ἐπιτάγμασι πειθαρχεῖν ἀναγκαῖον· ὁ δ' ἀνὴρ ἐν μέρει πόνους καὶ ταλαιπωρίας καὶ συνεχεῖς ἰδρῶτας ἔνεκα πορισμοῦ τῶν ἀναγκαίων καὶ στέρησιν μὲν τῶν αὐτομάτων ἀγαθῶν, ἅπερ ἐδιδάχθη φέρειν ἢ γῆ δίχα γεωργικῆς ἐπιστήμης, ἀτρύτων δὲ μετουσίαν καμάτων εἰς ζήτησιν βίου καὶ τροφῆς ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ λιμῶ παραπολέσθαι·
- 168 οἶμαι γὰρ ἂν ὥσπερ ἥλιον καὶ σελήνην αἰεὶ φωσφορεῖν ἅπαξ κελευσθέντας ἅμα τῇ πρώτῃ γενέσει τοῦ παντός, καὶ τὸ θεῖον πρόσταγμα διατηρεῖν
- [41] οὐδενὸς ἑτέρου χάριν ἢ ὅτι | τῶν ὄρων οὐρανοῦ μακρὰν κακία πεφυγάδευται· τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ τῆς γῆς τὴν βαθεῖαν καὶ καρποφόρον, ἄνευ τέχνης καὶ συμπράξεως γεωπόνων ἀνδρῶν, φέρειν ἂν πολλὴν ἀφθονίαν κατὰ τὰς ἐτησίους ὥρας. νυνὶ δὲ αἱ ἀέναοι πηγαὶ τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ χαρίτων ἐπεσκέθησαν, ὅτε ἤρξατο κακία τὰς ἀρετὰς

ON THE CREATION, 166-168

the corresponding affection. For it resembles wax, and receives the images that reach it through the senses, by which it apprehends material substances, being incapable, as I have said before, of doing this by itself.

LX. Those who were the first to become slaves to a passion grievous and hard to heal at once had experience of the wages paid by Pleasure. The woman incurred the violent woes of travail-pangs, and the griefs which come one after another all through the remainder of life. Chief among them are all those that have to do with children at birth and in their bringing up, in sickness and in health, in good fortune and evil fortune. In the next place she tasted deprivation of liberty, and the authority of the husband at her side, whose commands she must perforce obey. The man, in his turn, incurred labours and distress in the unceasing sweat of his brow to gain the necessaries of life. He was without those good things which the earth had been taught to bear of itself independently of all skill in the husbandman. His life was spent in unbroken toils in the pursuit of food and livelihood to save him from perishing by famine. For I imagine that, just as sun and moon always give their light after once for all being bidden to do so when the universe was first created, and continue to keep the divine ordinance for no other reason than that evil has been sent into exile far away from heaven's frontiers ; even so would earth's deep and fertile soil, unaided by the skill of agricultural labourers, bear rich abundance as the seasons come round. As it is, when evil began to get the better of the virtues, the ever-flowing springs of the bounties of God were closed, that they might not παρευημερεῖν, ἵνα μὴ ὡς ἀναξίοις χορηγῶσιν.

PHILO

 169 ἔδει μὲν οὖν τὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων γένος, εἰ τὴν
 ἀρμόττουσαν ἔμελλε δίκην ὑπομένειν, ἠφανίσθαι
 διὰ τὴν πρὸς τὸν εὐεργέτην καὶ σωτήρα θεὸν ἀχαριστίαν· ὁ δ', ἅτε τὴν φύσιν ἔλεως, οἶκτον
 λαβὼν ἐμετρίασε τὴν τιμωρίαν, τὸ μὲν γένος
 ἑάσας διαμένειν, τὰς δὲ τροφὰς οὐκέθ' ὁμοίως
 ἐξ ἑτοίμου παρασχών, ἵνα μὴ δυσὶ κακοῖς, ἀργίᾳ
 καὶ κόρῳ, χρώμενοι πλημμελῶσι καὶ ὑβρίζωσι.

170 LXI. τοιοῦτος μὲν ὁ βίος τῶν ἐν
 ἀρχῇ μὲν ἀκακία καὶ ἀπλότῃτι χρωμένων, αὐθις δὲ κακίαν ἀντ' ἀρετῆς προτιμώντων.

Διὰ δὲ τῆς λεχθείσης κοσμοποιίας πολλὰ μὲν
 καὶ ἄλλα ἡμᾶς ἀναδιδάσκει, πέντε δὲ τὰ κάλλιστα
 καὶ πάντων ἄριστα· πρῶτον μὲν ὅτι
 ἔστι τὸ θεῖον καὶ ὑπάρχει, διὰ τοὺς ἀθέους, ὧν
 οἱ μὲν ἐνεδοίασαν ἐπαμφοτερίσαντες περὶ τῆς ὑπάρξεως αὐτοῦ, οἱ δὲ τολμηρότεροι καὶ κατεθρασύναντο φάμενοι μηδ' ὄλως εἶναι, λέγεσθαι
 δ' αὐτὸ μόνον πρὸς ἀνθρώπων πλάσμασι μυθικοῖς 171 ἐπισκiasάντων τὴν ἀλήθειαν· δεύτερον

δ' ὅτι θεὸς εἷς ἐστι, διὰ τοὺς εἰσηγητὰς τῆς πολυθεοῦ δόξης, οἱ οὐκ ἐρυθριῶσι τὴν φαυλοτάτην
 τῶν κακοπολιτειῶν ὀχλοκρατίαν ἀπὸ γῆς εἰς
 οὐρανὸν μετοικίζοντες· τρίτον δ' ὡς ἤδη
 λέλεκται ὅτι γενητὸς ὁ κόσμος, διὰ τοὺς οἰομένους
 αὐτὸν ἀγένητον καὶ αἰδιον εἶναι, οἱ πλέον οὐδὲν ἀπονέμουσι θεῷ· τέταρτον δ' ὅτι καὶ
 εἷς ἐστὶν ὁ κόσμος, ἐπειδὴ καὶ εἷς ὁ δημιουργὸς <ὁ> ἐξομοιώσας αὐτῷ κατὰ τὴν μόνωσιν τὸ ἔργον,

ON THE CREATION, 168-171

bring supplies to those felt to be undeserving of them. If the human race had had to undergo the fitting penalty; it must needs have been wiped out by reason of its ingratitude to God its benefactor and preserver. But He being merciful took pity on it and moderated the punishment, suffering the race to continue, but no longer as before supplying it with food ready to its hand, that men might not, by indulging the twin evils of idleness and satiety, wax insolent in wrongdoing. LXI. Such is the life of those who at the outset are in enjoyment of innocence and simplicity of character, but later on prefer vice to virtue.

By his account of the creation of the world of which we have spoken Moses teaches us among many other things five that are fairest and best of all.

Firstly that the Deity is and has been from eternity. This with a view to atheists, some of whom have hesitated and have been of two minds about His eternal existence, while the bolder sort have carried their audacity to the point of declaring that the Deity does not exist at all, but that it is a mere assertion of men obscuring the truth with myth and fiction.

Secondly, that God is one. This with a view to the propounders of polytheism, who do not blush to transfer from earth to heaven mob-rule, that worst of evil polities.

Thirdly, as I have said already, that the world came into being. This because of those who think that it is without beginning and eternal, who thus assign to God no superiority at all.

Fourthly, that the world too is one as well as its Maker, who made His work like Himself in its uniqueness, who

PHILO

ὅς ἀπάσῃ κατεχρήσατο τῇ ὕλῃ εἰς τὴν τοῦ ὄλου
γένεσιν· ὄλον γὰρ οὐκ ἂν ἦν, εἰ μὴ ἐξ ὄλων
ἐπάγη καὶ συνέστη τῶν μερῶν. εἰσὶ γὰρ οἱ
πλείους ὑπολαμβάνοντες εἶναι κόσμους, οἱ δὲ
καὶ ἀπείρους, ἄπειροι καὶ ἀνεπιστήμονες αὐτοὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ὄντες ὧν καλὸν ἐπιστήμην ἔχειν·
πέμπτον δ' ὅτι καὶ προνοεῖ τοῦ
κόσμου ὁ θεός· ἐπιμελεῖσθαι γὰρ αἰεὶ τὸ πεποιηκὸς 172 τοῦ γενομένου φύσεως νόμοις καὶ θεσμοῖς ἀναγ-
[42] καῖον, καθ' οὓς καὶ γονεῖς τέκνων | προμηθοῦνται.
ὁ δὴ ταῦτα μὴ ἀκοῇ μᾶλλον ἢ διανοίᾳ
προμαθὼν καὶ ἐν τῇ αὐτοῦ ψυχῇ σφραγισάμενος θαυμάσια καὶ περιμάχητα εἶδη, καὶ ὅτι ἔστι καὶ ὑπάρχει θεὸς καὶ ὅτι εἰς ὃ ὧν ὄντως ἐστὶ καὶ ὅτι
πεποίηκε τὸν κόσμον καὶ πεποίηκεν ἕνα, ὡς
ἐλέχθη, κατὰ τὴν μόνωσιν ἐξομοιώσας ἑαυτῷ,
καὶ ὅτι αἰεὶ προνοεῖ τοῦ γεγονότος, μακαρίαν καὶ εὐδαίμονα ζωὴν βιώσεται, δόγμασιν εὐσεβείας καὶ ὁσιότητος χαραχθεῖς.

---

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 476.

ON THE CREATION, 171-172

used up for the creation of the whole all the material that exists ; for it would not have been a whole had it not been formed and consisted of parts that were wholes. For there are those who suppose that there are more worlds than one, while some think that they are infinite in number. Such men are themselves in very deed infinitely lacking in knowledge of things which it is right good to know.<sup>a</sup> Fifthly, that God also exercises forethought on the world's behalf. For that the Maker should care for the thing made is required by the laws and ordinances of Nature, and it is in accordance with these that parents take thought beforehand for children.

He that has begun by learning these things with his understanding rather than with his hearing, and has stamped on his soul impressions of truths so marvellous and priceless, both that God is and is from eternity, and that He that really is is One, and that He has made the world and has made it one world, unique as Himself is unique, and that He ever exercises forethought for His creation, will lead a life of bliss and blessedness, because he has a character moulded by the truths that piety and holiness enforce.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETA-TION OF GENESIS II., III.
(LEGUM ALLEGORIA)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION TO BOOK I.

IN 1-18 Philo deals with Gen. ii. 1-3, which tells first of the completion of Heaven and Earth. He takes these to mean the originals of Mind and Sense-perception, and bases on the Greek version a contrast between the numbers 6 and 7, making the former represent things earthly, and the latter things heavenly.

In Gen. ii. 2 he finds the origin of Mind and Sense-perception ascribed first to a Book and then to a Day, both Book and Day signifying the Mind or Reason of God. (19-21.)

In the repetition of the word "field" in Gen. ii. 5; he sees two fields yielding, respectively, what is intellectually and what is sensibly perceptible: in the rain the power given to the senses of apprehending objects presented to them, a power not needed when material objects did not exist, and in whose absence the Mind is without employment. (22-27.)

Gen. ii. 6 tells how Mind, the "spring," waters the senses, "the face of the earth," and shows the interdependence of Mind, Sense-perception, and object of sense, and the dependence of Mind on God; as well as the superiority of the living creature in being able to take in and go out to external object. (28-30.)

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I.

Going on to Gen. ii. 7, he contrasts the earthy man, moulded of clay by the Divine Artificer, with the heavenly Man, stamped with the image of God, and dwells on the change wrought in the former by the inbreathing of Life. He then answers four questions.

To the question why the Divine Breath is given, not to the heavenly, but to the earthy Man, he answers (a) that God loves to give, even to the imperfect; (b) that the inbreathing is on a par with the enjoining of a "positive" duty, which is a duty only because it is enjoined.

To the question as to the meaning of "inbreathed" he answers that it is a pregnant term for "inspired," and that its aim is to enable us to conceive of God.

To the question why the inbreathing is "into the face," he answers (a) that the face is the part where the senses are chiefly situated; (b) that the face represents the mind, which acts as God's deputy in inspiring organs and senses. Such was Moses to Pharaoh. He is thus led to speak of God's use of agents. Lastly, he says that πνοή intimates a less powerful gift than would have been intimated by πνεῦμα. (31-42.)

We now come to Gen. ii. 8. God planting a Garden shows earthly wisdom to be a copy of heavenly wisdom, for it means God causing excellence to strike root on earth. The "Garden" is Virtue. "Eden" tells of its luxuriant yield of happiness. It is "toward the sunrising," for right reason or virtue ever rises to dispel darkness. Man is placed in the Garden "to tend it," i.e. to give his whole mind to virtue.

PHILO

God planting does not justify man in planting a grove by the altar, which is forbidden in Deut. xvi. 21, for (a) man cannot, like God, plant virtues in the soul; (b) a grove contains some wild trees; (c) what is prohibited is planting "to ourselves" (cf. 2nd Commandment).

It is somewhat startling to be told that the Man placed in the Garden in Gen. ii. 15 is not the Man of Gen. ii. 8, but the Man of Gen. i. 27. Only the latter can till and guard the virtues. The former sees them only to be driven from them. The one is "made," the other is "moulded." The Man of ii. 8 has but facility in apprehending (as is signified by the words "placed in the Garden"). The Man of ii. 15 has also persistence in doing ("to till it"), and tenacity in keeping ("to guard it"). (43-55.)

Gen. ii. 9 tells of the Trees, which are particular virtues, and their activities. Theoretical virtue is denoted by "fair to behold"; practical virtue by "good for food." The Tree of Life is goodness, virtue, not (as physicians might suppose) the heart. It is "in the midst of the Garden." Where "the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil" is, we are not told. Actually it is in the Garden, virtually outside it, for our dominant part is actually in God's Garden through receiving the impress of goodness, virtually outside by receiving that of wickedness. Just so, my body can be here, my mind elsewhere. (56-62.)

The theme of Gen. ii. 10-14 is the Rivers. The four Rivers are the particular Virtues, effluxes of generic Virtue, the River that issues from "Eden," which is the Wisdom or Reason of God. "Heads" implies the sovereignty of the Virtues: "separated";

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I.

their limited, defining, action. "Pheison" is Prudence, God's fairest treasure, gleaming like gold, and encircling "Evilat" or Graciousness. "Geon" is Courage, beleaguering Ethiopia, which is Lowness or Cowardice. "Tigris" is Self-mastery, set against "Assyria," the directing force claimed by Desire. Prudence, Courage, and Self-mastery occupy places in the soul corresponding to their spheres of action in the body, head, breast, and abdomen, the seats of Reason, High Spirit, and Lust. "Euphrates" (= fruitfulness) is Justice, or the harmony of the three parts of the soul.

We are then shown another way of reaching the same truth about the four Rivers. "Pheison" signifies "change of mouth," i.e. transformation of speech into action, the true sign of Prudence. "Evilat" signifies "in travail," as Folly in its futility always is. (63-76.)

The next eight sections (Gen. ii. 12) are a Note on the Gold and Precious Stones. Prudence, the gold, is still God's, Philo taking "where" (οὗ) as "whose". "The gold of that land" is universal, as distinguished from particular, Prudence, and to it belongs the epithet "good." The "ruby" and the "emerald" represent respectively having and exercising good sense. Or the two stones are, perhaps, Judah and Issachar, representing, the one, thankfulness, the other, noble deeds. So in the High-priestly robes, the ruby must, from its position, have borne the name of Judah, and the sapphire that of Issachar. "Stone" is not added after "ruby," because praise and thanksgiving lift a man out of himself and all that is of earth. Red befits Judah, green Issachar. (77-84.)

PHILO

Now comes a short Note on Compassing (Gen. ii. 11 and 13). "Pheison" and "Geon" are said to "compass" countries, for Prudence and Courage enclose and capture Folly and Cowardice. "Tigris" is said to be "over against the Assyrians," for Self-mastery can but face and fight Pleasure. "Euphrates," or Justice, neither encircles nor withstands but makes awards. (85-87).

In 88 f. we see the heavenly Man, the Man whom God had "made" not "moulded," placed in the garden. This pure and less material Mind is set amid the Virtues ("plants") to practise ("till") and remember ("guard") them.

The remainder of the treatise deals with the injunction to "Adam" in Gen. ii. 16 ff.

Since "Adam," a name not self-imposed, signifies "earth," probably the "moulded, earthy man" is meant. Moreover the heavenly Man needs no injunction to till and guard; still less does he need prohibition or exhortation.

The command is given by "the Lord God." Obedience to the "Lord" or 'Master' prepares us for boons from "God" the 'Benefactor.' So in Gen. iii. 23 punishment is inflicted by "the Lord God" in kind severity.

"Every tree" signifies all virtues. The addition of "feedingly" to "eat" signifies spiritual mastication. Eating represents perfunctory obedience: "feeding on," thoughtful, hearty obedience.

Anent the position of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, illustrations of actual and virtual presence are given in 100.

The fact that the prohibition is addressed to more than one is explained by saying that (a) inferior men are very numerous ; (b) the inferior man devoid of concentration is not a unity.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I.

The treatise ends with the drawing of a distinction between the death which all die and the death of the soul.

ΝΟΜΩΝ ΙΕΡΩΝ ΑΛΛΗΓΟΡΙΑΣ
ΤΩΝ ΜΕΤΑ ΤΗΝ ΕΞΑΗΜΕΡΟΝ ΤΟ
ΠΡΩΤΟΝ

<sup>1</sup>
[43] I. “Καὶ συνετελέσθησαν ὁ οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ γῆ καὶ πᾶς ὁ κόσμος αὐτῶν” (Gen. ii. 1). νοῦ καὶ
αἰσθήσεως γένεσιν εἰπὼν πάλαι, νῦν δὴ ἀμφοτέρων
τελείωσιν διασυνίστησιν. οὔτε δὲ νοῦν τὸν ἄτομον
οὔτε αἴσθησιν τὴν ἐν μέρει πέρας εἰληφέναι φησίν, ἀλλ’ ἰδέας, τὴν μὲν νοῦ, τὴν δὲ αἰσθήσεως· συμ-βολικῶς μὲν γὰρ τὸν νοῦν οὐρανόν, ἐπειδὴ αἶνοηταὶ φύσεις ἐν οὐρανῷ, τὴν δὲ αἴσθησιν καλεῖ γῆν,
ὅτι σύστασιν σωματοειδῆ καὶ γεωδεστέραν ἔλαχεν
αἴσθησις· κόσμος δὲ νοῦ μὲν τὰ ἀσώματα καὶ νοητὰ πάντα, αἰσθήσεως δὲ τὰ ἐνσώματα καὶ
ὅσα συνόλως αἰσθητά.

<sup>2</sup>
[44] II. “Καὶ συνετέλεσεν ὁ θεὸς τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἕκτῃ
τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ ἃ ἐποίησεν” (Gen. ii. 2). εὐήθες
πάνυ τὸ οἶεσθαι ἐξ ἡμέραις ἢ καθόλου χρόνῳ
γεγονέναι τὸν κόσμον· διὰ τί; ὅτι πᾶς χρόνος
ἡμερῶν καὶ νυκτῶν ἐστι σύστημα, ταῦτα δὲ
ἡλίου κίνησις ὑπὲρ γῆν καὶ ὑπὸ γῆν ἰόντος ἐξ

---

<sup>a</sup> κόσμος = “order” or “world.” Philo takes it in the latter sense. E.V. “host.”

<sup>b</sup> 6th. So LXX. E.V. 7th.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION OF GENESIS II., III.

BOOK I

I. "And the heaven and the earth and all their world were completed" (Gen. ii. 1). He had already told of the creation of mind and sense-perception; he now fully sets forth the consummation of both. He does not say that either the individual mind or the particular sense-perception have reached completion, but that the originals have done so, that of mind and that of sense-perception. For using symbolical language he calls the mind heaven, since heaven is the abode of natures discerned only by mind, but sense-perception he calls earth, because sense-perception possesses a composition of a more earthly and body-like sort. "World,"<sup>a</sup> in the case of mind, means all incorporeal things, things discerned by mind alone: in the case of sense-perception it denotes things in bodily form and generally whatever sense perceives.

II. "And God finished on the sixth<sup>b</sup> day His works which He had made" (Gen. ii. 2). It is quite foolish to think that the world was created in six days or in a space of time at all. Why? Because every period of time is a series of days and nights, and these can only be made such by the movement of the sun as it goes over and under the earth: but

PHILO

ἀνάγκης ἀποτελεῖ· ἥλιος δὲ μέρος οὐρανοῦ γέγονεν, ὥστε χρόνον ἀνομολογεῖσθαι νεώτερον κόσμου. λέγεται ἂν οὖν ὀρθῶς, ὅτι οὐκ ἐν χρόνῳ γέγονε κόσμος, ἀλλὰ διὰ κόσμου συνέστη χρόνος· ἡ γὰρ
3 οὐρανοῦ κίνησις χρόνου φύσιν ἔδειξεν. ὅταν οὖν λέγη “συνετέλεσεν ἕκτη ἡμέρα τὰ ἔργα,” νοητέον ὅτι οὐ πλήθος ἡμερῶν παραλαμβάνει, τέλειον δὲ ἀριθμὸν τὸν ἕξ, ἐπειδὴ πρῶτος ἴσος ἐστὶ τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ μέρεσιν, ἡμίσει καὶ τρίτῳ καὶ ἕκτῳ, καὶ ἀπὸ ἑτερομήκους συνίσταται τοῦ δις τρία· δυὰς μέντοι καὶ τριάς ἐκβέβηκε τὴν κατὰ τὸ ἐν ἀσωματότητα, ὅτι ἡ μὲν ὕλης ἐστὶν εἰκῶν, διαιρουμένη καὶ τεμνομένη καθάπερ ἐκείνη, τριάς δὲ στερεοῦ
4 σώματος, ὅτι περὶ τριχῆ τὸ στερεὸν διαιρετόν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ συγγενῆς ἐστὶ ταῖς τῶν ὀργανικῶν ζώων κινήσεσιν· ἐξαχῆ γὰρ τὸ ὀργανικὸν σῶμα πέφυκε κινεῖσθαι, πρόσω καὶ κατόπιν, ἄνω καὶ κάτω, ἐπὶ δεξιὰ καὶ εὐώνυμα. βούλεται οὖν τά τε θνητὰ γένη καὶ πάλιν αὐτὰ τὰ ἄφθαρτα κατὰ τοὺς οἰκειοὺς ἐπιδείξαι συστάνα ἀριθμούς, τὰ μὲν θνητὰ ὡς ἔφην παραμετρῶν ἐξάδι, τὰ δὲ
5 μακάρια καὶ εὐδαίμονα ἑβδομάδι. πρῶτον οὖν ἐβδόμη ἡμέρα καταπαύσας τὴν τῶν θνητῶν σύστασιν ἀρχεται ἐτέρων θειοτέρων διατυπώσεως· III. παύεται γὰρ οὐδέποτε ποιῶν ὁ θεός, ἀλλ’ ὥσπερ ἴδιον τὸ καίειν πυρὸς καὶ χιόνος τὸ ψύχειν, οὕτως καὶ θεοῦ τὸ ποιεῖν· καὶ πολὺ γε

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 477.

<sup>b</sup> Aristotle, Ethics iii. 1. 6, and Grant's note.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 2-5

the sun is a part of heaven, so that time is confessedly more recent than the world. It would therefore be correct to say that the world was not made in time, but that time was formed by means of the world, for it was heaven's movement that was the index of the nature of time. When, then, Moses says, "He finished His work on the sixth day," we must understand him to be adducing not a quantity of days, but a perfect number, namely six, since it is the first that is equal to the sum of its own fractions  $\frac{1}{2}$ ,  $\frac{1}{3}$ , and  $\frac{1}{6}$ , and is produced by the multiplication of two unequal factors,<sup>a</sup>  $2 \times 3$ ; and see, the numbers 2 and 3 have left behind the incorporeal character that belongs to 1, 2 being an image of matter, and being parted and divided as that is, while 3 is the image of a solid body, for the solid is patient of a threefold division. Nay more, the number 6 is akin to the movements of animals provided with instrumental limbs,<sup>b</sup> for the body equipped with such instruments is so constituted by nature that it can move in six directions, forwards and backwards, upwards and downwards, to the right and to the left. Moses' wish, therefore, is to exhibit alike the things created of mortal kind and those that are incorruptible as having been formed in a way corresponding to their proper numbers. As I have just said, he makes mortal things parallel with the number six, the happy and blessed things with the number seven.

First of all, then, on the seventh day the Creator, having brought to an end the formation of mortal things, begins the shaping of others more divine. III. For God never leaves off making, but even as it is the property of fire to burn and of snow to chill, so it is the property of God to make: nay more so

PHILO

μᾶλλον, ὅσω καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν ἀρχὴ τοῦ
 6 δρᾶν ἔστιν. εὖ μέντοι καὶ τὸ φάναι “κατέπαυσεν,” οὐχὶ “ἐπαύσατο”· παύει μὲν γὰρ τὰ δοκοῦντα
 ποιεῖν οὐκ ἐνεργοῦντα, οὐ παύεται δὲ ποιῶν αὐτός.
 διὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει “κατέπαυσεν ὧν ἤρξατο”· ὅσα
 μὲν γὰρ ταῖς ἡμετέραις τέχναις δημιουργεῖται, τελειωθέντα ἴσονται καὶ μένει, ὅσα δὲ ἐπιστήμη
 θεοῦ, περατωθέντα πάλιν κινεῖται· τὰ γὰρ τέλη
 αὐτῶν ἐτέρων εἰσὶν ἀρχαί, οἷον ἡμέρας τέλος
 νυκτὸς ἀρχή, καὶ μῆνα δὲ καὶ ἐνιαυτὸν ἐνισταμένους
 [45] | πέρατα δῆπου τῶν ἐξηκόντων ὑποληπτέον·
 7 γένεσις τε αὐτῶν φθειρομένων ἐτέρων καὶ φθορὰ γεννω-μένων ἄλλων ἀποτελεῖται, ὥστε ἀληθὲς εἶναι τὸ λεγόμενον ὅτι

θνήσκει δ' οὐδὲν τῶν γιγνομένων, διακρινόμενον δ' ἄλλο πρὸς ἄλλο
 μορφήν ἑτέραν ἀπέδειξεν.

8 IV. Χαίρει δὲ ἡ φύσις ἐβδομάδι· πλάνητές τε
 γὰρ ἑπτὰ γεγόνασιν, ἀντίτροποι τῇ κατὰ ταῦτά
 καὶ ὡσαύτως ἐχούσῃ φορᾷ· καὶ ἄρκτος ἑπτὰ
 ἄστροις συμπληροῦται, κοινωνίας καὶ ἐνώσεως ἀνθρώπων, οὐκ ἐπιμιξίας αὐτὸ μόνον, οὔσα αἰτία·
 καὶ τροπαὶ δὲ σελήνης ἐβδομάσι γίνονται, συμ-παθεστάτου πρὸς τὰ ἐπίγεια ἄστρου, καὶ ἄς κατὰ
 τὸν αέρα μεταβολὰς ἐργάζεται, μάλιστα τοῖς
 9 καθ' ἐβδομάδα σχηματισμοῖς ἀποτελεῖ. τά γε μὴν

<sup>a</sup> Eurip. fr. 839.

<sup>b</sup> 8-16. Cf. De Op. 89-128.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 5-9

by far, inasmuch as He is to all besides the source of action. Excellently, moreover, does Moses say "caused to rest" not "rested"; for He causes to rest that which, though actually not in operation, is apparently making, but He Himself never ceases making. For this reason Moses adds after "He caused to rest" the words "from what He had begun." For whereas things produced by human arts when finished stand still and remain as they are, the products of divine skill, when completed, begin again to move; for their endings are the beginnings of other things, as the end of day is the beginning of night, and the openings of a month and of a year must naturally be regarded as limits which close those which have elapsed: birth again is accomplished through other things decaying, and decay through fresh births, showing the truth of the saying:

Naught that is born doth ever die,
Its severed parts together fly,
And yield another shape.<sup>a</sup>

IV. <sup>b</sup> Nature takes delight in the number seven. Thus there are seven planets, the counterpoise to the uniform movement of the fixed stars. It is in seven stars that the bear reaches completeness, and gives rise not to commerce only but to fellowship and unity among men. The changes of the moon, again, occur by sevens: this is the luminary most sympathetic to earthly matters. And such changes as Nature produces in the atmosphere, she effects mainly by the influence of figures dominated by seven.<sup>c</sup> Indeed, <sup>a</sup> The reference is to the Planets (De Op. 113), to the Pleiades (115), whose settings and risings rule sowing and reaping, and to the Equinoxes (116). The subject of ἐργάζεται is ἡ φύσις at the opening of the section.

PHILO

- θητά, σπάσαντα ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ θείαν ἀρχήν, καθ' ἑβδομάδα σωτηρίως κινεῖται· τίς γὰρ οὐκ οἶδεν, ὅτι τῶν βρεφῶν τὰ μὲν ἐπτάμηνα γόνιμα, τὰ δὲ πλείω χρόνον προσλαβόντα, ὡς ὀκτῶ μῆνας ἐνδια-
- 10 τηθῆναι γαστρί, κατὰ τὸ πλείστον ἄγονα; λογικόν τέ φασιν ἄνθρωπον κατὰ τὴν πρώτην ἑπταετίαν γίνεσθαι, ὅτε ἤδη ἱκανός ἐστιν ἐρμηνεύς εἶναι τῶν συνήθων ὀνομάτων καὶ ῥημάτων, τὴν λογικὴν ἕξιν περιπεποιημένος, κατὰ δὲ τὴν δευτέραν ἑπταετίαν ἄκρως τελειοῦσθαι· τελείωσις δὲ ἐστὶ δύναμις τῆς τοῦ ὁμοίου σπορᾶς· περὶ γὰρ τὴν τετταρεσκαί-δεκαετῆ ἡλικίαν τὸ ὅμοιον γεννᾶν δυνάμεθα· τρίτη πάλιν ἑπταετία πέρασ ἐστὶν αὐξήσεως· ἄχρι γὰρ ἑνὸς καὶ εἴκοσιν ἐτῶν ἐπιδίδωσιν εἰς μέγεθος ἄνθρωπος, καὶ καλεῖται παρὰ πολλοῖς ὁ χρόνος
- 11 οὗτος ἀκμή· ψυχῆς γε μὴν τὸ ἄλογον ἑπταμερές, αἰσθήσεις πέντε καὶ φωνητήριον ὄργανον καὶ τὸ διῆκον ἄχρι παραστατῶν, ὃ δὴ γόνιμόν ἐστι.
- 12 πάλιν αὖ σώματος ἑπτὰ κινήσεις, ὀργανικαὶ μὲν ἕξ, ἑβδόμη δὲ ἡ κύκλω· σπλάγχνα γε μὴν ἑπτὰ· στόμαχος, καρδία, σπλήν, ἥπαρ, πνεύμων, νεφροὶ δύο· μέλη δὲ σώματος ὁμοίως ἰσάριθμα· κεφαλὴ, τράχηλος, στέρνον, χεῖρες, κοιλία, ἦτρον, πόδες· τό τε ἡγεμονικώτατον τοῦ ζώου πρόσωπον ἑπταχῆ κατατέτρηται, δυσὶν ὀφθαλμοῖς καὶ ὡσὶ δυσὶν,
- 13 ἴσοις μυκτῆρσιν, ἑβδόμῳ στόματι· αἶ τε ἀποκρίσεις ἑπτὰ· δάκρυα, μύξαι, σίελος, σπέρμα, διττοὶ περιττωμάτων ὄχετοί, καὶ δι' ὄλου τοῦ σώματος ἰδρώς· ἐν γε μὴν ταῖς νόσοις κριτικωτάτῃ ἑβδομάς· καὶ γυναιξὶ δὲ αἱ καταμήνιοι καθάρσεις ἄχρι ἑβδομάδος παρατείνουσιν.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 9-13

all that concerns us mortals has a divine origin drawn from heaven and is for our weal when its movement is ruled by seven. Who does not know that seven months' infants come to the birth, while those that have taken a longer time, remaining in the womb eight months, are as a rule still-born? And they say that man becomes a reasoning being during his first seven years, by which time he is already capable of expressing ordinary nouns and verbs through having acquired the reasoning faculty; and that during his second period of seven years he reaches complete consummation; consummation meaning the power of reproducing his like; for at about the age of fourteen we are able to beget offspring like ourselves. The third period of seven years, again, is the end of growth, for till the age of twenty-one years men increase in height, and by many this time is called his prime. Furthermore the unreasoning side of the soul consists of seven parts, five senses, and the organ of speech, and the genital organ. The body again has seven movements, six mechanical, the seventh circular. Seven also are the internal organs, stomach, heart, spleen, liver, lung, two kidneys. Of equal number in like number are the divisions of the body—head, neck, breast, hands, belly, abdomen, feet. And the face, the living creature's noblest part, is pierced by seven apertures, by two eyes, and two ears, as many nostrils, and the mouth, which make up seven. The excrements are seven—tears, mucus, spittle, seed, superfluities discharged by two ducts, and the sweat that oozes from all over the body. Once again in diseases the seventh is the most critical day. And the monthly purgings of women extend to seven days.

V. The power

PHILO

- <sup>14</sup>
[46] V. διελέλυθε δὲ ἡ | δύναμις αὐτῆς καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς
ὠφελιμωτάτας τῶν τεχνῶν· ἐν γοῦν γραμματικῇ
τὰ ἄριστα τῶν στοιχείων καὶ πλείστην δύναμιν ἔχοντα ἑπτὰ ἐστὶν ἀριθμῶ, τὰ φωνήεντα· κατὰ τε
μουσικῆν ἢ ἑπτάχορδος λύρα πάντων σχεδὸν
ὀργάνων ἀρίστη, διότι τὸ ἑναρμόνιον, ὃ δὴ τῶν μελωδουμένων γενῶν ἐστὶ τὸ σεμνότατον, κατ'
αὐτὴν μάλιστα πως θεωρεῖται· τὰς τε τῶν φθόγγων τάσεις ἑπτὰ εἶναι συμβέβηκεν, ὄξύν, βαρύν, περι-15 σπώμενον, δασύν, ψιλόν, μακρόν, βραχύν. ἔτι
πρώτός ἐστιν ἀπὸ τελείου τοῦ ἕξ καὶ μονάδι κατὰ
τινα λόγον ὁ αὐτός. οἱ τε ἐντὸς δεκάδος ἀριθμοὶ
ἢ γεννῶνται ἢ γεννῶσι τοὺς ἐντὸς δεκάδος καὶ
αὐτήν, ἢ δὲ ἑβδομάς οὔτε γεννᾷ τινα τῶν ἐντὸς
δεκάδος ἀριθμῶν οὔτε γεννᾶται ὑπὸ τινος· παρὸ
μυθεύοντες οἱ Πυθαγόρειοι τῇ ἀειπαρθένῳ καὶ ἀμήτορι αὐτὴν ἀπεικάζουσιν, ὅτι οὔτε ἀπεκνήθη
οὔτε ἀποτεξεται.
- 16 VI. “ Κατέπαυσεν οὖν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἑβδόμῃ ἀπὸ
πάντων τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦ ὧν ἐποίησε ” (Gen. ii. 2).
τοῦτο δ' ἐστὶ τοιοῦτο· τὰ θνητὰ γένη παύεται
πλάττων ὁ θεός, ὅταν ἀρχῆται ποιεῖν τὰ θεῖα καὶ
ἑβδομάδος φύσει οἰκεῖα. ἢ δὲ πρὸς τὸ ἦθος ἀπόδοσίς ἐστι τοιαύτη· ὅταν ἐπιγένηται τῇ ψυχῇ
ὁ κατὰ ἑβδομάδα ἅγιος λόγος, ἐπέχεται ἢ ἐξᾶς
καὶ ὅσα θνητὰ ταύτη<sup>1</sup> ποιεῖν δοκεῖ.

VII. “ Καὶ εὐλόγησεν ὁ θεὸς τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν

<sup>1</sup> ταύτη (sc. τῇ ἑξάδι) conj. Cohn : τουτὶ mss.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 14-16

of this number reaches also to the most beneficent of the arts : in grammar, for instance, the best and most effective of the letters, namely the vowels, are seven in number : in music we may fairly call the seven-stringed lyre the best of instruments, because the enharmonic genus, which as we know is the most dignified of those used in melodies, is best brought out when that instrument renders it. Sevenfold are the modulations in pronunciation—acute, grave, circumflex, aspirated and unaspirated, long, short. Further, seven is the first number after the perfect number six, and the same in some sort with the number one. Whereas other numbers within the decade are either produced by or produce those within the decade and the decade itself, the number seven neither produces any of the numbers within the decade nor is produced by any. By reason of this the Pythagoreans, indulging in myth, liken seven to the motherless and ever-virgin Maiden, because neither was she born of the womb nor shall she ever bear.

VI. “He rested<sup>a</sup> therefore on the seventh day from all His works which He had made” (Gen. ii. 2). This is as much as to say that God ceases moulding the masses that are mortal, whenever He begins to make those that are divine and in keeping with the nature of seven. But the interpretation of the statement in accordance with its bearing on human life and character is this, that, whenever there comes upon the soul the holy Reason of which Seven is the keynote, six together with all mortal things that the soul seems to make therewith comes to a stop.

VII. “And God blessed the seventh day and

<sup>a</sup> Literally, “caused to rest.”

- 17 ἐβδόμην καὶ ἡγίασεν αὐτήν” (Gen. ii. 3). τοὺς κατὰ τὸ ἑβδομον καὶ θεῖον ὡς ἀληθῶς φῶς κινή-
θέντας τρόπους εὐλογεῖ τε ὁ θεὸς καὶ εὐθὺς ἀγίους ἀποφαίνει· συγγενέστατοι γὰρ ἀλλήλοις ὁ εὐλόγιστός τε καὶ ὁ ἅγιος. διὰ τοῦτο ἐπὶ τοῦ τὴν
μεγάλην εὐχὴν εὐξαμένου φησὶν ὅτι, ἐὰν τροπὴ κατασκήψασα αἰφνίδιον μιάνη τὸν νοῦν, οὐκέτ’ ἔσται ἅγιος (cf. Num. vi. 9)· ἀλλ’ “ αἱ ἡμέραι αἱ πρότεραι ἄλογοι ” (ib. vi. 12)· κατὰ τὸ εἰκός·
ἀλόγιστος γὰρ ὁ μὴ ἅγιος τρόπος, ὥστε ὁ εὐλό-18 γιστος ἅγιος. ὀρθῶς οὖν ἔφη ὅτι τὴν ἐβδόμην
εὐλόγησέ τε καὶ ἡγίασεν, “ ὅτι ἐν αὐτῇ κατέπαυσεν ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦ ὧν ἤρξατο ποιεῖν ὁ θεός ” (Gen. ii. 3). αἰτία δ’ ἢ δι’ ἣν εὐλόγιστός
τε καὶ ἅγιος γέγονεν ὁ κατὰ τὸ ἑβδομον καὶ
τέλειον φῶς ἄγων ἑαυτόν, ἐπεὶ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ φύσει
παύεται ἢ τῶν θνητῶν σύστασις. καὶ γὰρ οὕτως ἔχει· ὅταν ἀνατείλῃ φέγγος τῆς ἀρετῆς τὸ λαμπρότατον καὶ θεῖον ὄντως, ἐπέχεται τῆς ἐναντίας
φύσεως ἢ γένεσις. ἐδηλώσαμεν δὲ ὅτι παύων
[47] ὁ | θεὸς οὐ παύεται ποιῶν, ἀλλ’ ἐτέρων γενέσεως
ἄρχεται, ἅτε οὐ τεχνίτης μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ πατὴρ
ὦν τῶν γινομένων.
- 19 VIII. “ Αὕτη ἢ βίβλος γενέσεως οὐρανοῦ καὶ
γῆς, ὅτε ἐγένετο ” (Gen. ii. 4). οὗτος ὁ κατὰ

<sup>a</sup> Philo dwells on the connexion between εὐλογεῖν (lit. “say well done” or “well be it,” εὖ) and εὐλόγιστος (“happy in the use of reason or of speech”) and builds an ethical interpretation of the passage on this connexion.

<sup>b</sup> See Numb. vi. 2.

<sup>c</sup> Such is Philo’s interpretation of the Nazirite touching a corpse.

<sup>d</sup> “Not reckoned” (ἄλογος) suggests “not taken into

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 17-19

hallowed it" (Gen. ii. 3). God both blesses and forthwith makes holy the dispositions set in motion in harmony with the seventh and truly Divine light, for closely akin are the character that is charged with benediction<sup>a</sup> and the character that is holy. That is why, when treating of him who has vowed the great vow,<sup>b</sup> he says that, if a change suddenly befall him and defile his mind,<sup>c</sup> he shall no longer be holy, but "the preceding days are not reckoned."<sup>d</sup> Rightly enough, for the character that is not holy is vile, of no account, so that the character well accounted of is holy. Rightly, then, did he say that God both blessed and hallowed the seventh day, "because in it He ceased<sup>e</sup> from all His works which God began to make" (Gen. ii. 3). But the reason why the man that guides himself in accordance with the seventh and perfect light is both of good understanding<sup>f</sup> and holy, is that the formation of things mortal ceases with this day's advent. For, indeed, the matter stands thus; when that most brilliant and truly divine light of virtue has dawned, the creation of that whose nature is of the contrary kind comes to a stop. But we pointed out that God when ceasing or rather causing to cease, does not cease making, but begins the creating of other things, since He is not a mere artificer, but also Father of the things that are coming into being.<sup>g</sup>

VIII. "This book is that of the origin of heaven and earth, when it came into being"<sup>h</sup> (Gen. ii. 4).

account" (ἀλόγιστος), which is the direct opposite of "well accounted of," a meaning that might be given to εὐλόγιστος.

<sup>e</sup> Strictly "caused to cease."

<sup>f</sup> Or "blessed."

<sup>g</sup> This ceaseless action of God as Father, by the operation of the all-permeating Spirit, Philo finds implied in Gen. ii. 3.

PHILO

ἑβδομάδα κινούμενος τέλειος λόγος ἀρχὴ γενέσεως τοῦ τε κατὰ τὰς ἰδέας νοῦ τεταγμένου καὶ τῆς κατὰ τὰς ἰδέας τεταγμένης νοητῆς, εἰ οἶόν τε τοῦτο εἰπεῖν, αἰσθήσεως. βιβλίον δὲ εἶρηκε τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγον, ᾧ συμβέβηκεν ἐγγράφεσθαι καὶ 20 ἐγχαράττεσθαι τὰς τῶν ἄλλων συστάσεις. ἵνα δὲ μὴ καθ' ὠρισμένας χρόνων περιόδους ὑπολάβῃς τὸ θεῖόν τι ποιεῖν, ἀλλ' εἰδῆς ἄδηλα καὶ ἀτέκμαρτα καὶ ἀκατάληπτα τῷ θνητῷ γένει τὰ δημιουργούμενα, ἐπιφέρει τὸ "ὅτε ἐγένετο," τὸ πότε κατὰ περιγραφὴν οὐ διορίζων· ἀπεριγράφως γὰρ γίνεται τὰ γινόμενα ὑπὸ τοῦ αἰτίου. ἀνήρηται τοίνυν τὸ ἐν ἑξ ἡμέραις γεγενῆσθαι τὸ πᾶν.

21 IX. "Ἡ ἡμέρα ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν καὶ πᾶν χλωρὸν ἀγροῦ πρὸ τοῦ γενέσθαι ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ πάντα χόρτον ἀγροῦ πρὸ τοῦ ἀνατεῖλαι· οὐ γὰρ ἔβρεξεν ὁ θεὸς ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἄνθρωπος οὐκ ἦν ἐργάζεσθαι τὴν γῆν" (Gen. ii. 4, 5). τὴν ἡμέραν ταύτην ἐπάνω βίβλον εἶρηκεν, εἴ γε ἐν ἀμφοτέροις οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς ὑπογράφει γένεσιν· τῷ γὰρ περιφανεστάτῳ καὶ τηλαυγεστάτῳ ἑαυτοῦ λόγῳ ὁ θεὸς ἀμφοτέρα ποιεῖ, τὴν τε ἰδέαν τοῦ νοῦ, ὃν συμβολικῶς οὐρανὸν κέκληκε, καὶ τὴν ἰδέαν τῆς αἰσθήσεως, ἣν διὰ σημείου γῆν ὠνόμασεν. 22 ἀγροῖς δὲ ἀπεικάζει δυσὶ τὴν τε ἰδέαν τοῦ νοῦ καὶ τὴν ἰδέαν τῆς αἰσθήσεως· φέρει γὰρ ὁ μὲν νοῦς καρπὸν τὰ ἐν τῷ νοεῖν, ἣ δὲ αἴσθησις τὰ

<sup>a</sup> Philo can identify the Book with Reason, since λόγος can mean Reason as well as Word.

<sup>b</sup> "Sense-perception" has its function in the material sphere. It cannot strictly be spoken of as acting in the domain of mind or pure intellect.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 19-22

(That is to say): " This perfect Reason,<sup>a</sup> moving in accord with the number 7, is the primal origin both of mind ordering itself after the original patterns, and of sense-perception in the domain of mind <sup>b</sup> (if the expression is permissible) ordering itself after those originals." " Book " is Moses' name for the Reason of God, in which have been inscribed and engraved the formation of all else. But that you may not suppose that the Deity makes anything in definite periods of time, but may know that to mortal kind the process of creation is unobserved, undescried, incomprehensible, he adds, " When it came into being," not defining " when " by a determining limit, for the things that come into being under the hand of the First Cause come into being with no determining limit. There is an end, then, of the notion that the universe came into being in six days.

IX. " In the day in which God made the heaven and the earth and every green thing of the field before it appeared upon the earth and all grass of the field before it sprang up; for God had not sent rain on the earth, and there was no man to till the earth " (Gen. ii. 4, 5). Above he has called this day a book, for he delineates the creation of heaven and earth as wrought in both: for by His own supremely manifest and far-shining Reason God makes both of them, both the original of the mind, which in symbolic language he calls " heaven," and the original of sense-perception, to which by a figure he gave the name of " earth." And he compares the original of the mind and the original of sense-perception to two fields; for they bear fruit, the mind all that is done in thinking, sense-perception all that is done in per-

PHILO

ἐν τῷ αισθάνεσθαι. ὁ δὲ λέγει, τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν· ὡσπερ τοῦ ἐπὶ μέρους καὶ ἀτόμου νοῦ προϋπάρχει τις ἰδέα, ὡς ἂν ἀρχέτυπος καὶ παράδειγμα τούτου, καὶ πάλιν τῆς κατὰ μέρος αισθήσεως <ιδέα τις αισθήσεως>, σφραγίδος λόγον ἔχουσα εἶδη τυπούσης, οὕτως πρὶν μὲν γενέσθαι τὰ ἐπὶ μέρους νοητά, ἦν τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο γενικὸν νοητόν, οὐ κατὰ μετοχὴν καὶ τὰ ἄλλα ὠνόμασται, πρὶν δὲ γενέσθαι τὰ κατὰ μέρος αισθητά, ἦν τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο γενικὸν αισθητόν, οὐ κατὰ μετουσίαν καὶ τὰ ἄλλα αισθητά

23 γέγονε. χλωρὸν μὲν οὖν ἀγροῦ τὸ νοητόν εἶρηκε
[48] | τοῦ νοῦ· ὡς γὰρ ἐν ἀγρῷ τὰ χλωρὰ βλαστάνει καὶ ἀνθεῖ, οὕτως βλάστημα τοῦ νοῦ τὸ νοητόν ἐστι. πρὶν οὖν τὸ κατὰ μέρος νοητόν γενέσθαι, τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο νοητόν ἀποτελεῖ γενικὸν ὄν, ὃ δὴ καὶ “ πᾶν ” κέκληκεν ὑγιῶς· τὸ μὲν γὰρ κατὰ μέρος νοητόν ἀτελὲς ὄν οὐ πᾶν, τὸ δὲ γενικὸν

24 ἅπαν, ἅτε πλήρες ὄν. X. “ καὶ πάντα ” φησί “ χόρτον ἀγροῦ πρὸ τοῦ ἀνατεῖλαι,” τουτέστι πρὸ τοῦ ἀνατεῖλαι τὰ κατὰ μέρος αισθητά ἦν τὸ γενικὸν αισθητόν προμηθεΐα τοῦ πεποιηκότος, ὃ δὴ πάλιν “ πᾶν ” εἶρηκεν. εἰκότως μέντοι χόρτω τὸ αισθητόν ἀπέικασεν· ὡς γὰρ ὁ χόρτος ἀλόγου τροφή, οὕτως τὸ αισθητόν τῷ ἀλόγῳ μέρει ψυχῆς

160

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 22-24

ceiving. What he means is something of this sort. As before the particular and individual mind there subsists a certain original as an archetype and pattern of it, and again before the particular sense-perception, a certain original of sense-perception related to the particular as a seal making impression is to the form which it makes; just so, before the individual objects of intellectual perception came into being, there was existing as a genus the 'intellectually-perceptible' itself, by participation in which the name has been given to the members of the genus; and before the individual objects of sense-perception came into existence, there was existing as a genus the 'sensibly-perceptible' itself, by sharing in whose being all other objects of sense have become such. "Green of the field," then, is what he terms the "intellectually-perceptible" of the mind; for as in a field the green things spring up and bloom, even so the 'intellectually-perceptible' is a growth springing from the mind. Before, then, the particular 'intellectually-perceptible' came into being, the Creator produces the solely abstract 'intellectually-perceptible,' as a generic existence. This he rightly calls "all," for the particular 'intellectually-perceptible,' being a fragment, is not all, but the generic is so, being a full whole.

X. "And all the grass of the field" he says, "before it sprang up," that is to say, before the particular objects of sense sprang up, there existed by the Maker's forethought the generic 'sensibly-perceptible,' and that it is that he again calls "all." Natural enough is his comparison of the 'sensibly-perceptible' to grass. For as grass is the food of a creature devoid of reason, so has the προσκεκλήρωται· ἐπεὶ διὰ τί προειπὼν “χλωρὸν ἀγροῦ” ἐπιφέρει “καὶ πάντα χόρτον,” ὡς οὐ γινόμενου χόρτου χλωροῦ τὸ παράπαν; ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν ἀγροῦ χλωρὸν τὸ νοητὸν ἐστίν, ἐκβλάστημα νοῦ, ὁ δὲ χόρτος τὸ αἰσθητὸν, τοῦ ἀλόγου τῆς ψυχῆς

PHILO

25 καὶ αὐτὸ βλάστημα. “οὐ γὰρ ἔβρεξεν ὁ θεὸς” φησὶν “ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἄνθρωπος οὐκ ἦν ἐργάζεσθαι τὴν γῆν.” φυσικώτατα· ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ ἐπομβρήσῃ ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι τὰς ἀντιλήψεις τῶν ὑποκειμένων ὁ θεός, οὐδ’ ὁ νοῦς ἐργάσεται καὶ πραγματεύσεται τι περὶ αἰσθησιν· ἄπρακτος γὰρ αὐτὸς ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ μὴ ὡσπερ ὕοντος καὶ ἐπιψεκάζοντος ὁράσει μὲν χρώματα, φωνὰς δὲ ἀκοῆ, γεύσει δὲ χυλοὺς καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις τὰ οἰκεία τοῦ
26 αἰτίου. ὅταν δὲ ἄρδῃ ὁ θεὸς ἄρξῃται τὴν αἰσθησιν αἰσθητοῖς, τημικαῦτα καὶ ὁ νοῦς ἐργάτης οἷα πίνονος γῆς ἀνευρίσκειται. ἢ δ’ ἰδέα τῆς αἰσθήσεως οὐ δεῖται τροφῆς· τροφή δὲ αἰσθήσεως, ἦν κατὰ σύμβολον βροχὴν εἴρηκεν, τὰ ἐπὶ μέρος αἰσθητά, ἃ δὴ σώματά ἐστιν· ἰδέα δὲ σωμάτων ἀλλότριον. πρὶν οὖν γενέσθαι τὰ κατὰ μέρος συγκρίματα, οὐκ ἔβρεξεν ὁ θεὸς ἐπὶ τὴν ἰδέαν τῆς αἰσθήσεως, ἦν εἴρηκε γῆν, τοῦτο δὲ ἐστίν, τροφήν οὐ παρέσχεν αὐτῇ· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐδεῖτο αἰσθητοῦ τὸ
27 παράπαν οὐδενός. τὸ δὲ “καὶ ἄνθρωπος

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 24-27

'sensibly-perceptible' been assigned to the un-reasoning part of the soul. Else why, after saying before "green of the field," does he go on to say, "and all grass," as if it were impossible for green of the field to come up as grass? The fact is, "the green of the field" is the 'intellectually-perceptible,' an outgrowth of the mind, but the "grass" is the 'sensibly-perceptible,' it in turn being a growth of the unreasoning part of the soul.

He goes on "for God had not rained upon the earth, and there was no man to work the ground." These words discover a deep knowledge of the laws of being. For if God does not shower upon the senses the means of apprehending objects presented to them, neither will the mind have anything to "work" or take in hand in the field of sense-perception. For the mind by itself is without employment when the Cause of all things does not pour down, like rain and moisture, colours on the sight, sounds on the hearing, savours on the taste, and that which is proper to them on the other senses. But as soon as God has begun to water sense with objects of sense, that moment the mind also is found to be a tiller of rich soil, so to speak. The original of 'sense-perception' has no need of nourishment; but the nourishment of 'sense-perception,' which he figuratively calls "rain," is the particular objects of sense, which of course are bodies; whereas an original has nothing to do with bodies. Thus before the creation of particular concrete substances, God did not rain on the original idea of sense-perception, which Moses calls "earth," and this means that He supplied it with no food: for indeed it was in absolutely no need whatever of a sensible object of perception. The οὐκ ἦν ἐργάζεσθαι τὴν γῆν” τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν· ἡ ἰδέα τοῦ νοῦ τὴν ἰδέαν τῆς αἰσθήσεως οὐκ εἰργάζετο· ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἐμὸς καὶ σὸς νοῦς ἐργάζεται τὴν αἰσθησιν διὰ τῶν αἰσθητῶν, ἡ δὲ τοῦ νοῦ ἰδέα, ἅτε δὴ μηδενὸς ὄντος ἐπὶ μέρος οἰκείου σώματος, οὐκ ἐργάζεται τὴν ἰδέαν τῆς αἰσθήσεως· εἰ γὰρ εἰργάζετο, διὰ τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἂν εἰργάζετο, αἰσθητὸν δὲ ἐν ἰδέαις οὐδέν.

PHILO

- 28 XI. “ Πηγὴ δὲ ἀνέβαινεν ἐκ τῆς γῆς καὶ ἐπότιζε πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γῆς ” (Gen. ii. 6). τὸν μὲν [49] νοῦν εἴρηκε | γῆς πηγὴν, τὰς δὲ αἰσθήσεις πρόσ-
 ωπον, ὅτι χωρίον αὐταῖς ἐξ ἅπαντος τοῦ σώματος
 πρὸς τὰς ἰδίας ἐνεργείας ἐπιτηδειότατον ἢ πάντα
 προμηθουμένη φύσις ἀπένειμε τοῦτο· πηγῆς δὲ
 τρόπον ἄρδει τὰς αἰσθήσεις ὁ νοῦς, ἐπιπέμπων τὰ πρόσφορα ἐκάστη ρεύματα. ἴδε οὖν, πῶς ἀλύσεως
 τρόπον αἰ τοῦ ζώου δυνάμεις ἀλλήλων ἔχονται·
 νοῦ γὰρ καὶ αἰσθήσεως ἔτι δὲ αἰσθητοῦ τριῶν
 ὄντων μέσον μὲν ἐστὶν αἰσθησις, ἄκρον δὲ ἐκότερον 29 ὁ τε νοῦς καὶ τὸ αἰσθητόν. ἀλλ’ οὐθ’ ὁ νοῦς δυνατὸς ἐργάσασθαι, τουτέστιν ἐνεργῆσαι κατὰ αἰσθησιν, ἐὰν μὴ βρέξῃ καὶ ὕσῃ τὸ αἰσθητὸν ὁ θεός, οὔτε ὑσθέντος αἰσθητοῦ ὄφελός ἐστιν, ἐὰν
 μὴ πηγῆς τρόπον ὁ νοῦς, τείνας ἑαυτὸν ἄχρι τῆς αἰσθήσεως, κινήσῃ τε αὐτὴν ἡρεμοῦσαν, καὶ ἀγάγῃ πρὸς ἀντίληψιν τοῦ ὑποκειμένου· ὥστε ἀντίδοσιν ὁ νοῦς καὶ τὸ αἰσθητὸν αἰεὶ μελετῶσι, τὸ μὲν προ-ὑποκείμενον αἰσθήσει ὡς ἂν ὕλη, ὁ δὲ κινῶν τὴν

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 27-29

meaning of the words, " and there was not a man to work the ground," is this : the original idea of the mind did not work the original idea of sense-perception : for my mind like yours works the sense-perception through the objects of the senses, but the original idea of the mind, as there was of course no particular body in existence proper to it, does not work the original idea of 'sense-perception' : for were it working, it would be working it by means of the objects of sense, but among original ideas there is no such thing as an object of sense.

XI. " And a spring went up out of the earth and watered all the face of the earth " (Gen. ii. 6). He calls the mind a " spring " of the earth, and the senses its " face," because Nature, exercising forethought in all things, assigned this place to them out of all the body as most suitable for their special activities : and the mind like a spring waters the senses, sending to each of them the streams suitable to it. See then, how, like links in a chain, the powers of the living creature hold on to each other ; for mind and 'sense-perception' and object of sense being three, 'sense-perception' is in the middle, while mind and object of sense occupy each extreme. But neither has the mind power to work, that is, to put forth its energies by way of 'sense-perception,' unless God send the object of sense as rain upon it ; nor is any benefit derived from the object of sense when so rained down, unless, like a spring, the mind, extending itself to reach the 'sense-perception,' stir it out of its repose to grasp the object presented to it. Thus the mind and the object of sense are always practising a reciprocity of giving, the one lying ready for sense-perception as its material, the

PHILO

- αἰσθησιν πρὸς τὸ ἔκτος ὡς ἂν τεχνίτης, ἵνα γένηται 30 ὄρμη· τὸ γὰρ ζῶον τοῦ μὴ ζῶου δυσὶ προὔχει, φαντασία καὶ ὄρμη· ἡ μὲν οὖν φαντασία συνίσταται
 κατὰ τὴν τοῦ ἔκτος πρόσοδον τυποῦντος νοῦν δι'
 αἰσθήσεως, ἡ δὲ ὄρμη, τὸ ἀδελφὸν τῆς φαντασίας,
 κατὰ τὴν τοῦ νοῦ τονικὴν δύναμιν, ἣν τείνας δι'
 αἰσθήσεως ἄπτεται τοῦ ὑποκειμένου καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸ
 χωρεῖ γλιχόμενος ἐφικέσθαι καὶ συλλαβεῖν αὐτό.
- 31 XII. “Καὶ ἔπλασεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον χοῦν
 λαβὼν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἐνεφύσησεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοὴν ζωῆς, καὶ ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν” (Gen. ii. 7). διττὰ
 ἀνθρώπων γένη· ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἐστὶν οὐράνιος ἄνθρωπος,
 ὁ δὲ γήϊνος. ὁ μὲν οὖν οὐράνιος ἄτε κατ’ εἰκόνα
 θεοῦ γεγωνὸς φθαρτῆς καὶ συνόλως γεώδους
 οὐσίας ἀμέτοχος, ὁ δὲ γήϊνος ἐκ σποράδος ὕλης,
 ἣν χοῦν κέκληκεν, ἐπάγη· διὸ τὸν μὲν οὐράνιον
 φησὶν οὐ πεπλάσθαι, κατ’ εἰκόνα δὲ τετυπῶσθαι
 θεοῦ, τὸν δὲ γήϊνον πλάσμα, ἀλλ’ οὐ γέννημα, 32 εἶναι τοῦ τεχνίτου. ἄνθρωπον δὲ τὸν ἐκ γῆς
 λογιστέον εἶναι νοῦν εἰσκρινόμενον σώματι, οὕτω
 [50] | δ’ εἰσκεκριμένον. ὁ δὲ νοῦς οὗτος γεώδης ἐστὶ
 τῷ ὄντι καὶ φθαρτός, εἰ μὴ ὁ θεὸς ἐμπνεύσειεν
 αὐτῷ δύναμιν ἀληθινῆς ζωῆς· τότε γὰρ γίνεται, οὐκέτι πλάττεται, εἰς ψυχὴν, οὐκ ἄργον καὶ
 ἀδιατύπτων, ἀλλ’ εἰς νοερὰν καὶ ζῶσαν ὄντως·

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 477.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 29-32

other, like a craftsman, moving sense-perception in the direction of the external object, to produce an impulse towards it. For the living creature excels the non-living in two respects, in the power of receiving impressions and in the active impulse<sup>a</sup> towards the object producing them. The impression is produced by the drawing nigh of the external object, as it stamps the mind through sense-perception; while the active impulse, close of kin to the power aforesaid, comes about by way of the mind's power of self-extension, which it exercises through sense-perception, and so comes into touch with the object presented to it, and goes towards it, striving to reach and seize it.

XII. "And God formed the man by taking clay from the earth, and breathed into his face a breath of life, and the man became a living soul" (Gen. ii. 7). There are two types of men; the one a heavenly man, the other an earthly. The heavenly man, being made after the image of God, is altogether without part or lot in corruptible and terrestrial substance; but the earthly one was compacted out of the matter scattered here and there, which Moses calls "clay." For this reason he says that the heavenly man was not moulded, but was stamped with the image of God; while the earthly is a moulded work of the Artificer, but not His offspring. We must account the man made out of the earth to be mind mingling with, but not yet blended with, body. But this earthlike mind is in reality also corruptible, were not God to breathe into it a power of real life; when He does so, it does not any more undergo moulding, but becomes a soul, not an inefficient and imperfectly formed soul, but one

PHILO

- “ εἰς ψυχὴν ” γάρ φησι “ ζῶσαν ἐγένετο ὁ ἄν-33 θρωπος.” XIII. ζητήσαι δ’ ἄν τις, διὰ τί ἠξίωσεν ὁ θεὸς ὄλως τὸν γηγενῆ καὶ φιλο-
 σώματον νοῦν πνεύματος θείου, ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ τὸν κατὰ τὴν ἰδέαν γεγονότα καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα ἑαυτοῦ· δεύ-τερον δέ, τί ἐστι τὸ “ ἐνεφύσησε ”· τρίτον, διὰ τί
 εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον ἐμπνεῖται· τέταρτον, διὰ τί πνεύματος ὄνομα εἰδώς, ὅταν λέγῃ “ καὶ πνεῦμα
 θεοῦ ἐπεφέρετο ἐπάνω τοῦ ὕδατος ” (Gen. i. 2), 34 πνοῆς νῦν ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ πνεύματος μέμνηται. πρὸς
 μὲν οὖν τὸ πρῶτον λεκτέον ἐν μὲν, ὅτι φιλόδωρος
 ὢν ὁ θεὸς χαρίζεται τὰ ἀγαθὰ πᾶσι καὶ τοῖς μὴ
 τελείοις, προκαλούμενος αὐτοὺς εἰς μετουσίαν καὶ ζῆλον ἀρετῆς, ἅμα καὶ τὸν περιττὸν πλοῦτον ἐπι-δεικνύμενος αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἐξαρκεῖ καὶ τοῖς μὴ λίαν
 ὠφεληθησομένοις. τοῦτο δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων
 ἐμφαντικώτατα παρίστησιν. ὅταν γὰρ ὕη μὲν
 κατὰ θαλάττης, πηγὰς δὲ ἐν τοῖς ἐρημοτάτοις
 ἀνομβρῆ, τὴν δὲ λεπτόγεων καὶ τραχείαν καὶ ἄγονον γῆν ἄρρη ποταμοὺς ἀναχέων ταῖς πλημμύραις, τί ἕτερον παρίστησιν ἢ τὴν ὑπερβολὴν τοῦ
 τε πλοῦτου καὶ τῆς ἀγαθότητος ἑαυτοῦ; ἢ δ’
 ἐστὶν αἰτία δι’ ἣν ἄγονον οὐδεμίαν ψυχὴν ἐδημιούργησεν ἀγαθοῦ, κἂν ἢ χρῆσις ἀδύνατος ἐνίοις 35 ἢ αὐτοῦ. ἕτερον δὲ λεκτέον ἐκεῖνο· βούλεται τὰ θέσει δίκαια εἰσαγαγεῖν. ὁ μὲν οὖν
 μὴ ἐμπνευσθεὶς τὴν ἀληθινὴν ζωὴν, ἀλλ’ ἀπειρος
 ὢν ἀρετῆς, κολαζόμενος ἐφ’ οἷς ἡμάρτανεν εἶπεν
 ἂν ὡς ἀδίκως κολάζεται, ἀπειρία γὰρ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ

endowed with mind and actually alive ; for he says, " man became a living soul." XIII.

The question might be asked, why God deemed the earthly and body-loving mind worthy of divine breath at all, but not the mind which had been created after the original, and after His own image ; in the second place, what " breathed in " means ; thirdly, why the breathing is " into the face " ; fourthly, why, though he shows his knowledge of the word ' spirit ' when he says " and the Spirit of God was borne above the water " (Gen. i. 2), he now says " breath " not " spirit." In answer to the first query, one thing to be said is that God loves to give, and so bestows good things on all, even those who are not perfect, at the same time encouraging them to a zeal for virtue, and a participation in it, by displaying His own overflowing wealth, and how there is abundance even for those who will derive no great benefit from it. This characteristic He shows very clearly in other instances also. For when He rains upon the sea, and causes springs to gush forth in the depths of the desert, and waters the poor and rough and barren soil, pouring on it rivers with their overflowings, what else does He prove save the exceeding greatness of His own wealth and goodness ? This is the reason for which He created no soul barren of virtue, even if the exercise of it be to some impossible.

A second thing to be said is this. It is His will to make compliance with positive ordinances part of duty. One, then, into whom real life had not been breathed, but who was without experience of virtue, when punished for his transgressions would have said that he is unjustly punished, for that it was through inexperience

PHILO

σφάλλῃσθαι περὶ αὐτό, αἴτιον δὲ εἶναι τὸν μηδεμίαν ἐμπνεύσαντα ἔννοιαν αὐτοῦ· τάχα δὲ μηδὲ ἀμαρτάνειν φήσει τὸ παράπαν, εἴ γε τὰ ἀκούσια καὶ κατὰ ἄγνοιαν οὐδὲ ἀδικημάτων ἔχειν λόγον φασί

36 τινες. τό γε μὴν “ἐνεφύσησεν” ἴσον ἐστὶ τῷ ἐνέπνευσεν ἢ ἐψύχωσε τὰ ἄψυχα· μὴ γὰρ τοσαύτης ἀτοπίας ἀναπλησθείημεν, ὥστε νομίσαι θεὸν στόματος ἢ μυκτῆρων ὀργάνοις χρῆσθαι πρὸς τὸ ἐμφυσῆσαι· ἄποιος γὰρ ὁ θεός, οὐ μόνον οὐκ ἀνθρωπόμορφος. ἐμφαίνει δέ τι καὶ φυσικώτερον

37 ἢ προφορά. τρία γὰρ εἶναι δεῖ, τὸ ἐμπνέον, τὸ δεχόμενον, τὸ ἐμπνεόμενον· τὸ μὲν οὖν ἐμπνέον ἐστὶν ὁ θεός, τὸ δὲ δεχόμενον ὁ νοῦς, τὸ δὲ ἐμπνεό-

[51] μενον τὸ πνεῦμα. τί | οὖν ἐκ τούτων συνάγεται; ἔνωσις γίνεται τῶν τριῶν, τεῖναντος τοῦ θεοῦ τὴν ἀφ’ ἑαυτοῦ δύναμιν διὰ τοῦ μέσου πνεύματος ἄχρι τοῦ ὑποκειμένου — τίνος ἔνεκα ἢ ὅπως ἔννοιαν αὐ-

38 τοῦ λάβωμεν; ἐπεὶ πῶς ἂν ἐνόησεν ἡ ψυχὴ θεόν, εἰ μὴ ἐνέπνευσε καὶ ἤψατο αὐτῆς κατὰ δύναμιν; οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἀπετόλμησε τοσοῦτον ἀναδραμεῖν ὁ ἀνθρώπινος νοῦς, ὡς ἀντιλαβέσθαι θεοῦ φύσεως, εἰ μὴ αὐτὸς ὁ θεὸς ἀνέσπασεν αὐτὸν πρὸς ἑαυτόν, ὡς ἐνῆν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν ἀνασπασθῆναι, καὶ ἐτύπωσε κατὰ τὰς ἐφικτὰς νοηθῆναι δυνάμεις.

39 εἰς δὲ τὸ πρόσωπον ἐμπνέει καὶ φυσικῶς καὶ ἠθικῶς· φυσικῶς μὲν, ὅτι ἐν προσώπῳ τὰς αἰσθήσεις ἐδημιούργει· τοῦτο γὰρ μάλιστα τοῦ σώματος τὸ μέρος ἐψύχεται [καὶ ἐμπέπνευσται].

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 35-39

of good that he failed in respect of it, and that the blame lay with Him who had failed to breathe into him any conception of it. Nay, he will perhaps say that he does not sin at all, if (as some say) involuntary acts and acts done in ignorance do not count as wrong deeds.

“Breathed into,” we note, is equivalent to “inspired” or “be-souled” the soulless ; for God forbid that we should be infected with such monstrous folly as to think that God employs for inbreathing organs such as mouth or nostrils ; for God is not only not in the form of man, but belongs to no class or kind. Yet the expression clearly brings out something that accords with nature. For it implies of necessity three things, that which inbreathes, that which receives, that which is inbreathed : that which inbreathes is God, that which receives is the mind, that which is inbreathed is the spirit or breath. What, then, do we infer from these premises ? A union of the three comes about, as God projects the power that proceeds from Himself through the mediant breath till it reaches the subject. And for what purpose save that we may obtain a conception of Him ? For how could the soul have conceived of God, had He not breathed into it and mightily laid hold of it ? For the mind of man would never have ventured to soar so high as to grasp the nature of God, had not God Himself drawn it up to Himself, so far as it was possible that the mind of man should be drawn up, and stamped it with the impress of the powers that are within the scope of its understanding.

The breathing “into the face” is to be understood both physically and ethically : physically, because it is in the face that He set the senses ; for this part of the body is beyond other parts endowed with soul :

PHILO

ἠθικῶς δὲ οὕτως· ὥσπερ σώματος ἡγεμονικόν ἐστι τὸ πρόσωπον, οὕτως ψυχῆς ἡγεμονικόν ἐστὶν ὁ νοῦς· τούτῳ μόνῳ ἐμπνέει ὁ θεός, τοῖς δ' ἄλλοις μέρεσιν οὐκ ἄξιοι, ταῖς τε αἰσθήσεσι καὶ τῷ λόγῳ
 40 καὶ τῷ γονίμῳ· δεύτερα γάρ ἐστι τῇ δυνάμει. ὑπὸ τίνος οὖν καὶ ταῦτα ἐνεπνεύσθη; ὑπὸ τοῦ νοῦ δηλονότι· οὐ γὰρ μετέσχεν ὁ νοῦς παρὰ θεοῦ, τούτου μεταδίδωσι τῷ ἀλόγῳ μέρος τῆς ψυχῆς, ὥστε τὸν μὲν νοῦν ἐψυχῶσθαι ὑπὸ θεοῦ, τὸ δὲ ἄλογον ὑπὸ τοῦ νοῦ· ὡσανεὶ γὰρ θεός ἐστι τοῦ ἀλόγου ὁ νοῦς, παρὸ καὶ Μωυσῆν οὐκ ὤκνησεν
 41 εἰπεῖν “θεὸν τοῦ Φαραώ” (Exod. vii. 1). τῶν γὰρ γινομένων τὰ μὲν καὶ ὑπὸ θεοῦ γίνεται καὶ δι’ αὐτοῦ, τὰ δὲ ὑπὸ θεοῦ μὲν, οὐ δι’ αὐτοῦ δέ· τὰ μὲν οὖν ἄριστα καὶ ὑπὸ θεοῦ γέγονε καὶ δι’ αὐτοῦ· προελθὼν γοῦν ἐρεῖ ὅτι “ἐφύτευσεν ὁ θεὸς παράδεισον” (Gen. ii. 8)· τούτων καὶ ὁ νοῦς ἐστι· τὸ δὲ ἄλογον ὑπὸ θεοῦ μὲν γέγονεν, οὐ διὰ θεοῦ δέ, ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦ λογικοῦ τοῦ ἄρχοντός τε καὶ βασι-
 42 λεύοντος ἐν ψυχῇ. “πνοήν” δέ, ἀλλ’ οὐ πνεῦμα, εἶρηκεν, ὡς διαφόρᾳς οὔσης· τὸ μὲν γὰρ πνεῦμα νενόηται κατὰ τὴν ἰσχὺν καὶ εὐτονίαν καὶ δύναμιν, ἡ δὲ πνοὴ ὡς ἂν αὐρὰ τίς ἐστι καὶ ἀναθυμίασις ἡρεμαία καὶ πραεῖα. ὁ μὲν οὖν κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα γεγονώς καὶ τὴν ἰδέαν νοῦς πνεύματος ἂν λέγοιτο κεκοινωνηκέναι—ῥώμην γὰρ ἔχει ὁ λογισμὸς αὐτοῦ—ὁ δὲ ἐκ τῆς ὕλης τῆς κούφης καὶ ἐλαφροτέρας αὔρας ὡς ἂν ἀποφορᾳς τινος,

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 39-42

but ethically, on this wise. As the face is the dominant element in the body, so is the mind the dominant element of the soul: into this only does God breathe, whereas He does not see fit to do so with the other parts, whether senses or organs of utterance and of reproduction; for these are secondary in capacity. By what, then, were these also inspired? By the mind, evidently. For the mind imparts to the portion of the soul that is devoid of reason a share of that which it has received from God, so that the mind was be-souled by God, but the unreasoning part by the mind. For the mind is, so to speak, God of the unreasoning part. In like manner he does not hesitate to speak of Moses as "a God to Pharaoh" (Exod. vii. 1). For of the things which come into being some come into being both by God's power and through God's agency, while others come into being by God's power but not by His agency. The most excellent things were made both by God and through God. For example, he will presently say, "God planted a pleasaunce" (Gen. ii. 8): to these the mind belongs; but the part devoid of reason was made by God's power but not by God's agency, but by that of the reasonable power which rules and holds dominion in the soul.

He uses the word 'breath' not 'spirit,' implying a difference between them; for 'spirit' is conceived of as connoting strength and vigour and power, while a 'breath' is like an air or a peaceful and gentle vapour. The mind that was made after the image and original might be said to partake of spirit, for its reasoning faculty possesses robustness; but the mind that was made out of matter must be said to partake of the light and less substantial air, as of some exhalation,

PHILO

ὅποια γίνονται ἀπὸ τῶν ἀρωμάτων· φυλαττο-μένων γὰρ οὐδὲν ἤττον καὶ μὴ ἐκθυμιωμένων εὐωδία τις γίνεται.

- 43 XIV. “Καὶ ἐφύτευσεν ὁ θεὸς παράδεισον ἐν Ἐδέμ κατὰ ἀνατολάς· καὶ ἔθετο ἐκεῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον
ὃν ἔπλασε” (Gen. ii. 8). τὴν μετάρσιον καὶ
οὐράνιον σοφίαν πολλοῖς ὀνόμασι πολυώνυμον
[52] οὖσαν | δεδήλωκε· καὶ γὰρ ἀρχὴν καὶ εἰκόνα καὶ
ὄρασιν θεοῦ κέκληκε. ταύτης δ’ ὡς ἂν ἀρχετύπου μίμημα τὴν ἐπίγειον σοφίαν νυνὶ παρίστησι διὰ
τῆς τοῦ παραδείσου φυτουργίας· μὴ γὰρ τοσαύτη
κατάσχοι τὸν ἀνθρώπινον λογισμὸν ἀσέβεια, ὡς ὑπολαβεῖν ὅτι θεὸς γεωπονεῖ καὶ φυτεύει παραδείσους, ἐπεὶ καὶ τίνος ἕνεκα εὐθὺς διαπορήσομεν·
οὐ γὰρ ὅπως ἀναπαύλας εὐδιαγώγους καὶ ἡδονὰς
ἑαυτῷ πορίζῃ—μηδὲ εἰς νοῦν ἔλθοι ποτέ τὸν 44 ἡμέτερον ἢ τοιαύτη μυθοποιΐα—· θεοῦ γὰρ οὐδὲ ὁ σύμπας κόσμος ἄξιον ἂν εἶη χωρίον καὶ ἐνδιαίτημα, ἐπεὶ αὐτὸς ἑαυτοῦ τόπος καὶ αὐτὸς ἑαυτοῦ πλήρης
καὶ ἱκανὸς αὐτὸς ἑαυτῷ ὁ θεός, τὰ μὲν ἄλλα ἐπιδεᾶ
καὶ ἔρημα καὶ κενὰ ὄντα πληρῶν καὶ περιέχων,
αὐτὸς δὲ ὑπ’ οὐδενὸς ἄλλου περιεχόμενος, ἅτε 45 εἰς καὶ τὸ πᾶν αὐτὸς ὢν. τὴν οὖν ἐπίγειον ἀρετὴν σπεῖρει καὶ φυτεύει τῷ θνητῷ
γένει ὁ θεὸς μίμημα καὶ ἀπεικόνισμα οὖσαν τῆς οὐρανόου· ἐλεήσας γὰρ ἡμῶν τὸ γένος καὶ κατιδὼν
ὅτι ἐξ ἀφθόνων καὶ πλουσίων κακῶν συνέστηκεν, ἐπίκουρον καὶ ἀρωγὸν τῶν ψυχῆς νόσων ἀρετὴν
ἐπίγειον ἐρρίζου, μίμημα, ὡς ἔφην, τῆς οὐρανόου
καὶ ἀρχετύπου, ἣν πολλοῖς ὀνόμασι καλεῖ. παράδεισος μὲν δὴ τροπικῶς εἴρηται ἢ ἀρετή, τόπος

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 42-45

such as those that rise from spices : for if they are kept and not burned for incense there is still a sweet perfume from them.

XIV. " And God planted a pleasaunce in Eden toward the sun-rising, and placed there the man whom He had formed " (Gen. ii. 8). By using many words for it Moses has already made it manifest that the sublime and heavenly wisdom is of many names ; for he calls it " beginning " and " image " and " vision of God " ; and now by the planting of the pleasaunce he brings out the fact that earthly wisdom is a copy of this as of an archetype. Far be it from man's reasoning to be the victim of so great impiety as to suppose that God tills the soil and plants pleasaunces. We should at once be at a loss to tell from what motive He could do so. Not to provide Himself with pleasant refreshment and comfort. Let not such fables even enter our mind. For not even the whole world would be a place fit for God to make His abode, since God is His own place, and He is filled by Himself, and sufficient for Himself, filling and containing all other things in their destitution and barrenness and emptiness, but Himself contained by nothing else, seeing that He is Himself One and the Whole.

Well then, God sows and plants earthly excellence for the race of mortals as a copy and reproduction of the heavenly. For pitying our race and noting that it is compact of a rich abundance of ills, Hé caused earthly excellence to strike root, to bring succour and aid to the diseases of the soul. It is, as I said before, a copy of the heavenly and archetypal excellence, to which Moses gives many names. Virtue is figuratively called " pleasaunce," and the locality specially suited to the pleasaunce

PHILO

- δὲ οἰκείος τῷ παραδείσῳ Ἐδέμ, τοῦτο δέ ἐστι
 τρυφή· ἀρετῇ δὲ ἀρμόττον εἰρήνη καὶ εὐπάθεια καὶ 46 χαρά, ἐν οἷς τὸ τρυφᾶν ὡς ἀληθῶς ἐστι. καὶ μὴν
 κατὰ ἀνατολάς ἐστιν ἡ φυτουργία τοῦ παραδείσου·
 οὐ γὰρ δύεται καὶ σβέννυται, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ πέφυκεν
 ἀνατέλλειν ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος, καὶ ὡσπερ, οἶμαι, ἀνατείλας ἥλιος τὸν ζόφον τοῦ ἀέρος φωτὸς
 ἐνέπλησεν, οὕτως καὶ ἀρετῇ ἀνατείλασα ἐν ψυχῇ
 τὴν ἀχλὺν αὐτῆς ἐναυγάζει καὶ τὸν πολὺν σκότον 47 σκεδάννυσι. “καὶ ἔθετο” φησὶν “ἐκεῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃν ἔπλασεν.” ἀγαθὸς γὰρ ὢν ὁ θεὸς καὶ ἐπ' ἀρετὴν ὡς οἰκειότατον ἔργον ἀσκῶν
 τὸ γένος ἡμῶν τὸν νοῦν τίθησιν ἐν τῇ ἀρετῇ, ἵνα
 δηλονότι μηδὲν ἄλλο ἢ ταύτην καθάπερ ἀγαθὸς γεωργὸς τημελῇ καὶ περιέπη. XV.
- 48 ζητήσῃς δ' ἂν τις, διὰ τί, τοῦ μιμεῖσθαι θεοῦ τὰ
 ἔργα ὄντος ὁσίου, ἐμοὶ μὲν ἀπηγόρευται φυτεύειν
 ἄλλος παρὰ τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ, τὸν δὲ παράδεισον
 ὁ θεὸς φυτεύει; φησὶ γάρ· “οὐ φυτεύσεις σεαυτῷ
 ἄλλος, πᾶν ξύλον παρὰ τὸ θυσιαστήριον κυρίου
 [53] τοῦ θεοῦ σου οὐ | ποιήσεις σεαυτῷ” (Deut. xvi.
 21). τί οὖν λεκτέον; ὅτι πρέπει τῷ θεῷ φυτεύειν
 49 καὶ οἰκοδομεῖν ἐν ψυχῇ τὰς ἀρετάς. φίλαυτος δὲ
 καὶ ἄθεος ὁ νοῦς, οἰόμενος ἴσος εἶναι θεῷ καὶ ποιεῖν δοκῶν ἐν τῷ πάσχειν ἐξεταζόμενος· θεοῦ
 δὲ σπεύροντος καὶ φυτεύοντος ἐν ψυχῇ τὰ καλά,
 ὁ λέγων νοῦς ὅτι “ἐγὼ φυτεύω” ἀσεβεῖ. οὐ
 φυτεύσεις οὖν, ὅταν ὁ θεὸς φυτουργῇ· ἐὰν δὲ καὶ φυτὰ ἐν ψυχῇ καταβάλλῃ, ὧ διάνοια, καρποτόκα
 φύτευε πάντα, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἄλλος, ἐν ἄλλει γὰρ καὶ
 ἀγρίας ὕλης ἐστὶ καὶ ἡμέρου δένδρα· κακίαν δὲ

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 45-49

“Eden,” which means “luxury”; excellence to be sure has for its fit adjuncts peace and welfare and joy, in which true luxury consists. Again the planting of the pleasaunce is “towards the sun-rising,” for right reason does not set nor is quenched, but its nature is ever to rise, and, I take it, just as the sun when it has risen fills the gloom of the atmosphere with light, so virtue also, when it has risen in the soul, illumines its mist and disperses its deep darkness.

“And He placed there” it says, “the man whom He had formed.” For God, being good and training our race to virtue as the operation most proper to it, places the mind amid virtue, evidently to the end that as a good gardener it may spend its care on nothing else but this.

XV. Now the question might be asked, “Why, seeing that to imitate God’s works is a pious act, am I forbidden to plant a grove by the altar, while God plants the pleasaunce?” For it says, “Thou shalt not plant thyself a grove: thou shalt not make to thyself any wood by the side of the altar of the Lord thy God” (Deut. xvi. 21). What then are we to say? That it becomes God to plant and to build virtues in the soul, but that the mind shows itself to be without God and full of self-love, when it deems itself as on a par with God; and, whereas passivity is its true part, looks on itself as an agent. When God sows and plants noble qualities in the soul, the mind that says “I plant” is guilty of impiety. Thou shalt not plant, therefore, whensoever God is tending His plants. But if thou dost set plants in the soul, O mind, set only fruit-bearing plants. Set not a grove, for in a grove there are both wild and cultivated trees. And to plant in the soul barren wicked-

PHILO

- τὴν ἄγονον ἐν ψυχῇ μετὰ τῆς ἡμέρου καὶ καρπο-
 τόκου φυτεύει ἀρετῆς λέπρας ἐστὶ τῆς διφυοῦς 50 καὶ μιγάδος οἰκείου. ἐὰν μέντοι γε τὰ ἄμικτα
 καὶ σύγκλυδα εἰς ταῦτὸν ἄγης, χωρίζε καὶ διάκρινε
 τῆς καθαρᾶς καὶ ἀμιάντου φύσεως τῆς ἀναφερούσης
 τὰ ἄμωμα τῷ θεῷ, αὕτη δέ ἐστὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον· τούτου γὰρ ἀλλότριον τὸ λέγειν ἔργον τι εἶναι
 ψυχῆς, ἐπὶ θεὸν πάντων λαμβανόντων τὴν ἀνα-φοράν, καὶ τὸ τὰ ἄκαρπα τοῖς καρποτόκοις
 ἀναμιγνύναι· μῶμος γὰρ τοῦτό γε, τὰ δὲ ἄμωμα 51 τῷ θεῷ προσάγεται. ἐὰν οὖν τι τούτων παραβῆς,
 ᾧ ψυχῇ, σαυτὴν βλάβεις, οὐ θεόν· διὰ τοῦτό
 φησιν· “οὐ φυτεύσεις σεαυτῷ”· θεῷ γὰρ οὐδεὶς
 ἐργάζεται, καὶ μάλιστα τὰ φαῦλα· καὶ ἐπιφέρει
 πάλιν· “οὐ ποιήσεις σεαυτῷ.” λέγει δὲ καὶ ἐν
 ἑτέροις· “οὐ ποιήσετε μετ’ ἐμοῦ θεοὺς ἀργυροῦς,
 καὶ θεοὺς χρυσοῦς οὐ ποιήσετε ὑμῖν ἑαυτοῖς” (Exod. xx. 23)· ὁ γὰρ ἢ ποιότητα οἰόμενος ἔχειν τὸν θεὸν ἢ μὴ ἓνα εἶναι ἢ μὴ ἀγέννητον καὶ ἄ-φθαρτον ἢ μὴ ἄτρεπτον ἑαυτὸν ἀδικεῖ, οὐ θεόν· “ἑαυτοῖς” γὰρ φησιν “οὐ ποιήσετε”· δεῖ γὰρ
 ἠγείσθαι καὶ ἄποιον αὐτὸν καὶ ἓνα καὶ ἄφθαρτον
 καὶ ἄτρεπτον· ὁ δὲ μὴ οὕτως διανοούμενος ἑαυτοῦ
 τὴν ψυχὴν ψευδοῦς καὶ ἀθέου δόξης ἀναπίμπλησιν.
 52 οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι, κὰν εἰσαγάγῃ ἡμᾶς εἰς τὴν ἀρετὴν
 καὶ εἰσαχθέντες φυτεύσωμεν ἄκαρπον μὲν οὐδὲν “πᾶν δὲ ξύλον βρώσιμον,” κελεύει “περικαθἀρίσαι τὴν ἀκαθαρσίαν αὐτοῦ” (Lev. xix. 23);

<sup>a</sup> Philo plays on the two senses of ἀναφέρειν, “offer” and “refer”

ness by the side of cultivated and fruit-yielding virtue is like leprosy with its twofold growths and blending of discordant hues. If, however, thou dost bring into the same place things heterogeneous and incapable of mixture, let them be separate and distinct from the pure and unsullied growth that offers up fruits free from blemish to God. And it is such a growth that is meant by the altar of sacrifice : for it is a violation of this to say that anything is the (independent) work of the soul, since there is nothing there that has not reference <sup>a</sup> to God. To say that is to mingle the barren with the fruit-bearing. And this is a blemish, whereas only things without blemish are offered to God. If then thou transgress in any of these respects, O soul, thou wilt injure thyself, not God ; that is why it says " thou shalt not plant to thyself" ; for to God no one does such tillage, above all when the plants are bad ones ; and it goes on to say, " thou shalt not make to thyself." It says also in another case, " Ye shall not make together with Me gods of silver, and gods of gold ye shall not make to yourselves " (Exod. xx. 23). For he that thinks either that God belongs to a type, or that He is not one, or that He is not unoriginate and incorruptible, or that He is not incapable of change, wrongs himself not God ; for it says, " to yourselves ye shall not make " ; for we must deem that He belongs to no type, and that He is One and incorruptible and unchangeable. He that does not so conceive infects his own soul with a false and godless opinion. Do you not see that, even if He bring us into virtue and even if, when brought in, we plant no fruitless thing but " every tree good for food," He yet commands us " thoroughly to cleanse its uncleanness " τοῦτο δ' ἐστὶ τὸ δοκεῖν φυτεῦειν· ἀποτεμεῖν οἷσιν γὰρ ἐπαγγέλλεται, οἷσις δὲ ἀκάθαρτον 53 φύσει.

PHILO

XVI. ὃν δὲ ἔπλασεν ἄνθρωπον τιθέναι φησὶν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ νυνὶ μόνον· τίς οὖν ἐστίν, ἐφ' οὗ ὕστερόν φησιν ὅτι “ ἔλαβε κύριος ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃν ἐποίησε<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἔθετο αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, ἐργάζεσθαι αὐτὸν καὶ φυλάσσειν ” (Gen. ii. 15); μήποτ' οὖν ἕτερός ἐστίν ἄνθρωπος οὗτος, ὁ κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα καὶ τὴν ἰδέαν γεγωνός, ὥστε δύο ἀνθρώπους εἰς τὸν παράδεισον εἰσάγεσθαι, τὸν μὲν πεπλασμένον, τὸν 54 δὲ κατ' εἰκόνα. ὁ μὲν οὖν κατὰ τὴν ἰδέαν γεγωνός [54] οὐ μόνον ἐν ταῖς φυτουργίαις τῶν ἀρετῶν ἐξετάζεται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐργάτης ἐστὶν αὐτῶν καὶ φύλαξ, τοῦτο δ' ἐστὶ μνήμων ὧν ἤκουσε καὶ ἤσκησεν· ὁ δὲ πλαστός οὔτε ἐργάζεται τὰς ἀρετὰς οὔτε φυλάττει, ἀλλὰ μόνον εἰσάγεται εἰς τὰ δόγματα ἀφθονία θεοῦ, μέλλων αὐτίκα φυγὰς ἀρετῆς 55 ἔσεσθαι. διὰ τοῦτο ὃν μὲν μόνον τίθησιν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, πλαστὸν καλεῖ, ὃν δὲ καὶ ἐργάτην καὶ φύλακα ἀποδείκνυσιν, οὐ πλαστόν, ἀλλὰ “ ὃν ἐποίησε ”· καὶ τοῦτον μὲν λαμβάνει, ἐκείνον δὲ ἐκβάλλει. ὃν δὲ λαμβάνει, τριῶν ἀξιοῖ, ἐξ ὧν συνέστηκεν ἡ εὐφυΐα, εὐθυξίας, ἐπιμονῆς, μνήμης· ἡ μὲν οὖν εὐθυξία θέσις ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, ἡ δὲ ἐπιμονὴ πρᾶξις τῶν κιλῶν [τὸ ἐργάζεσθαι τὰ καλά], ἡ δὲ μνήμη φυλακὴ καὶ διατήρησις τῶν ἁγίων δογμάτων. ὁ δὲ πλαστός νοῦς οὔτε μνημο-

<sup>1</sup> We must suppose that Philo found ποίησε in his text of LXX.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 52-55

(Lev. xix. 23)? And this means the notion that we are planting, for it is the cutting away of self-conceit that He demands, and self-conceit is in its nature unclean.

XVI. Speaking here of the man whom God moulded, it merely says that He "placed him in the garden." Who then is it of whom it says later on "The Lord God took the man whom He had made, and placed him in the garden to till it and to guard it" (Gen. ii. 15)? It would seem then that this is a different man, the one that was made after the image and archetype, so that two men are introduced into the garden, the one a moulded being, the other "after the image." The one then that was made according to the original has his sphere not only in the planting of virtues but is also their tiller and guardian, and that means that he is mindful of all that he heard and practised in his training; but the "moulded" man neither tills the virtues nor guards them, but is only introduced to the truths by the rich bounty of God, presently to be an exile from virtue. For this reason in describing the man whom God only places in the garden, Moses uses the word "moulded," but of the man whom He appoints both tiller and guardian he speaks not as "moulded," but he says "whom He had made"; and the one He receives, and the other He casts out. And He confers on him whom He receives three gifts, which constitute natural ability, facility in apprehending, persistence in doing, tenacity in keeping. Facility in apprehending is the placing in the garden, persistence in doing is the practice of noble deeds, tenacity in keeping the guarding and retaining in the memory of the holy precepts. But the "moulded" mind neither keeps in mind nor νεύει τὰ καλὰ οὔτε ἐργάζεται, μόνον δὲ εὐθικτός ἐστι· παρὸ καὶ τεθείς ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ μικρὸν ὕστερον ἀποδιδράσκει καὶ ἐκβάλλεται.

PHILO

- 56 XVII. “Καὶ ἐξανέτειλεν ὁ θεὸς ἐκ τῆς γῆς πᾶν ξύλον ὠραῖον εἰς ὄρασιν καὶ καλὸν εἰς βρῶσιν, καὶ τὸ ξύλον τῆς ζωῆς ἐν μέσῳ τῷ παραδείσῳ, καὶ τὸ ξύλον τοῦ εἰδέναι γνωστὸν καλοῦ καὶ πονηροῦ” (Gen. ii. 9). ἃ φυτεύει ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ δένδρα ἀρετῆς, νῦν ὑπογράφει· ἔστι δὲ ταῦτα αἶτε κατὰ μέρος ἀρεταὶ καὶ αἶ κατ’ αὐτὰς ἐνέργειαι, καὶ τὰ κατορθώματα, καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα παρὰ τοῖς
- 57 φιλοσοφοῦσι καθήκοντα· ταῦτά ἐστι τοῦ παραδείσου τὰ φυτά. χαρακτηρίζει μέντοι γε αὐτὰ ταῦτα, δηλῶν ὅτι τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ ὀφθῆναι κάλλιστόν ἐστι καὶ ἀπολαυσθῆναι· ἔναι γὰρ τῶν τεχνῶν θεωρητικαὶ μὲν εἰσιν, οὐ πρακτικαὶ δέ, γεωμετρία, ἀστρονομία, ἔναι δὲ πρακτικαὶ μὲν, οὐ θεωρητικαὶ δέ, τεκτονικὴ, χαλκευτικὴ, καὶ ὅσαι βάνουσαι λέγονται· ἡ δὲ ἀρετὴ καὶ θεωρητικὴ ἐστὶ καὶ πρακτικὴ· καὶ γὰρ θεωρίαν ἔχει, ὅποτε καὶ ἡ ἐπ’ αὐτὴν ὁδὸς φιλοσοφία διὰ τῶν τριῶν αὐτῆς μερῶν, τοῦ λογικοῦ, τοῦ ἠθικοῦ, τοῦ φυσικοῦ, καὶ πράξεις· ὅλου γὰρ τοῦ βίου ἐστὶ τέχνη ἡ
- 58 ἀρετὴ, ἐν ᾧ καὶ αἶ σύμπασαι πράξεις. ἀλλὰ καίτοι θεωρίαν ἔχουσα καὶ πράξιν, πάλιν ἐν ἑκατέρῳ ὑπερβάλλει κατὰ τὸ κρεῖττον· καὶ γὰρ ἡ θεωρία τῆς ἀρετῆς παγκάλῃ, καὶ ἡ πράξις καὶ ἡ χρῆσις περιμάχητος. διὸ καὶ φησιν ὅτι καὶ “εἰς ὄρασιν ἐστὶν ὠραῖον,” ὅπερ ἦν τοῦ θεωρητικοῦ σύμβολον, καὶ “καλὸν εἰς βρῶσιν,” ὅπερ ἐστὶ carries out in action the things that are noble, but has facility in apprehending them and no more than this. Accordingly after being placed in the garden he soon runs away and is cast out.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Cicero, De Officiis i. 3. 8, iii. 3. 14, κατορθώματα are honesta or recta; τὰ καθήκοντα are media or communia.

XVII. "And God caused to spring out of the ground every tree fair to behold and good for food, and the tree of life in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil" (Gen. ii. 9). Moses now indicates what trees of virtue God plants in the soul. These are the several particular virtues, and the corresponding activities, and the complete moral victories, and what philosophers call καθήκοντα or common duties.<sup>a</sup> These are the plants of the garden. These very plants he characterizes, showing that what is good is also most fair to be seen and enjoyed. For some of the arts and sciences are theoretical indeed but not practical,<sup>b</sup> such as geometry and astronomy, and some are practical, but not theoretical, as the arts of the carpenter and coppersmith, and all that are called mechanical; but virtue is both theoretical and practical; for clearly it involves theory, since philosophy, the road that leads to it, involves it through its three parts,<sup>b</sup> logic, ethics, physics; and it involves conduct, for virtue is the art of the whole of life, and life includes all kinds of conduct. But while virtue involves theory and practice, it is furthermore of surpassing excellence in each respect; for indeed the theory of virtue is perfect in beauty, and the practice and exercise of it a prize to be striven for. Wherefore he says that it is both "beautiful to look upon," an expression signifying its aspect as theory, and "good to eat,"

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 477.

PHILO

τοῦ χρηστικοῦ καὶ πρακτικοῦ σημείου.

- 59 XVIII. τὸ δὲ ξύλον τῆς ζωῆς ἐστὶν ἡ γενικωτάτη ἀρετή, ἣν τινες ἀγαθότητα καλοῦσιν, ἀφ' ἧς αἱ κατὰ μέρος ἀρεταὶ συνίστανται. τούτου χάριν καὶ μέσον ἱδρύεται τοῦ παραδείσου, τὴν συνεκτικωτάτην χώραν ἔχον, ἵνα ὑπὸ τῶν ἐκατέρωθεν, [55] βασιλέως | τρόπον, δορυφορῆται. οἱ δὲ λέγουσι τὴν καρδίαν ξύλον εἰρῆσθαι ζωῆς, ἐπειδὴ αἰτία τε τοῦ ζῆν ἐστὶ καὶ τὴν μέσσην τοῦ σώματος χώραν ἔλαχεν, ὡς ἂν κατ' αὐτοὺς ἡγεμονικὸν ὑπάρχουσα. ἀλλ' οὗτοι μὲν ἰατρικὴν δόξαν ἐκτιθέμενοι μᾶλλον ἢ φυσικὴν μὴ λαυθανέτωσαν, ἡμεῖς δέ, ὡς καὶ πρότερον ἐλέχθη, τὴν γενικωτάτην
- 60 ἀρετὴν ξύλον εἰρῆσθαι ζωῆς λέγομεν. τοῦτο μὲν οὖν ῥητῶς φησὶν ὅτι ἐστὶν ἐν μέσῳ τῷ παραδείσῳ· τὸ δὲ ἕτερον ξύλον, τὸ τοῦ γινώσκειν καλὸν καὶ πονηρόν, οὐ δεδήλωκεν οὔτε εἰ ἐντὸς οὔτε εἰ ἐκτὸς ἐστὶ τοῦ παραδείσου, ἀλλ' εἰπὼν οὕτως “ καὶ τὸ ξύλον τοῦ εἰδέναι γνωστὸν καλοῦ καὶ πονηροῦ ” εὐθύς ἠσύχασεν οὐ δηλώσας ὅπου τετύχηκεν ὄν, ἵνα μὴ ὁ φυσιολογίας ἀμύητος τὸν τόπον<sup>1</sup> τῆς
- 61 ἐπιστήμης θαυμάζῃ. τί οὖν χρὴ λέγειν; ὅτι τὸ ξύλον τοῦτο καὶ ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ ἐστὶ καὶ ἐκτὸς αὐτοῦ, οὐσία μὲν ἐν αὐτῷ, δυνάμει δὲ ἐκτὸς. πῶς; τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν ἡμῶν πανδεχές ἐστὶ καὶ

<sup>1</sup> Reading τόπον for δυνα, as Cohn (after Jost) suggests. See note b, on p. 36 of Heinemann's translation, signed “L. C.,” and App. p. 478.

<sup>a</sup> See Vol. II. App. p. 492, note on De Sac. 136.

<sup>b</sup> Philo apparently means that Moses refrained from mentioning where the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil was situated, lest its locality should become an object of awe and wonder to the ignorant. φυσιολογία is the naturae species

184

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 58-61

words which point to its excellence in exercise and practice.

XVIII. Now the tree of life is virtue in the most comprehensive sense, which some term goodness. From it the particular virtues derive their existence. That is why it is also set in the midst of the garden, occupying the central all-embracing position, that it may, like a king, be attended by those on either side as by body-guards. But some say that it is the heart that is called the tree of life, since it is the cause of life and has been allotted the central place in the body, as it naturally would, being in their view the dominating principle.<sup>a</sup> But these people should remember that they are setting forth a view worthy of the physician rather than of the philosopher, while we, as we have said, maintain that virtue in its most generic aspect is called the tree of life. Of this he expressly says that it is in the midst of the garden, but as to the other tree, that of knowing good and evil, he has not made it clear whether it is within or without the garden, but immediately after the words, "and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil," he comes to a stop without making it clear where it was. His silence is due to his desire to prevent the man unversed in natural philosophy from regarding with wonder the spot where that knowledge dwells.<sup>b</sup> What then must we say? That this tree is both in the garden and outside it, in literal fact in it, virtually outside it. How so? Our dominant part is all-receptive and ratioque of Lucretius (i. 147, ii. 58, iii. 91, vi. 38) which terrorem animi et nebrasque necesse est Discutiat. So Plutarch says "Philosophic reason does away with the wonder and awe (θαύμα και θάμβος) due to unenlightenment and ignorance." ("On the Student at Lectures," § 44, Tucker's Translation.) See App. pp. 477, 478.

PHILO

- ἔοικε κηρῷ πάντας τύπους καλοῦς τε καὶ αἰσχροῦς δεχομένῳ· παρὸ καὶ ὁ πτερνιστῆς Ἰακῶβ ὁμολογεῖ φάσκων “ Ἐπ’ ἐμὲ ἐγένετο πάντα ταῦτα ” (Gen. xlii. 36)· ἐπὶ γὰρ μίαν οὔσαν τὴν ψυχὴν αἱ ἀμύθητοι τυπώσεις ἀπάντων τῶν ἐν τῷ παντὶ ἀναφέρονται· ὅταν μὲν οὖν δέξῃται τὸν τῆς τελείας ἀρετῆς χαρακτήρα, γέγονε τὸ τῆς ζωῆς ξύλον, ὅταν δὲ τὸν τῆς κακίας, γέγονε τὸ τοῦ εἰδέναι γνωστὸν καλοῦ καὶ πονηροῦ· ἡ δὲ κακία πεφυγάδευται θείου χοροῦ· τὸ δεδεγμένον οὖν αὐτὴν ἡγεμονικὸν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ ἐστὶ κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν, ἐν αὐτῷ γὰρ ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ τῆς ἀρετῆς χαρακτήρ οἰκείος ὧν τῷ παραδείσῳ, δυνάμει δὲ πάλιν οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν αὐτῷ, ὅτι ὁ τύπος ὁ κακίας ἀλλότριός
- 62 ἐστὶ θείων ἀνατολῶν. ὁ δὲ λέγω, καὶ οὕτως ἄν τις καταμάθοι. νῦν ἐν τῷ σώματί μου τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν ἐστὶ κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν, δυνάμει δὲ ἐν Ἰταλία ἢ Σικελία, ὅποτε περὶ τῶν χωρῶν τούτων ἐπιλογίζεται, καὶ ἐν οὐρανῷ, ὅποτε περὶ οὐρανοῦ σκοπεῖ· παρὸ καὶ πολλάκις ἐν βεβήλοις ὄντες χωρίοις τινὲς κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν ἐν ἱερωτάτοις ὑπάρχουσι, φαντασιούμενοι τὰ ἀρετῆς, καὶ ἔμπαλιν, ἐν τοῖς ἀδύτοις ὑπάρχοντες ἄλλοι τὴν διάνοιάν εἰσι βεβήλοι, τῷ τροπᾷ πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον καὶ τύπους αὐτὴν λαμβάνειν φαύλους· ὥστε οὔτε ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ ἢ κακία ἐστὶν οὔτε οὐχὶ ἐστὶ· δύναται μὲν γὰρ εἶναι κατ’ οὐσίαν, δυνάμει δὲ οὐ δύναται.
- 63 XIX. “ Ποταμὸς δὲ ἐκπορεύεται ἐξ Ἐδέμ ποτίζειν τὸν παράδεισον· ἐκεῖθεν ἀφορίζεται εἰς [56] τέσσαρας ἀρχάς. ὄνομα | τῷ ἐνὶ Φεισῶν· οὗτος ὁ κυκλῶν πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν Εὐλάτ, ἐκεῖ οὐ ἐστὶ τὸ resembles wax that receives all impressions fair and ugly; accordingly the supplanter Jacob makes acknowledgement saying, "Upon me came all these things" (Gen. xlii. 36); for upon the soul, one as it is, the countless impressions of all things in the universe are borne. Whenever, then, it shall have received the stamp of perfect virtue, it straightway becomes the tree of life, but when it receives that of wickedness, it straightway becomes the tree of knowledge of good and evil. But wickedness has been exiled from the divine choir.<sup>a</sup> The ruling part in us therefore that has received it is actually in the garden, for it has in it likewise the stamp of virtue, properly belonging to the garden; but on the other hand it is virtually not in it, because the impress of wickedness is alien to a place of divine sunrising. You may grasp what I mean in this way. At this moment my ruling part is in literal fact in my body, but virtually in Italy or Sicily, when it is pondering on these countries, and in heaven, when it is considering heaven. Accordingly it often happens that people who are actually in unconsecrated spots are really in most sacred ones, when they are forming images of all that pertains to virtue. Others, on the other hand, who are in consecrated spots are in mind profane, owing to their mind admitting bad impressions and inclinations to what is unworthy. Thus wickedness neither is in the garden, nor is it not in it, for it can be there actually, but virtually it cannot.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 61-63

XIX. "A river goes forth from Eden to water the garden: thence it is separated into four heads; the name of the one is Pheison; this is that which encircles all the land of Evilat, there where the gold

<sup>a</sup> Plato, Phaedrus 247 A.

PHILO

χρυσίον· τὸ δὲ χρυσίον τῆς γῆς ἐκείνης καλόν·
 καὶ ἐκεῖ ἐστὶν ὁ ἄνθραξ καὶ ὁ λίθος ὁ πράσινος.
 καὶ ὄνομα τῷ ποταμῷ τῷ δευτέρῳ Γηών· οὗτος
 κυκλοῖ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν Αἰθιοπίας. καὶ ὁ ποταμὸς
 ὁ τρίτος Τίγρις· οὗτος ὁ πορευόμενος κατέναντι Ἀσσυρίων. ὁ δὲ ποταμὸς ὁ τέταρτος Εὐφράτης”
 (Gen. ii. 10–14). διὰ τούτων βούλεται τὰς κατὰ
 μέρος ἀρετὰς ὑπογράφειν· εἰσὶ δὲ τὸν ἀριθμὸν τέτταρες, φρόνησις σωφροσύνη ἀνδρεία δικαιο-σύνη. ὁ μὲν δὴ μέγιστος ποταμὸς, οὗ αἱ τέτταρες ἀπόρροιαὶ γεγόνασιν, ἡ γενικὴ ἐστὶν ἀρετὴ, ἣν
 ἀγαθότητα ὠνομάσαμεν, αἱ δὲ τέτταρες ἀπόρροιαὶ 64 αἱ ἰσάριθμοι ἀρεταί. λαμβάνει μὲν οὖν τὰς ἀρχὰς
 ἡ γενικὴ ἀρετὴ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἐδέμ, τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ
 σοφίας, ἣ χαίρει καὶ γάννυται καὶ τρυφᾷ ἐπὶ
 μόνῳ τῷ πατρὶ αὐτῆς ἀγαλλομένη καὶ σεμνυ-νομένη θεῷ, αἱ δὲ ἐν εἴδει τέτταρες ἀπὸ τῆς
 γενικῆς, ἣτις ποταμοῦ δίκην ἄρδει τὰ κατορθώματα
 ἐκάσταις πολλῷ ρεύματι καλῶν πράξεων.
 65 ἴδωμεν δὲ καὶ τὰς λέξεις. “ ποταμὸς δὲ ” φησὶν
 “ ἐκπορεύεται ἐξ Ἐδέμ ποτίζειν τὸν παράδεισον.”
 ποταμὸς ἡ γενικὴ ἐστὶν ἀρετὴ, ἡ ἀγαθότης· αὕτη ἐκπορεύεται ἐκ τῆς Ἐδέμ, τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ σοφίας·
 ἡ δὲ ἐστὶν ὁ θεοῦ λόγος· κατὰ γὰρ τοῦτον πεποιήται
 ἡ γενικὴ ἀρετὴ. τὸν παράδεισον δὲ ποτίζει ἡ γενικὴ ἀρετὴ, τουτέστι τὰς κατὰ μέρος ἀρετὰς
 ἄρδει. “ ἀρχὰς ” δὲ οὐ τὰς τοπικὰς λαμβάνει,
 ἀλλὰ τὰς ἡγεμονικὰς· ἐκάστη γὰρ τῶν ἀρετῶν
 ἡγεμονὶς καὶ βασιλὶς ὡς ἀληθῶς ἐστὶ. τὸ δὲ “ ἀφορίζεται ” ἴσον ἐστὶ τῷ ὄροις πεπεράτωται·
 ἡ μὲν φρόνησις περὶ τὰ ποιητέα ὄρους αὐτοῖς
 τιθεῖσα, ἡ δὲ ἀνδρεία τοῖς ὑπομενετέοις, ἡ δὲ

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 63-65

is ; and the gold of that land is good ; and there is the ruby and the emerald. And the name of the second river is Geon ; this encompasses all the land of Aethiopia. And the third river is Tigris ; this is that whose course is in front of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates ” (Gen. ii. 10-14). By these rivers his purpose is to indicate the particular virtues. These are four in number,<sup>a</sup> prudence, self-mastery, courage, justice. The largest river, of which the four are effluxes, is generic virtue, which we have called “ goodness. ” The four effluxes are the virtues of the same number. Generic virtue takes its start from Eden, the wisdom of God, which is full of joy, and brightness, and exultation, glorying and priding itself only upon God its Father ; but the specific virtues, four in number, are derived from generic virtue, which like a river waters the perfect achievements of each of them with an abundant flow of noble doings.

Let us look too at the particular words used. “ A river, ” it says “ issues forth from Eden to water the garden. ” “ River ” is generic virtue, goodness. This issues forth out of Eden, the wisdom of God, and this is the Reason of God ; for after that has generic virtue been made. And generic virtue waters the garden, that is, it waters the particular virtues. “ Heads ” he takes not in the sense of locality but of sovereignty. For each of the virtues is in very deed a sovereign and a queen. “ Is separated ” is equivalent to ‘ has boundaries to define it. ’ Prudence, concerned with things to be done, sets boundaries round them ; courage round things to be endured ; self-mastery

<sup>a</sup> The four cardinal virtues belong, of course, to Platonism, though adopted by later philosophers.

PHILO

σωφροσύνη τοῖς αἰρετέοις, ἡ δὲ δικαιοσύνη τοῖς ἀπονεμητέοις.

- 66 XX. “Ὀνομα τῷ ἐνὶ Φεισῶν· οὗτος ὁ κυκλῶν πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν Εὐϊλάτ, ἐκεῖ οὐ ἔστι τὸ χρυσίον, τὸ δὲ χρυσίον τῆς γῆς ἐκείνης καλόν· καὶ ἐκεῖ ἔστιν ὁ ἄνθραξ καὶ ὁ λίθος ὁ πράσινος.” τῶν τεττάρων ἀρετῶν ἐν εἰδός ἐστιν ἡ φρόνησις, ἣν Φεισῶν ὠνόμασε παρὰ τὸ φεῖδεσθαι καὶ φυλάττειν τὴν ψυχὴν ἀπὸ ἀδικημάτων. χορεύει δὲ καὶ κύκλῳ περίεισι τὴν γῆν Εὐϊλάτ, τοῦτο δὲ ἐστι, τὴν εὐμενῆ καὶ πραεῖαν καὶ ἕλεων κατάστασιν [57] περιέπει· καθάπερ δὲ | τῆς χυτῆς οὐσίας ἡ κρατίστη, καὶ δοκιμωτάτη χρυσός ἐστιν, οὕτως καὶ ψυχῆς 67 ἡ δοκιμωτάτη ἀρετὴ φρόνησις γέγονε. τὸ δὲ “ἐκεῖ οὐ ἔστι τὸ χρυσίον” οὐκ ἔστι τοπικὸν τοιοῦτον, ἐκεῖ ὅπου ἐστὶ τὸ χρυσίον, ἀλλ’ ἐκεῖ οὐ κτῆμά ἐστιν ἡ χρυσαυγῆς καὶ πεπυρωμένη καὶ τιμία φρόνησις· κτῆμα δὲ θεοῦ κάλλιστον ἦδε ἀνωμολόγηται. κατὰ δὲ τὸν τόπον τῆς φρονήσεως δύο εἰσὶ ποιοί, ὃ τε φρόνιμος καὶ ὁ φρονῶν, οὓς ἄνθρακι καὶ λίθῳ πρασίῳ παραβέβληκεν.
- 68 XXI. “Καὶ ὄνομα τῷ ποταμῷ τῷ δευτέρῳ Γηῶν· οὗτος κυκλοῖ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν Αἰθιοπίας.” συμβολικῶς ἐστὶν ὁ ποταμὸς οὗτος ἡ ἀνδρεία· ἐρμηνευθὲν γὰρ τὸ Γηῶν ὄνομά ἐστι στήθος ἢ κερατίζων· ἐκάτερον δὲ ἀνδρείας μηνυτικόν· περὶ τε γὰρ τὰ στήθη, ὅπου καὶ ἡ καρδιά, διατρίβει καὶ πρὸς ἄμυναν εὐτρέπισται· ἐπιστήμη γάρ ἐστιν ὑπομενετέων καὶ οὐχ ὑπομενετέων καὶ οὐδετέρων. περικυκλοῖ δὲ καὶ περικάθηται προσπολεμοῦσα τὴν Αἰθιοπίαν, ἧς ἐστὶν ἐρμηνευθὲν τοῦνομα round things to be chosen ; justice round things to be awarded.

<sup>a</sup> φεῖδεσθαι = “to spare.”

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 65-68

XX. "The name of the one is Pheison. This is that which encompasseth all the land of Evilat, there where the gold is ; and the gold of that land is good ; and there is the ruby and the emerald." One species of the four virtues is prudence, which he has called "Pheison," owing to its 'sparing'<sup>a</sup> and guarding the soul from deeds of wrong. And it encircles in its roundel the land of Evilat ; that is to say, it cherishes with care the kindly and gentle and gracious disposition ; and, as of all smelted substance the most excellent and most approved is gold, so of the soul too the most approved virtue is prudence. And the words, "there where (or 'whose') the gold is" are not a mere piece of local information, there where the gold is, but there (is He) whose is the treasure, even prudence gleaming like gold, tried by the fire, and precious ; and prudence is acknowledged to be God's fairest treasure. And in the place where prudence dwells are two corresponding concretes, the man who is prudent, and the man who exercises prudence. These he likens to ruby and emerald.

XXI. "And the name of the second river is Geon ; this encircles all the land of Ethiopia." This river figuratively represents courage ; for the word Geon is 'breast' or 'butting' ; and each of these indicates courage ; for it has its abode about men's breasts, where the heart also is, and it is fully equipped for self-defence ; for it is the knowledge of things that we ought to endure and not to endure, and of things that fall under neither head.<sup>b</sup> And it encompasses and beleaguers Ethiopia, whose name being inter-

<sup>b</sup> This definition of ἀνδρεία is Stoic (S. V. F. iii. 262 ff.).

PHILO

ταπεινώσις· ταπεινὸν δὲ ἢ δειλία, ἢ δὲ ἀνδρεία
ταπεινώσει καὶ δειλία πολέμιον.

- 69 “ Καὶ ὁ ποταμὸς ὁ τρίτος Τίγρις, οὗτος ὁ πορευόμενος κατέναντι Ἀσσυρίων.” τρίτη ἐστὶν
ἀρετὴ σωφροσύνη, ἀντιστατοῦσα τῇ κατευθύνειν δοκούσῃ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην ἀσθένειαν ἡδονῇ· Ἀσσύριοι γὰρ εὐθύνοντες Ἑλλάδι γλώττη καλοῦνται.
τίγριδι δὲ τῷ ἀτιθασωτάτῳ ζῷῳ τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν
εἶκασε, περὶ ἣν ἢ σωφροσύνη πραγματεύεται.
- 70 XXII. ἄξιον μέντοι ἀπορηῆσαι, διὰ τί δευτέρα
μὲν ἀνδρεία, τρίτη δὲ σωφροσύνη, πρώτη δὲ
φρόνησις εἴρηται, καὶ οὐχ ἑτέραν τῶν ἀρετῶν
τάξιν δεδήλωκε. νοητέον οὖν ὅτι ἐστὶν ἡμῶν
τριμερῆς ἡ ψυχὴ καὶ ἔχει μέρος τὸ μὲν λογικόν,
τὸ δὲ θυμικόν, τὸ δὲ ἐπιθυμητικόν. καὶ συμ-βέβηκε τοῦ μὲν λογικοῦ χωρίον εἶναι καὶ ἐν-διαίτημα τὴν κεφαλὴν, τοῦ δὲ θυμικοῦ τὰ στέρνα,
τοῦ δὲ ἐπιθυμητικοῦ τὸ ἦτρον, ἀρετὴν δὲ ἐκάστῳ
τῶν μερῶν οἰκείαν προσηρμόσθαι, τῷ μὲν λογικῷ
φρόνησιν, λογισμοῦ γάρ ἐστὶν ἐπιστήμην ἔχειν
ὧν τε δεῖ ποιεῖν καὶ ὧν μὴ, τῷ δὲ θυμικῷ ἀνδρείαν,
[58] τῷ δὲ ἐπιθυμητικῷ σωφροσύνην, | σωφροσύνη γὰρ
71 τὰς ἐπιθυμίας ἀκούμεθα καὶ ἰώμεθα. ὥσπερ οὖν κεφαλὴ μὲν πρῶτον τοῦ ζώου καὶ ἀνωτάτῳ μέρος
ἐστί, δεύτερον δὲ στέρνα, τρίτον δὲ ἦτρον, καὶ
πάλιν ψυχῆς πρῶτον μὲν τὸ λογικόν, δεύτερον
δὲ τὸ θυμικόν, τρίτον δὲ τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν, οὕτως
καὶ τῶν ἀρετῶν πρώτη μὲν ἢ περὶ τὸ πρῶτον
μέρος τῆς ψυχῆς, ὃ δὴ λογικόν ἐστι, καὶ τοῦ
σώματος διατρίβουσα κεφαλὴν φρόνησις, δευτέρα

• See App. p. 478.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 68-71

preted is 'lowness'; and cowardice is a low thing, while courage is a foe to lowness and cowardice.

"And the third river is Tigris; this is that whose course is over against the Assyrians." Self-mastery is the third virtue, and takes its stand against pleasure, which thinks that it can direct the course of human weakness; for expressed in the Greek tongue "Assyrians" is 'directing.' He further compares desire, with which self-mastery is occupied, to a tiger, the animal least capable of being tamed. XXII. It is worth inquiring why courage is mentioned in the second place, self-mastery in the third, and prudence in the first, and why he has not set forth a different order of the virtues. We must observe, then, that our soul is threefold,<sup>a</sup> and has one part that is the seat of reason, another that is the seat of high spirit, and another that is the seat of desire. And we discover that the head is the place and abode of the reasonable part, the breast of the passionate part, the abdomen of the lustful part; and that to each of the parts a virtue proper to it has been attached; prudence to the reasonable part, for it belongs to reason to have knowledge of the things we ought to do and of the things we ought not; courage to the passionate part; and self-mastery to the lustful part. For it is by self-mastery that we heal and cure our desires. As, then, the head is the first and highest part of the living creature, the breast the second, and the abdomen the third, and again of the soul the reasoning faculty is first, the high-spirited second, the lustful third: so too of the virtues, first is prudence which has its sphere in the first part of the soul which is the domain of reason, and in the first part of the body, namely the head; and second is courage, for it has its seat in high

δὲ ἀνδρεία, ὅτι περὶ τὸ δεύτερον μέρος ψυχῆς μὲν θυμόν, σώματος δὲ τὰ στέρνα φωλεύει, τρίτη δὲ σωφροσύνη, ὅτι περὶ τὸ ἡῆτρον, ὃ δὴ τρίτον ἐστὶ τοῦ σώματος, καὶ περὶ τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν, ὃ τρίτην εἴληχε χώραν ἐν ψυχῇ, πραγματεύεται.

- 72 XXIII. "Ὁ δὲ ποταμὸς" φησὶν "ὁ τέταρτος Εὐφράτης." καρποφορία καλεῖται ὁ Εὐφράτης, ἔστι δὲ συμβολικῶς ἀρετὴ τετάρτη, δικαιοσύνη, καρποφόρος τῷ ὄντι καὶ εὐφραίνουσα τὴν διάνοιαν. πότε οὖν γίνεται; ὅταν τὰ τρία μέρη τῆς ψυχῆς συμφωνίαν ἔχῃ· συμφωνία δὲ αὐτοῖς ἐστὶν ἢ τοῦ κρείττονος ἡγεμονία, οἶον ὅταν τὰ δύο, τὸ τε θυμικὸν καὶ τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν, ἡνιοχῶνται καθάπερ ἵπποι ὑπὸ τοῦ λογικοῦ, τότε γίνεται δικαιοσύνη· δίκαιον γὰρ τὸ μὲν κρείττον ἄρχειν ἀεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ, τὸ δὲ χεῖρον ἄρχεσθαι· κρείττον μὲν δὴ τὸ λογικόν, χεῖρον δὲ τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν καὶ τὸ θυμικόν.
- 73 ὅταν δὲ ἔμπαλιν ἀφηνιάσῃ καὶ ἀναχαιτίσῃ ὁ θυμὸς καὶ ἡ ἐπιθυμία, καὶ τὸν ἡνίοχον, λέγω δὲ τὸν λογισμόν, τῇ βίᾳ τῆς ὀρμῆς κατασύρῃ καὶ ὑποζεύξῃ, ἐκάτερον δὲ πάθος λάβηται τῶν ἡνιῶν, ἀδικία κρατεῖ· ἀνάγκη γὰρ ἀπειρία καὶ κακία <τοῦ> ἡνίοχου τὰ ὑπεξευγμένα κατὰ κρημνῶν φέρεσθαι καὶ βαράθρων, ὥσπερ ἐμπειρία καὶ ἀρετὴ διασώζεσθαι.

- 74 XXIV. "Ἐτι καὶ οὕτως ἴδωμεν τὸ προκείμενον. Φεισῶν ἐρμηνεύεται στόματος ἀλλοίωσις, Εὐλάτ δὲ ὠδίνουσα· καὶ διὰ τούτων ἡ φρόνησις ἐμφαίνεται. οἱ μὲν γὰρ πολλοὶ φρόνιμον νομίζουσι τὸν εὐρετὴν λόγων σοφιστικῶν καὶ δεινὸν ἐρμηνεύσαι τὸ νοηθέν, Μωυσῆς δὲ λογοφίλην μὲν αὐτὸν

<sup>a</sup> See Plato, Phaedrus 253 D.

spirit, the second part of the soul, and in the breast, the corresponding part of the body ; and third self-mastery, for its sphere of action is the abdomen, which is of course the third part of the body, and the lustful faculty, to which has been assigned the third place in the soul.

XXIII. "The fourth river," he says, "is Euphrates." "Euphrates" means 'fruitfulness,' and is a figurative name for the fourth virtue, justice, a virtue fruitful indeed and bringing gladness to the mind. When, then, does it appear? When the three parts of the soul are in harmony. Harmony for them is the dominance of the more excellent ; for instance, when the two, the high-spirited and the lustful, are guided by the reasoning faculty as horses by their driver, then justice emerges ; for it is justice for the better to rule always and everywhere, and for the worse to be ruled : and the reasoning faculty is better, the lustful and the high-spirited the inferior. Whenever, on the other hand, high spirit and desire turn restive and get out of hand, and by the violence of their impetus drag the driver, that is the reason, down from his seat and put him under the yoke, and each of these passions gets hold of the reins, injustice prevails. For it cannot but be that owing to the badness and want of skill of the driver, the team is swept down precipices and gullies, just as by experience and skill it must needs be brought safely through.<sup>a</sup>

XXIV. Now let us go on to look at our subject in this way. "Pheison" signifies 'alteration of mouth,' and "Évilat" 'in travail' : and by these prudence is plainly indicated. For while most people deem the man prudent who can find sophistical arguments, and is clever at expressing his ideas, Moses knows such

PHILO

- οἶδε, φρόνιμον δὲ οὐδαμῶς. ἐν ἀλλοιώσει γὰρ τοῦ στόματος, τουτέστι τοῦ ἑρμηνευτικοῦ λόγου, ἢ φρόνησις θεωρεῖται· ὅπερ ἦν μὴ ἐν λόγῳ τὸ φρονεῖν, ἀλλ' ἐν ἔργῳ θεωρεῖσθαι καὶ σπουδαίαις
- 75 πράξεσι. κύκλον δὲ περιτίθῃσι καὶ ὡσανεὶ τεῖχος ἢ φρόνησις τῇ Εὐιλὰτ τῇ ὠδινούσῃ ἀφροσύνη πρὸς πολιορκίαν αὐτῆς καὶ καθαίρεισιν· ἀφροσύνη δὲ
- [59] κύριον ὄνομά ἐστιν | ὠδίνουσα, ὅτι ὁ ἀφρων νοῦς ἀνεφίκτων ἐρῶν ἐκάστοτε ἐν ὠδίσιν ἐστιν, ὅτε χρημάτων ἐρᾶ, [ὠδίνει,] ὅτε δόξης, ὅτε ἡδονῆς,
- 76 ὅτε ἄλλου τινός. ἐν ὠδίσι δὲ ὧν οὐδέποτε τίκτει· οὐ γὰρ πέφυκε γόνιμον οὐδὲν τελεσφορεῖν ἢ τοῦ φαύλου ψυχῆ· ἃ δ' ἂν καὶ δοκῇ προφέρειν, ἀμβλωθρίδια εὐρίσκεται καὶ ἐκτρώματα, κατεσθίοντα τὸ ἥμισυ τῶν σαρκῶν αὐτῆς, ἴσα θανάτῳ ψυχικῷ. παρὸ καὶ δεῖται ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος Ἁαρῶν τοῦ θεοφιλοῦς Μωυσέως ἰάσασθαι τὴν τροπὴν τῆς Μαρίας, ἵνα μὴ γένηται ἐν ὠδίσι κακῶν ἢ ψυχῆ, διὸ καὶ φησι· “μὴ γένηται ὡς ἴσον θανάτῳ, ὡς ἐκτρωμα ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ μήτρας μητρός, καὶ κατεσθίει τὸ ἥμισυ τῶν σαρκῶν αὐτῆς” (Num. xii. 12).
- 77 XXV. “Ἐκεῖ” οὖν φησιν “οὐ ἐστὶ τὸ χρυσίον” (Gen. ii. 11). οὐ λέγει ἐκεῖ εἶναι τὸ χρυσίον μόνον, ἀλλὰ “ἐκεῖ οὐ ἐστίν.” ἢ γὰρ φρόνησις, ἦν εἴκασε χρυσίῳ, ἀδόλω καὶ καθαρᾷ καὶ πεπυρωμένῃ καὶ δεδοκιμασμένῃ καὶ τιμία φύσει, ἐκεῖ μὲν ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ τοῦ θεοῦ σοφία, ἐκεῖ δὲ οὐσα οὐκ ἐστὶ τῆς σοφίας κτῆμα, ἀλλὰ οὐ καὶ ἡ σοφία ἐστὶν αὐτή, τοῦ δημιουργοῦ καὶ

---

<sup>a</sup> i.e., transference of the matter from the sphere of theory to that of practice.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 74-77

an one to be a lover of words indeed, but a prudent man by no means. For prudence is discerned in "alteration of the mouth,"<sup>a</sup> that is in the word of utterance undergoing a transformation. This comes to the same thing as saying that prudence is not seen in speech but in action and earnest doings. And prudence surrounds with an encircling wall Evilat, or "folly in travail," to besiege and overthrow it. "Travailing" is a name strictly appropriate to folly, because the foolish mind, being enamoured of things out of its reach, is evermore in travail pangs. This is so when it is enamoured of money, when of glory, when of pleasure, when of anything else. But, though in travail, it never brings to the birth, for the soul of the worthless man has not by nature the power to bring forth any offspring. What it seems to produce turn out to be wretched abortions and miscarriages, devouring half of its flesh, an evil tantamount to the death of the soul. Accordingly Aaron, the sacred word, begs of Moses, the beloved of God, to heal the change in Miriam, that her soul may not be in travail with evils; and so he says "Let her not become as one dead, as an abortion coming forth from the womb of a mother; consuming half of her flesh" (Num. xii. 12).

XXV. To resume. "There," it says, "where (or 'whose') the gold is" (Gen. ii. 11). It does not merely say that the gold is there, but "there (is He) 'whose' it is." For prudence, which he has likened to gold, a substance free from alloy and pure and cleansed by fire and tested and precious, is there in the wisdom of God, but, being there, is not a possession of wisdom, but of Him whose is wisdom itself also, even God Who created it and makes it His.

PHILO

78 κτωμένου θεοῦ. “ τὸ δὲ χρυσίον τῆς γῆς ἐκείνης καλόν ” (Gen. ii. 12). οὐκοῦν ἔστιν ἕτερον χρυσίον οὐχὶ καλόν; πάνυ γε· διττὸν γὰρ φρονήσεως γένος, τὸ μὲν καθόλου, τὸ δὲ ἐπὶ μέρους· ἢ μὲν οὖν ἐν ἐμοὶ φρόνησις ἐκ μέρους οὔσα οὐ καλή, φθαρέντος γάρ μου συμφθείρεται· ἢ δὲ καθόλου φρόνησις ἢ οἰκοῦσα τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ σοφίαν καὶ τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ καλή, ἀφθαρτος γὰρ ἐν ἀφθάρτῳ οἴκῳ διαμένει.

79 XXVI. “ Καὶ ἐκεῖ ἔστιν ὁ ἄνθραξ καὶ ὁ λίθος ὁ πράσινος ” (ib.) οἱ δύο ποιοί, ὃ τε φρόνιμος καὶ ὁ φρονῶν, ὁ μὲν συνιστάμενος κατὰ τὴν φρόνησιν, ὁ δὲ φρονῶν κατὰ τὸ φρονεῖν· τούτων γὰρ ἔνεκα τῶν ποιῶν ἔσπειρεν ὁ θεὸς <ἐν> τῷ γηγενεῖ φρόνησίν τε καὶ ἀρετήν· τί γὰρ ὄφελος ἦν αὐτῆς, εἰ μὴ οἱ δεξόμενοι λογισμοὶ ὑπῆρχον καὶ τοὺς τύπους αὐτῆς ἐναπομαζόμενοι; ὥστ' εἰκότως ἐκεῖ ἔστιν, ὅπου ἢ φρόνησις, ὃ τε φρόνιμος καὶ ὁ φρονῶν, οἱ δύο λίθοι. μήποτε δὲ ὁ

80 Ἰούδας ἔστι καὶ ὁ Ἰσάχαρ· ὁ γὰρ τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ φρονήσεως ἀσκητῆς ἐξομολογεῖται εὐχαριστικῶς τῷ τὸ ἀγαθὸν ἀφθόνως δωρησαμένῳ, ὁ δὲ καὶ τὰ καλὰ καὶ σπουδαῖα ἐργάζεται· τοῦ μὲν οὖν ἐξομολογουμένου ὁ Ἰούδας σύμβολον, ἐφ' οὗ καὶ ἴσταται τίκτουσα ἡ Λεία (Gen. xxix. 35), τοῦ δὲ ἐργαζομένου τὰ καλὰ ὁ Ἰσάχαρ, “ ὑπέθηκε γὰρ

<sup>a</sup> In De Sobr. 34 ff. this distinction between the adjective or noun and the verb, the one representing ἔξις and the other ἐνέργεια, is worked out at length. Thus ζῶγραφος signifies a man who can paint, while ζωγραφεῖν means the act of painting. Philo goes on to show that the same distinction applies to the virtues.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 478.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 78-80

“Now the gold of that land is good.” “Is there, then, other gold that is not good?” Yes, indeed, for prudence is of two kinds, the one universal, the other particular. The prudence that is in me, being particular, is not good, for when I perish, it perishes together with me. But the universal prudence, which has for its abode the wisdom of God and His dwelling-place, is good, for, itself imperishable, it abides in an imperishable dwelling-place.

XXVI. “And there is the ruby and the greenstone (ibid.), the two concrete embodiments of this virtue, the man who has good sense, and the man who exercises good sense: the determining quality in the one is potential good sense, that in the other good sense exercised. For it was for the sake of these concretes that God sowed in the earth-born man good sense (in particular) and virtue (in general). For what benefit had there been in virtue had there not been ready for it the activities of reason to welcome it and receive its impressions?” So that, naturally, there where good sense is, there is both the man who has good sense, and the man who exercises good sense, the two precious stones.<sup>a</sup>

Judah and Issachar<sup>b</sup> seem to be these. For the man who exercises himself in the practical wisdom of God, makes thankful acknowledgement to Him who bestowed good without stint; while the representative of the other aspect is furthermore engaged in noble and worthy works. Now of the man who makes confession of thankfulness Judah is the symbol, with whose birth Leah leaves off bearing (Gen. xxix. 35); but of him who is engaged in noble deeds Issachar is the figure, “for he submitted his shoulder to labour

PHILO

τὸν ὤμον εἰς τὸ πονεῖν καὶ ἐγένετο ἀνὴρ γεωργός ”
 (Gen. xlix. 15), ἐφ’ οὗ φησι Μωυσῆς σπαρέντος καὶ φυτευθέντος ἐν ψυχῇ “ ἔστι μισθός ” (Gen.
 xxx. 18), ὅπερ ἦν οὐκ ἀτελής ὁ πόνος ἀλλὰ
 [60] στεφανούμενος ὑπὸ θεοῦ καὶ μισθοδοτούμενος. |
 81 ὅτι δὲ τούτων ποιεῖται μνήμην, δι’ ἐτέρων δηλοῖ,
 ὅταν ἐπὶ τοῦ ποδῆρους φῆ· “ καὶ συνυφανεῖς ἐν
 αὐτῷ λίθον τετράστιχον· στίχος λίθων ἔσται, σάρδιον τοπάζιον σμάραγδος ὁ στίχος ὁ εἰς ”— ‘Ρουβὴν Συμεὼν Λευί—“ καὶ ὁ στίχος ” φησὶν “ ὁ δεύτερος ἄνθραξ καὶ σάπφειρος ” (Exod.
 xxviii. 17, 18)· ὁ δὲ σάπφειρος πράσινος λίθος
 ἐστίν. ἐγγέγλυπται δὲ τῷ μὲν ἄνθρακι ὁ Ἰούδας,
 τέταρτος γάρ, τῷ δὲ σαπφείρῳ ὁ Ἰσάακ.
 82 διὰ τί οὖν οὐχ ὥσπερ λίθον πράσινον
 εἶρηκεν, οὕτως καὶ λίθον ἀνθράκινον; ὅτι ὁ μὲν Ἰούδας ὁ ἐξομολογητικὸς τρόπος αὐλός ἐστι καὶ
 ἀσώματος· καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸ τοῦνομα τὸ τῆς ἐξομολογήσεως ἐμφαίνει τὴν ἐκτὸς ἑαυτοῦ ὁμολογίαν·
 ὅταν γὰρ ἐκβῆ ὁ νοῦς ἑαυτοῦ καὶ ἑαυτὸν ἀνεύγκη
 θεῷ, ὥσπερ ὁ γέλως Ἰσαάκ, τηνικαῦτα ὁμολογίαν
 τὴν πρὸς τὸν ὄντα ποιεῖται· ἕως δὲ ἑαυτὸν ὑποτίθεται ὡς αἰτίον τινος, μακρὰν ἀφέστηκε τοῦ παραχωρεῖν θεῷ καὶ ὁμολογεῖν αὐτῷ· καὶ αὐτὸ γὰρ
 τοῦτο τὸ ἐξομολογεῖσθαι νοητέον ὅτι ἔργον ἐστὶν
 οὐχὶ τῆς ψυχῆς, ἀλλὰ τοῦ φαίνοντος αὐτῇ θεοῦ τὸ εὐχάριστον. αὐλος μὲν δὴ ὁ ἐξομολογούμενος

---

<sup>a</sup> “Judah” is derived from a verb meaning “to thank”:
 “Issachar” from a noun meaning “reward.” That thankful acknowledgement of God’s goodness is the crowning virtue is typified by Leah ceasing to bear when she had given birth to Judah (Heinemann).

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 80-82

and became a tiller of the soil " (Gen. xlix. 15). In his case, as Moses says, when he has been sown and planted in the soul " there is a reward " (Gen. xxx. 18),<sup>a</sup> that is to say his labour is not in vain, but crowned by God and awarded a recompense. That he is referring to these patriarchs he shows elsewhere when he says of the high-priestly garment, " And thou shalt weave together in it precious stones in fourfold order : there shall be a row of precious stones, sardius, topaz, smaragdus, making the one row "—Reuben, Simeon, Levi—" and the second row " it says " ruby and sapphire " (Exod. xxviii. 17 f.) : but the sapphire is a green stone. Now Judah is engraved in the ruby, for he is fourth in order, and Issachar on the sapphire.

Why then, while saying " a green stone," does he not also say, " a ruby stone " ?<sup>b</sup> Because Judah, the disposition prone to make confession of praise, is exempt from body and matter. For indeed the very word denoting confession (of praise) vividly portrays the acknowledgement that takes a man out of himself. For whenever the mind goes out from itself and offers itself up to God, as Isaac or " laughter," does, then does it make confession of acknowledgement towards the Existent One. But so long as the mind supposes itself to be the author of anything, it is far away from making room for God and from confessing or making acknowledgement to Him. For we must take note that the very confession of praise itself is the work not of the soul but of God who gives it thankfulness.<sup>c</sup> Incorporeal assuredly is Judah with his confession of praise.

<sup>a</sup> i.e., in Gen. ii. 12.

<sup>c</sup> φαίνειν, " cause to appear " = " give." Cf. Odyssey, iv. 12, xv. 26.

PHILO

- 83 Ἰούδας. τῷ δὲ ἐκ πόνου προεληλυθότι Ἰσάαχαρ δεῖ καὶ ὕλης σωματικῆς· ἐπεὶ πῶς ἀναγνώσεται χωρὶς ὀμμάτων ὁ ἀσκητής; πῶς δὲ ἀκούσεται τῶν προτρεπτικῶν λόγων χωρὶς ἀκοῆς; πῶς δὲ σιτίων καὶ ποτῶν ἐφίξεται δίχα γαστρὸς καὶ τῆς περὶ αὐτὴν τερατουργίας; διὰ τοῦτο λίθῳ ἀπ-
- 84 εικάσθη. καὶ τὰ χρώματα μέντοι διάφορα· τῷ μὲν γὰρ ἐξομολογητικῶ οἰκεία χροιά ἢ τοῦ ἀνθρακος, πεπύρωται γὰρ ἐν εὐχαριστίᾳ θεοῦ καὶ μεθύει τὴν νήφουσαν μέθην, τῷ δὲ ἔτι πονοῦντι ἢ τοῦ πρασίνου λίθου, ὠχροὶ γὰρ οἱ ἐν ἀσκήσει διὰ τε τὸν τρύχοντα πόνον καὶ διὰ δέος τοῦ μὴ τυχεῖν ἂν ἴσως τοῦ κατ' εὐχὴν τέλους.
- 85 XXVII. Ἄξιον δὲ διαπορῆσαι, διὰ τί οἱ μὲν δύο ποταμοὶ ὁ Φεισῶν καὶ ὁ Γηῶν κυκλοῦσι χώρας, ὁ μὲν τὴν Εὐιλιάτ, ὁ δὲ τὴν Αἰθιοπίαν, τῶν δὲ λοιπῶν οὐδέτερος, ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν Τίγρις κατ-έναντι Ἀσσυρίων λέγεται εἶναι, ὁ δὲ Εὐφράτης οὐδενός· καίτοι γε πρὸς τὸ ἀληθές ὁ Εὐφράτης καὶ περιρρεῖ τινὰς χώρας καὶ ἀντικρὺς ἔχει πολλὰς· ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔστι περὶ τοῦ ποταμοῦ ὁ λόγος, ἀλλὰ
- 86 περὶ ἧθους ἐπανορθώσεως. λεκτέον οὖν ὅτι ἢ μὲν φρόνησις καὶ ἡ ἀνδρεία δύνανται κύκλον καὶ τεῖχος βαλέσθαι κατὰ τῶν ἐναντίων κακιῶν, ἀφροσύνης τε καὶ δειλίας, καὶ ἐλεῖν αὐτάς· ἀσθενεῖς γὰρ καὶ εὐάλωτοι ἀμφότεροι, καὶ γὰρ ὁ ἄφρων εὐληπτος τῷ φρονίμῳ καὶ ὁ δειλὸς ὑποπέπτωκε τῷ ἀνδρείῳ·
- [61] ἢ δὲ σωφροσύνη ἀδυνατεῖ κυκλώσασθαι | τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν καὶ ἡδονήν· χαλεπαὶ γὰρ ἀντίπαλοι καὶ δυσκαθαίρετοι· οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι καὶ οἱ ἐγκρατέστατοι

But for Issachar who has advanced through labour there is need accordingly of a material body. For how shall the keen endeavourer read without eyes? How shall he hear the words of encouragement without ears? How shall he eat food and drink without a stomach and its wonderful processes? That is why he is likened to a stone. Yes, and the colours differ. To him who makes confession of praise the hue of the ruby belongs, for he is permeated by fire in giving thanks to God, and is drunk with a sober drunkenness. But to him who is still labouring the hue of the green stone is proper, for men in exercise and training are pale, both by reason of the wearing labour and by reason of the fear that they may perchance not obtain the result that accords with their prayer.

XXVII. It is worth inquiring why, while the two rivers Pheison and Geon encompass countries, the one Evilat, the other Ethiopia, neither of the others does so; but of the Tigris it is said that it is over against the Assyrians, and the Euphrates is not said to be over against anything; and yet as a matter of fact the Euphrates both flows round many countries and has many facing it. But the subject of the passage is not the river, but amendment of character. We must observe, then, that prudence and courage are able to construct an enclosing wall against the opposite vices, folly and cowardice, and capture them; for they are both of them weak and easy to take, for the foolish man falls an easy victim to the prudent man, and the coward lies at the mercy of the brave man; self-mastery on the contrary is powerless to encircle desire and pleasure; for they are hard to wrestle with and difficult to overthrow. Mark you not that

PHILO

ἀνάγκη τοῦ θνητοῦ παραγίνονται ἐπὶ σιτία καὶ ποτά, ἐξ ὧν αἱ γαστροὶ ἡδοναὶ συνεστᾶσιν; ἀγαπητὸν οὖν ἐστὶν ἀντιβῆναι καὶ μαχέσασθαι τῷ
 87 γένει τῆς ἐπιθυμίας. διὸ καὶ κατέναντι Ἀσσυρίων ἐστὶν ὁ Τίγρις ποταμὸς, ἡ σωφροσύνη τῆς ἡδονῆς. ἡ δέ γε δικαιοσύνη, καθ' ἣν ὁ Εὐφράτης ποταμὸς συνίσταται, οὔτε πολιορκεῖ καὶ περιτειχίζει τινὰ οὔτε ἀντιστατεῖ· διὰ τί; ὅτι ἀπονεμητικὴ τῶν κατ' ἀξίαν ἐστὶν ἡ δικαιοσύνη καὶ τέτακται οὔτε κατὰ τὸν κατήγορον οὔτε κατὰ τὸν ἀπολογούμενον, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸν δικαστήν. ὥσπερ οὖν ὁ δικαστὴς οὔτε νικῆσαί τινος προήρηται οὔτε πολεμῆσαί τισι καὶ ἐναντιωθῆναι, γνώμην δὲ ἀποφηνάμενος βραβεύει τὸ δίκαιον, οὔτως ἡ δικαιοσύνη οὐδενὸς οὔσα ἀντίδικος ἀπονέμει τὸ κατ' ἀξίαν ἐκάστω πράγματι.

88 XXVIII. “Καὶ ἔλαβε κύριος ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃν ἐποίησε καὶ ἔθετο αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, ἐργάζεσθαι αὐτὸν καὶ φυλάσσειν” (Gen. ii. 15). τοῦ πλασθέντος διαφέρει ὃν ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς ἄνθρωπον, ὡς εἶπον· ὁ μὲν γὰρ πλασθεὶς νοῦς ἐστὶ γεωδέστερος, ὁ δὲ ποιηθεὶς ἀυλότερος, φθαρτῆς ὕλης ἀμέτοχος, καθαρωτέρας καὶ εἰλικρινε-
 89 στέρας τετυχηκῶς συστάσεως. τοῦτον οὖν τὸν καθαρὸν νοῦν λαμβάνει ὁ θεός, οὐκ ἐὼν ἐκτὸς ἑαυτοῦ βαίνειν, καὶ λαβὼν τίθησιν ἐν ταῖς ἐρριζωμέναις καὶ βλαστανούσαις ἀρεταῖς, ἵνα ἐργάζεταιται αὐτὰς καὶ φυλάττη. πολλοὶ γὰρ ἀσκηταὶ γενόμενοι τῆς ἀρετῆς ἐπὶ τοῦ τέλους μετέβαλον· ὧ δὲ παρέχει ὁ θεὸς ἐπιστήμην βεβαίαν, τούτῳ δίδωσιν ἀμφοτέρα, ἐργάζεσθαι τε τὰς ἀρετὰς καὶ

<sup>a</sup> The Stoic definition of justice, S. V. F. iii. 262.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 86-89

even the most self-controlled of men under compulsion of the mortal element in them resort to food and drink, out of which the pleasures of the appetite develop? So we must be content to face and fight lust as a principle. That is why the river Tigris is over against the Assyrians, self-mastery over against pleasure. Justice, however, the characteristic of the river Euphrates, neither besieges and encircles anyone with a palisade, nor withstands any in conflict. Why? Because it is the function of justice to assign to each what he deserves,<sup>a</sup> and justice sustains the part neither of prosecutor nor of defendant but of judge. Even as the judge, therefore, makes it his business neither to conquer any persons, nor to wage war on any and oppose them, but pronounces a judgement and awards what is just, so too justice, being nobody's opponent, accords to each matter what it merits.

XXVIII. "And the Lord God took the man whom He had made, and placed him in the garden to till and to guard it" (Gen. ii. 15). "The man whom God made" differs, as I have said before, from the one that "was moulded": for the one that was moulded is the more earthly mind, the one that was made the less material, having no part in perishable matter, endowed with a constitution of a purer and clearer kind. This pure mind, then, God takes, not suffering it to go outside of Himself, and, having taken it, sets it among the virtues that have roots and put forth shoots, that he may till them and guard them. For many, after beginning to practise virtue, have changed at the last: but on the man to whom God affords secure knowledge, He bestows both advantages, both that of tilling the virtues, and also μηδέποτε αὐτῶν ἀφίστασθαι, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ ταμιεύειν καὶ φυλάττειν ἐκάστην. τὸ μὲν οὖν “ ἐργάζεσθαι ” ἀντὶ τοῦ πράττειν, τὸ δὲ “ φυλάττειν ” ἀντὶ τοῦ μνημονεύειν.

PHILO

- 90 XXIX. “ Καὶ ἐνετείλατο κύριος ὁ θεὸς τῷ Ἀδὰμ λέγων· ἀπὸ παντὸς ξύλου τοῦ ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ βρώσει φάγη, ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ ξύλου τοῦ γινώσκειν καλὸν καὶ πονηρὸν οὐ φάγεσθε ἀπ' αὐτοῦ· ἢ δ' ἂν ἡμέρα φάγητε ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, θανάτῳ ἀποθανείσθε ” (Gen. ii. 16, 17). ποιῶ
- Ἀδὰμ ἐντέλλεται καὶ τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος, διαπορητέον· οὐ γὰρ μέμνηται πρότερον αὐτοῦ, νυνὶ δὲ πρῶτον ὠνόμακεν αὐτόν. μήποτ' οὖν βούλεται σοι τοῦ πλαστοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραστήσαι τοῦνομα. κάλει|
- [62] δῆ, φησὶν, αὐτὸν γῆν· τοῦτο γὰρ Ἀδὰμ ἐρμηνεύεται, ὥστε ὅταν ἀκούῃς Ἀδὰμ, γῆνον καὶ φθαρτὸν νοῦν εἶναι νόμιζε· ὁ γὰρ κατ' εἰκόνα οὐ
- 91 γῆνιος, ἀλλ' οὐράνιος. ζηητέον δέ, διὰ τί πᾶσιν ἐπιτιθεῖς τοῖς ἄλλοις τὰ ὀνόματα οὐκ ἐπιτέθεικεν ἑαυτῷ. τί οὖν λεκτέον; ὁ νοῦς ὁ ἐν ἐκάστῳ ἡμῶν τὰ μὲν ἄλλα δύναται καταλαβεῖν, ἑαυτὸν δὲ γνωρίσαι ἀδυνάτως ἔχει· ὥσπερ γὰρ ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς τὰ μὲν ἄλλα ὄρα, ἑαυτὸν δὲ οὐχ ὄρα, οὕτως καὶ ὁ νοῦς τὰ μὲν ἄλλα νοεῖ, ἑαυτὸν δὲ οὐ καταλαμβάνει· εἰπάτω γάρ, τίς τέ ἐστι καὶ ποταπός, πνεῦμα ἢ αἷμα ἢ πῦρ ἢ ἀήρ ἢ ἕτερόν τι [σῶμα], ἢ τοσοῦτόν γε ὅτι σῶμά ἐστιν ἢ πάλιν ἀσώματον. εἶτ' οὐκ εὐήθεις οἱ περὶ θεοῦ σκεπτόμενοι οὐσίας; οἱ γὰρ τῆς ἰδίας ψυχῆς τὴν οὐσίαν οὐκ ἴσασι, πῶς ἂν περὶ τῆς τῶν ὄλων ψυχῆς ἀκριβώσαιεν; ἢ

<sup>a</sup> “Feedingly” is a rough representation of the Hebrew idiom. E.V. “freely.”

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 89-91

that of never desisting from them, but of evermore husbanding and guarding each one of them. So "tilling" represents practising, while "guarding" represents remembering.

XXIX. "And the Lord God commanded Adam saying : From every tree that is in the garden thou shalt feedingly <sup>a</sup> eat, but of the tree of knowing good and evil ye shall not eat of it : and in the day that ye eat of it ye shall surely die " (Gen. ii. 16, 17).

We must raise the question what Adam He commands and who this is ; for the writer has not mentioned him before, but has named him now for the first time. Perchance, then, he means to give us the name of the man that was moulded. "Call him earth" he says, for that is the meaning of "Adam," so that when you hear the word "Adam," you must make up your mind that it is the earthly and perishable mind ; for the mind that was made after the image is not earthly but heavenly. And we must inquire why when assigning their names to all the other creatures Adam did not assign one to himself. What, then, are we to say ? The mind that is in each one of us can apprehend other objects, but is incapable of knowing itself. For just as the eye sees other objects but does not see itself, so the mind too perceives other objects, but does not apprehend itself. Can it say what it is and of what kind, breath or blood or fire or air or anything else ? Can it even say that it is a body or else that it is incorporeal ? Are not they simpletons, then, who inquire about God's substance ? For how should those, who know not the substance of their own soul, have accurate ideas about the soul of the universe ? For

PHILO

- γὰρ τῶν ὄλων ψυχὴ ὁ θεὸς ἐστὶ κατὰ ἔννοιαν.
- 92 XXX. εἰκότως οὖν ὁ Ἀδάμ, τουτέστιν ὁ νοῦς, τὰ ἄλλα ὀνομάζων καὶ καταλαμβάνων, ἑαυτῷ ὄνομα οὐκ ἐπιτίθησιν, ὅτι ἑαυτὸν ἀγνοεῖ καὶ τὴν ἰδίαν φύσιν. ἐντέλλεται δὲ τούτῳ καὶ οὐχὶ τῷ κατ' εἰκόνα καὶ κατὰ τὴν ιδέαν γεγονότι· ἐκείνος μὲν γὰρ καὶ δίχα προτροπῆς ἔχει τὴν ἀρετὴν αὐτομαθῶς, οὗτος δ' ἄνευ διδασκαλίας οὐκ ἂν φρο-
- 93 νήσεως ἐπιλάχοι. διαφέρει δὲ τρία ταῦτα· πρόσταξις, ἀπαγόρευσις, ἐντολὴ καὶ παραίνεσις· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀπαγόρευσις περὶ ἀμαρτημάτων γίνεται καὶ πρὸς φαῦλον, ἡ δὲ πρόσταξις <περὶ> κατορθωμάτων, ἡ δὲ παραίνεσις πρὸς τὸν μέσον, τὸν μήτε φαῦλον μήτε σπουδαῖον· οὔτε γὰρ ἀμαρτάνει, ὡς ἀπαγορεύειν ἂν τινα αὐτῷ, οὔτε κατορθοῖ κατὰ τὴν τοῦ ὀρθοῦ λόγου πρόσταξιν, ἀλλὰ χρεῖαν ἔχει παραινέσεως τῆς ἀπέχειν<sup>1</sup> μὲν τῶν φαύλων διδασκουσύης, προτρεπούσης δὲ ἐφίεσθαι τῶν ἀστειῶν.
- 94 τῷ μὲν οὖν τελείῳ τῷ κατ' εἰκόνα προστάττειν ἢ ἀπαγορεύειν ἢ παραινεῖν οὐχὶ δεῖ, οὐδενὸς γὰρ τούτων ὁ τέλειος δεῖται, τῷ δὲ φαύλῳ προστάξεως καὶ ἀπαγορεύσεως χρεῖα, τῷ δὲ νηπίῳ παραινέσεως καὶ διδασκαλίας, ὥσπερ τῷ τελείῳ γραμματικῷ ἢ μουσικῷ οὐδενὸς δεῖ παρραγγέλματος τῶν εἰς τὰς τέχνας, τῷ δὲ σφαλλομένῳ περὶ τὰ θεωρήματα ὡσανεὶ τινῶν νόμων προστάξις καὶ ἀπαγορεύσεις ἐχόντων, τῷ δὲ ἄρτι μαθάνοντι

<sup>1</sup> ἀπέχειν has three mss. and, apparently, the Armenian version on its side, as against ἀνέχειν = "cease from," which would fit the bad man, but not the neutral man. In Plutarch, Life of Alexander, ch. xxxiii., to which L. and S. (1925) refer, ἀνέχων is probably transitive. For ἀπέχειν see especially Xen. Mem. i. 2. 62, for ἀνέχειν De Opif. 128.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 91-94

we may conceive of God as the soul of the universe.<sup>a</sup> XXX. Quite naturally, therefore, Adam, that is the Mind, though he names and apprehends other things, gives no name to himself, since he is ignorant of himself and his own nature. Now it is to this being, and not to the being created after His image and after the original idea, that God gives the command. For the latter, even without urging, possesses virtue instinctively; but the former, independently of instruction, could have no part in wisdom. There is a difference between these three—injunction, prohibition, command accompanied by exhortation. For prohibition deals with wrongdoings and is addressed to the bad man, injunction concerns duties rightly done, and exhortation is addressed to the neutral man, the man who is neither bad nor good: for he is neither sinning, to lead anyone to forbid him, nor is he so doing right as right reason enjoins, but has need of exhortation, which teaches him to refrain from evil things, and incites him to aim at things noble. There is no need, then, to give injunctions or prohibitions or exhortations to the perfect man formed after the (Divine) image, for none of these does the perfect man require. The bad man has need of injunction and prohibition, and the child of exhortation and teaching. Just so the perfect master of music or letters requires none of the directions that apply to those arts, whereas the man who stumbles over the subjects of his study does require what we may call laws or rules with their injunctions and prohibitions, while one who is now beginning to learn requires teaching.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 478.

PHILO

- [63] | διδασκαλίας. εικότως οὖν τῷ γήινῳ νῶ
 95 μήτε φαύλῳ ὄντι μήτε σπουδαίῳ ἀλλὰ μέσῳ τὰ
 νῦν ἐντέλλεται καὶ παραινεί. ἡ δὲ παραίνεσις
 γίνεται δι' ἀμφοτέρων τῶν κλήσεων καὶ τοῦ
 κυρίου καὶ τοῦ θεοῦ, “ ἐνετείλατο ” γὰρ “ κύριος
 ὁ θεός,” ἵνα, εἰ μὲν πείθοιτο ταῖς παραινέσεσιν,
 ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ εὐεργεσιῶν ἀξιωθείη, εἰ δὲ ἀφηγιάζοι,
 ὑπὸ τοῦ κυρίου ὡς δεσπότης καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχοντας 96 σκορακίζοιτο. διόπερ καὶ ὅτε ἐκβάλλεται τοῦ παραδείσου, τὰς αὐτὰς κλήσεις παρείληφε, λέγει
 γάρ· “ καὶ ἐξαπέστειλεν αὐτὸν κύριος ὁ θεός ἐκ
 τοῦ παραδείσου τῆς τρυφῆς, ἐργάζεσθαι τὴν γῆν
 ἐξ ἧς ἐλήφθη ” (Gen. iii. 23), ἵνα, ἐπεὶ καὶ ὡς
 δεσπότης ὁ κύριος καὶ ὡς εὐεργέτης ὁ θεός ἐνετέλλετο, πάλιν ὡς ἀμφοτέρα ὦν τὸν παρακούσαντα τιμωρῆται· δι' ὧν γὰρ προὔτρεπε δυνάμειν, διὰ
 τούτων τὸν ἀπειθοῦντα ἀποπέμπεται.
- 97 XXXI. “ Ἄ δὲ παραινεί, ταῦτά ἐστιν· “ ἀπὸ παντὸς ξύλου τοῦ ἐν τῷ παράδεισῳ βρώσει
 φάγη ” (Gen. ii. 16). προτρέπει τὴν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ψυχὴν μὴ ἀφ' ἐνὸς ξύλου μηδ' ἀπὸ μιᾶς ἀρετῆς ἀλλ' ἀπὸ πασῶν τῶν ἀρετῶν ὠφελείσθαι·
 τὸ γὰρ φαγεῖν σύμβολόν ἐστι τροφῆς ψυχικῆς·
 τρέφεται δὲ ἡ ψυχὴ ἀναλήψει τῶν καλῶν καὶ
 98 πράξει τῶν κατορθωμάτων. μὴ μόνον δέ φησι “ φάγη,” ἀλλὰ καὶ “ βρώσει,” τουτέστι καταλέσας καὶ ἐπιλεάνας μὴ ἰδιώτου ἀλλ' ἀθλητοῦ τρόπον τὴν τροφήν, ἵνα ἰσχὺν καὶ δύνάμειν περι-

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 95-98

Quite naturally, then, does God give the commandments and exhortations before us to the earthly man who is neither bad nor good but midway between these. To enforce the exhortation, both Divine titles are employed, both "Lord" and "God," for it says "God the Lord commanded him." This is in order that, should he obey the exhortations, he may be deemed worthy by God of His benefactions ; but that, should he rebel, he may be driven from the presence of the Lord who has a Master's authority over him. For this reason again, when he is being cast out of the garden, the sacred writer has introduced the same titles, for he says, "And the Lord God sent him forth out of the garden of delight, to till the ground, out of which he was taken" (Gen. iii. 23). This is to show that, since "the Lord" as Master and "God" as Benefactor had issued the commands, so in both capacities does He inflict punishment on him who had disobeyed them. For he dismisses the disobedient by the exercise of the very powers which He had exercised in urging him to obedience.

XXXI. The charge which he gives is this : "From every tree that is in the garden thou shalt eat feedingly thereon" (Gen. ii. 16). He moves the soul of the man to get benefit, not from a single tree or from a single virtue but from all the virtues : for eating is a figure of soul-nourishment : and the soul is nourished by the acquisition of things noble, and the practice of things rightful. And He says not merely "shalt eat," but also "feedingly," that is, chewing and masticating the nourishment, not like an ordinary person, but like an athlete, that you may ποιήσῃ· καὶ γὰρ τοῖς ἀθληταῖς οἱ ἀλείπται παραγγέλλουσι μὴ κάπτειν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ σχολὴν λεαίνειν, ἵνα πρὸς ἰσχὺν ἐπιδιδῶσιν· ἐτέρως γὰρ ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ ἀθλητῆς τρεφόμεθα, ἐγὼ μὲν γὰρ ἕνεκα τοῦ ζῆν μόνον, ὁ δὲ ἀθλητῆς καὶ ἕνεκα τοῦ πιαίνεσθαι καὶ ῥώννυσθαι, παρὸ καὶ ἓν τι τῶν ἀσκητικῶν ἐστὶ τὸ λεαίνεσθαι τροφήν. τὸ “ βρώσει φαγεῖν ” ἐστὶ 99 τοιοῦτον. ἔτι δὲ ἀκριβέστερον διατυπώσωμεν αὐτό. τὸ τιμᾶν τοὺς γονεῖς ἐδώδιμον καὶ τρόφιμόν ἐστίν· ἀλλ’ ἐτέρως οἱ ἀγαθοὶ καὶ οἱ φαῦλοι τιμῶσιν, οἱ μὲν γὰρ διὰ τὸ ἔθος, οἷτινες οὐ βρώσει ἐσθίουσιν, ἀλλὰ μόνον ἐσθίουσι· πότε οὖν καὶ βρώσει; ὅταν ἀναπτύξαντες καὶ τὰς αἰτίας ἐρευνήσαντες κρίνωσιν ἐκουσίως, ὅτι καλὸν τοῦτ’ ἐστίν· αἱ δὲ αἰτίαι τοιαῦται· ἐγέννησαν ἡμᾶς, ἔθρεψαν, ἐπαίδευσαν, πάντων αἴτιοι γεγόνασιν ἀγαθῶν. πάλιν ἐδώδιμον <τὸ> τὸν ὄντα τιμᾶσθαι· τότε δὲ “ βρώσει,” ὅταν καὶ μετὰ τῆς τοῦ κεφαλαίου ἀναπτύξεως καὶ τῆς τῶν αἰτιῶν ἀποδόσεως.

PHILO

100 XXXII. “ Ἄπο δὲ τοῦ ξύλου τοῦ γινώσκειν καλὸν καὶ πονηρὸν οὐ φάγεσθε ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ ” (Gen. ii. 17). οὐκοῦν οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ τὸ [64] ξύλον | τοῦτο· εἰ γὰρ ἀπὸ παντὸς ἐσθίειν παραγγέλλει τῶν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, ἀπὸ δὲ τούτου μὴ φαγεῖν, δῆλον ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ· καὶ φυσικῶς· ἔστι γάρ, ὡς ἔφην, οὐσία καὶ οὐκ ἔστι δυνάμει. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐν τῷ κηρῷ δυνάμει μὲν εἰσι πᾶσαι αἱ σφραγίδες, ἐντελεχεία δὲ μόνῃ ἡ

gain strength and power : for, as we know, the trainers charge the athletes not to bolt their food, but to masticate it slowly, in order that they may grow stronger. For the athlete and I take nourishment with different objects ; I, just to sustain life, the athlete, for the further purpose of growing brawny and strong ; and so mastication of food is a special point in training. Such is the meaning of " thou shalt eat feedingly thereon."

Let us try to form a yet more precise conception of it. To honour our parents is something eatable and nutritious : but good and bad sons honour them differently, the latter in compliance with custom, and these do not " eat feedingly," but simply eat. When, then, eat they feedingly too ? When, after exploring the precept and searching for the grounds on which it rests, they freely determine that such conduct is noble. The grounds for it are such as these : they gave us birth, nurtured us, educated us, have been authors of all good things to us. Honour again shown to the Existent One is something eatable ; it is shown " feedingly," when the honour we show is coupled with close search into the precept, and with a due appreciation of its motives.<sup>a</sup>

XXXII. " But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil ye shall not eat " (Gen. ii. 17). Therefore this tree is not in the garden : for if He bids them to eat of every tree in the garden, but not to eat of this one, it is evident that it is not in the garden : and this is quite naturally so : for actually, as I have said, it is there, and virtually it is not. For as all the impressions are virtually in the wax, but actually only the one that has been made, so in the

<sup>a</sup> Or " rendering of our reasons."

PHILO

τετυπωμένη, οὕτως καὶ ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ κηροειδεῖ ὑπαρχούσῃ πάντες οἱ τύποι περιέχονται δυνάμει, οὐκ ἀποτελέσματι, κρατεῖ δὲ ὁ εἰς χαραχθεὶς ἐν αὐτῇ, ἕως μὴ ἀπαλήλιπται ὑφ' ἑτέρου ἐναργέστερον καὶ ἐκδήλως μᾶλλον ἐπιχαράζαντος.

- 101 ἐξῆς καὶ κεῖνο διαπορητέον· ὅτε μὲν παραινεῖ ἀπὸ παντὸς ξύλου τοῦ παραδείσου ἐσθίειν, ἕνα προτρέπει, ὅτε δὲ ἀπαγορεύει χρῆσθαι τῷ πονηροῦ καὶ καλοῦ αἰτίῳ, πλείοσι διαλέγεται· ἐκεῖ μὲν γὰρ φησιν “ ἀπὸ παντὸς φάγη,” ἐνταῦθα δὲ “ οὐ φάγεσθε ” καὶ “ ἦ δ' ἂν ἡμέρα φάγητε,” οὐχὶ
- 102 φάγῃς, καὶ “ ἀποθανεῖσθε,” οὐχὶ ἀποθανῆ. λεκτέον οὖν τάδε, ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν σπάνιόν ἐστι τὰγαθόν, τὸ δὲ κακὸν πολύχουν· διὰ τοῦτο σοφὸν μὲν εὐρεῖν ἕνα μόνον ἔργον, φαύλων δὲ πλῆθος ἀναρίθμητον· εἰκότως οὖν ἐνὶ παραγγέλλει ταῖς ἀρεταῖς ἐντρέφεισθαι, πολλοῖς δὲ περὶ τοῦ πανουρ-
- 103 γίας ἀπέχεσθαι, ταύτῃ γὰρ μυρίοι χρῶνται. δευτέρον <δέ>, εἰς ἀρετῆς ἀνάληψίν τε καὶ χρῆσιν ἐνὸς μόνου δεῖ τοῦ λογισμοῦ· τὸ δὲ σῶμα οὐχ οἶον οὐ συνεργεῖ πρὸς τοῦτο, ἀλλὰ καὶ κωλυσιεργεῖ· σχεδὸν γὰρ σοφίας ἔργον τοῦτ' ἐστίν, ἀλλοτριουῖσθαι πρὸς τὸ σῶμα καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας αὐτοῦ· εἰς δὲ ἀπόλαυσιν κακίας οὐ μόνον δεῖ πως ἔχειν τὸν νοῦν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν αἴσθησιν καὶ τὸν λόγον
- 104 καὶ τὸ σῶμα· ὁ γὰρ φαῦλος δεῖται τούτων ἀπάντων πρὸς ἐκπλήρωσιν τῆς ἰδίας κακίας· ἐπεὶ πῶς

<sup>a</sup> Plato, Phaedo 65 A.

soul, whose nature is waxlike, all the types are contained virtually, but not in actual execution, and the single one engraved in it is in possession, so long as it has not been obliterated by another seal which has made over it a clearer and bolder impression.

Next there is this further question to be raised. When He is giving the charge to eat of every tree of the garden, He addresses the command to a single person, but when He issues the prohibition against making any use of that which causes evil and good, He speaks to more than one : for in the former case He says, " Thou shalt eat from every tree " ; but in the latter, " ye shall not eat, and in the day that ye eat " not " that thou eatest," and " ye shall die " not " thou shalt die." We must accordingly remark in the first place that the good is scarce, the evil abundant. Hence it is hard to find a single wise man, while of inferior men there is a countless multitude. Quite fitly, therefore, does He bid a single man to find nourishment in the virtues, but many to abstain from evil-doing, for myriads practise this. In the second place, for the acquisition and practice of virtue a single thing only, namely our understanding, is requisite : but the body not only fails to co-operate to this end, but is an actual hindrance ; for we may almost make it an axiom that the business of wisdom is to become estranged from the body and its cravings<sup>a</sup> : but for the enjoyment of evil it is necessary not only that the mind be in a certain condition, but also the power of perception and of speech, in fact the body ; for all these the inferior man requires for the full satisfaction of his particular form of wickedness. For how shall he divulge sacred and hidden truths

PHILO

ἐκλαλήσει μυστήρια φωνητήριον οὐκ ἔχων ὄργανον; πῶς δὲ ταῖς ἡδοναῖς χρήσεται γαστρὸς καὶ τῶν αἰσθητηρίων στερόμενος; δεόντως οὖν ἐνὶ μὲν τῷ λογισμῷ διαλέγεται περὶ κτήσεως ἀρετῆς, μόνου γάρ, ὡς ἔφην, ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ χρεία πρὸς τὴν ἀνάληψιν αὐτῆς, περὶ δὲ κακίας πλείοσι, ψυχῇ, λόγῳ, αἰσθήσεσι, σώματι, διὰ πάντων γὰρ τούτων ἐμφαίνεται.

- 105 XXXIII. Λέγει γε μὴν· “ ἦ ἂν ἡμέρα φάγητε ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ, θανάτῳ ἀποθανεῖσθε ” (Gen. ii. 17). καὶ φαγόντες οὐχ οἶον οὐκ ἀποθνήσκουσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ παιδοποιοῦνται καὶ ἑτέροις τοῦ ζῆν αἰτιοὶ καθίστανται. τί οὖν λεκτέον; ὅτι διττός ἐστι
- [65] θάνατος, ὁ μὲν ἀνθρώπου, | ὁ δὲ ψυχῆς ἴδιος· ὁ μὲν οὖν ἀνθρώπου χωρισμός ἐστι ψυχῆς ἀπὸ σώματος, ὁ δὲ ψυχῆς θάνατος ἀρετῆς μὲν φθορά
- 106 ἐστὶ, κακίας δὲ ἀνάληψις. παρὸ καὶ φησιν οὐκ ἀποθανεῖν αὐτὸ μόνον ἀλλὰ “ θανάτῳ ἀποθανεῖν,” δηλῶν οὐ τὸν κοινὸν ἀλλὰ τὸν ἴδιον καὶ κατ’ ἐξοχὴν θάνατον, ὅς ἐστι ψυχῆς ἐντυμβευομένης πάθει καὶ κακίαις ἀπάσαις. καὶ σχεδὸν οὗτος ὁ θάνατος μάχεται ἐκείνῳ· ἐκεῖνος μὲν γὰρ διάκρισις ἐστὶ τῶν συγκριθέντων σώματός τε καὶ ψυχῆς, οὗτος δὲ τοῦναντίον σύνοδος ἀμφοῖν, κρατοῦντος μὲν τοῦ χειρόνος σώματος, κρατουμένου δὲ τοῦ
- 107 κρείττονος ψυχῆς. ὅπου δ’ ἂν λέγῃ “ θανάτῳ ἀποθανεῖν,” παρατήρει ὅτι θάνατον τὸν ἐπὶ τιμωρίᾳ παραλαμβάνει, οὐ τὸν φύσει γινόμενον· φύσει μὲν

<sup>a</sup> Plato, Phaedo 64 c.

<sup>b</sup> Or “ of elements which had been in combination.”

unless he have an organ of speech? And how is he to indulge in pleasures, if he be bereft of a stomach and the organs of taste? So it is in accordance with the necessities of the case that He addresses the understanding alone about gaining virtue; for, as I said, it alone is needed for its acquisition; whereas in the pursuit of evil several faculties are needed, soul, speech, senses, body, for wickedness employs all these in displaying itself.

XXXIII. And further he says, "In the day that ye eat thereof, ye shall die the death" (Gen. ii. 17). And yet after they have eaten, not merely do they not die, but they beget children and become authors of life to others. What, then, is to be said to this? That death is of two kinds, one that of the man in general, the other that of the soul in particular. The death of the man is the separation of the soul from the body,<sup>a</sup> but the death of the soul is the decay of virtue and the bringing in of wickedness. It is for this reason that God says not only "die" but "die the death," indicating not the death common to us all, but that special death properly so called, which is that of the soul becoming entombed in passions and wickedness of all kinds. And this death is practically the antithesis of the death which awaits us all. The latter is a separation of combatants that had been pitted against one another,<sup>b</sup> body and soul, to wit. The former, on the other hand, is a meeting of the two in conflict. And in this conflict the worse, the body, overcomes, and the better, the soul, is overcome. But observe that wherever Moses speaks of "dying the death," he means the penalty-death, not that which takes place in the course of nature. That one is in the course

PHILO

οὐν ἐστι, καθ' ὃν χωρίζεται ψυχὴ ἀπὸ σώματος, ὁ δὲ ἐπὶ τιμωρία συνίσταται, ὅταν ἡ ψυχὴ τὸν 108 ἀρετῆς βίον θνήσκη, τὸν δὲ κακίας ζῆ μόνον. εὖ καὶ ὁ Ἡράκλειτος κατὰ τοῦτο Μωυσέως ἀκολουθήσας τῷ δόγματι, φησὶ γάρ· “ Ζῶμεν τὸν ἐκείνων θάνατον, τεθνήκαμεν δὲ τὸν ἐκείνων βίον,” ὡς νῦν μὲν, ὅτε ζῶμεν, τεθνηκυίας τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ ὡς ἂν ἐν σήματι τῷ σώματι ἐντετυμβευμένης, εἰ δὲ ἀποθάνοιμεν, τῆς ψυχῆς ζώσης τὸν ἴδιον βίον καὶ ἀπηλλαγμένης κακοῦ καὶ νεκροῦ συνδέτου τοῦ σώματος.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I. 107-108

of nature in which soul is parted from body ; but the penalty-death takes place when the soul dies to the life of virtue, and is alive only to that of wickedness. That is an excellent saying of Heraclitus, who on this point followed Moses' teaching, " We live," he says, " their death, and are dead to their life." He means that now, when we are living, the soul is dead and has been entombed in the body as in a sepulchre ; whereas, should we die, the soul lives forthwith its own proper life, and is released from the body, the baneful corpse to which it was tied.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> For σῆμα—σῶμα cf. Plato, Gorgias 493 A, Cratylus 400 B.

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION TO BOOK II

THIS treatise deals with Genesis ii. 18–iii. 1. Let us mark its mode of dealing with the Sacred Text in salient instances.

The story of the creation of Eve, we are told, is not meant to be taken literally. It is a “Myth,” showing forth the origin of Sense-perception, which becomes active when Mind is asleep (Gen. ii. 21). The bringing of Woman to Man is the introduction of Sense-perception to Mind, which hails it as its own (ii. 22 f.). (19 ff., 40 ff.)

That Adam and Eve were both naked (ii. 25) means that they were without either good or evil; for nakedness of soul can show itself as (a) freedom from passions; (b) loss of virtue; (c) neutrality. Adam and Eve were inactive both in mind and sense-perception, and were “unashamed,” i.e. without either the shamelessness of the worthless man, or the shamefastness of the man of worth. (53 ff.)

The entry of the Serpent (Gen. iii. 1) is due to the need of some means of uniting Mind and Sense-perception for their joint apprehension of objects, and of eliciting their activities. (71 ff.)

Let us notice next the extent to which Philo dwells on single words.

The word “alone” in Gen. ii. 18 draws out the reminder that God only is alone, self-contained,

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II.

needing naught, not composite ; while the heavenly Man ever yearns to be with God, and the earthy man always is with his passions. (1-4.)

The word "help" or "helper" suggests to him the created, later-born helpers given to the earthy man. These "wild beasts" are the senses and passions, such as desire, fear, anger, given to Mind (Gen. ii. 19)—our helpers, but often our foes. (5 ff.)

The word "moreover" (in the Greek version of Gen. ii. 19) is taken by Philo to mean a second creation of senses and passions ; and this further creation is accounted for by the observation that evils are numerous, and by the suggestion that Gen. i. 24 refers to genera, and Gen. ii. 19 to species, a suggestion in support of which evidence is adduced. (11 f.)

In the account of the giving of names to the creatures, the words "what he would call" are taken as meaning "why he would invite." (14 f.)

In the story of the creation of Eve, "ribs" or "sides" are understood as "strength" ; "took" as meaning "entered on the roll," "registered," i.e. brought into active service (this on the strength of Numb. xxxi. 26, "take the sum") ; "filled up flesh in its stead" means "fulfilled" sense-perception, and "filled" the body "with it" ; and woman is "buided" (Gen. ii. 22, R.V. margin) because she is moved to activity from without. (19 f., 35, 38 f.)

A striking example of single words pressed into the service of allegory is Adam's welcome to Eve, "This is now bone of my bones." "This" is Sense-perception no longer passive but become active ; and "now" is indicative of Sense-perception being affected only by the present. (42 f.)

We pass on to observe the examples afforded by this treatise of Philo's fondness for drawing illustrations and adducing parallels from the story of the patriarchs and the early history of Israel.

PHILO

In 46 f. Philo maintains that, though active Sense-perception, being an extension of the potential Sense-perception inherent in Mind, may be said to come from Mind, yet to suppose that anything whatever is, in the strict sense of the word, derived from Mind is to be guilty of shallow thinking, and illustrates the truth of what he says by the contrast between Rachel addressing to Jacob the appeal "Give me children," and "the Lord opening Leah's womb" (Gen. xxix. 31 and xxx. 1 f.).

In 51 f. the danger of the drawing down of Mind from the love of God by its cleaving to Sense-perception is brought out by a reference to Levi's noble choice (Deut. xxxiii. 9) making the Lord his portion (x. 9), and to the two goats of Lev. xvi. 8.

Freedom from passions (one of the meanings of "nakedness") is illustrated by Moses setting up the Tent of Witness outside the Camp (Exod. xxxiii. 7); by Aaron entering unrobed (!) into the Holy of Holies (cf. Lev. xvi. 1 ff.); by Nadab and Abihu leaving their coats (or irrational parts) for Mishael and Elzaphan (Lev. x. 5); by Abraham leaving his country (Gen. xii. 1); by Isaac being forbidden to go down into Egypt (i.e. the body, Gen. xxvi. 2); and by Jacob's smoothness (Gen. xxvii. 11). (54 ff.)

Loss of virtue (another meaning given to "nakedness") is illustrated by Noah's lapse (Gen. ix. 21). And the indications which Philo finds in the narrative that the lapse was not irretrievable are illustrated by the provision in the Law that vows made only in intent may be rescinded (Numb. xxx. 10). (60 ff.)

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II.

The assaults of pleasure and the healing virtue of Self-mastery are illustrated by the deadly serpents and the brazen serpent of the wilderness journey (Numb. xxi.). Distraction, Pleasure's agent, is like the scorpion (= "scattering") of the desert. The soul-thirst of "Egypt" is quenched by the Wisdom ("Water") as is hunger by the Word ("Manna") of God. A sign of the great daring of Pleasure, in attacking even Moses, is found in the story of his rod. Like Jacob's, it is "discipline." Shrinking from this, Moses casts it away, and is then bidden to grasp it by its tail (Exod. iv. 1 ff.). (78 ff., 87 ff.)

Pleasure is again pointed at in the Prayer of Jacob (Gen. xlix. 16-18), where Dan (= "distinguishing") is the principle of self-mastery, who is to become a serpent biting the horse (sc. passions), and saving from them Mind (the "horseman"), who "waits for" God's "salvation"; and in the Song of Moses (Exod. xv. 1), where horse and rider, i.e. the four passions with Mind mounted on them, are cast into the sea.

Β΄

<sup>1</sup> [66] I. “Καὶ εἶπε κύριος ὁ θεός Οὐ καλὸν εἶναι τὸν ἄνθρωπον μόνον, ποιήσωμεν αὐτῷ βοηθὸν κατ’ αὐτόν” (Gen. ii. 18). διὰ τί τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ὡς προφήτα, οὐκ ἔστι καλὸν εἶναι μόνον; ὅτι, φησί, καλὸν ἔστι τὸν μόνον εἶναι μόνον· μόνος δὲ καὶ καθ’ αὐτόν εἰς ὧν ὁ θεός, οὐδὲν δὲ ὅμοιον θεῷ· ὡστ’ ἐπεὶ τὸ μόνον εἶναι τὸν ὄντα καλὸν ἔστι—καὶ γὰρ περὶ μόνον αὐτόν τὸ καλόν—οὐκ ἂν εἴη <sup>2</sup> καλὸν τὸ εἶναι τὸν ἄνθρωπον μόνον. τὸ δὲ μόνον εἶναι τὸν θεὸν ἔστι μὲν ἐκδέξασθαι καὶ οὕτως, ὅτι οὔτε πρὸ γενέσεως ἦν τι σὺν τῷ θεῷ οὔτε κόσμου γενομένου συντάττεται τι αὐτῷ· χρήζει γὰρ οὐδενὸς τὸ παράπαν. ἀμείνων δὲ ἦδε ἡ ἐκδοχή· ὁ θεός μόνος ἔστι καὶ ἓν, οὐ σύγκριμα, φύσις ἀπλή, ἡμῶν δ’ ἕκαστος καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα γέγονε πολλά· οἷον ἐγὼ πολλά εἰμι, ψυχὴ σῶμα, καὶ ψυχῆς ἄλογον λογικόν, πάλιν σώματος θερμὸν ψυχρὸν βαρὺ κοῦφον ξηρὸν ὑγρόν· ὁ δὲ θεός οὐ σύγκριμα οὐδὲ ἐκ πολλῶν συνεστῶς, ἀλλ’ ἀμιγῆς

224

BOOK II

I. " And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone, let us make for him a helper corresponding to him " (Gen. ii. 18). Why, O prophet, is it not good that the man should be alone ? Because, he says, it is good that the Alone should be alone : but God, being One, is alone and unique, and like God there is nothing. Hence, since it is good that He Who is should be alone—for indeed with regard to Him alone can the statement " it is good " be made—it follows that it would not be good that the man should be alone. There is another way in which we may understand the statement that God is alone. It may mean that neither before creation was there anything with God, nor, when the universe had come into being, does anything take its place with Him ; for there is absolutely nothing which He needs. A yet better interpretation is the following. God is alone, a Unity, in the sense that His nature is simple not composite, whereas each one of us and of all other created beings is made up of many things. I, for example, am many things in one. I am soul and body. To soul belong rational and irrational parts, and to body, again, different properties, warm and cold, heavy and light, dry and moist. But God is not a composite Being, consisting of many parts,

PHILO

<sup>3</sup> [67] ἄλλω· ὁ γὰρ ἂν προσκριθῆ | θεῶ, ἢ κρείσσον ἔστιν αὐτοῦ ἢ ἔλασσον ἢ ἴσον αὐτῷ· οὔτε δὲ ἴσον οὔτε κρείσσον ἔστι θεοῦ, ἔλασσόν γε μὴν οὐδὲν αὐτῷ προσκρίνεται· εἰ δὲ μή, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐλαττωθήσεται· εἰ δὲ τοῦτο, καὶ φθαρτὸς ἔσται, ὅπερ οὐδὲ θέμις νοῆσαι. τέτακται οὖν ὁ θεὸς κατὰ τὸ ἐν καὶ τὴν μονάδα, μᾶλλον δὲ ἢ μονὰς κατὰ τὸν ἓνα θεόν· πᾶς γὰρ ἀριθμὸς νεώτερος κόσμου, ὡς καὶ χρόνος, ὁ δὲ θεὸς πρεσβύτερος κόσμου καὶ δημιουργός.

4 Π. Οὐδένα δὲ ἄνθρωπον καλὸν ἔστιν εἶναι μόνον. δύο γὰρ ἀνθρώπων γένη, τό τε κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα γεγονὸς καὶ τὸ πεπλασμένον ἐκ γῆς· οὔτε δὲ τῷ κατ' εἰκόνα ἀνθρώπῳ καλὸν ἔστιν εἶναι μόνω—ἐφίεται γὰρ τῆς εἰκόνας· ἢ γὰρ εἰκὼν τοῦ θεοῦ ἀρχέτυπος ἄλλων ἐστί· πᾶν δὲ μίμημα ποθεῖ τοῦτο, οὐπὲρ ἔστι μίμημα, καὶ μετ' ἐκείνου τάττεται—οὔτε τῷ πλαστῷ πολὺ μᾶλλον καλὸν ἔστιν εἶναι μόνω, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀδύνατον, καὶ γὰρ αἰσθήσεις καὶ πάθη καὶ κακίαι καὶ μυρία ἄλλα

5 τούτῳ τῷ νῶ συνέζευκται καὶ συνήρμοσται. τῷ δὲ δευτέρῳ ἀνθρώπῳ βοηθὸς συνίσταται, πρῶτον μὲν γενητός, “ποιήσωμεν” γὰρ φησιν “αὐτῷ βοηθόν,” ἔπειτα δὲ νεώτερος τοῦ βοηθουμένου· πρότερον μὲν γὰρ ἔπλασε τὸν νοῦν, μέλλει δὲ πλάττειν τὸν βοηθὸν αὐτοῦ. ἀλλὰ καὶ ταῦτα φυσικῶς ἀλληγορεῖ· ἢ γὰρ αἴσθησις καὶ τὰ πάθη

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 3-5

nor is He mixed with aught else. For whatever is added to God, is either superior or inferior or equal to Him. But there is nothing equal or superior to God. And no lesser thing is resolved into Him. If He do so assimilate any lesser thing, He also will be lessened. And if He can be made less, He will also be capable of corruption ; and even to imagine this were blasphemous. The "one" and the "monad" are, therefore, the only standard for determining the category to which God belongs. Rather should we say, the One God is the sole standard for the "monad." For, like time, all number is subsequent to the universe ; and God is prior to the universe, and is its Maker.

II. It is not good that any man should be alone. For there are two races of men, the one made after the (Divine) Image, and the one moulded out of the earth. For the man made after the Image it is not good to be alone, because he yearns after the Image. For the image of God is a pattern of which copies are made, and every copy longs for that of which it is a copy, and its station is at its side. Far less is it good for the man moulded of the earth to be alone. Nay, it is impossible. For with the mind so formed, linked to it in closest fellowship, are senses, passions, vices, ten thousand other presences. With the second man a helper is associated. To begin with, the helper is a created one, for it says, "Let us make a helper for him" ; and, in the next place, is subsequent to him who is to be helped, for He had formed the mind before and is about to form its helper. In these particulars again, while using terms of outward nature he is conveying a deeper meaning. For sense and the passions are helpers τῆς ψυχῆς εἰσι βοηθοὶ νεώτεροι τῆς ψυχῆς. πῶς μὲν οὖν βοηθοῦσιν, ὁψόμεθα· ὅτι δὲ εἰσι νεώτεροι, 6 θεασώμεθα. III. ὥσπερ κατὰ τοὺς ἀρίστους τῶν ἰατρῶν καὶ φυσικῶν δοκεῖ τοῦ ὄλου σώματος προπλάττεσθαι ἢ καρδία, θεμελίου τρόπον ἢ ὡς ἐν νηὶ τρόπις, ἐφ' ἣ οἰκοδομεῖται τὸ ἄλλο σῶμα—παρὸ καὶ μετὰ τὴν τελευταίαν ἔτι ἐμπηδᾶν φασιν αὐτὴν ὡς καὶ πρώτην γινομένην καὶ ὑστέραν φθειρομένην—οὕτως καὶ τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν τῆς ψυχῆς πρεσβύτερον τῆς ὅλης εἶναι, τὸ δ' ἄλογον νεώτερον, οὗ τὴν γένεσιν οὐπω μὲν δεδήλωκε, μέλλει δὲ ὑπογράφειν. τὸ δὲ ἄλογον αἰσθησίς ἐστι καὶ τὰ ταύτης ἔκγονα πάθη, καὶ μάλιστα εἰ μὴ κρίσεις εἰσὶν ἡμέτεραι. καὶ νεώτερος οὖν οὗτος ὁ βοηθὸς [θεοῦ] καὶ γενητὸς εἰκότως.

PHILO

7 τὸ δ' ὑπερτεθὲν ἴδωμεν, πῶς βοηθεῖ.
 [68] | πῶς ἡμῶν ὁ νοῦς καταλαμβάνει, ὅτι τουτὶ λευκὸν ἢ μέλαν ἐστίν, εἰ μὴ βοηθῶ χρησάμενος ὀράσει; πῶς δὲ ὅτι ἠδεῖα ἢ τοῦ κιθαρωδοῦ φωνὴ ἢ τούναντίον ἐκμελής, εἰ μὴ βοηθῶ χρησάμενος ἀκοῇ; πῶς δὲ ὅτι εὐώδεις ἢ δυσώδεις οἱ ἀτμοί, εἰ μὴ συμμάχῳ χρησάμενος ὀσφρήσει; πῶς δὲ δοκιμάζει τοὺς χυλοὺς, εἰ μὴ διὰ βοηθοῦ τῆς 8 γεύσεως; πῶς δὲ αὐτὰ μαλακὰ καὶ τραχέα, εἰ μὴ δι' ἀφῆς; ἔστι τοίνυν ἕτερον εἶδος βοηθῶν, ὡς ἔφην, τὰ πάθη· καὶ γὰρ ἠδονὴ βοηθεῖ πρὸς διαμονὴν τοῦ γένους ἡμῶν καὶ ἐπιθυμία, καὶ λύπη μέντοι καὶ φόβος δάκνοντα τὴν ψυχὴν ἐπέστρεψεν αὐτὴν μηδενὸς ὀλιγωρεῖν, ὀργὴ τε

• See App. p. 479.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 5-8

of the soul and come after the soul. In what way they help we shall see : let us fix our attention on their coming later than the soul. III. In the view of the best physicians and natural philosophers the heart is thought to be formed before the whole body, by way of a foundation, or as the keel in a ship, the rest of the body being built upon it ; and they assert that accordingly even after death it still beats, and decays after the body, as it came into existence before it. In just the same way, it is thought, the princely part of the soul is older than the soul as a whole, and the irrational portion younger. The creation of this the prophet has not as yet related, but he is going to describe it. The irrational portion is sense and the passions which are the offspring of sense, unquestionably so if they are not the result of any choice of our own.<sup>a</sup> This helper then is later born and of course created.

Now let us consider the point which we deferred, how the help is given. How does our mind apprehend the fact that an object is white or black, except by using sight as a helper ? How does it become aware that the musician's voice is sweet or on the other hand out of tune, save by using the sense of hearing as a helper ? How does it recognize that perfumes are pleasant or disagreeable, except by using as an ally the sense of smell ? How does it distinguish savours, except by means of the taste acting as its helper ? Things smooth and rough, again, how but by touch ? Moreover, there are, as I have said, helpers of another kind, namely the passions. For pleasure and desire contribute to the permanence of our kind : pain and fear are like bites or stings warning the soul to treat nothing carelessly : anger ἀμυντήριον ὄπλον [ἦ] μεγάλα πολλοὺς ὠφέλησε, καὶ τὰλλα ταύτη. διὸ καὶ εὐθυβόλως εἶπε “κατ’ αὐτὸν εἶναι τὸν βοηθόν”. τῷ γὰρ ὄντι οἰκειὸς οὗτος ὁ βοηθός ἐστι τῷ νῶ ὡς ἂν ἀδελφὸς καὶ ὄμαιμος· μιᾶς γάρ ἐστι ψυχῆς μέρη καὶ γεννήματα ἢ τε αἰσθησις καὶ τὰ πάθη.

PHILO

- 9 IV. Τοῦ δὲ βοηθοῦ ἐστι διττὸν τὸ εἶδος, τὸ μὲν ἐν πάθεσι, τὸ δ’ ἐν αἰσθήσει. τό γε νῦν μόνον τὸ πρότερον εἶδος γεννήσει, λέγει γάρ· “καὶ ἔπλασεν ὁ θεὸς ἔτι ἐκ τῆς γῆς πάντα τὰ θηρία τοῦ ἀγροῦ καὶ πάντα τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ ἤγαγεν αὐτὰ πρὸς τὸν Ἀδάμ, ἰδεῖν τί καλέσει αὐτά· καὶ πᾶν ὃ ἂν ἐκάλεσεν αὐτὸ Ἀδὰμ ψυχὴν ζῶσαν, τοῦτο ὄνομα αὐτοῦ” (Gen. ii. 19). ὁρᾶς, τίνες εἰσὶν ἡμῶν οἱ βοηθοί, τὰ θηρία, τῆς ψυχῆς τὰ πάθη· εἰπὼν γάρ “ποιήσωμεν βοηθὸν κατ’ αὐτόν” ἐπιφέρει τὸ “ἔπλασε τὰ θηρία,” ὡς
- 10 τῶν θηρίων ὄντων βοηθῶν ἡμῖν. οὐ κυρίως δὲ οὗτοι βοηθοὶ ἀλλὰ καταχρηστικῶς λέγονται, εὐρίσκονται γέ τοι πρὸς ἀλήθειαν <καὶ> πολέμιοι, ὡσπερ καὶ τῶν πόλεων ἐστὶν ὅτε οἱ σύμμαχοι προδόται καὶ αὐτόμολοι καὶ ἐν ταῖς φιλίαις οἱ κόλακες ἀντὶ ἐταίρων ἐχθροί. οὐρανὸν δὲ καὶ ἀγρὸν συνωνύμως κέκληκεν ἀλληγορῶν τὸν νοῦν· οὗτος γὰρ καὶ ὡς ἀγρὸς ἀνατολὰς καὶ βλάστας ἔχει μυρίας ὄσας καὶ ὡς οὐρανὸς πάλιν λαμπρὰς
- 11 καὶ θείας καὶ εὐδαίμονας φύσεις. θηρίοις δὲ καὶ πτηνοῖς ἀπεικάζει τὰ πάθη, ὅτι σίνεται τὸν νοῦν ἀτίθασα καὶ ἀνήμερα ὄντα καὶ ὅτι πτηνῶν τρόπον ἐπιποτᾶται τῇ διανοίᾳ· ὀξεῖα γὰρ ἢ τούτων καὶ

<sup>a</sup> Or “his.” See 18. αὐτοῦ can be masculine or neuter.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 8-11

is a weapon of defence, which has conferred great boons on many : and so with the other passions. This shows also that the prophet was perfectly right in saying that the helper must be one " corresponding to him." For in very deed this helper is intimately allied to the mind, as though a brother of one blood with it : for sense-perception and passions are parts and offspring of one soul with it.

IV. There are two species of this helper : the one has its sphere in the passions, the other in sense-perception. At present He will produce the former only, for he says, " And God moulded moreover out of the earth all the wild beasts of the field, and all the birds of the heaven, and led them to Adam, to see what he would call them : and whatever Adam called a living soul, this was its <sup>a</sup> name " (Gen. ii. 19). You see who are our helpers, the wild beasts, the soul's passions : for after saying, " Let us make a helper corresponding to him," he adds the words, " He moulded the wild beasts," implying that the wild beasts are our helpers. These are not properly called our helpers, but by a straining of language ; in reality they are found to be our actual foes, just as the allies of states sometimes turn out to be traitors and deserters, and in private friendships flatterers prove enemies instead of comrades. He uses the terms " heaven " and " field " as synonyms, meaning the mind. For the mind is like the field in having countless sproutings and upgrowths, and like heaven again in having natures brilliant and godlike and blessed. The passions he likens to wild beasts and birds, because, savage and untamed as they are, they tear the soul to pieces, and because like winged things they light upon the understanding;

PHILO

- ἀνεπίσχετος ὄρμη. οὐ παρέργως δὲ πρόσκειται τῷ “ ἔπλασε ” τὸ “ ἔτι.” διὰ τί; ὅτι καὶ
- [69] ἐπάνω πεπλάσθαι | τὰ θηρία φησὶ πρὸ τῆς ἀνθρώπου γενέσεως, <ὡς> καὶ δηλοῖ διὰ τούτων ἐν ἕκτη ἡμέρᾳ. “ καὶ εἶπεν Ἐξαγαγέτω ἡ γῆ ψυχὴν ζῶσαν κατὰ γένος, τετράποδα καὶ ἔρπετὰ καὶ
- 12 θηρία ” (Gen. i. 24). τί παθῶν οὖν ἄλλα πλάττει θηρία νῦν οὐκ ἀρκεσθεὶς τοῖς προτέροις; λεκτέον οὖν ἠθικῶς μὲν τοῦτο· πλούσιόν ἐστι τὸ κακίας γένος ἐν τῷ γεννητῷ, ὥστε αἰεὶ γεννᾶσθαι τὰ φαυλότατα ἐν τούτῳ· φυσικῶς δὲ ἐκείνο· πρότερον μὲν ἐν τῇ ἕξαήμερῳ τὰ γένη τῶν παθῶν καὶ τὰς ἰδέας εἰργάζετο, νυνὶ δὲ τὰ
- 13 εἶδη προσπλάττει· διὸ φησιν “ ἔπλασεν ἔτι.” ὅτι δὲ τὰ πάλαι κατασκευασθέντα γένη ἦν, φανερόν ἐξ ὧν φησιν “ ἔξαγαγέτω ἡ γῆ ψυχὴν ζῶσαν ” οὐ κατ’ εἶδος, ἀλλὰ “ κατὰ γένος.” καὶ τοιοῦτος ἐν ἅπασιν εὐρίσκεται· πρὸ γὰρ τῶν εἰδῶν ἀποτελεῖ τὰ γένη, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου· προτυπώσας γὰρ τὸν γενικὸν ἀνθρωπον, ἐν ᾧ τὸ ἄρρεν καὶ τὸ θῆλυ γένος φησὶν εἶναι, ὕστερον τὸ εἶδος ἀπεργάζεται τὸν Ἀδάμ.
- 14 V. Τοῦτο μὲν οὖν τὸ εἶδος τῶν βοηθῶν εἴρηκε, τὸ δ’ ἕτερον ὑπερτίθεται τὸ τῆς αἰσθήσεως, ἔστ’ ἂν ἐπιχειρῇ πλάττειν τὴν γυναῖκα· ἐκείνο δ’

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 11-14

for the assault of the passions is violent and irresistible. The addition of "further" to "formed" is by no means otiose. How do we see this? Because above also he mentions the forming of the wild beasts before the creation of man, as we see from these words referring to the sixth day: and He said, "Let the earth bring forth the living soul after its kind, four-footed animals and creeping things and wild beasts" (Gen. i. 24). How comes He, then, to form other wild beasts now, and not to be satisfied with those former ones? From the ethical point of view what we must say is this. In the realm of created things the class or kind of wickedness is abundant. It follows that in this the worst things are ever being produced. From the philosophical point of view our answer must be, that on the former occasion, when engaged in the Work of the six days, He wrought the genera or kinds and the originals of the passions, whereas now He is fashioning the species as well. This is why he says, "He fashioned moreover." That what were created in the first instance were genera, is evident from the words employed, "Let the earth bring forth the living soul," not according to species but "according to kind." And we find Him in every instance working in this way. Before the species He completes the genera. He does so in the case of man. Having first fashioned man as a genus, in which the prophet says that there is the male and the female genus, He afterwards makes Adam, the finished form or species.

V. Helpers of this sort the prophet has now dealt with; the other sort he defers, that of sense-perception, I mean, until the Creator takes in hand to ὑπερθέμενος περὶ τῆς τῶν ὀνομάτων θέσεως

PHILO

 τεχνολογεί. ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἡ τροπικὴ καὶ ἡ ῥητὴ
 ἀπόδοσις ἀξία τοῦ θαυμάζεσθαι· ἡ μὲν ῥητὴ,
 παρόσον τὴν θέσιν τῶν ὀνομάτων προσῆψε τῷ
 15 πρῶτῳ γενομένῳ ὁ νομοθέτης. καὶ γὰρ οἱ παρ'
 Ἑλλησι φιλοσοφοῦντες εἶπον εἶναι σοφοὺς τοὺς
 πρῶτους τοῖς πράγμασι τὰ ὀνόματα θέντας· Μωυσῆς δὲ ἄμεινον, ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν οὐ τισι τῶν
 πρότερον, ἀλλὰ τῷ πρῶτῳ γενομένῳ, ἵνα ὡσπερ
 αὐτὸς ἀρχὴ τοῖς ἄλλοις γενέσεως ἐπλάσθη, οὕτως
 καὶ αὐτὸς ἀρχὴ τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι νομισθῆ—μὴ
 γὰρ ὄντων ὀνομάτων, οὐδ' ἂν διάλεκτος ἦν—
 ἔπειτα ὅτι πολλῶν μὲν τιθέντων ὀνόματα διάφωνα
 καὶ ἄμικτα ἔμελλον ἔσεσθαι, ἄλλων ἄλλως τιθέν-των, ἑνὸς δὲ ὄφειλεν ἡ θέσις ἐφαρμόττειν τῷ
 πράγματι, καὶ τοῦτ' εἶναι σύμβολον ἅπασιν τὸ
 αὐτὸ τοῦ τυγχάνοντος ἢ τοῦ σημαινομένου.
 16 VI. ὁ δὲ ἠθικὸς λόγος τοιοῦτός ἐστιν· τὸ “ τί ”
 πολλάκις τίθεμεν ἀντὶ τοῦ “ διὰ τί,” οἷον τί λέλουσαι, τί περιπατεῖς, τί διαλέγῃ, πάντα γὰρ
 ταῦτα ἀντὶ τοῦ “ διὰ τί.” ὅταν οὖν λέγῃ “ ἰδεῖν
 τί καλέσει,” ἄκουε ἴσον τῷ, διὰ τί καλέσει καὶ προσκαλέσεται καὶ ἀσπάζεται τούτων ἕκαστον
 ὁ νοῦς· πότερον ἔνεκα τοῦ ἀναγκαίου μόνον, ὅτι

* See App. p. 479.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 14-16

fashion woman. Having deferred that subject, he goes on to a systematic treatment of the giving of names. Here his literal statement and his symbolic interpretation alike claim our admiration. What we admire in the Lawgiver's literal statement is his ascription to the first man of the fixing of names. Indeed Greek philosophers<sup>a</sup> said that those who first assigned names to things were wise men. Moses did better than they, first of all in ascribing it not to some of the men of old but to the first man created. His purpose was that, as Adam was formed to be the beginning from which all others drew their birth, so too no other than he should be regarded as the beginning of the use of speech: for even language would not have existed, if there had not been names. Again, had many persons bestowed names on things, they would inevitably have been incongruous and ill-matched, different persons imposing them on different principles, whereas the naming by one man was bound to bring about harmony between name and thing, and the name given was sure to be a symbol, the same for all men, of any object to which the name was attached or of the meaning attaching to the name.

VI. What he says in the domain of ethics is to this effect. We often use "τί" (= "what") for "διὰ τί"<sup>a</sup> ("by reason of what"), as "what (i.e. why) have you bathed?" "What (i.e. 'why') are you walking?" "What (i.e. 'why') are you conversing?" In all these cases "what" stands for "because of what." When the prophet says "to see what he would call them" you should understand something equivalent to 'why the mind would call and invite to it and greet' each of these objects, whether only for the

PHILO

- κατέζευκται τὸ θνητὸν ἐξ ἀνάγκης πάθεισι καὶ κακίαις, ἢ καὶ ἔνεκα τοῦ ἀμέτρου καὶ περιττοῦ· καὶ πότερον διὰ τὰς τοῦ γηγενοῦς χρείας ἢ διὰ
- 17 τὸ κρίνειν αὐτὰ βέλτιστα καὶ θαυμασιώτατα· οἶον
- [70] ἡδονῇ χρῆσθαι δεῖ τὸ γεγονός· ἀλλ' ὁ | μὲν φαῦλος ὡς ἀγαθῶ τελείῳ χρήσεται, ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος ὡς μόνον ἀναγκαίῳ· χωρὶς γὰρ ἡδονῆς οὐδὲν γίνεται τῶν ἐν τῷ θνητῷ γένει. πάλιν τὴν τῶν χρημάτων κτήσιν ὁ μὲν <φαῦλος> τελειότατον ἀγαθὸν κρίνει, ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος ἀναγκαῖον καὶ χρήσιμον αὐτὸ μόνον. εἰκότως οὖν ὁ θεὸς ἰδεῖν καὶ καταμαθεῖν βούλεται, πῶς ἕκαστον τούτων προσκαλεῖται καὶ ἀποδέχεται ὁ νοῦς, εἴτε ὡς ἀγαθὰ εἴτε ὡς
- 18 ἀδιάφορα ἢ ὡς κακὰ μὲν, χρειώδη δὲ ἄλλως. διὸ καὶ πᾶν ὃ ἂν προσεκαλέσατο καὶ ἠσπάσατο ὡς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν ἰσότημον αὐτὸ ἡγησάμενος ψυχῇ, τοῦτο ὄνομα οὐ τοῦ κληθέντος ἐγένετο μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦ καλέσαντος· οἶον, εἰ ἀπεδέξατο ἡδονήν, ἐκαλεῖτο ἡδονικός, εἰ ἐπιθυμίαν, ἐπιθυμητικός, εἰ ἀκολασίαν, ἀκόλαστος, εἰ δειλίαν, δειλός, καὶ οὕτως ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀρετῶν ὁ κατ' αὐτὰς ποιὸς καλεῖται φρόνιμος ἢ σώφρων ἢ δίκαιος ἢ ἀνδρείος, οὕτως ἀπὸ τῶν κακιῶν ἄδικος καὶ ἄφρων καὶ ἀνανδρος, ἐπειδὴν τὰς ἐξείς προσκαλέσεται καὶ δεξιώσεται.
- 19 VII. “Καὶ ἐπέβαλεν ὁ θεὸς ἕκστασιν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀδάμ, καὶ ὑπνωσε· καὶ ἔλαβε μίαν τῶν πλευρῶν αὐτοῦ” καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς (Gen. ii. 21). τὸ ῥητὸν ἐπὶ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 479.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 16-19

sake of that which it cannot dispense with, seeing that all that is mortal is necessarily bound up with passions and vices, or also for the sake of what is in excess of reasonable needs; and whether to satisfy the needs of flesh and blood, or because it deems them good and admirable above all things. For example. A created being cannot but make use of pleasure. But the worthless man will use it as a perfect good, but the man of worth simply as a necessity, remembering that apart from pleasure nothing in mortal kind comes into existence. Again the worthless man accounts the acquisition of wealth a most perfect good; the man of worth regards it as just necessary and serviceable and no more. No wonder then that God wishes to see and ascertain how the mind invites and welcomes each of these, whether as good, or as indifferent, or as bad but at all events as serviceable. Hence it came about that everything which he called to himself and greeted as living soul, reckoning it equal in worth to the soul, this became the name not only of the thing called but of him who called it.<sup>a</sup> For example, if he welcomed pleasure, he was called pleasure-loving; if desire, desire-ridden; if licence, licentious; if cowardice, cowardly; and so on. For, just as the man whose quality is determined by the virtues is from them called wise or sober-minded or just or brave, so from the vices is he called unjust and foolish and unmanly, whensoever he has invited to himself and given a hearty welcome to the corresponding dispositions.

VII. "And God brought a trance upon Adam, and he fell asleep; and He took one of his sides" and what follows (Gen. ii. 21). These words in τούτου μυθῶδές ἐστι· πῶς γὰρ ἂν παραδέξαιτό τις, ὅτι γέγονεν ἐκ πλευρᾶς ἀνδρὸς γυνή ἢ συνόλως ἄνθρωπος; τί δὲ ἐκώλυεν, ὥσπερ ἐκ γῆς ἄνδρα ἐδημιούργει τὸ αἴτιον, οὕτως καὶ γυναῖκα δημιουργήσαι; ὃ τε γὰρ ποιῶν ὁ αὐτὸς ἦν ἢ τε ὕλη σχεδὸν ἄπειρος, ἐξ ἧς πᾶσα ποιότης κατεσκευάζετο. διὰ τί δὲ οὐκ ἐξ ἄλλου μέρους, τοσοῦτων ὑπαρχόντων, ἀλλ' ἐκ πλευρᾶς ἐτύπου τὴν γυναῖκα; ποτέραν δὲ πλευρὰν <ἔλαβεν>—ἵνα καὶ δύο μόνas ἐμφαίνεσθαι φῶμεν, πρὸς γὰρ ἀλήθειαν οὐδὲ πλήθος αὐτῶν ἐδήλωσεν—; ἄρα γε τὴν εὐώνυμον 20 ἢ τὴν δεξιάν; εἴ γε μὴν ἀνεπλήρου σαρκὶ τὴν ἑτέραν, ἢ ἀπολειπομένη οὐκ ἦν σαρκίνη δήπου; καὶ μὴν ἀδελφαί γ' εἰσὶ καὶ συγγενεῖς πᾶσι τοῖς μέρεσιν αἱ ἡμῶν πλευραὶ καὶ σαρκὸς γεγόνασι.

PHILO

21 τί οὖν λεκτέον; πλευρὰς ὁ βίος ὀνομάζει τὰς δυνάμεις· λέγομεν γὰρ πλευρὰς ἔχειν τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἴσον τῷ δυνάμεις, καὶ εὐπλευρον εἶναι τὸν ἀθλητὴν ἀντὶ τοῦ ἰσχυρόν, καὶ πλευρὰς ἔχειν τὸν κιθαρῳδὸν

22 ἀντὶ τοῦ δύνανται ἐρρωμένην ἐν τῷ ἄδειν. τούτου 71] προειρημένου κάκεινο λεκτέον, | ὅτι ὁ γυμνὸς καὶ ἀνένδεται σώματι νοῦς—περὶ γὰρ τοῦ μήπω ἐνδεδεμένου ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος—πολλὰς ἔχει δυνάμεις, ἐκτικὴν φυτικὴν ψυχικὴν<sup>1</sup> διανοητικὴν, ἅλλας μυρίας κατὰ τε εἶδη καὶ γένη. ἢ μὲν ἕξις κοινή καὶ τῶν ἀψύχων ἐστὶ λίθων καὶ ξύλων, ἧς μετέχει

<sup>1</sup> λογικὴν is omitted with the Armenian version.

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 479, 480.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 480.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 19-22

their literal sense are of the nature of a myth. For how could anyone admit that a woman, or a human being at all, came into existence out of a man's side? And what was there to hinder the First Cause from creating woman, as He created man, out of the earth? For not only was the Maker the same Being, but the material too, out of which every particular kind was fashioned, was practically unlimited. And why, when there were so many parts to choose from, did He form the woman not from some other part but from the side? And which side did he take? For we may assume that only two are indicated, as there is in fact nothing to suggest a large number of them. Did he take the left or the right side? If He filled up with flesh (the place of) the one which He took, are we to suppose that the one which He left was not made of flesh?<sup>a</sup> Truly our sides are twin in all their parts and are made of flesh. What then are we to say? "Sides" is a term of ordinary life for "strength." To say that a man has "sides" is equivalent to saying that he is strong, we say of a powerful athlete "he has stout sides," and to say that a singer has "sides" is as much as to say that he has great lung power in singing. Having said this, we must go on to remark that the mind when as yet unclothed and unconfined by the body (and it is of the mind when not so confined that he is speaking) has many powers. It has the power of holding together,<sup>b</sup> of growing, of conscious life, of thought, and countless other powers, varying both in species and genus. Lifeless things, like stones and blocks of wood, share with all others the power of holding together, of which the bones in us, which are not unlike stones,

PHILO

καὶ τὰ ἐν ἡμῖν εἰκότα λίθοις ὄστέα. ἡ δὲ φύσις διατείνει καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ φυτὰ· καὶ ἐν ἡμῖν δέ ἐστιν εἰκότα φυτοῖς, ὄνυχές τε καὶ τρίχες· ἔστι δὲ ἡ 23 φύσις ἕξις ἤδη κινουμένη. ψυχὴ δὲ ἐστὶ φύσις προσειληφύια φαντασίαν καὶ ὄρμην· αὕτη κοινὴ καὶ τῶν ἀλόγων ἐστίν· ἔχει δὲ καὶ ὁ ἡμέτερος νοῦς ἀναλογοῦν τι ἀλόγου ψυχῆ. πάλιν ἡ διανοητικὴ δύναμις ἰδία τοῦ νοῦ ἐστὶ, καὶ<sup>1</sup> κοινὴ μὲν τάχα καὶ τῶν θειοτέρων φύσεων, ἰδία δὲ ὡς ἐν θνητοῖς ἀνθρώπου· αὕτη δὲ διττὴ, ἡ μὲν καθ' ἣν λογικοὶ ἐσμεν νοῦ μετέχοντες, ἡ δὲ καθ' ἣν διαλεγόμεθα.
 24 ἐστὶν <οὖν καὶ> ἄλλη δύναμις ἐν ψυχῇ τούτων ἀδελφὴ, ἡ αἰσθητικὴ, περὶ ἧς ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος· οὐδὲν γὰρ ἄλλο νῦν ὑπογράφει ἢ γένεσιν τῆς κατ' ἐνέργειαν αἰσθήσεως· καὶ κατὰ λόγον· VIII. μετὰ γὰρ νοῦν εὐθὺς ἔδει δημιουργηθῆναι αἰσθησιν βοηθὸν αὐτῷ καὶ σύμμαχον. τελεσιουργήσας οὖν ἐκείνον τὸ δεύτερον καὶ τῇ τάξει καὶ τῇ δυνάμει πλάττει δημιουργήμα, τὴν κατ' ἐνέργειαν αἰσθησιν, πρὸς συμπλήρωσιν τῆς ὅλης ψυχῆς καὶ πρὸς τὴν
 25 τῶν ὑποκειμένων ἀντίληψιν. πῶς οὖν γεννᾶται; ὡς αὐτὸς πάλιν φησίν, ὅταν ὑπνώσῃ ὁ νοῦς· τῷ γὰρ ὄντι ὑπνώσαντος νοῦ γίνεται αἰσθησις, καὶ γὰρ ἔμπαλιν ἐγρηγορότος νοῦ σβέννυται· τεκ-

<sup>1</sup> The words ἡ λογικὴ are omitted. See Leopold Cohn's Note in Heinemann's translation (p. 61).

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 22-25

partake. "Growth" extends to plants, and there are parts in us, such as our nails and hair, resembling plants; "growth" is coherence capable of moving itself. Conscious life is the power to grow, with the additional power of receiving impressions and being the subject of impulses. This is shared also by creatures without reason. Indeed our mind contains a part that is analogous to the conscious life of a creature without reason. Once more, the power of thinking is peculiar to the mind, and while shared, it may well be, by beings more akin to God, is, so far as mortal beings are concerned, peculiar to man. This power or faculty is twofold. We are rational beings, on the one hand as being partakers of mind, and on the other as being capable of discourse. Well, there is also another power or faculty in the soul, closely akin to these, namely that of receiving sense-impressions, and it is of this that the prophet is speaking. For his immediate concern is just this, to indicate the origin of active sense-perception. And logical sequence leads him to do so. VIII. For it was requisite that the creation of mind should be followed immediately by that of sense-perception, to be a helper and ally to it. Having then finished the creation of the mind He fashions the product of creative skill that comes next to it alike in order and in power, namely active sense-perception, with a view to the completeness of the whole soul, and with a view to its apprehension of objects presented to it. How is it, then, produced? As the prophet himself again says, it is when the mind has fallen asleep. As a matter of fact it is when the mind has gone to sleep that perception begins, for conversely when the mind wakes up perception is quenched.

PHILO

μήριον δέ· ὅταν τι βουλόμεθα ἀκριβῶς νοῆσαι, εἰς ἔρημίαν ἀποδιδράσκομεν, καταμύομεν τὰς ὄψεις, τὰ ὦτα ἐπιφράττομεν, ἀποταπτόμεθα ταῖς αἰσθήσεσιν. οὕτως μὲν, ὅταν ἀναστῆ καὶ ἐγρηγόρσει χρῆται ὁ νοῦς, φθείρεται αἴσθησις.

- 26 Ἴδωμεν δὲ καὶ θάτερον, πῶς ὑπνω χρῆται ὁ νοῦς. περιαναστάσης καὶ ζωπυρηθείσης αἰσθήσεως, ὅταν ἢ ὄψις γραφῶν ἢ πλαστῶν ἔργα εὖ δεδημιουργημένα καθορᾶ, οὐχ ὁ νοῦς ἄπρακτός ἐστι νοητὸν ἐπινοῶν οὐδέν; τί δ' ὅταν ἢ ἀκοὴ προσέχη φωνῆς ἐμμελεία, δύναται ὁ νοῦς λογίζεσθαι τι τῶν οἰκείων; οὐδαμῶς. καὶ μὴν πολὺ πλέον ἄπρακτος γίνεται, ὅταν ἢ γεῦσις ἐξανασταῖσα λάβρως ἐμπιπλῆται τῶν γαστρὸς ἡδονῶν.
- 27 Διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς φοβηθεῖς, μή ποτε ὁ νοῦς μὴ μόνον κοιμηθῆ, ἀλλὰ καὶ τελείως ἀποθάνῃ, φησὶν [72] ἐν | ἐτέροις· “καὶ πάσσαλος ἔσται σοι ἐπὶ τῆς ζώνης σου· καὶ ἔσται, ὅταν διακαθιζάνῃς, ὀρύξεις ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐπαγαγῶν καλύψεις τὴν ἀσχημοσύνην σου” (Deut. xxiii. 13), πάσσαλον συμβολικῶς φάσκων τὸν ἐξορύσσοντα λόγον τὰ κρυμμένα τῶν πραγμάτων. κελεύει δ' αὐτὸν φορεῖν ἐπὶ τοῦ πάθους, ὃ ἀνεζῶσθαι χρῆ καὶ μὴ εἶν κεχαλάσθαι καὶ ἀνεῖσθαι· τοῦτο δὲ πρακτέον, ὅταν ὁ νοῦς τοῦ τόνου τῶν νοητῶν ἀποστάς ὑφίηται πρὸς τὰ πάθη καὶ διακαθιζάνῃ ἐνδιδοὺς καὶ

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 25-28

A proof of this is afforded by the fact that whenever we wish to get an accurate understanding of a subject we hurry off to a lonely spot ; we close our eyes ; we stop our ears ; we say "good-bye" to our perceptive faculties. So then, we see that, when the mind is astir and awake, the power of perception is suppressed.

There is the other point to be noticed. Let us see what happens to the mind in sleep. When the perceptive faculty has been set astir and aflame, owing to the eye contemplating the masterpieces of painters or sculptors, does not the mind remain inactive, and cease to exercise itself on objects of thought? And when the ear is intent on the tunefulness of a voice, can the mind be employing its reasoning power upon any of the subjects belonging to its sphere? Of course not. And in good sooth the mind finds itself still more completely out of work when the sense of taste has fully roused itself and is gorging itself with all that delights the appetite.

And this is the reason why Moses, fearing lest the mind should not only go to sleep but absolutely die, says in another place, "And thou shalt have a shovel upon thy belt ; and it shall be, when thou sittest down abroad, thou shalt dig therewith and cover over thine unseemliness" (Deut. xxiii. 13). He uses the term "shovel" figuratively for the reason that digs out hidden matters. And he bids the man wear it upon his passion, which must be girded up and which he must not allow to be loose and slack. And this girding must be put into practice whenever the mind, relaxing from the strain of its own objects, lowers itself to the passions, and "sits down abroad," giving itself up to be drawn

PHILO

- 29 ἀγόμενος ὑπὸ τῆς σωματικῆς ἀνάγκης. καὶ οὕτως ἔχει· ὅταν ἐν ταῖς ἀβροδιαίτοις συνουσίαις ἐπιλάβηται ὁ νοῦς ἑαυτοῦ κρατηθεὶς τοῖς ἐπὶ τὰς ἡδονὰς ἄγουσι, δεδουλώμεθα καὶ ἀκατακαλύπτῳ τῇ ἀκαθαρσίᾳ χρώμεθα· ἐὰν δὲ ὁ λόγος ἰσχύσῃ ἀνακαθᾶραι τὸ πάθος, οὔτε πίνοντες μεθυσκόμεθα οὔτε ἐσθιοντες ἐξυβρίζομεν διὰ κόρον, ἀλλὰ δίχα
- 30 τοῦ ληρεῖν νηφάλια σιτούμεθα. οὐκοῦν ἢ τε τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἐγρήγορσις ὕπνος ἐστὶ <τοῦ> νοῦ ἢ τε τοῦ νοῦ ἐγρήγορσις ἀπραξία τῶν αἰσθήσεων, καθάπερ καὶ ἡλίου ἀνατείλαντος μὲν ἀφανεῖς αἱ τῶν ἄλλων ἀστέρων λάμψεις, καταδύντος δὲ ἔκδηλοι· ἡλίου δὲ τρόπον ὁ νοῦς ἐγρηγορῶς μὲν ἐπισκιάζει ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι, κοιμηθεὶς δὲ αὐτὰς ἐξέλαμψε.
- 31 IX. Τούτων εἰρημένων ἐφαρμοστέον τὰς λέξεις. “ἐπέβαλε” φησὶν “ὁ θεὸς ἕκστασιν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀδάμ, καὶ ὕπνωσεν” (Gen. ii. 21). ὀρθῶς· ἢ γὰρ ἕκστασις καὶ τροπὴ τοῦ νοῦ ὕπνος ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ· ἐξίσταται δέ, ὅταν μὴ πραγματεύηται τὰ ἐπιβάλλοντα αὐτῷ νοητά· ὅτε δ’ οὐκ ἐνεργεῖ ταῦτα, κοιμᾶται. εὖ δὲ τὸ φάναι ὅτι ἐξίσταται, τοῦτο δ’ ἐστὶ τρέπεται, οὐ παρ’ ἑαυτόν, ἀλλὰ παρὰ τὸν ἐπιβάλλοντα καὶ ἐπιφέροντα καὶ ἐπι-
- 32 πέμποντα τὴν τροπὴν θεόν. καὶ γὰρ οὕτως ἔχει· εἰ γοῦν παρ’ ἐμὲ ἦν τὸ τρέπεσθαι, ὁπότε ἐβουλόμην, ἂν ἐχρώμην αὐτῷ, καὶ ὁπότε μὴ ἐπροηροῦμην, ἄτρεπτος διετέλουν· νυνὶ δὲ καὶ ἀντιφλονεικεῖ μοι ἢ τροπή, καὶ πολλάκις βουλόμενος καθῆκόν

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 29-32

by bodily necessity. And this is how the matter stands. Whenever the mind forgets itself amid the luxuries of a festive gathering and is mastered by all that conduces to pleasure, we are in bondage and we leave our "unseemliness" uncovered. But if the reason prove strong enough to purge the passion, we neither go on drinking till we are drunk, nor eat so greedily as to wax wanton, but we banish folly and take our food soberly. Thus the wakefulness of the senses means sleep for the mind, and the wakefulness of the mind a time of leisure for the senses; just as, when the sun has risen, the lights of the other heavenly bodies are invisible; when it has set, they show themselves. The mind, like the sun, when awake, throws the senses into the shade, but if it goes to sleep, it causes them to shine out.

IX. Having said this, we must show how the terms employed accord with it. "God cast," he says, "a trance upon Adam, and he went to sleep" (Gen. ii. 21). Quite correctly does he use this language. For the mind's trance and change is its sleep, and it falls into a trance when it ceases to be engaged with the objects appropriate to it; and when it is not at work at these, it is sleeping. Rightly also does he say that this change or turning which he undergoes is not of his own motion but of God's; that it is God who "casts it on him," that is, brings and sends it on him. For the case is this. For if the change were in our hands I should have recourse to it, when I wished, and when it was not my deliberate choice I should then continue unturned. But as it is, the change is actually repugnant to me, and many a time when wishing to entertain some fitting thought, I am

PHILO

- τι νοῆσαι ἐπαντλοῦμαι ταῖς παρὰ τὸ καθῆκον ἐπιρροίαις, καὶ ἔμπαλιν ἔννοιάν τινος λαμβάνων αἰσχροῦ ποτίμοις ἐννοίαις ἀπερρυψάμην ἐκείνο, θεοῦ τῇ ἑαυτοῦ χάριτι γλυκὺ νᾶμα ἀντὶ ἀλμυροῦ
- 33 ἐπεισχέαντος τῇ ψυχῇ. πᾶν μὲν οὖν τὸ γενητὸν ἀναγκαῖον τρέπεσθαι, ἴδιον γάρ ἐστι τοῦτο αὐτοῦ, ὡσπερ θεοῦ τὸ ἄτρεπτον εἶναι· ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν τραπέντες κατέμειναν ἄχρι παντελοῦς φθορᾶς, οἱ δ' ὅσον μόνον παθεῖν τὸ θνητόν, οὗτοι δ' εὐθὺς
- 34 ἀνεσώθησαν. διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς φησιν ὅτι “ οὐκ | [73] ἔάσει τὸν ὀλοθρεύοντα εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὰς οἰκίας ὑμῶν πατάξαι ” (Exod. xii. 23). ἔᾶ μὲν γὰρ τὸν ὀλοθρεύοντα—ὄλεθρος δὲ ψυχῆς ἐστὶν ἢ τροπή—εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν, ἵνα τὸ ἴδιον ἐνδείξῃται τοῦ γενητοῦ· οὐκ ἀφήσει δὲ ὁ θεὸς τὸν τοῦ ὀρώντος ἔγγονον Ἰσραὴλ οὕτως τραπήναι, ὥστε πληγῆναι ὑπὸ τῆς τροπῆς, ἀλλὰ ἀναδραμεῖν καὶ ἀνακύψαι ὡσπερ ἐκ βυθοῦ καὶ ἀνασωθῆναι βιάσεται.
- 35 X. “ Ἐλαβε μίαν τῶν πλευρῶν αὐτοῦ ” (Gen. ii. 21). τῶν πολλῶν τοῦ νοῦ δυνάμεων μίαν ἔλαβε τὴν αἰσθητικὴν. τὸ δὲ “ ἔλαβεν ” οὐκ ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀφεῖλεν ἀκουστέον, ἀλλ' ἀντὶ τοῦ κατηρίθμησεν, ἐξήτασεν, ὡς ἐν ἑτέροις “ λάβε τὸ κεφάλαιον τῶν σκύλων τῆς αἰχμαλωσίας ” (Num. xxxi. 26).
- 36 τί οὖν ἐστὶν ὃ βούλεται παραστήσαι; διχῶς αἰσθησις λέγεται, ἡ μὲν καθ' ἑξίν, ἣτις καὶ κοιμωμένων ἡμῶν ἐστὶν, ἡ δὲ κατ' ἐνέργειαν. τῆς μὲν drenched by a flood of unfitting matters pouring over me ; and conversely when on the point of admitting a conception of something vile, I have washed the vile thing away with wholesome thoughts,<sup>a</sup> God having by His grace poured upon my soul a sweet draught in place of the bitter one. Now every created thing must necessarily undergo change, for this is its property, even as unchangeableness is the property of God. But, while some, after being changed, remain so until they are entirely destroyed, others continue so only so far as to experience that to which all flesh is liable, and these forthwith recover. This is why Moses says, "He will not permit the destroyer to come into your houses to smite you" (Exod. xii. 23) : for He does indeed permit the destroyer—"destruction" being the change or turning of the soul)—to enter into the soul, that He may make it evident that what is peculiar to created things is there ; but God will not let the offspring of "the seeing" Israel be in such wise changed as to receive his death-blow by the change, but will force him to rise and emerge as though from deep water and recover.

---

* Philo is adapting Plato, Phaedrus 243 D ποτίμω λόγῳ οἶον ἀλμυρὰν ἀκοὴν ἀποκλύσασθαι.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 32-36

X. "He took one of his sides" (Gen. ii. 21). Of the many faculties of the mind He took one, the faculty of perception. "Took" must not be understood as equivalent to "removed," but as equivalent to "enrolled," "registered," as we find it elsewhere "take the sum of the spoils of the captivity" (Numb. xxxi. 26). What idea is it, then, that he wants to convey ? The word "perception" is used in two ways, first in that of a condition, in which sense it is ours when we are asleep, secondly in the sense of an activity. From perception in the

PHILO

- οὖν προτέρας τῆς καθ' ἕξιν ὄφελος οὐδέν, οὐδὲ γὰρ αὐτῇ τῶν ὑποκειμένων ἀντιλαμβανόμεθα, τῆς δὲ δευτέρας τῆς κατ' ἐνέργειαν, διὰ γὰρ ταύτης
- 37 ποιούμεθα τὰς τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀντιλήψεις. γεννήσας οὖν τὴν προτέραν τὴν καθ' ἕξιν αἴσθησιν, ὅτε καὶ τὸν νοῦν ἐγέννα—σὺν γὰρ πολλαῖς δυνάμεσιν ἡρεμούσαις αὐτὸν κατεσκεύαζε—νῦν βούλεται τὴν κατ' ἐνέργειαν ἀποτελέσαι· ἀποτελεῖται δὲ ἢ κατ' ἐνέργειαν, ὅταν ἢ καθ' ἕξιν κινήθῃσα ταθῆ μέχρι τῆς σαρκὸς καὶ τῶν αἰσθητικῶν ἀγγείων· ὡσπερ γὰρ φύσις ἀποτελεῖται κινήθentos σπέρματος,
- 38 οὕτως καὶ ἐνέργεια κινήθεις ἕξεως. XI. “ἀνεπλήρου δὲ σάρκα ἀντ' αὐτῆς” (Gen. ii. 21), τουτέστι συνεπλήρου τὴν καθ' ἕξιν αἴσθησιν ἄγων εἰς ἐνέργειαν καὶ τείνων αὐτὴν ἄχρι σαρκὸς καὶ τῆς ὅλης ἐπιφανείας. διὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει ὅτι “ὠκοδόμησεν εἰς γυναῖκα” (Gen. ii. 22), διὰ τούτου παριστὰς ὅτι οἰκειότατον καὶ εὐθυβολώτατον ἐστὶν ὄνομα αἰσθήσεως γυνή· ὡσπερ γὰρ ὁ μὲν ἀνὴρ ἐν τῷ δρᾶσαι<sup>1</sup> θεωρεῖται, ἐν δὲ τῷ πάσχειν ἢ γυνή, οὕτως ἐν μὲν τῷ δρᾶν ὁ νοῦς, ἐν δὲ τῷ πάσχειν
- 39 γυναικὸς τρόπον ἢ αἴσθησις ἐξετάζεται. μαθεῖν δὲ ἐκ τῆς ἐναργείας ῥάδιον· ἢ ὄψις πάσχει ὑπὸ τῶν κινούντων αὐτὴν ὄρατῶν, τοῦ λευκοῦ, τοῦ μέλανος, τῶν ἄλλων, ἢ ἀκοή πάλιν ὑπὸ τῶν φωνῶν καὶ ἢ γεῦσις ὑπὸ τῶν χυλῶν διατίθεται, ὑπὸ τῶν ἀτμῶν ἢ ὄσφρησις, ὑπὸ τραχέος καὶ μαλακοῦ ἢ ἀφή· καὶ ἡρεμοῦσί γε αἱ αἰσθήσεις

<sup>1</sup> ? τῇ δράσει.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 36-39

former sense, as it is a state, we derive no benefit, for it does not enable us to apprehend the objects about us. It is from the second kind of perception, as an activity, that we get benefit, for our apprehension of the objects of sense-perception is made possible by this. Having, then, brought into being the former sort of perception as a quiescent condition, at the time when He was bringing the mind itself into being—for He made the mind with many faculties lying dormant—now it is His wish to produce perception as an activity. Active perception is brought to pass when quiescent perception has been set in motion and extended to reach the flesh and the perceptive organs. For, just as growth is effected by seed being set in motion, so is activity or actuality by a quiescent condition being set in motion. XI. “And he filled up flesh in its stead” (Gen. ii. 21), that is to say He fulfilled perception that was only a state by leading it on to be an activity, and extending it till it reached the flesh and the whole surface of the body. And so he adds the words, “He built it to be a woman” (Gen. ii. 22), proving by this that the most proper and exact name for sense-perception is “woman.” For just as the man shows himself in activity and the woman in passivity, so the province of the mind is activity, and that of the perceptive sense passivity, as in woman. It is easy to learn this from what is before our eyes. Sight is in a passive relation to the objects of sight that set it moving, white, black, and the rest. Hearing, again, is affected by sounds, and the sense of taste by savours, the sense of smell by odours, that of touch by things rough and smooth; and the faculties of perception are all dormant, until ἅπασαι, μέχρις ἂν προσέλθῃ ἐκάστη τὸ κινήσου ἔξωθεν.

PHILO

- 40 XII. “ Καὶ ἤγαγεν αὐτὴν πρὸς τὸν Ἀδάμ· καὶ εἶπεν Ἀδάμ· Τοῦτο νῦν ὄστουν ἐκ τῶν ὀστών μου καὶ σὰρξ ἐκ τῆς σαρκός μου ” (Gen. ii. 22, 23). τὴν κατ’ ἐνέργειαν αἴσθησιν ἄγει ὁ θεὸς πρὸς τὸν
- [74] νοῦν, εἰδὼς ὅτι ἀνακάμπτειν | δεῖ τὴν κίνησιν αὐτῆς καὶ ἀντίληψιν ἐπὶ νοῦν. ὁ δὲ θεασάμενος ἦν πρότερον εἶχε δύναμιν καὶ καθ’ ἕξιν ἡρεμοῦσαν νῦν ἀποτέλεσμα καὶ ἐνέργειαν γεγεννημένην καὶ κινουμένην, θαυμάζει τε καὶ ἀναφθέγγεται φάσκων ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλλοτρία αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ σφόδρα οἰκεία·
- 41 “ τοῦτο, ” γάρ φησιν “ ἐστὶν ὄστουν ἐκ τῶν ἐμῶν ὀστών, ” τουτέστι δύναμις ἐκ τῶν ἐμῶν δυνάμεων —ἐπὶ γὰρ δυνάμεως καὶ ἰσχύος νῦν παρείληπται τὸ ὀστέον—καὶ πάθος ἐκ τῶν ἐμῶν παθῶν, “ καὶ σὰρξ ” φησὶν “ ἐκ τῆς σαρκός μου ”· πάντα γὰρ ὅσα πάσχει ἢ αἴσθησις, οὐκ ἄνευ νοῦ ὑπομένει, πηγὴ γὰρ οὗτός ἐστιν αὐτῇ καὶ θεμέλιος ᾧ ἐπ-
- 42 ερείδεται. ἄξιον δὲ σκέψασθαι, διὰ τί τὸ “ νῦν ” προσετέθη· “ τοῦτο ” γάρ φησι “ νῦν ὄστουν ἐκ τῶν ὀστών μου. ” ἢ αἴσθησις φύσει νῦν ἐστι, κατὰ τὸν ἐνεστώτα χρόνον ὑφισταμένη μόνον. ὁ μὲν γὰρ νοῦς τῶν τριῶν ἐφάπτεται χρόνων, καὶ γὰρ τὰ παρόντα νοεῖ καὶ τῶν παρεληλυθότων
- 43 μέμνηται καὶ τὰ μέλλοντα προσδοκᾷ· ἢ δὲ αἴσθησις οὔτε μελλόντων ἀντιλαμβάνεται οὐδ’ ἀνάλογόν τι πάσχει προσδοκία ἢ ἐλπίδι οὔτε παρεληλυθότων μέμνηται, ἀλλ’ ὑπὸ τοῦ ἤδη κινουίντος καὶ παρόντος μόνου πάσχειν πέφυκεν, οἷον ὀφθαλμὸς λευκαίνει-

there draws near to each of them from outside that which is to set it in motion.

XII. "And he led her to Adam; and Adam said, This is now bone out of my bones and flesh out of my flesh" (Gen. ii. 22, 23). God leads active perception to the mind, knowing that its movement and apprehensive power must revert to the mind as their starting-point. The mind, on beholding that, which it had before as a potentiality and as a dormant state, now become a finished product, an activity, and in motion, marvels at it, and cries aloud declaring that it is not foreign to it but in the fullest sense its own, for it says, "This is bone out of my bones," that is, power out of my powers, for "bone" is here used as "power and strength", "and feeling out of my feelings"; "and flesh," he says, "out of my flesh"; for not without the mind does the perceptive faculty bear anything that it feels, for the mind is to it a fountain-head and a basis on which it rests. It is worth our while to consider why the word "now" was added: for what he says is, "This is now bone out of my bones." Perception by itself is now, subsisting only in relation to the present time. For whereas past, present, and future are within the scope of the mind, as it grasps things present, remembers things past, and looks forward to things future, perception, on the other hand, has no power either to reach out to future things by experiencing something corresponding to hope or expectation, nor does it remember things past, but it is so constituted as to be affected only by that which is present and sets it in motion at the moment. For instance, the eye has a sensation of white now under the influence of the ται νῦν ὑπὸ τοῦ παρόντος λευκοῦ, ὑπὸ δὲ τοῦ μὴ παρόντος οὐδὲν πάσχει. ὁ δὲ νοῦς καὶ ἐπὶ τῷ μὴ παρόντι κινεῖται, παρεληλυθότι μὲν κατὰ μνήμην, μέλλοντι δὲ ἐπελπίζων καὶ προσδοκῶν.

PHILO

- 44 XIII. “ Ταύτη καὶ κληθήσεται γυνή ” (Gen. ii. 23), ἀντὶ τοῦ, διὰ τοῦτο ἡ αἴσθησις γυνή προσρηθήσεται, “ ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἀνδρός ” τοῦ κινουόντος αὐτήν “ λαμβάνεται αὕτη ” φησί. διὰ τί οὖν τὸ “ αὕτη ” πρόσκειται; ὅτι ἐστὶν ἕτερα αἴσθησις, οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ λαμβανομένη, ἀλλὰ σὺν αὐτῷ γεγενημένη· δύο γάρ, ὡς εἶπον ἤδη, εἰσὶν αἰσθή-
- 45 σεις, ἡ μὲν καθ’ ἕξιν, ἡ δὲ κατ’ ἐνέργειαν· ἡ μὲν οὖν καθ’ ἕξιν οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ ἀνδρός, τουτέστι τοῦ νοῦ, λαμβάνεται, ἀλλὰ σὺν αὐτῷ φύεται· ὁ γὰρ νοῦς, καθάπερ ἐδήλωσα, ὅτε ἐγενῆτο, σὺν πολλαῖς δυνάμεσι καὶ ἕξεσιν ἐγενῆτο, λογικῇ ψυχικῇ φυτικῇ, ὥστε καὶ αἰσθητικῇ· ἡ δὲ κατ’ ἐνέργειαν ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ· ἐκ γὰρ τῆς ἐν νῷ καθ’ ἕξιν οὔσης αἰσθήσεως ἐτάθη, ἵνα γένηται κατ’ ἐνέργειαν, ὥστε ἐξ αὐτοῦ τοῦ νοῦ γεγενῆσθαι τὴν δευτέραν
- 46 καὶ κατὰ κίνησιν. μάταιος δὲ ὁ νομίζων πρὸς τὸν ἀληθῆ λόγον ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ τι συνόλως γενῆσθαι ἢ ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ. οὐχ ὀραῖς ὅτι καὶ τῇ ἐπὶ τῶν εἰδώλων καθεζομένη αἰσθήσει τῇ Ῥαχήλ νομιζούσῃ ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ τὰ κινήματα εἶναι ἐπιπλήττει ὁ
- [75] βλέπων; ἡ | μὲν γάρ φησι· “ δός μοι τέκνα, εἰ δὲ μὴ, τελευτήσω ἐγώ ” (Gen. xxx. 1)· ὁ δὲ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 480.

<sup>b</sup> I. xx. εἶδωλα, E. V. ‘teraphim.’

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 43-46

white that is present, but from that which is not present it feels no-effect. The mind, on the contrary, is set in motion by occasion of that which is not present as well, if past, by way of memory, if future, by building hopes and expectations on it.

XIII. "To this one shall be given the title<sup>a</sup> 'woman'" (Gen. ii. 23), as much as to say, for this cause shall perception be called "woman" because out of man that sets it in motion "this one is taken." Why, then is "this one" put in? Because there is another perception, not taken from the mind, but brought into being together with it. For there are, as I have said already, two perceptions, one existing as quiescent condition, the other as activity. The one, then, that exists as quiescent condition, is not taken out of the man, that is to say the mind, but comes into being with it. For the mind, as I have pointed out, when it came into existence, came into existence in association with many potentialities and conditions, those of reason, animal life, and growth, and so with that of perception also. But the one that exists as an activity comes out of the mind. For it was extended out of the perception which is in the mind as a condition, that it might come to be an activity. Thus the second one, the one that is characterized by movement, has been produced out of the mind itself. But he is a shallow thinker who supposes that in strict truth anything whatever derives its birth from the mind or from himself. Do you not see that perception in the person of Rachel<sup>a</sup> who sits upon the teraphim,<sup>b</sup> is rebuked by "the seeing one," when she imagines that movements have their source in mind? For she says, "Give me children; if you do not, I shall die" (Gen.

PHILO

- ἀποκρίνεται ὅτι, ὡ ψευδοδοξοῦσα, οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ νοῦς αἴτιον οὐδενός, ἀλλ' ὁ πρὸ τοῦ νοῦ θεός· διὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει· “μὴ ἀντὶ θεοῦ ἐγὼ εἰμι, ὃς ἐστέρησέ σε καρπὸν κοιλίας” (ib. 2); ὅτι δὲ ὁ γεννῶν ὁ θεός ἐστι, μαρτυρήσει ἐπὶ τῆς Λείας, ὅταν φῆ· “ἰδὼν δὲ κύριος ὅτι μισεῖται Λεία, ἤνοιξε τὴν μήτραν αὐτῆς, ‘Ραχὴλ δὲ ἦν στείρα” (Gen. xxix. 31). ἀνδρὸς δὲ ἴδιον τὸ μήτραν ἀνοιγνύναι. φύσει δὲ μισεῖται παρὰ τῷ θνητῷ <γένει> ἢ ἀρετῇ, διὸ καὶ ὁ θεὸς αὐτὴν τετίμηκε καὶ παρέχει
- 47 τὰ πρωτοτόκια τῇ μισουμένῃ. λέγει δ' ἐν ἑτέροις· “ἐὰν δὲ γένωνται ἀνθρώπῳ δύο γυναῖκες, μία αὐτῶν ἡγαπημένη καὶ μία αὐτῶν μισουμένη, καὶ τέκωσιν αὐτῷ καὶ γένηται υἱὸς πρωτότοκος τῆς μισουμένης, . . . οὐ δυνήσεται πρωτοτοκεῦσαι τῷ υἱῷ τῆς ἡγαπημένης, ὑπεριδὼν τὸν υἱὸν τῆς μισουμένης τὸν πρωτότοκον” (Deut. xxi. 15, 16)· πρῶτιστα γάρ ἐστι καὶ τελειότατα τὰ τῆς μισουμένης ἀρετῆς γεννήματα, τὰ δὲ τῆς ἀγαπωμένης ἡδονῆς ἔσχατα.
- 49 XIV. “Ἔνεκα τούτου καταλείπει ἄνθρωπος τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν μητέρα, καὶ προσκολληθήσεται πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔσονται οἱ δύο εἰς σὰρκα μίαν” (Gen. ii. 24). ἔνεκα τῆς αἰσθήσεως ὁ νοῦς, ὅταν αὐτῇ δουλωθῇ, καταλείπει καὶ τὸν πατέρα τῶν ὄλων θεὸν καὶ τὴν μητέρα τῶν συμπάντων, τὴν ἀρετὴν καὶ σοφίαν τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ προσκολλᾶται καὶ ἐνοῦται τῇ αἰσθήσει καὶ ἀναλύεται εἰς αἴσθησιν, ἵνα γένωνται μία σὰρξ καὶ
- 50 ἐν πάθος οἱ δύο. παρατήρει δ' ὅτι οὐχ ἡ γυνή

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 46-50

xxx. 1) ; but he answers, " O woman, full of false fancies, the mind is the origin of nothing, but God who is antecedent to the mind is the only cause " ; and so he adds, " Am I in the place of God who deprived thee of the fruit of the womb ? " (ibid. 2). But that it is God who brings about birth, Scripture will give evidence in the case of Leah, when it says, " And the Lord seeing that Leah was hated opened her womb, but Rachel was barren " (Gen. xxix. 31). The opening of the womb is man's proper function. But mortal kind is prone of itself to hate virtue, and accordingly God has bestowed honour upon it and vouchsafes to her that is hated to bear the first-born. He says elsewhere, " If a man have two wives, one of them beloved and one of them hated, and they shall bear children to him and the first-born son be the son of the hated wife . . . he shall not be able to give the right of the first-born to the son of the beloved wife, overlooking the son of the hated one who is the first-born " (Deut. xxi. 15, 16) : for first of all and most perfect of all are the offspring of the hated virtue, while the offspring of the well-loved pleasure are last of all.

XIV. " For this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife, and the twain shall be one flesh " (Gen. ii. 24). For the sake of sense-perception the Mind, when it has become her slave, abandons both God the Father of the universe, and God's excellence and wisdom, the Mother of all things, and cleaves to and becomes one with sense-perception and is resolved into sense-perception so that the two become one flesh and one experience. Observe that it is not the woman that cleaves to the man,

PHILO

- κολλᾶται τῷ ἀνδρί, ἀλλ' ἔμπαλιν ὁ ἀνὴρ τῇ γυναικί, ὁ νοῦς τῇ αἰσθήσει· ὅταν γὰρ τὸ κρεῖττον
 ὁ νοῦς ἐνωθῇ τῷ χεῖρονι τῇ αἰσθήσει, ἀναλύεται
 εἰς τὸ χεῖρον τὸ σαρκὸς γένος, τὴν παθῶν αἰτίαν
 αἰσθησιν· ὅταν δὲ τὸ χεῖρον ἢ αἰσθησις ἀκολουθήσῃ
 τῷ κρεῖττονι τῷ νῷ, οὐκέτι ἔσται σάρξ, ἀλλὰ
 ἀμφοτέρα νοῦς. οὗτος μὲν δὴ τοιοῦτος, τὸ φιλο-51 παθὲς προκρίνων τοῦ φιλοθέου. ἔστι δέ τις ἕτερος
 τούναντίον ἡρημένος ὁ Λευὶ ὁ “ λέγων τῷ πατρὶ
 καὶ τῇ μητρὶ Οὐχ ἐώρακά σε, καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφούς
 οὐκ ἐπέγνω, καὶ τοὺς υἱοὺς ἀπέγνω ” (Deut.
 xxxiii. 9)· πατέρα καὶ μητέρα οὗτος [τε], τὸν
 νοῦν καὶ τὴν τοῦ σώματος ὕλην, καταλείπει ὑπὲρ
 τοῦ κληρὸν ἔχειν τὸν ἕνα θεόν, “ κύριος γὰρ αὐτὸς 52 κληρὸς αὐτῷ ” (Deut. x. 9). γίνεται δὴ τοῦ μὲν φιλοπαθοῦς κληρὸς τὸ πάθος, τοῦ δὲ <φιλοθέου>
 τοῦ Λευὶ κληρὸς ὁ θεός. οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι καὶ τῇ
 δεκάτῃ τοῦ <ἐβδόμου> μηνὸς κελεύει δύο τράγους [κληρὸν] προσάγειν, “ κληρὸν ἕνα τῷ κυρίῳ καὶ κληρὸν ἕνα τῷ ἀποπομπαίῳ ” (Lev. xvi. 8); τοῦ γὰρ φιλοπαθοῦς ἔστι κληρὸς ὄντως τὸ ἀποπόμπιμον πάθος.
- 53 XV. “ Καὶ ἦσαν οἱ δύο γυμνοί, ὃ τε Ἀδὰμ
 καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ, καὶ οὐκ ἦσχύνοντο. Ὁ δὲ ὄφεις
 ἦν φρονιμώτατος πάντων τῶν θηρίων τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς
 [76] γῆς, ὧν | ἐποίησε κύριος ὁ θεός ” (Gen. ii. 25,
 iii. 1). γυμνός ἐστιν ὁ νοῦς ὁ μήτε κακία μήτε
 ἀρετῇ ἀμπεχόμενος, ἀλλ' ἑκατέρου γεγυμνωμένος
 ὄντως, οἷον ἢ τοῦ νηπίου παιδὸς ψυχὴ ἀμέτοχος
 οὔσα ἑκατέρου, ἀγαθοῦ τε καὶ κακοῦ, ἀπημφιάσται

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 50-53

but conversely the man to the woman, Mind to Sense-perception. For when that which is superior, namely Mind, becomes one with that which is inferior, namely Sense-perception, it resolves itself into the order of flesh which is inferior, into sense-perception, the moving cause of the passions. But if Sense the inferior follow Mind the superior, there will be flesh no more, but both of them will be Mind. The man, then, of whom the prophet speaks is such as has been described; he prefers the love of his passions to the love of God. But there is a different man, one who has made the contrary choice, even Levi, who "said to his father and his mother 'I have not seen thee,' and knew not his brethren, and disclaimed his sons" (Deut. xxxiii. 9). This man forsakes father and mother, his mind and material body, for the sake of having as his portion the one God, "for the Lord Himself is his portion" (Deut. x. 9). Passion becomes the portion of the lover of passion, but the portion of Levi the lover of God is God. Do you not see again that he prescribes that on the tenth day of the seventh month they should bring two goats, "one portion for the Lord and one for the averter of evil"? (Lev. xvi. 8). For in very deed the portion of the lover of passion is a passion that needs an averter.

XV. "And the two were naked, Adam and his wife, and were not ashamed." "Now the serpent was the most subtil of all the beasts that were upon the earth, which the Lord God had made" (Gen. ii. 25, iii. 1). The mind that is clothed neither in vice nor in virtue, but absolutely stripped of either, is naked, just as the soul of an infant, since it is without part in either good or evil, is bared and

PHILO

τὰ καλύμματα καὶ γεγύμνωται· ταῦτα γὰρ ἐστὶν ἐσθήματα ψυχῆς, οἷς σκεπάζεται καὶ συγκρύπτεται, τῆς μὲν σπουδαίας τὸ ἀγαθόν, τῆς δὲ 54 φαύλης τὸ κακόν. τριχῶς δὲ [καὶ] ψυχὴ γυμνοῦται· ἅπαξ μὲν ὅτε ἄτρεπτος διατελεῖ καὶ πασῶν μὲν
 ἠρήμωται κακιῶν, πάντα δὲ τὰ πάθη ἀπημφίασται
 καὶ ἀποβέβληκε. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ “ Μωυσῆς ἔξω
 τῆς παρεμβολῆς πήγνυσι τὴν ἑαυτοῦ σκηνήν,
 μακρὰν ἀπὸ τῆς παρεμβολῆς, καὶ ἐκλήθη σκηνή 55 μαρτυρίου ” (Exod. xxxiii. 7). τοῦτο
 δ’ ἐστὶ τοιοῦτον· ἡ φιλόθεος ψυχὴ ἐκδύσα τὸ σῶμα καὶ τὰ τούτῳ φίλα καὶ μακρὰν ἔξω φυγοῦσα ἀπὸ
 τούτων πῆξιν καὶ βεβαίωσιν καὶ ἴδρυσιν ἐν τοῖς τελείοις ἀρετῆς δόγμασι λαμβάνει· διὸ καὶ μαρ-τυρεῖται ὑπὸ θεοῦ, ὅτι καλῶν ἐρεῖ, “ ἐκλήθη γὰρ σκηνή μαρτυρίου ” φησί· καὶ τὸν καλοῦντα παρ-εσιώπησεν, ἵνα συγκινηθεῖσα ἡ ψυχὴ σκέψηται,
 τίς ὁ μαρτυρῶν ταῖς φιλαρέτοις διανοίαις ἐστί.
 56 τούτου χάριν ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς εἰς τὰ ἅγια τῶν ἁγίων οὐκ εἰσελεύσεται ἐν τῷ ποδήρει (cf. Lev. xvi.
 1 ss.), ἀλλὰ τὸν τῆς δόξης καὶ φαντασίας ψυχῆς χιτῶνα ἀποδυσάμενος καὶ καταλιπὼν τοῖς τὰ
 ἐκτὸς ἀγαπῶσι καὶ δόξαν πρὸ ἀληθείας τετιμηκόσι
 γυμνὸς ἄνευ χρωμάτων καὶ ἤχων εἰσελεύσεται
 σπείσαι τὸ ψυχικὸν αἷμα καὶ θυμιάσαι ὄλον τὸν 57 νοῦν τῷ σωτήρι καὶ εὐεργέτῃ θεῷ. καὶ μὲν δὴ Ναδάβ καὶ Ἀβιουδ (cf. Lev. x. 1) οἱ ἐγγίσαντες θεῷ καὶ τὸν μὲν θνητὸν βίον καταλιπόντες, τοῦ δ’ ἀθανάτου μεταλαχόντες, γυμνοὶ θεωροῦνται τῆς κενῆς καὶ θνητῆς δόξης· οὐ γὰρ
 ἂν ἐν τοῖς χιτῶσιν αὐτοὺς οἱ κομίζοντες ἔφερον

stripped of coverings: for these are the soul's clothes, by which it is sheltered and concealed. Goodness is the garment of the worthy soul, evil that of the worthless. Now there are three ways in which a soul is made naked. One is when it continues without change and is barren of all vices, and has divested itself of all the passions and flung them away. For this reason "Moses fixes his tent outside the camp, a long way from the camp, and it was called the tent of testimony" (Exod. xxxiii. 7).

What this means is this. The soul that loves God, having disrobed itself of the body and the objects dear to the body and fled abroad far away from these, gains a fixed and assured settlement in the perfect ordinances of virtue. Wherefore witness is also borne to it by God that it loves things that are noble; "for," says he, "it was called the tent of witness." He leaves unmentioned who it is that calls it so, in order that the soul may be stirred up to consider who it is that bears witness to virtue-loving minds. This is why the high priest shall not enter the Holy of Holies in his robe (Lev. xvi. 1 ff.), but laying aside the garment of opinions and impressions of the soul, and leaving it behind for those that love outward things and value semblance above reality, shall enter naked with no coloured borders or sound of bells, to pour as a libation the blood of the soul and to offer as incense the whole mind to God our Saviour and Benefactor.

Nadab and Abihu, too, who had drawn nigh to God and had forsaken the mortal life and become partakers of the life immortal are beheld naked of vain and mortal glory. For those who carried them away would not have borne them in their

PHILO

(Lev. x. 5), εἰ μὴ γεγύμνωστο πάντα δεσμὸν πάθους καὶ σωματικῆς ἀνάγκης διαρρήξαντες, ἵνα μὴ ἡ γύμνωσις αὐτῶν καὶ ἀσωματότης ἀθέων ἐπεισὸδω λογισμῶν κιβδηλευθῆ· οὐ γὰρ πᾶσιν ἐπιτρεπτέον τὰ θεοῦ καθορᾶν ἀπόρρητα, ἀλλὰ μόνοις τοῖς

58 δυναμένοις αὐτὰ περιστέλλειν καὶ φυλάττειν. διὸ καὶ οἱ περὶ τὸν Μισαδαὶ οὐχὶ τοῖς ἰδίους χιτῶσιν αἴρουσιν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς τῶν ἐκπυρωθέντων καὶ ἀναληφθέντων Ναδαβ καὶ Ἀβιούδ· ἀποδυσάμενοι γὰρ τὰ ἐπικαλύπτοντα πάντα τὴν μὲν γύμνωσιν τῷ

[77] θεῷ | προσήνεγκαν, τοὺς δὲ χιτῶνας τοῖς περὶ Μισαδαὶ κατέλιπον· χιτῶνες δ' εἰσὶ τὰ μέρη τοῦ ἀλόγου, ἃ τὸ λογικὸν ἐπεσκίαζε. καὶ Ἀβραὰμ

59 γυμνοῦται, ὅταν ἀκούσῃ· “ἔξελθε ἐκ τῆς γῆς σου καὶ ἐκ τῆς συγγενείας σου” (Gen. xii. 1). καὶ ὁ Ἰσαὰκ οὐ γυμνοῦται μὲν, ἀεὶ δὲ γυμνός ἐστι καὶ ἀσώματος· πρόσταγμα γὰρ αὐτῷ δέδοται, μὴ καταβῆναι εἰς Αἴγυπτον (Gen. xxvi. 2), τουτέστι τὸ σῶμα. καὶ Ἰακώβ γυμνότητος ἐρᾷ ψυχικῆς— ἡ γὰρ λειότης αὐτοῦ γύμνωσις ἐστίν— ἦν γὰρ Ἡσαῦ ἀνὴρ δασύς, Ἰακώβ δέ, φησὶν, ἀνὴρ λείος (Gen. xxvii. 11), παρὸ καὶ τῆς Λείας ἀνὴρ ἐστι.

60 XVI. Μία μὲν ἀρίστη γύμνωσις ἐστίν αὕτη, ἡ δ' ἑτέρα ἐστὶν ἐναντία, ἀρετῆς ἀφαίρεσις ἐκ τροπῆς γινομένη, ὅταν ληραίνῃ καὶ παρανοῇ ἡ ψυχὴ. ταύτη χρῆται ὁ Νῶε γυμνούμενος, ὅταν πῖν τοῦ οἴνου· χάρις δὲ τῷ θεῷ, ὅτι ἡ τροπὴ καὶ ἡ γύμνωσις τοῦ νοῦ κατ' ἀρετῆς ἀφαίρεσιν οὐκ

---

<sup>a</sup> The Greek for 'Leah' (λεῖα) is the feminine of λείος, 'smooth.'

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 57-60

coats (Lev. x. 5), had they not become naked by bursting every bond of passion and of bodily constraint, in order that their nakedness and freedom from the body should not be debased by the irruption of impious thoughts. For not to all must leave be given to contemplate the secret things of God, but only to those who are able to hide and guard them. And so Mishael and Elzaphan do not take them up in their own coats, but in those of Nadab and Abihu, who had been devoured by fire and been taken up (into heaven). For having stripped themselves of all that covered them, they offered their nakedness to God, but their coats they left behind for Mishael and Elzaphan. Now coats are those parts of the irrational by which the rational was hidden. Abraham too becomes naked when the words have been spoken to him, "Go forth out of thy country and thy kindred" (Gen. xii. 1). Isaac also does not indeed become naked, but is always naked and without body, for an injunction has been given him not to go down into Egypt (Gen. xxvi. 2), and "Egypt" is the body. Jacob, again, loves nakedness of the soul, for his smoothness signifies nakedness. "For Esau," we read, "was a hairy man, but Jacob a smooth man" (Gen. xxvii. 11), and accordingly he has "Leah"<sup>a</sup> as wife.

XVI. This is one form, the noblest form, of stripping or becoming naked. The other is of a contrary nature, a deprivation of virtue due to a turning or change of condition, when the soul becomes foolish and deranged. This kind of stripping is experienced by Noah, who is made naked when he has drunk wine. But, thanks be to God, the change of condition and the stripping of the mind

PHILO

ἄχρι τῶν ἐκτὸς ἐχύθη, ἀλλ' ἔμεινεν ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ·
 φησὶ γὰρ ὅτι “ἐγυμνώθη ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ”
 (Gen. ix. 21)· καὶ γὰρ ἀμάρτη ὁ σοφός, οὐχ οὕτως ἐξώκειλεν ὡς ὁ φαῦλος, τοῦ μὲν γὰρ κέχυται ἢ κακία, τοῦ δὲ συνέσταλται· διὸ καὶ ἀνανήφει,
 τοῦτο δ' ἐστὶ μετανοεῖ καὶ ὡσπερ ἐκ νόσου 61 ἀναλαμβάνει. ἀκριβέστερον δὲ τὸ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ γίνεσθαι τὴν γύμνωσιν θεασώμεθα·
 ἐπειδὴν ἢ ψυχὴν τραπέισα μόνον ἐνοηθῆ τι τῶν
 ἀτόπων καὶ μὴ ἐπεξέλθη, ὥστε αὐτὸ ἔργῳ τελειῶσαι, ἐν τῷ τῆς ψυχῆς χωρίῳ καὶ οἴκῳ γέγονε
 τὸ ἀμάρτημα· εἰ δὲ πρὸς τῷ μοχθηρόν τι λογίσασθαι καὶ ἐπανύσῃται, ὥστε ἐργάσασθαι, κέχυται
 62 καὶ εἰς τὰ ἐκτὸς τὸ ἀδίκημα. παρὸ καὶ τῷ
 Χαναὰν καταρᾶται, ὅτι τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς τροπὴν
 ἔξω ἀπήγγειλε, τουτέστι καὶ εἰς τὰ ἐκτὸς ἔτεινε
 καὶ ἐπεξεργάσατο προσθεῖς τῷ κακῷ βουλήματι
 κακὸν τὸ διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἀποτέλεσμα· Σὴμ δὲ
 καὶ Ἰάφεθ ἐπαινοῦνται μὴ ἐπιθέμενοι τῇ ψυχῇ, 63 ἀλλὰ τὴν τροπὴν αὐτῆς περικαλύψαντες. διὰ
 τοῦτο καὶ αἱ εὐχαὶ καὶ οἱ ὀρισμοὶ τῆς ψυχῆς ἐπιλύονται, ὅταν ἐν οἴκῳ γένωνται πατρὸς ἢ ἀνδρός (Num. xxx. 4 ff.), μὴ ἡσυχάζοντων τῶν
 λογισμῶν μηδὲ ἐπιτιθεμένων τῇ τροπῇ, ἀλλὰ περιαιρούντων τὸ ἀμάρτημα· τότε γὰρ καὶ ὁ δεσπότης ἀπάντων “καθαριεῖ αὐτήν.” εὐχὴν δὲ
 χήρας καὶ ἐκβεβλημένης ἀναφαίρετον ἐᾷ· “ὅσα
 γὰρ ἂν εὐξῆται” φησὶ “κατὰ τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτῆς,

° See App. pp. 480, 481.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 60-63

which ensued upon the deprivation of virtue, did not spread out abroad and reach those outside, but stayed in the house, for what is said is "he was made naked in his house" (Gen. ix. 21): for the wise man, if he do commit sin, does not run riot, as does the bad man. The evil of the one has been spread forth; that of the other has been held in check; so he becomes sober again, that is to say, he repents and recovers as from an illness.

Let us contemplate more in detail the fact that the stripping takes place in the house. When the soul in its perversion only purposes some outrage, but does not follow it up so as to complete it in action, the sin has been committed in the soul's abode and house. But if, in addition to designing the bad deed, it goes on to carry out its design and do the thing, the unrighteous act has been spread out of doors as well. It is in accordance with this that a curse is pronounced on Canaan, because he reported abroad the change of the soul. This means that he gave it fuller scope and wrought it out further, adding a further evil to the evil wish, even its accomplishment by deeds. Shem and Japhet on the other hand receive praise for not joining in the soul's act but covering over its sad change. For this reason also the vows and determinations of the soul are annulled, when they have been made in the house of father or husband (Numb. xxx. 4 ff.<sup>a</sup>), if the reason and reflection do not hold their peace and so add their weight to the soul's failure, but remove the offence; for in that case the Lord of all also "shall cleanse her." But he leaves with no removal the vow of a widow or of her that is cast off: "for whatever vows she shall have vowed," μένει αὐτῇ” (Num. xxx. 10)· κατὰ λόγον· εἰ γὰρ ἄχρι τῶν ἐκτὸς ἐκβληθεῖσα προελήλυθεν, ὡς μὴ τρέπεσθαι μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ διὰ τῶν ἀποτελεσμάτων ἁμαρτάνειν, ἀθεράπευτος μένει ἀνδρείου τε λόγου μὴ μετασχούσα καὶ τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς παρηγορίας στερηθεῖσα.

PHILO

- 64 Τρίτη γύμνωσις ἐστὶν ἡ μέση, καθ’ ἣν ὁ νοῦς ἄλογός ἐστι μῆτε ἀρετῆς πω μῆτε κακίας μετέχων. περὶ ταύτης ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος, ἧς καὶ ὁ νήπιος
- [78] κοινωνεῖ, ὥστε | τὸ λεγόμενον “ἦσαν οἱ δύο γυμνοί, ὃ τε Ἀδὰμ καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ” τοιοῦτον εἶναι· οὔτε ὁ νοῦς ἐνόει οὔτε ἡ αἴσθησις ἠσθάνετο, ἀλλ’ ἦν ὁ μὲν τοῦ νοεῖν ἔρημός τε καὶ γυμνός, ἡ
- 65 δὲ τοῦ αἰσθάνεσθαι. XVII. τὸ δὲ “οὐκ ἠσχύνοντο” πάλιν ἴδωμεν. τρία κατὰ τὸν τόπον ἐστίν· ἀναισχυντία, αἰδώς, τὸ μῆτε ἀναισχυντεῖν μῆτε αἰδεῖσθαι· ἀναισχυντία μὲν οὖν ἴδιον φαύλου, αἰδώς δὲ σπουδαίου, τὸ δὲ μῆτε αἰδεῖσθαι μῆτε ἀναισχυντεῖν τοῦ ἀκαταλήπτως ἔχοντος καὶ ἀσυγκαταθέτως, περὶ οὗ νῦν ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος· ὁ γὰρ μηδέπω κατάληψιν ἀγαθοῦ ἢ κακοῦ λαβὼν οὔτε
- 66 ἀναισχυντεῖν οὔτε αἰδεῖσθαι δύναται. τῆς μὲν οὖν ἀναισχυντίας παραδείγματα αἱ ἀσχημοσύναι πᾶσαι, ὅταν ὁ νοῦς ἀποκαλύπτῃ τὰ αἰσχροῦ, συσκιάζειν δέον, ἐπαυχῶν καὶ σεμνυνόμενος ἐπ’ αὐτοῖς. λέγεται καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς Μαρίας, ὅτε κατελάλει Μωσῆ· “εἰ ὁ πατήρ αὐτῆς πτύων ἐνέπτυσεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτῆς, οὐκ ἐντραπήσεται ἐπὶ τὰ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 481.

he says, "against her soul, abide for her" (Numb. xxx. 10). And this is reasonable. For if she has been cast off and gone forth to the parts outside, not turning merely but sinning by overt deeds, she abides incurable with no part in a husband's admonition and deprived of her father's persuasion.

A third form of producing nakedness is the middle or neutral one. Here the mind is irrational and has no part as yet either in virtue or in vice. It is of this form that the prophet is speaking. In this the infant too is partaker. Accordingly the words, "The two were naked, both Adam and his wife," amount to this: neither mind nor sense was performing its functions, the one being bare and barren of mental action and the other of the activity of sense-perception.

XVII. Let us look again at the words, "they were not ashamed."<sup>a</sup> The words suggest three points for consideration: shamelessness, and shamefastness, and absence of both shamelessness and shamefastness. Shamelessness, then, is peculiar to the worthless man, shamefastness to the man of worth, to feel neither shamefastness nor shamelessness to the man who is incapable of right apprehension and of due assent thereto, and this man is at this moment the prophet's subject. For he who has not yet attained to the apprehension of good and evil cannot possibly be either shameless or shamefast. Examples of shamelessness are all those unseemly actions, when the mind uncovers shameful things which it ought to hide from view, and vaunts itself in them and prides itself on them. Even in the case of Miriam, when she spoke against Moses, it is said, "If her father had but spat in her face, should she not feel shame seven days?"

PHILO

- 67 ἡμέρας;” (Num. xii. 14) ὄντως γὰρ ἀναίσχυντος καὶ θρασεῖα ἢ αἰσθησις, ἢ ἐξουθενηθεῖσα ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ τοῦ πατρὸς παρὰ τὸν πιστὸν ἐν ὄλω τῷ οἴκῳ (ib. 7), ᾧ τὴν Αἰθιοπίσσαν, τὴν ἀμετάβλητον καὶ κατακορῆ γνώμην, αὐτὸς ὁ θεὸς ἠρμόσατο, τολμᾶ καταλαλεῖν Μωυσῆ καὶ κατηγορεῖν, ἐφ’ ᾧ ὄφειλεν ἐπαινεῖσθαι (ib. 1). τοῦτο γὰρ ἐστὶν ἐγκώμιον αὐτοῦ μέγιστον, ὅτι τὴν Αἰθιοπίσσαν ἔλαβε, τὴν ἄτρεπτον καὶ πεπυρωμένην καὶ δόκιμον φύσιν· ὡσπερ γὰρ ἐν ὀφθαλμῷ τὸ βλέπον μέλαν ἐστίν, οὕτως τὸ ὄρατικὸν τῆς ψυχῆς Αἰθιοπίσσα
- 68 κέκληται. διὰ τί οὖν, πολλῶν ὄντων κακίας ἔργων, ἐνὸς μόνου μέμνηται τοῦ κατὰ τὸ αἰσχρὸν εἰπὼν “οὐκ ἠσχύνοντο,” ἀλλ’ <οὐκ> οὐκ ἠδίκουν ἢ οὐχ ἠμάρτανον ἢ οὐκ ἐπλημμέλουν; παράκειται δὲ ἡ αἰτία. μὰ τὸν ἀληθῆ μόνον θεὸν οὐδὲν οὕτως αἰσχρὸν ἠγοῦμαι ὡς τὸ ὑπολαμβάνειν
- 69 ὅτι νοῶ ἢ ὅτι αἰσθάνομαι. ὁ ἐμὸς νοῦς αἴτιος τοῦ νοεῖν; πόθεν; ἑαυτὸν γὰρ οἶδεν, ὅστις ὢν τυγχάνει ἢ πῶς ἐγένετο; ἢ δὲ αἰσθησις αἰτία τοῦ αἰσθάνεσθαι; πῶς ἂν λέγοιτο, μήθ’ ὑφ’ αὐτῆς μήτε ὑπὸ τοῦ νοῦ γνωριζομένη; οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι ὁ δοκῶν νοεῖν νοῦς εὐρίσκεται πολλάκις ἄνους, ἐν τοῖς κόροις, ἐν ταῖς μέθαις, ἐν ταῖς παραφροσύναις; ποῦ δὴ τὸ νοεῖν ἐπ’ αὐτῶν; ἢ δὲ αἰσθησις οὐ πολλάκις ἀφαιρεῖται τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι; ὁρῶντες ἔστιν ὅτε οὐχ ὁρῶμεν καὶ ἀκούοντες οὐκ ἀκούομεν,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 481.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 67-69

(Numb. xii. 14). For veritably shameless and bold was sense-perception in daring to decry and find fault with Moses for that for which he deserved praise. In comparison with him, who was "faithful in all God's house" (ibid.), sense-perception was set at naught by the God and Father; and it was God Himself who wedded to Moses the Ethiopian woman, who stands for resolve unalterable, intense, and fixed.<sup>a</sup> For this Moses merits high eulogy, that he took to him the Ethiopian woman, even the nature that has been tried by fire and cannot be changed. For, even as in the eye the part that sees is black, so the soul's power of vision has the title of woman of Ethiopia.<sup>a</sup>

Why then, seeing that results of wickedness are many, has he mentioned only one, that which attends on conduct that is disgraceful, saying "they were not shamed," but not saying "they did not commit injustice," or "they did not sin," or "they did not err"? The reason is not far to seek. By the only true God I deem nothing so shameful as supposing that I exert my mind and senses. My own mind the author of its exertion? How can it be? Does it know as to itself, what it is or how it came into existence? Sense-perception the origin of the perceiving by sense? How could it be said to be so, seeing that it is beyond the ken either of itself or of the mind? Do you not observe that the mind which thinks that it exercises itself is often found to be without mental power, in scenes of gluttony, drunkenness, folly? Where does the exercise of mind show itself then? And is not perceptive sense often robbed of the power of perceiving? There are times when seeing we see not and hearing

PHILO

ἐπειδὴν ὁ νοῦς μικρὸν ὅσον ἐτέρῳ νοητῷ προσ-70 ενεχθῆ παρενθυμούμενος. ἕως οὖν γυμνοὶ εἰσιν,
 ὁ μὲν νοῦς τοῦ νοεῖν, ἡ δὲ αἴσθησις τοῦ αἰσθάνεσθαι,
 [79] οὐδὲν ἔχουσιν αἰσχρόν· ἐπειδὴν δὲ | ἄρξωνται
 καταλαμβάνειν, ἐν αἰσχύνη καὶ ὕβρει γίνονται, εὐρεθήσονται γὰρ εὐηθεία καὶ μωρία πολλάκις
 χρώμενοι μᾶλλον ἢ ὑγιαίνουσα ἐπιστήμη, οὐ μόνον ἐν κόροις καὶ μελαγχολίαις καὶ παρα-φροσύναις ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τῷ ἄλλῳ βίῳ· ὅτε μὲν γὰρ
 ἡ αἴσθησις κρατεῖ, ὁ νοῦς ἠνδραπόδισται μηδενὶ
 προσέχων νοητῷ, ὅτε δὲ ὁ νοῦς κρατεῖ, ἡ αἴσθησις ἄπρακτος θεωρεῖται μηδενὸς ἀντίληψιν ἰσχουσα αἰσθητοῦ.

71 XVIII. “ Ὁ δὲ ὄφεις ἦν φρονιμώτατος πάντων
 τῶν θηρίων τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὧν ἐποίησε κύριος
 ὁ θεός ” (Gen. iii. 1). δυεῖν προγεγονότων νοῦ
 καὶ αἰσθήσεως καὶ τούτων γυμνῶν κατὰ τὸν δεδηλωμένον τρόπον ὑπαρχόντων, ἀνάγκη τρίτην
 ἡδονὴν συναγωγὸν ἀμφοῖν ὑπάρξαι πρὸς τὴν τῶν
 νοητῶν καὶ αἰσθητῶν ἀντίληψιν· οὔτε γὰρ ὁ νοῦς δίχα αἰσθήσεως ἠδύνατο καταλαβεῖν ζῶον ἢ φυτὸν ἢ λίθον ἢ ξύλον ἢ συνόλως σῶμα οὔτε ἡ αἴσθησις δίχα τοῦ νοῦ περιποιησαὶ τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι.

72 ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν ἄμφω ταῦτα συνελθεῖν ἔδει πρὸς
 κατάληψιν τῶν ὑποκειμένων, τίς αὐτὰ συνήγαγεν
 ὅτι μὴ δεσμὸς τρίτος ἔρωτος καὶ ἐπιθυμίας,
 ἀρχούσης καὶ δυναστευούσης ἡδονῆς, ἦν συμ-

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 69-72

hear not, whenever the mind, breaking off its attention for a moment, is brought to bear on some other mental object. So long then as they are naked, the mind without self-exertion, the perceptive sense without perceiving, they have nothing shameful: but when they have begun to apprehend, they fall into shameful and wanton conduct, for they will be found often showing silliness and folly rather than healthy knowledge, not only in times of loathsome surfeit and depression and mad fooling but also in the rest of their life. For when bodily sense is in command, the mind is in a state of slavery heeding none of its proper objects; but when the mind is in the ascendant, the bodily sense is seen to have nothing to do and to be powerless to lay hold of any object of sense-perception.

XVIII. "Now the serpent was the most subtle of all the beasts on the earth, which the Lord God had made" (Gen. iii. 1). Two things, mind and bodily sense, having already come into being, and these being in nakedness after the manner that has been set forth, it was necessary that there should be a third subsistence, namely pleasure, to bring both of them together to the apprehension of the objects of mental and of bodily perception. For neither could the mind apart from bodily sense apprehend an animal or a plant or a stone or a log or any bodily shape whatever, nor could the bodily sense apart from the mind maintain the act of perceiving. Since then it was necessary that both of these should come together for the apprehension of the objects about them, who was it that brought them together save a third, a bond of love and desire, under the rule and dominion of pleasure, to which

PHILO

- 73 βολικῶς ὄφιν ὠνόμασε; πάνυ καλῶς ὁ ζωοπλάστης θεὸς ἐδημιούργησε τὴν τάξιν· νοῦν πρῶτον τὸν ἄνδρα, πρεσβύτατον γὰρ ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ, εἶτα αἰσθησιν τὴν γυναῖκα, εἶτα ἐξῆς τρίτον ἡδονήν. δυνάμει δέ εἰσιν αὐτῶν αἱ ἡλικίαι διάφοροι νοούμεναι μόνον, χρόνῳ δὲ ἰσηλικες· ἅμα γὰρ ἑαυτῇ ψυχῇ πάντα ἐπιφέρεται, ἀλλὰ τὰ μὲν ἐντελεχεία, τὰ δὲ τῷ δύνασθαι γενέσθαι, εἰ καὶ μήπω προσείληφε
- 74 τὸ τέλος. εἰκάσθη δὲ ὄφει ἡδονὴ διὰ τὸδε· πολὺπλοκος γὰρ καὶ ποικίλη ὥσπερ τοῦ ὄφεως ἡ κίνησις, οὕτως καὶ ἡδονῆς· πενταχῇ γέ τοι πρῶτον εἰλεῖται, καὶ γὰρ δι' ὀράσεως ἡδοναὶ συνίστανται καὶ δι' ἀκοῆς καὶ διὰ γεύσεως καὶ διὰ ὀσφρήσεως καὶ δι' ἀφῆς· γίνονται δὲ αἱ σφοδρόταται καὶ σύντονοι αἱ περὶ τὰς γυναῖκας ὁμιλίαι, δι' ὧν γένεσις ἢ τοῦ ὁμοίου πέφυκεν ἀποτελεῖσθαι.
- 75 Καὶ μὴν οὐ διὰ τοῦτο μόνον ποικίλην φαμέν τὴν ἡδονήν, ὅτι περὶ πάντα τὰ τοῦ ἀλόγου τῆς ψυχῆς εἰλεῖται, ἀλλ' ὅτι καὶ περὶ ἕκαστον μέρος πολὺπλοκός ἐστιν· εὐθέως δι' ὀράσεως ἡδοναὶ γίνονται ποικίλαι, γραφικὴ πᾶσα, πλαστικὴ, τᾶλλα ὅσα κατὰ τέχνας τεχνικὰ δημιουργήματα τέρπει τὴν ὄρασιν· πάλιν φυτῶν βλαστανόντων ἀνθούτων καρποτοκούντων διαφοραί, ζώων εὐμορφίαι πολυσχιδεῖς· ὁμοίως τὴν ἀκοὴν αὐλὸς ἡδύνει, κιθάρα, [80] πᾶσα ὀργάνων ἰδέα, | ζώων ἀλόγων ἐμμελεῖς

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 73-75

the prophet gave the figurative name of a serpent ? Exceeding well did God the Framer of living beings contrive the order in which they were created. First He made mind, the man, for mind is most venerable in a human being, then bodily sense, the woman, then after them in the third place pleasure. But it is potentially only, as objects of thought, that they differ in age ; but in actual time they are equal in age. For the soul brings all together with herself, some parts in virtue of actual existence, others in virtue of the potentiality to arrive, even if they have not yet reached their consummation.

The reason pleasure is likened to a serpent is this. The movement of pleasure like that of the serpent is tortuous and variable. To begin with it takes its gliding course in five ways, for pleasures are occasioned by sight and by hearing and by taste and by smell and by touch ; but those connected with sexual intercourse prove themselves the most violent of all in their intensity, and this is the method ordained by Nature for the reproduction of the type.

Furthermore the fact that pleasure insinuates itself about all the organs of the irrational portion of the soul is not the only reason for our calling her variable ; for we call her so also because she glides with many a coil about each part. For instance variegated pleasures come through sight, those afforded by every kind of painting and of sculpture, and by all other artistic creations which in one art after another charm the eye ; by the changes too that plants go through as they shoot up, bloom, and bear fruit ; by the beauty of animals seen in so many forms. Similarly the ear gets pleasure from the flute, from the harp, from every kind of instrument, from the φωναί, χελιδόνων, ἀηδόνων, τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα φύσις μεμούσωκε, λογικῶν εὐφωνία, κιθαρῳδῶν κωμῳδίαν τραγωδίαν τὴν ἄλλην ὑποκριτικὴν ἐπιδεικνυμένων.

PHILO

- 76 XIX. Τί <δὲ> δεῖ περὶ τῶν γαστροῦς ἡδονῶν διδάσκειν; σχεδὸν γὰρ ὅσαι τῶν ὑποκειμένων χυλῶν προσηνῶν διαφοραὶ καὶ τὴν αἴσθησιν κινούντων, τосαῦται καὶ τῆς ἡδονῆς. ἄρ' <οὖν> οὐ δεόντως ποικίλον οὐσα ἡδονὴ ποικίλῳ ζῳῳ
- 77 ὄφει παρεβλήθη; διὰ τοῦτο καὶ τὸ λαῶδες καὶ ὄχλον ἔχον ἐν ἡμῖν μέρος, ὅτε τῶν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, τουτέστι τῷ σωματικῷ ὄγκῳ, οἰκιῶν ἐφίεται, ἡδοναῖς περιπίπτει θάνατον ἐπαγούσαις, οὐ χωρισμὸν ψυχῆς ἀπὸ σώματος, ἀλλὰ ψυχῆς ὑπὸ κακίας φθοράν· φησὶ γάρ· “καὶ ἀπέστειλε κύριος εἰς τὸν λαὸν τοὺς ὄφεις τοὺς θανατοῦντας, καὶ ἔδακνον τὸν λαόν, καὶ ἀπέθνησκε λαὸς πολὺς τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ” (Num. xxi. 6). ὄντως γὰρ οὐδὲν οὕτως θάνατον ἐπάγει ψυχῆ, ὡς ἀμετρία τῶν
- 78 ἡδονῶν. τὸ δὲ ἀποθνήσκον οὐ τὸ ἄρχον ἐστὶν ἐν ἡμῖν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀρχόμενον τὸ λαῶδες, καὶ μέχρι τούτου θάνατον ἐνδέξεται, μέχρις ἂν μετανοία χρησάμενον ὁμολογήσῃ τὴν τροπὴν· προσελθόντες γὰρ ἔλεγον Μωυσῆ “ὅτι ἡμαρτήκαμεν, ὅτι κατελαλήσαμεν κατὰ κυρίου καὶ κατὰ σοῦ· εὐξαι οὖν πρὸς κύριον, καὶ ἀφελέτω ἀφ’ ἡμῶν τοὺς ὄφεις” (ib. 7). εἶ τὸ φάναι, οὐχ ὅτι κατελαλήσαμεν, ἡμάρτομεν, ἀλλ’ “ὅτι ἡμάρτομεν, κατελαλήσαμεν”· ὅταν γὰρ ἀμάρτη καὶ ἀπαρτηθῆ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 481.

<sup>b</sup> Or “‘Because we spoke, we sinned’ but ‘because we sinned, we spoke.’”

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 75-78

tuneful voices of creatures without reason, swallows, nightingales, other birds which Nature has made musical; from the euphonious speech of beings endowed with reason, from musicians as they exercise their histrionic powers in comedy, tragedy, and all that is put on the stage.

XIX. What need to illustrate my point from the pleasures of the table? There are, we may roughly say, as many varieties of pleasure, as there are of dishes set before us stirring our senses with their delicious flavours. Pleasure being, then, a thing so variable, was it not fitly compared to a tortuous animal, the serpent? For this reason, too, when the part of us that corresponds to the turbulent mob of a city, pines for the dwellings in Egypt, that is, in the corporeal mass, it encounters pleasures which bring death, not the death which severs soul from body, but the death which ruins the soul by vice. For we read, "And the Lord sent among the people the deadly serpents, and they bit the people, and much people of the children of Israel died" (Numb. xxi. 6). For verily nothing so surely brings death upon a soul as immoderate indulgence in pleasures. That which dies is not the ruling part in us, but the part that is under rule, the part that is like the vulgar herd. And so long will it incur death, as it fails to repent and acknowledge its fall. For they came to Moses saying, "We have sinned in that we spake against the Lord, and against thee. Pray therefore to the Lord, and let Him take away the serpents from us" (ibid. 7). 'Tis well that they say,<sup>a</sup> not "We spake against, we sinned" but "We sinned, we spake against."<sup>b</sup> For it is when the mind has sinned and ceased to ὁ νοῦς ἀρετῆς, αἰτιᾶται τὰ θεῖα τὴν ἰδίαν τροπὴν προσάπτων θεῶ.

PHILO

- 79 XX. Πῶς οὖν γίνεται ἴσως τοῦ πάθους; ὅταν ἕτερος ὄφιν κατασκευασθῆ τῷ τῆς Εὐσας ἐναντίος, ὁ σωφροσύνης λόγος· ἡδονῇ γὰρ ἐναντίον σωφροσύνη, ποικίλῳ πάθει ποικίλη ἀρετὴ καὶ ἀμυνομένη πολεμίαν ἡδονήν. τὸν κατὰ σωφροσύνην οὖν ὄφιν κελεύει ὁ θεὸς Μωυσεῖ κατασκευάσασθαι καὶ φησὶ· “ποιήσον σεαυτῷ ὄφιν καὶ θές αὐτὸν ἐπὶ σημείου” (ib. 8). ὁρᾷς ὅτι οὐκ ἄλλῳ τινὶ κατασκευάζεται τοῦτον ὁ Μωυσῆς τὸν ὄφιν ἢ ἐαυτῷ, προστᾶττει γὰρ ὁ θεός “ποιήσον σεαυτῷ,” ἵνα γνῶς, ὅτι οὐ παντός ἐστι κτῆμα σωφροσύνη,
- 80 ἀλλὰ μόνου τοῦ θεοφιλοῦς. σκεπτέον
 δέ, διὰ τί Μωυσῆς χαλκοῦν ὄφιν κατασκευάζεται, οὐ προσταχθέν αὐτῷ περὶ ποιότητος. μήποτ’
- [81] | οὖν διὰ τὰδε· πρῶτον μὲν ἄυλοί εἰσιν αἱ θεοῦ χάριτες [ιδέαι αὐται] καὶ ἄπιοι, αἱ δὲ τῶν θνητῶν σὺν ὕλῃ θεωροῦνται· δεύτερον δὲ Μωυσῆς μὲν ἀσωμάτων ἐρᾷ ἀρετῶν, αἱ δ’ ἡμέτεραι ψυχαὶ οὐ δυνάμεναι ἐκδῦναι τὰ σώματα σωματικῆς ἐφίενται
- 81 ἀρετῆς. δυνατῇ δὲ καὶ στερεᾷ οὐσίᾳ τῇ χαλκοῦ ἀπέικασται ὁ κατὰ σωφροσύνην λόγος εὐτονος καὶ ἀδιάκοπος ὢν, ἴσως δὲ καὶ παρόσον ἢ μὲν ἐν τῷ θεοφιλεῖ σωφροσύνη τιμιωτάτη ἐστὶ καὶ χρυσῷ ἐοικυῖα, δευτερεύουσα δὲ ἢ ἐν τῷ κατὰ προκοπὴν σοφίαν ἀναλαμβάνοντι. ὃν ἂν οὖν “δάκη ὄφιν, πᾶς ὁ ἰδὼν αὐτὸν ζήσεται” (ib.). πάνυ

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 78-81

cleave to virtue, that it blames God's ways, fastening its own defection on God.

XX. How, then, is a healing of their suffering brought about? By the making of another serpent, opposite in kind to that of Eve, namely the principle of self-mastery. For self-mastery runs counter to pleasure, a variable virtue to a variable affection, and a virtue that defends itself against pleasure its foe. So then God bids Moses make the serpent that expresses self-mastery, and says: "Make for thyself a serpent and set it upon a standard" (ibid. 8). You notice that Moses makes this serpent for no one else, but for himself, for God's bidding is "Make it for thyself." This is that you may know that self-mastery is not a possession of every man, but only of the man beloved of God.

We must consider why Moses makes a brazen serpent, no direction having been given him as to material. Possibly these are the reasons. In the first place, matter is not an element in God's gifts making them to be of this or that sort; but the gifts of us mortals are always looked upon embodied in matter. A second reason: Moses loves excellences without bodily form, whereas our souls, being unable to get out of our bodies, crave for excellence in bodily shape. But the principle of self-mastery, being forcible and unyielding, is likened to the strong and firm substance of brass, perhaps also because, whereas the self-mastery found in the man beloved of God is most precious and like gold, that which is found in him who has absorbed wisdom by gradual progress holds the second place. Everyone, then, "whom a serpent shall have bitten, when he looks on it shall live" (ibid.). This is quite true. For if the

PHILO

- ἀληθῶς· ἐὰν γὰρ ὁ νοῦς δηχθεὶς ἡδονῇ, τῷ τῆς
 Εὐσας ὄφει, ἰσχύσει κατιδεῖν ψυχικῶς τὸ σωφρο-σύνης κάλλος, τὸν Μωυσέως ὄφιν, καὶ διὰ τούτου
 τὸν θεὸν αὐτόν, ζήσεται· μόνον ἰδέτω καὶ κατα-82 νοησάτω. XXI. οὐχ ὄρας ὅτι καὶ ἡ ἄρ-χουσα σοφία Σάρρα φησὶν· “ὅς γὰρ ἂν ἀκούσῃ, συγχαρεῖται μοι” (Gen. xxi. 6); ἀλλὰ φέρε
 τινὰ ἰσχύσαι ἀκοῦσαι, ὅτι τέτοκεν ἡ ἀρετὴ τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν Ἰσαάκ, καὶ εὐθύς συγχαρητικὸν ὕμνον
 ὑμνήσει. ὡς οὖν τοῦ ἀκούσαντός ἐστι <τὸ>
 συγχαίρειν, οὕτως τοῦ σωφροσύνην καὶ θεὸν 83 ἰδόντος εἰλικρινῶς τὸ μὴ ἀποθνήσκειν. πολλαὶ
 δὲ καρτερίας καὶ σωφροσύνης ἐρασθεῖσαι ψυχαὶ
 καὶ ἐρημωθεῖσαι παθῶν ὅμως κράτος ὑπέμειναν
 θεοῦ καὶ τροπὴν τὴν πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον ἐδέξαντο, διασυνιστάντος αὐτόν τε καὶ τὴν γένεσιν τοῦ
 δεσπότου, ἑαυτὸν μὲν, ὅτι ἀκλινῆς ἕστηκεν αἰεί,
 τὴν δὲ γένεσιν, ὅτι ταλαντεύει καὶ πρὸς τὰναντία 84 ἀντιρρέπει· φησὶ γάρ· “τοῦ ἀγαγόντος σε διὰ
 τῆς ἐρήμου τῆς μεγάλης καὶ τῆς φοβερᾶς ἐκείνης, οὗ ὄφιος δάκνων καὶ σκορπίος καὶ δίψα, οὗ οὐκ
 ἦν ὕδωρ, τοῦ ἐξαγαγόντος σοι ἐκ πέτρας ἀκρο-τόμου πηγὴν ὕδατος, τοῦ ψωμίσαντός σε τὸ
 μάννα ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, ὃ οὐκ ἤδειςαν οἱ πατέρες
 σου” (Deut. viii. 15, 16). ὄρας ὅτι οὐ μόνον
 τῶν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ παθῶν ἐφιεμένη ἡ ψυχὴ περιπίπτει τοῖς ὄφεισιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅτε ἐστὶν ἐν ἐρήμῳ
 δάκνεται ὑφ’ ἡδονῆς, τοῦ ποικίλου καὶ ὀφιώδους
 πάθους· οἰκειότατον δὲ ὄνομα εἴληχε τὸ ἡδονῆς 85 ἔργον, δηγμὸς γὰρ καλεῖται. ἀλλ’ οὐ μόνον οἱ
 ἐν ἐρήμῳ δάκνονται ὑφ’ ἡδονῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 481.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 81-85

mind, when bitten by pleasure, the serpent of Eve, shall have succeeded in beholding in soul the beauty of self-mastery, the serpent of Moses, and through beholding this, beholds God Himself, he shall live ; only let him look and mark well. XXI. Do you not notice that Sarah, that is dominant wisdom, says : " For whosoever shall hear of it shall rejoice with me " (Gen. xxi. 6) ? Just suppose that someone has succeeded in hearing that Virtue has given birth to Happiness (Isaac). Straightway he will sing a hymn of sympathetic joy. As then fellowship in joy is his who has heard of Isaac's birth, so is escape from death his who has looked with clear vision on self-mastery and God. " But many souls, after being enamoured of endurance - and self-mastery and divested of passions, nevertheless do experience the might of God and receive the turning to the lower way, the Master making a sharp distinction between Himself and His creation. He Himself stands ever steadfast, while His creation wavers and inclines in opposite directions. For the prophet says : " Who led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, where there was biting serpent and scorpion and drought, where there was no water, who brought out a spring of water for thee from the hard rock, who fed thee with manna in the wilderness, which thy fathers knew not " (Deut. viii. 15 f.). You see that it is not only when attracted by the passions of Egypt that the soul falls in with the serpents, but when it is in a wilderness too it is bitten by pleasure, that subtle and snake-like passion. And pleasure's mode of action has received a most appropriate name, for it is here called a biting. But not those in a wilderness only are bitten by pleasure, but those ἔσκορπισμένοι· καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ πολλάκις καταλιπὼν

 μὲν ἀνθρώπους συγγενεῖς καὶ φίλους καὶ πατρίδα
 καὶ εἰς ἐρημίαν ἐλθὼν, ἵνα τι τῶν θέας ἀξίων κατανοήσω, οὐδὲν ὦνησα, ἀλλὰ σκορπισθεὶς ὁ νοῦς ἢ πάθει δηχθεὶς ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς τὰναντία·
 ἔστι δὲ ὅτε καὶ ἐν πλήθει μυριάνδρῳ ἡρεμῶ τὴν
 [82] διάνοιαν, | τὸν ψυχικὸν ὄχλον σκεδάσαντος θεοῦ
 καὶ διδάξαντός με, ὅτι οὐ τόπων διαφοραὶ τό τε
 εὖ καὶ χεῖρον ἐργάζονται, ἀλλ' ὁ κινῶν θεὸς καὶ
 ἄγων ἦ ἢ ἂν προαιρηῆται τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ὄχημα.

86 πλὴν περιπίπτει σκορπίῳ, ὅπερ ἐστὶ
 σκορπισμῶ, ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καὶ δύσα καταλαμβάνει
 ἢ τῶν παθῶν, μέχρις ἂν ὁ θεὸς τῆς ἀκροτόμου σοφίας ἑαυτοῦ τὸ νῆμα ἐπιπέμψῃ καὶ ποτίσῃ τὴν
 τραπέισαν ψυχὴν ἀμεταβλήτῳ ὑγείᾳ· ἢ γὰρ
 ἀκρότομος πέτρα ἢ σοφία τοῦ θεοῦ ἐστίν, ἣν ἄκραν καὶ πρωτίστην ἔτεμεν ἀπὸ τῶν ἑαυτοῦ δυνάμεων, ἐξ ἧς ποτίζει τὰς φιλοθέους ψυχὰς·
 ποτισθεῖσαι δὲ καὶ τοῦ μάννα ἐμπίπλανται τοῦ
 γενικωτάτου—καλεῖται γὰρ τὸ μάννα “τί,” ὁ πάντων ἐστὶ γένος—, τὸ δὲ γενικώτατόν ἐστιν ὁ θεός, καὶ δεύτερος ὁ θεοῦ λόγος, τὰ δ' ἄλλα λόγῳ
 μόνον ὑπάρχει, ἔργοις δὲ ἐστίν οὐ ἴσα τῷ οὐχ ὑπάρχοντι.

87 XXII. Ἴδε νῦν διαφορὰν τοῦ ἐν ἐρήμῳ τρεπομένου καὶ τοῦ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ· ὁ μὲν γὰρ τοῖς θανα-τοῦσιν ὄφεισι χρῆται, τουτέστιν ἀπλήστοις ἡδοναῖς

<sup>a</sup> Or “supremely generic.”

also who are a prey to scattering. For many a time have I myself forsaken friends and kinsfolk and country and come into a wilderness, to give my attention to some subject demanding contemplation, and derived no advantage from doing so, but my mind scattered or bitten by passion has gone off to matters of the contrary kind. Sometimes, on the other hand, amid a vast throng I have a collected mind. God has dispersed the crowd that besets the soul and taught me that a favourable and unfavourable condition are not brought about by differences of place, but by God who moves and leads the car of the soul in whatever way He pleases.

To return to what I was saying, the soul falls in with a scorpion, which is "scattering," in the wilderness, and the drought of the passions seizes upon it, until God send forth the stream from His strong wisdom and quench with un failing health the thirst of the soul that had turned from Him. For the flinty rock is the wisdom of God, which He marked off highest and chiefest from His powers, and from which He satisfies the thirsty souls that love God. And when they have been given water to drink, they are filled also with the manna, the most generic of substances, for the manna is called "somewhat," and that suggests the summum genus. But the primal existence<sup>a</sup> is God, and next to Him is the Word of God, but all other things subsist in word only, but in their active effects they are in some cases as good as non-subsisting.

XXII. Note now a difference between him who turns aside in the wilderness and him who does so in Egypt. The one has experience of deadly serpents, that is to say insatiable pleasures inflicting

PHILO

- θάνατον ἐπιφερούσαις, ὁ δ' ἀσκητῆς δάκνεται μόνον ὑφ' ἡδονῆς καὶ σκορπίζεται, οὐ θανατοῦται· κακείνος μὲν σωφροσύνη, χαλκῶ ὄφει, θεραπεύεται γενομένη ὑπὸ τοῦ σοφοῦ Μωυσέως, οὗτος δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ποτίζεται κάλλιστον ποτὸν σοφίαν ἐκ τῆς πηγῆς ἣν αὐτὸς ἐξήγαγεν ἀπὸ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ
- 88 σοφίας. οὐδὲ τοῦ θεοφιλεστάτου Μωυσέως ἀπέχεται ἢ ὀφιώδης <ἡδονή>, λέγεται δὲ ὧδε· “ἐὰν οὖν μὴ πιστεύσωσί μοι μηδὲ εἰσακούσωσι τῆς φωνῆς μου—ἐροῦσι γάρ, οὐκ ὤπταί σοι ὁ θεός—, τί ἐρῶ πρὸς αὐτούς; καὶ εἶπε κύριος Μωυσεῖ· τί τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τὸ ἐν τῇ χειρὶ σου; ὁ δὲ εἶπε· ῥάβδος. καὶ εἶπε· ῥίψον αὐτὴν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν. καὶ ἔρριψεν αὐτὴν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ ἐγένετο ὄφεις, καὶ ἔφυγε Μωυσῆς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ. καὶ εἶπε κύριος Μωυσεῖ· ἔκτεινον τὴν χεῖρα καὶ ἐπιλαβοῦ τῆς κέρκου. ἐκτείνας οὖν τὴν χεῖρα ἐπελάβετο τῆς κέρκου, καὶ ἐγένετο ῥάβδος ἐν τῇ χειρὶ <αὐτοῦ>· ἵνα πιστεύσωσί σοι” (Exod. iv. 1 ff.).
- 89 πῶς ἂν τις πιστεύσαι θεῶ; ἐὰν μάθῃ, ὅτι πάντα τὰ ἄλλα τρέπεται, μόνος δὲ αὐτὸς ἀτρεπτός ἐστι. πυνθάνεται οὖν ὁ θεὸς τοῦ σοφοῦ, τί ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ πρακτικῶ τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ βίω· ἡ γὰρ χεὶρ σύμβολον πράξεως· ὁ δ' ἀποκρίνεται, ὅτι παιδεία, ἣν ῥάβδον καλεῖ. διὸ καὶ ὁ πτερνιστῆς τῶν παθῶν Ἰακώβ φησιν· “ἐν γὰρ τῇ ῥάβδῳ μου διέβην τὸν Ἰορδάνην τοῦτον” (Gen. xxxii. 10).
- [83] Ἰορδάνης | δὲ κατάβασις ἐρμηνεύεται· τῆς δὲ κάτω καὶ γήινης καὶ φθαρτῆς φύσεώς ἐστὶ τὰ κατὰ κακίαν καὶ πάθος· διαβαίνει δὲ ταῦτα ὁ ἀσκητῆς νοῦς ἐν παιδείᾳ· ταπεινὸν γὰρ τὸ ἐκδέχεσθαι, ὅτι βακτηρίαν ἔχων ποταμὸν διέβαινε.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 87-89

death ; but the disciplined one is only bitten and scattered, not done to death, by pleasure. And while the one is cured by self-mastery, even the brazen serpent made by the wise Moses, the other is caused by God to drink a draught most excellent, even wisdom out of the fountain which He drew out from His own wisdom. Not even from Moses, most beloved of God, does Pleasure, the serpent-like one, refrain, but this is what we read : " If therefore they say, ' God has not appeared to thee,' and believe me not and hearken not to my voice, what shall I say to them ? And the Lord said unto Moses, ' What is that in thine hand ? ' And he said, ' A rod.' And He said, ' Cast it upon the ground.' And he cast it upon the ground, and it became a serpent, and Moses fled from it. And the Lord said unto Moses, ' Stretch forth thine hand and lay hold of its tail' (and he stretched forth his hand and took hold of its tail, and it became a rod in his hand) : that they may believe thee " (Exod. iv. 1 ff.).

How should one come to believe God ? By learning that all other things change but He is unchangeable. Therefore God asks the wise man what there is in his hand or in the active life of his soul, for the hand represents activity ; and he answers, " Schooling," giving it the name of a rod. So Jacob also, the supplanter of the passions, says, " For in my rod I crossed this Jordan " (Gen. xxxii. 10). The meaning of Jordan is " descent " or " coming down." And to the nature that is down below, earthly, corruptible, belongs all that is done under the impulse of vice and passion. Over these Mind, the disciplined One, crosses in schooling himself. To take the words to mean that he crossed the river with a staff in

PHILO

- 90 XXIII. καλῶς οὖν καὶ ὁ θεοφιλῆς Μωυσῆς ἀποκρίνεται· ὄντως γὰρ αἱ πράξεις τοῦ σπουδαίου παιδεία ὡς ἂν ῥάβδῳ ἐπερείδονται, τὸν κλόνον καὶ σάλον τῆς ψυχῆς ἰδρύνονται. αὕτη ἡ ῥάβδος ἀπορριφθεῖσα γίνεται ὄφισ· εἰκότως· ἐὰν γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ ἀπορρίψῃ τὴν παιδείαν, γέγονε φιλήδονος ἀντὶ φιλαρέτου. διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς φεύγει ἀπ' αὐτοῦ· ἀπὸ γὰρ τοῦ πάθους καὶ τῆς ἡδονῆς
- 91 ἀποδιδράσκει ὁ φιλάρετος. ἀλλὰ τοί γε ὁ θεὸς τὴν φυγὴν οὐκ ἐπαινεῖ· σοὶ μὲν γάρ, ὦ διάνοια, μήπω τελειωθείση φυγὴν καὶ δρασμὸν τῶν παθῶν ἀρμόζει μελετᾶν, Μωυσεῖ δὲ τῷ τελείῳ παραμένειν τῷ πρὸς αὐτὰ πολέμῳ καὶ ἀντιστατεῖν αὐτοῖς καὶ διαμάχεσθαι· εἰ δὲ μή, ἀδείας καὶ ἐξουσίας λαβόμενα μέχρι τῆς ψυχικῆς ἀκροπόλεως ἀναβάντα πᾶσαν ἐκπολιορκήσει καὶ λεηλατήσει τυράννου
- 92 τρόπον τὴν ψυχὴν. διὸ καὶ προστάττει ὁ θεὸς “λαβέσθαι τῆς κέρκου,” τουτέστι τὸ ἀντίδικον τῆς ἡδονῆς καὶ ἀτίθασον αὐτῆς μὴ φοβεῖτω σε, ἀλλὰ τούτου μάλιστα λαβοῦ καὶ κατάσχεσ καὶ περικράτησον· ἔσται γὰρ πάλιν ἀντὶ ὄφεως ῥάβδος, τουτέστιν ἀντὶ ἡδονῆς γενήσεται ἐν τῇ χειρὶ
- 93 παιδεία. ἀλλὰ γενήσεται ἐν τῇ χειρὶ, ἐν τῇ πράξει τοῦ σοφοῦ, ὃ δὴ καὶ ἀληθές ἐστι· λαβέσθαι δὲ καὶ περικρατῆσαι ἡδονῆς ἀδύνατον, εἰ μὴ πρότερον ἐκταθείῃ ἡ χεὶρ, τουτέστιν εἰ μὴ τὰς πράξεις καὶ προκοπὰς ἀπάσας ὁμολογήσειεν ἡ ψυχὴ κατὰ θεὸν εἶναι καὶ μηδὲν εἰς ἑαυτὴν ἀναγάγοι. τοῦτον μὲν δὴ τὸν ὄφιν ἀποδιδράσκειν ὁ βλέπων δι-

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 90-93

his hand would be tame. XXIII. Good, therefore is the reply of Moses beloved of God ; for in truth the conduct of the virtuous man leans on discipline as on a rod, settling and allaying the tumult and tossing of the soul. This rod when cast away becomes a serpent ; naturally ; for if the soul casts away discipline, it at once becomes a lover of pleasure in place of a lover of virtue. And so Moses flies from it ; for the lover of virtue runs away from passion and pleasure. But, mark you, God does not applaud his flight. For while it well befits thee, O my mind, who art not yet made perfect, to get practice by flying and running away from the passions, it befits Moses, the perfect one, not to desist from the warfare against them, but to resist them and fight it out. Otherwise, finding nothing to alarm or to stop them, they will make their way up to the very citadel of the soul, and storm and plunder the whole soul after the fashion of a lawless ruler. Wherefore also God bids him " lay hold of the tail." This means, " Let not pleasure's opposition and her savagery daunt thee. That is the very part to make for. Grip it fast and quell it ; for then there shall be once more a rod instead of a serpent ; that is to say, instead of pleasure there shall be in thy hand discipline." But it is " in the hand," in the doing of the wise man, that this shall come to pass. This is quite true. It would be impossible to lay hold of pleasure and get the mastery of it if the hand were not first stretched out, that is to say, if the soul were not first to acknowledge that all its achievements and successes are due to God's impelling force and to refer nothing to itself. The man whose eyes are open determines to run away from ἐγνωκεν· ἕτερον δὲ τὸν σωφροσύνης λόγον κατασκευάζει, τὸν χαλκοῦν ἐκείνον, ἵνα ὁ δηχθεὶς ὑφ' ἠδονῆς ἰδὼν σωφροσύνην ζήσῃ τὸν ἀληθῆ βίον.

PHILO

- 94 XXIV. Τοιοῦτον ὄφιν εὔχεται ὁ Ἰακώβ γενέσθαι τὸν Δάν καὶ φησιν οὕτως· “ Δάν κρινεῖ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ λαόν, ὡσεὶ καὶ μία φυλὴ Ἰσραήλ, καί· Γενέσθω Δάν ὄφισ ἐφ' ὁδοῦ, ἐγκαθήμενος ἐπὶ τρίβου, δάκνων πτέρναν ἵππου, καὶ πεσεῖται ὁ ἵππευς εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, τὴν σωτηρίαν περιμένων κυρίου ” (Gen. xlix. 16-18). ἐκ μὲν τῆς Λείας πέμπτος υἱὸς ἐστὶν Ἰσάακ γνήσιος τοῦ Ἰακώβ, συγκαταριθμουμένων δὲ τῶν ἐκ τῆς Ζέλφας δυεῖν ἑβδομος, τοῦ δὲ Ἰακώβ πέμπτος ἐστὶν ὁ Δάν ἐκ τῆς Βάλλας τῆς παιδίσκης Ῥαχήλ. τὴν δὲ αἰτίαν ἐν τοῖς κατ' ἰδίαν ἐξευρήσομεν. περὶ δὲ τοῦ Δάν
- 95 πάλιν κατανοητέον. δύο γένη φορεῖ ἡ ψυχὴ, τὸ μὲν θεῖον, τὸ δὲ φθαρτόν· τὸ μὲν οὖν κρείττον κεκύηκεν ἤδη καὶ ἴσταται ἐπ' αὐτοῦ· ὅτε γὰρ
- [84] ἐξομολογήσασθαι τῷ | θεῷ καὶ παραχωρῆσαι πάντα ἴσχυσεν ἡ ψυχὴ, κτήμα κρείσσον λαβεῖν οὐκέτ' εἶχε· διὰ τοῦτ' ἔστη τοῦ τίκτειν τὸν Ἰούδαν, τὸν
- 96 ἐξομολογητικὸν τρόπον, ἐνεγκοῦσα. τὸ δὲ θνητὸν γένος νῦν ἄρχεται διαπλάττειν. ὑφέστηκε δὲ τὸ θνητὸν καταπόσει· θεμελίου γὰρ τρόπον ἡ γεῦσις, ἡ αἰτία τῆς τῶν ζώων διαμονῆς ἐστὶ· Βάλλα δὲ ἐρμηνεύεται κατάποσις· ἐκ ταύτης οὖν γίνεται ὁ Δάν, ὃς ἐρμηνεύεται κρίσις· τοῦτο γὰρ τὸ γένος διακρίνει καὶ χωρίζει τὰ ἀθάνατα ἀπὸ τῶν θνητῶν. εὔχεται οὖν αὐτὸν γενέσθαι σωφροσύνης ἐραστήν,
- 284

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 93-96

this serpent, and he fashions another, the principle of self-mastery, that serpent of brass, in order that the man who has been bitten by pleasure may, on seeing self-mastery, live the real life.

XXIV. Such a serpent does Jacob pray that Dan may become, and speaks on this wise :

“ Dan shall judge his people,
As if indeed one tribe of Israel,” and “ Let Dan become a serpent in the way,
Seated on the beaten track, biting the horse’s heel,
And the horseman shall fall backward,
Waiting for the salvation of the Lord.”

(Gen. xlix. 16-18.)

Of those born of Leah Issachar is Jacob’s fifth genuine son, or if Zilpah’s two sons are reckoned in, he is the seventh. But Jacob’s fifth son is Dan, by Bilhah Rachel’s handmaid. The occasion of this remark we shall discover in my special treatise on the subject. The subject of Dan demands further study. The soul bears two kinds of offspring, the one divine, the other perishable. The better kind she has already conceived, and with it she ceases to bear. For when the soul had attained to making full submission and acknowledgement to God there was no better possession for it to go on to gain. This is why she ceased when she had borne Judah, the spirit of praise and acknowledgement. The soul now goes on to the fashioning of the mortal race. The mortal subsists by swallowing. For the taste, like a foundation, is the cause of living creatures continuing to live. And Bilhah means “ swallowing.” From this woman there springs Dan, whose name signifies sifting or distinguishing : for this race distinguishes and separates things immortal from those that are mortal. So his father prays that he may prove a lover of self-mastery. But for Judah he will offer no such prayer, for Judah already has the property of praising and pleasing God. So he says, "Let Dan become a serpent on the road." The soul is our road ; for as on the roads it is possible to see the distinction of existences, lifeless, living ; irrational, rational ; good, bad ; slave, free ; young, or older ; male, female ; foreign, or native ; sickly, healthy ; maimed, entire ; so in the soul too there are lifeless, incomplete, diseased, enslaved, female, and countless other movements full of disabilities ; and on the other hand movements living, entire, male, free, sound, elder, good, genuine, and, in a real sense, of the fatherland.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 96-99

Let then the principle of self-mastery become a serpent upon the soul whose road lies through all the circumstances of life and let it seat itself upon the well worn track. What is this ? The path of virtue is unworn, for few tread it, while that of vice is well worn. He calls on him to beset with his ambuscade and to lie in wait upon the beaten road of passion and vice, on which reasoning powers that flee from virtue wear out their life.

XXV. "Biting the horse's heel." It is quite in keeping that the character which upsets the stability of created and perishable life attacks the heel. The passions are likened to a horse. For passion, like a horse, is a four-legged<sup>a</sup> creature, impulsive, full of wilfulness, and naturally restive. But the principle of self-mastery loves to bite and wound and destroy passion. When passion with its heel bitten has stumbled "the horseman shall fall backwards." We must understand by "the horseman" the mind that is mounted on the passions,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 481.

PHILO

- τῶν παθῶν, ὅταν αὐτὰ συλλογισθῆ καὶ πτερισθῆ.
- 100 εὖ δ' ὅτι εἰς τοῦμπροσθεν οὐ πίπτει ἢ ψυχὴ·
 μὴ γὰρ προερχέσθω τῶν παθῶν, ἀλλ' ὑστεριζέτω
 τούτων, καὶ σωφρονισθήσεται. καὶ δογματικόν
 ἐστὶν ὃ λέγει· ἐὰν γὰρ ὀρμήσας ὁ νοῦς ἀδικῆσαι
 ὑστερήσῃ καὶ πέσῃ εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, οὐκ ἀδικήσῃ·
 ἐὰν δὲ ἐπὶ πάθος κινηθεῖς ἄλογον μὴ ἐπεκδράμῃ,
- [85] ἀλλὰ | κατόπιν μείνῃ, ἀπάθειαν, τὸ κάλλιστον,
 101 καρπώσεται. διὸ καὶ τὸ κατόπιν πτώμα ἀποδεχόμενος τῶν κακιῶν ἐπιφέρει· “ τὴν σωτηρίαν περι-μένων κυρίου.” ὄντως γὰρ ὑπὸ θεοῦ σώζεται ὁ ἀποπίπτων τῶν παθῶν καὶ ὑστερίζων τῆς ἐνεργείας αὐτῶν. πέσοι τοιοῦτόν μου πτώμα ἢ ψυχὴ
 καὶ μηδέποτε ἀνασταίῃ ἐπὶ τὸ ἵππειον καὶ σκιρτη-τικόν πάθος, ἵνα θεοῦ σωτηρίαν περιμείνασα εὐδαι-
- 102 μονήσῃ. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ Μωυσῆς ἐν τῷ ᾄσματι
 ὑμνεῖ τὸν θεόν, ὅτι “ ἵππον καὶ ἀναβάτην ἔρριψεν
 εἰς θάλασσαν” (Exod. xv. 1), τὰ τέσσαρα πάθη
 καὶ τὸν ἐποχοῦμενον αὐτοῖς ἄθλιον νοῦν εἰς τὴν φθορὰν τῶν πραγμάτων καὶ τὸν ἀνήνυτον βυθόν·
 καὶ σχεδὸν τοῦ ᾄσματος ὅλου τὸ κεφάλαιον τοῦτ'
 ἐστίν, ἐφ' ὃ τὰ ἄλλα πάντα ἀναφέρεται, καὶ οὕτως
 ἔχει· ἐὰν γὰρ ἀπάθεια κατὰσχῃ τὴν ψυχὴν, τελέως εὐδαιμονήσῃ.
- 103 XXVI. Ζητητέον δέ, τίνος ἕνεκα ὁ μὲν Ἰακώβ
 φησιν, ὅτι “ πεσεῖται ὁ ἵππεὺς εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω”
 (Gen. xlix. 17), Μωυσῆς δὲ ἄδει, ὅτι ἵππος καὶ ἀναβάτης κατεποντώθησαν. λεκτέον οὖν ὅτι ὁ
 μὲν καταποντούμενος ὁ Αἰγύπτιός ἐστι τρόπος, ὅς,
 κὰν φεύγῃ, ὑπὸ τὸ ὕδωρ τουτέστιν ὑπὸ τὴν φθορὰν

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 99-103

which falls off the passions when they are brought to a reckoning and overthrown. 'Tis well that the soul does not fall forwards : let him not get in advance of the passions, but be behind them, and he shall learn self-control. And there is sound principle in what is said here. For if the mind, after starting out to do wrong, drops behind and falls backwards, it will not do the wrong deed ; and if, after experiencing an impulse to an irrational passion, it does not follow it up, but stays behind, it will reap the fairest reward, even exemption from passion. That is why the prophet, understanding the falling backwards to be escape from the passions, adds the words, " waiting for the salvation of the Lord " : for he is indeed saved by God who falls away from the passions and comes short of realizing them in act. May my soul have such a fall, and never mount the beast of passion, wild like a bounding capering horse, that, having waited for God's salvation, it may attain to bliss. This explains why Moses in the Song praises God, that " He cast horse and rider into the sea " (Exod. xv. 1). He means that God cast to utter ruin and the bottomless abyss the four passions and the wretched mind mounted on them. This is indeed practically the chief point of the whole Song, to which all else is subsidiary. And it is true ; for if the soul be won by exemption from passion, it will have perfect bliss.

XXVI. But we must inquire why, whereas Jacob says, " the horseman shall fall backwards " (Gen. xlix. 17), Moses sings of the drowning of horse and rider. We must remark then, that, whereas he that is to perish by drowning is the Egyptian character, which, even if it flees, flees under the water, that is, under

PHILO

- τῶν παθῶν φεύγει, ὁ δὲ πίπτων ἵππεὺς εἰς τὰ ὀπίσθια οὐκ ἔστι τῶν φιλοπαθῶν· τεκμήριον δέ, ὅτι οὗτος μὲν ἔστιν ἵππεύς, ἐκεῖνος δὲ ἀναβάτης·
- 104 ἵππέως μὲν οὖν ἔργον δαμάζειν τὸν ἵππον καὶ ἀφηγιάζοντα ἐπιστομίζειν, ἀναβάτου δὲ φέρεσθαι ἢ ἂν τὸ ζῶον ἄγῃ· καὶ ἐν θαλάττῃ τοῦ μὲν κυβερνήτου ἔργον ἄγειν τὸ σκάφος καὶ εὐθύνειν καὶ ὀρθοῦν, τοῦ δὲ ἐπιβάτου πάσχειν ὅσα ἂν ἡ ναῦς ὑπομένη· παρὸ καὶ ὁ δαμάζων τὰ πάθη ἵππεὺς οὐ καταποντοῦται, ἀλλὰ ἀποβὰς αὐτῶν τὴν σωτηρίαν περιμένει τοῦ δεσπότου.
- 105 Παραίνει μέντοι ὁ ἱερός λόγος ἐν Λευιτικῷ “ ἀπὸ τῶν ἔρπετῶν, ἃ πορεύεται ἐπὶ τεσσάρων, ἃ ἔχει σκέλη ἀνώτερον τῶν ποδῶν, ὥστε πηδᾶν ἐν αὐτοῖς ” σιτεῖσθαι (Lev. xi. 21), ὧν ἔστιν ὁ βροῦχος καὶ ὁ ἄττακός καὶ ἀκρίς καὶ τέταρτον ὁ ὄφιομάχης· καὶ δεόντως· εἰ γὰρ ἄτροφον καὶ βλαβερὸν πρᾶγμα ὀφιώδης ἡδονή, τροφιμώτατον ἂν καὶ σωτήριοι γένοιτο ἢ πρὸς ἡδονὴν διαμαχομένη φύσις· αὕτη δὲ ἡ σωφροσύνη ἐστί· μάχου δὴ καὶ σύ, ὦ διάνοια, πρὸς πᾶν πάθος καὶ διαφερόντως πρὸς ἡδονήν, καὶ γὰρ “ φρονιμώτατός ἐστιν ὁ ὄφιος πάντων θηρίων τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὧν
- 107 ἐποίησε κύριος ὁ θεός ” (Gen. iii. 1)· τῶν γὰρ πάντων πανουργότατόν ἐστιν ἡδονή· διὰ τί; ὅτι πάντα ἡδονῆς δούλα καὶ ὁ βίος ὁ τῶν φαύλων δεσπόζεται ὑφ’ ἡδονῆς· τὰ γοῦν ποιητικὰ αὐτῆς εὐρίσκεται διὰ πανουργίας πάσης, χρυσὸς ἄργυρος
- [86] δόξα τιμαὶ ἀρχαί, αἱ ὕλαι τῶν | αἰσθητῶν, καὶ τέχνηαι αἱ βάνανσοι καὶ ὅσαι ἄλλαι κατασκευαί·

the current of the passions ; the horseman who falls backwards does not belong to the lovers of the passions. A proof of this is that he is called " horseman," whereas the other is called " rider." A horseman's business is to subdue his horse and use the bit when it disregards the rein, whereas a rider's business is to be carried wherever the animal takes him. On the sea, too, the helmsman's business is to guide the boat and keep it upright and in its course, but it is for the passenger to experience all that the ship undergoes. Accordingly the horseman who subdues the passions is not drowned but, dismounting from them, awaits the salvation that comes from the Master.

Now the sacred word in Leviticus directs them to feed " on creeping things that go upon all four, which have legs above their feet, so as to leap with them " (Lev. xi. 21). Such are the locust, the wild locust, the grasshopper, and in the fourth place the cricket. And this is as it should be. For if serpentlike pleasure is a thing un-nourishing and injurious, self-mastery, the nature that is in conflict with pleasure, must be wholesome and full of nourishment. Do thou also contend, O my mind, against all passion and above all against pleasure, for indeed " the serpent is the most subtle of all beasts upon the earth, which the Lord God made " (Gen. iii. 1) ; for pleasure is the most cunning of all things. Why is this ? Because all things are enthralled to pleasure, and the life of bad men is under the dominion of pleasure. The things that yield pleasure are obtained by means of cunning of every kind ; gold, silver, glory, honours, offices, the materials of objects of sense, the mechanical arts, and all other στικά ἡδονῆς πάνυ ποικίλαι. καὶ ἀδικοῦμεν δι'

PHILO

ἡδονήν, τὰ δὲ ἀδικήματα οὐκ ἄνευ πανουργίας 108 τῆς ἐσχάτης ἐστίν. τὴν ὀφιομάχον οὖν γνώμην
ἀντίταπτε καὶ κάλλιστον ἀγῶνα τοῦτον διάβλησον
καὶ σπούδασον στεφανωθῆναι κατὰ τῆς τοῦς ἄλλους ἅπαντας νικώσης ἡδονῆς καλὸν καὶ εὐκλεᾶ στέφανον, ὃν οὐδεμία πανήγυρις ἀνθρώπων ἐχορήγησεν.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II. 107-108

arts in great variety that minister to pleasure. It is for the sake of pleasure that we do wrong, and wrong deeds are ever associated with desperate cunning. Therefore set judgement, the serpent-fighter, against it, and contend to the end in this noblest contest, and strive earnestly, by defeating pleasure that conquers all others, to win the noble and glorious crown, which no human assembly has ever bestowed.

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION TO BOOK III

A. MAN EXILED. Gen. iii. 8 (1-48).

(a) Man hiding from God (1-27).

Contrasted with Moses (12-14),
who is open before God, and shuns Distraction ("Pharaoh").

Contrasted with Jacob (15-23),
who flies from Material Temptation ("Laban"),
to heights of Virtue and Witness ("Gilead").

Contrasted with Abraham (24-27),
who, loyal to God, refuses the offer of the World (King of Sodom).

(b) Man taking refuge in Self (28-47).

Exod. xxii. 1 f. Rejection of God, that comes to nothing, far less heinous than thorough-going Self-exaltation (32-35).

Deut. xxvii. 15. Evil of secretly holding false opinions (36).

Exod. ii. 12. Evil of being buried in our own loose mind (37).

Gen. xv. 5. Bliss of flying from Self to God (39).

Gen. xxiv. 7—and of quitting the mortal body to be with God (42).

Exod. ix. 29—and our own mind to open all to God (43).

Exod. xxxiii. 7—of going out of Self, and seeking God, even if we fail (46 f.).

PHILO

B. THE CALL. Gen. iii. 9-13 (49-64).

The Call is addressed to Mind, for Mind is capable of instruction. (Sense-perception receives no special call.)

The Question, "Where art thou?" capable of being taken in other ways.

The Answer of Mind comes to this, "There where fear is, and hiding from Thee, and nakedness of virtue" (49-55).

The words "gavest with me" imply the freedom of Sense-perception, which apprehends simultaneously with Mind, and gives it occasions of apprehending ("She gave it me") (56-58).

The Answer of Sense-perception is pertinent, though she says "I ate," when asked about Adam's eating, for Mind concurs at once with Sense-perception. And she rightly says "beguiled," for, while Sense-perception gives without any guile, Pleasure falsifies the object (59-64).

C. PLEASURE, EVIL IN ORIGIN. Gen. iii. 14 (65-106)

God cursing the serpent (viz. Pleasure), without giving him an opportunity to defend himself, is paralleled with God slaying Er (Gen. xxxviii. 7), without bringing an open charge against him. Slain Er is the Body, a corpse from the first, and the soul knows itself best to be a corpse-bearer when perfected (65 ff.).

How the God of Goodness came to create Er and the Serpent, we are not told. We are told that creation is due to the goodness of God (75 ff.).

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III.

And the Book of the Law affords many examples of wide divergence in original endowments. Noah "finds grace in the sight of the Lord," and Melchizedeck is made His "Priest" and "King of peace," no previous merit being mentioned in either case (79 ff.). (Philo stops to contrast M. with the Moabites and Ammonites, who failed to bring forth bread and water, Deut. xxiii. 3 f.) Abram was created good, and led to a better city. Isaac, who is compared with Hope, was richly endowed before birth. The lots of Jacob and Esau were told when they were unborn (82). Ephraim and Manasseh have names denoting, the one Memory and its Fruitfulness, the other escape only from Forgetfulness (94). Bezalel called to a position, which he is not said to have earned, bears a name meaning "In the shadow of God" and is taught by Moses, while Moses is taught by God. In view of all this we must pray and ponder God's goodness (95-103).

D. THE CURSE ON PLEASURE. Gen. iii. 14 (107-199).

Its Ground, 107-110.

Its Fitness, 111-114.

Its Content, 115-199.

Content of the Curse—115-159. Posture and Motion.

(a) On the Breast (115-137).

The Breast the seat of high spirit—the Urim and Thummim there point to Aaron's control of high spirit which Moses wholly excinds (Lev. viii. 29).

PHILO

(b) On the Belly.

(a) Appropriate to Pleasure whose lover goes "on" or "after" the belly and the four passions (138 f.).

(β) The perfect man contrasted with the man of gradual improvement in their dealing with self-indulgence (140-144).

(γ) The belly the basis of all passions (145-150).

Note.—Breast cut out, while the belly is washed, for it is indispensable (147).

(δ) Bodily necessity compels us to go forth from the house of wisdom—girded with Reason—putting out of sight all that is unreasonable (151-158).

161-181. Food.

The earthy body feeds on earth.—

Contrast of the "Bread out of Heaven," "the day's portion for the day," like dew—prolific as coriander-seed—like hoar-frost, called "What is it?" (Deut. viii. 3).

Contrast "The God who feedeth me," said by Jacob, with "I will nourish thee," by Joseph—true son of Rachel ("Give me children").

Enmity (182-199).

The Combatants (185-187).

Their Warfare (188).

Jacob grips the heel of Esau, the man who says "Mine," a word for God only to use (189-199).

E. THE DISCIPLINE. Gen. iii. 16-19 (200-253).

(a) Of the Woman (Gen. iii. 16) (200-245).

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III.

(a) Grief the lot of Sense-perception (200).

Contrast God confirming good to Abraham by an oath (201-203).

Discussion of oath taken by God (204-208).

Groaning—good and bad (211 continued from 200).

(β) Subjection to her husband (220 ff.).

Num. xxi. 27 ff., the women adding to the fire.

Potiphar's wife contrasted with Joseph and Phinehas. Sarah. Hagar (224 ff.).

(b) Of the Man (Gen. iii. 17 ff.) (246-253).

Due to Serpent. Thorns. Grass. Return to Earth.

Γ

- <sup>1</sup>
 [87] I. “Καὶ ἐκρύβησαν ὁ τε Ἀδὰμ καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ προσώπου κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ ξύλου τοῦ παραδείσου” (Gen. iii. 8). δόγμα εἰσηγείται διδάσκον, ὅτι ὁ φαῦλος φυγὰς ἐστίν. εἰ γὰρ πόλις οἰκεία τῶν σοφῶν ἢ ἀρετῆς, ταύτης ὁ μὴ δυνάμενος μετέχειν ἀπελήλαται πόλεως, ἥς ἀδυνατεῖ μετέχειν ὁ φαῦλος· ἀπελήλαται ἄρα καὶ πεφυγάδευται μόνος ὁ φαῦλος. ὁ δ’ ἀρετῆς φυγὰς εὐθύς ἀποκέκρυπται θεόν· εἰ γὰρ καὶ ἐμφανεῖς οἱ σοφοὶ θεῷ, ἅτε ὄντες αὐτῷ φίλοι, δῆλον ὡς ἀποκρύπτονται καὶ καταδύονται πάντες οἱ φαῦλοι, ὡς
 2 ἂν ἐχθροὶ καὶ δυσμενεῖς ὄντες ὀρθῶ λόγῳ. ὅτι μὲν οὖν ἄπολις καὶ ἄοικος ὁ φαῦλός ἐστι, μαρτυρεῖ ἐπὶ τοῦ δασέος καὶ ποικίλου τὴν κακίαν Ἡσαῦ, ὅτε φησὶν· “ἦν δὲ Ἡσαῦ εἰδὼς κυνηγεῖν, ἀγροῖκος” (Gen. xxv. 27). οὐ γὰρ πέφυκεν ἡ τῶν παθῶν θηρευτικὴ κακία τὴν ἀρετῆς πόλιν οἰκεῖν ἀγροικίαν καὶ ἀπαιδευσίαν μετὰ πολλῆς ἀγνωμοσύνης μεταδιώκουσα. ὁ δέ γε σοφίας
 [88] μεστός Ἰακῶβ καὶ πολίτης | ἐστὶ καὶ οἰκίαν τὴν ἀρετὴν κατοικεῖ· φησὶ γοῦν περὶ αὐτοῦ· “Ἰακῶβ δὲ ἄπλαστος ἄνθρωπος οἰκῶν οἰκίαν” (ib.).

---

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 482.

BOOK III

I. " And Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God in the midst of the forest of the garden " (Gen. iii. 8). He introduces a doctrine showing that the bad man is an exile. For if virtue is a city peculiar to the wise, the man who has no capacity to partake of virtue has been driven away from the city, in which the bad man is incapable of taking part. It is accordingly the bad man only who has been driven away and sent into exile. But the exile from virtue has by incurring such exile hidden himself from God. For if the wise, as being His friends, are in God's sight, it is evident that all bad men slink away and hide from Him, as is to be expected in men who cherish hatred and ill-will to right reason. The prophet, moreover, finds proof that the bad man is without city or dwelling-house, in the account of Esau, the hairy man, crafty in wickedness, when he says, " Esau was skilled in hunting, a countryman " (Gen. xxv. 27); for vice, that hunts after the passions, is by nature unfit to dwell in the city of virtue. Rather, in utter senselessness, it follows after rustic<sup>a</sup> grossness, the life of the untrained. Jacob, the man full of wisdom, belongs to a city, and as a dwelling-house he occupies virtue. The prophet says of him: " But Jacob was a simple man dwelling in a house "

PHILO

3 παρὸ καὶ “ αἱ μαῖαι, ἐπειδὴ ἐφοβοῦντο τὸν θεόν, ἐποίησαν ἑαυταῖς οἰκίας ” (Exod. i. 21). αἱ γὰρ ζητητικαὶ τῶν ἀφανῶν θεοῦ μυστηρίων, ὅπερ ἐστὶ “ ζωογονεῖν τὰ ἄρσена,” οἰκοδομοῦσι τὰ ἀρετῆς πράγματα, οἷς καὶ ἐνοικεῖν προήρηνται. διὰ μὲν δὴ τούτων ἐπιδέδεικται, πῶς ὁ μὲν φαῦλος ἄπολις τέ ἐστι καὶ ἄοικος, φυγὰς ἀρετῆς ὢν, ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος καὶ πόλιν ἔχειν καὶ οἶκον σοφίαν κεκλήρωται.

4 II. Ἰδωμεν δὲ ἐξῆς, πῶς καὶ ἀποκρύπτεσθαι τις θεὸν λέγεται. εἰ δὲ μὴ ἀλληγορήσειέ τις, ἀδύνατον παραδέξασθαι τὸ προκείμενον· πάντα γὰρ πεπλήρωκεν ὁ θεὸς καὶ διὰ πάντων διελήλυθεν καὶ κενὸν οὐδὲν οὐδὲ ἔρημον ἀπολέλοιπεν ἑαυτοῦ. ποῖον δὴ τις τόπον ἐφέξει, ἐν ᾧ οὐχὶ θεὸς ἐστι; μαρτυρεῖ δὲ καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις λέγων “ ὁ θεὸς ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἄνω καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς κάτω, καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἔτι πλὴν αὐτοῦ ” (Deut. iv. 39). καὶ πάλιν· “ ὦδε ἔστηκα πρὸ τοῦ σε ” (Exod. xvii. 6)· πρὸ γὰρ παντὸς γενητοῦ ὁ θεὸς ἐστι, καὶ εὐρίσκεται πανταχοῦ, ὥστε οὐκ ἂν δύναιτό τις ἀποκρύπτεσθαι.

5 καὶ τί θαυμάζομεν; τῶν γὰρ γενομένων τὰ συνεκτικώτατα οὐδ’ ἂν, εἴ τι γένοιτο, ἐκφεύγειν καὶ ἀποκρύπτεσθαι δυνηθείημεν, οἷον γῆν φυγέτω τις ἢ ὕδωρ ἢ ἀέρα ἢ οὐρανὸν ἢ τὸν σύμπαντα κόσμον· ἀνάγκη γὰρ ἐν τούτοις περιέχεσθαι, οὐ γὰρ ἔξω

6 γέ τις τοῦ κόσμου φεύγειν δυνησεται. εἶτα <μὴ> τὰ μέρη τοῦ κόσμου μηδὲ τὸν κόσμον αὐτὸν δυναμένός τις ἀποκρύπτεσθαι τὸν θεὸν ἂν ἰσχύσαι

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 3-6

(ibid.). It accords with this too that the midwives, since they feared God, made houses for themselves (Exod. i. 21); for such (souls) as make a quest of God's hidden mysteries—and this is what is meant by "saving the males' lives" or "bringing the males to the birth"—build up the cause of virtue, and in this they have elected to have their abode. By these instances it has been made clear how the bad man is without a city or home, being an exile from virtue, while the good man has received it as his lot to have wisdom for both city and dwelling.

II. Let us see next how a man is said actually to hide himself from God. Were one not to take the language as figurative, it would be impossible to accept the statement, for God fills and penetrates all things, and has left no spot void or empty of His presence. What manner of place then shall a man occupy, in which God is not? The prophet elsewhere bears witness of this saying, "God in heaven above and upon the earth beneath and there is none else but He" (Deut. iv. 39). And again, "Here stand I before thou (wert made)" (Exod. xvii. 6); for before every created thing God is, and is found everywhere, so that no one could possibly hide himself from God. And why should we marvel at this? Whatever should happen, we could never escape or hide ourselves from those, even among things created, that are essential elements of creation. For instance, let a man fly, if he can, from earth or water or air or sky or the world at large. A man must needs have all these round him, for no one shall ever be able to escape out of the world. Then, seeing a man is powerless to hide himself from the parts of the world or from the world itself, would he λανθάνειν; οὐδαμῶς. τί οὖν τὸ “ἐκρύβησαν”; ὁ φαῦλος δοκεῖ εἶναι τὸν θεὸν ἐν τόπῳ, μὴ περιέχοντα, ἀλλὰ περιεχόμενον· οὐ χάριν καὶ οἶεται ἀποκρύπτεσθαι, ὡς κατ’ ἐκείνο τὸ μέρος οὐκ ὄντος τοῦ αἰτίου, καθ’ ὃ φωλεύειν διέγνωκεν.

PHILO

- 7 III. ἔστι δὲ οὕτως ἐκδέξασθαι· ἐν τῷ φαύλῳ ἢ ἀληθῆς περὶ θεοῦ δόξα ἐπεσκίασται καὶ ἀποκρύπτεται, σκότους γὰρ πλήρης ἐστὶ μηδὲν ἔχων ἐναύγασμα θεῖον, ᾧ τὰ ὄντα περισκέφεται· ὁ δὲ τοιοῦτος πεφυγάδευται θεῖου χοροῦ, καθάπερ ὁ λεπρὸς καὶ γονορρυῆς, ὁ μὲν θεὸν καὶ γένεσιν, ἀντιπάλους φύσεις, δύο χρωμάτων ὄντων, ἀγαγὼν εἰς ταῦτὸ ὡς αἷτια, ἐνὸς ὄντος αἰτίου τοῦ δρῶντος, ὁ δὲ γονορρυῆς ἐκ κόσμου πάντα καὶ εἰς κόσμον ἀνάγων, ὑπὸ θεοῦ δὲ μηδὲν οἰόμενος γεγονέναι, Ἡρακλει-
- [89] τείου δόξης ἑταῖρος, κόρον | καὶ χρησιμοσύνην καὶ
- 8 ἐν τὸ πᾶν καὶ πάντα ἀμοιβῆ εἰσάγων. διό φησι καὶ ὁ θεὸς λόγος· “ἐξαποστειλάτωσαν ἐκ τῆς ἀγίου ψυχῆς πάντα λεπρὸν καὶ πάντα γονορρυῆ καὶ πάντα ἀκάθαρτον ἐν ψυχῇ, ἀπὸ ἀρσενικοῦ ἕως θηλυκοῦ” (Num. v. 2), καὶ τοὺς θλαδίας καὶ ἀποκεκομμένους τὰ γεννητικὰ τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ πόρνους τὴν ἐνὸς ἀρχὴν ἀποδιδράσκοντας, οἷς ἀντικρυς ἀπείρηται εἰς ἐκκλησίαν θεοῦ φοιτᾶν
- 9 (Deut. xxiii. 2). οἱ δὲ γε σοφοὶ λογισμοὶ οὐχ οἷον ἀποκρύπτονται, ἀλλ’ ἐμφανεῖς εἶναι γλίσχονται. οὐχ ὀραῖς ὅτι ὁ Ἀβραὰμ “ἔτι ἦν ἐστηκὼς ἐνώπιον

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 482.

<sup>b</sup> Literally “there being two colours.” See Lev. xiii. 9-17. ‘Raw flesh’ and ‘white’ would seem to be the “two colours.”

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 6-9

be able to escape the eye of God? By no means. Why then does it say "they hid themselves"? The bad man thinks that God is in a place, not containing but contained; and for this reason he imagines that he can hide from Him, fancying that God, the Author of all things, is not in that part, which he has chosen for his lurking-place. III. It is possible to take it in this way. In the bad man the true opinion concerning God is hidden in obscurity, for he is full of darkness with no divine radiance in him, whereby to investigate realities. Such an one is in banishment from the divine company, like the leper and the man with an issue.<sup>a</sup> The former combines as joint causes God and creation, which are natures mutually hostile, for he shows two different colours,<sup>b</sup> whereas there is one single Cause, even He who doeth all. The man with an issue, on the other hand, deriving everything from the world, and making it return into the world, imagines that nothing has been created by God, associating himself with the opinion of Heracleitus, in his advocacy of such tenets as "fullness and want," "the universe one," and "all things interchange." So the divine word saith, "Let them send forth out of the holy soul every leper, and everyone that hath an issue, and everyone that is unclean in soul, both male and female (Numb. v. 2), and eunuchs with the generative organs of the soul cut away, and fornicators, deserters from the rule of One, to whom entrance into the assembly of God is absolutely forbidden (Deut. xxiii. 2). But wise reasonings, so far from hiding themselves, are keenly desirous to be manifest. Do you not see that Abraham "was still standing before the Lord and drew nigh and

PHILO

- κυρίου καὶ ἐγγίσας εἶπε Μὴ συναπολέσῃς δίκαιον μετὰ ἀσεβοῦς" (Gen. xviii. 22, 23), τὸν ἐμφανῆ σοι καὶ γνώριμον μετὰ τοῦ φεύγοντός σε καὶ ἀποδιδράσκοντος; οὗτος μὲν γὰρ ἀσεβής, δίκαιος δὲ ὁ ἔστηκώς ἐναντίον σου καὶ μὴ φεύγων· σὲ
- 10 γάρ, ὦ δέσποτα, τιμᾶσθαι δίκαιον μόνον. οὐχ ὥσπερ δὲ ἀσεβής, οὕτω καὶ εὐσεβής τις εὐρίσκεται, ἀλλ' ἀγαπητόν, εἰ δίκαιος, οὐ χάριν φησί· "μὴ συναπολέσῃς δίκαιον μετὰ ἀσεβοῦς." ἀξίως γὰρ οὐδεὶς τὸν θεὸν τιμᾶ, ἀλλὰ δικαίως μόνον· ὅποτε γὰρ οὐδὲ τοῖς γονεῦσιν ἴσας ἀποδοῦναι χάριτας ἐνδέχεται—ἀντιγεννηῆσαι γὰρ οὐχ οἶόν τε τούτους—πῶς οὐκ ἀδύνατον τὸν θεὸν ἀμείψασθαι ἢ ἐπαινεῖσαι κατὰ τὴν ἀξίαν τὸν τὰ ὅλα συστησάμενον ἐκ μὴ ὄντων; πᾶσαν γὰρ ἀρετὴν παρέσχετο.
- 11 IV. Τρεῖς οὖν καιροῦς, ὦ ψυχῆ, τουτέστι τὸν τριμερῆ χρόνον σύμπαντα ἐμφανῆς αἰεὶ γίνου θεῷ, μὴ τὸ θῆλυ αἰσθητὸν πάθος ἐφελκομένη, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀνδρεῖον καὶ καρτερίας ἀσκητὴν λογισμὸν ἐκθυμῶσα· τρισὶ γὰρ καιροῖς τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ὀφθῆναι πᾶν ἀρσενικὸν ἐναντίον κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ Ἰσραὴλ
- 12 ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος προστάττει (Deut. xvi. 16). διὰ τοῦτο καὶ Μωυσῆς, ὅτε ἐμφανῆς καθίσταται θεῷ, φεύγει τὸν διασκεδαστὴν τρόπον Φαραῶ, ὃς αὐχρὲ λέγων μὴ εἰδέναι τὸν κύριον (Exod. v. 2)· "ἀνεχώρησε" γὰρ φησί "Μωυσῆς ἀπὸ προσώπου Φαραῶ καὶ κατώκησεν ἐν γῆ Μαδιάμ" (Exod. ii. 15), τῇ κρίσει

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 9-12

said, ' Destroy Thou not the just man together with the impious one ' " (Gen. xviii. 22 f.), the one that is manifest and known to Thee together with him who shuns and avoids Thee ? For this one is impious, but he that stands before Thee and avoids Thee not is just. For the only justice is that Thou, O Master, shouldst be honoured. A pious man is not found with the same ease as an impious one. We have to be content with a just man. This is why he says, " Destroy not a just together with an impious man." For no one honours God as He deserves but only as is just. It is impossible to requite even our parents with boons equal to those which we have received from them—for it is out of the question to requite by becoming their parents. How must it not be impossible to recompense or to praise as He deserves Him who brought the universe out of non-existence ? For it was an exercise towards us of every virtue.

IV. Through three seasons, then, O soul, that is throughout the whole of time with its threefold divisions, make thyself ever manifest to God, not dragging after thee the weak feminine passion of sense-perception, but giving forth as incense the manly reasoning schooled in fortitude. For the sacred word (Deut. xvi. 16) enjoins that at three seasons of the year every male is to show himself before the Lord the God of Israel. For this reason Moses also, when he is being established as one standing open before God, avoids Pharaoh, the symbol of dispersion, for he boasts saying that he knows not the Lord (Exod. v. 2). " Moses," we read, " withdrew from Pharaoh's presence and settled in the land of Midian " (Exod. ii. 15), or

PHILO

- τῶν φύσεως πραγμάτων, “καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπὶ τοῦ φρέατος,” ἐκδεχόμενος τί ὁ θεὸς ἀνομβρήσει πότιμον τῇ διψώσῃ καὶ ποθούσῃ ψυχῇ τὸ ἀγαθόν.
- 13 ἀναχωρεῖ μὲν δὴ ἀπὸ τῆς ἀθέου καὶ ἡγεμονίδος τῶν παθῶν δόξης Φαραώ, ἀναχωρεῖ δὲ εἰς Μαδιάμ, τὴν κρίσιν, ἐξετάζων πότερον ἡρεμητέον αὐτῷ |
- [90] ἐστὶν ἢ δικαστέον πάλιν πρὸς τὸν φαῦλον ἐπ’ ὀλέθρῳ αὐτοῦ· σκέπτεται δέ, εἰ ἐπιθέμενος ἰσχύσει νικηφορῆσαι, παρὸ καὶ κατέχεται ὑπομένων, ὡς ἔφην, εἰ ἀναδώσει ὁ θεὸς τῷ βαθεῖ καὶ μὴ κούφῳ λογισμῷ πηγὴν ἰκανὴν ἐπικλύσαι τὴν φορὰν τοῦ
- 14 Αἰγυπτίων βασιλέως, τῶν παθῶν αὐτοῦ. ἀξιούται μέντοι τῆς χάριτος· στρατευσάμενος γὰρ στρατείαν τὴν ὑπὲρ ἀρετῆς οὐ παύεται πολεμῶν, πρὶν ἐπιδεῖν πρηνεῖς καὶ ἀπράκτους τὰς ἡδονάς. οὐδὲ χάριν οὐ φεύγει Μωυσῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ Φαραώ, ἀνεπιστρεπτι γὰρ ἂν ἀπεδίδρασκεν, ἀλλ’ ἀναχωρεῖ, τουτέστιν ἀνακωχὴν ποιεῖται τοῦ πολέμου ἀθλητοῦ τρόπον διαπνέοντος καὶ συλλεγομένου τὸ πνεῦμα, μέχρις ἂν ἐγείρας τὴν φρονήσεως καὶ τῆς ἄλλης ἀρετῆς συμμαχίαν διὰ λόγων θείων μετὰ δυνάμεως ἐρρωμενεστάτης ἐπίθῃται.
- 15 Ὁ δὲ Ἰακώβ, περηνιστῆς γὰρ ἐστὶ, μεθόδοις καὶ τέχναις τὴν ἀρετὴν οὐκ ἀκονιτὶ κτώμενος—οὐ γὰρ μετωνόμαστό πω εἰς τὸν Ἰσραὴλ—ἀποδιδράσκει τῶν κατὰ Λάβαν πραγμάτων, τουτέστι χρωμάτων καὶ σχημάτων καὶ συνόλως σωματῶν, ἃ τὸν νοῦν διὰ τῶν αἰσθητῶν τιτρώσκειν πέφυκεν· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ αὐτὰ νικῆσαι παρῶν κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 12-15

in the examination of the things of nature, "and sat on the well," waiting to see what draught God would send to quench the thirst of his soul in its longing for that which is good. So he withdraws from the godless opinion of Pharaoh, which the passions follow as their leader, and withdraws into Midian, the sifting-place, to inquire whether he is to be still or to dispute again with the evil man for his destruction; he considers whether, if he attack him, he shall prevail to win the victory, and so he is kept there waiting upon God, as I have said, to see whether He will bestow upon a deep reasoning faculty free from shallowness a stream sufficient to drown the onrush of the king of the Egyptians, the onrush, that is, of his passions. And he is deemed worthy of the boon: for, having taken the field in the cause of virtue, he does not abandon the warfare till he beholds the pleasures prostrate and out of action. This is why Moses does not fly from Pharaoh, for that would have been to run away and not return, but, like an athlete taking an interval to regain his breath, "withdraws," that is, brings about a cessation of arms, until he shall by divine words have raised forces of wisdom and every other virtue to aid him in renewing the attack with irresistible power.

But Jacob, "Supplanter" that he is, acquiring virtue with great toil by wiles and artifices, his name having not yet been changed into "Israel," runs away from Laban and all his belongings, tints and shapes and material bodies generally, whose nature it is to inflict wounds on the mind through the objects of sense. For since when facing them he was not able completely to vanquish them, he

PHILO

οὐκ ἠδύνατο, φεύγει δεδιὼς τὴν πρὸς αὐτῶν ἤτταν
καὶ σφόδρα ἐπαίνων ἄξιος· “ εὐλαβεῖς ” γάρ φησι Μωυσῆς “ ποιήσετε τοὺς υἱοὺς τοῦ ὀρώντος ”
(Lev. xv. 31), ἀλλ’ οὐ θρασεῖς καὶ τῶν μὴ καθ’
16 αὐτοὺς ἐρώντας. V. “ καὶ ἔκρυψεν Ἰακώβ Λάβαν τὸν Σύρον τοῦ μὴ ἀναγγεῖλαι αὐτῷ ὅτι ἀπο-διδράσκει. καὶ ἀπέδρα αὐτὸς καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ πάντα,
καὶ διέβη τὸν ποταμὸν καὶ ὤρμησεν εἰς τὸ ὄρος Γαλααδ ” (Gen. xxxi. 20, 21). φυσικώτατόν ἐστι
τὸ κρύπτειν ὅτι ἀποδιδράσκει καὶ μὴ ἀναγγέλλειν
τῷ ἠρτημένῳ τῶν αἰσθητῶν λογισμῷ Λάβαν· οἶον
ἐὰν κάλλος ἰδὼν αἰρεθῆς αὐτῷ καὶ μέλλης πταίειν
περὶ αὐτό, φύγε λαθῶν ἀπὸ τῆς φαντασίας αὐτοῦ
καὶ μηκέτι ἀναγγείλης τῷ νῶ, τουτέστι μὴ ἐπι-λογίση πάλιν μηδὲ μελετήσης· αἱ γὰρ συνεχεῖς ὑπομνήσεις τύπους ἐγχαράττουσαι τρανοὺς βλάπ-τουσι τὴν διάνοιαν καὶ ἄκουσαν αὐτὴν <πολλάκις> 17 περιτρέπουσιν. ὁ δ’ αὐτὸς λόγος καὶ ἐπὶ πάντων
τῶν καθ’ ἡντινοῦν αἰσθησιν ὀλκῶν· ἐν γὰρ τούτοις
σώτεια ἢ λαθραία φυγή, τὸ δ’ ὑπομιμνήσκεσθαι καὶ ἀναγγέλλειν καὶ ἀναπολεῖν κρατεῖ καὶ δουλοῦται βιαίως τὸν λογισμὸν. μηδέποτ’ οὖν, ὦ διάνοια, τὸ φανὲν αἰσθητόν, εἰ μέλλεις ἀλίσκεσθαι
πρὸς αὐτοῦ, ἀναγγείλης σαυτῇ μηδὲ ἀναπολήσης
αὐτό, ἵνα μὴ κρατηθεῖσα κακοδαιμονῆς· ἀλλ’
ἄφетος ὀρμήσασα ἀπόδραθι ἐλευθερίαν ἀτίθασον
δουλείας χειροθήτους προκρίνουσα.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 482.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 15-17

flies, fearing defeat at their hands. And in doing so he is thoroughly deserving of praise ; for Moses says, " Ye shall make the sons of the seeing one cautious " (Lev. xv. 31), not bold and aiming at what is beyond their capacity. V. " And Jacob stole away unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.<sup>a</sup> So he fled with all that he had ; and passed over the river, and set his face toward the mountain of Gilead " (Gen. xxxi. 20 f.). It is thoroughly in accordance with true principles that he is said to have concealed the fact that he is running away and not made it known to Laban, who represents the way of thinking governed by objects of sense. For instance, if thou hast caught sight of beauty and been captivated by it, and if it is like to be a cause of stumbling to thee, fly secretly from the vision of it, and give no further report of it to thy mind, that is to say, do not give it another thought or ponder it : for to keep on recalling anything is the way to engrave on the mind distinct outlines of it, which injure the mind and often bring it to ruin against its will. The same principle holds in the case of every kind of attraction by the avenue of whatever sense it may reach us ; for here safety lies in secret flight ; but recalling the attractive object in memory, telling of it, turning it over, spells conquest and harsh slavery for our reasoning faculty. If, therefore, O my mind, thou art in imminent danger of falling a prey to some object of sense that has shown itself, never report it to thyself, never dwell on it, lest thou be overcome and plunged into misery. Nay, rush forth at large, make thy escape, choose the freedom of the wild rather than the slavery of the tame.

PHILO

- 18 VI. Διὰ τί δὲ νῦν ὡς ἀγνοοῦντος τοῦ Ἰακώβ, ὅτι Σύρος ὁ Λάβαν ἐστί, φησὶν “ ἔκρυψε δὲ Ἰακώβ [91] Λάβαν τὸν Σύρον”; ἔχει δὲ καὶ τοῦτο οὐ | πάρεργον λόγον· Συρία γὰρ ἑρμηνεύεται μετέωρα· ὁ ἀσκητῆς οὖν Ἰακώβ νοῦς, ὅτε μὲν ὄρᾳ ταπεινὸν τὸ πάθος, περιμένει λογιζόμενος αὐτὸ νικήσειν κατὰ κράτος, ὅτε δὲ μετέωρον καὶ ὑψαυχενοῦν καὶ ὑπέρογκον, ἀποδιδράσκει τε ὁ νοῦς ὁ ἀσκητῆς πρῶτος, εἶτα καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ πάντα μέρη τῆς ἀσκήσεως, ἀναγνώσεις, μελέται, θεραπείαι, τῶν καλῶν μνημαί, ἐγκράτεια, τῶν καθηκόντων ἐνέργειαι, καὶ διαβαίνει τὸν τῶν αἰσθητῶν ποταμὸν τὸν ἐπικλύζοντα καὶ βαπτίζοντα τῇ φορᾷ τῶν παθῶν τὴν ψυχὴν, καὶ ὄρμᾳ διαβάς εἰς τὸν ὑψηλὸν καὶ μετέωρον <τόπον> τὸν λόγον τῆς τελείας
- 19 ἀρετῆς· “ ὤρμησε γὰρ εἰς τὸ ὄρος Γαλαᾶδ,” ἑρμηνεύεται δὲ μετοικία μαρτυρίας, τοῦ θεοῦ μετοικίσαντος τὴν ψυχὴν ἀπὸ τῶν κατὰ Λάβαν παθῶν καὶ μαρτυρήσαντος αὐτῇ μετανάστασιν, ὅτι λυσιτελεῖς καὶ συμφέρουσα, καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ταπεινῶν καὶ χαμαίζηλον ἀπεργαζομένων τὴν ψυχὴν κακῶν εἰς ὕψος καὶ μέγεθος ἀρετῆς προ-άγοντος.
- 20 Διὰ τοῦτο ὁ φίλος τῶν αἰσθήσεων καὶ κατ’ αὐτὰς ἀλλὰ μὴ κατὰ νοῦν ἐνεργῶν Λάβαν ἀγανακτεῖ καὶ διώκει καὶ φησιν· “ ἵνα τί κρυφῆ ἀπέδρας” (Gen. xxxi. 26), ἀλλ’ οὐ παρέμεινας τῇ τοῦ σώματος ἀπολαύσει καὶ τῷ δόγματι τῷ <τᾷ> περὶ σῶμα καὶ τὰ ἐκτὸς ἀγαθὰ κρίνοντι; ἀλλὰ καὶ φεύγων ἀπὸ τῆσδε τῆς δόξης ἐσύλησάς

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 18-20

VI. Now (let us ask) why, as though Jacob were not aware that Laban was a Syrian, does he say, "Jacob kept Laban the Syrian in the dark"? In this likewise there is a point not without pertinence. For "Syria" means "Highlands." Jacob, therefore, the mind in training, when he sees passion grovelling low before him, awaits its onset calculating that he will master it by force, but when it is seen to be lofty, stately, weighty, the first to run away is the mind in training, followed by all his belongings, being portions of his discipline, readings, ponderings, acts of worship, and of remembrance of noble souls, self-control, discharge of daily duties; he crosses the river of objects of sense, that swamps and drowns the soul under the flood of the passions, and, when he has crossed it, sets his face for the lofty high-land, the principle of perfect virtue: "for he set his face towards the mountain of Gilead." The meaning of this name is "migration of witness"; for God caused the soul to migrate from the passions that are represented by Laban, and bore witness to it how greatly to its advantage and benefit its removal was, and led it on away from the evil things that render the soul low and grovelling up to the height and greatness of virtue.

For this reason Laban, the friend of the senses and the man whose actions are regulated by them and not by the mind, is vexed, and pursues him, and says, "Why didst thou run away secretly" (Gen. xxxi. 26), but didst not remain in the company of bodily enjoyment and of the teaching that gives the preference to bodily and external good things? But in addition to fleeing from this view of life, thou

PHILO

- μου καὶ τὸ φρονεῖν, Λείαν τε καὶ Ῥαχὴλ· αὐται γάρ, ἤνικα παρέμενον τῇ ψυχῇ, φρένας ἐνεποιοῦν ταύτῃ, μεταναστᾶσαι δὲ ἀμαθίαν καὶ ἀπαιδευσίαν αὐτῇ κατέλιπον· διὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει ὅτι “ ἐκλοποφόρησάς με ” (ib.), τουτέστι τὸ φρονεῖν ἔκλειψας.
- 21 VII. τί οὖν ἦν τὸ φρονεῖν, ἐξηγήσεται· ἐπιφέρει γάρ· “ καὶ ἀπήγαγες τὰς θυγατέρας μου ὡς αἰχμαλώτιδας· καὶ εἰ ἀνήγγειλάς μοι, ἐξαπέστειλα ἄν σε ” (ib.). οὐκ ἂν ἐξαπέστειλας τὰ μαχόμενα ἀλλήλοις· εἰ γὰρ ἐξαπέστειλας ὄντως καὶ ἡλευθέρους τὴν ψυχὴν, περιεῖλες ἂν αὐτῆς τοὺς σωματικούς καὶ αἰσθητικούς ἅπαντας ἤχους· οὕτως γὰρ ἀπολυτροῦται κακιῶν καὶ παθῶν διάνοια· νυνὶ δὲ λέγεις μὲν, ὡς ἐξαποστέλλεις ἐλευθέραν, διὰ δὲ τῶν ἔργων ὁμολογεῖς, ὅτι κατέσχεσ ἂν ἐν δεσμωτηρίῳ· εἰ γὰρ “ μετὰ μουσικῶν καὶ τυμπάνων καὶ κιθάρας ” καὶ τῶν καθ’ ἐκάστην αἰσθησιν ἡδονῶν προὔπεμπες, οὐκ ἂν ὄντως ἐξ-
- 22 ἀπέστειλας. οὐ γὰρ μόνον σέ, ὦ σωματίων καὶ χρωμάτων ἑταῖρε Λάβαν, ἀποδιδράσκομεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πάντα τὰ σά, ἐν οἷς καὶ αἱ τῶν αἰσθήσεων φωναὶ ταῖς τῶν παθῶν ἐνεργείαις συνηχοῦσαι· μεμελετήκαμεν γάρ, εἴ γε ἀρετῆς ἐσμεν ἀσκηταί, μελέτην ἀναγκαίαν, ἣν καὶ Ἰακώβ ἐμελέτησεν,
- [92] ἀπολλύναι καὶ διαφθείρειν | τοὺς ἄλλοτρίους τῆς

---

<sup>a</sup> Both in Hebrew and in Greek “to steal the mind” means “to deceive.” Philo probably knew that in Gen. xxxi. 20 “stole away unawares to” is in the Hebrew “stole the mind of.” In v. 26 (27) the LXX. renders by ἐκλοποφόρησάς με the Hebrew “didst steal me,” which in E.V. is rendered “didst steal away from me.” Philo can hardly have got τὸ φρονεῖν except from the Hebrew phrase of v. 20, or its Greek equivalent.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 20-22

didst carry off my soundness of sense<sup>a</sup> as well, Leah and Rachel to wit. For these, while they remained with the soul, produced in it sound sense, but when they removed elsewhere they left behind to it ignorance and indiscipline. This is why he adds the words "thou didst rob me" (ibid.), that is, didst steal my good sense. VII. What, then, his good sense was, he is going to explain; for he adds "and didst carry away my daughters as prisoners of war: and if thou hadst told me, I would have sent thee forth" (ibid.). Thou wouldst not have sent forth those at variance one with another; <sup>b</sup> for hadst thou really sent forth and liberated the soul, thou wouldst have stripped from it all voices belonging to the body and senses: for it is in this way that the understanding is delivered from vices and passions. But as it is, thou sayest that thou art ready to send her forth free, but by thy actions thou ownest that thou wouldst have detained her in prison; for if thou hadst sent her on her way with "music and tabrets and harp" and the pleasures that suit each several sense, thou wouldst not really have sent her forth at all. For it is not from thee only, O Laban, friend of bodies and of tints, that we are running away, but from all too that is thine: and this includes the voices of the senses sounding in harmony with the operations of the passions. For we have made our own, if so be that we are under virtue's training, a study absolutely vital which was Jacob's study also, to consign to death and destruction the gods that <sup>b</sup> The things mutually at variance are true "well-being" and the lower delights, represented by the "music and tabrets and harp," which, as Philo takes it, are to go with those released.

PHILO

ψυχῆς [τούς] θεούς, τοὺς χωνευτοὺς θεούς, οὓς ἀπηγόρευκε Μωυσῆς δημιουργεῖν (Lev. xix. 4). οὗτοι δ' εἰσὶν ἀρετῆς μὲν καὶ εὐπαθείας διάλυσις, κακίας δὲ καὶ παθῶν σύστασις τε καὶ πῆξις, τὸ γὰρ χεόμενον διαλυθὲν αὖθις πῆγνυται.

- 23 VIII. Λέγει δὲ οὕτως· “καὶ ἔδωκαν Ἰακώβ τοὺς θεοὺς τοὺς ἀλλοτρίους, οἳ ἦσαν ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτῶν, καὶ τὰ ἐνώτια τὰ ἐν τοῖς ὤσιν αὐτῶν, καὶ κατέκρυψεν αὐτὰ Ἰακώβ ὑπὸ τὴν τερέβινθον τὴν ἐν Σικίμοις” (Gen. xxxv 4). οὗτοι δ' εἰσὶ τῶν φαύλων θεοί. ὁ δὲ Ἰακώβ οὐ λέγεται λαμβάνειν, ἀλλὰ κρύπτειν καὶ ἀπολλύναι· πάντη διηκριβωμένως· ὁ γὰρ ἀστείος οὐδὲν λήψεται πρὸς περιουσίαν τῶν ἀπὸ κακίας, ἀλλὰ κρύψει καὶ ἀφανιεῖ
- 24 λάθρα· καθάπερ καὶ Ἀβραὰμ τῷ Σοδόμων βασιλεῖ τεχνάζοντι ἀλόγου φύσεως ποιήσασθαι ἀντίδοσιν πρὸς λογικὴν, ἵππου πρὸς ἄνδρας, φησὶ μηδὲν λήψεσθαι τῶν ἐκείνου, ἀλλ' “ἐκτενεῖν” τὴν ψυχικὴν πράξιν, ὅπερ διὰ συμβόλου “χεῖρα” ὠνόμασε, “πρὸς τὸν θεὸν τὸν ὑψιστον” (Gen. xiv. 22), μὴ γὰρ λήψεσθαι “ἀπὸ σπαρτίου ἕως σφαιρωτῆρος ὑποδήματος” ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἐκείνου, ἵνα μὴ εἴπη πλούσιον πεποιηκέναι τὸν ὀρώντα πενίαν ἀρετῆς τῆς πλουσίας ἀντιδιδούς.
- 25 κρύπτεται μὲν αἰεὶ καὶ φυλάττεται τὰ πάθη ἐν Σικίμοις—ὠμιάσις δὲ ἐρμηνεύεται, ὁ γὰρ πονούμενος περὶ τὰς ἡδονὰς φυλακτικὸς τῶν ἡδονῶν ἐστίν—ἀπόλλυται δὲ καὶ διαφθείρεται παρὰ τῷ are alien to the soul, the gods moulded in metal, the making of which Moses has forbidden (Lev. xix. 4); and these are a means of dissolving virtue and well-being, and a means of forming and giving fixity to wickedness and passions, for that which undergoes moulding, if dissolved, grows fixed and firm again.

* In Gen. xiv. 21 the word rendered “goods” in E.V. can mean “cattle,” and is translated in LXX. by τὴν ἵππον (collective for “horses”). See 197.

<sup>b</sup> De Migratione Abrahami 221.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 22-25

VIII. We read as follows: "And they gave Jacob the strange gods, which were in their hands, and the ear-rings which were in their ears, and Jacob hid them under the terebinth that was in Shechem" (Gen. xxxv. 4). These are bad men's gods. And Jacob is not said to receive them, but to hide and destroy them. This is in every point perfectly accurate. For the man of sterling worth will take nothing to make him rich in the products of evil, but will hide them secretly and do away with them. In like manner when the king of Sodom is artfully attempting to effect an exchange of creatures without reason for reasonable beings, of horses for men,<sup>a</sup> Abraham says that he will take none of the things that are his but will "stretch out" his soul's operation, which he figuratively called his "hand," "to the Most High God" (Gen. xiv. 22), for that he would not take of all that was the king's "from a cord even to a shoelace," in order that he may not say that he has conferred wealth on the man whose eyes were open, by giving him poverty in return for his wealth of virtue. The passions are always hidden away and placed under guard in Shechem<sup>b</sup>—"shoulder"<sup>c</sup> is the meaning of the name—for he that devotes toil to pleasures is prone to keep pleasures well guarded. But in the case of the wise man the passions perish and are destroyed, not for

<sup>c</sup> Or "shouldering," i.e. 'toil.'

PHILO

- σοφῶ, οὐ πρὸς βραχὺν τινα χρόνον, ἀλλ' "ἕως τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας," τουτέστιν αἰεὶ· ὁ γὰρ αἰὼν ἅπας τῷ σήμερον παραμετρεῖται, μέτρον γὰρ τοῦ
- 26 παντὸς χρόνου ὁ ἡμερήσιος κύκλος. διὸ καὶ ἐξαίρετον δίδωσι τῷ Ἰωσήφ τὰ Σίκιμα ὁ Ἰακώβ (Gen. xlviii. 22), τὰ σωματικὰ καὶ αἰσθητικά, μετιόντι τὸν ἐν τούτοις πόνον, τῷ δ' ἐξομολογουμένῳ Ἰουδα οὐχὶ δόσεις, ἀλλὰ αἴνεσιν καὶ ὕμνους καὶ θεοπρεπεῖς ᾠδὰς πρὸς τῶν ἀδελφῶν (Gen. xlix. 8). τὰ δὲ Σίκιμα ὁ Ἰακώβ λαμβάνει οὐ παρὰ θεοῦ, ἀλλ' "ἐν μαχαίρᾳ καὶ τόξοις," λόγοις τμητικοῖς καὶ ἀμυντηρίοις· ὑποτάττει γὰρ καὶ τὰ δεύτερα ἑαυτῷ ὁ σοφός, ὑποτάξας δὲ οὐ φυλάττει,
- 27 ἀλλὰ χαρίζεται τῷ πεφυκότι πρὸς αὐτά. οὐχ ὄρας ὅτι καὶ τοὺς θεοὺς δοκῶν λαμβάνειν οὐκ [93] εἴληφεν, ἀλλὰ ἀπέκρυψε | καὶ ἠφάνισε καὶ διέφθειρε τὸν αἰεὶ χρόνον ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ; τίνι οὖν ψυχῇ ἀποκρύπτειν καὶ ἀφανίζειν κακίαν ἐγένετο, εἰ μὴ ἦ ὁ θεὸς ἐνεφανίσθη, ἣν καὶ τῶν ἀπορρήτων μυστηρίων ἠξίωσε; φησὶ γάρ· "μὴ κρύψω ἐγὼ ἀπὸ Ἀβραάμ τοῦ παιδός μου ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ;" (Gen. xviii. 17) εὖ, σῶτερ, ὅτι τὰ σεαυτοῦ ἔργα ἐπιδείκνυσαι τῇ ποθούσῃ τὰ καλὰ ψυχῇ καὶ οὐδὲν αὐτὴν τῶν σῶν ἔργων ἐπικέκρυψαι. τούτου χάριν ἰσχύει φεύγειν κακίαν καὶ ἀποκρύπτειν καὶ συσκιαίνειν καὶ ἀπολλύναι αἰεὶ τὸ βλαβερόν πάθος.
- 28 IX. "Ὅν μὲν οὖν τρόπον φυγὰς τέ ἐστιν ὁ φαῦλος καὶ ἀποκρύπτεται θεόν, δεδηλώκαμεν· νυνὶ δὲ

<sup>a</sup> LXX. Σίκιμα ἐξαίρετον. R.V. (text) "one portion"; R.V. (margin) "one mountain slope." Heb. "Shechem" = "shoulder."

<sup>b</sup> See Gen. xxxv. 4.

some short period but "even to this day," that is, always. For the whole age of the world is made commensurate with to-day, for the daily cycle is the measure of all time. For this reason too Jacob gives as a special portion to Joseph Shechem (Gen. xlviii. 22),<sup>a</sup> the things of the body and of the senses, as he is occupied in toiling at these things, but to Judah who openly acknowledges God he gives not presents, but praise and hymns and hallowed songs from his brethren (Gen. xlix. 8). Jacob receives Shechem not from God, but by dint of "sword and bow," words that pierce and parry. For the wise man subjects to himself the secondary as well as the primary objects, but, having subjected them, does not keep them, but bestows them on him to whose nature they are akin. Mark you not that, in the case of the gods also, though apparently receiving them, he has not really done so, but hid them and did away with them and "destroyed" them for ever from himself?<sup>b</sup> What soul, then, was it that succeeded in hiding away wickedness and removing it from sight, but the soul to which God manifested Himself, and which He deemed worthy of His secret mysteries? For He says: "Shall I hide from Abraham My servant that which I am doing?" (Gen. xviii. 17). It is meet, O Saviour, that Thou displayest Thine own works to the soul that longs for all beautiful things, and that Thou hast concealed from it none of Thy works. That is why it is strong to shun evil and always to hide and becloud and destroy passion that works cruel havoc.

IX. In what manner, then, the bad man is in banishment and hiding himself from God we have

PHILO

- σκεψώμεθα, ὅπου ἀποκρύπτεται. “ ἐν μέσῳ ”
 φησί “ τοῦ ξύλου τοῦ παραδείσου ” (Gen. iii. 8), τουτέστι κατὰ μέσον τὸν νοῦν, ὃς καὶ αὐτὸς μέσος
 ἐστὶν ὡσανεὶ παραδείσου τῆς ὅλης ψυχῆς· ὁ γὰρ 29 ἀποδιδράσκων θεὸν καταφεύγει εἰς ἑαυτόν. δυοῖν
 γὰρ ὄντων τοῦ τε τῶν ὄλων νοῦ, ὃς ἐστὶ θεός,
 καὶ τοῦ ἰδίου, ὁ μὲν φεύγων ἀπὸ τοῦ καθ’ αὐτὸν
 καταφεύγει ἐπὶ τὸν συμπάντων—ὁ γὰρ νοῦν τὸν
 ἴδιον ἀπολείπων ὁμολογεῖ μηδὲν εἶναι τὰ κατὰ
 τὸν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν, ἅπαντα δὲ προσάπτει θεῷ—
 ὁ δὲ πάλιν ἀποδιδράσκων θεὸν τὸν μὲν οὐδενὸς
 αἰτιὸν φησιν εἶναι, τῶν δὲ γινομένων ἀπάντων 30 ἑαυτόν· λέγεται γοῦν παρὰ πολλοῖς, ὅτι τὰ ἐν
 τῷ κόσμῳ πάντα φέρεται χωρὶς ἡγεμόνος ἀπ-αυτοματίζοντα, τέχνας δὲ καὶ ἐπιτηδεύματα καὶ
 νόμους καὶ ἔθη καὶ πολιτικὰ καὶ ἴδια καὶ κοινὰ
 δίκαια πρὸς τε ἀνθρώπους καὶ πρὸς τὰ ἄλογα 31 ζῶα ἔθετο μόνος ὁ ἀνθρώπινος νοῦς. ἀλλ’ ὄρας,
 ὦ ψυχῆ, τῶν δοξῶν τὸ παραλλάττον· ἡ μὲν γὰρ
 τὸν ἐπὶ μέρους τὸν γενητὸν καὶ θνητὸν ἀπολιποῦσα
 τὸν τῶν ὄλων καὶ ἀγένητον καὶ ἄφθαρτον ἐπιγράφεται ὄντως, ἡ δὲ πάλιν θεὸν ἀποδοκιμάζουσα
 τὸν μηδ’ αὐτῷ βοηθῆσαι ἰκανὸν νοῦν σύμμαχον ἐπισπᾶται πλημμελῶς.
- 32 X. Τούτου χάριν καὶ Μωυσῆς φησιν ὅτι “ ἐὰν <ἐν> τῷ διορύγματι εὐρεθῆ ὁ κλέπτης καὶ πληγείς ἀποθάνῃ, οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ φόνος· ἐὰν δὲ καὶ ὁ ἥλιος ἀνατείλῃ ἐπ’ αὐτῷ, ἔνοχός ἐστιν, ἀνταπο-

° See App. pp. 482, 483.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 28-32

shown; let us consider now where he hides himself. "In the midst," it says, "of the wood of the garden" (Gen. iii. 8), that is in the centre of the mind, which in its turn is the centre of what we may call the garden of the whole soul: for he that runs away from God takes refuge in himself. There are two minds, that of the universe, which is God, and the individual mind. He that flees from his own mind flees for refuge to the Mind of all things. For he that abandons his own mind acknowledges all that makes the human mind its standard to be naught, and he refers all things to God. On the other hand he that runs away from God declares Him to be the cause of nothing, and himself to be the cause of all things that come into being. The view, for instance, is widely current that all things in the world tear along automatically independently of anyone to guide them, and that the human mind by itself established arts, professions, laws, customs, and rules of right treatment both of men and animals on the part of the state and in our conduct whether as individual persons or as members of communities. But thou perceivest, O my soul, the difference of the two opinions; for the one turns its back on the particular being, created and mortal mind, and whole-heartedly puts itself under the patronage of the universal Mind, uncreate and immortal; the other opinion on the contrary, rejects God, and by a grievous error calls in to share its warfare the mind that is insufficient even to help itself.

X. This is the ground for Moses' words, "If the thief be found where he has just broken through and be smitten and die, there is no blood-guiltiness for him<sup>a</sup>: but if the sun have risen upon him, (then he)

θανείται" (Exod. xxii. 1, 2). ἐὰν γὰρ τις τὸν ἐστῶτα καὶ ὑγιῆ καὶ ὀρθὸν διακόψῃ καὶ διέλη λόγον, ὃς θεῶ μόνῳ τὸ πάντα δύνασθαι μαρτυρεῖ, καὶ εὐρεθῆ ἐν τῷ διορύγματι τουτέστιν ἐν τῷ τετρημένῳ καὶ διηρημένῳ, ὃς τὸν ἴδιον νοῦν ἐνεργοῦντα οἶδεν, ἀλλ' οὐ θεόν, κλέπτῃς ἐστὶ τὰ

33 ἀλλότρια ἀφαιρούμενος· θεοῦ γὰρ τὰ πάντα κτήματα, ὥστε ὁ ἑαυτῷ τι προσνέμων τὰ ἑτέρου νοσφίζεται καὶ πληγὴν ἔχει παγχάλεπον καὶ δυσίατον, οἷσιν, πρᾶγμα ἀμαθίας καὶ ἀπαιδευσίας συγγενές. τὸν δὲ πλήττοντα παρησύχασεν· οὐ

[94] γὰρ ἐστὶν ἕτερος τοῦ πληττομένου· ἀλλ' ὡσπερ ὁ τρίβων ἑαυτὸν καὶ τρίβεται καὶ ὁ ἐκτείνων ἑαυτὸν καὶ ἐκτείνεται—τὴν τε γὰρ τοῦ δρῶντος δύναμιν καὶ τὸ τοῦ ὑπομένουτος πάθος αὐτὸς<sup>1</sup> ἐκδέχεται—οὕτως ὁ κλέπτων τὰ θεοῦ καὶ ἑαυτῷ ἐπιγράφων ὑπὸ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ ἀθεότητός τε καὶ

34 οἰήσεως αἰκίζεται. εἴθε μέντοι πληχθεὶς ἀποθάνοι, τουτέστιν ἄπρακτος διατελέσειεν· ἦττον γὰρ ἀμαρτάνειν δόξει. τῆς γὰρ κακίας ἢ μὲν ἐν σχέσει θεωρεῖται, ἢ δὲ ἐν κινήσει θεωρεῖται· νεύει δὲ πρὸς τὰς τῶν ἀποτελεσμάτων ἐκπληρώσεις ἢ ἐν τῷ κινεῖσθαι, διὸ καὶ χείρων τῆς κατὰ σχέσιν

35 ἐστίν. ἐὰν οὖν ἢ διάνοια ἀποθάνῃ ἢ δοξάζουσα αὐτὴν αἰτίαν τῶν γινομένων, ἀλλὰ μὴ θεόν, τουτέστιν ἡρεμήσῃ καὶ συσταλῆ, οὐκ ἐστὶν αὐτῇ φόνος· οὐκ ἀνήρηκε τελέως τὸ ἔμψυχον δόγμα τὸ

<sup>1</sup> ? αὐτὸς.

<sup>a</sup> Or "comes to pass."

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 32-35

is liable, he shall die in requital" (Exod. xxii. 1 f.). For if a man cleave and break through the tenet that stands firm in its soundness and uprightness, testifying of unlimited power as belonging to God alone, and he be found where he has broken through, that is, in the pierced and cloven doctrine that is conscious of a man's own mind at work but not of God, he is a thief abstracting what belongs to another ; for all things are God's possessions, so that he who assigns anything to himself is appropriating what is another's, and he receives a blow grievous and hard to be healed, even self-conceit, a thing akin to boorish ignorance. Moses does not make distinct mention of the man who strikes, for he is no other than the man who is struck ; just as the man who rubs himself is also rubbed, and the man who stretches himself is also stretched ; for in his own person he is at the same time active and passive, employs the force and submits to its effect. Even so he that steals what is God's and assigns it to himself, is the victim of the outrage inflicted by his own impiety and self-conceit. A good thing it would be should he die when struck, that is to say permanently fail of the accomplishment of his purpose ; for he must then be held to be less a sinner. For wickedness presents itself now as stationary, now as moving. It is wickedness in motion that is ripe for filling up its full measure by carrying its designs to completion, and so it is worse than stationary wickedness. If, therefore, the understanding which fancies itself and not God to be the cause of all that comes into existence <sup>a</sup> die, that is, shrink into inactivity, blood-guiltiness does not pertain to it ; it has not gone the full length of θεῶ τὰς ἀπάσας δυνάμεις ἐπιγράφον· ἐὰν δὲ ἀνατείλῃ ὁ ἥλιος, τουτέστιν ὁ φαινόμενος λαμπρὸς νοῦς ἐν ἡμῖν, καὶ δόξῃ πάντα διορᾶν καὶ πάντα βραβεύειν καὶ μηδὲν ἐκφεύγειν ἑαυτόν, ἔνοχός ἐστιν, ἀνταποθανεῖται τοῦ ἐμφύχου δόγματος ὃ ἀνείλε, καθ' ὃ μόνος αἰτιός ἐστιν ὁ θεός, εὐρισκόμενος ἄπρακτος καὶ νεκρὸς ὄντως αὐτός, ἀψύχου καὶ θνητοῦ καὶ πλημμελοῦς δόγματος εἰσηγητῆς γεγενημένος.

PHILO

36 XI. Παρὸ καὶ καταρᾶται ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος τιθέντι ἐν ἀποκρύφῳ γλυπτὸν ἢ χωνευτόν, ἔργον χειρῶν τεχνίτου (Deut. xxvii. 15). τί γὰρ τὰς φαύλας δόξας, ὅτι ποιός ἐστιν ὁ θεὸς ὡς καὶ τὰ γλυπτὰ ὁ ἄποιος, ὅτι φθαρτὸς ὡς τὰ χωνευτὰ ὁ ἄφθαρτος, ταμιεύεις καὶ θησαυρίζεις, ὦ διάνοια, ἐν σαυτῇ, ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰς μέσον προφέρεις, ἵν' ὑπὸ τῶν ἀσκητῶν τῆς ἀληθείας ἂ χρῆ διδαχθῆς; οἷε μὲν γὰρ τεχνική τις εἶναι, ὅτι κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας ἀμούσους πιθανότηας μεμελέτηκας, ἄτεχνος δὲ ἀνευρίσκη νόσον χαλεπὴν ψυχῆς ἀμαθίαν οὐκ ἐθέλουσα θεραπεύεσθαι.

37 XII. "Ὅτι δὲ ὁ φαῦλος εἰς τὸν σποράδα νοῦν ἑαυτοῦ καταδύεται φεύγων τὸν ὄντα, μαρτυρήσει Μωυσῆς ὁ "πατάξας τὸν Αἰγύπτιον καὶ κρύψας ἐν τῇ ἄμμῳ" (Exod. ii. 12), ὅπερ ἦν, συλλογισάμενος τὸν προστατεῖν λέγοντα <τὰ> τοῦ

abolishing the living doctrine which ascribes to God the totality of powers. But if the sun shall have risen, that is the mind that shines so brilliantly in us, and shall have conceived the notion that it discerns all things, and decides all things, and that nothing ever escapes it, he is guilty, he shall die in requital for the living doctrine which he destroyed, which acknowledges God as the sole Cause. For he is found futile and dead indeed in himself; he has come forward as the author of a lifeless, mortal, and erroneous doctrine.

XI. In keeping with this the sacred word pronounces a curse on one setting up in secret a graven or molten image, the work of the hands of the craftsman (Deut. xxvii. 15). For why, O mind, dost thou hoard and treasure in thyself those wrong opinions, that God is as the graven images are, of this or that kind, God the Being that is without kind, and that He the incorruptible is, as the molten images are, corruptible? Why dost thou not rather bring them forth into the open, to the end that thou mayest be taught the things which it behoves thee to learn from those who study the truth? For thou fanciest thyself one versed in science because thou hast conned over methods of persuasion unworthy of an educated man, wherewith to combat the truth. But thy science proves itself no science, in that thou refuseth to submit to healing treatment of thy soul's sore malady of ignorance.

XII. That the bad man sinks down into his own incoherent mind as he strives to avoid Him that is, we shall learn from Moses who "smote the Egyptian and hid him in the sand" (Exod. ii. 12). This means that he took full account of the man who maintains

PHILO

σώματος καὶ μηδὲν τὰ ψυχῆς νομίζοντα καὶ τέλος 38 ἡγούμενον τὰς ἡδονάς· κατανοήσας γὰρ τὸν πόνον τοῦ τὸν θεὸν ὀρώντος, ὃν ἐπιτίθησιν αὐτῷ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῆς Αἰγύπτου, ἢ τῶν παθῶν ἡγεμονίς κακία, ὄρα τὸν Αἰγύπτιον ἄνθρωπον, τὸ ἀνθρώπειον καὶ
 ἐπίκτηρον πάθος, τύπτοντα καὶ αἰκιζόμενον τὸν
 ὀρώντα, περιβλεψάμενος δὲ τὴν ὅλην ψυχὴν ὡδε
 κάκεισε καὶ μηδένα ἰδὼν ἐστῶτα, ὅτι μὴ τὸν ὄντα
 θεόν, τὰ δ' ἄλλα κλονούμενα καὶ σαλευόμενα, |
 [95] πατάξας καὶ συλλογισάμενος τὸν φιλήδονον κρύπτει ἐν τῷ σποράδι καὶ συμπεφορημένῳ<sup>1</sup> νῷ, ὃς συμφυΐας καὶ ἐνώσεως τῆς πρὸς τὸ καλὸν ἐστέρηται.
 39 οὗτος μὲν οὖν ἀποκέκρυπται εἰς αὐτόν· ὁ δὲ
 ἐναντίος τούτῳ φεύγει μὲν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, καταφεύγει δ' ἐπὶ τὸν τῶν ὄντων θεόν. XIII. διὸ καὶ φησιν· “ἐξήγαγεν αὐτὸν ἔξω καὶ εἶπεν Ἄναβλεψον εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ ἀρίθμησον τοὺς
 ἀστέρας” (Gen. xv. 5), οὓς ἐβουλόμεθα μὲν περιλαβεῖν καὶ περιαιθρῆσαι ἅπληστοι τῶν ἀρετῆς
 ὄντες ἐρώτων, ἀδυνατοῦμεν δὲ πλοῦτον ἀνα-40 μετρήσαι θεοῦ. ἀλλ' ὁμως χάρις τῷ φιλοδώρῳ, ὅτι οὕτω σπέρματα ἐν ψυχῇ βαλέσθαι φησὶ
 τηλαυγῇ καὶ λαμπρᾷ καὶ δι' ὅλων νοερά ὡς τοὺς ἀστέρας ἐν οὐρανῷ. οὐ παρέργως δὲ πρόσκειται
 τῷ “ἐξήγαγεν αὐτὸν” τὸ “ἔξω”; τίς γὰρ
 ἔνδον ἐξάγεται; ἀλλὰ μήποτε ὁ λέγει τοιοῦτόν
 ἐστίν· ἐξήγαγεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ ἐξωτάτω χωρίον, οὐκ εἰς τι τῶν ἐκτός, ὃ δύναται ὑπ' ἄλλων περι-
 ἔχεσθαι· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐν ταῖς οἰκίαις τοῦ θαλάμου

<sup>1</sup> συμπεφ. from Mangey's conjecture.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Exod. ii. 11.

that the things of the body have the pre-eminence and holds the things of the soul to be naught, and regards pleasures as the end and aim of life. For having noted the toil<sup>a</sup> imposed by the king of Egypt on him who sees God—and the king is wickedness whose lead the passions follow—he sees the Egyptian man, that is, human and perishable passion, beating and outrageously treating the seeing one; and having looked round upon the whole soul in this direction and in that, and seen no one standing, save God who is, but all other things tossing in wild confusion, after smiting and thoroughly reckoning up the lover of pleasure, he hides him in his mind, which is a congeries of disconnected grains, devoid of cohesion and union with the beautiful and noble. So this man has been hidden away in himself. But the man of a character the reverse of his flies indeed from himself but takes refuge in the God of those that are. XIII. And for this reason he says, “He led him forth abroad and said, Look up to heaven and count the stars” (Gen. xv. 5). These we would fain take in in one all-encompassing view, being insatiable in our love of virtue, but we are powerless to take the measure of the riches of God. Yet thanks be to the Lover of Giving, for telling us in this way that He has set for Himself in the soul seeds far-shining, radiant, full charged with meaning, as he has set the stars in heaven. But is not “abroad” a superfluous addition to “led him forth”? For who is ever led forth within? But it may be that this is what he means; He led him forth to outermost space, not just to one of the outside spaces, one that can be encompassed by others. For just as in our houses the women’s apartments have the men’s

PHILO

- ἐκτὸς μὲν ἔστιν ὁ ἀνδρῶν, ἐντὸς δὲ ὁ αὐλῶν, καὶ ἡ αὐλειος ἐκτὸς μὲν τῆς αὐλῆς, εἴσω δὲ τοῦ πυλῶνος, οὕτως καὶ ἐπὶ ψυχῆς δύναται τὸ ἐκτὸς
- 41 τινος ἐντὸς εἶναι [τοῦ] ἑτέρου. οὕτως οὖν ἀκουστέον· τὸν νοῦν εἰς τὸ ἐξώτατον ἐξήγαγε. τί γὰρ ὄφελος ἦν καταλιπεῖν αὐτὸν τὸ σῶμα, καταφυγεῖν δὲ ἐπ' αἰσθησιν; τί δὲ αἰσθήσει μὲν ἀποτάξασθαι, λόγῳ δὲ ὑποστεῖλαι τῷ γεγωνῶ; χρῆ γὰρ τὸν μέλλοντα νοῦν ἐξάγεσθαι καὶ ἐν ἐλευθερίᾳ ἀφίεσθαι πάντων ὑπεκστῆναι, σωματικῶν ἀναγκῶν, αἰσθητικῶν ὀργάνων, λόγων σοφιστικῶν, πιθανοτήτων, τὰ τελευταῖα καὶ ἑαυτοῦ.
- 42 XIV. διὸ καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις αὐχεῖ λέγων· “ κύριος ὁ θεὸς τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ ὁ θεὸς τῆς γῆς, ὃς ἔλαβέ με ἐκ τοῦ οἴκου τοῦ πατρὸς μου ” (Gen. xxiv. 7)· οὐ γὰρ ἔστι <τὸν> κατοικοῦντα ἐν σώματι καὶ τῷ θνητῷ γένει δυνατὸν θεῷ συγγενέσθαι, ἀλλὰ τὸν <ὄν> ἐκ τοῦ δεσμωτηρίου θεὸς διαρρύεται.
- 43 οὐ ἔνεκα καὶ ἡ τῆς ψυχῆς χαρὰ Ἰσαάκ, ὅταν ἀδολεσχῆ καὶ ἰδιάζῃ θεῷ, ἐξέρχεται ἀπολείπων ἑαυτὸν καὶ τὸν ἴδιον νοῦν· “ ἐξῆλθε ” γάρ φησιν “ Ἰσαάκ ἀδολεσχῆσαι εἰς τὸ πεδίον τὸ πρὸς δείλης ” (Gen. xxiv. 63). καὶ Μωυσῆς δὲ ὁ προφητικὸς λόγος φησὶν· “ ὅταν ἐξέλθω τὴν πόλιν, ” τὴν ψυχὴν—πόλις γὰρ ἔστι καὶ αὕτη τοῦ ζώου νόμους διδοῦσα καὶ ἔθη—“ ἐκπετάσω τὰς χεῖρας ” (Exod. ix. 29), καὶ ἀναπετάσω καὶ ἐξαπλώσω πάσας τὰς πράξεις θεῷ μάρτυρα καλῶν καὶ ἐπίσκοπον ἐκάστης, ὃν κακία κρύπτει

quarters outside them and the passage inside them, and the courtyard door is outside the court but inside the gateway, even so, in the case of the soul too, that which is outside one part can be inside another part. We must take what he says in this way ; He led forth the mind to the outermost bound. For what advantage would it have been for it to leave the body behind and take refuge in sense-perception ? What gain in renouncing sense-perception and taking shelter under the uttered word ? For it behoves the mind that would be led forth and let go free to withdraw itself from the influence of everything, the needs of the body, the organs of sense, specious arguments, the plausibilities of rhetoric, last of all itself.

XIV. For this reason he glories elsewhere saying " The Lord, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, who took me out of my father's house " (Gen. xxiv. 7) ; for it is not possible that he whose abode is in the body and the mortal race should attain to being with God ; this is possible only for him whom God rescues out of the prison. For this reason Isaac also, the soul's gladness, when he meditates and is alone with God, goes forth, quitting himself and his own mind ; for it says, " Isaac went forth into the plain to meditate as evening was drawing near " (Gen. xxiv. 63). Yes, and Moses, the word of prophecy, says, " When I go forth out of the city," the soul to wit (for this too is the city of the living being giving him laws and customs), " I will spread out my hands " (Exod. ix. 29), and I will spread open and unfold all my doings to God, calling Him to be witness and overseer of each one of them, from whom evil cannot hide itself,

PHILO

[96] τεσθαι οὐ πέφυκεν, | ἔξαπλοῦσθαι δὲ καὶ φανερώσ
 ὄρασθαι.

44 "Όταν μέντοι διὰ πάντων ἡ ψυχὴ καὶ λόγων καὶ ἔργων ἔξαπλωθῆ καὶ ἐκθειασθῆ, παύονται τῶν
 αἰσθήσεων αἱ φωναὶ καὶ πάντες οἱ ὀχληροὶ καὶ
 δυσώνυμοι ἤχοι· φωνεῖ γὰρ καὶ καλεῖ τὸ μὲν
 ὄρατὸν τὴν ὄρασιν ἐφ' ἑαυτό, ἡ δὲ φωνὴ τὴν
 ἀκοήν, ὁ δὲ ἀτμὸς τὴν ὄσφρησιν, καὶ συνόλως τὸ αἰσθητὸν τὴν αἴσθησιν ἐφ' ἑαυτὸ προσκαλεῖται·
 ταῦτα δὲ πάντα παύεται, ὅταν ἐξελθοῦσα τὴν
 ψυχῆς πόλιν ἡ διάνοια θεῶ τὰς ἑαυτῆς πράξεις 45 καὶ διανοήσεις ἀνάψῃ. XV. καὶ γὰρ εἰσιν "αἱ χεῖρες Μωυσεῖ βαρεῖαι" (Exod. xvii. 12)· ἐπειδὴ
 γὰρ αἱ τοῦ φαύλου πράξεις ἀνεμιαῖοί τε καὶ
 κοῦφαι, γένοιντ' ἂν αἱ τοῦ σοφοῦ βαρεῖαι καὶ ἀκίνητοι οὐδ' εὐσάλευτοι· παρὸ καὶ στηρίζονται
 ὑπὸ τε Ἄαρών, τοῦ λόγου, καὶ Ὡρ, ὃ ἐστι φῶς·
 οὐδὲν <δὲ> τῶν πραγμάτων φῶς ἐναργέστερόν
 ἐστὶν ἀληθείας· βούλεται οὖν διὰ συμβόλων σοὶ παραστήσαι, ὅτι αἱ τοῦ σοφοῦ πράξεις στηρίζονται
 ὑπὸ τῶν ἀναγκαιοτάτων λόγου τε καὶ ἀληθείας.
 διὸ καὶ Ἄαρὼν ὅταν τελευτᾷ, τουτέστιν ὅταν τελειωθῆ, εἰς Ὡρ, ὃ ἐστι φῶς, ἀνέρχεται (Num.
 xx. 25)· τὸ γὰρ τέλος τοῦ λόγου ἀλήθειά ἐστὶν ἡ
 φωτὸς τηλαυγεστέρα, εἰς ἣν σπουδάζει ὁ λόγος ἔλθειν.

46 Οὐχ ὄρας ὅτι καὶ τὴν παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ σκηνὴν (Exod. xxxiii. 7) λαβών, τουτέστι σοφίαν, ἐν ἣ κατασκηνοῖ καὶ ἐνοικεῖ ὁ σοφός, ἔπηξε καὶ ἐβεβαιώσατο καὶ κραταιῶς ἰδρύσατο, οὐκ ἐν τῷ
 σώματι, ἀλλ' ἐξω τούτου; παρεμβολῆ γὰρ αὐτὸ
 ἀπεικάζει, στρατοπέδῳ πολέμων καὶ κακῶν ὅσα

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 43-46

but is forced to remove all disguises and be plainly seen.

When the soul in all utterances and all actions has attained to perfect sincerity and godlikeness, the voices of the senses cease and all those abominable sounds that used to vex it. For the visible calls and summons the sense of sight to itself, and the voice calls the sense of hearing, and the perfume that of smell, and all round the object of sense invites the sense to itself. But all these cease when the mind goes forth from the city of the soul and finds in God the spring and aim of its own doings and intents.<sup>a</sup> XV. For truly are "the hands of Moses heavy" (Exod. xvii. 12); for inasmuch as the bad man's doings are light and windy, those of the wise man will be weighty and immovable and not easily shaken. Accordingly they are steadied by Aaron, the Word, and Hor, which is "Light"; and life has no clearer light than truth. The prophet's aim therefore is to show thee by means of symbols that the doings of the wise man are upheld by the most essential of all things, the Word and Truth. And so, when Aaron dies, that is, when he is made perfect, he goes up into Hor, which is "Light" (Numb. xx. 25); for the end of the Word is Truth, which casts a beam more far-reaching than light. To this it is the earnest endeavour of the Word to attain.

Mark you not, that when he had received from God (Exod. xxxiii. 7) the Tent, namely, wisdom, in which the wise man tabernacles and dwells, he fixed and made it fast and strongly established it, not in the body, but outside it? For to represent the body he uses the figure of a camp, the quarters of an army full of wars and all the evils that war

<sup>a</sup> Exod. ix. 29 is still being handled.

PHILO

- πόλεμος ἐργάζεται πληρεῖ, μετουσίαν εἰρήνης οὐκ ἔχοντι. “καὶ ἐκλήθη ἡ σκηνη μαρτυρίου,” σοφία μαρτυρουμένη ὑπὸ θεοῦ· καὶ γὰρ “πᾶς ὁ ζητῶν
- 47 κύριον ἐξεπορεύετο,” παγκάλως· εἰ γὰρ ζητεῖς θεόν, ὦ διάνοια, ἐξελθοῦσα ἀπὸ σαυτῆς ἀναζήτηι, μένουσα δὲ ἐν τοῖς σωματικοῖς ὄγκοις ἢ ταῖς κατὰ νοῦν οἰήσεσιν ἀζητήτως ἔχεις τῶν θείων, κἂν ἐπιμορφάζῃς ὅτι ζητεῖς· εἰ δὲ ζητοῦσα εὐρήσεις θεόν, ἄδηλον, πολλοῖς γὰρ οὐκ ἐφάνέρωσεν ἑαυτόν, ἀλλ’ ἀτελῆ τὴν σπουδὴν ἄχρι παντὸς ἔσχον· ἐξαρκεῖ μέντοι πρὸς μετουσίαν ἀγαθῶν καὶ ψιλὸν τὸ ζητεῖν μόνον, αἰ γὰρ αἰ ἐπὶ τὰ καλὰ ὄρμαί, κἂν τοῦ τέλους ἀτυχῶσι, τοὺς
- 48 χρωμένους προευφραίνουσιν. οὕτως ὁ μὲν φαῦλος ἀρετὴν γε φεύγων καὶ θεὸν ἀποκρυπτόμενος ἐπ’ ἀσθενῆ βοηθὸν καταφεύγει τὸν ἴδιον νοῦν, ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος ἔμπαλιν ἑαυτὸν ἀποδιδράσκων ἀνα-
- [97] στρέφει πρὸς τὴν τοῦ ἐνὸς ἐπίγνωσιν, | καλὸν δρόμον καὶ πάντων ἄριστον ἀγώνισμα τοῦτο νικῶν.
- 49 XVI. “Καὶ ἐκάλεσε κύριος ὁ θεὸς τὸν Ἀδὰμ καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ποῦ εἶ;” (Gen. iii. 9) διὰ τί μόνος καλεῖται ὁ Ἀδὰμ, συγκεκρυμμένης αὐτῷ καὶ τῆς γυναικός; λεκτέον οὖν πρῶτον, ὅτι καλεῖται ὁ νοῦς ὅπου ἦν, ὅταν ἔλεγχον λαμβάνῃ καὶ ἐπίστασιν τῆς τροπῆς· οὐ μόνον <δ’> αὐτὸς καλεῖται, ἀλλὰ καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις αὐτοῦ πᾶσαι, ἄνευ γὰρ τῶν δυνάμεων ὁ νοῦς καθ’ ἑαυτὸν γυμνὸς καὶ οὐδὲ ὧν εὐρίσκεται· μία δὲ τῶν δυνάμεων καὶ ἡ produces, a place that has no part in peace. "And it was called 'the tent of testimony,'" wisdom testified to by God. Yes, for "everyone that sought the Lord went out to it." Right finely is this said. For if thou art seeking God, O mind, go out from thyself and seek diligently; but if thou remainest amid the heavy encumbrances of the body or the self-conceits with which the understanding is familiar, though thou mayest have the semblance of a seeker, not thine is the quest for the things of God. But whether thou wilt find God when thou seekest is uncertain, for to many He has not manifested Himself, but their zeal has been without success all along. And yet the mere seeking by itself is sufficient to make us partakers of good things, for it always is the case that endeavours after noble things, even if they fail to attain their object, gladden in their very course those who make them. Thus it is that while the bad man, who shuns virtue and hides himself from God, takes refuge in his own mind, a sorry resource, the good man, on the other hand, who runs away from himself, returns to the apprehension of the One, thus winning a noble race and proving victor in this grandest of all contests.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. ‘in the case in which it was.’ The sequel describes its case.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 46-49

XVI. "And the Lord God called Adam and said to him, 'Where art thou?'" (Gen. iii. 9). Why is Adam alone called, his wife having hid herself with him? Well, first of all we must say, that the mind is called even there where it was,<sup>a</sup> when it receives reproof and a check is given to its defection. But not only is the mind itself called, but all its faculties as well, for without its faculties the mind by itself is found naked and not even existent; and one of the faculties is sense-perception, the 50 αἰσθησις, ἣτις ἐστὶ γυνή. συγκέκληται οὖν τῷ Ἄδαμ τῷ νῶ καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αἰσθησις· ἰδίᾳ δ' αὐτὴν οὐ καλεῖ· διὰ τί; ὅτι ἄλογος οὖσα ἔλεγχον ἐξ ἑαυτῆς λαμβάνειν οὐ δύναται· οὔτε γὰρ ἡ ὄρασις οὔθ' ἡ ἀκοή οὔτε τις τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθήσεων διδακτὴ, ὥστε οὐ δύναται κατάληψιν πραγμάτων ποιήσασθαι· μόνων γὰρ σωμάτων διακριτικὴν εἰργάσατο αὐτὴν ὁ ἐργασάμενος· ὁ δὲ νοῦς ὁ διδασκόμενός ἐστιν, οὗ χάριν αὐτὸν ἀλλ' οὐ τὴν αἰσθησιν προκέκληται.

PHILO

51 XVII. Τὸ δὲ “ποῦ εἶ” πολλαχῶς ἐστὶν ἀποδοῦναι· ἄπαξ μὲν οὐ τὸ πευστικόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀποφαντικόν τὸ ἴσον τῷ “ἐν τόπῳ ὑπάρχεις” βαρυντονομένου τοῦ “ποῦ εἶ.” ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ὠήθης τὸν θεὸν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ περιπατεῖν καὶ ὑπὸ τούτου περιέχεσθαι, μάθε ὅτι <οὐκ> εὖ τοῦτο πέπονθας, καὶ ἄκουσον παρὰ τοῦ ἐπισταμένου θεοῦ ῥῆσιν ἀληθεστάτην, ὅτι ὁ μὲν θεὸς οὐχὶ που—οὐ γὰρ περιέχεται ἀλλὰ περιέχει τὸ πᾶν—τὸ δὲ γενόμενον ἐν τόπῳ, περιέχεσθαι γὰρ αὐτὸ ἀλλ' οὐ

52 περιέχειν ἀναγκαῖον. δεῦτερον δὲ τὸ λεγόμενον ἴσον ἐστὶ τούτῳ· ποῦ γέγονας, ὦ ψυχὴ; ἀνθ' οἷων ἀγαθῶν οἶα ἦρῃσαι κακά; καλέσαντός σε τοῦ θεοῦ πρὸς μετουσίαν ἀρετῆς κακίαν μετέρχῃ, καὶ τὸ τῆς ζωῆς ξύλον, τουτέστι σοφίας ἢ δυνήσῃ ζῆν, παρασχόντος εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν ἀμαθίας καὶ φθορᾶς ἐνεφορήθης, κακοδαιμονίαν τὸν ψυχῆς θάνατον εὐδαιμονίας τῆς ἀληθινῆς ζωῆς προ-

which is woman. Included then in the call of Adam, the mind, is that of sense-perception, the woman ; but God does not call her with a special call ; why ? because, being irrational, she has no capacity derived from herself to receive reproof. For neither sight nor hearing nor any of the senses is susceptible of instruction, so that it cannot perform the act of apprehending subjects. But He who made sense-perception made it capable of distinguishing between material forms only : but the mind it is that receives instruction, and that is why He challenged it but not sense-perception.

XVII. The words  $\pi\omicron\upsilon\ \epsilon\acute{\iota}$ , "Where art thou?" can be accounted for in many different ways, first as not being interrogative but declarative, as equivalent to "thou art in a place,"  $\pi\omicron\upsilon$  receiving the grave accent. For whereas thou thoughtest that God walked in the garden and was contained by it, learn that there was something amiss with thee in thinking this, and listen to a most true utterance from the mouth of God who knoweth, to the effect that God is not somewhere (for He is not contained but contains the universe), but that which came into being is in a place, for it must of necessity be contained but not contain.

A second account is this : What is said is equivalent to "Where hast thou arrived, O soul?" In the place of how great goods, what evils hast thou chosen for thyself? When God had invited thee to participate in virtue, art thou going after wickedness, and when He had provided for thy enjoyment the tree of life, that is of wisdom, whereby thou shouldst have power to live, didst thou gorge thyself with ignorance and corruption, preferring misery the soul's death to

PHILO

- 53 κρίνασα; τρίτον ἐστὶ τὸ πειστικόν, πρὸς
 ὃ δύο γένοιτ' ἂν ἀποκρίσεις· μία μὲν πυνθανο-μένω “ ποῦ εἶ ” ἢ “ οὐδαμοῦ, ” τόπον γὰρ οὐδένα
 ἔχει ἢ τοῦ φαύλου ψυχῆ, ᾧ ἐπιβήσεται ἢ ἐφ'
 οὗ ἰδρυθήσεται, παρὸ καὶ ἄτοπος λέγεται εἶναι ὁ φαῦλος—ἄτοπον δέ ἐστι κακὸν δύσθετον— τοιοῦτος
 δ' ὁ μὴ ἀστεῖος, σαλεύων καὶ κλονούμενος ἀεὶ καὶ
 πνεύματος τρόπον ἀστάτου διαφερόμενος, βεβαίου
 54 τὸ | παράπαν οὐδεμιᾶς γνώμης ἑταῖρος ὢν· ἑτέρα
 [98] δὲ γένοιτ' ἂν ἀπόκρισις τοιάδε, ἧ κέχρηται καὶ ὁ Ἄδάμ· ποῦ εἶμι ἄκουε· ὅπου οἱ τὸν θεὸν ἰδεῖν
 ἀδυνατοῦντες, ὅπου οἱ θεοῦ οὐκ ἀκούοντες, ὅπου
 οἱ τὸ αἴτιον ἀποκρυπτόμενοι, ὅπου οἱ φεύγοντες ἀρετήν, ὅπου οἱ γυμνοὶ σοφίας, ὅπου οἱ φοβούμενοι καὶ τρέμοντες ὑπ' ἀνανδρίας καὶ δειλίας
 ψυχικῆς· ὅταν γὰρ λέγῃ “ τῆς φωνῆς σου ἤκουσα
 ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ καὶ ἐφοβήθην, ὅτι γυμνός εἶμι, καὶ ἐκρύβην ” (Gen. iii. 10), πάντα τὰ εἰρημένα
 παρίστησιν, ὡς καὶ ἐν τοῖς προτέροις διὰ μακρο-55 τέρων λόγων ἀπεδείξαμεν. XVIII. καίτοι γυμνὸς οὐκ ἔστι νῦν ὁ Ἄδάμ· “ ἐποίησαν ἑαυτοῖς περι-ζώματα ” ὀλίγω πρότερον εἴρηται· ἀλλὰ καὶ διὰ
 τούτου βούλεται σε διδάξαι, ὅτι γυμνότητα οὐ τὴν τοῦ σώματος παραλαμβάνει, ἀλλὰ καθ' ἣν ὁ
 νοῦς ἄμοιρος καὶ γυμνὸς ἀρετῆς ἀνευρίσκεται.
 56 “ Ἡ γυνή ” φησὶν “ ἦν ἔδωκας μετ' ἐμοῦ, αὕτη μοι ἔδωκεν ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, καὶ ἔφαγον ” (Gen.

happiness the real life? Thirdly, there is the interrogative sense, to which two answers might be made. One answer to the question, "Where art thou?" is "Nowhere," for the soul of the bad man has no place where to find footing or upon which to settle. Owing to this the bad man is said to be "placeless"—"placeless" is used of an evil that defies placing (in any known category). Such is the man that is not good, always restless and unstable, drifting this way and that like a chopping wind, attaching himself absolutely to no fixed principle whatever. A second answer might be given to this effect. Adam in fact gave it. "Hear where I am; where those are who are incapable of seeing God; where those are who do not listen to God; where those are who hide themselves from the Author of all things; where are those that shun virtue, where are the destitute of wisdom, where those are who owing to unmanliness and cowardice of soul live in fear and trembling. For when Adam says, "I heard Thy voice in the garden and was afraid, because I am naked, and I hid myself" (Gen. iii. 10), he discovers all the traits just enumerated, as I have fully shown in former sections. XVIII. Nevertheless Adam is not naked now: "they made for themselves girdles" are the words that occur a little further back. Even by this it is the prophet's wish to teach thee, that he understands by nakedness not that of the body, but that by which the mind is found unprovided and unclothed with virtue.

"The woman," he says, "whom Thou gavest with me, she gave me of the tree, and I ate" (Gen. iii. 12). It is well his not saying, "the

PHILO

iii. 12). εὖ τὸ μὴ φάναι, ἢ γυνὴ ἦν ἔδωκας ἐμοί, ἀλλὰ “ μετ’ ἐμοῦ” οὐ γὰρ ἐμοὶ ὡς κτῆμα τὴν αἴσθησιν ἔδωκας, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτὴν ἀφήκας ἄνετον καὶ ἐλευθέραν, κατὰ τινα τρόπον οὐχ ὑπείκουσαν τοῖς τῆς ἐμῆς διανοίας ἐπιτάγμασιν· ἐὰν γοῦν βουλευθῆ ὁ νοῦς προστάξει τῇ ὁράσει μὴ ἰδεῖν, οὐδὲν ἦττον αὕτη τὸ ὑποκείμενον ὄψεται· καὶ ἡ ἀκοὴ μέντοι προσπεσούσης φωνῆς ἀντιλήψεται πάντως, κἂν ὁ νοῦς φιλονεικῶν διακελεύηται αὐτῇ μὴ ἀκούειν· καὶ μὴν ἢ γε ὄσφρησις ἀτμῶν χωρησάντων εἰς αὐτὴν ὄσφρήσεται, κἂν ὁ νοῦς ἀπ-57 αγορευῆ μὴ ἀντιλαβέσθαι. διὰ τοῦτο ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ἔδωκεν αἴσθησιν τῷ ζώῳ, ἀλλὰ μετὰ τοῦ ζώου· τὸ δὲ τοῦτ’ ἐστίν· ἅπαντα αἴσθησις μετὰ τοῦ ἡμετέρου νοῦ γνωρίζει καὶ ἅμα αὐτῷ· οἷον ἡ ὄρασις ἅμα τῷ νῷ ἐπιβάλλει τῷ ὁρατῷ· εἶδέ τε γὰρ ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς τὸ σῶμα καὶ εὐθύς ὁ νοῦς κατέλαβε τὸ ὁραθέν, ὅτι μέλαν ἢ λευκὸν ἢ ὠχρὸν ἢ φοινικοῦν ἢ τρίγωνον ἢ τετράγωνον ἢ στρογγύλον ἢ τὰ ἄλλα χρώματά τε καὶ σχήματα· καὶ πάλιν ἡ ἀκοὴ ἐπλήχθη ὑπὸ τῆς φωνῆς καὶ μετ’ αὐτῆς ὁ νοῦς· τεκμήριον δέ, ἔκρινεν εὐθύς τὴν φωνήν, ὅτι λεπτὴ ἢ μέγεθος ἔχουσα ἢ ἐμμελῆς καὶ εὐρυθμος καὶ πάλιν εἰ ἐκμελῆς τε καὶ οὐκ ἑναρμόνιος· καὶ ταῦτὸν ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθήσεων εὐρίσκεται.
 58 πάνυ δὲ καλῶς καὶ τὸ προσθεῖναι τὸ “ αὕτη μοι ἔδωκεν ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου”· τὸν γὰρ ξύλινον καὶ αἰσθητὸν ὄγκον τῷ νῷ οὐδεὶς δίδωσιν, ὅτι μὴ αἴσθησις· τίς γὰρ ἔδωκε τῇ διανοίᾳ γνωρίσαι τὸ σῶμα ἢ τὸ λευκόν; οὐχ ἡ ὄψις; τίς δὲ τὴν

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 56-58

woman whom Thou gavest to me," but "with me"; for Thou gavest not sense to me as a possession, but it too Thou didst leave free and at large, in some respects not subservient to the behests of my understanding. For instance, should the mind choose to bid the sight not to see, the sight will none the less see what lies before it. The hearing again, when a sound has reached it, will assuredly give it entrance, even if the mind resolutely command it not to hear. And the sense of smell, when odours have found their way in to it, will smell them, even though the mind forbid it to welcome them. Owing to this God did not give sense-perception to the living being, but with the living being. What "giving with" means is this. Sense becomes aware of all things with our mind and simultaneously with it. For instance, the visible object arrests simultaneously the attention of the sight and of the mind; for the eye caught sight of the material substance, and at once the mind took in the thing that had been seen, took in that it was black or white or yellow or red or triangular or square or round, or some other colour or shape. Again the hearing received the impression of the sound and the mind with it: in proof that it did, it immediately judged of the sound, pronouncing it weak or loud, tuneful and rhythmical, and on the other hand whether it is out of tune and a discord. We find the same thing in the case of the other senses. Quite excellent is the addition of the words "she gave me of the tree." For no one, except sense-perception, ever gives to the mind the tree with its sensibly-discerned bulk. For who gave to the mind the possibility of recognizing the body or whiteness? Did

PHILO

φωνήν; οὐχ ἡ ἀκοή; τίς δὲ τὸν ἀτμόν; οὐχ ἡ
 [99] ὄσφρησις; τίς δὲ τὸν χυλόν; οὐχ ἡ γεῦσις; | τίς
 δὲ τὸ τραχὺ καὶ μαλακόν; οὐχ ἡ ἀφή; ὀρθῶς
 οὖν καὶ πάνυ ἀληθῶς εἴρηται ὑπὸ τοῦ νοῦ, ὅτι τὰς τῶν σωμάτων ἀντιλήψεις δίδωσί μοι μόνη ἡ αἴσθησις.

59 XIX. “Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς τῇ γυναικί Τί τοῦτο
 ἐποίησας; καὶ εἶπεν Ὁ ὄφιν ἠπάτησέ με, καὶ
 ἔφαγον” (Gen. iii. 13). ἄλλο μὲν πυνθάνεται
 τῆς αἰσθήσεως ὁ θεός, ἄλλο δὲ αὐτῇ ἀποκρίνεται·
 πυνθάνεται μὲν γάρ τι περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρός, ἡ δὲ οὐ
 περὶ τούτου φησίν, ἀλλά τι περὶ ἑαυτῆς, λέγουσα 60 ὅτι ἔφαγον, οὐχ ὅτι ἔδωκα. μήποτ’ οὖν ἀλληγοροῦντες λύσομεν τὸ ἀπορηθὲν καὶ δεῖξομεν τὴν γυναικα εὐθυβόλως πρὸς τὸ πύσμα ἀποκρивоμένην. ἀνάγκη γάρ ἐστὶν αὐτῆς φαγούσης καὶ τὸν ἄνδρα φαγεῖν· ὅταν γὰρ ἡ αἴσθησις ἐπιβάλλουσα τῷ αἰσθητῷ πληρωθῇ τῆς αὐτοῦ φαντασίας, εὐθύς καὶ ὁ νοῦς συμβέβληκε καὶ ἀντελάβετο καὶ
 τρόπον τινὰ τροφῆς τῆς ἀπ’ ἐκείνου πεπλήρωται.
 τοῦτ’ οὖν φησιν· ἄκουσα δέδωκα τῷ ἀνδρί· προσ-
 βαλούσης γάρ μου τῷ ὑποκειμένῳ, ὄξυκίνητος 61 ὢν αὐτὸς ἐφαντασιώθη καὶ ἐτυπώθη. XX. παρα-τήρει δ’ ὅτι ὁ μὲν ἀνὴρ λέγει τὴν γυναικα δεδω-κέναι, ἡ δὲ γυνὴ οὐχὶ τὸν ὄφιν δεδωκέναι, ἀλλὰ ἠπατηκέναι· ἴδιον γὰρ αἰσθήσεως μὲν τὸ διδόναι, ἡδονῆς δὲ τῆς ποικίλης καὶ ὀφιώδους τὸ ἀπατᾶν
 καὶ παρακρούεσθαι· οἷον τὸ λευκὸν τῇ φύσει καὶ

---

* Or “ Why didst thou do this ? ”

not sight? Who gave it the sound? Did not the hearing? Who the odour? Did not the sense of smell? Who the savour? Did not the taste? Who the rough and the soft? Did not the touch? Rightly and with perfect truth was it said by the mind 'sense-perception alone gives me opportunities of apprehending bodies.'

XIX. "And God said to the woman, 'What is this thou hast done?'<sup>a</sup> And she said, 'The serpent beguiled me and I ate'" (Gen. iii. 13). God puts a question to sense-perception touching one point; she gives an answer touching another point: for God asks something about the man; she speaks not about him, but says something about herself, for her words are "I ate," not "I gave." Perhaps, then as we read the passage figuratively, we shall solve the puzzle and show that the woman gives a very pertinent answer to the question put to her. For it is a matter of necessity that when she ate, the man too should eat. For when sense-perception, meeting with the object of sense, is filled with the presentation of it, forthwith the mind also is in contact, takes hold and in a way absorbs the sustenance which it provides. This, then, is what she says: My giving it to the man was by no act of will, for even as I struck upon the object, he (so swift is he to move) received the image and impression of it himself. XX. Now observe that, whereas the man says that the woman gave, the woman says not that the serpent gave but that he beguiled; for to give is characteristic of sense-perception but to cheat and beguile of pleasure with its serpent-like subtilty. For instance, sense-perception gives to the mind that which is by its nature white and that which is

PHILO

τὸ μέλαν καὶ τὸ θερμὸν καὶ τὸ ψυχρὸν δίδωσιν ἢ αἰσθησις τῷ νῷ, οὐχὶ ἀπατώσα ἀλλὰ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν· τοιαῦτα γὰρ ἐστὶ τὰ ὑποκείμενα, οἷα καὶ ἡ
 ἀπ' αὐτῶν προσπίπτουσα φαντασία, κατὰ τοὺς πλείστους τῶν μὴ φυσικώτερον φυσιολογούντων·
 ἡ δὲ ἡδονὴ οὐχ οἶόν ἐστι τὸ ὑποκείμενον, τοιοῦτον
 αὐτὸ γνωρίζει τῇ διανοίᾳ, ἀλλ' ἐπιψεύδεται τέχνη
 τὸ ἀλυσιτελὲς εἰς συμφέροντος τάξιν ἐμβιβάζουσα· 62 ὥσπερ καὶ τῶν ἐταιρῶν τὰς εἰδεχθεῖς ἰδεῖν ἔστι
 φαρματτούσας καὶ ὑπογραφομένας τὴν ὄψιν, ἵνα
 τὸ περὶ αὐτὰς αἰσχος ἐπικρύψωσι, καὶ τὸν ἀκρατῆ
 ἐπὶ τὴν γαστρὸς νενευκότα ἡδονήν· οὗτος τὸν
 πολὺν ἄκρατον καὶ τῶν σιτίων τὴν παρασκευὴν
 ἀποδέχεται ὡς ἀγαθόν, βλαπτόμενος καὶ τὸ σῶμα 63 καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν ἀπ' αὐτῶν· πάλιν τοὺς ἐρώοντας
 ἰδεῖν ἔστι πολλάκις ἐπὶ γυναιῶν αἰσχίστων ὀφθῆναι
 ἐπιμεμηνότας, τῆς ἡδονῆς ἀπατώσεως καὶ μονονουχί
 διεξιούσης, ὅτι εὐμορφία καὶ εὐχροια καὶ εὐσαρκία
 καὶ τῶν μερῶν ἀναλογία περὶ τὰς πάντα τὰ ἐναντία
 [100] τούτοις ἐχούσας ἐστί· τὰς γοῦν πρὸς | ἀλήθειαν
 ἀμέμπτω κεχρημένας κάλλει παρορῶσιν, ἐκείνων 64 δὲ ὧν εἶπον κατατήκονται. πᾶσα οὖν ἀπάτη οἰκειοτάτη ἡδονῇ, δόσις δὲ αἰσθήσει· ἡ μὲν γὰρ
 σοφίζεται καὶ παράγει τὸν νοῦν, οὐχ ὅποια τὰ
 ὑποκείμενά ἐστι δηλοῦσα, ἀλλ' ὅποια οὐκ ἔστιν,
 ἡ δὲ αἰσθησις ἀκραιφνῶς δίδωσι τὰ σώματα οὕτως,
 ὡς ἔχει φύσεως ἐκείνα, πλάσματος καὶ τέχνης ἐκτός.

<sup>a</sup> "I should say the reference is to the philosophers in the succession who held that αἰσθησις was true, Empedocles, probably Leucippus, and Epicurus himself, but not (e.g.) Parmenides or Democritus."—CYRIL BAILEY. In this case perhaps φυσικώτερον may be understood in the same sense as 342

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 61-64

black, that which is hot and that which is cold, quite truthfully and with no deception.<sup>a</sup> For, in the opinion of most people who do not overdo precision in their natural philosophy, objects are such as the appearance of them which meets the eye. But pleasure does not report the object to the mind such as it is, but artfully falsifies it, representing as something advantageous that which is of no benefit at all : even as it is possible to see repulsive courtesans applying pigments to their faces and painting under their eyes to conceal their ugliness. We can note also the immoderate man inclined to gluttony : this man welcomes as a good thing the abundance of strong drink and the well-spread board, though taking harm from them both in body and soul. Again we may see those who are in love, often quite crazy over women most hideous to behold, while pleasure beguiles them ; you might almost say that she assures them of the beauty of form and colouring, the fullness and symmetry, that mark those who are characterized by traits the very reverse of these. Indeed they overlook those endowed with really faultless beauty, and pine for those whom I have mentioned. All kinds of consummate deception, then, are most proper to pleasure, while giving is the characteristic of sense-perception : pleasure outwits and misleads the mind, showing objects not as they are, but as they are not, whereas sense-perception simply gives the material forms just as nature has made them, without trickery or counterfeit.

in De Post. 7 (see note), where φυσικοί ἄνδρες are those who can discern the higher truths that underlie nature. Thus the whole phrase (τῶν μὴ φυσικώτερον φυσιολογούντων) means something like "materialistic philosophers."

PHILO

- 65 XXI. " Καὶ εἶπε κύριος ὁ θεὸς τῷ ὄφει "Οτι ἐποίησας τοῦτο, ἐπικατάρατος σὺ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν κτηνῶν καὶ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν θηρίων τῆς γῆς. ἐπὶ τῷ στήθει καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ πορεύσῃ, καὶ γῆν φάγεσαι πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ζωῆς σου. καὶ ἔχθραν θήσω ἀνὰ μέσον σοῦ καὶ ἀνὰ μέσον τῆς γυναικός, καὶ ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ σπέρματός σου καὶ τοῦ σπέρματος αὐτῆς. αὐτός σου τηρήσει κεφαλὴν, καὶ σὺ τηρήσεις αὐτοῦ πτέρναν" (Gen. iii. 14, 15). διὰ τίνα αἰτίαν χωρὶς ἀπολογίας καταρᾶται τῷ ὄφει, κελεύων ἐν ἑτέροις <ὡς> εἰκὸς " στήναι τοὺς δύο, οἷς ἔστιν ἡ ἀντιλογία" (Deut. xix. 17)
- 66 καὶ μὴ τῷ ἑτέρῳ προπιστεύειν; καὶ μὴν ὀρᾷς ὅτι τῷ Ἀδὰμ οὐ προπεπίστευκε κατὰ τῆς γυναικός, ἀλλὰ δίδωσιν αὐτῇ εἰς ἀπολογίαν ἀφορμὴν, ὅταν πυνθάνηται " τί τοῦτο ἐποίησας;" (Gen. iii. 13) ἡ δέ γε ὁμολογεῖ πταίσει παρὰ τὴν τῆς ὀφιδίου καὶ ποικίλης ἡδονῆς ἀπάτην. τί οὖν ἐκώλυε, καὶ τῆς γυναικός εἰπούσης ὅτι ὁ ὄφις ἠπάτησέ με, πυθέσθαι τοῦ ὄφεως, εἰ οὗτος ἠπάτησεν, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἀκρίτως χωρὶς ἀπολογίας καταρᾶσθαι;
- 67 λεκτέον οὖν ὅτι ἡ αἴσθησις οὔτε τῶν φαύλων οὔτε τῶν σπουδαίων ἐστίν, ἀλλὰ μέσον τι αὕτη καὶ κοινὸν σοφοῦ τε καὶ ἄφρονος, καὶ γενομένη μὲν ἐν ἄφρονι γίνεται φαύλη, ἐν ἀστείῳ δὲ σπουδαία. εἰκότως οὖν, ἐπειδὴ φύσιν ἐξ ἑαυτῆς μοχθηρὰν οὐκ ἔχει, ἀλλ' ἐπαμφοτερίζουσα νεύει πρὸς ἑκάτερα τό τε εὖ καὶ χεῖρον, οὐ καταδικάζεται πρὶν ὁμολογήσαι, ὅτι ἠκολούθησε τῷ χείρονι.

* See App. p. 483.

XXI. "And the Lord God said to the serpent, 'Because thou hast done this, cursed art thou from among all cattle and from among all the beasts of the earth. Upon thy breast<sup>a</sup> and thy belly shalt thou go, and earth shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed. He shall watch for thy head, and thou shalt watch for his heel'" (Gen. iii. 14 f.). For what reason does He curse the serpent without giving it the opportunity to defend itself, though elsewhere, as seems reasonable, He commands that "the two parties between whom the dispute is should stand forth" (Deut. xix. 17) and that credit be not given to the one till the other be heard? Yet you see, no doubt, that He did not thus give credit to Adam, and prejudge the case against the woman, but gives her opportunity to defend herself, when He inquires "What is this that thou hast done?" (Gen. iii. 13), and she acknowledges that she failed owing to the deception practised on her by subtle serpent-like pleasure. When, then, the woman said "the serpent beguiled me," what was there to prevent His inquiring here too from the serpent, whether he beguiled her, instead of prejudging the case and pronouncing the curse without listening to any defence? We have to say, then, that sense-perception comes under the head neither of bad nor of good things, but is an intermediate thing common to a wise man and a fool, and when it finds itself in a fool it proves bad, when in a sensible man, good. Reasonably then, since it has no evil nature on its own account, but halts between good and evil, inclining to either side, it is not pronounced guilty till it has owned that it

PHILO

68 ὁ δὲ ὄφεις ἢ ἡδονὴ ἐξ ἑαυτῆς ἐστὶ μοχθηρά· διὰ τοῦτο ἐν μὲν σπουδαίῳ οὐχ εὐρίσκεται τὸ παράπαν, μόνος δ' αὐτῆς ὁ φαῦλος ἀπολαύει. κατὰ τὸ οἰκείον οὖν μὴ διδοὺς ἀπολογίαν αὐτῇ καταρᾶται ὁ θεός, σπέρμα ἀρετῆς οὐκ ἐχούση, ἀλλὰ αἰεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ ἐπιλήπτω καὶ μιαρᾷ καθεστῶση.

- 69 XXII. Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ τὸν Εἴρ χωρὶς αἰτίας περιφανοῦς πονηρὸν οἶδεν ὁ θεός (Gen. xxxviii. 7) καὶ ἀποκτείνει· τὸν γὰρ δερμάτινον ὄγκον ἡμῶν τὸ σῶμα—Εἴρ γὰρ δερμάτινος ἐρμηνεύεται— πονηρὸν τε καὶ ἐπίβουλον τῆς ψυχῆς οὐκ ἀγνοεῖ καὶ νεκρὸν καὶ τεθνηκὸς αἰεὶ· μὴ γὰρ ἄλλο τι [101] νοήσης ἕκαστον ἡμῶν ποιεῖν ἢ νεκροφορεῖν, | τὸ νεκρὸν ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ σῶμα ἐγειρούσης καὶ ἀμοχθὶ φερούσης τῆς ψυχῆς· καὶ τὴν εὐτονίαν αὐτῆς, εἰ 70 βούλει, κατανόησον. ὁ μὲν ἐρρωμενέστατος ἀθλητῆς οὐκ ἂν ἰσχύσαι τὸν ἑαυτοῦ πρὸς βραχὺν χρόνον ἀνδριάντα κομίσει, ἢ δὲ ψυχὴ μέχρις ἑκατονταετίας ἐστὶν ὅτε τὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου φέρει κούφως ἀνδριάντα μὴ κάμνουσα· οὐ γὰρ νῦν αὐτὸν ἀπέκτεινεν, ἀλλ' ἐξ ἀρχῆς νεκρὸν τὸ σῶμα ἀπ- 71 ειργάσατο. πονηρὸν δὲ φύσει μὲν, ὡς εἶπον, ἐστὶ καὶ ψυχῆς ἐπίβουλον, οὐ φαίνεται δὲ πᾶσιν, ἀλλὰ μόνῳ τῷ θεῷ καὶ εἴ τις θεῷ φίλος· “ἐναντίον” γάρ φησι “κυρίου πονηρὸς Εἴρ.” ὅταν γὰρ ὁ νοῦς μετεωροπολῆ καὶ τὰ τοῦ κυρίου μυστήρια μνηται, πονηρὸν καὶ δυσμενὲς κρίνει τὸ σῶμα· ὅταν δὲ ἀποστῆ τῆς τῶν θείων ἐρεύνης, φίλον 346

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 68-71

followed evil. But the serpent, pleasure, is bad of itself ; and therefore it is not found at all in a good man, the bad man getting all the harm of it by himself. Quite appropriately therefore does God pronounce the curse without giving pleasure an opportunity of defending herself, since she has in her no seed from which virtue might spring, but is always and everywhere guilty and foul.

XXII. For this reason in the case of Er also God knows him to be wicked and puts him to death without bringing an open charge against him (Gen. xxxviii. 7). For He is well aware that the body, our "leathern" bulk ("leathern" is the meaning of "Er"), is wicked and a plotter against the soul, and is even a corpse and a dead thing. For you must make up your mind that we are each of us nothing but corpse-bearers, the soul raising up and carrying without toil the body which of itself is a corpse. And note, if you will, how strong the soul is. The most muscular athlete would not have strength to carry his own statue for a short time, but the soul, sometimes for as long as a hundred years, easily carries the statue of the human being without getting tired ; for it is not now (at the last) that God slays Er ; nay, but the body which He made and which Er represents was a corpse to begin with. By nature, as I have said, it is wicked and a plotter against the soul, but it is not evident to all that it is so, but to God alone and to anyone who is dear to God ; for we read "Er was wicked in the sight of the Lord." For when the mind soars aloft and is being initiated in the mysteries of the Lord, it judges the body to be wicked and hostile ; but when it has abandoned the investigation of things

PHILO

αὐτῷ καὶ συγγενῆς καὶ ἀδελφὸν ἡγείται, κατα-72 φεύγει γοῦν ἐπὶ τὰ φίλα τούτῳ. διὰ τοῦτο
 ἀθλητοῦ ψυχὴ καὶ φιλοσόφου διαφέρει· ὁ μὲν γὰρ
 ἀθλητῆς πάντα ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ σώματος εὐεξίαν
 ἀναφέρει καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτὴν πρόοιτ' ἂν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ ἄτε φιλοσώματος ὑπάρχων, ὁ δὲ φιλόσοφος
 ἐραστῆς ὢν τοῦ καλοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος ἐν ἑαυτῷ
 κήδεται ψυχῆς, τοῦ δὲ νεκροῦ ὄντως σώματος
 ἀλογεῖ μόνον στοχαζόμενος, ἵνα μὴ ὑπὸ κακοῦ
 καὶ νεκροῦ συνδέτου πλημμελῆται τὸ ἄριστον ἢ 73 ψυχῆ. XXIII. ὁρᾷς ὅτι τὸν Εἰρ ἀποκτείνει οὐχ ὁ κύριος, ἀλλ' ὁ θεός· οὐ γάρ, καθὸ ἄρχει καὶ ἡγεμονεύει δυναστείᾳ κράτους αὐτεξουσίῳ χρώμενος, ἀναιρεῖ τὸ σῶμα, ἀλλὰ καθὸ ἀγαθότητι
 καὶ χρηστότητι χρῆται—ὁ θεὸς γὰρ ἀγαθότητός
 ἐστι τοῦ αἰτίου ὄνομα—ἵνα εἰδῆς ὅτι καὶ τὰ ἄψυχα οὐκ ἐξουσία πεποίηκεν ἀλλ' ἀγαθότητι, ἣ καὶ τὰ ἔμψυχα· ἔδει γὰρ εἰς τὴν τῶν βελτιόνων
 δήλωσιν γένεσιν ὑποστῆναι καὶ τῶν χειρόνων
 ὑπὸ δυνάμεως τῆς αὐτῆς ἀγαθότητος τοῦ αἰτίου, 74 ἣτις ἐστὶν ὁ θεός. πότε οὖν, ὦ ψυχῆ,
 μάλιστα νεκροφορεῖν σαυτὴν ὑπολήψῃ; ἀρά γε οὐχ
 ὅταν τελειωθῆς καὶ βραβείων καὶ στεφάνων ἀξιω-θῆς; ἔση γὰρ τότε φιλόθεος, οὐ φιλοσώματος.
 τεύξῃ δὲ τῶν ἄθλων, ἐὰν γυνή σου γένηται
 ἢ τοῦ Ἰούδα νύμφη Θάμαρ, ἣτις ἐρμηνεύεται

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 71-74

divine, it deems it friendly to itself, its kinsman and brother. The proof of this is that it takes refuge in what is dear to the body. On this account there is a difference between the soul of an athlete and the soul of a philosopher. For the athlete refers everything to the well-being of the body, and, lover of the body that he is, would sacrifice the soul itself on its behalf; but the philosopher being enamoured of the noble thing that lives in himself, cares for the soul, and pays no regard to that which is really a corpse, the body, concerned only that the best part of him, his soul, may not be hurt by an evil thing, a very corpse, tied to it. XXIII. You see that Er is slain not by the Lord, but by God. For it is not as Ruler and Governor employing the absolute power of sovereignty that He destroys the body, but in the exercise of goodness and kindness. For "God" is the name of the goodness pertaining to the First Cause, and is so used that thou mayest know that He hath made the inanimate things also not by exercising authority but goodness, even as by goodness He hath made the living creatures. For it was necessary with a view to the clear manifestation of the superior beings that there should be in existence an inferior creation also, due to the same power, even the goodness of the First Cause. And that goodness is God.

When, then, O soul, wilt thou in fullest measure realize thyself to be a corpse-bearer? Will it not be when thou art perfected, and accounted worthy of prizes and crowns? For then shalt thou be no lover of the body, but a lover of God. And thou shalt win the rewards if Judah's daughter-in-law become thy wife, even Tamar, which means a palm-tree, the sign of

PHILO

φοῖνιξ, σύμβολον νίκης· τεκμήριον δέ· ὅταν αὐτὴν ἀγάγηται ὁ Εἶρ, εὐθύς πονηρός τε εὐρίσκειται καὶ κτείνεται· λέγει γάρ· “καὶ ἔλαβεν Ἰούδας γυναῖκα Εἶρ τῷ πρωτοτόκῳ αὐτοῦ, ἣ ὄνομα Θάμαρ” (Gen. xxxviii. 6), καὶ εὐθύς ἐπιλέγει· “καὶ ἐγένετο Εἶρ πονηρὸς ἔναντι κυρίου, καὶ ἀπέκτεινεν αὐτὸν ὁ θεός” (ib. 7)· ὅταν γὰρ ὁ νοῦς τὰ ἀρετῆς ἀπενέγκηται νικητήρια, θάνατον

75 καταψηφίζεται τοῦ νεκροῦ σώματος. ὁρᾷς ὅτι καὶ τὸν ὄφιν ἄνευ ἀπολογίας καταρᾶται, ἡδονὴ γάρ ἐστι, καὶ τὸν Εἶρ χωρὶς αἰτίας περιφανοῦς

[102] | ἀποκτείνει, ἔστι γὰρ σῶμα. καὶ σκοπῶν, ὧ γενναίε, εὐρήσεις τὸν θεὸν πεποιηκότα φύσεις ἐξ ἑαυτῶν ἐπιλήπτους τε καὶ ὑπαιτίους ἐν ψυχῇ καὶ ἐν πᾶσι σπουδαίας καὶ ἐπαινετάς, ὥσπερ ἔχει

76 καὶ ἐπὶ φυτῶν καὶ ζώων. οὐχ ὁρᾷς ὅτι καὶ τῶν φυτῶν τὰ μὲν ἡμερα καὶ ὠφέλιμα καὶ σωτήρια κατεσκευάκεν ὁ δημιουργός, τὰ δὲ ἄγρια καὶ βλαβερὰ καὶ νόσων καὶ φθορᾶς αἷτια, καὶ ζῶα ὁμοίως; καθάπερ ἀμέλει καὶ τὸν ὄφιν, περὶ οὗ νῦν ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος, φθοροποιὸν γὰρ τὸ ζῶον καὶ ἀναιρετικὸν ἐξ αὐτοῦ. ὁ δὴ διατίθησιν ἄνθρωπον ὄφιν, τοῦτο καὶ ψυχὴν ἡδονή, παρὸ καὶ ἀπεικάσθη ὄφιν ἡδονῇ.

77 XXIV. Ὡσπερ οὖν ἡδονὴν καὶ σῶμα ἄνευ μεμίσηκεν αἰτιῶν ὁ θεός, οὕτω καὶ φύσεις ἀστείας χωρὶς περιφανοῦς αἰτίας προαγήσεν, ἔργον οὐδὲν πρὸ τῶν ἐπαίνων αὐτῶν ὁμολογήσας. εἰ γὰρ τις ἔροιτο, διὰ τί φησι τὸν Νῶε χάριν εὐρεῖν ἔναντίον κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ (Gen. vi. 8) μηδὲν πρότερον ἐργασάμενον, ὅσα γε εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν ἐπίγνωσιν, ἀστείον, ἀποκρινόμεθα δεόντως ὅτι

350

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 74-77

victory. Here is a proof of it. When Er has married her, he is immediately found to be wicked and slain. For we read, " And Judah took for Er his firstborn a wife whose name was Tamar " (Gen. xxxviii. 6), and the next words are, " And Er was wicked before the Lord, and God slew him " (ibid. 7). For when the mind has carried off the rewards of victory, it condemns the corpse-body to death. Thou seest that God both curses the serpent without allowing him to defend himself—for he is pleasure—and slays Er without bringing an open charge against him; for he is the body. And if thou wilt consider, my friend, thou wilt find that God has made in the soul some natures faulty and blameworthy of themselves, and others in all respects excellent and praiseworthy, just as is the case with plants and animals. Seest thou not that among the plants the Creator has made some repaying cultivation and useful and wholesome, and others wild and injurious and productive of disease and destruction, and the same with animals? As, doubtless, He has made the serpent, our present subject, for the creature is of itself destructive of health and life. What a serpent does to a man, that pleasure does to the soul, and therefore the serpent was taken to represent pleasure.

XXIV. Exactly, then, as God has conceived a hatred for pleasure and the body without giving reasons, so too has he promoted goodly natures apart from any manifest reason, pronouncing no action of theirs acceptable before bestowing his praises upon them. For should anyone ask why the prophet says that Noah found grace in the sight of the Lord God (Gen. vi. 8) when as yet he had, so far as our knowledge goes, done no fair deed, we shall give a suitable ἐπαινετῆς ἐλέγχεται συστάσεως καὶ γενέσεως, ἐρμηνεύεται γὰρ Νῶε ἀνάπαυσις ἢ δίκαιος· ἀνάγκη δὲ τὸν παυόμενον ἀδικημάτων καὶ ἁμαρτημάτων, ἀναπαυόμενον ἐπὶ τῷ καλῷ καὶ δικαιοσύνη συζῶντα, χάριν εὑρεῖν παρὰ τῷ θεῷ.

PHILO

78 τὸ δὲ χάριν εὑρεῖν οὐκ ἔστι μόνον, ὡς νομίζουσί τινες, ἴσον τῷ εὐαρεσθῆσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοιοῦτον ζητῶν ὁ δίκαιος τὴν τῶν ὄντων φύσιν ἐν τούτῳ εὑρίσκει ἄριστον εὐρημα, χάριν ὄντα τοῦ θεοῦ τὰ σύμπαντα, γενέσεως δὲ οὐδὲν χάρισμα, ὅτι γε οὐδὲ κτῆμα, θεοῦ δὲ κτῆμα τὰ πάντα, διὸ καὶ μόνου τὴν χάριν οἰκεῖον· τοῖς γοῦν ζητοῦσι, τίς ἀρχὴ γενέσεως, ὀρθότατα ἂν τις ἀποκρίνοιτο, ὅτι ἀγαθότης καὶ χάρις τοῦ θεοῦ, ἣν ἐχαρίσατο τῷ μετ' αὐτὸν γένει· δωρεὰ γὰρ καὶ εὐεργεσία καὶ χάρισμα θεοῦ τὰ πάντα ὅσα ἐν κόσμῳ καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ κόσμος ἐστί.

79 XXV. Καὶ Μελχισεδὲκ βασιλέα τε τῆς εἰρήνης —Σαλήμ τούτο γὰρ ἐρμηνεύεται— <καὶ> ἱερέα [103] ἑαυτοῦ πεποίηκεν ὁ θεός (Gen. xiv. 18), | οὐδὲν ἔργον αὐτοῦ προδιατυπώσας, ἀλλὰ τοιοῦτον ἐργασάμενος βασιλέα καὶ εἰρηναῖον καὶ ἱερωσύνης ἄξιον τῆς ἑαυτοῦ πρώτον· καλεῖται γὰρ βασιλεὺς δίκαιος, βασιλεὺς δὲ ἐχθρὸν τυράννω, ὅτι ὁ μὲν 80 νόμων, ὁ δὲ ἀνομίας ἐστὶν εἰσηγητής· ὁ μὲν οὖν τυράννος νοῦς ἐπιτάγματα ἐπιτάττει τῇ τε ψυχῇ καὶ τῷ σώματι βίαια καὶ βλαβερὰ καὶ σφοδρὰς λύπας ἐργαζόμενα, τὰς κατὰ κακίαν λέγω πράξεις καὶ τὰς τῶν παθῶν ἀπολαύσεις· ὁ δὲ [δεύτερος] βασιλεὺς πρώτον μὲν [οὖν] οὐκ ἐπιτάττει μᾶλλον

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 77-80

answer to the effect that he is shown to be of an excellent nature from his birth, for Noah means "rest" or "righteous." But it cannot but be that he who rests from sinful and unrighteous acts and rests upon what is noble and lives in fellowship with righteousness, should find favour with God. Now finding favour is not as some suppose equivalent only to being well-pleasing, but something of this kind besides. The righteous man exploring the nature of existences makes a surprising find, in this one discovery, that all things are a grace of God, and that creation has no gift of grace to bestow, for neither has it any possession, since all things are God's possession, and for this reason grace too belongs to Him alone as a thing that is His very own. Thus to those who ask what the origin of creation is the right answer would be, that it is the goodness and grace of God, which He bestowed on the race that stands next after Him. For all things in the world and the world itself is a free gift and act of kindness and grace on God's part.

XXV. Melchizedek, too, has God made both king of peace, for that is the meaning of "Salem," and His own priest (Gen. xiv. 18). He has not fashioned beforehand any deed of his, but produces him to begin with as such a king, peaceable and worthy of His own priesthood. For he is entitled "the righteous king," and a "king" is a thing at enmity with a despot, the one being the author of laws, the other of lawlessness. So mind, the despot, decrees for both soul and body harsh and hurtful decrees working grievous woes, conduct, I mean, such as wickedness prompts, and free indulgence of the passions. But the king in the first place resorts to persuasion rather

- ἢ πείθει, ἔπειτα τοιαῦτα παραγγέλλει, δι' ὧν ὡσπερ σκάφος τὸ ζῶον εὐπλοία τῇ τοῦ βίου χρήσεται κυβερνώμενον ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ [καὶ τεχνίτου] κυβερνήτου, οὗτος δέ ἐστιν ὁ ὀρθὸς
- 81 λόγος. καλείσθω οὖν ὁ μὲν τύραννος ἄρχων πολέμου, ὁ δὲ βασιλεὺς ἡγεμὼν εἰρήνης, Σαλήμ, καὶ προσφερέτω τῇ ψυχῇ τροφὰς εὐφροσύνης καὶ χαρᾶς πλήρεις· ἄρτους γὰρ καὶ οἶνον προσφέρει, ἅπερ Ἀμμανῖται καὶ Μωαβῖται τῷ βλέποντι παρασχεῖν οὐκ ἠθέλησαν, οὗ χάριν ἐκκλησίας εἴργονται καὶ συλλόγου θείου· Ἀμμανῖται γὰρ οἱ ἐκ τῆς μητρὸς αἰσθήσεως καὶ Μωαβῖται οἱ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς νοῦ φύντες τρόποι δύο ταῦτα τῶν ὄντων συνεκτικὰ νομίζοντες νοῦν καὶ αἴσθησιν, θεοῦ δὲ μὴ λαμβάνοντες ἔννοιαν, “οὐκ εἰσελεύσονται” φησὶ Μωυσῆς “<εἰς ἐκκλησίαν> κυρίου, . . . παρὰ τὸ μὴ συναντῆσαι αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν μετ' ἄρτων καὶ ὕδατος” (Deut. xxiii. 3, 4) ἐξιούσιν
- 82 ἐκ τῶν παθῶν Αἰγύπτου. XXVI. ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν Μελχισεδὲκ ἀντὶ ὕδατος οἶνον προσφερέτω καὶ ποτιζέτω καὶ ἀκρατιζέτω ψυχὰς, ἵνα κατάσχετοι γένωνται θεία μέθη νηφαλεωτέρα νήψεως αὐτῆς· ἱερεὺς γὰρ ἐστὶ λόγος κληρὸν ἔχων τὸν ὄντα καὶ ὑψηλῶς περὶ αὐτοῦ καὶ ὑπερόγκως καὶ μεγαλοπρεπῶς λογιζόμενος· τοῦ γὰρ ὑψίστου ἐστὶν ἱερεὺς (Gen. xiv. 18), οὐχ ὅτι ἐστὶ τις ἄλλος οὐχ ὑψιστος—ὁ γὰρ θεὸς εἰς ὧν “ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἄνω ἐστὶ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς κάτω, καὶ οὐκ ἐστὶν ἔτι πλην αὐτοῦ” (Deut. iv. 39)—, ἀλλὰ τὸ μὴ ταπεινῶς καὶ χαμαιζήλως ὑπερμεγέθως δὲ καὶ ὑπεραῦλως καὶ ὑψηλῶς νοεῖν περὶ θεοῦ ἔμφασιν τοῦ ὑψίστου κινεῖ.
- 83 XXVII. Τί δὲ εἰργάσατο ἤδη καλὸν ὁ Ἀβράμ, than decrees, and in the next place issues directions such as to enable a vessel, the living being I mean, to make life's voyage successfully, piloted by the good pilot, who is right principle. Let the despot's title therefore be ruler of war, the king's prince of peace, of Salem, and let him offer to the soul food full of joy and gladness; for he brings bread and wine, things which Ammonites and Moabites refused to supply to the seeing one, on which account they are excluded from the divine congregation and assembly. These characters, Ammonites deriving their nature from sense-perception their mother, and Moabites deriving theirs from mind their father, who hold that all things owe their coherence to these two things, mind and sense-perception, and take no thought of God, "shall not enter," saith Moses, "into the congregation of the Lord, because they did not meet us with bread and water" (Deut. xxiii. 3 f.) when we came out from the passions of Egypt. XXVI. But let Melchizedek instead of water offer wine, and give to souls strong drink, that they may be seized by a divine intoxication, more sober than sobriety itself. For he is a priest even Reason, having as his portion Him that is, and all his thoughts of God are high and vast and sublime: for he is priest of the Most High (Gen. xiv. 18), not that there is any other not Most High—for God being One "is in heaven above and on earth beneath, and there is none beside Him" (Deut. iv. 39)—but to conceive of God not in low earthbound ways but in lofty terms, such as transcend all other greatness and all else that is free from matter, calls up in us a picture of the Most High.

XXVII. What good thing had Abram already done,

PHILO

- ὅτι κελεύει αὐτῷ πατρίδος καὶ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης
 ξενουῖσθαι καὶ γῆν οἰκεῖν, ἣν <ἂν> αὐτὸς δῶ ὁ
 θεός (Gen. xii. 1); πόλις δέ ἐστιν ἀγαθὴ καὶ
 πολλή καὶ σφόδρα εὐδαίμων, τὰ γὰρ δῶρα τοῦ
 θεοῦ μεγάλα καὶ τίμια. ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦτον τὸν
 τρόπον ἐγέννησε τύπον ἔχοντα σπουδῆς ἄξιον.
 [104] ἔρμηνεύεται γὰρ Ἀβραὰμ “πατὴρ | μετέωρος,”
 84 δι’ ἀμφοτέρων τῶν ὀνομάτων ἐπαινετός· ὁ γὰρ
 νοῦς, ὅταν μὴ δεσπότου τρόπον ἀπειλῇ τῇ ψυχῇ,
 ἀλλ’ ὡς πατὴρ ἄρχῃ, μὴ τὰ ἡδέα χαριζόμενος
 αὐτῇ, τὰ δὲ συμφέροντα καὶ ἀκούσῃ διδούς, καὶ
 ἐπίπαν τῶν ταπεινῶν καὶ ἀγόντων ἐπὶ τὰ θνητὰ
 ἀποστὰς μετεωροπολῇ καὶ συνδιατρίβῃ θεωρήμασι
 τοῖς περὶ κόσμου καὶ τῶν μερῶν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐπανιῶν ἐρευνᾷ τὸ θεῖον καὶ τὴν τούτου
 φύσιν δι’ ἔρωτα ἐπιστήμης ἄλεκτον, μένειν ἐπὶ
 τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς δογμάτων οὐ δύναται, ἀλλὰ μετοικίαν
 ζητεῖ βελτιούμενος ἀμείνω.
 85 XXVIII. Ἐνίους δὲ ὁ θεός καὶ πρὸ τῆς γενέσεως καλῶς διαπλάττει καὶ διατίθεται καὶ κλῆρον
 ἔχειν ἄριστον προήρηται. οὐχ ὄρας, τί περὶ τοῦ Ἰσαάκ φησι τῷ Ἀβραὰμ οὐκ ἐλπίσαντι, ὅτι γενήσεται τοιούτου γεννήματος πατὴρ, ἀλλὰ καὶ γελάσαντι ἐπὶ τῇ ὑποσχέσει καὶ εἰπόντι “Εἰ τῷ ἑκατονταετεί γενήσεται, καὶ Σάρρα ἐνενήκοντα
 ἐτῶν οὔσα τέξεται;” (Gen. xvii. 17) καταφάσκει
 καὶ ἐπινεύει λέγων “Ναί, ἰδοὺ Σάρρα ἡ γυνὴ σου
 τέξεταιί σοι υἱὸν καὶ καλέσεις τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ
 Ἰσαάκ, καὶ στήσω τὴν διαθήκην μου πρὸς αὐτὸν

<sup>a</sup> The favourable interpretation of “Abram” given here should be compared with those given in De Cherubim 4, and De Gigantibus 62. Cf. De Mutatione Nominum 66.

that he bids him estrange himself from fatherland and kindred there and dwell in whatever land God Himself may give him? (Gen. xii. 1). And that is a city good and large and very prosperous, for great and precious are God's gifts. But this character also did God create in such a shape as to merit esteem, for "Abram" means "father high-soaring,"<sup>a</sup> and both epithets are grounds for praise. For when the mind does not, like a master, frighten the soul with threats, but governs it as a father, not granting it the things that are pleasant to it, but giving it even against its will the things that are good for it; when, in all matters turning away from what is base and from all that draws it to things mortal, it soars aloft and spends its time in contemplation of the universe and its different parts; when, mounting yet higher, it explores the Deity and His nature, urged by an ineffable love of knowledge; it cannot continue to entertain the principles it imbibed originally, but in its desire to improve itself seeks to change its abode for a better one.

XXVIII. Some even before their birth God endows with a goodly form and equipment, and has determined that they shall have a most excellent portion. Dost thou not see what He says concerning Isaac to Abraham when unable to trust that he shall ever become the father of such an offspring, nay when he actually laughed at the promise and said, "Shall it come to pass to him that is a hundred years old, and shall Sarah who is ninety years old bear a child?" (Gen. xvii. 17). He ratifies and confirms it saying, "Yes, Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son and thou shalt call his name Isaac, and I will establish My covenant with Him for an everlasting covenant" (ibid. 19). What is it, then, that has made this one too to be praised before his birth? Some good things benefit us when they have reached us and are present, as health, excellence of bodily senses, wealth perhaps, fame—for even these may be loosely called "good things";—some again not only when they have come, but when their coming has been foretold. For instance joy, a happy condition of the soul, gladdens not only when it is present and in active operation, but, when still an object of hope, brings an anticipatory brightness. For here again is a peculiar advantage which it possesses. While other good things take effect in virtue of their own particular goodness only, joy is both a particular and a general good. See how it comes to add to and enrich them all. We rejoice over health, and over liberty, and over honour, and over the other good things, so that we say with literal truth that nothing is good unless joy be attached to it. But we rejoice over the other good things not only when they have already come about beforehand and are present, but also when they are looked for in the future, as when we hope that we shall grow rich, or shall obtain office, or shall win praise, or shall discover a way of getting rid of disease, or shall obtain our share of health and strength, or shall be no longer ignorant, but men of knowledge, we are glad in no small measure. Seeing then, that joy, not only when present but when hoped for, causes the soul to overflow with gladness, God fitly held Isaac, even before he was begotten, worthy of his great name and therein of a vast endowment: for "Isaac" means laughter of soul and joy and gladness.

- 86 εἰς διαθήκην αἰώνιον" (ib. 19). τί οὖν ἐστὶ τὸ καὶ τοῦτον πρὸ τῆς γενέσεως ἐπαινεῖσθαι πεποιηκός; ἔνια τῶν ἀγαθῶν γενόμενα καὶ παρόντα ὠφελεῖ, οἷον ὑγεία, εὐαισθησία, πλοῦτος εἰ τύχοι, δόξα—λεγέσθω γὰρ καὶ ταῦτα καταχρηστικώτερον ἀγαθὰ—ἔνια δ' οὐ γενόμενα μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ θεσπισθέντα ὅτι γενήσεται, ὥσπερ ἡ χαρὰ—εὐπάθεια ψυχῆς ἐστὶν ἥδε—[γὰρ] οὐχ ὅταν παρούσα δραστηρίως ἐνεργῇ μόνον εὐφραίνει, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅταν ἐλπίζεται προγανοῖ· ἐξαίρετον γὰρ καὶ τοῦτ' ἔχει· τὰ μὲν ἄλλα ἀγαθὰ ἰδίᾳ ἐνεργεῖ, ἡ δὲ χαρὰ καὶ ἴδιον καὶ κοινὸν ἀγαθὸν ἐστὶν· ἐπιγίνεται γοῦν ἅπασι, χαίρομεν γὰρ καὶ ἐπὶ ὑγείᾳ καὶ ἐπ' ἐλευθερίᾳ καὶ ἐπὶ τῇ τιμῇ καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις, ὥστε κυρίως εἰπεῖν μηδὲν εἶναι ἀγαθόν, ᾧ μὴ πρόσεστι.
- 87 χαρὰ. ἀλλ' οὐ μόνον ἐπὶ προγεγενημένοις ἤδη τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀγαθοῖς καὶ παροῦσι χαίρομεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐπὶ μέλλουσι καὶ προσδοκωμένοις, οἷον ὅτε ἐλπίζομεν πλουτήσῃν ἢ ἄρξῃν ἢ ἐπαινεθήσῃσθαι ἢ νόσων ἀπαλλαγὴν εὐρήσῃσθαι ἢ εὐτονίας καὶ ῥώμης κοινωνήσῃν ἢ ἐπιστήμονες ἀντ' ἀνεπιστημόνων ἔσῃσθαι, γεγήθαμεν οὐ μετρίως. ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν ἡ χαρὰ οὐ παρούσα μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐλπίζομένη ἀναχεῖ τε καὶ εὐφραίνει τὴν ψυχὴν, εἰκότως τὸν Ἰσαὰκ πρὶν γεννηθῆναι ὀνόματός τε καὶ δωρεᾶς μεγάλης ἠξίωσε· γέλως γὰρ ψυχῆς καὶ χαρὰ καὶ εὐφροσύνη διερμηνεύεται οὗτος.

88 XXIX. Πάλιν δὲ τὸν Ἰακώβ καὶ τὸν Ἡσαῦ
 τὸν μὲν ἄρχοντα καὶ ἡγεμόνα καὶ δεσπότην τὸν
 [105] δὲ Ἡσαῦ ὑπήκοον καὶ | δούλον ἔτι κατὰ γαστρὸς
 ὄντας φησὶν εἶναι· ὁ γὰρ ζωοπλάστης θεὸς ἐπί-σταται τὰ ἑαυτοῦ καλῶς δημιουργήματα καὶ πρὶν
 αὐτὰ εἰς ἄκρον διατορεῦσαι, τὰς τε δυνάμεις,
 αἷς αὐθις χρῆσονται, καὶ συνόλως τὰ ἔργα τούτων
 καὶ πάθη. ἐπειδὴ γὰρ πορεύεται ἡ ὑπομονητικὴ
 ψυχὴ Ῥεβέκκα πυθέσθαι παρὰ θεοῦ, ἀποκρίνεται
 αὐτῇ, ὅτι “ δύο ἔθνη ἐν τῇ γαστρί σου ἔστι, καὶ
 δύο λαοὶ ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας σου διασταλήσονται, καὶ
 λαὸς λαοῦ ὑπερέξει, καὶ ὁ μείζων δουλεύσει τῷ 89 ἐλάσσονι ” (Gen. xxv. 23). φύσει γὰρ δούλον
 παρὰ θεῷ τὸ φαῦλον καὶ ἄλογον, ἡγεμονικὸν δὲ
 καὶ ἐλεύθερον τὸ ἀστείον καὶ λογικὸν καὶ ἄμεινον,
 καὶ οὐχ ὅταν ἤδη γένηται ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ τέλειον
 ἐκάτερον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐνδοιάζηται· ὅλως γὰρ καὶ
 μικρά τις αὖρα τῆς ἀρετῆς ἀρχὴν καὶ ἡγεμονίαν, οὐκ ἐλευθερίαν μόνον, ἐμφαίνει, καὶ ἔμπαλιν ἡ τυχοῦσα κακίας γένεσις δουλοῖ τὸν λογισμὸν, καὶ
 μήπω τέλειον αὐτῆς ἐκφοιτήσῃ τὸ γέννημα.

90 XXX. Τί δὲ παθὼν ὁ αὐτὸς οὗτος Ἰακώβ, τοῦ Ἰωσήφ τοὺς δύο υἱοὺς προσαγαγόντος τὸν πρεσβύτερον Μανασσῆν καὶ τὸν νεώτερον Ἐφραῖμ, ἐναλλάττει τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν μὲν δεξιὰν ἐπιτίθησι
 τῷ νεωτέρῳ Ἐφραῖμ, τὴν δ' εὐνυμον τῷ πρεσβυτέρῳ Μανασσῆ, καὶ βαρὺ τὸ πρᾶγμα ἡγήσαμένου τοῦ Ἰωσήφ καὶ οἰηθέντος τὸν πατέρα ἄκοντα σφαλῆναι περὶ τὴν τῶν χειρῶν ἐπίθεσιν, φησὶν·
 οὐ διήμαρτον, ἀλλ' “ οἶδα, τέκνον, οἶδα, καὶ οὗτος
 ἔσται εἰς λαὸν καὶ οὗτος ὑψωθήσεται, ἀλλ' ὁ

* The words “ and better ” are perhaps an intrusion.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 88-90

XXIX. Once again, of Jacob and Esau, when still in the womb, God declares that the one is a ruler and leader and master, but that Esau is a subject and a slave. For God the Maker of living beings knoweth well the different pieces of his own handiwork, even before He has thoroughly chiselled and consummated them, and the faculties which they are to display at a later time, in a word their deeds and experiences. And so when Rebecca, the soul that waits on God, goes to inquire of God, He tells her in reply, "Two nations are in thy womb, and two peoples shall be separated from thy belly, and one people shall be above the other people, and the elder shall serve the younger" (Gen. xxv. 23). For in God's judgement that which is base and irrational is by nature a slave, but that which is of fine character and endowed with reason and better<sup>a</sup> is princely and free. And this not only when either is full-grown in soul, but even if their development is still uncertain. For it is universally the case that even a slight breath of virtue is an evidence not of liberty merely but of leadership and sovereignty, and on the other hand that the most casual beginning of wickedness enslaves the reasoning faculty, even if its offspring have not yet come forth fully developed.

XXX. What led this same Jacob, when Joseph brought to him his two sons, the elder Manasseh and the younger Ephraim, to cross his hands and place his right hand on Ephraim the younger son and his left hand on Manasseh the elder; and when Joseph was distressed by it and imagined that his father had made an unintentional mistake in so placing his hands, to say it was no error, but "I know, my child, I know, this one too shall be a people,

PHILO

- ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ ὁ νεώτερος μείζων αὐτοῦ ἔσται”
- 91 (Gen. xlvi. 19). τί οὖν χρή λέγειν ἢ τοῦτο, ὅτι δύο φύσεις ἐδημιουργήθησαν ἐν ψυχῇ ὑπὸ θεοῦ σφόδρα ἀναγκαῖαι, μνήμη τε καὶ ἀνάμνησις; ἀμείνων μὲν ἡ μνήμη, χείρων δὲ ἡ ἀνάμνησις· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἐναύλους ἔχει καὶ ἐναργεῖς τὰς καταλήψεις, ὡς μηδὲ<sup>1</sup> ἀγνοία διαμαρτεῖν, ἀναμνήσεως δὲ λήθη πάντως προηγείται, πηρὸν καὶ τυφλὸν
- 92 πρᾶγμα. πρεσβύτερον δὲ τὸ χείρον ἢ ἀνάμνησις εὐρίσκεται μνήμης τοῦ κρείττονος· * * * συνεχῆς καὶ ἀδιάστατον· οἱ γὰρ πρῶτον εἰς τὰς τέχνας εἰσαγόμενοι περικρατῆσαι τῶν εἰς αὐτὰς θεωρημάτων ἀδυνατοῦμεν εὐθύς· λήθη οὖν κατ’ ἀρχὰς χρώμενοι πάλιν ἀναμνησκομεθα, ἕως ἐκ τοῦ πολλάκις μὲν ἐκλαθέσθαι πολλάκις δὲ ἀναμνησθῆναι βέβαιος αὐθις μνήμη κρατήσῃ, παρὸ καὶ νεωτέρα—ὀψίγονος γάρ ἐστι—συνίσταται τῆς ἀναμνήσεως.
- 93 συμβολικῶς οὖν ὁ μὲν Ἐφραΐμ λέγεται μνήμη, καρποφορία γὰρ ἐρμηνεύεται, τῆς τοῦ φιλομαβοῦς ψυχῆς τὸν οἰκεῖον <καρπὸν> ἐνηνοχίας, ὅποτε |
- [106] διὰ μνήμης ἔχοι βεβαιοῦν τὰ θεωρήματα· ὁ δὲ Μανασσῆς ἀνάμνησις, μεταληφθεὶς γὰρ “ἐκ λήθης” εἶναι λέγεται, ὁ δὲ λήθην ἐκφεύγων ἀναμνησκειται πάντως. ὀρθότατα οὖν ὁ πτερινιστῆς τῶν παθῶν καὶ ἀσκητῆς ἀρετῆς Ἰακώβ δεξιούται τὴν καρποφόρον μνήμην Ἐφραΐμ, δευτερείων δὲ ἀξιοῦ τὴν ἀνάμνησιν Μανασσῆν.

<sup>1</sup> μηδὲν conj. Wendland.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 90-93

this one too shall be exalted, but his younger brother shall be greater than he " ? (Gen. xlviii. 19). What, then, does it behove us to say but this, that two exceedingly necessary faculties were created in the soul by God, memory, and recollection? Of these memory is the better, recollection the inferior. For while the former keeps everything that it has apprehended fresh and distinct, so as to go wrong in nothing owing to ignorance, recollection is in all cases preceded by forgetfulness, a maimed and blind affair. But the inferior of these, recollection, is discovered to be older than the superior one, memory : [while recollection has many gaps of forgetfulness, memory is] unbroken and uninterrupted. For when we are being first introduced to the various arts we are unable at once to master their principles ; so finding ourselves liable to forgetfulness at the outset, we afterwards recollect, until as the result of repeated forgetting and repeated recollecting an unfailing memory shall subsequently win the day. Accordingly memory, being late-born, is formed as recollection's younger sister. So then Ephraim is the figurative name of Memory, meaning " fruit-bearing," for the soul of the student has borne its proper fruit when it is able by means of memory to hold securely the principles of the art that is being learned. Manasseh, however, represents recollection, for the name is said to mean " out of forgetfulness " when translated, and he who escapes from forgetfulness necessarily recollects. Most rightly, therefore, does Jacob, the overthrower of the passions and the trained seeker of virtue, lay his right hand on Ephraim as fruitful memory, and count Manasseh, who is recollection, worthy of the second place.

PHILO

- 94 Καὶ Μωυσῆς μέντοι τῶν θυόντων τὸ Φασέκ τοὺς μὲν <τὸ> πρότερον θύσαντας μάλιστα ἐπαινεῖ, ὅτι διαβάντες ἀπὸ τῶν παθῶν Αἰγύπτου ἐπέμειναν τῇ διαβάσει καὶ οὐχ ὤρμησαν ἔτι ἐπ' αὐτά, τοὺς δὲ τὸ δεύτερον δευτερείων ἀξιοῖ (Num. ix. 6 ff.), τραπέντες γὰρ ἀνέδραμον τὴν τροπὴν καὶ ὥσπερ ἐπιλαθόμενοι τῶν πρακτέων πάλιν ἐπὶ τὸ πράττειν ὤρμησαν αὐτά, οἱ δὲ πρότεροι ἄτρεπτοι διετέλεσαν. ἔοικεν οὖν τοῖς μὲν τὸ δεύτερον Πάσχα θύουσι ὁ ἐκ λήθης Μανασσῆς, τοῖς δὲ τὸ πρότερον ὁ καρποφόρος Ἐφραΐμ.
- 95 XXXI. Ὅθεν καὶ Βεσελεὴλ ἀνακαλεῖ ὁ θεὸς ἐξ ὀνόματος καὶ φησιν αὐτῷ δωρήσασθαι σοφίαν καὶ ἐπιστήμην, καὶ δημιουργὸν αὐτὸν καὶ ἀρχιτέκτονα πάντων τῶν τῆς σκηνῆς, τουτέστι τῶν τῆς ψυχῆς ἔργων, ἀποδείξειν (Exod. xxxi. 2 ff.), μηδὲν ἔργον, ὃ κὰν ἐπαινέσειέ τις, προὔποδείξας αὐτοῦ. λεκτέον οὖν ὅτι καὶ τοῦτο τὸ σχῆμα τῇ ψυχῇ ἐντετύπωκεν ὁ θεὸς νομίσματος δοκίμου τρόπον. τίς οὖν ἐστὶν ὁ χαρακτήρ εισόμεθα, εἰάν τὴν ἐρμηνείαν πρότερον
- 96 τοῦ ὀνόματος ἀκριβώσωμεν. ἐρμηνεύεται οὖν Βεσελεὴλ ἐν σκιᾷ θεοῦ· σκιά θεοῦ δὲ ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ ἐστίν, ᾧ καθάπερ ὄργάνῳ προσχρησάμενος ἐκοσμοποιεῖ. αὕτη δὲ ἡ σκιά καὶ τὸ ὠσανεὶ ἀπικόνισμα ἐτέρων ἐστὶν ἀρχέτυπον· ὥσπερ γὰρ ὁ θεὸς παρά-

<sup>a</sup> i.e., "in the first month."

<sup>b</sup> i.e., "in the second month."

<sup>c</sup> In Numb. ix. 6 ff. Philo interprets ἀκάθαρτοι of moral,

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 94-96

Moses also, to take another case, awards special praise among the sacrificers of the Passover to those who sacrificed the first time,<sup>a</sup> because when they had separated themselves from the passions of Egypt by crossing the Red Sea they kept to that crossing and no more hankered after them, but to those who sacrificed the second time<sup>b</sup> he assigns the second place, for after turning they retraced the wrong steps they had taken and as though they had forgotten their duties they set out again to perform them, while the earlier sacrificers held on without turning. So Manasseh, who comes "out of forgetfulness," corresponds to those who offer the second Passover, the fruit-bearing Ephraim to those who offer the earlier one.<sup>c</sup>

XXXI. This, moreover, is the reason of God's proclaiming Bezalel by name, and saying that He has given him wisdom and knowledge, and that He will appoint him artificer and chief craftsman of all the works of the Tabernacle, that is of the soul (Exod. xxxi. 2 ff.), though He has so far pointed to no work or deed of Bezalel's, such as to win him even commendation. We must say, then, that here too we have a form which God has stamped on the soul as on the tested coin. What, then, the image impressed on it is we shall know if we first ascertain accurately the meaning of the name. Bezalel means, then, "in the shadow of God"; but God's shadow is His Word, which he made use of like an instrument, and so made the world. But this shadow, and what we may describe as the representation, is the archetype for further creations. For just as God is the not ceremonial, uncleanness, as excluding from the keeping of the Passover in the first month.

- δειγμα τῆς εἰκόνας, ἦν σκιὰν νυνὶ κέκληκεν, οὕτως ἢ εἰκὼν ἄλλων γίνεται παράδειγμα, ὡς καὶ ἐναρχόμενος τῆς νομοθεσίας ἐδήλωσεν εἰπών· “καὶ ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον κατ’ εἰκόνα θεοῦ” (Gen. i. 27), ὡς τῆς μὲν εἰκόνας κατὰ
- [107] τὸν θεὸν ἀπεικονισθείσης, τοῦ δὲ ἀνθρώπου | κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα λαβοῦσαν δύναμιν παραδείγματος.
- 97 XXXII. Τίς οὖν ὁ ἐπιγινόμενος χαρακτήρ, θεασώμεθα. ἐζήτησαν οἱ πρῶτοι, πῶς ἐνοήσαμεν τὸ θεῖον, εἶθ’ οἱ δοκοῦντες ἄριστα φιλοσοφεῖν ἔφασαν, ὅτι ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου καὶ τῶν μερῶν αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν ἐνυπαρχουσῶν τούτοις δυνάμεων ἀντί-
- 98 ληψιν ἐποιησάμεθα τοῦ αἰτίου· ὥσπερ γάρ, εἴ τις ἴδοι δεδημιουργημένην οἰκίαν ἐπιμελῶς προπυλαίοις στοαῖς ἀνδρῶσι γυναικωνίτισι τοῖς ἄλλοις οἰκοδομήμασιν, ἐννοίαν λήψεται τοῦ τεχνίτου—οὐ γὰρ ἄνευ τέχνης καὶ δημιουργοῦ νομιεῖ τὴν οἰκίαν ἀποτελεσθῆναι—τὸν αὐτὸν δὲ τρόπον καὶ ἐπὶ πόλεως καὶ νεῶς καὶ παντὸς ἐλάττονος ἢ μείζονος
- 99 κατασκευάσματος, οὕτως δὴ καὶ εἰσελθὼν τις ὥσπερ εἰς μεγίστην οἰκίαν ἢ πόλιν τόνδε τὸν κόσμον καὶ θεασάμενος οὐρανὸν μὲν ἐν κύκλῳ περιπολοῦντα καὶ πάντα ἐντὸς συνειληφότα, πλανήτας δὲ καὶ ἀπλανεῖς ἀστέρας κατὰ ταῦτα καὶ ὡσαύτως κινουμένους ἐμμελῶς τε καὶ ἐναρμονίως καὶ τῷ παντὶ ὠφελίμως, γῆν δὲ τὸν μέσον χῶρον λαχοῦσαν, ὕδατός τε καὶ ἀέρος χύσεις ἐν μεθορίῳ τεταγμένας, ἔτι δὲ ζῶα θνητά τε αὐτὰ καὶ ἀθάνατα καὶ φυτῶν καὶ καρπῶν διαφοράς, λογίζεται δήπου, ὅτι ταῦτα οὐκ ἄνευ τέχνης παντελοῦς δεδημι-
 ούργηται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἦν καὶ ἔστιν ὁ τοῦδε τοῦ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

Pattern of the Image, to which the title of Shadow has just been given, even so the Image becomes the pattern of other beings, as the prophet made clear at the very outset of the Law-giving by saying, " And God made the man after the Image of God " (Gen. i. 27), implying that the Image had been made such as representing God, but that the man was made after the Image when it had acquired the force of a pattern.

XXXII. Let us observe therefore what the character impressed is. The first men sought to find how we came to conceive of the Deity. Next those whose philosophy<sup>a</sup> was reputed the best declared that it was from the world and its constituent parts and the forces subsisting in these that we gained our apprehension of the First Cause. Should a man see a house carefully constructed with a gateway, colonnades, men's quarters, women's quarters, and the other buildings, he will get an idea of the artificer, for he will be of opinion that the house never reached that completeness without the skill of the craftsman ; and in like manner in the case of a city and a ship and every smaller or greater construction. Just so anyone entering this world, as it were some vast house or city, and beholding the sky circling round and embracing within it all things, and planets and fixed stars without any variation moving in rhythmical harmony and with advantage to the whole, and earth with the central space assigned to it, water and air flowing in set order as its boundary, and over and above these, living creatures, mortal and immortal beings, plants and fruits in great variety, he will surely argue that these have not been wrought without consummate art, but that the Maker of this παντὸς δημιουργὸς ὁ θεός. οἱ δὲ οὕτως ἐπιλογιζόμενοι διὰ σκιᾶς τὸν θεὸν καταλαμβάνουσι,

PHILO

 διὰ τῶν ἔργων τὸν τεχνίτην κατανοοῦντες.

100 XXXIII. Ἔστι δέ τις τελεώτερος καὶ μᾶλλον κεκαθαρμένος νοῦς τὰ μεγάλα μυστήρια μνηθεῖς,
 ὅστις οὐκ ἀπὸ τῶν γεγονότων τὸ αἴτιον γνωρίζει,
 ὡς ἂν ἀπὸ σκιᾶς τὸ μένον, ἀλλ' ὑπερκύψας τὸ
 γενητὸν ἔμφασιν ἐναργῆ τοῦ ἀγενήτου λαμβάνει, ὡς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ αὐτὸν καταλαμβάνειν καὶ τὴν σκιὰν
 αὐτοῦ, ὅπερ ἦν τὸν τε λόγον καὶ τόνδε τὸν κόσμον.

101 οὗτός ἐστι Μωυσῆς ὁ λέγων “ Ἐμφάνισόν μοι σαυτόν, γνωστῶς ἴδω σε ” (Exod. xxxiii. 13). μὴ
 γὰρ ἐμφανισθείης μοι δι' οὐρανοῦ ἢ γῆς ἢ ὕδατος
 ἢ ἀέρος ἢ τινος ἀπλῶς τῶν ἐν γενέσει, μηδὲ κατοπτρισαίμην ἐν ἄλλῳ τινὶ τὴν σὴν ἰδέαν ἢ ἐν
 σοὶ τῷ θεῷ, αἱ γὰρ ἐν γενητοῖς ἐμφάσεις διαλύνονται, αἱ δὲ ἐν τῷ ἀγενήτῳ μόνιμοι καὶ βέβαιοι
 καὶ αἰδίοι <ἂν> διατελοῖεν. διὰ τοῦτο Μωυσῆν

102 ἀνακέκληκε καὶ ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ ὁ θεός. καὶ
 Βεσελεὴλ ἀνακέκληκεν, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὁμοίως, ἀλλὰ
 τὸν μὲν τὴν ἔμφασιν τοῦ θεοῦ λαμβάνοντα ἀπ'
 αὐτοῦ τοῦ αἰτίου, τὸν δὲ ὥσπερ ἀπὸ σκιᾶς τῶν γενομένων τὸν τεχνίτην ἐξ ἐπιλογισμοῦ κατανοοῦντα. διὰ τοῦθ' εὐρήσεις τὴν σκηνὴν καὶ τὰ
 σκεύη πάντα αὐτῆς πρότερον μὲν ὑπὸ Μωυσέως,

[108] αὐθις δ' ὑπὸ | Βεσελεὴλ κατασκευαζόμενα·
 Μωυσῆς μὲν γὰρ τὰ ἀρχέτυπα τεχνιτεύει, Βεσελεὴλ
 δὲ τὰ τούτων μιμήματα· χρῆται μὲν γὰρ Μωυσῆς

whole universe was and is God. Those, who thus base their reasoning on what is before their eyes, apprehend God by means of a shadow cast, discerning the Artificer by means of His works.

XXXIII. There is a mind more perfect and more thoroughly cleansed, which has undergone initiation into the great mysteries, a mind which gains its knowledge of the First Cause not from created things, as one may learn the substance from the shadow, but lifting its eyes above and beyond creation obtains a clear vision of the uncreated One, so as from Him to apprehend both Himself and His shadow. To apprehend that was, we saw, to apprehend both the Word and this world. The mind of which I speak is Moses who says, "Manifest Thyself to me, let me see Thee that I may know Thee" (Exod. xxxiii. 13); 'for I would not that Thou shouldst be manifested to me by means of heaven or earth or water or air or any created thing at all, nor would I find the reflection of Thy being in aught else than in Thee Who art God, for the reflections in created things are dissolved, but those in the Uncreate will continue abiding and sure and eternal.' This is why God hath expressly called Moses and why He spake to Him. Bezalel also He hath expressly called, but not in like manner. One receives the clear vision of God directly from the First Cause Himself. The other discerns the Artificer, as it were from a shadow, from created things by virtue of a process of reasoning. Hence you will find the Tabernacle and all its furniture made in the first instance by Moses but afterwards by Bezalel, for Moses is the artificer of the archetypes, and Bezalel of the copies of these. For Moses has God for

PHILO

- ὑφηγητῇ τῷ θεῷ, ὡς φησι· “κατὰ τὸ παράδειγμα
 τὸ δεδειγμένον σοι ἐν τῷ ὄρει πάντα ποιήσεις” 103 (Exod. xxv. 40), Βεσελεὴλ δὲ Μωυσεῖ· καὶ εἰ-κότης· καὶ γὰρ ὅτε Ἀαρὼν ὁ λόγος καὶ Μαριὰμ
 ἡ αἰσθησις ἐπανίστανται, ῥητῶς ἀκούουσιν ὅτι, “ἐὰν γένηται προφήτης κυρίῳ, ἐν ὄραματι αὐτῷ
 γνωσθήσεται” καὶ ἐν σκιᾷ ὁ θεός, οὐκ ἐναργῶς, Μωυσεῖ δέ, ὅστις “πιστὸς ἐν ὄλῳ τῷ οἴκῳ,
 στόμα κατὰ στόμα λαλήσει, ἐν εἶδει καὶ οὐ δι’
 αἰνιγμάτων” (Num. xii. 6-8).
- 104 XXXIV. Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν δύο φύσεις εὔρομεν γενομένας καὶ πλαττομένας καὶ ἄκρως τετορευμένας ὑπὸ θεοῦ, τὴν μὲν ἐξ ἑαυτῆς βλαβερὰν καὶ
 ἐπίληπτον καὶ κατάρατον, τὴν δὲ ὠφέλιμον καὶ ἐπαιετήν, καὶ ἔχουσαν τὴν μὲν κίβδηλον, τὴν δὲ δόκιμον χαρακτῆρα, καλὴν καὶ ἀρμόπτουσαν εὐχὴν εὐξώμεθα, ἣν καὶ Μωυσεῖς, “ἴν’ ἡμῖν ἀνοίξῃ ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ θησαυρὸν” (Deut. xxviii. 12)
 καὶ τὸν μετάρσιον καὶ ἐγκύμονα θείων φώτων
 λόγον, ὃν δὴ κέκληκεν οὐρανόν, τοὺς δὲ τῶν 105 κακῶν ἐπισφίγξῃ. εἰσὶ γὰρ ὡσπερ ἀγαθῶν οὕτω καὶ κακῶν παρὰ τῷ θεῷ θησαυροί, ὡς ἐν μεγάλῃ
 φησὶν ὠδῇ· “οὐκ ἰδοὺ ταῦτα συνήκται παρ’ ἐμοί, καὶ ἐσφράγισται ἐν τοῖς θησαυροῖς μου, ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἐκδικήσεως, ὅταν σφαλῇ ὁ πούς αὐτῶν;” (Deut.
 xxxii. 34, 35) ὁρᾷς ὅτι κακῶν εἰσι θησαυροί·
 καὶ ὁ μὲν τῶν ἀγαθῶν εἰς—ἐπεὶ γὰρ ὁ θεὸς
 εἰς, καὶ ἀγαθῶν θησαυρὸς <εἰς>—πολλοὶ δὲ τῶν κακῶν, ὅτι καὶ οἱ ἁμαρτάνοντες ἄπειροι τὸ πλήθος.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

Instructor, as He says "thou shalt make all things according to the pattern that was shown to thee in the mount" (Exod. xxv. 40), but Bezalel is instructed by Moses. And all this is just as we should expect. For on the occasion likewise of the rebellion of Aaron, Speech, and Miriam, Perception, they are expressly told "If a prophet be raised up unto the Lord, God shall be known unto him in a vision" and in a shadow, not manifestly; but with Moses, the man who is "faithful in all His house, He will speak mouth to mouth in manifest form and not through dark speeches" (Numb. xii. 6-8).

XXXIV. Seeing then that we have found two natures created, undergoing moulding, and chiselled into full relief by God's hands, the one essentially hurtful, blameworthy, and accursed, the other beneficial and praiseworthy, stamped the one with a counterfeit, the other with a genuine impression, let us offer a noble and suitable prayer, which Moses offered before us, "that God may open to us His own treasury" (Deut. xxviii. 12) and that sublime reason pregnant with divine illumination,<sup>a</sup> to which He has given the title of "heaven"; and that He may close up the treasuries of evil things. For there are with God treasuries as of good things so also of evil things, as He saith in the great Song,<sup>b</sup> "Are not these laid up in store with Me, sealed up in My treasuries in the day of vengeance, when their foot shall have slipped?" (Deut. xxxii. 34 f.). You see that there are treasuries of evil things. And the treasury of good things is one, for since God is One, there is likewise one treasury of good things. But of evil things there are many treasuries, for countless too

<sup>b</sup> Philo often refers to Deuteronomy xxxii. under this title.

PHILO

ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τούτῳ σκόπει τὴν τοῦ ὄντος ἀγαθότητα· τὸν μὲν τῶν ἀγαθῶν θησαυρὸν ἀνοίγει,
 τοὺς δὲ τῶν κακῶν ἐπισφίγγει· θεοῦ γὰρ ἴδιον
 τὰ μὲν ἀγαθὰ προτείνειν καὶ φθάνειν δωρούμενον, 106 τὰ δὲ κακὰ μὴ ῥαδίως ἐπάγειν. Μωυσῆς δὲ καὶ
 ἐπιτείνων τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ φιλόδωρον καὶ χαριστικὸν
 οὐ μόνον ἐν τῷ ἄλλῳ χρόνῳ φησὶ τοὺς θησαυροὺς
 τῶν κακῶν ἐσφραγίσθαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅταν ἡ ψυχὴ
 σφαλῆ κατὰ τὴν βάσιν τοῦ ὀρθοῦ λόγου, ὅποτε
 καὶ ἀξίον ἦν αὐτὴν δίκης ἀξιούσθαι· ἐν> ἡμέρα
 γὰρ φησιν ἐκδικήσεως ἐσφραγίσθαι τοὺς τῶν
 κακῶν θησαυροὺς, δεικνύντος τοῦ ἱεροῦ λόγου,
 ὅτι οὐδὲ τοῖς ἀμαρτάνουσιν εὐθὺς ἐπέξεισιν ὁ θεός,
 ἀλλὰ δίδωσι χρόνον εἰς μετάνοιαν καὶ τὴν τοῦ
 σφάλματος ἴασίν τε καὶ ἐπανόρθωσιν.

- 107 XXXV. “Καὶ εἶπε κύριος ὁ θεὸς τῷ ὄφει Ἐπικατάρατος σὺ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν κτηνῶν καὶ
 ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν θηρίων τῆς γῆς” (Gen. iii. 14).
 ὡσπερ ἡ χαρὰ εὐπάθεια οὐσα εὐχῆς ἐστὶν ἐπαξία,
 οὕτως κατάρως ἡδονή, τὸ πάθος, ἡ μεταθεῖσα
 τοὺς ὄρους τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ κατασκευάσασα αὐτὴν
 [109] ἀντὶ φιλαρέτου | φιλοπαθῆ· φησὶ δὲ Μωυσῆς ἐν
 ταῖς ἀραῖς, ἐπικατάρατον εἶναι τὸν μετατιθέντα
 τὰ ὅρια τοῦ πλησίον (Deut. xxvii. 17)· ὄρον γὰρ
 ἔθηκε καὶ νόμον ὁ θεὸς τὴν ἀρετὴν τῇ ψυχῇ, τὸ
 τῆς ζωῆς ξύλον· τοῦτον δὲ μετατέθεικεν <ὁ> 108 πῆξας ὄρον κακίαν, ξύλον θανάτου. “ἐπικατ-άρατος μέντοι καὶ ὁ πλανῶν τυφλὸν ἐν ὁδῷ” (Deut. xxvii. 18), “καὶ ὁ τύπτων τὸν πλησίον δόλω” (ib. 24). καὶ ταῦτα δ’ ἐργάζεται ἡ ἀθεωτάτη ἡδονή· τυφλὸν γὰρ φύσει ἡ αἰσθησις

<sup>a</sup> See Vol. II., App. p. 495, note on Quod et. 120.

are those that sin. But here too observe the goodness of Him who is. The treasury of good things He opens, those of evil things He closes. For it is God's property to hold out good things and to be beforehand in bestowing them, but to be slow to inflict evil things. But Moses, magnifying God's love of giving gifts and granting favours, says that the treasuries of evil things are sealed up not only at other times, but also when the soul fails to direct its steps in keeping with the right principle; and yet then it might justly have been deemed worthy of punishment. For he says that the treasuries of evil things were sealed in the day of vengeance, the sacred word thus showing that not even against those who sin will God proceed at once, but gives time for repentance and for the healing and setting on his feet again of him who had slipped.

XXXV. "And the Lord God said to the serpent, Cursed art thou from among all cattle and from among all the beasts of the earth" (Gen. iii. 14). Just as joy, being a good condition of soul,<sup>a</sup> deserves prayer, so pleasure, the passion par excellence, deserves cursing; it shifts the standards of the soul and renders it a lover of passion instead of a lover of virtue:—"Accursed," says Moses in the Curses, "is he who removes his neighbour's landmarks" (Deut. xxvii. 17):—for God set as a landmark and law for the soul virtue, the tree of life. This is removed by the man who has fixed as landmark in its stead wickedness, the tree of death. "Cursed again is he who causes a blind man to go astray in the way" (Deut. xxvii. 18), "and he that smiteth his neighbour craftily" (ibid. 24). And these also are acts of pleasure, the utterly godless one; for sense by itself

PHILO

- ἄτε ἄλογος οὔσα, ἐπεὶ τὸ λογικὸν ἐξομματοῦται παρὸ καὶ μόνῳ τούτῳ τὰ πράγματα καταλαμβάνομεν, αἰσθήσει δ' οὐκέτι, μόνα γὰρ τὰ σώματα
- 109 φαντασιούμεθα δι' αἰσθήσεως. τὴν οὖν πηρὰν αἴσθησιν τῆς τῶν πραγμάτων ἀντιλήψεως ἐξηπάτηκεν, εἴ γε δυναμένην ἐπὶ νοῦν τρέπεσθαι καὶ ἠνιοχεῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ κεκώλυκεν, ἐπὶ τὸ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητὸν ἀγαγοῦσα καὶ λίχνον αὐτὴν ἀπεργασαμένη τοῦ ἑαυτῆς ποιητικοῦ, ἵνα ἢ μὲν αἴσθησις πηρὸς οὔσα ἀκολουθῇ τυφλῷ ποδηγῷ τῷ αἰσθητῷ, ὃ δὲ νοῦς, ὑπ' ἀμφοτέρων ποδηγούμενος οὐ βλεπόντων, ἐκτραχηλίζεται καὶ ἀκρατῆς ἑαυτοῦ γίνηται.
- 110 εἰ γὰρ τις ἦν τοῦ κατὰ φύσιν ἀκολουθία, τῷ βλέποντι λογισμῷ τὰ πηρὰ ἐχρῆν ἔπεσθαι, οὕτως γὰρ ἂν τὰ βλαβερὰ ἐπεκουφίζετο· νυνὶ δὲ τοσοῦτον ἔστησε μηχανήματα κατὰ τῆς ψυχῆς, ὥστε ἡγεμόσιν αὐτὴν χρῆσθαι τυφλοῖς ἠνάγκασε, παρακρουσαμένη καὶ ἀναπέισασα κακῶν ἀρετὴν ἀλλάξει καὶ ἀντιδοῦναι πονηρῶν ἀκακίαν. XXXVI. ἀπείρηκε δὲ καὶ τὴν τοιαύτην ἀντίδοσιν ὃ ἱερός λόγος, ὅταν φῆ· “οὐκ ἀλλάξεις καλὸν πονηρῷ” (Lev.
- 111 xxvii. 33). ἐπικατάρατος δὲ διὰ ταῦτα ἢ ἡδονή. ἃ δὲ καταρᾶται αὐτῇ, ἴδωμεν ὡς προσφυᾶ. ἀπὸ πάντων φησὶ τῶν κτηνῶν ἐπάρατον εἶναι (Gen. iii. 14). οὐκοῦν κτηνῶδες μὲν ἐστὶ τὸ ἄλογον καὶ αἰσθητικόν, ἐκάστη δὲ αἰσθησις is a blind thing, inasmuch as it is irrational, for it is the reasoning faculty that confers sight. Accordingly it is with the reason only that we apprehend matters; sense does not carry us so far; for by means of sense we gain impressions only of the material forms of things. Pleasure, then, has cheated poor maimed sense of the power of apprehending matters, inasmuch as, when it could have had recourse to mind and have secured it for its charioteer, it has prevented it, leading it to what can be perceived externally only, and by giving it a craving for that which produces pleasure, to the end that sense, being a maimed thing, may follow a blind guide, namely that which sense can perceive, and that the mind, led by this pair of blind guides, may be brought to the ground and robbed of self-control. For if there had been any correspondence with what nature prescribes, it would have been incumbent upon the maimed faculties to follow the reasoning faculty which has eyes, for in this way the damage incurred would have been diminished. As it is, pleasure has organized such a shrewd device against the soul, that it has compelled it to employ blind guides, inducing it by delusive wiles to change virtue for evil things, and to surrender its innocence and receive wickedness in lieu of it. Such an exchange too is forbidden by the holy word, when it says, "Thou shalt not change good with evil" (Lev. xxvii. 33).

Accursed on these grounds is pleasure. Let us see how appropriate the curses are which He pronounces upon it. He says that it is cursed from all cattle (Gen. iii. 14). Our irrational faculty of sense-perception, then, is of the cattle kind, and each of our senses curses

PHILO

- ἡδονῇ καταρᾶται ὡς πολεμιωτάτῃ καὶ ἐχθίστῃ· καὶ γὰρ ἐστὶ τῷ ὄντι πολέμιος αἰσθήσει· τεκμήριον δέ, ὅταν ἡδονῆς ἀμέτρου κορεσθῶμεν, οὐθ' ὄραν οὐτ' ἀκούειν οὐτ' ὀσφραίνεσθαι οὔτε γεύεσθαι οὐθ' ἄπτεσθαι εἰλικρινῶς δυνάμεθα, ἀλλ' ἀμυδρὰς
- 112 καὶ ἀσθενεῖς ποιούμεθα τὰς προσβολάς. καὶ τοῦτο μὲν, ὅταν ἐπίσχωμεν τὴν χρῆσιν αὐτῆς, πάσχομεν· ἐν αὐταῖς δ' ὄντες ταῖς τῆς ἡδονῆς ἀπολαύσεις κατὰ τὸ παντελές καὶ τὴν διὰ τῶν συνεργουσῶν αἰσθήσεων ἀντίληψιν ἀφαιρούμεθα, ὡς δοκεῖν πεπηρῶσθαι. πῶς οὖν οὐκ ἂν εἰκότως
- 113 ἀρὰς θεῖτο αἰσθησις τῇ πηρούσῃ αὐτὴν ἡδονῇ;
- [110] XXXVII. | ἐπικατάρατος δέ ἐστι καὶ παρὰ πάντα τὰ θηρία, λέγω δὴ τὰ πάθη τῆς ψυχῆς, τούτους γὰρ νοῦς τιτρώσκεται καὶ διαφθείρεται. διὰ τί οὖν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων παθῶν χεῖρων εἶναι δοκεῖ; ὅτι σχεδὸν ὑποβέβληται πᾶσιν, ὥσπερ τις ἀρχὴ καὶ θεμέλιος· ἢ τε γὰρ ἐπιθυμία γέγονε δι' ἔρωτος ἡδονῆς, ἢ τε λύπη συνίσταται κατὰ τὴν ταύτης ἀφαίρεσιν, φόβος τε αὐτῆς γεννᾶται δι' εὐλάβειαν ἀπουσίας αὐτῆς· ὥστε δῆλον εἶναι, ὅτι πάντα ἐφορμεῖ τὰ πάθη τῇ ἡδονῇ, καὶ οὐδ' ἂν συνέστη τὸ παράπαν ἴσως ἐκεῖνα, εἰ μὴ προκατεβλήθη τὸ οἰστικὸν αὐτῶν ἡδονῇ.
- 114 XXXVIII. “Ἐπὶ τῷ στήθει καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ πορεύσῃ” (Gen. iii. 14). περὶ γὰρ ταῦτα φωλεύει τὰ μέρη τὸ πάθος, τὰ τε στέρνα καὶ τὴν γαστέρα, ὅταν μὲν ἔχῃ τὰ ποιητικὰ καὶ τὰς ὕλας ἢ ἡδονῇ, περὶ τὴν γαστέρα καὶ τὰ μετ' αὐτήν, ὅταν <δ> ἀπορῇ, περὶ τὰ στήθη, ὅπου ὁ θυμός· οἱ γὰρ pleasure as a most deadly enemy : for it is in very deed hostile to sense, as is proved by the fact that, when we have glutted ourselves with immoderate pleasure, we cannot see nor hear nor smell nor taste nor feel with clearness, but our contact with objects of sense is dim and feeble. This is what we experience when we have ceased from indulging in pleasure ; but when we are in the very midst of the enjoyments it affords, we find ourselves utterly deprived of the support that we obtain through the co-operation of the senses, to such an extent that we seem to have been maimed. How, then, should not sense rightly lay curses on pleasure that maims it ? XXXVII. It is cursed also beyond all the wild beasts. By these I mean the passions of the soul, for by these the mind is wounded and destroyed, Why, then, is it accounted worse than the other passions ? Because it is, we may say, at the bottom of them all, like a kind of starting-point and foundation. Lust comes into play through love of pleasure ; pain arises as pleasure is withdrawn ; fear again is engendered owing to a dread of being without pleasure. It is clear, then, that all the passions depend on pleasure, and these would perchance never have taken shape at all, if first there had not been deposited that which is productive of them, pleasure.

XXXVIII. " On thy breast and belly shalt thou go " (Gen. iii. 14). For passion has its lair in these parts of the body, the breast and the belly. When pleasure has the materials it needs to produce it, it haunts the belly and the parts below it. But when it is at a loss for these materials, it occupies the breast where wrath is ; for lovers of pleasure when

PHILO

φιλήδονοι στερόμενοι τῶν ἡδονῶν ὀργίζονται καὶ 115 παραπικραίνονται. ἔτι δὲ ἀκριβέστερον ἴδωμεν τὸ δηλούμενον. τριμερῆ συμβέβηκε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν
 εἶναι καὶ ἔχειν μέρος μὲν ἐν λογιστικόν, δεύτερον
 δὲ θυμικόν, τρίτον δὲ ἐπιθυμητικόν. ἔνιοι μὲν
 οὖν τῶν φιλοσόφων τὰ μέρη ταῦτα δυνάμει μόνον
 διέκριναν ἀλλήλων, τινὲς δὲ καὶ τόποις· εἶτα ἔνειμαν τῷ μὲν λογιστικῷ τὸν περὶ κεφαλὴν χῶρον
 εἰπόντες, ὅπου ὁ βασιλεὺς, ἐκεῖ καὶ οἱ δορυφόροι, δορυφόροι δὲ αἱ αἰσθήσεις τοῦ νοῦ περὶ κεφαλὴν
 οὔσαι, ὥστε καὶ ὁ βασιλεὺς εἴη ἂν ἐκεῖ, ὥσπερ
 ἄκραν ἐν πόλει λαχὼν οἰκεῖν, τῷ δὲ θυμικῷ τὰ
 στέρνα, παρὸ καὶ τὴν φύσιν ὀχυρῶσαι τὸ μέρος πυκνότητι καὶ κραταιότητι συνεχῶν ὀστέων ὥσπερ
 στρατιώτην ἀγαθὸν καθοπλίσασαν θώρακι καὶ
 ἀσπίδι πρὸς τὴν τῶν ἐναντιουμένων ἄμυναν, τῷ
 δὲ ἐπιθυμητικῷ τὸν περὶ τὸ ἦτρον καὶ τὴν κοιλίαν
 τόπον, ἐνταῦθα γὰρ κατοικεῖ ἐπιθυμία, ὄρεξις 116 ἄλογος.

XXXIX. ἐὰν οὖν ποτε ζητῆς,
 ὧ διάνοια, τίνα χῶρον ἡδονὴ κεκλήρωται, μὴ
 σκέπτου τὸν περὶ κεφαλὴν τόπον, ὅπου τὸ λογι-στικόν, οὐ γὰρ μὴ εὐρήσεις, ἐπεὶ μάχεται ὁ λόγος
 τῷ πάθει καὶ ἐν ταῦτῳ μένειν οὐ δύναται· κρατοῦν-τος μὲν γὰρ λόγου φρουρὸς ἢ ἡδονή, νικώσης δὲ ἡδονῆς φυγὰς ὁ λόγος· ζήτει δ' ἐν στήθει καὶ κοιλίᾳ, ὅπου ὁ θυμὸς καὶ ἡ ἐπιθυμία, μέρη τοῦ
 ἀλόγου· ἐν αὐτῷ γὰρ εὐρίσκεται καὶ ἡ κρίσις ἢ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 478, note on L.A. i. 70.

deprived of their pleasures grow bitter and angry. Let us look still more carefully at the thing signified. Our soul consists of three parts, and has one part given to reasoning, a second to high spirit, a third to desire. Some philosophers<sup>a</sup> have distinguished these parts from each other in regard to function, some in regard also to the places which they occupy. These have gone on to assign to the reasoning part the region of the head, saying that, where the king is, there are also his bodyguards, and that the senses which are in the region of the head are bodyguards of the mind, and that it follows that the king must be there too, having had it allotted to him, like a castle in a city, for his dwelling. To the spirited part they assign the breast, pointing out that nature has given that part firmness by means of a strong and solid array of continuous bones, as though she were arming a good soldier with shield and breastplate for defence against opponents. To the lustful portion of the soul they assign the quarter about the abdomen and the belly, for there it is that lust, irrational craving, has its abode.

XXXIX. If, therefore, O mind, thou art ever inquiring what quarter pleasure has for her portion, do not consider the place occupied by the head, where the reasoning faculty resides, for thou wilt assuredly not find it there, since reason is at war with passion, and cannot remain in the same place with it. For when reason prevails pleasure is gone, and when pleasure conquers, reason is an exile. But look for it in the breast and belly, where high spirit and desire are, portions of the irrational: for in the irrational is to be found alike our faculty of

PHILO

- 117 ἡμετέρα καὶ τὰ πάθη. οὐ κεκώλυται οὖν νοῦς ἐκβὰς τῶν νοητῶν καὶ οἰκείων ἐπιβολῶν ἐκδοθῆναι τῷ χεῖρονι· τοῦτο δὲ συμβαίνει, ὅταν ὁ ψυχῆς κρατήση πόλεμος· ἀνάγκη γὰρ δορυάλωτον
- [111] γίνεσθαι τὸν μὴ μάχιμον | ἀλλ' εἰρηναῖον [τὸν] ἐν ἡμῖν λογισμόν.
- 118 XL. Εἰδὼς γοῦν ὁ ἱερός λόγος ὅσον ἢ ἐκατέρου δύναται ὀρμὴ πάθους, θυμοῦ τε καὶ ἐπιθυμίας, ἐκάτερον ἐπιστομίζει, ἡνίοχον καὶ κυβερνήτην ἐφιστὰς τὸν λόγον. καὶ πρότερον περὶ τοῦ θυμοῦ, θεραπεύων αὐτὸν καὶ ἰώμενος, διαλέγεται οὕτως·
- 119 “ καὶ ἐπιθήσεις ἐπὶ τὸ λόγιον τῶν κρίσεων τὴν δήλωσιν καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν, καὶ ἔσται ἐπὶ τοῦ στήθους Ἰσαράων, ὅταν εἰσέρχηται εἰς τὸ ἅγιον ἐναντίον κυρίου ” (Exod. xxviii. 30). λόγιον οὖν ἔστιν ἐν ἡμῖν τὸ φωνητήριον ὄργανον, ὅπερ ἔστιν ὁ γεγωνῶς λόγος· οὗτος δὲ ἢ ἀκριτόμυθος ἔστι καὶ ἀδόκιμος ἢ κεκριμένος καὶ δόκιμος· εἰς ἔννοιαν δ' ἡμᾶς ἄγει λόγου τοῦ κατὰ διάκρισιν· τὸ γὰρ λόγιόν φησιν οὐ τὸ ἄκριτον ἢ κίβδηλον, ἀλλὰ τὸ τῶν κρίσεων, ἴσον τῷ διακεκριμένον καὶ ἐξητασμένον.
- 120 τούτου δὲ τοῦ δοκίμου λόγου δύο ἀρετὰς φησιν εἶναι τὰς ἀνωτάτω, σαφήνειαν καὶ ἀληθότητα, καὶ πάνυ ὀρθῶς· ὁ γὰρ λόγος τὸ μὲν πρῶτον παρήκε τοῦ σαφῆ ποιῆσαι καὶ δῆλα τὰ πράγματα τῷ πλησίον, μὴ δυνηθέντων ἡμῶν τὸ ἐγγενόμενον τῇ

<sup>a</sup> By emphasizing “our” Philo perhaps means that the faculties of the Soul of the Universe are not hampered, as are ours, in choosing what course to take, by desire or ambition or shrinking from pain. Plutarch says that in face of the fact that human faculties are thus hampered, some philosophers said that our πάθη are λόγοι or κρίσεις, i.e. exercises of reason in choosing; while others said that every virtue has in it an choice <sup>a</sup> and the passions. Well, there is nothing to prevent the mind from going out from the purely intellectual interests which are proper to it and giving itself up to its inferior. This happens when war prevails in the soul; <sup>b</sup> for then reason, that is in us not as a combative but as a peaceful inmate, cannot fail to become a prisoner of war.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 117-120

XL. For look now: the Sacred Word knowing how strong is the impulse of either passion, of both high spirit and lust, puts a curb on each of them, by setting over them reason as a charioteer and pilot. And in the first place this is how it discourses concerning high spirit, aiming at curing and healing it: "And thou shalt put on to the oracle of the judgements the Showing and the Truth, and it shall be upon Aaron's breast, whenever he enters into the Holy Place before the Lord" (Exod. xxviii. 30). The "oracle," then, is in us the organ of speech, which is the uttered word: and this may either be rejected as spoken at random or may be approved as well-judged: but the sacred writer is leading us to think of the word spoken with judgement and discernment; for he tells us that the oracle is not the untested or counterfeit one, but "the oracle of the judgements," an expression tantamount to "well tested and examined." To this approved word he says that the two virtues belong, the highest possible, clearness and truthfulness. Quite rightly does he say so. For reason at the outset fell short of making matters clear and evident to another, since we have no power to exhibit the affection called out in the element of fear, or desire for pleasure or for gain. See Plutarch, De Animæ Procreatione in Timæo, 26 (=ii. 1025 D).

<sup>b</sup> Literally "when the soul's war shall have prevailed" (over peace).

PHILO

- ψυχῇ πάθος ὑπὸ τῶν ἐκτὸς ἐπιδείξασθαι οὐδ' οἶον ἦν παραστῆσαι· XLI. διόπερ ἠναγκάσθημεν ἔλθειν ἐπὶ τὰ διὰ φωνῆς σύμβολα, ὀνόματα καὶ ῥήματα, ἃ δεῖ πάντως εἶναι γνώριμα, ἵνα σαφῶς καὶ ἐκδήλως ὁ πλησίον ἐκλάβηται· ἔπειτα τοῦ
- 121 ἀληθῶς αὐτὰ ἀπαγγεῖλαι· τί γὰρ ὄφελος τρανῆν μὲν καὶ σαφῆ τὴν ἐρμηνείαν ποιεῖσθαι, ψευδῆ δὲ ἄλλως; ἀνάγκη γὰρ οὕτως ἐχόντων ἀπατᾶσθαι τὸν ἀκροατὴν καὶ μεγίστην καρποῦσθαι συμφορὰν, μετὰ ἀγνοίας ἀπαιδευσίαν· τί γάρ, ἂν λέγω τῷ παιδὶ τρανῶς καὶ σαφῶς δεῖξας τὸ ἄλφα στοιχείον ὅτι ἐστὶ γάμμα ἢ τὸ ἦτα ὅτι ἐστὶν ᾠ; ἢ ὁ μουσικὸς λέγῃ τῷ πρῶτα εἰσαγομένῳ δεικνὺς τὸ ἐναρμόνιον ὅτι χρωμά ἐστίν, ἢ τὸ χρωματικὸν ὅτι διατονικόν, ἢ τὴν ὑπάτην ὅτι μέση, ἢ τὸ συνημμένον ὅτι διεζευγμένον, ἢ τὴν ὑπερβολαίαν ὅτι
- 122 προσλαμβανόμενος; τρανῶς μὲν ἴσως καὶ σαφῶς ἐρεῖ, οὐκ ἀληθῶς δέ, ἀλλὰ ταύτη κακίαν ἐργάσεται τὴν ἐν λόγῳ· ὅταν δὲ ἀμφότερα καὶ σαφήνειαν καὶ ἀληθότητα ποιῆται, ὠφέλιμον παρέξει τῷ μανθάνοντι τὸν λόγον, χρησάμενος ταῖς δυσὶν ἀρεταῖς αὐτοῦ, ἃς καὶ μόνας σχεδὸν εἶναι συμβέβηκέ που.
- 123 XLII. Φησὶν οὖν ἰδρῦσθαι τὸν κεκριμένον λόγον ἔχοντα τὰς ἰδίας ἀρετὰς ἐπὶ τοῦ στήθους δηλονότι Ἄαρών, τουτέστιν ἐπὶ τοῦ θυμοῦ, ἵν' οὗτος ἠνιοχῆται λόγῳ τὸ πρῶτον καὶ μὴ ὑπὸ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ

* Or "which need to be thoroughly known."

soul by external things nor to convey an idea of its character. XLI. Wherefore we were compelled to resort to signs given by means of the voice, nouns and verbs, which cannot fail to be intelligible,<sup>a</sup> that the other may get a clear and unmistakable idea of our meaning. (This was reason's first inadequacy.) In the second place, it was inadequate to report things truly. For what is the good of giving a clear and distinct expression, if it be in other respects false? For under these circumstances the hearer must needs be deceived and incur a very great misfortune, being not merely ignorant but ill-taught into the bargain. For what if, pointing to the letter alpha I say to the boy clearly and distinctly that it is gamma, or to eta and tell him that it is omega? Or what if the music-master tells the beginner as he points to the enharmonic genus that it is the chromatic, or says of the chromatic that it is the diatonic, or of the note on the highest string that it is the central, or of the conjunct that it is the disjunct tetrachord, or of the highest tone in the tetrachord scale that it is the lowest? He will speak clearly and distinctly, it may be, but not truly. But in this way he will be a doer of evil—of the evil that belongs to speech. But when he attains both of these requisites, both clearness and truthfulness, he will render the word beneficial to the pupil, bringing into play its two virtues, perhaps the only virtues indeed which it possesses.

XLII. It says, then, that the tested word, having the virtues which are peculiarly its own, was enthroned upon the breast (Aaron's namely), that is, upon the spirited element, that this might first of all be guided by reason, and not injured by its own

PHILO

ἀλογίας βλάβπηται, εἶτα δὲ σαφηνεῖα, οὐ πέφυκε
 [112] γὰρ ὁ θυμὸς σαφηνεῖας εἶναι φίλος· τῶν | γούν
 ὀργιζομένων οὐ μόνον ἢ διάνοια ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ
 ῥήματα παραχῆς καὶ συγχύσεως γέμει· οἰκείον
 οὖν ἦν τὴν τοῦ θυμοῦ ἀσάφειαν ἐπανορθωθῆναι 124 σαφηνεῖα· ἐπὶ τούτοις ἀληθότητι, μετὰ γὰρ τῶν
 ἄλλων καὶ τοῦτο ἔχει ὁ θυμὸς ἴδιον, τὸ ψεύδεσθαι·
 τῶν γούν χρωμένων τῷ πάθει τούτῳ σχεδὸν οὐδεὶς
 ἀληθεύει, ἅτε μέθη κεκρατημένος ψυχῆς, οὐ σώ-ματος· ταῦτα ἀλεξιφάρμακα τοῦ θυμικοῦ μέρος
 ἐστί· λόγος, σαφήνεια λόγου, ἀλήθεια αὐτοῦ· ἐν
 γὰρ ἐστί δυνάμει τὰ τρία, λόγος σὺν ἀρεταῖς
 ἀληθότητι καὶ σαφηνεῖα θυμὸν νόσημα χαλεπὸν
 ψυχῆς ἰώμενος.

125 XLIII. Τίνος οὖν ἐστί φέρειν ταῦτα; οὐχὶ τῆς
 ἐμῆς ἢ τῆς <τοῦ> τυχόντος διανοίας, ἀλλὰ τῆς
 ἱερωμένης καὶ θουούσης καθαρῶς, τῆς Ἀαρών·
 καὶ οὐδὲ ταύτης αἰεί, πολλάκις γὰρ τρέπεται, ἀλλ'
 ὅταν ἀτρέπτως διάγη, ὅταν εἰσπορεύηται εἰς τὸ
 ἅγιον, ὅταν συνεισπορεύηται ὁ λογισμὸς ταῖς
 ἀγίαις γνώμαις καὶ μὴ τούτων ἀποδιδράσκη.

126 ἀλλὰ πολλάκις συνεισέρχεται μὲν ὁ νοῦς εἰς ἱεράς
 καὶ ὀσίους καὶ κεκαθαρμένας δόξας, ἀλλὰ ἀνθρωπείους ταύτας, οἷον τὰς περὶ τῶν καθηκόντων, τὰς περὶ τῶν κατορθωμάτων, τὰς περὶ τῶν θέσει
 νομίμων, τὰς περὶ τῆς κατ' ἀνθρώπους ἀρετῆς·
 οὐδ' ὁ τοῦτον διακεείμενος τὸν τρόπον ἰκανός ἐστί

irrationality ; in the next place by clearness, for it is not the nature of anger to be a friend of clearness. Do we not see in those who are enraged how not their understanding only but their words also are full of disturbance and confusion ? It was appropriate therefore that anger's lack of clearness should be set right again by clearness. It must be guided in the third place by truthfulness, for together with its other faults anger has this one also as peculiarly its own, that of lying. As a matter of experience, of those who give way to this passion, hardly one speaks the truth. They are victims of an intoxication not of body but of soul. These are antidotes for the region of anger ; reason, clearness of speech, truth of speech. For the three are virtually one, since reason, accompanied by the two virtues of truthfulness and distinctness, acts as a healer of anger, that sore sickness of the soul.

XLIII. To whom, then, does it pertain to bear these ? Not to my understanding or to that of any chance comer, but to that which exercises its priesthood and offers sacrifices in purity, that of Aaron, and not even to this always, for many a time it turns and fails, but when it continues free from turning, when it enters into the Holy Place, when the reasoning faculty enters in together with holy resolves and does not abandon these. But full often does the mind enter with these into sacred and holy and purified opinions, but these are mere human opinions, as for instance those concerning simple duties, those concerning high-standard actions, those concerning usages resting on human enactment, those concerning virtue conforming to human standards. Not even he who is in such case as this

PHILO

τὸ λόγιον φέρειν ἐπὶ τοῦ στήθους μετὰ τῶν ἀρετῶν, ἀλλὰ μόνος ὁ ἐναντίον κυρίου εἰσιών, τουτέστιν ὁ ἕνεκα θεοῦ πάντα πράττων καὶ μηδὲν τῶν μετὰ θεὸν ὑπερτιμῶν, ἀλλὰ νέμων μὲν καὶ τούτοις τὰ κατ' ἀξίαν, μὴ ἰστάμενος μέντοι ἐπ' αὐτῶν, ἀλλ' ἀνατρέχων ἐπὶ τὴν γνῶσιν καὶ ἐπι-

127 στήμην καὶ τιμὴν τοῦ ἐνός· τῷ γὰρ οὕτως διακειμένῳ ἡνιοχηθήσεται ὁ θυμὸς ὑπὸ τε λόγου κεκαθαυμένου τὸ ἄλογον αὐτοῦ περιαιρουίντος καὶ ὑπὸ σαφηνείας τὸ ἀσαφὲς καὶ συγκεχυμένον θεραπευούσης καὶ ὑπὸ ἀληθότητος τὸ ψεῦδος ἀπο-

128 κοπτούσης. XLIV. ὁ μὲν οὖν Ἀαρῶν—δεύτερος γὰρ ἐστὶ Μωυσῆ ἐκτέμνοντος τὸ στήθος, ὅπερ ἐστὶ τὸν θυμόν—οὐκ ἔα αὐτὸν ἀκρίτοις ὄρμαῖς ἐκφέρεσθαι, δεδιὼς μὴ ποτε ἀφεθεῖς ἵππου τρόπον ἀνασκιρτήσας ὄλην πατήσῃ τὴν ψυχὴν, ἀλλὰ θεραπεύει καὶ ἐπιστομίζει τὸ μὲν πρῶτον λόγῳ, ἵνα ἡνιόχῳ χρώμενος ἀρίστῳ μὴ σφόδρα ἀφηνιάσῃ, ἔπειτα δὲ ταῖς ἀρεταῖς τοῦ λόγου, σαφηνεῖα καὶ ἀληθεία· εἰ γὰρ παιδευθεῖη ὁ θυμὸς οὕτως, ὥστε καὶ λόγῳ εἴκειν καὶ σαφηνεῖα καὶ τὸ ἀψευδὲς ἀσκεῖν, ἑαυτὸν τε τῆς πολλῆς ζέσεως ἀπαλλάξει τὴν θ' ὄλην ψυχὴν ἴλεων κατασκευάσει.

129 XLV. Ἄλλ' οὗτος μὲν, ὡς ἔφην, ἔχων τὸ πάθος ἰᾶσθαι αὐτὸ πειράται τοῖς λεχθεῖσι σωτηρίοις φαρ-
[113] μάκοις, Μωυσῆς δὲ ὅλον τὸν | θυμόν ἐκτέμνειν καὶ ἀποκόπτειν οἶεται δεῖν τῆς ψυχῆς, οὐ μετριοπάθειαν ἀλλὰ συνόλως ἀπάθειαν ἀγαπῶν. μαρτυρεῖ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

is sufficient to bear the oracle upon his breast with the virtues that belong to it, but he only who goes in in the sight of the Lord, that is he who does all things for God's sake, and overvalues none of the things that are of less importance than God, but accords to these also all they deserve, not, however, stopping at them, but mounting up in the endeavour to acquaint himself with and know and honour the One. For he who is in this case will have his spirited element charioteered by purified reason, which will abolish all that is irrational in him, and by clearness, which will heal all that is uncertain and confused, and by truthfulness, which will eliminate falsehood. XLIV. Aaron, then, being inferior to Moses who cuts the breast, that is the spirited element, clean out—suffers it not to be carried away by random impulses, for he is afraid that, if it be given the rein, it may some day get unmanageable, as a horse does, and trample down all the soul. No, he curbs and controls it, first by reason, that being driven by an excellent charioteer it may not get too restive ; next he employs the virtues of speech, distinctness, and truth. For if high spirit be trained in this manner, so as to yield to reason and distinctness, and also to exercise itself in eschewing falsehood, it will not only rid itself of much ferment, but will render the whole soul gentle.

XLV. Well, Aaron, as I have said, having this passion, attempts to cure it by the saving medicines that have been mentioned. Moses, on the other hand, thinks it necessary to use the knife on the seat of anger in its entirety, and to cut it clean out of the soul, for no moderation of passion <sup>a</sup> can satisfy him ; he is content with nothing but complete

PHILO

δέ μου τῷ λόγῳ ὁ ἱερώτατος χρησμός· “ λαβὼν ” γάρ φησι “ Μωυσῆς τὸ στηθύμιον ἀφείλεν αὐτὸ ἐπίθεμα ἐναντίον κυρίου ἀπὸ τοῦ κριοῦ τῆς τελειώσεως, καὶ ἐγένετο Μωυσεὶ ἐν μερίδι ” (Lev. viii. 130 29)· πάνυ καλῶς· τοῦ γὰρ φιλαρέτου καὶ θεοφιλοῦς ἔργον ἦν τὴν ὅλην ψυχὴν θεασάμενον λαβέσθαι τοῦ στηθους, ὅπερ ἐστὶ τοῦ θυμοῦ, καὶ ἀφελεῖν αὐτὸν καὶ ἀποκόψαι, ἵνα τοῦ πολεμικοῦ μέρους ἐκτμηθέντος εἰρήνην τὸ λοιπὸν ἄγῃ. ἀφαιρεῖ δὲ οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ τυχόντος ζώου, ἀλλ’ ἀπὸ τοῦ κριοῦ τῆς τελειώσεως, καίτοι καὶ μόσχος ἱεουργήθη· ἀλλὰ τοῦτον παρελθὼν ἐπὶ τὸν κριὸν ἦλθε, διότι κρουστικὸν φύσει ζῷον ἐστὶ καὶ θυμικὸν καὶ ὀρμητικόν, παρὸ καὶ οἱ μηχανοποιοὶ τὰ πολλὰ τῶν πο- 131 λεμιστηρίων ὀργάνων κριοὺς κατασκευάζουσι. τὸ κριῶδες οὖν καὶ ὀρμητικὸν καὶ ἄκριτον ἐν ἡμῖν ἐστὶ τὸ ἐριστικὸν εἶδος· ἔρις δὲ μήτηρ ἐστὶ θυμοῦ· παρὸ καὶ οἱ φιλονεικότεροι ἐν τε ταῖς συζητήσεσι καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις ὀμιλίαις ῥᾶστα ὀργίζονται. τῆς οὖν ἐριστικῆς καὶ φιλονείκου ψυχῆς πλημμελὲς γέννημα θυμὸν ἐκτέμνει δεόντως, ἵνα στερωθεῖσα παύσῃται βλαβερὰ τίκτουσα καὶ γένηται μερὶς τοῦτο ἀρμόζουσα τῷ φιλαρέτῳ, οὐ τὸ στηθός οὐδ’ ὁ θυμός, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀφελεῖν αὐτά· μοῖραν γὰρ ὁ θεὸς ἐνεμεν ἀρίστην τῷ σοφῷ τὸ ἐκτέμνειν τὰ πάθη δύνασθαι. ὀρᾶς πῶς ὁ τέλειος τελείαν ἀπάθειαν

---

<sup>a</sup> Philo perhaps wrote κριοῖς. That battering-rams were “adorned with” a ram’s head may be seen in the illustration in Seyffert’s Dictionary of Antiquities, p. 64 a.

absence of passion. That what I say is true Holy Writ testifies : for it says, " Moses took the breast and removed it as a crowning offering before the Lord from the ram of consecration and it became Moses' portion " (Lev. viii. 29). Very good ; for it was the business of the man who loved virtue and was beloved of God, when he had contemplated the entire soul, to seize the breast, which is the spirited element, and to cut it off and take it away, in order that, through the excision of the warlike part, the remainder might have peace. He removes it, not from this or that animal, as it may happen, but from the ram of consecration, although there was a heifer offered too. But he passed this by and went to the ram, because it is a creature naturally prone to butt, owing to its being full of spirit and ready for the fray. It is owing to this that engineers make most of the engines of war in the shape of rams.<sup>a</sup> The part of us, then, that resembles a ram in his reckless readiness for a fight is the wrangling species ; and wrangling is the mother of anger ; accordingly it is those who contend most eagerly in debates and other gatherings that most easily lose their tempers. So Moses cuts out, as he needs must, anger, discordant offspring of the soul that loves wrangling and contention. He does this that she may be rendered barren, and cease bearing hurtful progeny, and that this may become a portion befitting the lover of virtue, not the breast nor the seat of high spirit, but the removal of these : for God assigned to the wise man a share of surpassing excellence, even the power to cut out the passions. You observe how the perfect man always makes perfect freedom from passion his study. But Aaron,

PHILO

- 132 αἰεὶ μελετᾷ. ἀλλ' ὁ γε προκόπτων δεύτερος ὢν Ἰσαρῶν μετριοπάθειαν, ὡς ἔφην, ἀσκεῖ, ἐκτεμεῖν γὰρ ἔτι τὸ στήθος καὶ τὸν θυμὸν ἀδυνατεῖ· φέρει δ' ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὸν ἡνίοχον σὺν ταῖς προσφυέσιν ἀρεταῖς λόγον, τὸ λόγιον, ἐφ' οὗ δῆλωσις ἐστὶ καὶ ἀλήθεια.
- 133 XLVI. Παραστήσει δὲ σαφέστερον τὴν διαφορὰν καὶ διὰ τούτου· “ τὸ γὰρ στηθύμιον ” φησὶ “ τοῦ ἐπιθέματος καὶ τὸν βραχίονα τοῦ ἀφαιρέματος εἴληφα παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ ἀπὸ τῶν θυσιῶν τοῦ σωτηρίου ὑμῶν, καὶ ἔδωκα αὐτὰ Ἰσαρῶν καὶ τοῖς υἱοῖς αὐτοῦ ” (Lev. vii. 34). ὁρᾷς ὅτι οὐκ εἰσιν οὗτοι ἱκανοὶ τὸ στήθος μόνον λαβεῖν, ἀλλὰ σὺν τῷ βραχίονι, Μωυσῆς δὲ χωρὶς τοῦ βραχίονος. διὰ τί; ὅτι ὁ μὲν τέλειος ὢν βραχὺ καὶ ταπεινὸν οὐδὲν φρονεῖ οὐδὲ μετριοπαθεῖν βούλεται, ἀλλ' ἐκ περιουσίας ὅλα τὰ πάθη δι' ὅλων ἀπέκοψεν, οἱ δὲ βραχέως καὶ οὐ μεγάλως ὀρμῶσιν ἐπὶ τὸν τῶν παθῶν πόλεμον, ἀλλὰ καταλλάττονται καὶ σπονδὰς πρὸς
- [114] αὐτὰ τίθενται τὸν συμβατήριον λόγον | προτείνοντες, ἵν' οὗτος ἡνίοχου τρόπον ἐπιστομίζῃ τὴν ἐπὶ πλέον
- 135 αὐτῶν φοράν. ἔστι δὲ καὶ σύμβολον ὁ βραχίων πόνου καὶ κακοπαθείας· τοιοῦτος δὲ ὁ θεραπευτῆς καὶ λειτουργὸς τῶν ἀγίων, ἀσκήσει καὶ πόνῳ χρώμενος· ἄπρονος δ' ἐστὶν ὃ ὁ θεὸς χαρίζεται κατὰ πολλὴν περιουσίαν τὰ ἀγαθὰ τέλεια· βραχύτερος δ' εὐρίσκεται καὶ ἀτελέστερος ὁ πόνῳ κτώμενος τὴν ἀρετὴν τοῦ ἀπόνως καὶ εὐμαρῶς αὐτὴν παρὰ θεοῦ λαβόντος Μωυσῆ· ὡς γὰρ αὐτὸ τὸ πονεῖν βραχύ-
- 390

the man who is making gradual progress, holding a lower position, practises moderation, as I have said ; for his power does not go so far as to enable him to cut out the breast and the high-spirited element, but he brings to it, as charioteer and guide, reason with the virtues attached to it, and this is the oracle on which is Clear-showing and Truth.

XLVI. But he shall bring out the difference more clearly by means of the following words : “ The breast of the offering put on, and the shoulder of the part removed, I have taken at the hands of the children of Israel from the sacrifices of your salvation, and have given to Aaron and his sons ” (Lev. vii. 34). You see that these are not capable of taking the breast by itself, but must take it with the shoulder, whereas Moses takes it without the shoulder. Why is this ? Because he, being perfect, has no small or petty aims, nor any desire to moderate his passions, but goes so far as to cut off all passions everywhere ; while those others set out to wage war on the passions on an insignificant, not on a grand, scale, but seek to come to terms and arrange a truce with them, putting forward the word of pacification, that this like a charioteer may curb their excessive impetuosity. Furthermore the shoulder is a symbol of toil and hardship ; and this is the character of him who attends to and ministers in holy things, subject to toil and discipline. But the man on whom God bestows in overflowing measure his good things in perfection is free from toil. He who acquires virtue by toil is found to come short of full achievement, as compared with Moses, who received it easily and without toil from the hands of God. For, as toiling itself falls short of the toilless achieve-

PHILO

- τερον καὶ ἔλαττόν ἐστι τοῦ ἀπόνου, οὕτω καὶ το ἀτελὲς τοῦ τελείου καὶ τὸ μανθάνον τοῦ αὐτομαθοῦς. διὰ τοῦτο σὺν μὲν βραχίονι λαμβάνει τὸ στήθος
- 136 Ἄαρών, ἄνευ δὲ βραχίονος Μωυσῆς. τὸ στηθύνιον δὲ ἐπιθέματος καλεῖ διὰ τοῦτο, ὅτι ἐπικεῖσθαι δεῖ τῷ θυμῷ καὶ ἐφιδρῦσθαι τὸν λόγον ὡσανεὶ τινα ἡνίοχον εὐθύνοντα σκληραύχενα καὶ ἀφηνιαστὴν ἵππον· τὸν δὲ βραχίονα οὐκέτι ἐπιθέματος ἀλλ' ἀφαιρέματος διὰ τόδε, ὅτι δεῖ τὸν ὑπὲρ ἀρετῆς πόνον μὴ ἑαυτῇ προσάγειν τὴν ψυχὴν, ἀλλ' ἀφελεῖν ἀφ' ἑαυτῆς καὶ θεῷ ἀνενεγκεῖν, ὁμολογοῦσαν ὅτι οὐχ ἡ ἰσχύς αὐτῆς οὐδὲ ἡ δύναμις περιεποίησε τὸ καλόν, ἀλλὰ ὁ καὶ
- 137 τὸν ἔρωτα χαρισάμενος. οὔτε δὲ στηθύνιον οὔτε ὁ βραχίον λαμβάνεται πλὴν ἀπὸ τῆς θυσίας τοῦ σωτηρίου· κατὰ τὸ εἰκός· τότε γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ σῶζεται, ὅταν καὶ ὁ θυμὸς ἡνιοχηθῇ ὑπὸ λόγου καὶ ὁ πόνος μὴ οἴησιν ἐγκατασκευάσῃ ἀλλὰ παραχώρησιν τῷ εὐεργέτῃ θεῷ.
- 138 XLVII. Τὸ δὲ μὴ μόνον ἐπὶ τῷ στήθει ἀλλὰ καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ πορεύεσθαι τὴν ἡδονὴν εἶπομεν ἤδη, οἰκειότατον δηλοῦντες ἡδονῇ χωρίον τὴν γαστέρα, σχεδὸν γὰρ ἀγγεῖον τῶν ἡδονῶν ἀπασῶν αὕτη ἐστὶ· πληρωθείσης γὰρ τῆς γαστρὸς ὀρέξεις καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἡδονῶν γίνονται σύντονοι, κενωθείσης δὲ
- 139 ἡρεμαῖαι καὶ σταθηρότεραι. διὸ καὶ φησιν ἐτέρωθι·

---

* i.e., taught directly by God or by Virtue's self.

ment and is inferior to it, so does the imperfect fall short of the perfect, and that which learns of that which is self-taught.<sup>a</sup> This is why Aaron takes the breast with the shoulder, but Moses without the shoulder. The reason why he calls it the breast of "the special offering put on" is that it is necessary that the reason should be put and set firmly on the seat of anger, as though it were a kind of charioteer keeping straight a stiff-necked and restive horse. But when he comes to the shoulder he speaks of it not as in the case of the breast, as belonging to "the offering put on," but as belonging to "that which was removed." The reason he does so is this. It is necessary that the soul should not ascribe to itself its toil for virtue, but that it should take it away from itself and refer it to God, confessing that not its own strength or power acquired nobility, but He who freely bestowed also the love of it. Neither breast nor shoulder is taken except from the sacrifice of salvation. That is fitting. For only then does the soul begin to be saved, when the seat of anger has received reason as its charioteer, and toil has come to create in it, not self-satisfaction, but a readiness to yield the honour to God, the Bestower of the boon.

XLVII. We have already mentioned that pleasure goes not only on its breast but also on its belly, and pointed out that the stomach is a place most appropriate to pleasure, for we may almost describe it as a reservoir of all the pleasures. For when the belly has been filled, cravings after the other pleasures also become vehement, but when it has been emptied, these are quieted and become more still. And so the prophet says in another passage, "Whatsoever “ πᾶς ὁ πορευόμενος ἐπὶ κοιλία καὶ πᾶς ὁ πορευόμενος ἐπὶ τεσσάρων διὰ παντός, ὃς πολυπληθεὶ ποσίν, ἀκάθαρτός ἐστι ” (Lev. xi. 42). τοιοῦτος δ’ ὁ φιλήδονος αἰὲ χωρῶν ἐπὶ γαστέρα καὶ τὰς μετὰ ταύτην ἡδονάς. τῷ δὲ ἔρποντι ἐπὶ κοιλίαν τὸν ἐπὶ τεσσάρων βαδίζοντα ἤνωκεν· εἰκότως· τέτταρα γάρ ἐστι τὰ πάθη τῶν ἐν ἡδονῇ, ὡς τις κατ’ ἐξαιρέτον λόγος μέμνηται. ἀκάθαρτος οὖν καὶ ὁ τῷ ἐνὶ χρώμενος τῇ ἡδονῇ καὶ ὁ πᾶσιν ἐφορμῶν τοῖς τέσσαρασι.

PHILO

- 140 Τούτων εἰρημένων ἴδε διαφορὰν πάλιν τελείου καὶ προκόπτοντος. ὥσπερ οὖν πρότερον εὐρίσκετο ὁ μὲν τέλειος ὄλον ἐκτέμνων τὸν θυμὸν τῆς ἐριστικῆς ψυχῆς καὶ ποιῶν αὐτὴν τιθασὸν καὶ χειροθήτη καὶ εἰρηναίαν καὶ ἴλεων πρὸς πάντα ἔργω
- [115] τε καὶ λόγῳ, ὁ δὲ προκόπτων | οὐ δυνάμενος μὲν ἀποκόψαι τὸ πάθος—φέρει γὰρ τὸ στήθος—παιδύων δὲ αὐτὸ λόγῳ κεκριμένῳ, ἔχοντι δύο ἀρετάς, σαφήνειαν καὶ ἀλήθειαν, XLVIII. οὕτως καὶ νῦν εὐρεθήσεται ὁ μὲν σοφὸς τέλειος ἡδονὰς ἀπορρυπτόμενος καὶ ἀποσειόμενος Μωυσῆς, ὁ δὲ προκόπτων οὐχ ἅπασαν, ἀλλὰ τὴν μὲν ἀναγκαίαν καὶ ἀπλὴν προσιέμενος, τὴν δὲ περίεργον καὶ περιττὴν κατὰ τὰς ἐπεντρώσεις παραιτούμενος·
- 141 ἐπὶ γὰρ Μωυσέως φησὶν οὕτως· “ καὶ τὴν κοιλίαν καὶ τοὺς πόδας ἔπλυνεν ὕδατι τοῦ ὀλοκαυτώματος ” (Lev. ix. 14). πάνυ καλῶς· ὄλην γὰρ τὴν ψυχὴν

<sup>a</sup> ἐπί with dative.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπί with accusative.

<sup>c</sup> ἐπί with genitive.

<sup>d</sup> This treatise was never written or is lost.

<sup>e</sup> Lev. vii. 3. Literally “ for he bears away the breast.”

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 139-141

goeth upon <sup>a</sup> the belly, and whatsoever goeth all the time upon four feet, which hath many feet, is unclean" (Lev. xi. 42). The lover of pleasure answers to this description, always going after <sup>b</sup> the belly and the pleasures of the adjoining parts. With that which creepeth after <sup>b</sup> the belly he has associated that which walketh upon <sup>c</sup> four feet; and quite naturally; for the passions that come under the head of those in the realm of pleasure are four in number, as has been mentioned in a treatise specially devoted to that subject.<sup>d</sup> Accordingly a man is unclean who is given up to the one thing, pleasure, as well as the man who has all four passions for his stay.

Now that we have said this, note once more how a perfect man differs from one making gradual progress. We have already discovered the perfect man cutting out the seat of anger entirely from the wrangling soul, and so rendering it gentle and submissive and peaceable, and cheerfully ready to face every demand both in act and word; while the man of gradual improvement was found powerless to cut away the passion, for the breast is Aaron's portion,<sup>e</sup> but schooling it by well-tested speech, attended by two virtues, clearness and truth. XLVIII. In a corresponding manner we shall now find Moses, the wise man, in his perfection, scouring away and shaking off pleasures, but the man of gradual improvement not so treating pleasure in its entirety, but welcoming simple and unavoidable pleasure, while declining that which is excessive and over-elaborate in the way of delicacies. For in the case of Moses he uses this language: "And he washed with water the belly and the feet of the whole burnt-offering" (Lev. ix. 14). It is excellently said; for

PHILO

- ἀξίαν οὖσαν θεῷ προσάγεσθαι διὰ τὸ μηδένα ἔχειν μήθ' ἐκούσιον μήτ' ἀκούσιον μῶμον ὁ σοφὸς καθ-
 αγιάζει· οὕτως δὲ διακείμενος ὄλην τὴν γαστέρα
 καὶ τὰς αὐτῆς καὶ μετ' αὐτὴν ἡδονὰς ἐκπλύνει καὶ ἀπολούεται καὶ ἀπορρύνεται, οὐχὶ μέρος τι, ἀλλ'
 οὕτω καταφρονητικῶς ἔσχηκεν αὐτῆς, ὥστε οὐδὲ
 τὰ ἀναγκαῖα σιτία ἢ ποτὰ προσίεται θεωρία τῶν 142 θείων τρεφόμενος. διὸ καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις μαρτυρεῖται αὐτῷ· “ τετταράκοντα ἡμέρας ἄρτου οὐκ ἔφαγε καὶ ὕδωρ οὐκ ἔπιεν ” (Exod. xxxiv. 28), ὅτε ἐν τῷ
 θείῳ ὄρει γενόμενος χρησμῶν θεοῦ νομοθετοῦντος ἤκουεν. ἀλλ' οὐ μόνον ὄλη τῇ γαστρὶ ἀποτάττεται,
 ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς πόδας αὐτῇ συναπορρύνεται,
 τουτέστι τὰς ἐπιβάσεις τῆς ἡδονῆς· ἐπιβάσεις δὲ 143 ἡδονῆς εἰσι τὰ ποιητικὰ αὐτῆς· ὁ [τε] γὰρ προκόπτων λέγεται τὰ ἐγκοίλια καὶ τοὺς πόδας λούειν
 (Lev. i. 9), οὐ τὴν ὄλην κοιλίαν· ἰκανὸς γὰρ οὐκ
 ἔστι πᾶσαν ἡδονὴν διώσασθαι, ἀγαπητὸν δέ, ἐὰν
 τὰ ἐγκοίλια αὐτῆς τουτέστι τὰ ἐπεντρώματα, ἃ φασιν οἱ φιλήδονοι ἐπιλεάνσεις εἶναί τινος τῶν
 προηγουμένων ἡδονῶν, ἃ γίνεται ὀψαρτυτῶν καὶ 144 σιτοπόνων λίχνων περιεργία. XLIX. καὶ προσεπι-τείνει τὴν τοῦ προκόπτοντος μετριοπάθειαν τῷ
 τὸν μὲν ἄνευ προστάξεως παραιτεῖσθαι ὄλην τὴν γαστρός ἡδονήν, τὸν δὲ προκόπτοντα μετὰ προσ-τάξεως· ἐπὶ μὲν γὰρ τοῦ σοφοῦ λέγεται οὕτως· “ τὴν κοιλίαν καὶ τοὺς πόδας ὕδατι ἔπλυνεν ”
 (Lev. ix. 14), ἀνεπικελεύστως κατὰ τὴν ἐκούσιον

---

* Or “ means of approach.”

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 141-144

the wise man consecrates his whole soul as being worthy to be offered to God, owing to its freedom from voluntary or involuntary blemish ; and, being in this condition, he washes out and bathes away and scours off the whole belly and the pleasures that it and the parts adjoining it yield, not so dealing with some part of it, but filled with such contempt for the whole, that he rejects even necessary food and drink, being fed by the contemplation of things divine. And therefore witness is borne to him in another place also : “ for forty days he ate no bread and drank no water ” (Exod. xxxiv. 28), when he was in the holy mount and listened to the divine communications made by God as He declared His laws. But not only does he renounce the whole belly, but with it he scours away the feet, that is, the supports<sup>a</sup> of pleasure ; but the things that create pleasure are its supports,<sup>a</sup> for the man of gradual improvement is said to wash the inwards and the feet (Lev. i. 9), not the whole belly : for he is not sufficient to thrust from him pleasure in its completeness, but is content if he can get rid of its inwards, that is, of the delicacies, produced by the elaborate skill of dainty cooks and confectioners, of which we are told by the epicures that they serve, if we may so speak, as a means of giving succulence to the principal pleasures. XLIX. He lays further stress upon the mere moderating of passion in the man of gradual advance, by representing the wise man as declining without any bidding all the pleasures of the belly, while the man of gradual advance acts under orders ; for in the wise man’s case what is said is “ he washed with water the belly and the feet ” (Lev. ix. 14), spontaneously and unbidden,

PHILO

γνώμην, ἐπὶ δὲ τῶν ἱερέων οὕτως· “ τὰ δὲ ἐγκοίλια καὶ τοὺς πόδας ” οὐχὶ ἔπλυναν, ἀλλὰ “ πλυνουσί ” (Lev. i. 9)· σφόδρα παρατετηρημένως· δεῖ γὰρ τὸν μὲν τέλειον ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ κινεῖσθαι πρὸς τὰς κατ’ ἀρετὴν ἐνεργείας, τὸν δὲ ἀσκητὴν μετὰ τοῦ ὑφηγουμένου τὰ πρακτέα λόγου, ᾧ προστάττοντι πείθεσθαι καλόν.

<sup>145</sup>
[116] Οὐ δεῖ δὲ ἀγνοεῖν, ὅτι Μωυσῆς | ὄλην τὴν κοιλίαν τουτέστι τὴν γαστρὸς ἐκπλήρωσιν παραιτούμενος σχεδὸν καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις πάθεισιν ἀποτάττεται, τοῦ νομοθέτου ἀπὸ μέρους ἑνὸς τὸ σύμπαν ἐναργῶς παριστάντος καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ συνεκτικωτάτου περὶ τῶν ἄλλων, ἐν οἷς ἠσύχασε, δυνάμει διεξιόντος· L. συνεκτικώτατον <γὰρ> ἢ γαστρὸς ἐκπλήρωσις καὶ ὡσανεὶ θεμέλιός τις τῶν ἄλλων παθῶν· οὐδὲν γοῦν ἐκείνων δύναται συστήναι μὴ ἐπερειδόμενον

146 γαστρί, ἣ πάντα ἐφίδρυκεν ἢ φύσις. διὰ τοῦτο, γεννηθέντων τῶν ἐκ τῆς Λείας προτέρων τῶν ψυχικῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ στάντων ἐπὶ τῆς ἐξομολογήσεως Ἰούδα (Gen. xxix. 35), μέλλων ὁ θεὸς δημιουργεῖν καὶ τὰς σώματος προκοπὰς Βάλλαν τὴν Ῥαχὴλ παιδίσκην καὶ πρὸ τῆς δεσποίνης τίκτειν παρασκευάζει· Βάλλα δ’ ἐστὶν ἐγκατάποσις· ἦδει γὰρ ὅτι οὐδὲν τῶν σωματικῶν ἄνευ καταπόσεως καὶ γαστρὸς ὑποστήναι δύναται, ἀλλὰ αὕτη κρατεῖ καὶ ἡγεμονεῖει παντὸς τοῦ σώματος καὶ τοῦ κατὰ τὸ ζῆν ψιλὸν ὄγκου.

147 παρατῆρει δὲ πᾶσαν τὴν λεπτολογίαν, οὐδὲν γὰρ
398

but in the case of the priests it is on this wise : " the inwards and the feet," not " they washed " but " they shall wash " (Lev. i. 9). This shows great exactness. For it must needs be that while the perfect man moves of himself towards virtuous actions, the man who is practising should do so with the aid of reason which gives him guidance what he should do, obedience to whose directions is a noble thing.

We must not fail to notice that Moses, when he refuses the entire belly, that is the filling of his stomach, practically renounces the other passions too. The lawgiver uses one portion to give from it a clear presentation of the whole ; and having mentioned the most essential matter, virtually treats of the rest about which he has been silent. L. For the filling of the belly is the most essential matter, and the foundation, so to speak, of the other passions. None of them, as we see, can take shape unless it have the belly to support it, for nature has made the belly the basis of all things. Hence it comes that when Leah's sons, the good things of the soul, had been born before Jacob's other sons, and had ceased with Judah, who is " praise " (Gen. xxix. 35), God, being about to create representatives of the forward striving of the body as well, causes Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid, to bear children even before her mistress. Now Bilhah is " swallowing." For the prophet knew that no part or organ of the body can subsist without " swallowing " and the belly, but this holds sway and sovereignty over all the body and over all the material frame whose concern is with mere living.

Do not let any subtle point escape your notice, for you will not find a

PHILO

λεχθὲν παρέργως εὐρήσεις. Μωυσῆς τὸ μὲν στηθύνιον ἀφαιρεῖται, τὴν δὲ κοιλίαν οὐκ ἀφαιρεῖ μὲν, πλύνει δέ (Lev. viii. 29, ix. 14)· διὰ τί; ὅτι ὁ
τέλειος σοφὸς ὅλον μὲν τὸν θυμὸν ἰσχύει παραιτήσασθαι καὶ ἀποκόψαι ὀργῆς κατεξαναστάς, τὴν δὲ κοιλίαν ἐκτεμεῖν ἀδυνατεῖ· τοῖς γὰρ ἀναγκαίοις
σιτίοις καὶ ποτοῖς ἢ φύσις βιάζεται χρῆσθαι καὶ
τὸν ὀλιγοδέεστατον καὶ καταφρονητικὸν αὐτῶν
τῶν ἀναγκαίων καὶ ἀσιτίαν αὐτῶν μελετῶντα.
πλυνέτω οὖν αὐτὴν καὶ καθαιρέτω ἀπὸ τῶν
περιττῶν καὶ ἀκαθάρτων παρασκευῶν· ἱκανὴ
γὰρ καὶ αὕτη παρὰ θεοῦ τῷ φιλαρέτῳ δωρεά.

148 ΛΙ. διὰ τοῦτο ἐπὶ τῆς ὑπονοηθείσης διεφθάρθαι
ψυχῆς φησιν (Num. v. 27), ὅτι ἂν μὲν ἀπολελοιπιῦα
τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον, ὃς ἐστὶν ἀνὴρ νόμιμος, εὐρεθῆ
προσκεχωρηκυῖα τῷ μαιίνοντι τὴν ψυχὴν πάθει, “πρησθήσεται τὴν γαστέρα,” ὅπερ ἦν, ἀπληρώτους
καὶ ἀκορέστους ἕξει τὰς γαστρὸς ἡδονὰς καὶ ἐπιθυμίας, καὶ οὐδέποτε παύσεται ἄπληστος οὔσα
δι’ ἀπαιδευσίαν, ἀλλ’ ἀμυθῆτων ἐπιρρεόντων αἰδίων

149 ἕξει τὸ πάθος. οἶδα γοῦν πολλοὺς οὕτω πταίοντας
περὶ τὴν τῆς γαστρὸς ἐπιθυμίαν, ὥστ’ ἐμέτοις
χρησάμενοι πάλιν ἐπὶ τὸν ἄκρατον καὶ τᾶλλα
ᾤρμησαν· οὐ γὰρ ἀναλογεῖ τοῖς σωματικοῖς
ὄγκοις ἢ τῆς ἀκράτορος ψυχῆς ἐπιθυμία, ἀλλ’
οἱ μὲν ἄτε ἀγγεῖα ὄντες μεμετρημένα ἄμετρον
οὐδὲν προσίενται, ἀλλὰ τὸ περιττὸν ἐκβάλλουσιν,
ἢ δὲ ἐπιθυμία πληροῦται μὲν οὐδέποτε, μένει δὲ

150 ἐνδεὴς καὶ διψαλέα αἰεί. |

παρὸ καὶ τὸ

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 147-150

single pointless expression. Moses removes the breast; the belly he does not remove, but washes (Lev. viii. 29, ix. 14). Why is this? Because the perfect wise man can, by wholly renouncing anger, utterly avert and drive off the uprising of the spirited element in him, but to excise the belly he is powerless. Even the man of fewest needs who scorns the very necessities of life and trains himself in abstinence from them, is forced by nature to take necessary food and drink. Let him therefore wash the belly and cleanse it from superfluous and unclean provisions; for this too is a sufficiently great gift from God to the lover of virtue. LI. It is owing to this <sup>a</sup> that when treating of the soul suspected of adultery he says (Num. v. 27), that if it have forsaken the right principle, which is the lawful husband, and be discovered to have had intercourse with soul-defiling passion, "it will swell up in the belly," which signified that it will have ever unfilled and insatiable the pleasures and desires of the belly, and will never cease to be insatiate owing to gross stupidity, but, with a countless throng of them pouring in, will keep its passion for ever. To cite an instance, I know many brought to such disaster over the craving of the belly, that after resorting to emetics they fly back again to strong drink and all the rest. For the craving of the soul that is out of control is not restricted as the bodily organs are by their size. These are vessels of a fixed capacity admitting nothing that exceeds it, but ejecting all that is superfluous. Desire is never filled up, but continues always thirsty and in want of more.

<sup>a</sup> δὲ τούτο seems to refer to § 146. The intervening § 147 is of the nature of a note.

PHILO

ἀκόλουθον προστίθεται τῷ πρησθῆναι τὴν γαστέρα τὸ “ διαπεσεῖν τὸν μηρόν ”· διαπίπτει γὰρ τότε τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ ὁ σπερματικὸς καὶ γεννητικὸς τῶν καλῶν λόγος ὀρθός· “ ἔαν ” γοῦν φησι “ μὴ μιανθῇ καὶ καθαρὰ <ῆ>, καὶ ἀθῶος ἔσται <καὶ> ἔκσπερματιεῖ σπέρμα ” (Num. v. 28), ἔαν ὑπὸ πάθους μὴ μιανθῇ, καθαρεύση δὲ πρὸς τὸν νόμιμον ἄνδρα, τὸν ὑγιῆ καὶ ἡγεμόνα λόγον, γόνιμον ἔξει ψυχὴν καὶ καρποφόρον, φέρουσαν γέννημα φρονήσεως καὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ τῆς συμπάσης ἀρετῆς.

- 151 LII. Ἄρ' οὖν ἡμᾶς ἐνδεδεμένους σώματι οἶόν τε σωματικαῖς ἀνάγκαις μὴ χρῆσθαι; καὶ πῶς ἔνεστιν; ἀλλ' ὅρα. ὁ ἱεροφάντης τὸν τρόπον παραγγέλλει τῷ ἀγομένῳ ὑπὸ σωματικῆς χρείας αὐτῷ μόνῳ χρῆσθαι τῷ ἀναγκαίῳ. πρῶτον μὲν φησι “ τόπος ἔστω σοι ἔξω τῆς παρεμβολῆς ” (Deut. xxiii. 12), παρεμβολὴν καλῶν τὴν ἀρετὴν, ἐν ἣ ἔστρατοπέδευκεν ἡ ψυχὴ· οὐ γὰρ δύναται τὸν αὐτὸν κρατεῖν χώρον φρόνησις καὶ σωματικῆς
- 152 ἀνάγκης ἀπόλαυσις. εἶτα “ ἐξελεύση ” φησὶν “ ἐκεῖ ἔξω ”· διὰ τί; ὅτι οὐ δύναται ἡ ψυχὴ καταμένουσα μετὰ φρονήσεως καὶ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ διατρίβουσα τῆς σοφίας χρῆσθαι τινι τῶν φίλων σώματος· τρέφεται γὰρ τότε θειοτέραις τροφαῖς ἐν ταῖς ἐπιστήμαις, δι' ἃς καὶ τῆς σαρκὸς ἀμελεῖ· ἐπειδὴν γὰρ ἐξέλθη τῶν ἱερῶν ἀρετῆς οἴκων, τῆνικαῦτα ἐπὶ τὰς τὸ σῶμα πλημμελούσας καὶ πιεζούσας ὕλας τρέπεται. πῶς οὖν αὐταῖς χρή-

<sup>a</sup> See on De Op. 43.

This explains "the breaking up of the thigh," being added as the sequel to the swelling of the belly. For then it is that the soul experiences the breaking up of the right principle, the principle that is the seed<sup>a</sup> whence all noble things are begotten. We see this from the words that follow, "If she have not been defiled and be pure, she shall be free and shall conceive seed" (Numb. v. 28), if she have not been defiled by passion, but have been chaste and faithful to her lawful husband, the princely and wholesome principle, she will have a soul fruitful and productive, yielding the offspring of sound sense and righteousness and all excellence.

LII. Is it possible, then, that we, tied as we are to a body, should not comply with bodily requirements? How can it be possible? But look. The sacred guide tells the man who feels the pressure of bodily necessity the way to deal with it, namely, to comply with it only so far as he is actually obliged to do so. First he says, "Let there be to thee a place outside the camp" (Deut. xxiii. 12), meaning by "the camp" virtue, in which the soul has pitched its camp. For good sense and indulgence of a bodily necessity cannot occupy the same quarters. Next he says, "Thou shalt go forth there without." Why go forth? Because the soul cannot have dealings with any of the body's friends while it abides with good sense and spends its days in the house of wisdom. For then it is nourished by food more divine, which it finds in all knowledge, and for the sake of this it actually disregards the flesh. For when it has gone forth from the sacred dwellings of virtue, it is then that it turns to material things which treat the body ill and weigh it down. How

PHILO

- 153 σομαι; “πάσσαλος ἔστω σοι” φησὶν “ἐπὶ τῆς ζώνης σου, καὶ ὀρύξεις ἐν αὐτῷ” (Deut. xxiii. 13), τουτέστι λόγος ἐπὶ τοῦ πάθους ἐξορύττων καὶ ἀναστέλλων καὶ ἀπαμφιεννῶν αὐτό· ἀνεζῶσθαι γὰρ βούλεται ἡμᾶς τὰ πάθη, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἀνειμένα
- 154 καὶ κεχαλασμένα φορεῖν. διὸ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς διαβάσεως αὐτῶν, ὃ καλεῖται Πάσχα, προστάττει τὰς “ὀσφῦς περιεζῶσθαι” (Exod. xii. 11), ἧτοι συνεστάλθαι τὰς ἐπιθυμίας. πάσσαλος οὖν, τουτέστι λόγος, ἐπέσθω τῷ πάθει, κωλύων αὐτὸ χεῖσθαι· οὕτως γὰρ αὐτοῖς μόνοις χρῆσόμεθα τοῖς ἀναγκαίοις, τῶν δὲ περιττῶν ἀφεξόμεθα. LIII.
- 155 κἂν ἐν συνουσίαις ὄντες καὶ μέλλοντες εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν καὶ χρῆσιν τῶν παρεσκευασμένων ἐλθεῖν σὺν λόγῳ παραγενώμεθα ὥσπερ ὄπλῳ τινὶ ἀμυντηρίῳ, οὔτε πέραν τοῦ μετρίου σιτίων ἐμφορηθησόμεθα αἰθυιῶν τρόπον οὔτ’ ἀκράτου ἀμέτρου κορεσθέντες μέθη ληραίνειν ἀναγκαζούση χρῆσόμεθα· ἐπιστομιεῖ
- [118] γὰρ ὁ λόγος καὶ ἐγχαλινώσκει τὴν ῥύμην | καὶ
- 156 φορὰν τοῦ πάθους. ἐγὼ γοῦν αὐτὸ πολλάκις παθὼν οἶδα· εἰς γὰρ ἀδιάγωγον συνουσίαν ἐλθὼν καὶ πολυτελεῖ δαίψνα, ὅποτε μὴ ἀφικοίμην σὺν λόγῳ, δούλος ἐγενόμην τῶν παρεσκευασμένων, ἀγόμενος ὑπὸ δεσποτῶν ἀτιθᾶσων, θεαμάτων καὶ ἀκουσμάτων καὶ τῶν ὅσα διὰ μυκτηῆρος καὶ γεύσεως ἡδονὰς ἀπεργάζεται· ὅποτε δὲ μετὰ τοῦ αἰροῦντος λόγου, δεσπότης ἀντὶ δούλου γίνομαι καὶ ἀνὰ κράτος νικῶ καλὴν νίκην κικερτερίας

---

* Or “ ill-regulated.”

then shall I deal with them? "Let there be to thee, he says, a shovel upon thy girdle, and thou shalt dig with it" (Deut. xxiii. 13), that is to say, reason shall be upon the passion digging it out, tucking it up, not suffering it to clothe thee about. For God would have us gird up our passions, not wear them flowing and loose. So at the crossing over from them, which is called Passover, He bids that their "loins should be girded up" (Exod. xii. 11), in other words that their desires should be restrained. Let a shovel then, that is, reason, follow the passion, preventing it from spreading abroad, for by this means we shall comply only with demands which are urgent, but from all that goes beyond this we shall abstain. LIII. When we are present at entertainments and are about to take and enjoy the viands provided, if we take our places at table with reason like some weapon to parry blows, we shall neither gorge ourselves with food beyond measure like cormorants, nor overdosed with unlimited strong drink shall we succumb to intoxication with its resultant foolish talk; for reason will curb and bridle the impetuous rush of the passion. I, to mention myself in proof of what I say, know by frequent experience how true it is. Many a time have I been present at a gathering with little that was sociable about it<sup>a</sup> or at costly suppers. When I did not arrive with reason for my companion, I found myself the slave of the enjoyments provided, at the mercy of harsh masters, entertainments for eye and ear and all that brings pleasure by way of taste or smell. But whenever I arrive with convincing reason at my side, I find myself a master not a slave, and, putting forth all my strength, win

PHILO

- καὶ σωφροσύνης, ἀντιβαίνων καὶ ἀντιφιλονεικῶν
 πᾶσι τοῖς ἀναρρηγνῦσι τὰς ἀκράτορας ἐπιθυμίας.
- 157 “διορύξεις” φησὶ γοῦν “τῷ πασσάλῳ” (Deut.
 xxiii. 13), τουτέστιν, ἣν ἕκαστον ἔχει φύσιν, τὸ
 φαγεῖν, τὸ πιεῖν, τὸ τοῖς μετὰ γαστέρα χρῆσθαι, τῷ λόγῳ γυμνώσεις καὶ διαστελεῖς, ἵνα διακρίνας
 γνῶς τᾶληθές· τότε γὰρ εἶση, ὅτι ἐν οὐδενὶ τούτων
 ἐστὶ τὸ ἀγαθόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον μόνον καὶ
- 158 χρήσιμον. “καὶ ἐπαγαγὼν καλύψεις τὴν ἀσχη-μοσύνην σου” (ib.)· πάνυ καλῶς· ἔπαγε γάρ,
 ᾧ ψυχῇ, τὸν λόγον ἐπὶ πάντα, ᾧ καλύπτεται καὶ συσκιάζεται καὶ συγκρύπτεται πᾶσα ἀσχημοσύνη
 σαρκὸς καὶ πάθους· τὰ γὰρ μὴ σὺν λόγῳ πάντα
- 159 αἰσχρά, ὥσπερ τὰ σὺν λόγῳ κόσμια. οὐκοῦν ὁ
 μὲν φιλήδονος ἐπὶ κοιλίαν βαδίζει, ὁ δὲ τέλειος
 τὴν κοιλίαν ὄλην ἐκπλύνει, ὁ δὲ προκόπτων τὰ
 ἐν κοιλίᾳ, ὁ δὲ ἄρτι ἀρχόμενος παιδεύεσθαι ἔξω
 πρόεισιν, ὅταν μέλλῃ τῆς γαστρὸς τοῖς ἀναγκαίοις ἐπιφερόμενος λόγον ἐπιστομιεῖν τὸ πάθος, ὃς
 εἴρηται συμβολικῶς πάσσαλος.
- 160 LIV. Εὖ μέντοι καὶ τὸ προσθεῖναι· “πορεύσῃ ἐπὶ τῷ στήθει καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ” (Gen. iii. 14)· ἡ γὰρ ἡδονὴ οὐκ ἔστι τῶν ἡρεμούντων καὶ ἰσταμένων, ἀλλὰ τῶν κινουμένων καὶ ταραχῆς γεμόντων· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἡ φλόξ ἐν κινήσει, οὕτως φλογμοῦ
 τινα τρόπον τὸ πάθος ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ κινούμενον
 ἡρεμεῖν αὐτὴν οὐκ ἔᾶ. διὸ καὶ τοῖς λέγουσι

<sup>a</sup> Strictly “after.” See 139.

the noble victory of endurance and self-mastery, in a vigorous and pertinacious encounter with everything that excites the unruly desires. "Thou shalt dig," you see he says, "with the shovel" (Deut. xxiii. 13), that is, thou shalt lay bare and distinguish by means of reason, the nature which each passion possesses, eating, drinking, sexual indulgence, that thou mayest discern them and learn the truth about them. For then shalt thou know that in none of these is there the thing which is good, but that which is useful only and necessary. "And bringing the shovel to bear on it then shalt thou cover thine unseemliness" (ibid.). 'Tis well said. Bring then, O soul, reason to bear on all things, wherewith all unseemliness of flesh and passion is covered, and hidden, and put out of sight. For all that is unaccompanied by reason is unsightly, just as that with which reason is present is comely. We get this result. The lover of pleasure moves on<sup>a</sup> the belly; the perfect man washes out the entire belly; the man who is making gradual progress washes out the contents of the belly, the man who is just beginning his training will go forth without, when he intends to curb passion by bringing reason (figuratively called a shovel) to bear upon the demands of the belly.

LIV. There is an excellent point in the next words too: "Thou shalt go upon thy breast and thy belly" (Gen. iii. 14). For pleasure does not belong to the category of things becalmed and stationary, but to that of things moving and full of turmoil. For as the flame is in movement, so, not unlike a blazing thing, passion moving in the soul does not suffer it to be calm. Thus the prophet does not agree καταστηματικὴν εἶναι τὴν ἡδονὴν οὐ συμφέρεται· ἡρεμία γὰρ λίθω μὲν καὶ ξύλῳ καὶ παντὶ ἀψύχῳ οἰκεῖον, ἀλλότριον δὲ ἡδονῇ· γαργαλισμοῦ γὰρ καὶ σπασμώδους ἐφίεται καὶ ἐπ' ἐνίων οὐκ ἡρεμίας ἀλλὰ συντόνου καὶ σφοδρᾶς κινήσεώς ἐστι χρεία.

- 161 LV. Τὸ δὲ “ γῆν φάγεσαι πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ζωῆς σου ” (Gen. iii. 14), τοῦτο προσφυῶς [119] εἴρηται· τῆς γὰρ | σώματος τροφῆς ἡδοναὶ γήιναι· καὶ μήποτ' εἰκότως· δύο <γάρ> ἐστὶν ἐξ ὧν συνέσταμεν, ψυχὴ τε καὶ σῶμα· τὸ μὲν οὖν σῶμα ἐκ γῆς δεδημιούργηται, ἡ δὲ ψυχὴ αἰθέρος ἐστίν, ἀπόσπασμα θεῖον· “ ἐνεφύσησε γὰρ εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνεῦμα ζωῆς ὁ θεός, καὶ ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν ” (Gen. ii. 7). εὐλόγως οὖν τὸ μὲν ἐκ γῆς διαπλασθὲν σῶμα συγγενεῖς ἔχει τροφὰς ἃς ἀναδίδωσιν ἢ γῆ, ἡ δὲ αἰθερίου φύσεως μοῖρα οὐσὰ ψυχὴ πάλιν αἰθερίους καὶ θείας· ἐπιστήμαις γὰρ τρέφεται καὶ οὐ σιτίοις ἢ ποτοῖς, ὧν ἐπιδεές ἐστι τὸ σῶμα.

- 162 LVI. “ Ὅτι δὲ οὐ γήινοι ἀλλ' οὐράνιοι αἱ ψυχῆς τροφαί, μαρτυρήσει διὰ πλειόνων ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος· “ ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ ὕψω ὑμῖν ἄρτους <ἐκ> τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἐξελεύσεται ὁ λαὸς καὶ συνάξουσιν τὸ τῆς ἡμέρας εἰς ἡμέραν, ὅπως πειράσω αὐτούς, εἰ πορεύσονται τῷ νόμῳ μου ἢ οὐ ” (Exod. xvi. 4). ὁρᾶς ὅτι οὐ γηίνοις καὶ φθαρτοῖς τρέφεται ἡ ψυχὴ, ἀλλ' οἷς ἂν ὁ θεὸς ὀμβρήσῃ λόγοις ἐκ τῆς μεταρσίου
 163 καὶ καθαρᾶς φύσεως, ἣν οὐρανὸν κέκληκεν· ἐξίτω

<sup>a</sup> καταστηματικὴν. Cf. Diogenes Laertius, x. 136 ὁ δ' Ἐπίκουρος ἐν τῷ περὶ αἰρέσεων οὕτω λέγει· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀταραξία καὶ ἀπονία καταστηματικά ἐῖσιν ἡδοναί· ἡ δὲ χαρὰ καὶ εὐφροσύνη κατὰ κίνησιν ἐνεργεῖα βλέπονται. See App. p. 483.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 160-163

with those who say that pleasure is tranquil.<sup>a</sup> For stillness pertains to a stone and a log and to everything without life, but it is alien to pleasure. For pleasure hankers after an excitement that is actually convulsive, and in some people so far from its being an experience of tranquillity, it is an indulgence in intense and violent movement.

LV. The sentence "Earth shalt thou eat all the days of thy life" (Gen. iii. 14) is an apt one. For the food of the body brings pleasures of earth; and fitly so, it would seem. For there are two things of which we consist, soul and body. The body, then, has been formed out of earth, but the soul is of the upper air, a particle detached from the Deity: "for God breathed into his face a breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. ii. 7). It is in accordance with reason, therefore, that the body fashioned out of earth has food akin to it which earth yields, while the soul being a portion of an ethereal nature has on the contrary ethereal and divine food; for it is fed by knowledge in its various forms and not by meat and drink, of which the body stands in need.

LVI. That the food of the soul is not earthly but heavenly, we shall find abundant evidence in the Sacred Word. "Behold I rain upon you bread out of heaven, and the people shall go out and they shall gather the day's portion for a day, that I may prove them whether they will walk by My law or not" (Exod. xvi. 4). You see that the soul is fed not with things of earth that decay, but with such words as God shall have poured like rain out of that lofty and pure region of life to which the prophet has given the title of "heaven." To μέντοι ὁ λεῶς καὶ πᾶν τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς σύστημα

PHILO

 καὶ συναγαγέτω καὶ ἀρχέσθω τῆς ἐπιστήμης,
 μὴ ἀθρόως ἀλλὰ “ τὸ τῆς ἡμέρας εἰς ἡμέραν ”·
 πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ ἀθρόον οὐ χωρήσει τὸν πολὺν
 πλοῦτον τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ χαρίτων, ἀλλὰ τῇ φορᾷ χειμάρρου τρόπον ἐπικλυσθήσεται· ἔπειτ’ ἐστὶν
 ἄμεινον τὰ αὐτάρκη λαβόντας ἀγαθὰ καὶ μεμε-164 τρημένα τῶν λοιπῶν ταμίαν οἰηθῆναι τὸν θεόν. ὁ δὲ πάντα μετιῶν ἀθρόα δυσελπιστίαν καὶ ἀπιστίαν
 μετὰ πολλῆς ἀνοίας κτᾶται· δύσελπις μὲν <γίνεται>, εἰ νῦν μόνον ἀλλὰ μὴ καὶ αὖθις ἐλπίζει τὸν θεὸν
 ὀμβρήσειν αὐτῷ ἀγαθὰ, ἄπιστος δέ, εἰ μὴ πε-πίστευκε καὶ νῦν καὶ αἰεὶ τὰς τοῦ θεοῦ χάριτας
 ἀφθόνως τοῖς ἀξίοις προσνέμεσθαι, ἄνους δέ, εἰ οἴεται τῶν συναχθέντων ἱκανὸς ἔσεσθαι φύλαξ
 ἄκοντος θεοῦ· μικρὰ γὰρ ῥοπή τὸν ἀσφάλειαν
 καὶ βεβαιότητα περιάπτοντα νοῦν ὑπὸ μεγα-λαυχίας ἑαυτῷ ἄκυρον καὶ ἀβέβαιον ὧν ἐδόκει 165 φύλαξ εἶναι πάντων ἐποίησε.

LVII.

σύναγε οὖν, ὦ ψυχῆ, τὰ αὐτάρκη καὶ καθήκοντα
 καὶ μήτε πλείω τῶν ἱκανῶν ὡς ὑπερβάλλειν μήτε
 ἐλάττω πάλιν ὡς ἐνδεῖν, ἵνα μέτροις δικαίοις
 χρωμένη μὴ ἀδικῆς. καὶ γὰρ διάβασίν γε μελε-τῶσαν ἀπὸ τῶν παθῶν καὶ τὸ Πάσχα θύουσαν
 δεῖ τὴν προκοπὴν, τὸ πρόβατον, λαμβάνειν μὴ

* The Greek for “sheep” is ποῦβατον, which properly means anything that walks forward.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 163-165

proceed. The people, and all that goes to make the soul, is to go out and gather and make a beginning of knowledge, not all at once but "the day's portion for a day." For to begin with it will be unable to contain all at once the abundant wealth of the gracious gifts of God, but will be overwhelmed by them as by the rush of a torrent. In the second place it is better, when we have received the good things sufficient of themselves as duly measured out to us, to think of God as Dispenser of those that still remain. He that would fain have all at once earns for himself lack of hope and trust, as well as great lack of sense. He lacks hope if he expects that now only but not in the future also will God shower on him good things; he lacks faith, if he has no belief that both in the present and always the good gifts of God are lavishly bestowed on those worthy of them; he lacks sense, if he imagines that he will be, though God will it not, a sufficient guardian of what he has gathered together; for the mind that vaingloriously ascribes to itself sureness and security has many a time been rendered by a slight turn of the scale a feeble and insecure guardian of all that it looked on as in its safe-keeping.

LVII. Gather together, therefore, O soul, what is adequate of itself and suitable, and neither more than sufficient so as to be excessive, nor on the other hand less so as to fall short, that dealing in right measures thou mayest do no wrong. For thou art required also, when making it thy study to cross over from the passions and when sacrificing the Passover, to take the forward step, whose symbol is the lamb,<sup>a</sup> not without measure, for he

PHILO

ἀμέτρως· “ἕκαστος” γάρ φησι “τὸ ἀρκοῦν αὐτῷ συναριθμησεται<sup>1</sup> εἰς πρόβατον” (Exod. xii. 4).

- 166 Καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ μάννα οὖν καὶ ἐπὶ πάσης δωρεᾶς,
 [120] ἦν ὁ θεὸς δωρεῖται | τῷ γένει ἡμῶν, καλὸν τὸ ἐνάριθμον καὶ μεμετρημένον καὶ μὴ τὸ ὑπὲρ ἡμᾶς λαμβάνειν· πλεονεξίας γὰρ τοῦτό γε. τὸ τῆς ἡμέρας οὖν εἰς ἡμέραν συναγαγέτω ἡ ψυχὴ (Exod. xvi. 4), ἵνα μὴ ἑαυτὴν φύλακα τῶν ἀγαθῶν
 167 ἀλλὰ τὸν φιλόδωρον θεὸν ἀποφήνη. LVIII. καὶ διὰ τοῦτό μοι δοκεῖ τὸ προκείμενον λέγεσθαι· σύμβολον φωτὸς ἐστὶν ἡ ἡμέρα, φῶς δὲ ψυχῆς ἐστὶ παιδεία. πολλοὶ οὖν τὰ ἐν ψυχῇ φῶτα ἐκτήσαντο εἰς νύκτα καὶ σκότος, ἀλλ’ οὐκ εἰς ἡμέραν καὶ φῶς, οἷον τὰ προπαιδεύματα πάντα καὶ τὰ ἐγκύκλια λεγόμενα καὶ φιλοσοφίαν αὐτὴν τρυφῆς ἕνεκεν ἢ ἀρχῆς τῆς πρὸς τοὺς ἡγεμόνας. ὁ δὲ γε ἀστείος τὴν ἡμέραν ἕνεκα ἡμέρας καὶ τὸ φῶς ἕνεκα φωτὸς καὶ τὸ καλὸν ἕνεκα τοῦ καλοῦ κτᾶται μόνου, οὐχ ἕνεκα ἄλλου τινός. διὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει· “ὅπως πειράσω αὐτούς, εἰ πορεύσονται τῷ νόμῳ μου ἢ οὐ” (Exod. xvi. 4). νόμος γὰρ
 168 θεῖος οὗτος, τὴν ἀρετὴν δι’ ἑαυτὴν τιμᾶν. τοὺς οὖν ἀσκητὰς ὡσπερ νόμισμα δοκιμάζει ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος, πότερα κεκηλίδωνται ἐπὶ τι τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀναφέροντες τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀγαθὸν ἢ ὡς δόκιμοι<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> συναριθμησεται (as in LXX.) is restored in accordance with Mangey’s conjecture.

<sup>2</sup> δόκιμοι is substituted for δόκιμον (conj. Tr.)

<sup>a</sup> Or “than luxurious living.”

<sup>b</sup> πρὸς τοὺς ἡγεμόνας. πρὸς seems to be used as in the phrase πρὸς ἄλλον ζῆν, ‘to live with reference to, dependent says " each man shall reckon what suffices for him as a lamb " (Exod. xii. 4).

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 165-168

Both in the case of manna then, and in the case of every boon which God confers upon our race, it is good to take what is fixed by strict measure and reckoning and not that which is above and beyond us ; for to do this is to be over-reaching. Let the soul, then, gather the day's portion for a day (Exod. xvi. 4), that it may declare not itself but the bountiful God guardian of the good things. LVIII. And the reason for the injunction we are considering seems to me to be this. The day is a symbol of light, and the light of the soul is training. Many, then, have acquired the lights in the soul for night and darkness, not for day and light ; all elementary lessons for example, and what is called school-learning and philosophy itself when pursued with no motive higher than parading their superiority,<sup>a</sup> or from desire of an office under<sup>b</sup> our rulers. But the man of worthy aims sets himself to acquire day for the sake of day, light for the sake of light, the beautiful for the sake of the beautiful alone, not for the sake of something else. And this is why he goes on with the words : " that I may prove them whether they will walk in My law or no " (Exod. xvi. 4) ; for this is the divine law, to value excellence for its own sake. The right principle, therefore, tests all aspirants as one does a coin, to see whether they have been debased in that they refer the soul's good to something external, or whether, as tried and approved men, they distinguish upon, at the beck and call of, another' (Cope, The Rhetoric of Aristotle, i. 9. 27). "A life of luxury or office-holding at the will of the powers that be."

PHILO

διαστέλλουσιν ἐν διανοίᾳ μόνη τοῦτο διαφυλάττοντες. τούτοις συμβέβηκε μὴ τοῖς γηίνοις ἀλλὰ ταῖς ἐπουρανίοις ἐπιστήμαις τρέφεσθαι.

- 169 LIX. Δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ δι' ἑτέρων, ὅταν φῆ· “ τὸ πρῶν ἐγένετο καταπαυομένης τῆς δρόσου κύκλω τῆς παρεμβολῆς, καὶ ἰδοὺ ἐπὶ πρόσωπον τῆς ἐρήμου <λεπτὸν> ὡσεὶ κόριον, λευκὸν ὡσεὶ πάγος ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. ἰδόντες δὲ αὐτὸ εἶπον ἕτερος τῷ ἑτέρῳ Τί ἐστὶ τοῦτο; οὐ γὰρ ἤδεισαν, τί ἦν. εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς Μωυσῆς Οὗτος ὁ ἄρτος, ὃν δέδωκεν ἡμῖν κύριος τοῦ φαγεῖν, τοῦτο τὸ ῥῆμα ὃ συνέταξε κύριος ” (Exod. xvi. 13 ff.). ὄρας τῆς ψυχῆς τροφήν οἷα ἐστὶ λόγος θεοῦ συνεχῆς, εἰκῶς δρόσω κύκλω πᾶσαν περιειληφῶς καὶ μηδὲν
- 170 μέρος ἀμέτοχον αὐτοῦ ἔων. φαίνεται δ' οὐ πανταχοῦ ὁ λόγος οὗτος, ἀλλ' ἐπ' ἐρήμον παθῶν καὶ κακιῶν, καὶ ἔστι λεπτὸς νοῆσαί τε καὶ νοηθῆναι καὶ σφόδρα διαυγῆς καὶ καθαρὸς ὄραθῆναι, καὶ ἔστιν ὡσεὶ κόριον. φασὶ δὲ οἱ γεωπόνοι τὸ σπέρμα τοῦ κορίου διαιρεθὲν εἰς ἄπειρα καὶ τμηθὲν καθ' ἕκαστον τῶν μερῶν καὶ τμημάτων σπαρὲν βλαστάνειν οὕτως, ὡς καὶ τὸ ὄλον ἡδύνατο· τοιοῦτος καὶ ὁ θεοῦ λόγος, καὶ δι' ὄλων ὠφελητικὸς καὶ διὰ παντὸς μέρους καὶ τοῦ τυχόντος.
- 171 μήποτε δὲ ὁμοιοῦται καὶ τῇ κατὰ τὸν ὀφθαλμὸν κόρῃ· ὡς γὰρ αὕτη βραχύτατον οὔσα μέρος τὰς τῶν ὄντων ὄρα ζώνας ὄλας καὶ θάλατταν ἄπειρον and guard this treasure as belonging to thought and mind alone. Such men have the privilege of being fed not with earthly things but with the heavenly forms of knowledge.

<sup>a</sup> The κόριον, coriander-seed, suggests the κόρη (purilla) of the eye.

LIX. He gives a further elucidation of this point, when he says, "in the early morning when the dew ceased it appeared all round the camp, and lo! upon the face of the wilderness a fine thing as it were coriander seed, white like hoar-frost on the ground. And when they saw it, they said one to another, 'What is this?' for they knew not what it was. And Moses said unto them, 'This bread, which the Lord hath given us to eat, is this word, which the Lord hath prescribed'" (Exod. xvi. 13 ff.). You see of what sort the soul's food is. It is a word of God, continuous, resembling dew, embracing all the soul and leaving no portion without part in itself. But not everywhere does this word show itself, but on the wilderness of passions and wickednesses, and it is fine and delicate both to conceive and be conceived, and surpassingly clear and transparent to behold, and it is as it were coriander seed. Tillers of the soil say that if you cut a coriander seed and divide it into countless pieces, each of the portions into which you cut it, if sown, grows exactly as the whole seed could have done. Such too is the word of God, able to confer benefits both as a whole and by means of every part, yes any part you light upon.

It is possible that a resemblance between the word of God and the pupil<sup>a</sup> of the eye, is also intended. For as the pupil of the eye is a very small part of it and sees the zones of the universe in their completeness,

PHILO

[121] καὶ | ἀέρος μέγεθος καὶ τοῦ παντὸς οὐρανοῦ ὅσον ἀνατέλλων καὶ δυόμενος ὁ ἥλιος ὀρίζει, οὕτως καὶ ὁ θεοῦ λόγος ὀξυδερκέστατός ἐστιν, ὡς πάντα ἐφορᾶν εἶναι ἰκανός, * * * ὧ τὰ θεᾶς ἄξια κατ-ὀψονται· παρὸ καὶ λευκόν ἐστι· τί γὰρ ἂν εἶη λαμπρότερον ἢ τηλαυγέστερον θείου λόγου, οὐ κατὰ μετουσίαν καὶ τὰ ἄλλα τὴν ἀχλὺν καὶ τὸν ζόφον ἀπελαύνει φωτὸς κοινωνῆσαι ψυχικοῦ γλιχόμενα;

172 LX. Ἴδιον δὲ περὶ τοῦτον τὸν λόγον συμβαίνει πάθος. ὅταν γὰρ καλέσῃ πρὸς ἑαυτὸν τὴν ψυχὴν, πῆξις ἀνεγείρει τῷ γεώδει καὶ σωματικῷ καὶ αἰσθητικῷ παντί· διὸ λέγεται τὸ “ ὡσεὶ πάγος ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ” (Exod. xvi. 14)· καὶ γὰρ ἡνίκα ὁ τὸν θεὸν ὀρών φυγὴν τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν παθῶν μελετᾷ, πῆγνυται τὰ κύματα, τουτέστιν ἢ φορὰ καὶ αὐξήσις καὶ τὸ μεγάλαυχον αὐτῶν· “ ἐπάγη γὰρ τὰ κύματα ἐν μέσῳ τῆς θαλάσσης ” (Exod. xv. 8),

173 ἵνα διαβῆ τὸ πάθος ὁ βλέπων τὸν ὄντα. πυνθάνονται οὖν ἀλλήλων αἱ ψυχαὶ αἱ πεπονθυῖαι μὲν ἤδη τὸν λόγον, οὐκ ἔχουσαι δ’ εἰπεῖν τὸ “ τί ἐστι ” (Exod. xvi. 15)· καὶ γὰρ γλυκανθέντες πολλάκις τὸν κενηκότα χυμὸν ἀγνοοῦμεν καὶ ἠδέων ἀτμῶν ὀσφραϊνόμενοι τίνες εἰσὶν οὐκ ἴσμεν· οὕτως οὖν ἡ ψυχὴ γανωθεῖσα πολλάκις εἰπεῖν οὐκ ἔχει, τί τὸ γανῶσαν αὐτὴν ἐστι· διδάσκεται δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦ ἱεροφάντου καὶ προφήτου Μωυσέως, ὅς

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 171-173

and the boundless ocean, and the vast expanse of air and of the infinite heaven, all that is bounded by the rising and the setting sun, so the word of God also has keenest sight, and is able to survey all things, . . . wherewith they shall clearly see all that is worth beholding. Accordingly it is also white ; for what could be brighter or more far-shining than the divine word, by communion with which even other things dispel their mist and their gloom, eagerly desiring to become sharers in the light of the soul ?

LX. An affection peculiar to it is produced by this word. When it has summoned the soul to itself, it brings about a congealment in all that part of us that is earthly, bodily, sense-bound ; and this accounts for the words “ as it were hoar-frost on the earth ” (Exod. xvi. 14). For we also find that when he that sees God is studying flight from the passions, the waves become fixed as if frozen, that is to say the rush and growth and vainglory of the passions ; “ for the waves became solid in the midst of the sea ” (Exod. xv. 8), in order that he that seeth Him that is might pass beyond passion. The souls, therefore, that have indeed already had experience of the word, but are not able to answer the question, inquire one of another “ What is it ? ” (Exod. xvi. 15). For it often happens that on finding a sweet taste in our mouths we are uncertain as to the flavour which has given rise to it, and that when we catch the scent of pleasant odours we do not know what they are. In the same way then the soul, when it has been gladdened, is often unable to say what the thing that gladdens it is. But it is taught by the hierophant and prophet Moses : he will tell it, This ἐρεῖ· “οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄρτος” (ibid.), ἡ τροφή, ἣν δέδωκεν ὁ θεὸς τῇ ψυχῇ, προσενέγκασθαι τὸ ἑαυτοῦ ῥῆμα καὶ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ λόγον· “οὗτος” γὰρ “ὁ ἄρτος, ὃν δέδωκεν ἡμῖν φαγεῖν, τοῦτο τὸ ῥῆμα.”

PHILO

174 LXI. Λέγει δὲ καὶ ἐν Δευτερονομίῳ· “καὶ ἐκάκωσέ σε καὶ ἐλιμαγχόνησέ σε, καὶ ἐψώμισέ σε τὸ μάννα, ὃ οὐκ ᾔδεισαν οἱ πατέρες σου, ἵνα ἀναγγείλῃ σοι, ὅτι οὐκ ἐπ’ ἄρτῳ μόνῳ ζήσεται ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ παντὶ ῥήματι <τῷ> ἐκπορευομένῳ διὰ στόματος θεοῦ” (Deut. viii. 3). ἡ κάκωσις αὕτη ἰλασμός ἐστι· καὶ γὰρ τῇ δεκάτῃ κακῶν ἡμῶν τὰς ψυχὰς ἰλάσκειται (Lev. xvi. 30). ὅταν γὰρ τὰ ἡδέα περισυλᾶται, δοκοῦμεν κακοῦσθαι, τὸ δ’ ἐστὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἴλεων τὸν θεὸν ἔχειν.

175 περιποιεῖ δ’ ἡμῖν καὶ λιμόν, οὐχ ἀρετῆς, ἀλλὰ τῶν ἐκ πάθους καὶ κακίας συνισταμένων· τεκμήριον δέ, διατρέφει γὰρ ἡμᾶς τῷ γενικωτάτῳ αὐτοῦ λόγῳ· τὸ γὰρ μάννα ἐρμηνεύεται “τί,” τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ γενικώτατον τῶν ὄντων· καὶ ὁ λόγος δὲ τοῦ θεοῦ ὑπεράνω παντός ἐστι τοῦ κόσμου καὶ πρεσβύτατος καὶ γενικώτατος τῶν ὅσα γέγονε. τοῦτον τὸν λόγον οὐκ ᾔδεισαν οἱ πατέρες, οὐχ οἱ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν, ἀλλ’ οἱ χρόνῳ πολιοὶ οἱ λέγοντες· “δῶμεν ἀρχηγὸν καὶ ἀποστρέψωμεν εἰς” τὸ

176 πάθος “Αἴγυπτον” (Num. xiv. 4). ἀναγγελλέτω [122] οὖν ὁ θεὸς τῇ ψυχῇ, ὅτι | “οὐκ ἐπ’ ἄρτῳ μόνῳ ζήσεται ὁ ἄνθρωπος” [κατ’ εἰκόνα], “ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ παντὶ ῥήματι τῷ ἐκπορευομένῳ διὰ στόματος θεοῦ,” τουτέστι καὶ διὰ παντός τοῦ λόγου τραφή-

<sup>a</sup> As Heinemann points out, De Congressu eruditionis

bread (ibid.) is the food which God hath given to the soul, for it to feed on His own utterance and His own word; for this bread, which He hath given us to eat, is "this word."

LXI. He says in Deuteronomy also: "And He afflicted thee and made thee weak by hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thy fathers knew not, that He might proclaim to thee, that not on bread alone shall man live, but on every word that goeth forth through the mouth of God" (Deut. viii. 3). This afflicting is propitiation; for on the tenth day also by afflicting our souls He makes propitiation (Lev. xvi. 30). For when we are being deprived of pleasant things, we think we are being afflicted, but in reality thereby we have God propitious to us. He occasions famine also to us, not a famine of virtue, but a famine of the creations<sup>a</sup> of passion and wickedness. We have a proof of this in His feeding us with His own most "generic"<sup>b</sup> word; for "manna" means "something,"<sup>c</sup> and this is the most generic of all terms. And the word of God is above all the world, and is eldest and most all-embracing of created things. This word "the fathers knew not." This does not mean the real forefathers, but those whose hair was grey from age who said, "Let us appoint a leader and let us return to Egypt," that is, "to passion" (Numb. xiv. 4). Let God then proclaim to the soul, "Not on bread only shall men live, but on every utterance that goeth forth through the mouth of God," that is to say he shall be fed gratia 172 proves that Philo wrote not τὸν συνισταμένον but τῶν συνισταμένων. <sup>b</sup> Or "all-embracing."

<sup>c</sup> Philo audaciously substitutes the indefinite for the interrogative pronoun ("something" for "what?"). See App. p. 483.

PHILO

σεται καὶ διὰ μέρους αὐτοῦ· τὸ μὲν γὰρ στόμα σύμβολον τοῦ λόγου, τὸ δὲ ῥῆμα μέρος αὐτοῦ. τρέφεται δὲ τῶν μὲν τελειοτέρων ἢ ψυχὴ ὄλω τῷ λόγῳ· ἀγαπήσαιμεν δ' ἂν ἡμεῖς, εἰ καὶ μέρει τραφείημεν αὐτοῦ.

- 177 LXII. Ἄλλ' οὗτοι μὲν εὔχονται θεοῦ λόγῳ τραφῆναι. ὁ δὲ Ἰακώβ καὶ τὸν λόγον ὑπερκύψας ὑπ' αὐτοῦ φησι τρέφεσθαι τοῦ θεοῦ, λέγει δ' οὕτως· “ὁ θεός, ᾧ εὐηρέστησαν οἱ πατέρες μου Ἀβραὰμ καὶ Ἰσαάκ, ὁ θεὸς ὁ τρέφων με ἐκ νεότητος ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης, ὁ ἄγγελος ὁ ῥυόμενός με ἐκ πάντων τῶν κακῶν, εὐλογῆσαι τὰ παιδία ταῦτα” (Gen. xlviii. 15, 16). ὠραῖος οὗτος ὁ τρόπος· τροφέα τὸν θεόν, οὐχὶ λόγον, ἡγεῖται, τὸν δὲ ἄγγελον, ὅς ἐστι λόγος, ὥσπερ ἰατρὸν κακῶν· φυσικώτατα· ἀρέσκει γὰρ αὐτῷ τὰ μὲν προηγούμενα ἀγαθὰ αὐτοπροσώπως αὐτὸν τὸν ὄντα διδόναι, τὰ δεύτερα δὲ τοὺς ἀγγέλους καὶ λόγους αὐτοῦ· δεύτερα δ' ἐστὶν ὅσα περιέχει κακῶν ἀπαλλαγὴν.
- 178 διὰ τοῦτ' οἶμαι καὶ ὑγείαν μὲν τὴν ἀπλήν, ἧς οὐ προηγείται νόσος ἐν τοῖς σώμασιν, ὁ θεὸς χαρίζεται δι' ἑαυτοῦ μόνου, τὴν δὲ γινομένην κατὰ νόσου φυγὴν καὶ διὰ τέχνης καὶ διὰ ἰατρικῆς, ἐπιγράφων καὶ ἐπιστήμη καὶ τεχνίτη τὸ δοκεῖν ἰᾶσθαι, πρὸς ἀλήθειαν αὐτὸς καὶ διὰ τούτων καὶ ἄνευ τούτων ἰώμενος. τοῦτον δὴ τὸν τρόπον καὶ ἐπὶ ψυχῆς ἔχει· τὰ μὲν ἀγαθὰ, τὰς τροφάς, αὐτὸς χαρίζεται δι' ἑαυτοῦ, διὰ δὲ ἀγγέλων καὶ λόγων ὅσα ἀπαλλαγὴν περιέχει κακῶν.

---

* Or “verb.”

both by all the word and by a part of it ; for the mouth is a symbol of utterance or speech, and the statement <sup>a</sup> is a part of speech. The soul of the most perfect is fed by the word as a whole ; we may well be content should we be fed even by a portion of it.

LXII. Now those of whom we have been speaking pray to be fed with the word of God. But Jacob, looking even higher than the word, says that he is fed by God Himself. He speaks on this wise : “ The God to Whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac were well-pleasing, the God Who feedeth me from my youth up unto this day, the Angel who delivereth me out of all my ills, bless these boys ” (Gen. xlviii. 15 f.). How beautiful is his tone and temper ! He looks on God as feeding him, not His Word ; but the Angel, who is the Word, as healer of ills. This is the language of a true philosopher. He thinks it meet and right that He that is should Himself in His own Person give the principal boons, while His Angels and Words give the secondary gifts ; and secondary are such as involve riddance from ills. For this reason, I think, God bestows health in the simplest sense, preceded by no illness in our bodies, by Himself only, but health that comes by way of escape from illness He bestows both through medical science and through the physician’s skill, letting both knowledge and practitioner enjoy the credit of healing, though it is He Himself that heals alike by these means and without them. Now His mode of dealing is the same in the case of the soul. The good things, the food, He Himself bestows with His own hand, but by the agency of Ange’s and Words such as involve riddance of ills.

- 179 LXIII. Ταῦτα δ' ἠϋξάτο αἰτιώμενος τὸν πολιτικὸν Ἰωσήφ, ὃς ἐτόλμησεν εἰπεῖν ὅτι “ ἐκθρέψω σε ἐκεῖ ”. “ σπεύσαντες ” γάρ φησιν “ ἀνάβητε πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου καὶ εἶπατε αὐτῷ Ἵάδε λέγει ” καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς, εἶτα “ κατὰβηθι πρὸς μὲ καὶ μὴ μείνης, ” ἐπὶ πᾶσι “ καὶ ἐκθρέψω σε ἐκεῖ, ἔτη γὰρ πέντε λιμός ” (Gen. xlv. 9, 11). ἐπιμεμφόμενος οὖν ἅμα καὶ διδάσκων τὸν δοκησίσοφον λέγει· ὦ οὗτος, ἴσθι τὰς ψυχῆς τροφὰς ἐπιστήμας ὑπαρχούσας, ἃς οὐχ ὁ αἰσθητὸς λόγος ἀλλ' ὁ θεὸς δωρεῖται, ὁ τρέφων ἐκ νεότητος καὶ πρώτης ἀκμῆς <με> μέχρι τελείου φωτὸς (cf. Gen. xlvi. 15) αὐτὸς
- 180 ἐμπλήσει. ἔπαθεν οὖν ταῦτόν ὁ Ἰωσήφ τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ Ῥαχήλ· καὶ γὰρ αὕτη ἐνόμισε δύνασθαί τι τὸ γενητόν, διὸ λέγει· “ δός μοι τέκνα ” (Gen. xxx. 1)· ἀλλ' ὃ γε περνηστὴς αὐτὴν μωμησάμενος ἐρεῖ· πλάνον πεπλάνησαι πολύν, οὐ γὰρ ἀντὶ θεοῦ ἐγώ |
- [123] εἶμι τοῦ μόνου δυναμένου τὰς ψυχῶν μήτρας ἀνοιγνύναι καὶ σπεῖρειν ἐν αὐταῖς ἀρετὰς καὶ ποιεῖν ἐγκύμονας καὶ τικτούσας τὰ καλά· κατὰμαθέ γέ τοι τὴν ἀδελφὴν σου Λείαν καὶ εὐρήσεις ἐξ οὐδενὸς γενητοῦ λαμβάνουσας τὴν σπορὰν καὶ τὴν γονὴν, ἀλλ' ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ· “ ἰδὼν γὰρ κύριος, ὅτι μισεῖται Λεία, ἤνοιξε τὴν μήτραν αὐτῆς· Ῥαχήλ δὲ ἦν στείρα ” (Gen. xxix. 31).
- 181 ἀλλ' ὄρα πάλιν τὴν ἐν τούτῳ λεπτοουργίαν· τῆς ἀρετῆς ὁ θεὸς τὰς μήτρας ἀνοίγει, σπεῖρων ἐν αὐταῖς τὰς καλὰς πράξεις, ἡ δὲ μήτρα, παραδεξαμένη τὴν ἀρετὴν ὑπὸ θεοῦ, οὐ τίκτει τῷ θεῷ—χρεῖος γὰρ οὐδενὸς ἐστὶν ὁ ὢν—ἀλλ' ἐμοὶ τῷ Ἰακώβ υἱοῦ· ἐμοῦ γὰρ ἔνεκα ἔσπειρεν ὁ θεὸς

LXIII. In offering this prayer Jacob passed a censure on Joseph the statesman, who had ventured to say "I will nourish thee there." His words were, "Make haste and go up to my father and say to him 'thus saith'" and so on, and then "come down to me and tarry not," finishing with "and I will nourish thee there, for there shall be famine for five years" (Gen. xlv. 9, 11). So Jacob at once chides and instructs the man wise in his own conceit when he says: "You must know, fine Sir, that the foods which nourish the soul are various forms of knowledge, and that these are not bestowed by the word of bodily sense but by God. He who reared me from youth and early prime to full-grown manhood (cf. Gen. xlvi. 15) will Himself satisfy my needs." Joseph therefore went through the same experience as his mother Rachel. She too imagined that a created being has some power, for she says "Give me children" (Gen. xxx. 1). But the Supplanter will find fault with her and say, 'Thou hast greatly erred, for I am not in the place of God, who alone hath power to open the wombs of souls, and to sow virtues in them, and to make them pregnant with noble things, and to give birth to them. Take note of Leah thy sister, and thou wilt find her receiving seed and offspring out of no created being but by God's own gift'; "for the Lord, when he saw that Leah was hated, opened her womb, but Rachel was barren" (Gen. xxix. 31).

But note again the delicate subtilty here. God opens the wombs of virtue, sowing in them noble doings, but the womb, after receiving virtue at God's hand, does not bear to God—for He that is in need of no one—but bears sons to me Jacob; for it may well be that it

PHILO

ἐν τῇ ἀρετῇ τάχα, οὐχ ἑαυτοῦ. οὐκοῦν ἄλλος μὲν ἀνὴρ τῆς Λείας ὁ ἡσυχάζόμενος εὐρίσκεται, ἄλλος δὲ πατὴρ τῶν ἐκ Λείας τέκνων· ἀνὴρ μὲν γὰρ ὁ τὴν μήτραν ἀνοίγων, πατὴρ δὲ τῶν τέκνων, ᾧ ταῦτα τίκτειν λέγεται.

- 182 LXIV. “Καὶ ἔχθραν θήσω ἀνὰ μέσον σοῦ καὶ ἀνὰ μέσον τῆς γυναικός” (Gen. iii. 15). ὄντως ἐστὶν ἡδονὴ ἔχθρὸν αἰσθήσει, καίτοι δοκοῦν ἐνίοις μάλιστα εἶναι φίλον· ἀλλ’ ὥσπερ τὸν κόλακα οὐκ ἂν τις ἐταῖρον εἶποι—νόσος γὰρ φιλίας ἢ κολακεία—οὐδὲ τὴν ἐταῖραν εὔνου ἐραστῇ—τοῖς γὰρ διδομένοις, οὐκ αὐτῷ, προσπέπονθεν—οὕτω καὶ τὴν ἡδονὴν ἐξετάζων εὐρήσεις νόθον οἰκειότητα ὑπο-
- 183 δυομένην πρὸς αἴσθησιν. ὅταν γέ τοι κορεσθῶμεν ἡδονῆς, ἐκπίπτει τῶν τόνων ἡμῶν τὰ αἰσθητήρια· ἢ τοὺς οἴνω ἢ ἔρωτι μεθύοντας οὐ καταμανθάνεις, ὅτι ὀρώντες οὐχ ὀρώσι καὶ ἀκούοντες οὐκ ἀκούουσι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθήσεων ἀφήρηται τὰς ἀκριβεῖς ἐνεργείας; ἔστι δ’ ὅτε καὶ διὰ πλήθος ἄμετρον τροφῆς ἅπαντες οἱ τόνοι τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὑφέιθησαν ὑπνου καταλαμβάνοντος, ὃς καὶ τοῦνομα ἔσχεν ἀπὸ τῆς ὑφέσεως αὐτῶν· χαλᾶται γὰρ τότε τὸ αἰσθητικὸν ὄργανον, ὥσπερ ἐν ταῖς ἐγρηγόρσεσιν ἐπιτείνεται, μηκέτι κωφὰς τὰς ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐκτὸς πλήξεις δεχόμενον ἀλλὰ γεγωνυίας καὶ ἐναργεῖς τὴν τε ἡχὴν ἄχρι τοῦ νοῦ διαδιδούσας· δεῖ γὰρ αὐτὸν πληχθέντα γνωρίσαι τὸ ἐκτὸς καὶ λαβεῖν αὐτοῦ

---

<sup>a</sup> Philo connects ὑφεις (“relaxing”) with ὑπνος (“sleep”).

was for my sake, not for His own sake that God sowed seed in virtue. Accordingly One is found to be husband to Leah, who is passed over in silence, and another to be father of the children born of Leah. For He that openeth the womb is husband, but father of the children is he to whom she is said to bear these.

LXIV. "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman" (Gen. iii. 15). In reality pleasure is a foe to sense, albeit thought by some to be a close friend. But just as no one would call the flatterer a comrade, since flattery is friendship diseased, and no one would say that the courtesan is kindly to her lover, since her tenderness is not for him but for his presents, so when you put pleasure to the test you will find that she is disguised under a counterfeit semblance of friendship with sense. You know how when we have surfeited ourselves with pleasure, our organs of sense relax their vigour. Or do you not observe men intoxicated with wine or love, how seeing they do not see and hearing they do not hear and how they are deprived of the power to exercise their other senses with any precision? It sometimes happens that owing to much overeating the vigour of all the senses is relaxed as sleep overtakes the man. Indeed sleep got its name from this relaxing<sup>a</sup> of the senses. For at such a time the organ of perception grows slack, just as when we wake up its intensity is heightened, and the impressions which we receive from without are no longer dull, but are clear and ringing, and carry the sound all the way to the mind; for the mind has to become cognizant of what is without by receiving a blow, and so to gain

PHILO

- 184 τύπον ἐναργῆ. LXV. τήρει δ' ὅτι οὐκ
 εἶπεν “ ἔχθραν θήσω σοὶ καὶ τῇ γυναικί,” ἀλλὰ “ ἀνὰ μέσον σου καὶ τῆς γυναικός.” διὰ τί δέ;
 ὅτι περὶ τὸ μέσον καὶ ὡς ἂν ἐν μεθορίῳ κείμενον
 ἡδονῆς καὶ αἰσθήσεως γίνεται τούτων ὁ πόλεμος.
- [124] τὸ δὲ μέσον ἀμφοῖν | ἐστὶ τὸ πότιμον, τὸ ἐδώδιμον,
 τὸ εὐτρεπὲς πρὸς τὰ τοιαῦτα πάντα, ὧν ἕκαστον
 αἰσθητὸν τέ ἐστὶ καὶ ποιητικὸν ἡδονῆς. ὅταν οὖν
 ἀπλήστως ἐμφορηθῇ τούτων ἡ ἡδονή, βλάβην
- 185 εὐθύς εἰργάσατο αἰσθήσει. τὸ δ' “ ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ
 σπέρματός σου καὶ τοῦ σπέρματος αὐτῆς ” εἴρηται
 πάλιν φυσικῶς· σπέρμα γὰρ πᾶν ἐστὶ γενέσεως
 ἀρχή· ἀρχὴ δὲ ἡδονῆς μὲν [οὐ] τὸ πάθος, [ἀλλ']
 ἄλογος ὄρμη, αἰσθήσεως δὲ ὁ νοῦς· ἀπὸ γὰρ τούτου
 καθάπερ τινὸς πηγῆς αἱ αἰσθητικαὶ τείνονται
 δυνάμεις, μάλιστα κατὰ τὸν ἱερώτατον Μωυσῆν, ὃς ἐκ τοῦ Ἰαδὰμ πεπλάσθαι φησὶ τὴν γυναῖκα, τὴν
 αἰσθησιν ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ. ὅπερ οὖν ἡδονὴ πρὸς
 αἰσθησιν, τοῦτο πάθος πρὸς νοῦν, ὡστ' ἐπειδὴ
 ἐκείνα ἐχθρά, καὶ ταῦτ' ἂν εἴη πολέμια.
- 186 LXVI. καὶ περιφανῆς ἐστὶν ὁ τῶνδε πόλεμος· κατὰ
 γοῦν τὰς ἐπικρατείας τοῦ νοῦ, ὅτε τοῖς νοητοῖς καὶ ἀσωμάτοις παραβάλλει, φυγαδεύεται τὸ πάθος· καὶ ἔμπαλιν ὅταν τοῦτο νικήσῃ νίκην κακὴν, εἴκει ὁ νοῦς κωλυόμενος προσέχειν ἑαυτῷ καὶ τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ
 πᾶσιν ἔργοις. φησὶ γοῦν ἐν ἑτέροις, ὅτι “ ὅταν
 μὲν ἐπῆρε τὰς χεῖρας Μωυσῆς, κατίσχυεν Ἰσραὴλ, ὅταν δὲ καθῆκε, κατίσχυεν Ἀμαλῆκ ” (Exod. xvii.
 11), τοῦτο παριστὰς ὅτι ὁ νοῦς ἐπειδὴ μὲν
 ἐξάρη αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τῶν θνητῶν καὶ μετεωρισθῆ,

a vivid impression of it. LXV. Observe that the words are not "I will set enmity for thee and the woman," but "between thee and the woman." Now why is it put so? Because it is over that which is between pleasure and sense, over that which lies in their boundary so to speak, that the warfare of these two arises. But what is between them both are drinkables, eatables, what is adapted to all such purposes, each one of them being both an object of sense and a thing productive of pleasure. When pleasure, therefore, has indulged immoderately in these, it forthwith inflicts injury on sense. The expression again "between thy seed and her seed" is full of philosophical truth: for every seed is a starting-point of existence, but the starting-point of pleasure is passion, an irrational impulse, that of sense the mind; for from the mind as from a fountain the faculties of sense flow forth and extend. This is certainly taught by Moses, the holy prophet, who says that the woman was fashioned out of Adam, sense (that is) out of mind. What pleasure, then, is to sense, that passion is to mind. Since, therefore, the former pair are mutually hostile, the latter must also be at war with each other.

LXVI. And their warfare is patent. When mind is victorious, devoting itself to immaterial things its proper object, passion quits the scene: and on the other hand; when passion has won an evil victory, mind gives in, being prevented from giving heed to itself and to all its own occupations. Moses elsewhere says, "Whenever Moses lifted up his hands, Israel prevailed, but when he dropped them, Amalek prevailed" (Exod. xvii. 11), showing that when the mind lifts itself up away from mortal things and is

PHILO

- ῥώννυται τὸ ὄρων τὸν θεόν, ὅπερ ἐστὶν Ἰσραήλ,
 ἐπειδὴν δὲ καθῆ τούς ἰδίους τόνους καὶ ἐξασθενήσῃ,
 αὐτίκα τὸ πάθος ἰσχύσει, ὃ Ἀμαλήκ, ὃς ἐρμηνεύε-ται λαὸς ἐκλείχων· ὄντως γὰρ διεσθίει τὴν ὅλην
 ψυχὴν καὶ ἐκλιχμάται, μηδὲν ἐν αὐτῇ σπέρμα ἢ 187 ζώπυρον ἀρετῆς ὑπολείπων. παρὸ καὶ λέγεται
 “ἀρχὴ ἐθνῶν Ἀμαλήκ” (Num. xxiv. 20), ὅτι
 τῶν μιγάδων καὶ συγκλύδων καὶ πεφυρμένων
 ἀβουλεῖ τὸ πάθος ἄρχει καὶ κυριεύει. διὰ τούτου
 πᾶς ὁ ψυχῆς ἀναρριπίζεται πόλεμος· αἷς γοῦν
 χαρίζεται διανοίαις ὃ θεὸς εἰρήνην, ταύταις
 ὁμολογεῖ ἀπαλείψει “τὸ μνημόσυνον Ἀμαλήκ ἐκ τῆς ὑπ’ οὐρανόν” (Exod. xvii. 14).
- 188 LXVII. Τὸ δὲ “αὐτὸς σου τηρήσει κεφαλὴν, καὶ σὺ τηρήσεις αὐτοῦ πτέρναν” (Gen. iii. 15)
 τῇ μὲν φωνῇ βαρβαρισμός ἐστι, τῷ δὲ σημαίνο-μένω κατόρθωμα· τῷ γὰρ ὄφει λέγεται περὶ τῆς
 γυναικός, ἢ δὲ γυνὴ “αὐτὸς” οὐκ ἐστίν, ἀλλ’ “αὐτή.” τί οὖν λεκτέον; ἀπὸ τοῦ περὶ τῆς
 γυναικὸς λόγου μετελήλυθεν ἐπὶ τὸ σπέρμα καὶ
 [125] τὴν ἀρχὴν αὐτῆς· ἀρχὴ δὲ ἦν αἰσθήσεως | ὃ νοῦς·
 οὗτος δὲ ἄρρηγ, ἐφ’ οὗ χρὴ λέγειν αὐτὸς καὶ
 αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα. ὀρθῶς οὖν τῇ ἡδονῇ λέγεται, ὅτι ὃ νοῦς σου τηρήσει τὸ κεφάλαιον καὶ
 ἡγεμονικὸν δόγμα, καὶ σὺ τηρήσεις αὐτοῦ, τοῦ νοῦ, τὰς ἐπιβάσεις καὶ ἐφιδρύσεις τῶν ἀρεσκόντων, αἷς αἱ πτέρναι κατὰ λόγον εἰκάσθησαν.
- 189 LXVIII. τὸ δὲ “τηρήσει” δύο δηλοῖ· ἐν μὲν τὸ
 οἶον διαφυλάξει καὶ διασώσει, ἕτερον δὲ τὸ ἴσον

<sup>a</sup> The technical term for an error affecting a single word.

borne aloft, that which sees God, which is Israel, gains strength, but when it has lowered its special powers and grown weak, immediately passion, named "Amalek," which means "a people licking out," will become strong: for in very deed it eats up the whole soul and licks it out, leaving behind in it no seed or spark of virtue. In keeping with this are the words "Amalek the first of the nations" (Numb. xxiv. 20), because passion rules and lords it over promiscuous hordes that have drifted together without purpose or meaning. Through passion all the war of the soul is fanned into flame, and so God promises to minds to which He vouchsafes the gift of peace, that He will blot out "the memorial of Amalek from under heaven" (Exod. xvii. 14).

LXVII. The sentence "he shall watch thy head, and thou shalt watch his heel" (Gen. iii. 15) is a barbarism,<sup>a</sup> but has a perfectly correct meaning. It is addressed to the serpent concerning the woman, but the woman is not "he" but "she." What is to be said then? He has left off speaking about the woman and passed on to her seed and origin; but the mind is the origin of sense; and mind is masculine, in speaking of which we should use the pronouns "he" and "his" and so on. Rightly, then, is it said to Pleasure, "the Mind shall watch thy chief and principal doctrine, and thou shalt watch it, the Mind, as it acts and rests upon its accepted tenets."<sup>b</sup> This basing of conduct and principle on tenets is naturally represented by the word "heels." LXVIII. The word "shall watch" has two meanings, one like "shall guard and preserve," the other equivalent to "shall watch for to

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 483.

PHILO

- τῷ ἐπιτηρήσει πρὸς ἀναίρεσιν. ἀνάγκη δὲ τὸν νοῦν ἢ φαῦλον ἢ σπουδαῖον εἶναι· ὁ μὲν οὖν ἄφρων φύλαξ καὶ ταμίας ἂν γένοιτο τῆς ἡδονῆς, χαίρει γὰρ αὐτῇ, ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος ἐχθρός, καταδοκῶν ὅτε ἐπιθέμενος ἰσχύσει καθελεῖν αὐτὴν εἰσάπαν. καὶ μὴν ἔμπαλιν ἢ ἡδονὴ τοῦ μὲν ἄφρονος διατηρεῖ τὴν ἐπίβασιν, τοῦ δὲ σοφοῦ λύειν καὶ ἀναιρεῖν ἐπιχειρεῖ τὴν ἔνστασιν, ἡγουμένη τὸν μὲν κατά-
 190 λυσιν αὐτῆς μελετᾶν, τὸν δ' ἄφρονα δι' ὧν μάλιστα σωθήσεται. ἀλλ' ὅμως πτερνίζειν δοκοῦσα καὶ ἀπατᾶν τὸν ἀστεῖον αὐτὴ πτερνισθήσεται πρὸς τοῦ πάλην ἡσκηκότος Ἰακώβ—πάλην δ' οὐ τὴν σώματος ἀλλ' ἦν παλαίει ψυχὴ πρὸς τοὺς ἀνταγωνιστὰς τρόπους αὐτῆς πάθει καὶ κακίαις μαχομένη— καὶ οὐ πρότερον ἀνήσει πτέρναν τοῦ ἀνταγωνιστοῦ πάθους, πρὶν ἀπειπεῖν αὐτὸ καὶ ὁμολογήσαι, ὅτι ἐπτέρνισται καὶ νενίκηται δῖς, ἔν τε τοῖς πρωτοτοκίοις καὶ ἐν τῷ εὐλογιστεῖν.
 191 “δικαίως” γὰρ φησιν “ἐκλήθη τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἰακώβ, ἐπτέρνικέ με γὰρ ἤδη δεύτερον· τότε τὰ πρωτοτόκιά μου εἴληφε, καὶ νῦν εἴληφε τὴν εὐλογίαν μου” (Gen. xxvii. 36). πρεσβύτερα δὲ ὁ μὲν φαῦλος ἡγεῖται τὰ σώματος, ὁ δ' ἀστεῖος τὰ ψυχῆς, ἃ καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειάν ἐστιν, οὐ χρόνω ἀλλὰ δυνάμει καὶ ἀξιώματι πρεσβύτερα καὶ πρῶτα ὄντως, ὡς καὶ ἄρχων ἐν πόλει· ἡγεμονίς δὲ τοῦ συγκρίματος ἢ ψυχῆ.
 192 LXIX. Εἴληφεν οὖν τὰ πρῶτα ὁ πρῶτος κατ' ἀρετὴν, ἃ καὶ ἐπέβαλεν αὐτῷ· εἴληφε γὰρ καὶ <τὸ>

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

destroy." Now the mind must needs be either bad or good. The foolish mind will show itself a guardian and steward of pleasure, seeing that its delight is in pleasure ; but the good mind will prove its enemy, watching eagerly for the moment when it shall set upon it and achieve its utter destruction. And mark this : Pleasure on the other hand watches over and preserves the procedure of the foolish mind, but endeavours to break up and destroy the way of life<sup>a</sup> of the wise mind, holding that the latter is planning her ruin, while the former is devising the best means to preserve her. But in spite of her expecting to throw and cheat the good mind, she shall herself be thrown by Jacob who is practised in wrestling, not the bodily wrestling but that in which the soul engages against dispositions that are her antagonists, fighting as she does with passions and wickednesses. And Jacob shall not let go the heel of his adversary, passion, till it has given in, and acknowledged that it has been twice thrown and vanquished, both in the matter of the birthright and in the blessing. For says Esau, "Rightly was his name called Jacob, for he hath supplanted me twice already ; then he took my birthright, and now he has taken my blessing" (Gen. xxvii. 36). The bad man regards bodily things as more worshipful, the good man the things of the soul, as they are in reality, not in age but in value and dignity more worshipful, and really first, as is a magistrate in a city ; and it is the soul that is sovereign over our composite being.

LXIX. He therefore that is first in virtue has received the things that are first, which indeed were his portion ; for he has received the blessing also εὐλογιστεῖν σὺν εὐχαῖς τελείαις. μάταιος δὲ καὶ οἰησίσοφος ὁ λέγων “ τὰς ἐμὰς εὐλογίας καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πρωτοτόκια εἴληφεν ”· οὐ γὰρ τὰ σά, ὦ οὗτος, λαμβάνει, ἀλλὰ τοῖς σοῖς τὰ ἐναντία· τὰ μὲν γὰρ σὰ δουλείας, τὰ δ’ ἐκείνου δεσποτείας ἠξίωται·

PHILO

- 193 καὶ εἰ ἀγαπήσεις δούλος γενέσθαι τοῦ σοφοῦ, νουθεσίας καὶ σωφρονισμοῦ κοινωνήσεις, ἀμαθίαν καὶ ἀπαιδευσίαν κῆρας ψυχῆς ἀποβαλὼν· εὐχόμενος γὰρ ὁ πατήρ σοί φησιν, ὅτι “ τῷ ἀδελφῷ σου δουλεύσεις ” (Gen. xxvii. 40)· ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ νῦν —οὐ γὰρ ἀνέξεταιί σε ἀφηνιάζοντα—ἀλλ’ ὅταν “ ἐκλύσης τὸν ζυγὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ τραχήλου σου ” (ib.), τὸ αὔχημα καὶ φρύαγμα ἀποβαλὼν ὃ
- [126] ἐκτήσω ὑποζεύξας | σεαυτὸν ὀχήματι παθῶν, ἡνιο-
 194 χούσης ἀφροσύνης. νυνὶ μὲν δούλος εἰ χαλεπῶν καὶ ἀφορήτων τῶν ἐν σαυτῷ δεσποτῶν, οἷς νόμος ἐστὶ μηδένα ἐλεύθερον ποιεῖν· ἐὰν δὲ τούτους δρασμῷ χρησάμενος καταλίπης, ὑποδέξεταιί σε φιλόδουλος δεσπότης ἐπ’ ἐλπίσι χρησταῖς ἐλευθερίας καὶ οὐκ ἐκδώσει ἔτι τοῖς προτέροις δεσπότηαις, μαθὼν παρὰ Μωυσέως δίδαγμα καὶ δόγμα ἀναγκαῖον, “ μὴ παραδιδόναι παῖδα τῷ κυρίῳ, ὃς προστέθειται αὐτῷ παρὰ τοῦ κυρίου· μετὰ γὰρ αὐτοῦ κατοικήσει ἐν παντὶ τόπῳ, ὃ ἐὰν ἀρέσκη
- 195 αὐτῷ ” (Deut. xxiii. 15, 16). LXX. ἀλλ’ ἕως οὐκ ἀποδέδρακας, ἔτι δ’ ἐγκεχαλίνωσαι ταῖς ἐκείνων τῶν δεσποτῶν ἡνίαις, ἀνάξιος εἰ δουλεύειν σοφῷ τεκμήριον μέγιστον ἦθους ἀνελευθέρου καὶ δουλοπρεποῦς παρέχεις, ὅταν λέγῃς “ τὰ ἐμὰ

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 192-195

accompanied by perfect prayers. But vainly deeming himself wise is he who says, " My blessings and my birthright hath he taken " : not thine, man, does he take, but those which are opposite to thine ; for those which are thine have been accounted meet for slavery, but his for lordship. And if thou shalt consent to become a slave of the wise one, thou shalt cast from thee ignorance and boorishness, plagues of the soul, and be partaker of admonition and correction. For in his prayer thy father says to thee, " To thy brother shalt thou be a slave " (Gen. xxvii. 40) ; but not now shall this be, for he will not put up with thy restiveness, but when thou shalt have loosed the yoke from thy neck " (ibid.), casting from thee vaunting and insolence which thou didst acquire by yoking thyself to a chariot of passions, of which folly was the driver. Now indeed thou art a slave of the harsh and insufferable masters within thee, to whom it is a fixed law to set no one free. But if thou escape and abandon these, a master to whom his slaves are dear shall welcome thee, holding out bright hopes of liberty and shall not give thee up again to thy former masters. For he has learned from Moses a lesson and rule inviolable, " that a man deliver not up to his master a servant who has been handed over to him by the Lord ;<sup>a</sup> for he shall dwell with him in whatever place it liketh him best " (Deut. xxiii. 15 f.). LXX. But so long as thou hast not run away, but art still governed by the bit and bridle of thine old masters, thou art unworthy to be slave to a wise man. Thou affordest most sure proof of a servile character unworthy of a free man by saying

<sup>a</sup> i.e., " has taken refuge in Israel from a hard heathen master."

PHILO

- πρωτοτόκια καὶ τὰς ἐμὰς εὐλογίας” (Gen. xxvii. 36). εἰς ἄμετρον γὰρ ἀμαθίαν κεχωρηκότων αἶδε αἱ φωναί, ἐπειδὴ μόνῳ ἀρμόττει θεῷ λέγειν τὸ ἐμόν, αὐτοῦ γὰρ ὄντως κτήματα μόνου τὰ πάντα.
- 196 διὸ καὶ μαρτυρήσει, ὅταν φῆ “ τὰ δῶρά μου, δόματά μου, καρπώματά μου διατηρήσεις ” (Num. xxviii. 2), ὅτι δῶρα δομάτων διαφέρει· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἔμφασιν μεγέθους τελείων ἀγαθῶν δηλοῖ, ἃ τοῖς τελείοις χαρίζεται ὁ θεός, τὰ δ’ εἰς βραχύτατον ἔσταλται, ὧν μετέχουσιν οἱ εὐφυεῖς ἀσκηταὶ
- 197 οἱ προκόπτοντες. οὗ χάριν καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἀκολουθῶν τῷ θεοῦ θελήματι τὰ μὲν ὑπάρχοντα, ἅπερ ἦν αὐτῷ ἐκ θεοῦ, κατέχει, ἀποπέμπεται δὲ τὴν ἵππον τοῦ βασιλέως Σοδόμων (Gen. xiv. 21 ff.), ὡς καὶ τὰ ὑπαρκτὰ τῶν παλλακῶν. καὶ Μωυσῆς μέντοι τὰ μέγιστα δικαιονομεῖν ἀξιοὶ καὶ περὶ τῶν μεγίστων, τὰ δὲ βραχέα τῶν κριμάτων ἐπιτρέπει τοῖς δευτερεύουσι σκοπεῖν (cf. Exod.
- 198 xviii. 26). ὅστις δὲ τολμᾷ λέγειν ἑαυτοῦ τι εἶναι, δούλος τὸν πάντα αἰῶνα γεγράφεται, ὥσπερ ὁ λέγων “ ἠγάπηκα τὸν κύριόν μου καὶ τὴν γυναῖκά μου καὶ τὰ παιδιά μου· οὐκ ἀποτρέχω ἐλεύθερος ” (Exod. xxi. 5). εὖ γε τὸ ἑαυτῷ ὁμολογήσαι δουλείαν· πῶς γὰρ ὁ λέγων οὐ δούλος Ἐμὸς ὁ κύριος νοῦς ἐστι, κύριος ἑαυτοῦ καὶ αὐτοκράτωρ· ἐμὴ καὶ ἡ αἴσθησις, αὐταρκες τῶν σωμάτων κριτήριον· ἐμὰ καὶ τὰ τούτων ἔκγονα, τοῦ μὲν νοῦ τὰ νοητά, τῆς δ’ αἰσθήσεως τὰ αἰσθητά· ἐπ’

<sup>a</sup> See note on 24.

<sup>b</sup> A reference to Gen. xxv. 6.

<sup>c</sup> Literally, “ do not run away.”

“ my birthright and my blessings ” (Gen. xxvii. 36) ; for these utterances are those of men who are sunk in boundless ignorance, seeing that to speak of “ Mine ” befits God only, for all things are in reality the property of Him alone. For this reason He shall also testify, when he says, “ Thou shalt preserve My gifts, My grants, My fruits ” (Numb. xxviii. 2), that “ gifts ” excel “ grants.” For the term “ gifts ” brings out the sense of great and perfect boons, which God bestows upon the perfect ; “ grants ” have shrunk to a very meagre compass : these are for those of natural excellence who practise and make progress.

Because this is so, Abraham also in harmony with the will of God retains the property which had come to him from God, but gets rid of the horses <sup>a</sup> of the king of Sodom (Gen. xiv. 21 ff.), as also of the possessions of the concubines.<sup>b</sup> Moses, moreover, thinks fit to judge the weightiest cases and issues, but the investigation of the insignificant questions he commits to inferior officers (cf. Exod. xviii. 26). Whoever dares to say that anything is his own will thereby have registered himself a slave in perpetuity, even as the man who says “ I have come to love my master and my wife and my children : I decline to go away free ” <sup>c</sup> (Exod. xxi. 5). It is well that he acknowledged himself a slave ; for how can the man be other than a slave who says “ mine is the master, even mind,” that is its own master and absolute lord ; “ mine also is sense-perception,” a means of judging material forms that is dependent upon none ; “ mine also are the offspring of these,” Mind’s proper objects being Mind’s offspring, and sensible objects the offspring of sense ; “ for in my power it is to exercise mind and

PHILO

- 199 ἐμοὶ γὰρ τὸ νοεῖν, τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι. ἀλλὰ μὴ μόνον ἑαυτοῦ καταμαρτυρεῖτω, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ καταδικασθεῖς αἰωνίαν καὶ βεβαιοτάτην ὑπομένετω δουλείαν κελεύοντος τό τε οὖς τρυπᾶσθαι, ἵνα μὴ παραδέξῃται λόγους ἀρετῆς, καὶ δουλεύειν τὸν αἰῶνα τῷ νῶ καὶ τῇ αἰσθήσει, κακοῖς καὶ ἀνηλεέσι δεσπόταις.
- 200 LXXI. “Καὶ τῇ γυναικὶ εἶπε Πληθύνων πληθυνῶ τὰς λύπας σου καὶ τὸν στεναγμὸν σου” (Gen. iii. 16). τῆς γυναικός, ἣτις αἰσθησις ἦν, [127] ἰδιὸν ἐστὶν ἀλγηδὼν πάθος, ἢ λύπη καλεῖται· περὶ ὃ γὰρ γίνεται τὸ ἠδεσθαι, περὶ τοῦτο καὶ τὸ ἀλγεῖν· ἠδόμεθα δὲ διὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων, ὥστε ἐξ ἀνάγκης καὶ ἀλγοῦμεν δι’ αὐτῶν. ἀλλ’ ὁ μὲν σπουδαῖος καὶ κεκαθαρμένος νοῦς ἐλάχιστα ἀλγεῖ, ἥκιστα γὰρ ἐπιτίθενται αὐτῷ αἱ αἰσθήσεις· τῷ δ’ ἄφρονι περιττεῖται τὸ πάθος οὐδὲν ἔχοντι ἀλεξιφάρμακον ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ, ᾧ τὰς ἀπὸ τῶν αἰσθήσεων
- 201 καὶ αἰσθητῶν κῆρας ἀμυνεῖται. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐτέρως τύπτεται ὁ ἀθλητῆς καὶ ὁ δοῦλος, ὁ μὲν καθ’ ὑπόπτωσιν ἐνδιδούς πρὸς τὰς αἰκίας καὶ ὑπέικων, ὁ δ’ ἀθλητῆς ἀντέχων καὶ ἀντιστατῶν καὶ τὰς ἐπιφερομένας <πληγὰς> ἀποσειόμενος, καὶ κείρεις ἐτέρως μὲν ἄνθρωπον, ἐτέρως δὲ τὸ κῶδιον—τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἐν τῷ πάσχει μόνον ἐξετάζεται, ὁ δ’ ἄνθρωπος καὶ ἀντιδρᾷ καὶ ὥσπερ ἀντιπέπονθε
- 202 σχηματίζων ἑαυτὸν πρὸς τὸ κείρεσθαι—οὕτως ὁ μὲν ἀλόγιστος ἀνδραπόδων δίκην ἐτέρω ὑπέικει καὶ ὑποπίπτει ταῖς ἀλγηδόσιν ὡς ἀφορήτοις δεσποῖναις ἀντιβλέψαι πρὸς αὐτὰς ἀδυνατῶν, ἄρρενας to exercise the senses." But let him not only give evidence against himself. Let him be condemned also by God, and submit to a slavery eternal and inexorable when God bids his ear to be pierced, in order that it may not admit words of virtue, and bids him be slave for ever to Mind and to Sense, bad and pitiless masters.

° 201 ff. are reproduced in an expanded form in De Cher. 79 ff.

LXXI. And to the woman He said, " I will greatly multiply thy sorrows and thy groaning " (Gen. iii. 16). Woman, who is, as we have seen, Sense, is the subject of an experience peculiarly her own, namely grief, which is called " sorrow " ; for there is a quarter of our being in which gladness takes rise, and in that same quarter does grief also take rise : but it is through the senses that we feel gladness, so that of necessity we feel grief also through them. But the excellent and cleansed Mind grieves least, for the senses assail him least. But the foolish Mind experiences grief abundantly, having no antidote in the soul, with which to repel the deadly ills that come from the senses and their objects.<sup>a</sup> The athlete and the slave take a beating in different ways, the one submissively giving in and yielding to the stripes, while the athlete opposes and withstands and shakes off the blows that are falling upon him. You crop a man in one way, a (sheep's) fleece in another. The sheep has the rôle of mere passivity, whereas, in the man's case, there is not only an active reciprocity, but his very submission is, so to speak, also reciprocal, as he adapts his position and posture to the process of being cropped. Just in the same way the man who does not reason yields to another as slaves do, and submits to sorrows as intolerable mistresses, and is powerless to look them in the face, not able to

PHILO

καὶ ἐλευθέρους σπᾶν μὴ δυνάμενος λογισμούς, παρὸ δὴ καὶ πλήθος ἄπειρον διὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων αὐτῷ τῶν ὀδυνηρῶν ἐπαντλείται, ὁ δ' ἐπιστήμων ἀθλητοῦ τρόπον μετὰ δυνάμεως καὶ ῥώμης καρτερᾶς ἀντιβᾶς πρὸς τὰ ἀλγεινὰ πάντα ἀντιπνεῖ, ὡς μὴ τιτρώσκεσθαι πρὸς αὐτῶν, ἀλλ' ἐξαδιαφορεῖν ἕκαστον, καὶ μοι δοκεῖ νεανιευσάμενος ἂν ἐπιφωνῆσαι τὸ τραγικὸν πρὸς τὴν ἀλγηδόνα οὕτως·

<Πίμπρη>, κάταιθε σάρκας, ἐμπλήσθητί μου
πίνουσα κελαινὸν αἷμα· πρόσθε γὰρ κάτω
γῆς εἰσιν ἄστρα, γῆ δ' ἄνεισ' ἐς αἰθέρα,
πρὶν ἐξ ἐμοῦ σοι θῶπ' ἀπαντῆσαι λόγον.

203

LXXII. ὥσπερ δὲ τῇ αἰσθήσει τὰ ἀλγεινὰ πάντα παραυξήσας τέθεικεν ὁ θεός, οὕτω τῇ σπουδαίᾳ ψυχῇ πλήθος ἄφθονον ἀγαθῶν δεδώρηται. φησὶ γοῦν ἐπὶ τοῦ τελείου Ἀβραὰμ τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον· “κατ' ἐμαντοῦ ὤμοσα, λέγει κύριος· οὐ εἶνεκα ἐποίησας τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦτο καὶ οὐκ ἐφείσω τοῦ υἱοῦ σου τοῦ ἀγαπητοῦ δι' ἐμέ, ἦ μὴν εὐλογῶν εὐλογήσω σε, καὶ πληθύνων πληθυνῶ τὸ σπέρμα σου ὡς τοὺς ἀστέρας τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ ὡς τὴν ἄμμον τὴν παρὰ τὸ χεῖλος τῆς θαλάσσης” (Gen. xxii. 16, 17). εὖ καὶ τὸ ὄρκω βεβαιῶσαι τὴν ὑπόσχεσιν καὶ ὄρκω θεοπρεπεῖ· ὄρᾳς γὰρ ὅτι οὐ καθ' ἑτέρου ὀμνύει θεός, οὐδὲν γὰρ αὐτοῦ κρείττον, ἀλλὰ καθ' ἑαυτοῦ, ὃς ἐστι πάντων ἄριστος.

204 [128] Ἔφασαν δέ τινες, ὡς ἀνοίκειον ἦν ὀμνύναι· ὁ ὄρκος γὰρ πίστεως ἔνεκα παραλαμβάνεται, | πιστὸς δὲ μόνος ὁ θεός καὶ εἴ τις θεῷ φίλος, καθάπερ

<sup>a</sup> A Fragment of Euripides.

<sup>b</sup> By οὐ ἔνεκα LXX. means “because.” Philo ignores this un-Attic idiom. Cf. 209.

draw forth free and manly reasonings, and accordingly a vast mass of painful experiences pours in upon him through the senses. The man of knowledge on the contrary, stepping out like an athlete to meet all grievous things with strength and robust vigour, blows a counter-blast to them, so that he is not wounded by them, but regards each of them with absolute indifference ; and, methinks, he might with youthful spirit address to grief the proud vaunt in the play, saying :

Burn me, consume my flesh, drink my dark blood,
 Take fill of me ; for sooner shall the stars
 Go 'neath the earth, and earth go up to sky,
 Than thou shalt from these lips hear fawning word.<sup>a</sup>

LXXII. Now as for sense God has appointed all woeful things in larger measure, so on the earnest soul has He bestowed without stint an abundance of good things. For example in the case of perfect Abraham He speaks in this wise : “ By Myself I have sworn, saith the Lord, for Whose sake<sup>b</sup> thou hast done this thing, and on My account hast not spared thy son, thine only son, verily blessing will I bless thee, and multiplying will I multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven and as the sand which is by the sea shore ” (Gen. xxii. 16 f.). Good is it both that He confirmed the promise by an oath, and that He did so by an oath befitting God ; you mark that God swears not by some other thing, for nothing is higher than He, but by Himself, who is best of all things.

Some have said, that it was inappropriate for Him to swear ; for an oath is added to assist faith, and only God and one who is God's friend is faithful,

PHILO

Μωυσῆς λέγεται, “ πιστὸς ἐν παντὶ τῷ οἴκῳ ”
γεγενῆσθαι (Num. xii. 7). ἄλλως τε καὶ οἱ λόγοι
τοῦ θεοῦ εἰσιν ὄρκοι καὶ νόμοι τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεσμοὶ ἱεροπρεπέστατοι· τεκμήριον δὲ τῆς ἰσχυρότητος αὐτοῦ, ὃ ἂν εἴπη γίνεται, ὅπερ ἦν οἰκειό-τατον ὄρκω· ὥστ’ ἀκόλουθον ἂν εἴη λέγειν, ὅτι
πάντες οἱ τοῦ θεοῦ λόγοι εἰσιν ὄρκοι βεβαι-205 ούμενοι ἔργων ἀποτελέσμασι. LXXIII. φασί γε μὴν ὄρκον εἶναι μαρτυρίαν θεοῦ περὶ πράγματος ἀμφισβητουμένου· εἰ δὴ ὄμνυσιν ὁ θεός, ἑαυτῷ
μαρτυρεῖ, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ἄτοπον, ἕτερον γὰρ δεῖ
εἶναι τὸν ποιούμενον τὴν μαρτυρίαν καὶ τὸν ὑπὲρ
οὗ γίνεται. τί οὖν λεκτέον; πρῶτον μὲν ὡς οὐκ
ἔστιν ὑπαίτιον ἑαυτῷ μαρτυρεῖν τὸν θεόν· τίς γὰρ
ἂν ἄλλος γένοιτο ἰκανὸς αὐτῷ μαρτυρῆσαι; ἔπειτα
πάντ’ ἐστὶν αὐτὸς ἑαυτῷ τὰ τιμιώτατα, συγγενῆς οἰκεῖος φίλος ἀρετῇ εὐδαιμονία μακαριότης ἐπι-
στήμη σύνεσις ἀρχὴ τέλος ὅλον πᾶν δικαστῆς 206 γνώμη βουλὴ νόμος πρᾶξις ἡγεμονία. ἄλλως τε ἂν τὸ “ κατ’ ἑμαυτοῦ ὤμοσα ” ὄν χρή τρόπον ἐκδεξώμεθα, παυσόμεθα τῆς ἄγαν σοφιστείας.
μήποτ’ οὖν ἐστι τοιοῦτον· οὐδὲν τῶν δυναμένων
πιστοῦν δύναται παγίως περὶ θεοῦ πιστῶσαι, οὐδενὶ γὰρ ἔδειξεν αὐτοῦ τὴν φύσιν, ἀλλ’ ἀόρατον
αὐτὴν παντὶ τῷ γένει παρεσκεύασε· τίς ἂν ἰσχύσαι
ἢ ὅτι ἀσώματον ἢ ὅτι σῶμα ἢ ὅτι ποιὸν ἢ ὅτι ἄποιον τὸ αἴτιον εἰπεῖν ἢ συνόλως περὶ οὐσίας ἢ ποιότητος ἢ σχέσεως ἢ κινήσεως αὐτοῦ βεβαίως ἀποφήνασθαι; ἀλλὰ περὶ γε ἑαυτοῦ μόνος ἰσχυ-

* See App. p. 483.

even as Moses is said to have been found "faithful in all His house" (Numb. xii. 7). Moreover, the very words of God are oaths and laws of God and most sacred ordinances; and a proof of His sure strength is that whatever He saith cometh to pass, and this is specially characteristic of an oath. It would seem to be a corollary from this that all God's words are oaths receiving confirmation by accomplishment in act. LXXIII. They say indeed that an oath is a calling God to witness to a point which is disputed; so if it is God that swears, He bears witness to Himself, which is absurd, for he that bears the witness must needs be a different person from him on whose behalf it is borne. What then must we say? First that there is nothing amiss in God bearing witness to Himself. For who else would be capable of bearing witness to Him? Secondly He Himself is to Himself all that is most precious, kinsman, intimate, friend, virtue, happiness, blessedness, knowledge, understanding, beginning, end, whole, everything, judge, decision, counsel, law, process, sovereignty. Besides if we once take "by Myself have I sworn" in the right way, we shall quit this excessive quibbling. Probably then the truth of the matter is something like this. Nothing that can give assurance can give positive assurance touching God, for to none has He shown His nature, but He has rendered it invisible to our whole race. Who can assert of the First Cause either that It is without body or that It is a body, that It is of such a kind or that It is of no kind?<sup>a</sup> In a word who can make any positive assertion concerning His essence or quality or state or movement? Nay He alone shall affirm anything regarding Himself since

PHILO

ριείται, ἐπεὶ καὶ μόνος ἀψευδῶς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φύσιν 207 ἠκρίβωσε. βεβαιωτῆς οὖν ἰσχυρότατος ἑαυτοῦ τὸ πρῶτον, ἔπειτα καὶ τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦ μόνος ὁ θεός, ὥστ' εἰκότως ὤμνυε καθ' ἑαυτοῦ πιστούμενος ἑαυτόν, ὃ μὴ δυνατὸν ἦν ἄλλῳ.

διὸ καὶ ἀσεβεῖς ἂν νομισθεῖεν οἱ φάσκοντες ὀμνύναι
 κατὰ θεοῦ· εἰκότως γὰρ οὐδεὶς ὀμνυσι κατ' αὐτοῦ,
 ὅτι γε οὐ περὶ τῆς φύσεως αὐτοῦ διαγνῶναι
 δύναται, ἀλλ' ἀγαπητόν, ἔαν <κατὰ> τοῦ ὀνόματος
 αὐτοῦ δυνηθῶμεν, ὅπερ ἦν τοῦ ἐρμηνέως λόγου·
 οὗτος γὰρ ἡμῶν τῶν ἀτελῶν ἂν εἴη θεός, τῶν δὲ 208 σοφῶν καὶ τελείων ὁ πρῶτος. καὶ Μωυσῆς μέντοι τὴν ὑπερβολὴν θαυμάσας τοῦ ἀγενήτου φησίν· “ καὶ τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ ὀμῆ ” (Deut. vi. 13),
 οὐχὶ αὐτῷ· ἱκανὸν γὰρ τῷ γενητῷ πιστοῦσθαι καὶ μαρτυρεῖσθαι λόγῳ θείῳ· ὁ δὲ θεὸς αὐτοῦ πίστις

[129] ἔστω καὶ μαρτυρία | βεβαιοτάτη.

209 LXXIV. Τὸ δὲ “ οὐ εἶνεκα ἐποίησας τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦτο ” (Gen. xxii. 16) σύμβολόν ἐστιν εὐσεβείας· τὸ γὰρ ἔνεκα θεοῦ μόνου πάντα πράττειν εὐσεβές·
 παρὸ καὶ ἀφειδοῦμεν τοῦ ἀγαπητοῦ τέκνου τῆς
 ἀρετῆς, τοῦ εὐδαιμονῆσαι, παραχωροῦντες αὐτὸ
 τῷ δημιουργῷ, ἄξιον τὸ γέννημα κρίνοντες κτῆμα
 θεοῦ νομίζεσθαι, ἀλλὰ μὴ γενητοῦ τινος. εὖ δὲ 210 τὸ φάναι “ εὐλογῶν εὐλογήσω ” (ib. 17)· πολλὰ
 γὰρ εὐλόγιστα δρῶσί τινες, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐπ' εὐλογίαις,

He alone has unerringly exact knowledge of His own nature. God alone therefore is the strongest security first for Himself, and in the next place for His deeds also, so that He naturally swore by Himself when giving assurance as to Himself, a thing impossible for another than He.

It follows that men who say that they swear by God should be considered actually impious ; for naturally no one swears by Him, seeing that he is unable to possess knowledge regarding His nature. No, we may be content if we are able to swear by His Name, which means (as we have seen) the interpreting word. For this must be God for us the imperfect folk, but, as for the wise and perfect, the primal Being is their God. Moses too, let us observe, filled with wonder at the transcendancy of the Uncreate, says, " and thou shalt swear by His Name " (Deut. vi. 13), not " by Him," for it is enough for the created being that he should be accredited and have witness borne to him by the Divine word : but let God be His own most sure guarantee and evidence.

LXXIV. The words, " for Whose sake thou hast done this thing " (Gen. xxii. 16) are a token of piety ; for it is pious to do all things for the sake of God only. That is why we are unsparing of that only child of virtue, even the happiness we have attained, surrendering it to the Creator, deeming such offspring meet to be reckoned a possession of God, but not of any created being. Beautifully significant are the words, " blessing I will bless " (ibid. 17) ; for there are some people who do many things that are of the nature of benedictions, when their underlying character is not fraught with ἐπεὶ καὶ ὁ φαῦλος ἔνια δρᾷ τῶν καθηκόντων οὐκ ἀφ' ἕξεως καθηκούσης, καὶ ὁ μεθύων μέντοι καὶ μεμηνῶς ἔστιν ὅτε νηφάλια φθέγγεται τε καὶ ποιεῖ, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ νηφούσης διανοίας, καὶ οἱ ἔτι κομιδῇ νήπιοι παῖδες οὐκ ἀπὸ λογικῆς ἕξεως — οὐπω γὰρ αὐτοὺς ἢ φύσις λογικοὺς πεπαίδευκε — πολλὰ πράττουσι καὶ λέγουσιν ὧν οἱ λογικοί. βούλεται δὲ ὁ νομοθέτης τὸν σοφὸν μὴ σχετικῶς καὶ εὐαλώτως καὶ ὡς ἂν ἐκ τύχης εὐλόγιστον δοκεῖν εἶναι, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ ἕξεως καὶ διαθέσεως εὐλόγιστου.

PHILO

- 211 LXXV. Οὐκ ἐξήρκεσεν οὖν τῇ βαρυδαίμονι αἰσθήσει χρῆσθαι πλουσίως ταῖς λύπαις, ἀλλὰ καὶ “ τῷ στεναγμῷ.” ἔστι δὲ στεναγμὸς σφοδρὰ καὶ ἐπιτεταμένη λύπη· πολλάκις γὰρ ἀλγοῦμεν οὐχὶ στένοντες· ὅταν δ' ἐπιστένωμεν, ἀνιαρῶς καὶ πάνυ ὀμβρηρῶς χρώμεθα ταῖς λύπαις. τὸ δὲ στένειν ἐστὶ διττόν· ἐν μὲν ὃ γίνεται περὶ τοὺς ἐπιθυμοῦντας καὶ ὀρεγομένους τῶν ἀδικιῶν καὶ μὴ τυγχάνοντας, ὃ δὴ καὶ φαῦλόν ἐστιν· ἕτερον δὲ ὃ γίνεται περὶ τοὺς μετανοοῦντας καὶ ἀχθομένους ἐπὶ τῇ πάλαι τροπῇ καὶ λέγοντας Κακοδαίμονες ἡμεῖς, ὅσον ἄρα χρόνον ἐλελήθειμεν νοσοῦντες ἀφροσύνης νόσον καὶ ἀνοίας καὶ ἀδικίας
- 212 ἐπιτηδευμάτων. τοῦτο δ' οὐ γίνεται, ἔαν μὴ τελευτήσῃ καὶ ἀποθάνῃ ἐκ τῆς ψυχῆς ὁ βασιλεὺς

<sup>a</sup> οὐκ ἐπ' εὐλογίαις. Cf. De Vita Mosis, i. 283, 2 Cor. ix. 6. In all three places the preposition probably marks the ground or  motive. This is made clear here by ἀπό ('from') taking the place of ἐπὶ in each of the examples which follow. God meant blessing not cursing when He suffered Balaam to go to Balak. The giver in 2 Corinthians gives out of an overflowing heart. Those here in view might seem, if blessing.<sup>a</sup> Why, even the bad man does some things that it is his duty to do without acting from a dutiful character.<sup>b</sup> Yes, and the drunken man and the madman now and then utter sober words and do sober deeds, but not from a sober mind ; and those who are still quite young children not from a fixedly rational state (for nature has not yet trained them to be rational), do and say many things that rational men do and say. But the lawgiver wishes the wise man to be accounted a man of benediction not as the outcome of a passing mood, or of being easily led by others, or as though by chance, but as the result of a fixed state and disposition charged with benediction.

LXXV. To return to our text. It was not enough for ill-starred sense to experience sorrows in large measure, it must indulge in "groaning" also. Groaning is intense and excessive sorrow. For we often grieve without groaning ; but when we groan over them, we let our sorrows bring on us a very storm of trouble and distress. Now groaning is of two kinds. One kind is found in men who desire and long for opportunities of wrongdoing and cannot get them, and this a bad kind. Another kind is that which is seen in those who repent and are vexed over their defection in former days and cry " Hapless we, how long a time had we, as is now evident, been ill all unaware of it with the illness of folly and senselessness and unrighteousness in our conduct." But this does not come about unless the king of Egypt, the godless and pleasure-loving judged by isolated acts, to be drawing upon a rich store of blessings, but are not really doing so.

<sup>b</sup> See App. pp. 483, 484.

PHILO

- τῆς Αἰγύπτου, ὁ ἄθεος καὶ φιλήδονος τρόπος· “μετὰ γὰρ τὰς ἡμέρας τὰς πολλὰς ἐκείνας ἔτελεύτησεν ὁ βασιλεὺς τῆς Αἰγύπτου”. εἴτ’ εὐθὺς
 ἀποθανούσης κακίας στενάζει ὁ ὄρων τὸν θεὸν [καὶ] τὴν ἑαυτοῦ τροπὴν, “κατεστέναξαν γὰρ οἱ υἱοὶ Ἰσραὴλ ἀπὸ τῶν σωματικῶν καὶ Αἰγυπτιακῶν ἔργων” (Exod. ii. 23). ἐπεὶ ζῶν γε ὁ βασιλεὺς
 καὶ φιλήδονος τρόπος ἐν ἡμῖν γεγηθέναι τὴν
 ψυχὴν ἀναπείθει ἐφ’ οἷς ἀμαρτάνει, ὅταν δὲ
- 213 τελευτήσῃ, στένει. διὸ καὶ ἐκβοᾷ πρὸς τὸν δεσπότην ἱκετεύουσα, μηκέτι τραπήναι μηδὲ ἀτελῆ
 τὴν τελείωσιν λαβεῖν· πολλὰς γὰρ ψυχαῖς μετανοία χρῆσθαι βουλευθείσαις οὐκ ἐπέτρεψεν ὁ θεός, ἀλλ’
 ὡσπερ ὑπὸ παλιρροίας εἰς τοῦμπαλιν ἀνεχώρησαν
- [130] τρόπον τινὰ τῆς Λῶτ | γυναικὸς (Gen. xix. 26)
 τῆς λιθουμένης διὰ τὸ Σοδόμων ἐρᾶν καὶ εἰς τὰς
 κατεστραμμένας ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ φύσεις ἀνατρέχειν.
- 214 LXXVI. Ἄλλὰ νυνὶ γέ φησιν ὅτι “ἀνέβη ἡ βοή αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸν θεόν” (Exod. ii. 23), μαρτυρῶν τῇ τοῦ ὄντος χάριτι· εἰ γὰρ μὴ δυνατῶς
 πρὸς ἑαυτὸν ἐκάλεσε τὸν ἱκέτην λόγον, οὐκ ἂν ἀνέβη, τουτέστιν οὐκ ἂν ἀνεβιβάσθη καὶ ηὐξήθη
 καὶ μετεωρεῖν ἤρξατο φυγῶν τὴν ταπεινότητα
 τῶν γηίνων. διὸ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἐξῆς φησιν· “ἰδοὺ κραυγὴ τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ ἦκει πρὸς μέ” (Exod.
- 215 iii. 9). πάνυ καλῶς τὸ φθάσαι μέχρι θεοῦ τὴν ἱκεσίαν· οὐκ ἂν δὲ ἔφθασεν, εἰ μὴ ὁ καλῶν χρηστὸς
 ἦν. ἐνίαις δὲ ψυχαῖς προαπαντᾷ· “ἦξω πρὸς σέ καὶ εὐλογήσω σε” (Exod. xx. 24). ὁρᾷς ὄση
 τοῦ αἰτίου ἢ χάρις φθάνοντος τὴν ἡμετέραν μέλ-

disposition, shall have met his end and died out of the soul: "for after those many days the king of Egypt died." Then straightway when wickedness has died, he that seeth God groans over his own failure, "for the children of Israel groaned by reason of their material and Egyptian works" (Exod. ii. 23). For while the king and pleasure-loving temper is alive in us it induces the soul to rejoice over the sins it is committing, but when he has died, it groans. And thus it is that it cries out to the Master beseeching that it may turn no more nor receive its consummation imperfectly. For many souls have desired to repent and not been permitted by God to do so, but have gone away backward as though drawn by a change of current. This befell Lot's wife, who became stone owing to her being enamoured of Sodom and reverting to the characters that had been overthrown by God.

LXXVI. Now, however, he says "their cry ascended to God" (Exod. ii. 23), bearing witness by so saying to the grace of the existent One; for had He not powerfully called to Himself the suppliant word, it would not have ascended, that is, it would not have been caused to mount, and have grown in volume and begun to soar on high after escaping from the baseness of the things of the earth. Wherefore in the sequel He says, "Behold, the cry of the children of Israel hath come to Me" (Exod. iii. 9). Very beautiful is it that the entreaty reached as far as God: but it would not have reached so far, but for the kindness of Him that called. Some souls He anticipates and goes forth to meet: "I will come to thee and will bless thee" (Exod. xx. 24). Thou seest how great is the grace of the First Cause, as He is

PHILO

- λησιν καὶ προαπαντῶντος εἰς εὐεργεσίαν παντελῆ τῆς ψυχῆς. καὶ χρησμός ἐστι δογματικὸς τὸ λεγόμενον· ἐὰν γὰρ ἔλθῃ εἰς τὴν διάνοιαν ἔννοια θεοῦ, εὐθὺς εὐλογιστεῖ τε καὶ πάσας τὰς νόσους
- 216 αὐτῆς ἰᾶται. ἡ δέ γε αἴσθησις αἰεὶ λυπεῖται καὶ στένει καὶ τίκτει μετ' ὀδύνης καὶ ἀλγηδόνων ἀνηκέστων τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι, ὡς καὶ αὐτὸς φησιν· “ ἐν λύπαις τέξῃ τέκνα ” (Gen. iii. 16)· τίκτει δὲ ἡ μὲν ὄρασις τὸ ὄραν, ἡ δὲ ἀκοή τὸ ἀκούειν, ἡ δὲ γεῦσις τὸ γεύεσθαι, καὶ συνόλως ἡ αἴσθησις τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι· ἀλλ' οὐκ ἄνευ χαλεπῆς ἀνίας τῷ ἄφρονι ἕκαστον τούτων ποιεῖται, ἐπιλύπως γὰρ οὗτος καὶ ὄρα καὶ ἀκούει καὶ γεύεται καὶ ὀσφραίνεται καὶ κοινῶς αἰσθάνεται.
- 217 LXXVII. “ Ἐμπαλιῶν δὲ τὴν ἀρετὴν εὐρήσεις μετὰ χαρᾶς ὑπερβαλλούσης [καὶ] κνοφοροῦσαν καὶ τὸν σπουδαῖον σὺν γέλωτι καὶ εὐθυμίᾳ γεννῶντα καὶ τὸ γέννημα ἀμφοῖν αὐτὸ γέλωτ' ὄν. ὡς μὲν οὖν ὁ σοφὸς χαίρων ἀλλ' οὐ λυπούμενος γεννᾷ, μαρτυρήσει λέγων οὕτως ὁ θεῖος λόγος· “ εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς τῷ Ἀβραάμ· Σάρα ἡ γυνὴ σου οὐ κληθήσεται Σάρα, ἀλλὰ Σάρρα αὐτῆς ἔσται τὸ ὄνομα· εὐλογήσω αὐτὴν καὶ δώσω σοι ἐξ αὐτῆς τέκνον ” (Gen. xvii. 15, 16)· εἶτ' ἐπιλέγει· “ καὶ ἔπεσεν Ἀβραάμ ἐπὶ πρόσωπον καὶ ἐγέλασε καὶ εἶπεν Εἰ τῷ ἑκατονταετεί γενήσεται, καὶ ἡ Σάρρα
- 218 ἐνενήκοντα ἔτων οὔσα τέξεται; ” (ib. 17) οὗτος μὲν δὴ φαίνεται γεγηθὼς καὶ γελῶν, ὅτι μέλλει γεννᾶν τὸ εὐδαιμονεῖν, τὸν Ἰσαάκ· γελᾷ δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀρετὴ Σάρρα, μαρτυρήσει δὲ ὁ αὐτὸς λέγων ὧδε· “ ἐξέλιπε Σάρρα γίνεσθαι τὰ γυναικεῖα, καὶ ἐγέλασε τῇ διανοίᾳ καὶ εἶπεν Οὐπω μοι γέγονε τὸ εὐ-

beforehand with our hesitation, and anticipates and meets us, bringing unlimited gain to the soul. And what is said is a divine intimation full of instruction. For if a thought of God come into the mind, He forthwith blesses it and heals all its sicknesses. Sense, however, is always sorrowing and groaning, and with pangs and incurable pain bringing forth perception, as God Himself says, "In sorrow shalt thou bring forth children" (Gen. iii. 16); sight brings forth seeing, the ear hearing, taste tasting, in a word sense perceiving: but not without sore distress to the foolish one does she do each of these things, for to such an one pain is caused as he sees and hears and tastes and smells and generally exercises any sense.

LXXVII. On the other hand, you will find virtue full of exceeding joy at her pregnancy, and the good man begetting with laughter and a glad heart, and the offspring of them both laughter itself. That the wise man begets with joy not sorrow, the Divine word shall testify in these words, "God said to Abraham, Sarai thy wife shall not be called Sarai, but Sarah shall be her name: I will bless her and will give thee a child of her" (Gen. xvii. 15 f.); then he says further, "And Abraham fell on his face and laughed and said, Shall he that is a hundred years old have a son, and shall Sarah who is ninety years old bear?" (ibid. 17). Abraham evidently rejoices and laughs, because he is to beget Isaac (who is), Happiness; and Sarah, who is Virtue, laughs also.<sup>a</sup> The same book shall witness to this when it says, "It ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women, and she laughed in her mind and said, Not

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 484.

PHILO

- δαιμονεῖν ἕως τοῦ νῦν· ὁ δὲ κύριός μου” θεῖος λόγος “πρεσβύτερός ἐστιν” (Gen. xviii. 11, 12), ᾧ προσεῖναι τοῦτο ἀνάγκη καὶ πιστεύειν καλὸν ὑπισχνουμένῳ. καὶ τὸ γέννημα δ’ ἐστὶ γέλως καὶ χαρά· τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ Ἰσαὰκ ἐρμηνεύεται. |
- [131] λυπέισθω τοιγαροῦν αἰσθησις, ἀρετὴ δ’ αἰεὶ χαι-
 219 ρέτω· καὶ γὰρ γεννηθέντος τοῦ εὐδαιμονεῖν φησι σεμννομένη· “γέλωτα ἐποίησέ μοι ὁ κύριος· ὅς γὰρ ἂν ἀκούσῃ, συγχαρεῖται μοι” (Gen. xxi. 6). ἀναπετάσαντες οὖν ὦτα, ᾧ μύσται, παραδέξασθε τελετὰς ἱερωτάτας· ὁ γέλως ἐστὶν ἢ χαρά, τὸ δὲ “ἐποίησεν” ἴσον τῷ ἐγέννησεν, ὡστ’ εἶναι τὸ λεγόμενον τοιοῦτον· Ἰσαὰκ ἐγέννησεν ὁ κύριος· αὐτὸς γὰρ πατὴρ ἐστὶ τῆς τελείας φύσεως, σπείρων ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς καὶ γεννῶν τὸ εὐδαιμονεῖν.
- 220 LXXVIII. “Καὶ πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα σου” φησὶν “ἢ ἀποστροφή σου” (Gen. iii. 16). δύο αἰσθήσεως ἄνδρες εἰσὶν, ὁ μὲν νόμιμος, ὁ δὲ φθορεὺς· ἄνδρὸς μὲν γὰρ <φθορέως> τρόπον τὸ μὲν ὄρατὸν κινεῖ τὴν ὄρασιν, ἢ δὲ φωνὴ τὴν ἀκοήν, ὁ δὲ χυλὸς τὴν γεῦσιν, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἕκαστον· ταῦτα δ’ ἀποστρέφει καὶ καλεῖ τὴν ἄλογον αἰσθησιν πρὸς ἑαυτὰ καὶ κατακρατεῖ καὶ κυριεύει· τό τε γὰρ κάλλος τὴν ὄρασιν ἐδουλώσατο ὃ τε ἡδὺς χυλὸς τὴν γεῦσιν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἕκαστον αἰσθητῶν τὴν
- 221 κατ’ αὐτὸ αἰσθησιν· ἴδε γέ τοι τὸν λίχνον, ὡς δουλεύει ταῖς παρασκευαῖς τῶν ὄσα ὀψαρτυταὶ καὶ σιτοπόνοι τεχνιτεύουσι, καὶ τὸν σεσοβημένον περὶ μέλος, πῶς ἐπικρατεῖται ὑπὸ κιθάρας ἢ αὐλοῦ ἢ καὶ ἄδειν ἐπισταμένου. τῇ δέ γε πρὸς τὸν νόμιμον ἄνδρα, τὸν νοῦν, ἀποστραφείσῃ μεγίστη ἐστὶν ὠφέλεια αἰσθήσει.

yet hath happiness befallen me till now but my Lord (the divine Word) is greater <sup>a</sup> (Gen. xviii. 11 f.), to whom this <sup>b</sup> must needs belong and whom I must believe when he promises good." Moreover, the offspring is laughter and joy, for that is what "Isaac" means. Let sense-perception therefore be sorrowful, but let virtue always rejoice: for again when Happiness has been born she says with pride "the Lord hath made laughter for me; for whosoever shall hear of it will rejoice with me" (Gen. xxi. 6). Therefore, O ye initiate, open your ears wide and take in holiest teachings. The "laughter" is joy, and "made" is equivalent to "beget," so that what is said is of this kind, the Lord begat Isaac; for He is Himself Father of the perfect nature, sowing and begetting happiness in men's souls.

LXXVIII. "And to thy husband," He says, "shall be thy resort" (Gen. iii. 16). Sense has two husbands, the one lawful, the other a seducer. After the fashion of a seducing husband the thing seen acts on the sight, the sound on the hearing, the flavour on the palate, and so with the rest one by one. And these turn away and invite to themselves the irrational sense and get the mastery of it and domineer over it. Beauty enslaves the sight, the pleasant savour the palate, and the several objects of sense enslave the sense corresponding to them. Look at that glutton, what a slave he is to the dishes prepared by the skill of cooks and confectioners. Mark that one wild with excitement over music, how he is swayed and held spellbound by harp or flute or it may be by a good singer. But to sense that has been turned from all else to Mind, her lawful husband, vast benefit befalls.

<sup>a</sup> Literally, "elder."

<sup>b</sup> i.e., happiness.

PHILO

- 222 LXXIX. Ἰδωμεν οὖν ἐξῆς, τίνα καὶ περὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ νοῦ διεξέρχεται παρὰ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον κινουμένου. “ τῷ δὲ Ἀδὰμ εἶπεν ὁ θεός “Οτι ἤκουσας τῆς φωνῆς τῆς γυναικός σου καὶ ἔφαγες ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, οὗ ἐνετειλάμην σοι μὴ φαγεῖν, ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ ἔφαγες, ἐπικατάρατος ἡ γῆ ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις σου” (Gen. iii. 17). ἀλυσιτελέστατόν ἐστιν ἀκούειν αἰσθήσεως νοῦν, ἀλλὰ μὴ αἰσθησιν νοῦ· αἰεὶ γὰρ τὸ κρεῖττον ἄρχειν, τὸ δὲ χεῖρον ἄρχεσθαι δεῖ.
- 223 νοῦς δὲ κρεῖττον αἰσθήσεως. ὥσπερ οὖν ἄρχοντος μὲν ἡνίοχου καὶ ταῖς ἡνίαις τὰ ζῶα ἄγοντος ἢ βούλεται ἄγεται τὸ ἄρμα, ἀφημιασάντων δὲ ἐκείνων καὶ κρατησάντων ὃ τε ἡνίοχος κατεσύρη πολλάκις τὰ τε ζῶα ἔστιν ὅτε τῇ ρύμῃ τῆς φορᾶς εἰς βόθρον κατηνέχθη πλημμελῶς τε πάντα φέρεται, καὶ ναῦς εὐθύδρομει μὲν, ἡνίκα τῶν οἰάκων λαβόμενος ὁ κυβερνήτης ἀκολούθως πηδαλιουχεῖ, περιτρέπεται δ’ ὅτε πνεύματος ἐναντίου περιπνεύσαντος τῇ
- 224 θαλάττῃ ὁ κλύδων ἐνώκησεν, οὕτως ἐπειδὴν μὲν
- 132] ὁ τῆς ψυχῆς ἡνίοχος ἢ κυβερνήτης | ὁ νοῦς ἄρχῃ τοῦ ζώου ὅλου καθάπερ ἡγεμῶν πόλεως, εὐθύνεται ὁ βίος, ὅταν δὲ ἡ ἄλογος αἰσθησις φέρηται τὰ πρωτεῖα, σύγχυσις καταλαμβάνει δεινῇ, οἶα δούλων δεσπόταις ἐπιτεθειμένων· τότε γάρ, εἰ δεῖ τάληθές εἰπεῖν, ἐμπίπραται φλεγόμενος ὁ νοῦς, τῶν αἰσθήσεων τὴν φλόγα ἐγειρουσῶν τὰ αἰσθητὰ ὑποβεβλημένων. LXXX. καὶ Μωυσῆς μέντοι δηλοῖ περὶ τῆς τοιαύτης ἐμπρήσεως, ἣ γίνεται διὰ τῶν
- 225 αἰσθήσεων, τοῦ νοῦ, ὅταν λέγῃ: “ καὶ αἱ γυναῖκες ἔτι προσεξέκαυσαν πῦρ ἐν Μωάβ” —ἐρμηνεύεται γὰρ

<sup>a</sup> Heb. “for thy sake.”

LXXIX. Let us observe in the next place how he discourses respecting Mind itself when acted upon in violation of the right principle. "To Adam God said, 'Because thou hast listened to the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee not to eat [of it thou hast eaten], cursed is the ground in respect of thy labours<sup>a</sup>'" (Gen. iii. 17). Most profitless is it that Mind should listen to Sense-perception, and not Sense-perception to Mind: for it is always right that the superior should rule and the inferior be ruled; and Mind is superior to Sense-perception. When the charioteer is in command and guides the horses with the reins, the chariot goes the way he wishes, but if the horses have become unruly and got the upper hand, it has often happened that the charioteer has been dragged down and that the horses have been precipitated into a ditch by the violence of their motion, and that there is a general disaster. A ship, again, keeps to her straight course, when the helmsman grasping the tiller steers accordingly, but capsizes when a contrary wind has sprung up over the sea, and the surge has settled in it. Just so, when Mind, the charioteer or helmsman of the soul, rules the whole living being as a governor does a city, the life holds a straight course, but when irrational sense gains the chief place, a terrible confusion overtakes it, just as when slaves have risen against masters: for then, in very deed, the mind is set on fire and is all ablaze, and that fire is kindled by the objects of sense which Sense-perception supplies. LXXX. Moses, moreover, gives intimations of such a conflagration of the mind as this, occasioned by the senses, when he says: "And the women kindled yet further a fire in Moab."

PHILO

“ ἐκ πατρός,” ὁ τε πατήρ ἡμῶν ὁ νοῦς ἐστι—
 “ τότε ” γάρ φησιν “ ἐροῦσιν οἱ αἰνιγματισταὶ Ἐλθετε εἰς Ἐσεβῶν, ἵνα οἰκοδομηθῇ καὶ κατα-σκευασθῇ πόλις Σηῶν. ὅτι πῦρ ἐξῆλθεν ἐξ Ἐσε-βῶν, φλόξ ἐκ πόλεως Σηῶν, καὶ κατέφαγεν ἕως
 Μωάβ καὶ κατέπιε στήλας Ἀρνῶν. οὐαὶ σοι, Μωάβ· ἀπώλου, λαὸς Χαμῶς. ἀπεδόθησαν <οἱ>
 υἱοὶ αὐτῶν σφύζεσθαι, καὶ αἱ θυγατέρες αὐτῶν αἰχμάλωτοι τῷ βασιλεῖ Ἀμορραίων Σηῶν, καὶ τὸ σπέρμα αὐτῶν ἀπολείται Ἐσεβῶν ἕως Δεβῶν,
 καὶ <αἱ> γυναῖκες ἔτι προσεξέκαυσαν πῦρ ἐπὶ 226 Μωάβ ” (Num. xxi. 27-30). Ἐσεβῶν ἐρμηνεύε-ται λογισμοί· οὗτοι δ’ εἰσὶν αἰνίγματα ἀσα-φείας γέμοντα. ἴδε λογισμὸν ἰατροῦ· κενώσω τὸν
 κάμνοντα, θρέψω, φαρμάκοις ἰάσομαι <καὶ> διαίτη,
 τεμῶ, καύσω· ἀλλὰ πολλάκις ἢ φύσις καὶ ἄνευ
 τούτων ἰάσατο καὶ μετὰ τούτων ἀπώλεσεν, ὡς τοὺς ἰατροῦ πάντας ἐπιλογισμοὺς ἐνύπνια εὔρεθῆναι ἀσαφείας καὶ αἰνιγμάτων πλήρη. πάλιν ὁ 227 γεωπόνος φησί· σπέρματα βαλοῦμαι, φυτεύσω, αὐξήσει τὰ φυτά, καρποὺς ταῦτα οἶσει, οἱ οὐ
 μόνον εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν ἔσονται χρήσιμοι τὴν ἀναγ-καίαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς περιουσίαν ἀρκέσουσιν· εἴτ’
 ἐξαίφνης φλόξ ἢ ζάλη ἢ ἐπομβρίαὶ συνεχεῖς διέφθειραν πάντα· ἔστι δ’ ὅτε τὰ μὲν ἐτελεσιουργγήθη, ὁ δὲ ταῦτα λογισάμενος οὐκ ὤνατο, ἀλλὰ προαπέθανε καὶ ἐπὶ τοῖς τῶν πονηθέντων καρποῖς
 μάτην ἀπόλαυσιν ἐμαντεύσατο.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 225-227

For "Moab" means "out of a father," and our father is the Mind. His words are, "Then shall they that propound riddles say, Come to Heshbon that it may be built, and that the city of Sihon may be constructed. For a fire hath gone forth from Heshbon and a flame from the city of Sihon, and it devoured as far as Moab and drank up the boundaries of Arnon. Woe to thee, Moab, thou art undone, O people of Chemosh. Their sons were given up as fugitives,<sup>a</sup> and their daughters as prisoners of war to Sihon, king of the Amorites, and their seed shall perish, Heshbon unto Dibon, and their women yet further kindled a fire against Moab" (Numb. xxi. 27-30). "Heshbon" means "reasonings": and "reasonings" are riddles full of obscurity. Look at a doctor's reasonings: "I will purge the patient, I will feed him up, I will prescribe medicines and put him on a diet that will make him well, I will operate, I will cauterize." But many a time has nature either brought recovery without these means being used, or brought death when these have been resorted to, proving all the doctor's calculations to be vain dreams, nothing but guesswork in the dark. Again, the farmer says, "I will sow, I will plant, the plants will grow, seeds and plants will yield crops, not only useful as affording food that we cannot do without, but so abundant as to give us enough and to spare." Then all of a sudden a fire, or a storm, or persistent rain spoils everything. Sometimes all that he had reckoned on comes to pass, but the reckoner dies first without having had the benefits of them, and his expectation of enjoying the fruits of his toil proves a vain one.

<sup>a</sup> Literally, "to save themselves" (by flight).

PHILO

- 228 LXXXI. "Ἀριστον οὖν τῷ θεῷ πεπιστευκέναι καὶ μὴ τοῖς ἀσασφῆσι λογισμοῖς καὶ ταῖς ἀβεβαίοις εἰκασίαις· "Ἄβραάμ γέ τοι ἐπίστευσε τῷ θεῷ, καὶ δίκαιος ἐνομήσθη" (Gen. xv. 6)· καὶ Μωυσῆς ἄρχει μαρτυρούμενος ὅτι ἐστὶ "πιστὸς ἐν ὄλῳ τῷ οἴκῳ" (Num. xii. 7). εἰ δὲ ἀποπιστεύσωμεν τοῖς ἰδίῳις λογισμοῖς, κατασκευάσομεν καὶ οἰκοδομήσομεν τὴν πόλιν τοῦ διαφθείροντος τὴν ἀλήθειαν νοῦ· Σηῶν γὰρ ἐρμηνεύεται διαφθείρων.
- 229 παρὸ καὶ ἀναστάς, παρ' ᾧ ἦν ἐνύπνια, εὗρεν, ὅτι
 [133] αἱ κινήσεις | ἅπασαι καὶ αἱ διατάσεις τοῦ ἄφρονός εἰσιν ἐνύπνια ἀληθείας ἀμέτοχα—αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ νοῦς ἐνύπνιον εὗρέθη—, ὅτι ἀληθές μὲν ἐστὶ δόγμα τὸ πιστεύειν θεῷ, ψεῦδος δὲ τὸ πιστεύειν τοῖς κενοῖς λογισμοῖς. ἄλογος δὲ ὄρμη ἐξέρχεται καὶ φοιτᾷ ἀφ' ἑκατέρων τῶν τε λογισμῶν καὶ τοῦ νοῦ τοῦ διαφθείροντος τὴν ἀλήθειαν· διὸ καὶ φησιν, ὅτι "πῦρ ἐξῆλθεν ἐξ Ἑσεβῶν, φλόξ ἐκ πόλεως Σηῶν" (Num. xxi. 28)· οὕτως γὰρ ἄλογον τὸ πιστεύειν ἢ λογισμοῖς πιθανοῖς ἢ νῶ διαφθεύροντι
- 230 τὸ ἀληθές. LXXXII. "κατεσθίει γέ τοι καὶ ἕως Μωάβ," τουτέστιν ἕως τοῦ νοῦ· τίνα γὰρ ἄλλον ἢ τὸν ἄθλιον νοῦν ἢ ψευδῆς δόξα ἀπατᾷ; κατεσθίει καὶ βιβρώσκει καὶ μέντοι καὶ καταπίνει τὰς ἐν αὐτῷ στήλας, τουτέστι τὰ κατὰ μέρος ἐνθυμήματα, ἃ καθάπερ ἐν στήλῃ τετύπῳται καὶ ἐγκεχάρακται. Ἄρνων δ' εἰσὶν αἱ στήλαι, ὅπερ ἐρμηνεύεται "φῶς αὐτῶν," ἐπεὶ τῶν πραγμάτων
- 231 ἕκαστον ἐν λογισμῶ σαφηνίζεται. ἄρχεται μὲν οὖν θρηνεῖν τὸν αὐθάδη καὶ φίλαντον νοῦν οὕτως· "οὐαὶ σοι, Μωάβ, ἀπώλον"· εἰ γὰρ αἰνίγμασι προσέχεις τοῖς κατὰ τὴν τῶν εἰκότων ἐπιβολήν,

LXXXI. So then it is best to trust God and not our dim reasonings and insecure conjectures: "Abraham believed God and was held to be righteous" (Gen. xv. 6); and the precedence which Moses takes is testified to by the words he is "faithful<sup>a</sup> in all My house" (Numb. xii. 7). But if we repose our trust in our own reasonings, we shall construct and build up the city of Mind that corrupts the truth: for "Sihon" means "corrupting." Accordingly the dreamer finds on rising up that all the movements and exertions of the foolish man are dreams void of reality. Yea Mind itself turned out to be a dream. And this is so, because to trust God is a true teaching, but to trust our vain reasonings is a lie. An irrational impulse issues forth and goes its rounds, both from our reasonings and from Mind that corrupts the truth; wherefore also he says, "There went forth a fire from Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon" (Numb. xxi. 28). In this way trust in plausible reasonings or in Mind corrupting that which is true, is irrational. LXXXII. "It devours even as far as Moab," that is to say as far as Mind. For whom else does false opinion deceive but wretched Mind? It devours and eats up yea and swallows down the boundary-stones in it, that is, each particular thought or judgement, which are graved and chiselled as though upon a boundary-stone. The stones are Arnon, which means "their light," since it is in reasoning that each matter is elucidated. This is how he begins the dirge over the headstrong and selfish Mind: "Woe to thee, Moab: thou art undone"; for if thou heedest guesses made according to what is probable, thou ἀπολώλεκας ἀλήθειαν. “λαὸς Χαμῶς” τουτέστιν ὁ λαὸς σου καὶ ἡ δύναμις εὐρηται πηρὸς καὶ τετυφλωμένος· Χαμῶς γὰρ ἐρμηνεύεται “ὡς ψηλάφημα”. ἴδιον δὲ τοῦ μὴ ὀρώντος τὸ ἔργον τοῦτο.

<sup>a</sup> Philo takes πιστός actively, "believing."

PHILO

232 τούτοις οἱ μὲν υἱοὶ <οἱ> κατὰ μέρος λογισμοὶ φυγάδες, αἱ δὲ γνῶμαι θυγατέρων ἔχουσαι δύναμιν αἰχμάλωτοι τῷ βασιλεῖ τῶν Ἀμορραίων, τουτέστι τῷ σοφιστῇ λαλούντων· οἱ γὰρ Ἀμορραῖοι ἐρμηνεύονται λαλοῦντες, τοῦ γεγωνότος λόγου σύμβολον ὄντες· ὁ δὲ τούτων ἡγεμὼν ὁ σοφιστής ἐστι καὶ δεινὸς λόγων ἀνερευνᾶν τέχνας, ὑφ’ οὗ κατασοφίζονται οἱ τὸν ὄρον τῆς ἀληθείας ὑπερβαίνοντες. LXXXIII. Σηῶν οὖν ὁ διαφθεῖρων τὸν ὑγιῆ κανόνα τῆς ἀληθείας καὶ τὸ σπέρμα αὐτοῦ ἀπολείται καὶ Ἐσεβῶν τὰ αἰνίγματα τὰ σοφιστικὰ ἕως Δεβῶν, ὃ καλεῖται δικασμὸς· πάνυ προσφυῶς· τὰ γὰρ εἰκότα καὶ πιθανὰ οὐκ ἔχει περὶ ἀληθείας ἐπιστήμην, ἀλλὰ δίκην καὶ ἀμφισβήτησιν καὶ ἐριστικὴν ἄμιλλαν καὶ φιλονεικίαν καὶ πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα.

234 Ἄλλ’ οὐκ ἐξήρκεσε τῷ νῶ τὰς ἰδίας καὶ νοητὰς ἔχειν κῆρας, ἀλλ’ ἔτι καὶ αἱ γυναῖκες προσεξέκαυσαν πῦρ, αἱ αἰσθήσεις, πυρκαϊᾶν πολλὴν ἐπ’ αὐτόν. ἴδε μέντοι τὸ λεγόμενον οἶόν ἐστι. πολλάκις νύκτωρ οὐδεμιᾶ τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἐνεργοῦντες ἀτόπους περὶ πολλῶν καὶ διαφερόντων λαμβάνομεν [134] | ἐνοίας, τῆς ψυχῆς ἀεικινήτου ὑπαρχούσης καὶ μυρίας τροπὰς ἐνδεχομένης. ἦν οὖν ἱκανὰ πρὸς

hast lost truth. "The people of Chemosh," that is thy people and its power has been found to be maimed and blinded; for "Chemosh" means "as a groping," and groping is characteristic of one who cannot see. These find their sons, each particular reasoning, fugitives, while their judgements, corresponding to daughters, are captives of war to the king of the Amorites, that is "the lecturer of men fond of talking"; for the Amorites, if we translate the name, are "men fond of talking," being a figure of the uttered word, and the prince of these is the lecturer or sophist clever at searching after verbal artifices, and those who transgress the boundary of truth place themselves at the mercy of his quibbling. LXXXIII. Sihon, therefore, the corrupter of the healthy rule of the truth, "and his seed shall perish together with Heshbon" (that is) the quibbling riddles "as far as Dihon," a name given to going to law, and quite appropriately, for probabilities and plausible arguments involve no knowledge concerning truth, but trial and disputation and wrangling conflict and contentiousness and everything of that sort.

It was not, however, enough for Mind to have the troubles that are peculiar to it and belong to its own sphere, but over and above these the women, the senses, that is, lit a fire, a huge conflagration, to add to its disasters. Prythee see what I mean by this. It often happens in the night when we are actively employing no single one of our senses, that we entertain strange notions on many different subjects, for the soul is perpetually in movement and can turn ten thousand different ways. This being so, what it produces by itself would have been

PHILO

- διαφθορὰν αὐτῆ, ὅσα αὐτὴ ἐξ ἑαυτῆς ἐγέννησε.
 235 νυνὶ δὲ καὶ ὁ τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὄχλος ἐπεισωδίασεν αὐτῆ κηρῶν ἀμήχανον πλῆθος, τοῦτο μὲν ἐκ τῶν
 ὄρατῶν, τοῦτο δὲ ἐκ τῶν φωνῶν, εἶτα χυλῶν <καὶ> ἀτμῶν τῶν κατὰ τὴν ὁσμὴν· καὶ σχεδὸν ἢ ἀπ' αὐτῶν φλόξ χαλεπώτερον τὴν ψυχὴν διατίθησι τῆς ἐγγινομένης ὑπ' αὐτῆς τῆς ψυχῆς ἄνευ συμπαραλήψεως αἰσθητηρίων.
- 236 LXXXIV. Τούτων μία τῶν γυναικῶν ἐστὶν ἡ Πεντεφρῆ τοῦ Φαραῶ ἀρχιμαγείρου (Gen. xxxix.
 1 ff.). ὃς πῶς ἔχει γυναῖκα εὐνοῦχος ὢν, ἐπισκεπτέον· τοῖς γὰρ τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ νόμου πραγ-ματευομένοις πρὸ ἀλληγορίας ἀκολουθήσει τὸ δοκοῦν ἀπορεῖσθαι· ὁ γὰρ εὐνοῦχος καὶ ἀρχι-μάγειρος ὄντως νοῦς μὴ ταῖς ἀπλαῖς μόνον ἀλλὰ
 καὶ ταῖς περιτταῖς χρώμενος ἡδοναῖς εὐνοῦχος
 κέκληται καὶ ἄγονος σοφίας, ὢν εὐνοῦχος οὐκ
 ἄλλου τινὸς ἢ τοῦ σκεδαστοῦ τῶν καλῶν Φαραῶ·
 ἐπεὶ τοι κατ' ἄλλον λόγον ἄριστον ἂν εἴη τὸ
 εὐνοῦχον γενέσθαι, εἰ δυνήσεται ἡμῶν ἢ ψυχὴ
 237 κακίαν ἐκφυγοῦσα ἀπομαθεῖν τὸ πάθος. διὸ καὶ
 Ἰωσήφ ὁ ἐγκρατῆς τρόπος τῆ λεγούσῃ ἡδονῇ “Κοιμήθητι μετ' ἐμοῦ (Gen. xxxix. 7) καὶ ἄνθρωπος ὢν ἀνθρωποπάθησον καὶ ἀπόλαυσον
 τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον τερπνῶν” ἐναντιοῦται φάσκων· “ἀμαρτήσομαι εἰς τὸν θεὸν τὸν φιλάρετον, εἰ
 γενοίμην φιλήδονος· πονηρὸν γὰρ τοῦτ' ἔργον.”
- 238 LXXXV. καὶ νῦν μὲν ἀκροβολίζεται, ἤδη δὲ καὶ
 καρτερῶς ἀπομάχεται, ὅταν εἰσέλθῃ εἰς τὸν ἑαυτῆς

sufficient for its corruption. But as it is, the mob of the senses has introduced into it from outside an untold host of mischiefs, drawn partly from visible objects, partly from sounds, as well as from savours and scents that touch the sense of smell ; and we may say that the flame arising from them affects the soul more disastrously than the flame that is kindled in it by the soul itself without calling in the organs of sense to assist it.

LXXXIV. One of these women is the wife of Potiphar, Pharaoh's head-cook (Gen. xxxix. 1 ff.). How, being a eunuch, he comes to have a wife, is a point to be considered : for those, who are occupied with the literal wording of the law rather than with its figurative interpretation, will find that it involves what appears to such a difficulty. For the Mind, that is really an eunuch and chief cook, dealing not in the simple pleasures only but in excessive ones also, deserves the title of eunuch as one who is incapable of begetting wisdom, seeing that he serves as eunuch none other than Pharaoh, the disperser of noble things. For you must bear in mind that from another point of view to become an eunuch would be a very good thing, if so our soul should be able to escape wickedness and unlearn passion. So Joseph too, the self-controlling character, when pleasure says to him " Sleep with me " (Gen. xxxix. 7) ' and being human indulge human passions and enjoy the delights that come in life's course,' refuses to comply with her saying, ' I shall be sinning against God the Lover of virtue, were I to show myself a lover of pleasure ; for this is a wicked deed.' LXXXV. And now he is merely skirmishing, but before long he is stoutly fighting it out, when the

PHILO

οἶκον ἢ ψυχὴν καὶ ἀναδραμοῦσα ἐπὶ τοὺς ἑαυτῆς
 τόνους ἀποτάξεται τοῖς κατὰ τὸ σῶμα καὶ τὰ
 ἴδια ὡς ψυχῆς ἔργα ἐργάσεται· οὐτ' εἰς τὸν
 οἶκον Ἰωσήφ οὔτε Πεντεφέρῃ, ἀλλ' " εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν "—καὶ οὐ προστίθῃσι τὴν τίνος, ἵνα σκεπτικῶς ἀλληγορῆς—" ποιεῖν τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ " (Gen.
 239 xxxix. 11). ἢ μὲν οὖν οἰκία ἐστὶν ἢ ψυχὴ, εἰς ἣν
 ἀνατρέχει καταλιπὼν τὰ ἐκτός, ἵνα τὸ λεγόμενον
 ἐντὸς αὐτοῦ γένηται· τὰ δὲ τοῦ ἐγκρατοῦς ἔργα
 μήποτε θεοῦ βουλήματι<sup>1</sup> ἐστὶ· καὶ γὰρ οὐδεὶς
 ἦν ἀλλότριος λογισμὸς τῶν εἰωθότων ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ κατοικεῖν εἶσω. πλὴν οὐκ ἀφίσταται ζυγομαχοῦσα ἢ ἡδονή, ἀλλὰ τῶν ἱματίων λαβομένη
 φησί " Κοιμήθητι μετ' ἐμοῦ." σκεπάσματα δὲ
 ὡσπερ σώματος τὰ ἐσθήματά ἐστιν, οὕτως τοῦ
 ζώου σιτία καὶ ποτά. τοῦτο δὴ φησι· τί παραιτῇ 240 τὴν ἡδονήν, ἧς ἄνευ οὐ δύνασαι ζῆν; ἰδοὺ ἐκ-λαμβάνομαι τῶν ποιητικῶν αὐτῆς καὶ φημί σε μὴ
 ἂν δυνηθῆναι ὑποστῆναι, εἰ μὴ τι τῶν ποιητικῶν
 χρήσαιο. τί οὖν ὁ ἐγκρατής; εἰ μέλλω, φησί,
 [135] δουλεύειν πάθει διὰ τὴν ποιητικὴν | ὕλην, καὶ
 ἐξελεύσομαι ἀπὸ τοῦ πάθους ἔξω· " καταλιπὼν
 γὰρ τὰ ἱμάτια ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτῆς ἔφυγε καὶ 241 ἐξῆλθεν ἔξω " (Gen. xxxix. 12). LXXXVI. τίς

<sup>1</sup> ? βουλήματα. See note on translation.

---

<sup>a</sup> θεοῦ βουλήματι. Cf. De Posteritate Caini 73 τῷ μὴ κατὰ βούλημα τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ζῶντι, De Vita Mosis 287 οὐ συνάδει τῷ τοῦ θεοῦ βουλήματι. The absence of an article in our passage is suspicious; and the dative is somewhat harsh with ἐστὶ. These difficulties would be got over, and a stronger sense gained, by reading βουλήματά. The man of self-control carries out in act purposes of God learned in 462

soul has entered into her own house, and falling back on her own energies has renounced all that is regulated by the body, and has set to work at business properly belonging to her inasmuch as they are activities of the soul. He goes neither into Joseph's house nor into that of Potiphar, but "into the house." He does not go on to say whose house, that you may think and interpret. He simply adds, "to do his business" (Gen. xxxix. 11). The house then is the soul, into which he retires, abandoning all that is outside, to the end that he may, as we say, get within himself. The "business" of the man of self-control is, we may take it, done by God's will<sup>a</sup>; for indeed, among all the reasonings wont to have their abode in the soul within, there was not one such uncongenial reasoning<sup>b</sup> found there. Meanwhile pleasure does not desist from struggling, but laying hold of his garments says "Sleep with me." As clothes are coverings of the body, so are food and drink of the living being. This is what she says, "Why do you decline pleasure, without which you cannot live? See, I seize and carry off part of what goes to produce her, and I declare that you would be unable to exist without using something productive of pleasure." What does the man of self-control do? "If," he says, "I am going to be a slave to passion for the sake of the matter that is productive of it, I will even leave passion behind and go forth outside"; for "leaving his garments in her hands he fled and went forth outside" (Gen. xxxix. 12). LXXXVI. "Who," communion with his own heart. The following sentence seems intended to justify so high a claim.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 484.

PHILO

δὲ ἔνδον, φαίη τις ἄν, ἐξέρχεται; οὐ πολλοί; ἢ οὐ φυγόντες τινὲς τὸ ἱεροσουλεῖν ἐξ ἰδιωτικῆς ἔκλεψαν οἰκίας, καὶ οὐκ ὄντες πατροτύπται ἀλλότριον ὕβρισαν; οὗτοι ἐξέρχονται μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων, εἰς ἕτερα δὲ εἰσέρχονται· τὸν δὲ τελείως ἐγκρατῆ δεῖ πάντα φεύγειν τὰ ἀμαρτήματα καὶ τὰ μείζω καὶ τὰ ἐλάττω καὶ ἐν μηδενὶ ἐξετάζεσθαι τὸ παράπαν.

242 Ἄλλ' ὁ μὲν Ἰωσήφ—νεὸς τε γὰρ ἐστὶ καὶ τῷ Αἰγυπτίῳ σώματι οὐκ ἴσχυσεν ἀγωνίσασθαι καὶ νικῆσαι τὴν ἡδονήν—[καὶ] ἀποδιδράσκει. Φινεὲς δὲ ὁ ἱερεὺς ὁ ζηλώσας τὸν ὑπὲρ θεοῦ ζῆλον οὐ φυγῆ τὴν ἰδίαν σωτηρίαν πεπόρισται, ἀλλὰ τὸν “σειρομάστην” τουτέστι τὸν ζηλωτικὸν λόγον λαβὼν οὐκ ἀποστήσεται, πρὶν ἢ “ἐκκεντῆσαι τὴν Μαδιανῆτιν” τὴν ἐκκεκριμένην θείου χοροῦ φύσιν “διὰ τῆς μήτρας αὐτῆς” (Num. xxv. 7, 8), ἵνα μηδέποτε ἰσχύσῃ φυτὸν ἢ σπέρμα κακίας ἀνατεῖλαι. LXXXVII. οὐ χάριν ἐκκοπίσης ἀφροσύνης ἀθλον καὶ κλῆρον ἢ ψυχὴ λαμβάνει διττόν, εἰρήνην καὶ ἱερωσύνην (ib. xii. 13), συγγενεῖς καὶ ἀδελφὰς ἀρετᾶς.

243 Τοιαύτης μὲν οὖν γυναικὸς οὐκ ἀκουστέον, αἰσθήσεως μοχθηρᾶς λέγω, ἐπεὶ καὶ “τὰς μαίας εὖ ἐποίει θεός” (Exod. i. 20), ὅτι τῶν προστάξεων τοῦ σκεδαστοῦ Φαραὼ ἠλόγουν “τὰ ἄρρενα” τῆς ψυχῆς “ζωογονοῦσαι,” ἃ ἐκεῖνος ἤθελε διαφθεῖρειν τῆς θηλείας ὕλης ἐραστῆς ὦν, τὸ δ' αἴτιον ἀγνοῶν καὶ λέγων ὅτι “οὐκ οἶδα αὐτόν” (Exod. v. 2). ἑτέρα δὲ πειστέον γυναικί, οἶαν συμβέβηκε Σάρραν εἶναι, τὴν ἄρχουσαν ἀρετῆν·

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 241-244

someone may ask, "goes forth within?" Do not many? Or have not some who have avoided the robbing of temples stolen goods from a private house, and some who have not been father-beaters, committed violence on a stranger? These people do indeed come forth from the sins mentioned, but they come into others. But he that exercises perfect self-control must shun all sins, both the greater and the lesser, and be found implicated in none whatever.

Joseph, however, being but a youth and lacking strength to contend with the Egyptian body and vanquish pleasure, runs away. But Phinehas the priest, who was zealous with the zeal for God, has secured his own safety, not by flight, but grasping the "spear," i.e. the spirit of zeal, he will not desist before he has "pierced the Midianitish woman," the nature that has been sifted out of the sacred company, "through her womb" (Numb. xxv. 7 f.), that she may never be able to cause plant or seed of wickedness to shoot up: LXXXVII. in recompense for this, for the cutting out of folly, the soul obtains a twofold portion as its reward, peace and priesthood (ibid. 12 f.), virtues as near of kin as sisters.

To such a woman, therefore, we must not hearken, wicked sense I mean. For "God dealt well with the midwives" (Exod. i. 20), because disregarding the injunctions of Pharaoh, the scatterer, they "saved alive" the male offspring of the soul which he wished to destroy; for, enamoured of what is material and female, he knows not the First Cause and says, "I know Him not" (Exod. v. 2). Quite a different woman claims our compliance, a woman such as Sarah is seen to have been, even paramount

PHILO

- καὶ πείθεται γε ὁ σοφὸς Ἀβραὰμ αὐτῇ παρ-αινούσῃ ἃ δεῖ· πρότερον μὲν γάρ, ὅτ' οὐπω τέλειος
 ἐγεγένητο, ἀλλ' ἔτι πρὶν μετονομασθῆναι τὰ
 μετέωρα ἐφιλοσόφει, ἐπισταμένη ὅτι οὐκ ἂν
 δύναιτο γεννᾶν ἐξ ἀρετῆς τελείας, συμβουλεύει
 ἐκ τῆς παιδίσκης τουτέστι παιδείας τῆς ἐγκυκλίου παιδοποιεῖσθαι τῆς Ἄγαρ (Gen. xvi. 2 ff.), ὃ λέγεται παροίκησις· ὁ γὰρ μελετῶν ἐν ἀρετῇ
 τελεία κατοικεῖν, πρὶν ἐγγραφῆναι τῇ πόλει αὐτῆς,
 τοῖς ἐγκυκλίοις μαθήμασι παροικεῖ, ἵνα διὰ τούτων 245 πρὸς τελείαν ἀρετὴν ἀφέτως ὀρμήσῃ· ἔπειτα ὅταν ἴδῃ τετελειωμένον αὐτὸν καὶ ἤδη δυνάμενον σπείρειν, * * * κἂν ἐκεῖνος εὐχάριστος ὦν πρὸς τὰ
 παιδεύματα, δι' ὧν ἀρετῇ συνεστάθῃ, χαλεπὸν ἠγῆται παραιτήσασθαι αὐτά, χρησμῶ πραῦνθή-
 σεται θεοῦ τῷ κελεύοντι· “πάντα ὅσα ἂν εἶπη Σάρρα, ἄκουε τῆς φωνῆς αὐτῆς” (Gen. xxi. 12).
 [136] νόμος ἡμῶν ἔστω | ἐκάστῳ τὸ δοκοῦν ἀρετῇ· εἰ
 γὰρ πάντων ὅσα παραινεῖ ἢ ἀρετῇ βουλόμεθα
 ἀκούειν, εὐδαιμονήσομεν.
- 246 LXXXVIII. Τὸ δὲ “καὶ ἔφαγες ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου οὗ ἐνετειλάμην σοι τούτου μόνου μὴ φαγεῖν”
 ἴσον ἐστὶ τῷ συγκατέθου κακία, ἣν χρή σε ἀνά
 κράτος ἀπείργειν· διὰ τοῦτο “ἐπικατάρατος”
 οὐχὶ σύ, <ἀλλ' > “ἡ γῆ ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις σου”
 (Gen. iii. 17). τίς οὖν ἡ αἰτία τούτων; ὁ ὄφεις
 ἦν ἡδονή, ἔπαρσις ἄλογος ψυχῆς· αὕτη κατάρατος
 ἐξ ἑαυτῆς, μόνῳ γέ τοι τῷ φαύλῳ προσγίνεται,

• See App. p. 484.

virtue. The wise Abraham complies with her when she recommends the course to follow. For at an earlier time, when he had not yet become perfect but, before his name had been changed, was still only inquiring into supramundane things, being aware that he could not beget seed out of perfect virtue, she advises him to beget children out of the handmaiden, that is school-learning, even Hagar (Gen. xvi. 2 ff.). This name means "Sojourning," for he that is studying to make his home in perfect virtue, before he is registered as a member of her city, sojourns with the subjects learned in the schools, that he may be led by these to apply his unfettered powers to virtue.<sup>a</sup> Afterwards, when she sees him brought to perfection, and capable now of begetting . . . And if he, filled with gratitude towards the education by means of which he was brought into union with virtue, thinks it harsh to reject it, he shall be brought to compliance by an oracle of God bidding him, "In all that Sarah saith to thee listen to her voice" (Gen. xxi. 12). Let that which seems good to virtue be law for each one of us; for if we choose to hearken to all that virtue recommends, we shall be happy.

LXXXVIII. The words "and thou didst eat of the tree of which alone I commanded thee not to eat" are equivalent to "thou didst consent to wickedness, which it is thy duty to keep off with all thy might": because of this "cursed"—not "art thou" but "is the earth in thy works" (Gen. iii. 17). What then was the reason of this? The serpent, we saw, was pleasure, an irrational elation of soul. She is accursed on her own account, but mark well that she attaches herself only to the worthless man, not

PHILO

- σπουδαίω δ' οὐδενί. ὁ Ἀδὰμ δὲ ὁ μέσος ἐστὶ νοῦς, ὃς τοτὲ μὲν ἀμείνων τοτὲ δὲ χείρων ἐξετάζεται· ἢ γὰρ νοῦς ἐστίν, οὔτε φαῦλος οὔτε σπουδαῖος εἶναι πέφυκεν, ἀρετῇ δὲ καὶ κακία πρὸς τὸ εὖ καὶ πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον εἴωθε μεταβάλλειν.
- 247 εἰκότως οὖν οὐκ ἔστι κατάρατος ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ, ὡς οὔτε κακία ὦν οὔτε κατὰ κακίαν πράξις, ἀλλ' ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτοῦ ἢ γῆ κατάρατος· αἱ γὰρ πράξεις αἱ διὰ τῆς ὅλης ψυχῆς, ἣν κέκληκε γῆν, ἐπιληπτοὶ καὶ ὑπαίτιοι κατὰ κακίαν ἕκαστα δρῶντός εἰσι. παρὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει, ὅτι “ἐν λύπῃ φάγεσαι αὐτήν,” ὅπερ ἐστὶν ἴσον τῷ ἀπολαύσει τῆς ψυχῆς ἐπιλύπως· ἐπωδύνως γὰρ ὁ φαῦλος πάντα τὸν βίον χρῆται τῇ ἑαυτοῦ ψυχῇ μηδὲν ἔχων χαρᾶς αἴτιον, ὃ πέφυκε γεννᾶν δικαιοσύνη καὶ φρόνησις καὶ αἱ σύνθρονοι ταύτης ἀρεταί.
- 248 LXXXIX. “Ἀκάνθας οὖν καὶ τριβόλους ἀνατελεῖ σοι” (Gen. iii. 18). ἀλλὰ τί φύεται καὶ βλαστάνει ἐν ἄφρονος ψυχῇ, πλὴν τὰ κεντοῦντα καὶ τιτρώσκοντα αὐτὴν πάθη; ἃ διὰ συμβόλων ἀκάνθας κέκληκεν, οἷς ἢ ἄλογος ὄρμη πυρὸς τὸν τρόπον πρώτοις ἐντυγχάνει, μεθ' ὧν ταχθεῖσα πάντα τὰ αὐτῆς καταφλέγει καὶ διαφθείρει. λέγει γὰρ οὕτως· “ἐὰν δὲ ἐξελθὼν πῦρ εὖρη ἀκάνθας καὶ προσεμπρήση ἄλωνα ἢ στάχνας ἢ πεδίον, ἀποτίσει ὁ τὸ πῦρ ἐκκαύσας” (Exod. xxii. 6).
- 249 ὁρᾶς ὅτι τὸ πῦρ ἐξελθὼν, ἢ ἄλογος ὄρμη, οὐκ ἐμπίρησι τὰς ἀκάνθας, ἀλλὰ εὕρισκει· ζητητικῇ

to any good man. Adam is the neutral mind, which now proves better, now worse. For in so far as he is mind, his nature is neither bad nor good, but under the influence of virtue and vice it is his wont to shift towards good and bad. It is then just as we should expect, that he is not accursed on his own account, inasmuch as he is neither wickedness nor conduct with wickedness for its rule, but the earth is accursed in his works ; for the doings of which the whole soul, to which is here given the name of " earth," is the means and occasion, are blameworthy and faulty when he allows wickedness to regulate them in each case. Accordingly he goes on " in sorrow shalt thou eat of it." This is tantamount to " thou shalt sorrowfully get the benefit of being alive." For in pain does the bad man all his life long avail himself of his own vitality. He has no motive for joy. Such a motive is in the nature of things supplied by righteousness and good sense and the virtues that share her throne.

LXXXIX. " Thorns therefore and burrs shall it cause to spring up for thee " (Gen. iii. 18). Nay, what does grow and shoot up in the soul of a foolish man, but the passions which goad and wound it ? To these, using figures, he has given the name of thorns. These the irrational impulse like a fire meets first, and ranging herself with them burns up and consumes all the soul's possessions. For this is what is said : " If a fire break out and find thorns and go on to burn threshing-floor or standing corn or field ; he that kindled the fire shall make restitution " (Exod. xxii. 6). You see that the fire, the irrational impulse, when it has broken out does not burn the thorns but finds them ; for being a

PHILO

γὰρ τῶν παθῶν οὐσα ἃ ἐπόθει λαβεῖν εὗρεν· ὅταν δὲ εὕρη, καταφλέγει τρία ταῦτα, ἀρετὴν τελείαν, προκοπὴν, εὐφυΐαν· ἀρετὴν μὲν οὖν παραβέβληκε τῇ ἄλλῳ, συγκεκριόμεσται γάρ, ὡς ἐνταῦθα ὁ καρπός, οὕτως καὶ ἐν τῇ τοῦ σοφοῦ ψυχῇ τὰ καλά· στάχυσι δὲ τὴν προκοπὴν, ἐπεὶ καὶ ἐκάτερον ἀτελὲς ἐφ-
 [137] <sup>250</sup> εὐπαράδεκτος σπερμάτων ἀρετῆς ἐστίν. | ἕκαστον δὲ τῶν παθῶν τριβόλια εἶρηκεν, ἐπειδὴ τριττά ἐστίν, αὐτό τε καὶ τὸ ποιητικὸν καὶ τὸ ἐκ τούτων ἀποτέλεσμα, οἶον ἡδονή, ἡδύ, ἡδεσθαι· ἐπιθυμία, ἐπιθυμητόν, ἐπιθυμεῖν· λύπη, λυπηρόν, λυπεῖσθαι· φόβος, φοβερόν, φοβεῖσθαι.

251 XC. “Καὶ φάγεσαι τὸν χόρτον τοῦ ἀγροῦ· ἐν ἰδρῶτι τοῦ προσώπου σου <φάγεσαι τὸν ἄρτον σου>” (Gen. iii. 18, 19). χόρτον καὶ ἄρτον καλεῖ συνωνύμως, πρᾶγμα ταυτόν· χόρτος ἀλόγου τροφή ἐστίν· ἄλογον δὲ <ὁ> φαῦλος ἐκτετμημένος τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον, ἄλογοι δὲ καὶ αἱ αἰσθήσεις τῆς ψυχῆς οὐσαι μέρος· ὁ δὲ νοῦς ἐφιεμένος τῶν αἰσθητῶν διὰ τῶν ἀλόγων αἰσθήσεων οὐκ ἄνευ πόνου καὶ ἰδρῶτος ἐφίεται· σφόδρα γὰρ ὀδυνηρὸς καὶ ἐπαχθῆς ὁ τοῦ ἄφρονος βίος μετιόντος καὶ ἐπιλιχνεύοντος τὰ ποιητικὰ τῶν ἡδονῶν καὶ τῶν 252 ὅσα κακία ἀπεργάζεσθαι φιλεῖ. καὶ μέχρι τίνος; “μέχρι” φησὶν “ἀποστρέψεις εἰς τὴν γῆν, ἐξ ἧς

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III. 249-252

searcher after the passions it finds what it wanted to get; and when it has found them it burns up these three things, perfect virtue, gradual progress, goodness of natural disposition. Virtue he likens to the contents of the threshing-floor, for as the grain has been gathered together on it, so in the soul of the wise man have been gathered noble things. To the standing corn he likens gradual advance, since either is incomplete and is earnestly set on its completeness. He likens goodness of natural disposition to the field, because it is receptive of the seeds of virtue. He calls each of the passions "burrs" or "three-spiked caltrops," because they are threefold, the passion itself, that which produces it, and the finished result of these. For instance, pleasure, the pleasant, feeling pleasure; desire, the desirable, desiring; sorrow, the sorrowful, feeling sorrow; fear, the fearful, fearing.

XC. "And thou shalt eat the grass of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat thy bread" (Gen. iii. 18 f.). He uses the terms grass and bread as synonyms; the thing meant is the same. Grass is food of an irrational creature; and such is a bad man with the right principle cut out of him; irrational also are the senses, being a part of the soul. But the mind striving to attain the objects of sense by means of the irrational senses, makes this striving not without toil and sweat. For exceeding painful and burdensome is the life of the foolish man, as he pursues with greedy desire all things that are productive of pleasures and of all things that wickedness loves to bring about. And how long is this to be? "Until," He says, "thou shalt turn back into the earth, from which thou wert taken" (Gen. iii.

PHILO

ἐλήφθης” (Gen. iii. 19). νῦν γὰρ οὐκ ἐν τοῖς γεώδεσι καὶ ἀσυστάτοις ἐξετάζεται τὴν οὐράνιον σοφίαν καταλιπών; πῆ οὖν ἔτι ἀποστρέφεται, σκεπτόν. ἀλλὰ μήποτε ὁ λέγει τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν, ὅτι ὁ ἄφρων νοῦς ἀπέστραπται μὲν αἰεὶ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον, εἴληπται δὲ οὐκ ἀπὸ τῆς μεταρσίου φύσεως, ἀλλ’ ἀπὸ τῆς γεωδεστέρας ὕλης, καὶ μένων δὲ καὶ κινούμενος ὁ αὐτός ἐστιν ἐφιέμενός τε τῶν αὐτῶν. 253 διὸ καὶ ἐπιφέρει, “ ὅτι γῆ εἶ καὶ εἰς γῆν ἀπελεύση ” (ibid.), ὅπερ ἴσον ἐστὶ τῷ προειρημένῳ. δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ τοῦτο· ἡ ἀρχὴ σου καὶ τὸ τέλος ἐν καὶ ταῦτόν ἐστιν· ἤρξω τε γὰρ ἀπὸ τῶν φθειρομένων γῆς σωμάτων, τελευτήσεις δὲ πάλιν εἰς ἐκεῖνα τὴν μεταξὺ τοῦ βίου τρίψας ὁδὸν οὐ λεωφόρον ἀλλὰ τραχεῖαν, βάτων καὶ τριβόλων κεντεῖν τε καὶ τιτρώσκειν πεφυκότων μεστήν.

19). For, having forsaken the wisdom of heaven, is he not now ranked with things earthly and chaotic? How then he turns back yet further, we have to consider. But perhaps what he means is of this kind, that the foolish mind has indeed always turned back from the right principle, but has been taken not from the sublime nature but from the more earthly substance, and, whether staying still or in movement, is the same and devoted to the same interests. And that is why he goes on to say, "Earth thou art and into earth shalt thou depart" (ibid.), which amounts to what I have already said. It signifies this also, "thine origin and thine end are one and the same, for thou tookest thine origin from earth's decaying bodies, and into them shalt thou again come to thine end, after treading the way of life that comes between, along no high road but on a rough path, full of brambles and burrs whose nature is to prick and wound."

APPENDIX TO ON THE CREATION

(N.B.—S.V.F. = Arnim, Stoicorum Veterum Fragmenta. The references are to sections in Arnim.)

§ 3. Philo starts off with two leading Stoic ideas, "living according to nature" and the "world-citizen." For the former cf. Diogenes Laertius vii. 87, "Zeno was the first to designate a (man's) end 'living according to nature.'" For the latter see S.V.F. i. 262. The first use of the actual word κοσμοπολιτης is ascribed to Diogenes the Cynic, who, when "asked whence he came, replied 'I am a citizen of the world'" (Diog. Laert. vi. 63).

§ 25. The words bracketed by Cohn are left so bracketed in the text but untranslated.

§ 26. Time is a measured space, etc. This is the accepted definition of the Stoics. See S.V.F. ii. 509 f. Philo refers to it as Stoic, De Aet. 4, and elsewhere in that treatise.

§ 43. Principles or nuclei, or perhaps "seed-powers"; οι λογοι is equivalent to οι σπερματικοι λογοι. The Stoics conceived of a single λογος σπερματικος manifesting itself in innumerable λογοι σπερματικοι, which give things their form. See S.V.F. Index, p. 93a.

§ 54. The thought of this section is based on Timaeus 47 A, B, where Plato says that "God bestowed sight on us that we might observe the orbits of reason which are in heaven, and make use of them for the revolutions of thought which are in our souls" (Archer-Hind's translation).

§§ 72 ff. The idea of these sections is suggested by, or at least receives support from, Timaeus 41, 42, where God creates "young gods" or subordinate ministers to carry on the work for the same reason as is given here, viz. that He might not be responsible for evil.

§ 80. And through the livelong year, or, putting the comma after ἐκδεχόμενοι, "at the end of each year (at intervals of a year) they gather in."

APPENDICES

§ 101. Equal to the sum of its own factors. Like 6 (see 13), 28 is the sum of its factors (1 + 2 + 4 + 7 + 14), as are 496 and 8128. The word "perfect" is in strictness applied to such numbers only (Nicomachus i. 10).

§ 102. Limits, or "terms." Ὄρος is the technical word for a "term" in a series. In fact, having been translated into Latin as terminus, it is the progenitor of our own word.

§ 117. The remainder of our soul is divided, etc. This classification is Stoic. It is more usually stated in the form that the soul has eight parts, the ἡγεμονικόν being reckoned as one. See S. V. F. ii. 827 ff.

§ 142. Citizen of the world. See especially 3 and note. The first man fulfilled the Stoic ideal. This view of the superiority of early mankind, though not confined to the Stoics, was strongly held by them. The Golden Age, said Posidonius, was when "regnum fuit penes sapientes" (Seneca, Epistle 90. 5).

§ 148. Torch. The figure of the torch-race is very common. Considering, however, Philo's love for Plato, it is reasonable to suppose that he is thinking of the mention of it at the beginning of the Republic, 328 A. Cf. Laws 776 B.

§ 160. A human voice. Philo is here attacking Epicureanism. For the Epicurean doctrine that pleasure is the end aimed at by every living creature see Diogenes Laertius x. 128. Thus the serpent's use of a human voice is interpreted as an allegory showing how vocal and popular that School was. Philo, like most of its opponents, ignores the fact that Epicurus expressly refused to identify pleasure with material pleasures.

§§ 170, 171. The opinions here assailed are (1) that God's existence is doubtful, held by the Sceptics; (2) that the world is without beginning (ἀγένητος), held, according to Philo's own statement in De Aet. 10, by Aristotle; the contrary was maintained by Pythagoras, Plato, and the Stoics (S. V. F. ii. 575); (3) the plurality of worlds, originally held by Democritus (see Timaeus 31 A, and Archer-Hind's note), and afterwards by the Epicureans; (4) that there is no such thing as Providence. This Epicurean tenet is too familiar from Lucretius and other writers to need illustration, but see Diogenes Laertius x. 77, 113, 139.

APPENDIX TO ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, I

§ 3. Multiplication of two unequal factors. Ἐτερομήκης, though often used more widely by general writers, is a term reserved by the mathematicians for numbers of the form  $x(x+1)$ , i.e.  $1 \times 2, 2 \times 3, 3 \times 4$ , etc. (See Nicomachus ii. 17.) This restricted use of the word obviously fits the present passage.

§ 30. Impressions . . . active impulse. The φαντασία, translated now by "presentation," now by "mental picture," conceived of as an imprint (τύπωσις) on the mind, is a thoroughly Stoic idea. (See e.g. Diog. Laert. vii. 45; S. V. F. ii. 52 ff.) So also is ὄρμη, "impulse" or "appetite." The sense of this section is given more fully and clearly in Quod Deus 43.

§ 57. Theoretical . . . practical. A more careful classification of the arts is given by Aristotle, Met. v. 1, viz.—θεωρητικαί, πρακτικαί and ποιητικαί ("productive"). Thus rhetoric and dancing are πρακτικαί, sculpture and poetry ποιητικαί. Cf. Quintilian ii. 18.

ibid. Its three parts. This division is claimed for the Stoics by Diogenes Laertius (vii. 39), though actually it appears incidentally in Aristotle, Topica i. 14, 105 b 20. The comparison quoted by Diogenes in vii. 40 of τὸ λογικόν to the hedge (φραγμός), τὸ φυσικόν to the field or trees, and τὸ ἠθικόν to the fruit is adopted by Philo in De Agr. 14.

§ 60. Another suggestion may be made for emending this passage. Elsewhere Philo explains unexpected silences on Moses' part by his desire to stimulate the mystic to discover some high truth for himself. E.g. L. A. ii. 55, iii. 239. Note in particular De Cherubim 121 fn., where the likeness of diction to this passage is significant. There the silence is stated to be ἵνα ὁ μὴ φυσιολογίας ἀμύητος εἰς ἐπιστήμην ὠφελῆται. The stimulus to thought, that is to say, will be an actual assistance to the philosophical mind in its quest for knowledge. Here if we change the order of ὁ and μὴ we may perhaps leave the text otherwise undisturbed, translating "that the man versed in natural philosophy may <discover the truth for himself and> revere Him that is for His knowledge." Or we might read (for τὸν ὄντα) τὸν <μεταδ>όντα τῆς ἐπιστήμης. The sense conveyed will then be that the stimulus to thought will lead to a higher knowledge, and so to reverence for Him who has imparted it.

APPENDICES

§ 70. Our soul is threefold, etc. This theory is familiar to readers of Plato from the famous myth of the soul's chariot in the Phaedrus 246 ff., where τὸ λογικόν appears as the charioteer, τὸ θυμικόν and τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν as the nobler and baser horses respectively. Cf. Timaeus 69 c; Republic 439 d. Philo, in fact, reproduces the figure in 72 f., but without Plato's distinction of the character of the two horses. The location of the three in different parts of the body here mentioned is taken from Timaeus 69 ε, 90 α.

§ 80. Judah and Issachar. The idea seems to be that Judah, the mystic representing φρόνησις as a spiritual or mental condition, is ὁ φρόνιμος, while Issachar, who represents the same as carried into practical life, is ὁ φρονῶν. The somewhat unexpected use of ἀσκητής as applied to the mystic may perhaps be explained by laying stress on θεοῦ. He is a "practiser," but of a wisdom higher than that of practisers in general.

§ 91. We conceive of God as the soul of the universe. It is implied that it is not an accurate or adequate expression. Cf. De Migr. 179, where the possible danger of this expression, as tending to suggest that God is contained in the universe, is pointed out, and ibid. 181, where the thought is further developed. The expression is Stoic (S.V.F. ii. 774). The equivalent ἡ τοῦ κόσμου ψυχὴ is attributed to Cleanthes himself (S.V.F. i. 532).

APPENDIX TO ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II

§ 6. Philo is alluding to the Stoic view that the πάθη are mental judgements. See Diogenes Laertius vii. 111 δοκεῖ δὲ αὐτοῖς τὰ πάθη κρίσεις εἶναι, καθά φησι Χρύσιππος ἐν τῷ Περὶ παθῶν· ἢ τε γὰρ φιλαργυρία ὑπόληψις ἐστὶ τοῦ τὸ ἀργύριον καλὸν εἶναι, καὶ ἡ μέθη δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀκολασία ὁμοίως, καὶ τὰ ἄλλα. Here he may mean that he accepts this view in some cases, but not in all; or, perhaps, that his statement that the πάθη are ἀλογα might be doubted if the view that they are κρίσεις be accepted, but is certainly true if that view be rejected.

§ 15. Greek philosophers. Presumably this includes (a) Plato; see Cratylus 401 B, where we are told that the first name-givers must have been considerable persons. Cf. ibid. 390 D. (b) Pythagoras. In Tusc. Disp. i. 62 Cicero, speaking of the greatness of the task of assigning names, says "summae sapientiae Pythagorae visum est."

§§ 16, 18. Having in 16 prepared the way for his interpretation of Gen. ii. 19 by observing that τί = διὰ τί, "why," Philo goes on to make καλεῖν = "invite," "welcome," to treat ψυχὴν ζῶσαν as predicative, putting ὡς before it in his paraphrase, practically to ignore αὐτί as an otiose accusative, πᾶν δ' ἐάν being the sufficient object of ἐκάλεσεν. The verse for him has to do, not with assigning names, but with proclaiming affinities. To welcome pleasure, desire, or cowardice as living souls is to proclaim affinity with them, and so to share their title or name.

§ 20. εἰ γὰρ μὴν . . . σαρκίνη δῆπου; "if one of the two sides was filled up with flesh, are we to presume that the one not so treated was not made of flesh?" Philo captiously presses the words of Gen. ii. 21, ἀνεπλήρωσεν

APPENDICES

σάρκα ἀντ' αὐτῆς, to mean that in the filling up a different material, namely flesh, was substituted (ἀντί) for the material which was there before; which would of course imply that the other side was of a material other than flesh.

§ 22. The power of holding together, etc. This fourfold classification is Stoic (see S. V. F. ii. 457-460). It is explained more fully in Quod Deus 35 ff. It is difficult to see at first sight how the "naked" mind can have these powers, at any rate that of ἔξις, which is the characteristic of inorganic matter. But in Quod Deus 35 we find that the ἔξις which holds together a stone or a piece of wood is a breath or spirit, which extends itself from the centre of the body in question to its extremes and then reverses its course. Thus ἔξις and the others are conceived of as powers distinct from the objects or persons in which they are found. In fact we are told (Themistius, De anima 72 B) that the Stoics held that God ποῦ μὲν εἶναι νοῦν, ποῦ δὲ ψυχὴν, ποῦ δὲ φύσιν, ποῦ δὲ ἔξιν. Seneca translates ἔξις when used in this way by unitas. The sense seems different, and perhaps has a different origin, from that of "state" or "disposition" (Lat. habitus). Zeller, however, equates the two by regarding the ἔξις of this passage as = simple quality without any further characteristic (Stoics, p. 208).

§ 44. For the construction ταύτη κληθήσεται cf. Jer. xix. 6 οὐ κληθήσεται τῷ τόπῳ τούτῳ ἐτι Διάπτωσις. In Judges xviii. 12 A has ἐκλήθη ἐκείνῳ τῷ τόπῳ Παρεμβολὴ Δάν, omitting ἐν found in some mss. before ἐκείνῳ. (Or, as the words that follow perhaps suggest, Philo may have taken ταύτη as an adverb and explained it as = διὰ τοῦτο.)

§ 46. Rachel, who represents sense-perception (or superficiality), takes her seat upon idols (E. V. "teraphim," Gen. xxxi. 33), and is rebuked by Jacob (or "Israel," the man of vision) when her words show that she imagines that mind is the author and originator of movements.

§ 63. The actual meaning of Num. xxx. 4 ff. is that a woman's vows hold if her father or husband silently acquiesce, but not if they forbid them; whereas those of a widow, seeing there is no such person to prohibit them, must hold. By taking "husband" or "father" to represent reason, Philo extracts the thought that our wishes are not guilty if our reasoned thoughts prohibit them, so that we do not translate them into action. The "widow" stands for the soul, which has cut itself off from any such controlling influence, and whose guilt is abiding.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, II

§ 65. They were not ashamed. The real meaning of the story is of course that they did not feel shame, but in 68 ff. Philo gives the words a sense, which they are capable of bearing, "they were not shamed," i.e. "brought to do anything shameful."

§ 67. Intense and fixed, or "full (or 'deep') coloured." The word κατακόρης may be used of any colour. But as in the Timaeus, which Philo knew so well, it is associated (68 c) with μέλαν (= "intense black"), he probably uses it here with reference to the complexion of the Ethiopian woman. There may also be a play on its similarity to κόρη in the sense of "a pupil of the eye."

§ 78. 'Tis well that they say, etc. A clearer meaning could be obtained by reading οὐχ ὅτι "κατελαλήσαμεν ὅτι ἡμάρτομεν," ἀλλ' ὅτι "ἡμάρτομεν ὅτι κατελαλήσαμεν." "It is well that they say, not 'we spake against the Lord (laying it to His charge) that we sinned,' but 'we sinned (in) that we spake against the Lord.'" This harmonizes with the next words. It was easy for scribes to confuse the ὅτι's.

§§ 83-87. The meaning of these sections seems to be as follows. We here deal with souls which are more blessed than those mentioned above, yet are subjected to a τροπή by God to convince them of their frailty and that of human kind (§ 83). These souls Philo takes to be described in Deut. viii. They are in contrast with those of Num. xxi. in the following ways. First these (the historical situation being ignored) are in Egypt (87 init.). As they were "craving for the habitations of Egypt," they are virtually (cf. L.A. i. 61) in Egypt. The others are in the wilderness, which is the reverse of Egypt. They too, indeed, are bitten by the serpent of pleasure and the scorpion of scattering, yet these bites are not deadly like those of Numb. xxi. And they do not need the brazen serpent of καρτερία to cure them; for they are already καρτερίας ἐρασταί (83). They have the higher spiritual food of the manna and the rock-water, and are thus brought back from their τροπή spiritually enriched. Philo evidently associates himself with these souls.

§ 99. Four-legged. The reference is to the four passions, grief, fear, desire, pleasure. See S.V.F. iii. 381 ff.

APPENDIX TO ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III

§ 2. Rustic. For the Stoic idea that the bad man or fool was essentially ἀγροίκος cf. S. V. F. iii. 169 ff.

§ 7. The man with an issue (γονορρύης). Philo clearly alludes to the most famous of the dicta of Heraclitus, πάντα (or τὰ δλα) ῥεῖ. For illustrative quotations to this see Zeller, Presocratic Philosophy, vol. ii. p. 11 n.; for ἀμοιβῆ ibid. pp. 27-29. The phrase κόρος καὶ χρησιμοσύνη is somewhat obscure, and the evidence conflicting. See Zeller, op. cit. pp. 17 n. 3, 38 n., 46 n. 1, 78 n. 1; Ritter and Preller, Hist. Phil. Graec. 36 a. Philo, who repeats the phrase in Spec. Leg. i. 208, evidently uses it here as another example of Heraclitus's belief that the world was a combination of opposites passing into each other without Divine agency.

§ 16. Jacob stole away, etc. So E.V. More literally "Jacob kept Laban in the dark, so that he did not tell him." For the genitive of the infinitive in LXX. and N.T. see Moulton's translation of Winer's Grammar of N.T. Greek, pp. 410 ff.

§ 32. There is no blood-guiltiness for him. Or rather "to him" as in 35, "he shall be put to death for what he has done." This more than usually perverse piece of allegorizing has a slight justification in the elliptical character of the Greek. Of course αὐτῷ really refers to the slayer of the thief, and this slayer is also the ἐνοχος who ἀνταποθανέεται, and the lawgiver's meaning is that the homicide of a thief in open daylight is murder. To get the allegorical interpretation which he wants Philo has to give a different sense to ἀποθανεῖν in the two clauses. To Philo the whole passage means that the self-exalting thought which claims what is God's is a thief. Such a thought is self-wounded, but if it is not carried into action it may be said to have died and in that case is comparatively guiltless; but if it is brought into open daylight, i.e. is definitely accepted and acted on, it incurs spiritual death in the fullest sense.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, III

§ 65. Upon thy breast. These words, which are interpreted allegorically in 114 ff., are not in the Hebrew.

§ 97. Those whose philosophy, etc. For the Stoic argument to the same effect see S.V.F. ii. 1009. Philo reproduces much of what he says here in Spec. Leg. i. 32-35.

§ 104. Divine illumination or "luminaries," i.e. the heavenly bodies, often regarded as divine beings.

§ 129. Moderation of passion. For the Stoic ideal of ἀπάθεια see S.V.F. iii. 443 ff. On the other hand, according to Diogenes Laertius v. 31, Aristotle ἔφη τὸν σοφὸν ἀπα(ῆ μὲν μὴ εἶναι, μετριοπαθῆ δέ.

§ 160. With those who say, etc. Philo probably alludes to the Epicureans, particularly as he uses their distinctive word for the excitation of bodily pleasure (γαργαλισμός). See Usener, Epicurea, pp. 279-281, 288. Cicero (De Natura Deorum, i. 113) translates it by titillatio, and adds Epicuri enim hoc verbum est). Philo, however, misrepresents them, as the quotation in the footnote shows. Epicurus distinguished between "static" or "negative" and "kinetic" or "positive" pleasure.

§ 175. "Manna" means "something." For the Stoic phraseology which adopted τι, i.e. "quiddity," as the most generic and all-embracing of terms in place of the Platonic ἐν and the Aristotelian ὄν see S.V.F. ii. 333 and 329. Seneca translated it by quid (ibid. 332).

§ 188. Philo treats "seed" as synonymous with "origin." For ἐπιβάσεις καὶ ἐφιδρύσεις cf. L.A. iii. 53 τόπον . . . ὃ ἐπιβήσεται ἢ ἐφ' οὗ ἰδρυθήσεται, "find footing or settle himself."

§ 189. Way of life. "Ἐνστάσις, a Stoic or Cynic term for a life lived according to principle, or the need to repeat the ἐφιδρύσεις of the previous section. Julian (Or. 6, p. 201 A) contrasts the ἐνστάσις of the true Cynic with the "wallet" and "beard" which were his outward marks.

§ 206. Who can assert, etc. Heinemann rightly notes that Philo in this section voices the Sceptical school rather than his usual views. Elsewhere he passionately affirms that God is ἀσώματος and ἄποιος.

§ 210. This thought of the necessity of a right motive for a right action, though common to all ethics, was especially insisted upon by the Stoics (S.V.F. iii. 516, 517). Philo recurs to it in De Cherubim 14 ff. and elsewhere.

APPENDICES

§ 218. See Ryle, Philo and Holy Scripture, pp. 72 f., for this and other references to Gen. xviii. 12.

§ 239. There was not one such uncongenial reasoning. Philo is allegorizing the last words of Gen. xxxix. ff. καὶ οὐθεις ἦν τῶν ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ εἶσω.

§ 244. In this interpretation of Hagar's name, Philo echoes the common philosophical view that the study of the Encyclia must not be permanent. Thus the author of the treatise on Education, which is placed at the beginning of Plutarch's Moralia, and is written from a Stoic point of view, lays down that such subjects must be taken ἐκ παραδρομῆς, and goes on to say that "it is well to travel round many cities, but to make our residence in the best" (i.e. philosophy), De Liberis Educandis, 10.

PHILO

VOLUME II

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY

F. H. COLSON

AND

G. H. WHITAKER

HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS

LONDON, ENGLAND

First published 1929
Reprinted 1950, 1958, 1968, 1979, 1994, 2001

LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY® is a registered trademark of the President and Fellows of Harvard College

ISBN 0-674-99250-4

*Printed in Great Britain by St Edmundsbury Press Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk, on acid-free paper.
Bound by Hunter & Foulis Ltd, Edinburgh, Scotland.*

CONTENTS

ON THE CHERUBIM, THE FLAMING SWORD, AND CAIN
Introduction	3
Text and Translation	8
ON ABEL AND THE SACRIFICES OFFERED BY HIM AND BY CAIN
Introduction	88
Text and Translation	94
THAT THE WORSE IS WONT TO ATTACK THE BETTER
Introduction	198
Text and Translation	202
ON THE POSTERITY OF CAIN AND HIS EXILE
Introduction	323
Text and Translation	328
ON THE GIANTS
Introduction	443
Text and Translation	446
APPENDICES	481

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

SHOWING THEIR DIVISION INTO VOLUMES IN THIS EDITION

VOLUME

- I. On the Creation (De Opificio Mundi)
Allegorical Interpretation (Legum Allegoriae)
- II. On the Cherubim (De Cherubim)
On the Sacrifices of Abel and Cain (De Sacrificiis Abelis et Caini)
The Worse attacks the Better (Quod Deterius Potiori insidiari solet)
On the Posterity and Exile of Cain (De Posteritate Caini)
On the Giants (De Gigantibus)
- III. On the Unchangeableness of God (Quod Deus immutabilis sit)
On Husbandry (De Agricultura)
On Noah's Work as a Planter (De Plantatione)
On Drunkenness (De Ebrietate)
On Sobriety (De Sobrietate)
- IV. On the Confusion of Tongues (De Confusione Linguarum)
On the Migration of Abraham (De Migratione Abrahami)
Who is the Heir (Quis Rerum Divinarum Heres)
On the Preliminary Studies (De Congressu quaerendae Eruditionis gratia)
- V. On Flight and Finding (De Fuga et Inventione)
On the Change of Names (De Mutatione Nominum)
On Dreams (De Somniis)
- VI. On Abraham (De Abrahamo)
On Joseph (De Iosepho)
Moses (De Vita Mosis)

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

VOLUME

- VII. On the Decalogue (De Decalogo)
On the Special Laws Books I-III (De Specialibus Legibus)
- VIII. On the Special Laws Book IV (De Specialibus Legibus)
On the Virtues (De Virtutibus)
On Rewards and Punishments (De Praemiis et Poenis)
- IX. Every Good Man is Free (Quod Omnis Probus Liber sit)
On the Contemplative Life (De Vita Contemplativa)
On the Eternity of the World (De Aeternitate Mundi)
Flaccus (In Flaccum)
Hypothetica<sup>1</sup> (Apologia pro Iudaeis)
On Providence<sup>1</sup> (De Providentia)
- X. On the Embassy to Gaius (De Legatione ad Gaium)
GENERAL INDEX TO VOLUMES I-X

SUPPLEMENT

- I. Questions and Answers on Genesis<sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin)
- II. Questions and Answers on Exodus<sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum)
- GENERAL INDEX TO SUPPLEMENTS I-II

<sup>1</sup> Only two fragments extant.
<sup>2</sup> Extant only in an Armenian version.

ON THE CHERUBIM, AND THE FLAMING SWORD, AND CAIN THE FIRST MAN
CREATED OUT OF MAN
(DE CHERUBIM)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

THIS fine treatise divides itself into two parts, the first (1-39) a homily on Genesis iii. 24—

“ And He cast forth Adam and set over against<sup>a</sup> the Garden of Pleasure the Cherubim and the sword of flame which turns every way.”

The second (40—end) on Genesis iv. 1—

“ And Adam knew Eve, his wife, and she conceived and bare Cain, and he<sup>b</sup> said ‘ I have gotten a man through God.’ ”

I. In the first part we open (1-10) with a disquisition on the difference between the phrases “ cast forth ” and “ sent forth,” which was used in Genesis iii. 23: the former indicates a permanent, the latter a temporary expulsion (1-2). These different meanings are illustrated (3-9) by the earlier expulsion of Hagar, as described in Genesis xvi., and the later and permanent expulsion of Genesis xxi. In this, as often in Philo, Hagar stands for the lower and secular education, and Sarah for philosophy.<sup>c</sup>

We then have a discussion (11-20) of the meaning of “ over against.” While it is pointed out that the phrase may sometimes indicate hostility (12-13), and

<sup>a</sup> For Philo's reading of the text see note on § 1.

<sup>b</sup> For Philo's view that “ Adam ” is the subject of “ said ” see note on § 40.

<sup>c</sup> See General Introduction, pp. xvi, xvii.

PHILO

sometimes the position of the accused before his judge (14-17), in which the text "the priest shall set the (accused) woman before the Lord and uncover her head" leads to an interpretation of the last three words as meaning "reveal the real motives," it is decided that the words in Genesis are used in the same sense of friendliness, as in the text "Abraham was standing before (opposite to) the Lord" (18-20).

From 21-39 we have mainly a discussion of what is intended by the two Cherubim and the Flaming Sword. Two physical explanations are suggested: (a) the planetary sphere on the one hand, with its seven zones in which each of the planets move, and that of the fixed stars on the other, the revolution of the whole heaven being the sword (21-24); (b) the two "hemispheres" of the heaven, with the sun as sword (25-26). But Philo's personal preference is for a more profound interpretation (27-30), which finds in the Cherubim the two chief 'Potencies' of God, His 'goodness' or lovingkindness, and His majesty or sovereignty, while the sword is the reason or Logos which unites the two. This last leads to the reflection that Balaam, the foolish one, was rightly made swordless, as is shown in his words to the ass, "if I had a sword, I would have pierced thee" (32). And these particular words in their turn suggest a short meditation on those who, when disappointed in worldly affairs lay the blame on the affairs themselves (33-38). The whole homily concludes with a section emphasizing reason as the source of human happiness (39).

II. The main idea that runs through the second part is that Adam signifies mind, Eve sense (i.e. sense-perception), and Cain (whose name means 'possession ') the impious idea engendered by Mind and Sense, that what we have is our own and not God's. But we must first consider the words " Adam knew his wife." The absence of any such phrase in connexion with the great saints of the Pentateuch indicates that their wives (unlike Adam's) are Virtues which receive seed from God Himself, though they bear offspring to the persons who possess them, a lesson which is declared to be one for higher understandings, and too spiritual for profane ears (40-52). Next we have to ask why " Cain " is not more fully described as ' first-born son ' (53-55), and the explanation of this point <sup>a</sup> merges into an exposition of the way in which Mind, helpless in itself, by mating with Sense, comes to comprehend phenomena and supposes that this comprehension is its own doing (56-64). The folly of this supposition is emphasized (65-66), and illustrated first from the words of Laban, " The daughters are my daughters, the sons my sons, and the cattle my cattle, and all that thou seest are mine." The allegorizing of daughters, sons, and cattle as arts or sciences, reasonings, and sense-perceptions respectively, leads to an impassioned outburst on human fallibility and its slavery to delusions (67-71), a slavery which resembles that of the slave of Ex. xxi. who " loved his master " and rejected freedom (72-74). A second illustration is drawn from the vain boasting of Pharaoh, as described in Moses' song in Ex. xv. (74-76). The failure of the Pharaoh mind to realize that God alone acts, while it is for man to be passive (77), leads to a remarkable digression on the right form of human passiveness—not, that is, a helpless passiveness, but one which braces itself to accept and co-operate with the Actor (78-83).

ON THE CHERUBIM

<sup>a</sup> For this see note to § 53, App. pp. 483, 484.

PHILO

In contrast with the idle claims of the Mind, we have the Divine claim that "all things are Mine . . . in My feasts." The last few words suggest a meditation on the sense in which God keeps feast, how His resting is an eternal activity, which unlike the activity of the world knows no weariness (84-90). Man indeed can in no true sense feast, and there follows a powerful denunciation of the vanity, licence, and sinfulness of the popular festivals (91-97). The last few words of this denunciation deplore the pagan blindness to the truth that God sees into the recesses of the soul, and thus we pass, by a somewhat forced transition, to the thought of the soul as God's house, and the nature of the preparations needed to fit it for His reception is described in a fine passage, in the course of which Philo gives a signal example of the high value he sets on the secular education and culture of his day <sup>a</sup> (98-105).

The soul thus fitted for God's reception will inevitably find its chief joy in acknowledging God's sovereignty and ownership (106-107). Thus we return to the main theme, which is once more illustrated by the text "The land shall not be sold . . . for all the land is Mine, because ye are sojourners and aliens before Me." Spiritually the "land" is the world of creation, every part of which is a loan from Him to every other part, and here Philo dwells eloquently on the interdependence of created things (108-113). It is also ourselves, for, inconstant creatures that we are (113-114), ignorant of our whence and whither (114-115), our minds ever subject to delusion and seduction (116-117), we cannot be said to own ourselves, a thought which may well teach us resignation (118-119). The last words of the text, "ye are sojourners," suggest the thought of God as the true 'citizen,' in contrast to ourselves who are at best immigrants (120-121), and once more the phrase "shall not be sold" reminds us that the benefits men exchange are at bottom a matter of sale and purchase, and that God alone is the real giver (121-123).

<sup>a</sup> See General Introduction, p. xvi.

ON THE CHERUBIM

Finally we have a disquisition on the error involved in the words "I have gotten a man through God." Philo, on the lines of Aristotle, names four causes of things, and shows that the "by whom," or agent, and not the "through whom," or instrument, is applicable to God (124-127); and this he illustrates by comparing the erroneous use by Joseph of the latter with the right use of the former by Moses (128-130).

ΠΕΡΙ ΤΩΝ ΧΕΡΟΥΒΙΜ ΚΑΙ ΤΗΣ ΦΛΟ-ΓΙΝΗΣ ΡΟΜΦΑΙΑΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΟΥ ΚΤΙΣ-ΘΕΝΤΟΣ ΠΡΩΤΟΥ ΕΞ ΑΝΘΡΩΠΟΥ
ΚΑΙΝ

- <sup>1</sup>
[138] I. "Καὶ ἐξέβαλε τὸν Ἀδὰμ καὶ κατώκισεν ἀπέναντι τοῦ παραδείσου τῆς τρυφῆς [καὶ ἔταξε]<sup>1</sup> τὰ Χερουβὶμ καὶ τὴν φλογίνην ρομφαίαν τὴν στρεφομένην, φυλάσσειν τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ ξύλου τῆς ζωῆς" (Gen. iii. 24). νῦν μὲν "ἐξέβαλε" φησί, πρότερον δ' εἶπεν "ἐξαπέστειλεν" (ib. 23), οὐ παρέργως τὰ ὀνόματα θεῖς, ἀλλ' εἰδὼς ἐφ' ὧν κυρίως καὶ <sup>2</sup>
[139] εὐθυβόλως | πραγμάτων αὐτὰ τάττει. ὁ μὲν οὖν ἀποστελλόμενος ἐπανόδου τυχεῖν οὐ κεκώλυται, ὁ δ' ἐκβληθεὶς ὑπὸ θεοῦ τὴν αἰδίου φυγὴν ὑπομένει· τῷ μὲν γὰρ μήπω κραταιῶς ὑπὸ κακίας καταληφθέντι δέδοται μετανοήσαντι καθάπερ εἰς πατρίδα τὴν ἀρετὴν ἀφ' ἧς ἐξέπεσε κατελθεῖν, τὸν δὲ πιεσθέντα καὶ ὑποβεβλημένον σφοδρᾶ καὶ ἀνιάτῳ νόσῳ φέρειν ἀνάγκη τὰ δεινὰ μέχρι τοῦ παντὸς αἰῶνος ἀθάνατα σκορακισθέντα εἰς ἀσεβῶν χώρον, ἢν' ἄκρατον καὶ συνεχῆ βαρυνδαιμονίαν ὑπομένη· <sup>3</sup>
ἐπεὶ καὶ τὴν μέσσην παιδείαν τὴν ἐν τοῖς ἐγκυκλίοις χορεύουσιν ὁρώμεν "Ἄγαρ δις μὲν

<sup>1</sup> Cohn excludes καὶ ἔταξε on the grounds that though they appear in the text of the LXX., it is assumed in § 11

ON THE CHERUBIM, AND THE FLAMING SWORD, AND CAIN THE FIRST MAN CREATED OUT OF MAN

I. "And he cast forth Adam and set [him] over against the Garden of Pleasure [and posted] the Cherubim and the sword of flame which turns every way, to guard the way of the Tree of Life" (Gen. iii. 24). Observe the word "cast forth" instead of the earlier "sent forth" (ib. 23). The words are not set down at random, but chosen with a knowledge of the things to which he applies them in their proper and exact sense. He who is sent forth is not thereby prevented from returning. He who is cast forth by God is subject to eternal banishment. For to him who is not as yet firmly in the grip of wickedness it is open to repent and return to the virtue from which he was driven, as an exile returns to his fatherland. But to him that is weighed down and enslaved by that fierce and incurable malady, the horrors of the future must needs be undying and eternal: he is thrust forth to the place of the impious, there to endure misery continuous and unrelieved.

And thus we see that Hagar or the lower education, whose sphere is the secular learning of the schools,<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> See General Introduction, pp. xvi, xvii.

---

that the Cherubim and not Adam are placed opposite the Garden.

ἐξιοῦσαν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχούσης ἀρετῆς Σάρρας, ἅπαξ δὲ τὴν προτέραν ὁδὸν ὑποστρέφουσιν, ἢ τότε μὲν ἀποδρᾶσα, οὐ φυγαδευθεῖσα, κατάγεται ὑπαντήσαντος ἀγγέλου, ὃς ἐστὶ θεῖος λόγος, εἰς τὸν δεσποτικὸν οἶκον (Gen. xvi. 6 ff.), αὐθις δὲ κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς ἀνεπάνακτος ἐκβάλλεται (Gen. xxi. 14).

- 4 Π. Τας δὲ αἰτίας καὶ τοῦ προτέρου δρασμοῦ καὶ τῆς αὐθις αἰδίου φυγῆς λεκτέον. μέχρι μὲν οὐπω μετωνομάσθησαν, ὅπερ ἦν μετεχαράχθησαν τοὺς ψυχῆς πρὸς τὸ ἄμεινον βελτιούμενοι χαρακτῆρας, ἀλλ' ἔτι ἦν ὁ μὲν Ἀβρὰμ πατὴρ μετέωρος τὴν μετάρσιον τῶν κατὰ τὸν ἀέρα συμβαινόντων καὶ τὴν μετέωρον τῶν κατὰ τὸν οὐρανὸν ὑπαρχόντων φιλοσοφίαν μετιῶν, ἣν φυσιολογίας τὸ
- 5 κράτιστον εἶδος ἀποτέμνηται μαθηματικῆ, Σάρα δὲ σύμβολον ἀρχῆς ἐμῆς—καλεῖται γὰρ ἀρχή μου—γενικὴ μὲν οὐκ ἔφθη μεταβαλοῦσα ἀρετὴ γενέσθαι—γένος γὰρ πᾶν ἀφθαρτον—, ταῖς δὲ ἐν μέρει καὶ κατ' εἶδος ἐξητάζετο, ἢ δὲ αὐτὴ φρόνησίς τ' ἦν ἐν ἐμοὶ καὶ σωφροσύνη καὶ ἀνδρεία καὶ δικαιοσύνη τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον, φθαρταὶ δὲ αὐταί, ὅτι καὶ τὸ
- 6 δεξάμενον αὐτὰς χωρίον ἐγὼ φθαρτός, "Ἄγαρ ἢ μέση καὶ ἐγκύκλιος παιδεία, κἂν τὸν αὐστηρὸν καὶ σκυθρωπὸν τῶν φιλαρέτων ἀποδρᾶσαι βίον σπουδᾶσιν, πάλιν ὑποστρέψει πρὸς τὸν αὐτὸν μήπω τὰς γενικὰς καὶ ἀφθάρτους ἀκρότητας ἔχειν δυνάμενον, ἀλλ' ἔτι τῶν ἐν μέρει καὶ κατ' εἶδος ἐφαπτόμενον, ° Philo draws a distinction between μετάρσιος (perhaps deriving it from ἀήρ) and μετέωρος.

ᵇ Or "which astronomy, the noblest branch of nature-study, claims as its own."

ON THE CHERUBIM, 3-6

while she twice departs from sovereign virtue in the person of Sarah, does once retrace her steps. On this first occasion hers was a voluntary flight, not a banishment, and when she met the angel or divine reason, she returned to her master's house (Gen. xvi. 6 ff.). The second time she is cast forth utterly, never to return (Gen. xxi. 14).

II. Here we must speak of the reasons for this first flight and that second eternal banishment. On the first occasion Abraham and Sarah had not yet received their change of names, that is they had not yet been changed in character to the betterment of soul, but one was still Abram "the uplifted father," pursuing the philosophy of the super-terrestrial, the philosophy which treats of air and the ways in which it is affected, pursuing too the sublimer <sup>a</sup> philosophy of the heaven and the beings existing therein, which mathematics claims as the noblest branch of "physic" or nature-study <sup>b</sup>; and Sarah was still Sarai, the type of personal sovereignty (her name means "my sovereignty"); she had not yet undergone the change to generic virtue; for all that is generic must be imperishable. She still had her place with the particular and specific virtues. She was still <sup>c</sup> prudence, as shown in the "I," and similarly temperance, courage, justice, all perishable, because the sphere in which they move is the perishable "I." And therefore Hagar the lower or secular culture, though she has hastened to escape the stern and gloomy life of the virtue-seekers, <sup>d</sup> will return to that same life which as yet is unable to hold the heights of the generic and imperishable, still clinging to the particular and specific region in which the

<sup>c</sup> Or "in her single self."

<sup>d</sup> See App. p. 481.

ἐν οἷς πρὸ τῶν ἄκρων τὰ μέσα αἰρετά.

7 ὅταν δὲ ἦδη ὁ μὲν Ἀβρὰμ ἀντὶ φυσιολόγου γένηται
σοφὸς καὶ φιλόθεος μετονομασθεὶς Ἀβραάμ, ὃς
[140] ἐρμηνεύεται πατήρ | ἐκλεκτὸς ἡχοῦς—ἡχεῖ μὲν γὰρ
ὁ γεγωνὸς λόγος, πατήρ δὲ τούτου ὁ νοῦς ἐπειλημμένος τοῦ σπουδαίου<sup>1</sup>—, Σάρα δὲ ἀντὶ τῆς ἀρχῆς
μου γένηται Σάρρα, ἧς ἐστὶν ἡ κλῆσις ἄρχουσα,
ὅπερ ἦν ἴσον τῷ ἀντὶ εἰδικῆς καὶ φθαρτῆς ἀρετῆς 8 γενικὴν καὶ ἀφθαρτον γενέσθαι, ἐπιλάμψη δὲ καὶ τὸ
εὐδαιμονίας γένος, ὃ Ἰσαάκ, ἐκλιπόντων τὰ γυναικεῖα
(Gen. xviii. 11) καὶ ἀποθανόντων<sup>2</sup> τὰ πάθη χαρᾶς
καὶ εὐφροσύνης, καὶ παιδιάς, οὐ τὰς παίδων, ἀλλὰ
τὰς θείας οὐκ ἄνευ σπουδῆς μεταδιώκων, ἐκβληθή-σεται μὲν τὰ ἐπώνυμα τῆς Ἄγαρ προπαιδεύματα, ἐκβληθήσεται δὲ καὶ ὁ σοφιστῆς αὐτῶν υἱὸς ἐπί-9 κλησιν Ἰσμαήλ.

III. ἐνδύσονται δὲ τὴν
φυγὴν αἰδίων, βεβαιούντος τοῦ θεοῦ τὴν ἔλασιν αὐτοῖς, ὅταν κελεύῃ τῷ σοφῷ ὑπακούειν τῶν λεγομένων ὑπὸ Σάρρας· λέγει δὲ ἄντικρυς “ἐκβαλεῖν
τὴν παιδίσκην καὶ τὸν υἱόν” (Gen. xxi. 10).
ἀρετῇ δὲ πείθεσθαι καλὸν καὶ μάλιστα τοιοῦτον
εἰσηγουμένην δόγμα, ὅτι αἱ τελειόταται φύσεις τῶν μέσων ἕξων πάμπολυ διεστᾶσι καὶ ὅτι σοφία σοφι-στείας ἀλλότριον· ἡ μὲν γὰρ τὰ πιθανὰ ἐπὶ κατασκευῇ ψευδοῦς δόξης, ἥτις λυμαίνεται ψυχὴν, ἐκ-

<sup>1</sup> So mss., but perhaps read according to a citation of the passage in Clem. Alex. Strom. v. 1. 8 ἐξελεγμένος δὲ ὁ τοῦ σπουδαίου, i.e. “the chosen mind is that of the good man”; cf. De Gig. 64.

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps read ἀπομαθόντων. For other suggestions see App. pp. 481, 482. Cf. L.A. iii. 236.

<sup>a</sup> An allusion to Gen. xxvi. 8 where Isaac “sported” with Rebecca. See also App. p. 482.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 6-9

lower is preferred to the highest. But at the later stage Abram leaves the study of nature for the life of the wise, the lover of God. His name is changed to Abraham, meaning "the chosen father of sound," for to "sound" is the function of the uttered word or reason, whose father is the mind when it has grasped the good. Sarai again quits personal sovereignty to become Sarah, whose name is "sovereign," and this means that instead of being specific and perishable virtue she has become generic and imperishable. Then too there shines upon them the light of Isaac—the generic form of happiness, of the joy and gladness which belongs to those who have ceased from the manner of women (Gen. xviii. 11) and died to the passions—Isaac, whose heart is in the pursuit of no childish sports, but those which are divine.<sup>a</sup> When all this is come to pass, then will be cast forth those preliminary studies which bear the name of Hagar, and cast forth too will be their son the sophist named Ishmael.

III. The banishment on which they enter will be for ever, for the sentence of expulsion is confirmed by God when he bids the wise man hearken to the words of Sarah, who charges him expressly to cast forth the bondwoman and her son (Gen. xxi. 10). It is well to listen to the voice of virtue, above all when she sets before us such a doctrine as this, because the most perfect types of being and the secondary acquirements<sup>b</sup> are worlds apart, and wisdom has no kinship with the sophist's culture. For the latter has for the fruits of all its labour only those persuasions which tend to establish the false opinion, which destroys the soul; but wisdom

<sup>b</sup> See note on § 62.

πεπόνηκε, σοφία δὲ διὰ μελέτης τῶν ἀληθῶν τὸ μέγα διανοίας ὄφελος, ἐπιστήμην ὀρθοῦ λόγου, πεπόρισται.

- 10 Τί οὖν θαυμάζομεν, εἰ καὶ Ἄδὰμ τὸν νοῦν ἀφροσύνην ἀνίατον νόσον κτησάμενον ἐκβέβληκεν εἰς-άπαν ὁ θεὸς ἐκ τοῦ τῶν ἀρετῶν χωρίου μὴ ἐπιτρέψας ἔτι κατελθεῖν αὐτῷ; ὅποτε καὶ <κατὰ> πάντα<sup>1</sup> σοφιστὴν καὶ μητέρα αὐτοῦ, τὴν τῶν προπαιδευμάτων διδασκαλίαν, ἐλαύνει καὶ φυγαδεύει ἀπὸ σοφίας καὶ σοφοῦ, ὧν ὀνόματα Ἀβραάμ τε καὶ Σάρραν καλεῖ.
- 11 IV. Τότε καὶ ἡ φλογίνη ῥομφαία καὶ τὰ Χερουβὶμ ἀντικρὺ τοῦ παραδείσου τὴν οἴκησιν ἴσχει. λέγεται δὲ “ἀντικρὺ” τὸ μὲν ὡς ἐχθρὸν ἀντιστατοῦν, τὸ δὲ ἀρμόττον τοῖς εἰς ἐπίκρισιν, ὡς ὁ κρινόμενος τῷ δικαστῇ, τὸ δὲ ὡς φίλον τοῦ κατανοηθῆναι χάριν καὶ ἐκ τῆς ἀκριβεστερας προσόψεως μᾶλλον οἰκειωθῆναι, ὡς γραφαί τε καὶ ἀνδριάντες
- 12 ἀρχέτυποι γραφεῦσι καὶ πλάσταις. τοῦ μὲν οὖν ἀντιτεταγμένου παραδείγματος τὸ ἐπὶ τοῦ Κάιν εἰρημένον, ὅτι “ἐξῆλθεν ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ᾤκησεν ἐν γῆ Ναὶδ κατέναντι Ἐδέμ” (Gen. iv. 16). ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ Ναὶδ μὲν σάλος, Ἐδέμ δὲ τρυφή, τὸ μὲν κακίας κλονούσης ψυχῆν
- [141] σύμβολον, τὸ δὲ | ἀρετῆς εὐπάθειαν αὐτῆς περιποιούσης καὶ τρυφήν, οὐχὶ τὴν δι’ ἀλόγου πάθους ἡδονῆς θρύψιν, ἀλλὰ τὴν μετὰ πολλῆς εὐμαρείας

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps with Mangey ὅποτε καὶ παῖδα σοφιστὴν.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 9-12

studies truth and thus obtains that great source of profit to the mind, knowledge of right reason.

Since then the sophist, who is ever sophist, and his mother, the instruction in the preliminary learning, are expelled and banished by God from the presence of wisdom and the wise, on whom he confers the titles of Sarah and Abraham, can we wonder that he has cast forth Adam, that is the mind, which is sick with the incurable sickness of folly, from the dwelling-place of virtue for ever and permits him not to return?

IV. Then too it is that the flaming sword and the Cherubim find their dwelling-place "over against" Paradise. The word "opposite" or "over against" may be used in three senses. First there is a hostile sense; a thing placed "over against" may be in opposition; and there is also a sense applicable to persons who are so placed to be judged, as when the accused is placed over against the juror. And thirdly there is the friendly sense. An object may be so placed to be fully observed, and, in consequence of this more accurate inspection, to be brought into closer connexion, just as painters and sculptors have the picture or statue which serve them as models.

Of the first sense, that of hostility, we find an example in what is said of Cain that "he went out from the face of God and dwelt in Nod over against Eden" (Gen. iv. 16). The meaning of Nod is "tossing" and Eden is "delight." The former is the symbol of the vice that creates tumult in the soul; the latter of the virtue which wins it well-being and delight, not the weak and wanton sort, which the brute passion pleasure brings, but that sense of profound content and joy, which knows

- 13 ἄπονον χαρὰν καὶ ἀταλαίπωρον. ἀνάγκη δέ, ὅταν ἀπὸ τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ φαντασίας ἐξέλθῃ διάνοια, ἣ καλὸν καὶ συμφέρον ἦν ἐπερηρεῖσθαι, νεὼς αὐτίκα θαλαττευούσης τρόπον, ἀντιστατούντων βιαίων πνευμάτων, ὧδε κἀκέισε φέρεσθαι πατρίδα καὶ οἰκίαν λαχοῦσαν <σάλον καὶ> κλόνον, ἅπερ ἐναντιώτατά ἐστι βεβαιότητι ψυχῆς, ἣν περιποιεῖ χαρὰ συνώνυμος Ἐδέμ.
- 14 V. Τοῦ δὲ εἰς ἐπίκρισιν ἐναντίου παράδειγμα τὸ τῆς ζηλοτυπουμένης μεμοιχεῦσθαι. “ στήσει ” γάρ φησιν “ ὁ ἱερεὺς τὴν γυναῖκα ἐναντίον κυρίου καὶ ἀποκαλύψει τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτῆς ” (Num. v. 18). τί δὲ βούλεται διὰ τούτου παριστάνειν, ἐρευνήσωμεν. τὸ δέον πολλάκις δεόντως οὐκ ἐνεργεῖται καὶ τὸ μὴ καθῆκον ἔστιν ὅτε δρᾶται καθηκόντως· οἶον ἢ μὲν τῆς παρακαταθήκης ἀπόδοσις ὅταν μὴ ἀπὸ γνώμης ὑγιοῦς γίγνηται ἀλλ’ ἢ ἐπὶ βλάβῃ τοῦ λαμβάνοντος ἢ ἐπ’ ἐνέδρα τῆς περὶ μείζονα πίστιν ἀρνήσεως, καθῆκον ἔργον οὐ δεόντως ἐπιτελεῖται.
- 15 τὸ δὲ τῷ κάμνοντι μὴ ἀληθεῦσαι τὸν ἰατρὸν κενοῦν ἢ τέμνειν ἢ καίειν διεγνωκότα ἐπ’ ὠφελεία τοῦ νοσοῦντος, ἵνα μὴ προλαβὼν τὰ δεινὰ φύγῃ τὴν θεραπείαν ἢ ἐξασθενήσας ἀπέιπῃ πρὸς αὐτήν, ἢ πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους τὸν σοφὸν ψεύσασθαι ἐπὶ τῇ τῆς πατρίδος σωτηρίᾳ, δείσαντα μὴ ἐκ τοῦ ἀληθεῦσαι ῥωσθῆ τὰ τῶν ἀντιπάλων, οὐ καθῆκον ἔργον δεόντως ἐνεργεῖται. παρὸ καὶ φησι Μωυσῆς “ δικαίως τὸ δίκαιον διώκειν ” (Deut. xvi. 20), ὡς ἐνὸν καὶ ἀδίκως, ὅταν μὴ ἀπὸ γνώμης ὑγιοῦς ὁ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 482.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 13-15

not toil or trouble. But when the mind goes forth from the vision of God, whereon it was good and profitable for it to be anchored, it must needs, like a ship at sea, battling with boisterous winds, straightway be borne hither and thither, and its only home and country is wild commotion, the very opposite of that constancy of the soul, which is the gift of the joy that bears the name of Eden.

V. For the second sense when the word means set opposite for judgement, we have an example in the account of the woman suspected by her husband of adultery. "The priest," so he says, "shall place the woman in front of, or 'over against,' the Lord and uncover her head" (Numb. v. 18). What scripture would indicate by these last words, let us investigate. An action right in itself may often be wrong in the doing, and things contrary to duty in themselves may be done in the spirit of duty. For instance the restoration of a deposit when it is done not from any honest motive but either to injure the recipient, or to lead up treacherously to the repudiation of a greater trust, is a duty in itself, yet in its actual execution wrong. On the other hand, if the physician who purposes to use purge or knife or hot iron to benefit his patient, conceals the truth from him, that he may not shirk the treatment through anticipation of its terror, or collapse and faint when exposed to it, we have an action contrary to duty in itself yet in its actual execution right. So too with the wise man who, fearing that the truth may strengthen the enemy's position, gives them false information to save his country.<sup>a</sup> And thus Moses says "follow justice justly" (Deut. xvi. 20), implying that it is possible to do so unjustly, when the judge brings no

- 16 δικάζων προσέχη. ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν τὸ μὲν λεγόμενον ἢ πραττόμενον φανερώς γνώριμον πᾶσιν, ἢ δὲ διάνοια οὐ γνώριμος, ἀφ' ἧς καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα λέγεται καὶ τὰ πραττόμενα πράττεται, ἀλλ' ἄδηλον εἴτε ὑγιαίνει καὶ καθαρεύει εἴτε νοσεῖ μιάσμασι κεχρωσμένη πολλοῖς, γενητὸς δὲ οὐδεὶς ἱκανὸς γνώμης ἀφανοῦς κατιδεῖν ἐνθύμημα, μόνος δὲ ὁ θεός, παρὸ καὶ λέγει Μωυσῆς ὅτι "τὰ κρυπτά κυρίῳ τῷ θεῷ, τὰ δὲ φανερὰ γενέσει γνώριμα" (Deut. xxix. 29), προστέτακται τῷ ἱερεὶ καὶ
- 17 προφήτῃ λόγῳ, τὴν ψυχὴν "ἐναντίον τοῦ θεοῦ στῆσαι" ἀποκαλύψῃ τῇ κεφαλῇ (Num. v. 18), τουτέστι τὸ κεφάλαιον δόγμα γυμνωθεῖσαν καὶ τὴν γνώμην ἢ κέχρηται ἀπαμφιασθεῖσαν, ἢ ὄψει ταῖς ἀκριβεστάταις ἐπικριθεῖσα τοῦ ἀδεκάστου |
- [142] θεοῦ ἢ τὴν ὑποτυφομένην εἰρωνεῖαν, κίβδηλον νόμισμα, διελεγχθῆ <ἢ> πάσης οὔσα κακίας ἀμέτοχος ἐκνήφεται τὰς καθ' αὐτῆς διαβολὰς μάρτυρι χρησαμένη τῷ μόνῳ γυμνὴν ψυχὴν ἰδεῖν δυναμένῳ.
- 18 VI. Τὸ μὲν οὖν εἰς ἐπίκρισιν ἐναντίον τοιοῦτόν ἐστι· τὸ δ' εἰς οἰκειώσιν, ὃ ἐπὶ τοῦ πανσόφου λέλεκται Ἀβραάμ· "ἔτι," γάρ φησιν, "ἦν ἑστηκὸς ἐναντίον κυρίου" (Gen. xviii. 22)· καὶ τεκμήριον τῆς οἰκειώσεως τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον ὅτι "ἐγγίσας εἶπεν" (ib. 23)· ἀλλοτριουμένῳ γὰρ ἀφίστασθαι καὶ διαζεύγνυσθαι, οἰκειουμένῳ δὲ
- 19 συνεγγίζειν ἀρμόττει. τὸ δὲ στῆναι καὶ ἄτρεπτον κτήσασθαι διάνοιαν ἐγγύς ἐστι βαίνειν θεοῦ δυνάμεως, ἐπειδὴ τὸ μὲν θεῖον ἄτρεπτον, τὸ δὲ

° Literally "smouldering."

ON THE CHERUBIM, 16-19

honest mind to bear upon the case. Now words spoken openly and deeds done openly are known to all, but the inward thought which prompts them in either case is not known. We cannot tell whether it is wholesome and pure, or diseased and stained with manifold defilement. No merely created being is capable of discerning the hidden thought and motive. Only God can do so, and therefore Moses says "things hidden are known to the Lord God, but things manifest are known to the Creature" (Deut. xxix. 29). Now we see the cause why Reason, the priest and prophet, is bidden to set the soul "over against the Lord" with her head uncovered (Numb. v. 18), that is with the dominant principles, which constitute her head, laid bare, and the motives which she has cherished stripped of their trappings, so that, being judged by the all-penetrating eye of God the incorruptible, she may either like counterfeit coinage have her lurking<sup>a</sup> dissimulation revealed, or being innocent of all evil may, by appealing to the testimony of Him who alone can see the soul naked, wash away the charges brought against her.

VI. So much for the second sense of "over against." But the third where the object sought is closer intimacy we find in the words used of the wholly-wise Abraham, "He was still standing before (or over against) the Lord" (Gen. xviii. 22). And a proof of this closer intimacy is the further saying that "he drew nigh and said" (ibid. 23). Those who desire estrangement may stand aloof and separate themselves; it is for those who seek intimacy to draw nigh to each other. To stand fast and acquire an unswerving mind is to be stepping nigh to the power of God. For with the divine there is no

γενόμενον φύσει μεταβλητόν. εἴ τις οὖν τὴν γενέσεως οἰκείαν φορὰν ἔρωτι ἐπιστήμης ἐγγαλιωσάμενος ἐβιάσατο στῆναι ποιήσας, μὴ λανθανέτω 20 θείας εὐδαιμονίας ἐγγὺς ὢν. τοῖς δὲ Χερουβὶμ καὶ τῇ φλογίνῃ ῥομφαίᾳ τὴν ἀντικρὺ τοῦ παραδείσου πόλιν οἰκείως δίδωσιν, οὐχ ὡς ἐχθροῖς μέλλουσιν ἀντιστατεῖν καὶ διαμάχεσθαι, ἀλλ' ὡς οἰκειοτάτοις καὶ φιλτάτοις, ἵν' ἐκ τῆς ὁμοῦ προσόψεως καὶ συνεχοῦς περιαιθήσεως πόθον αἱ δυνάμεις ἴσχωσιν ἀλλήλων, καταπνέοντος εἰς αὐτὰς τὸν πτηνὸν ἔρωτα καὶ οὐράνιον τοῦ φιλοδώρου θεοῦ.

21 VII. Τίνα δέ ἐστιν ἃ διὰ τῶν Χερουβὶμ καὶ τῆς στρεφομένης ῥομφαίας φλογίνης αἰνίττεται, νῦν ἐπισκεπτέον. μήποτε οὖν τὴν τοῦ παντὸς οὐρανοῦ φορὰν δι' ὑπονοιῶν εἰσάγει· κίνησιν γὰρ αἱ κατ' οὐρανὸν σφαῖραι τὴν ἐναντίαν ἔλαχον ἀλλήλαις, ἢ μὲν τὴν ἀπλανῆ ταυτοῦ κατὰ δεξιὰ, ἢ δὲ τὴν
 22 πεπλανημένην θατέρου κατ' εὐώνυμα. ἢ μὲν οὖν ἐξωτάτω, τῶν λεγομένων ἀπλανῶν, μία, ἢ καὶ τὴν αὐτὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐσπερίων ἐπὶ τὰ ἐσπέρια εἰλείται περίοδον, αἱ δ' ἐντὸς ἐπτὰ, τῶν πλανήτων, ἐθελοσύσιόν τε καὶ βεβιασμένην, ὑπεναντίους ἅμα καὶ διττὰς ἴσχουσαι κινήσεις· καὶ ἐστὶν αὐταῖς ἢ μὲν ἀκούσιος ὁμοία τῇ τῶν ἀπλανῶν, φαίνονται γὰρ καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἀπ' ἀνατολῆς ἐπὶ δύσιν ἰοῦσαι, ἢ δὲ οἰκεία ἀπὸ τῶν ἐσπερίων ἐπὶ τὰ ἐῶα, καθ' ἣν συμβέβηκε τὰς περιόδους τῶν ἐπτὰ ἀστέρων καὶ μήκη χρόνων προσειληφέναι, τὰς

<sup>a</sup> Or "with fitness"; there is a play on the double sense of the word.

<sup>b</sup> Philo takes these terms, and indeed the whole passage, from Plato, Timaeus 36, on which see Archer-Hind's notes as also on ib. 38 D.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 19-22

turning : variableness belongs to the nature of the created. He then, who with the love of knowledge as his bridle checks the onward course which is natural to created being and compels it to stand still, may be sure that he is not far from the divine happiness. It is with this thought of intimacy<sup>a</sup> that he assigns to the Cherubim and the flaming sword the abode in front of Paradise, not as to foes destined to contend in hostility with each other, but as to the dearest and closest of friends; that thus the Potencies ever gazing at each other in unbroken contemplation may acquire a mutual yearning, even that winged and heavenly love, wherewith God the bountiful giver inspires them.

VII. We must now examine what is symbolized by the Cherubim and the sword of flame which turns every way. I suggest that they are an allegorical figure of the revolution of the whole heaven. For the movements assigned to the heavenly spheres are of two opposite kinds, in the one case an unvarying course, embodying the principle of sameness,<sup>b</sup> to the right, in the other a variable course, embodying the principle of otherness,<sup>b</sup> to the left. The outermost sphere, which contains what are called the fixed stars, is a single one and always makes the same revolution from east to west. But the inner spheres, seven in number, contain the planets and each has two motions of opposite nature, one voluntary, the other under a compelling force. Their involuntary motion is similar to that of the fixed stars, for we see them pass every day from east to west, but their own proper motion is from west to east, and it is in this that we find the revolutions of the seven governed also by certain lengths of time. These lengths are

- μὲν ἰσοδρόμους ἴσα, ἡλίου καὶ ἑωσφόρου καὶ
 στίλβοντος ἐπίκλησιν — τρεῖς γὰρ τῶν πλανήτων |
 [143] ἰσοταχεῖς οὗτοι —, τὰς δὲ ἀνισοδρόμους<sup>1</sup> ἄνισα
 μὲν, ἀναλογίαν δ' ἔχοντα πρὸς τε ἀλλήλας καὶ τὰς 23 τρεῖς ἐκείνας. γίνεται οὖν τὸ μὲν ἕτερον
 τῶν Χερουβὶμ ἢ ἐξωτάτω, τοῦ παντὸς οὐρανοῦ <ὁ> ἔσχατος, ἀψὶς ἐν ἧ τὴν κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχουσιν οἱ ἀπλανεῖς θείαν ὡς ἀληθῶς χορείαν χορεύουσι τάξιν οὐ λείποντες, ἦν ὁ γεν-νήσας πατὴρ αὐτοὺς ἔταξεν ἐν κόσμῳ· θάτερον
 δ' ἢ ἐντὸς περιεχομένη σφαῖρα, ἦν ἐξαχῆ σχίσας
 ἑπτὰ κύκλους ἀναλογοῦντας ἑαυτοῖς εἰργάζετο
 τῶν πλανήτων ἕκαστον εἰς αὐτοὺς ἀρμοσάμενος· 24 καὶ καθάπερ ἔποχον ἐν ὀχλήματι ἀστέρα ἐν οἰκείῳ
 κύκλῳ θεῖς τὰς ἡνίας ἐπίστευσε τῶν ἐπόχων οὐδενί, πλημμελῆ δείσας ἐπιστασίαν, ἀπάσας δ' ἐξήρτησεν ἑαυτοῦ, νομίσας ἐναρμόνιον τῆς κινήσεως
 μάλιστα οὕτως τάξιν γενήσεσθαι· τὸ γὰρ σὺν θεῷ
 πᾶν ἐπαινετόν, τὸ δ' ἄνευ θεοῦ ψεκτόν.
 25 VIII. Τὰ μὲν δὴ Χερουβὶμ καθ' ἓνα τρόπον
 οὕτως ἀλληγορεῖται· ῥομφαίαν δὲ φλογίνην καὶ
 στρεφομένην τὴν κίνησιν αὐτῶν καὶ τοῦ παντὸς οὐρανοῦ τὴν αἰδίον φορὰν ὑποτοπητέον λέγεσθαι.
 μήποτε δὲ καθ' ἑτέραν ἐκδοχὴν τὰ μὲν Χερουβὶμ
 δηλοῖ τῶν ἡμισφαιρίων ἑκάτερον· καὶ γὰρ ἀντι-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μεσοδρόμοις οἱ μὴ μεσοδρόμοις.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. of the heaven. Thus in De Decalogo 56, 57, Philo speaks of the two hemispheres, one above the earth and one below it. "For as the heaven is ceaselessly revolving, the two hemispheres daily take their position in turn one above

ON THE CHERUBIM, 22-25

the same in the case of three whose course is equal, and these three which have the same rate of speed are known as the Sun, the Morning-star, and the Sparkler (or Mercury). The others have unequal courses and different lengths of time in revolution, though these too preserve a definite proportion to each other and the above-named three.

One of the Cherubim then symbolizes the outermost sphere of the fixed stars. It is the final heaven of all, the vault in which the choir of those who wander not move in a truly divine unchanging rhythm, never leaving the post which the Father who begat them has appointed them in the universe. The other of the Cherubim is the inner contained sphere, which through a sixfold division He has made into seven zones of regular proportion and fitted each planet into one of them. He has set each star in its proper zone as a driver in a chariot, and yet He has in no case trusted the reins to the driver, fearing that their rule might be one of discord, but He has made them all dependent on Himself, holding that thus would their march be orderly and harmonious. For when God is with us all we do is worthy of praise; all that is done without Him merits blame.

VIII. This then is one interpretation of the allegory of the Cherubim, and the flaming turning sword represents, we must suppose, their movement and the eternal revolution of the whole heaven. But perhaps on another interpretation the two Cherubim represent the two hemispheres.<sup>a</sup> For we read that the Cherubim stand face to face with their

the earth and the other below it, as it seems, though in reality there is no 'up' or 'down' in the spherical heaven." See App. pp. 482, 483.

- πρόσωπά φησιν εἶναι νεύοντα πρὸς τὸ ἰλαστήριον
 πτεροῖς (Exod. xxv. 19), ἐπειδὴ καὶ ταῦτα ἀντικρὺ
 μὲν ἐστὶν ἀλλήλων, νένευκε δὲ ἐπὶ γῆν τὸ μέσον 26 τοῦ παντός, ᾧ καὶ διακρίνεται· ἡ δὲ μόνη τῶν τοῦ
 κόσμου μερῶν ἐστῶσα παγίως Ἐστία πρὸς τῶν
 παλαιῶν εὐθυβόλως ὠνόμασται, ἵνα περί τι
 βεβαίως ἰδρυμένον ἢ ἐκατέρων τῶν ἡμισφαιρίων ἐμμελεστάτη γίγνηται περιπόλησις. ἡ δὲ φλογίνη
 ῥομφαία σύμβολον ἡλίου· φλογὸς γὰρ ὢν πύλημα
 πολλῆς ὠκυδρομώτατον γέγονε τῶν ὄντων, ὡς
 ἡμέρα μῆ τὸν σύμπαντα περιδιεῖσθαι κόσμον.
- 27 IX. Ἐκουσα δέ ποτε καὶ σπουδαιοτέρου λόγου
 παρὰ ψυχῆς ἐμῆς εἰωθυίας τὰ πολλὰ θεοληπτεῖσθαι
 καὶ περὶ ὧν οὐκ οἶδε μαντεύεσθαι· ὄν, ἐὰν δύνωμαι, ἀπομνημονεύσας ἐρῶ. ἔλεγε δέ μοι κατὰ τὸν ἕνα
 ὄντως ὄντα θεὸν δύο τὰς ἀνωτάτω εἶναι καὶ πρώτας
 [144] δυνάμεις | ἀγαθότητα καὶ ἐξουσίαν, καὶ ἀγαθότητι
 μὲν τὸ πᾶν γεγεννηκέναι, ἐξουσία δὲ τοῦ γεν-28 νηθέντος ἄρχειν, τρίτον δὲ συναγωγὸν ἀμφοῖν
 μέσον εἶναι λόγον, λόγῳ γὰρ καὶ ἄρχοντα καὶ ἀγαθὸν εἶναι τὸν θεόν· ἀρχῆς μὲν οὖν καὶ ἀγαθότητος τῶν δυεῖν δυνάμεων τὰ Χερουβὶμ εἶναι σύμβολα, λόγου δὲ τὴν φλογίνην ῥομφαίαν· ὄξυκινήτοτατον γὰρ καὶ θερμὸν λόγος καὶ μάλιστα
 ὁ τοῦ αἰτίου, ὅτι καὶ αὐτὸ πάντα φθάσαν παρημείψατο καὶ πρὸ πάντων νοούμενον καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσι φαινόμενον.
- 29 Ἐκατέρου δὴ τῶν Χερουβὶμ, ᾧ διάνοια, δέξιαι
 τύπον ἀκιβδήλευτον, ἵνα περί τε ἀρχῆς τοῦ αἰτίου
 καὶ ἀγαθότητος ἐναργῶς ἀναδιδαχθεῖσα καρπώση
 κληῖρον εὐδαίμονα· γνώση γὰρ εὐθύς καὶ τὴν τῶν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 25-29

wings inclining to the mercy-seat (Exod. xxv. 19). And so, too, the hemispheres are opposite to each other and stretch out to the earth, the centre of all things, which actually parts them. And as this alone in all the universe stands firm, it has been rightly named by men of old the standing-place,<sup>a</sup> and it stands thus, that the revolution of each of the hemispheres may circle round one fixed centre and thus be wholly harmonious. The flaming sword on this interpretation is the Sun, that packed mass of flame, which is the swiftest of all existing things and whirls round the whole universe in a single day.

IX. But there is a higher thought than these. It comes from a voice in my own soul, which oftentimes is god-possessed and divines where it does not know. This thought I will record in words if I can. The voice told me that while God is indeed one, His highest and chiefest powers are two, even goodness and sovereignty. Through His goodness He begat all that is, through His sovereignty He rules what He has begotten. And in the midst between the two there is a third which unites them, Reason, for it is through reason that God is both ruler and good. Of these two potencies sovereignty and goodness the Cherubim are symbols, as the fiery sword is the symbol of reason.<sup>a</sup> For exceeding swift and of burning heat is reason and chiefly so the reason of the (Great) Cause, for it alone preceded and outran all things, conceived before them all, manifest above them all.

O then, my mind, admit the image unalloyed of the two Cherubim, that having learnt its clear lesson of the sovereignty and beneficence of the Cause, thou mayest reap the fruits of a happy lot. For

- ἀκράτων δυνάμεων σύνοδόν τε καὶ κρᾶσιν, ἐν οἷς ἀγαθὸς μὲν ὁ θεὸς ἐμφαινομένου τοῦ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀξιώματος, ἐν οἷς δὲ ἀρχῶν ἐμφαινομένης τῆς ἀγαθότητος· ἵνα τὰς ἐκ τούτων ἀπογεννωμένας ἀρετὰς φιλοφροσύνην καὶ εὐλάβειαν θεοῦ κτήσῃ, μήτε ἐν οἷς εὖ πάσχεις ὑψηγορούσα διὰ τὸ τῆς ἡγεμονίας τοῦ βασιλέως μέγεθος μήτε ἐν οἷς ὑπομένεις τι τῶν ἀβουλήτων ἀπογινώσκουσα τὰς ἀμείνους ἐλπίδας δι' ἡμερότητα τοῦ μεγάλου καὶ
- 30 φιλοδώρου θεοῦ. φλογίνη δὲ ῥομφαία, διότι χρῆ τούτοις παρακολουθεῖν τὸν μέτρον ὄντα<sup>1</sup> τῶν πραγμάτων ἔνθερμον καὶ πυρώδη λόγον, ὃς οὐδέποτε λήγει κινούμενος σπουδῇ πάσῃ πρὸς αἵρεσιν μὲν τῶν καλῶν, φυγὴν δὲ τῶν ἐναντίων.
- 31 X. οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ὁ σοφός, ἠνίκα ἤρξατο μετρεῖν κατὰ θεὸν πάντα καὶ μηδὲν ἀπολείπειν τῷ γεννητῷ, λαμβάνει τῆς φλογίνης ῥομφαίας μίμημα “ πῦρ καὶ μάχαιραν ” (Gen. xxii. 6), διελεῖν καὶ καταφλέξαι τὸ θνητὸν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ γλιχόμενος, ἵνα γυμνῇ τῇ διανοίᾳ μετάρσιος πρὸς
- 32 θεὸν ἀναπτῆ; τὸν δέ γε Βαλαὰμ μάταιον λαὸν ὄντα ἐξωπλισμένον εἰσαγεῖ Μωυσῆς ἀστράτευτον καὶ λιποτάκτην, εἰδὼς πόλεμον ὃν ἀρμόττει ψυχῇ περὶ ἐπιστήμης ποιεῖσθαι· λέγει γὰρ ὄνῳ, τῇ ἀλόγῳ προαιρέσει τοῦ βίου, ἧ πᾶς ἀφρων ἐπιβέβηκεν, ὅτι “ εἰ μάχαιραν εἶχον, ἦδη ἂν ἐξεκέντησά σε ” (Num. xxii. 29)· καὶ μεγίστη

<sup>1</sup> μέτρον ὄντα conj. Trs.; cf. μετρεῖν, 31: mss. μέτα: Cohn μέσον.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 29-32

straightway thou shalt understand how these un-mixed potencies are mingled and united, how, where God is good, yet the glory of His sovereignty is seen amid the beneficence, how, where He is sovereign, through the sovereignty the beneficence still appears. Thus thou mayest gain the virtues begotten of these potencies, a cheerful courage and a reverent awe towards God. When things are well with thee, the majesty of the sovereign king will keep thee from high thoughts. When thou sufferest what thou wouldest not, thou wilt not despair of betterment, remembering the loving-kindness of the great and bountiful God.

And for this cause is the sword a sword of flame, because in their company reason the measure of things must follow, reason with its fierce and burning heat, reason that ever moves with unswerving zeal, teaching thee to choose the good and eschew the evil. X. Remember how Abraham the wise, when he began to make God his standard in all things and leave nothing to the created, takes a copy of the flaming sword—"fire and knife" it says (Gen. xxii. 6)—desiring to sever and consume the mortal element away from himself and thus to fly upward to God with his understanding stripped of its trammels.

And thus too Balaam ("foolish people" that is) is represented by Moses as disarmed, one who neither fights nor keeps the ranks,<sup>a</sup> for Moses knew well that war which the soul should wage for knowledge as its guerdon. Balaam says to the ass, who signifies the unreasoning rule of life, which is ridden by every fool: "If I had a sword I would have ere now pierced thee through" (Numb. xxii. 29). Well may we thank the great χάρις τῷ τεχνίτῃ, ὅτι τὴν ἀφροσύνης λύτταν εἰδὼς οὐκ ἐνέδωκεν αὐτῇ, καθάπερ ξίφος μεμηνοῦτι, δύναμιν λόγων, ἵνα μὴ πολλὴν καὶ ἄδικον ἅπασιν τοῖς ἐντυγχάνουσιν ἐνεργάσῃται φθοράν.

33
[145] ἃ δὲ Βαλαάμ, | ταῦθ' ἕκαστος τῶν μὴ κεκαθα-
μένων αἰὲ ματαιάζων αἰτιᾶται πως, ἐμπορικὸν ἢ γεωργικὸν ἢ τιν' ἄλλον τῶν ποριστικῶν ἐπι-τηδεύσας βίον· ἕως μὲν αἴσια ἅπαντᾶ τὰ ἀφ' ἐκάστου, γεγηθῶς ἐπιβέβηκε καὶ ἐποχεῖται καὶ ἐνειλημμένος ἀπρίξ ἔχεται μεθέσθαι τὸ παράπαν οὐ δικαίων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς ἀφίστασθαι λέγουσι καὶ μέτρα ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις περιθεῖναι διὰ τὸ τοῦ μέλλοντος ἀτέκμαρτον βασκανίαν ὀνειδίζει καὶ φθόνον, οὐκ ἀπ' εὐνοίας εἰσηγεῖσθαι ταῦτα φάσκων·

34 ἐπειδὴν δὲ ἀβούλητος κακοπραγία συμβῆ, τοὺς μὲν ὡς ἀγαθοὺς μάντις ἀποδέχεται καὶ προφυλάξασθαι δυνατωτάτους τὰ μέλλοντα, τὰ δ' οὐδενὸς αἴτια κακοῦ τὸ παράπαν αἰτιᾶται, τὴν γεωργίαν, τὴν ἐμπορίαν, τὰς ἄλλας ἐπιτηδεύσεις, αἷς πρὸς

35 ἀργυρισμὸν ἠξίου χρῆσθαι. XI. αἱ δὲ καίτοι φωνητηρίων ὀργάνων ἀμοιροῦσαι τὴν δι' αὐτῶν τῶν πραγμάτων ῥήξουσι φωνὴν ἐναργεστέραν οὐσαν τῆς διὰ γλώττης “ Ἄρά γε, ὦ συκοφάντα, οὐχ ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν ἐκεῖναι ” λέγουσαι “ αἷς καθάπερ ὑποζυγίοις ὑψαυχενῶν ἐπεβεβήκεις; μὴ καθ' ὑπεροψίαν ἄλλως εἰργασάμεθά σοι κακοπραγίαν; (cf. Num. xxii. 30) ἴδε τὸν ἀνθεστῶτα ἐξεναντίας θεοῦ λόγον ἐνωπλισμένον ἄγγελον (ib. 31), παρ' ὃν τό τε εὖ καὶ τὸ μὴ συμβέβηκε τελειοῦσθαι

<sup>a</sup> Or “ applaud as . . . ”

ON THE CHERUBIM, 32-35

Contriver, that, knowing the madness of folly, he did not put into its hands, as into the hands of a madman, the sword of the power of words, to wreak widespread and unrighteous carnage among all who came in his way.

And this angry cry of Balaam is ever the cry of each of the unpurified in his vanity, if he has followed the life of the merchant or the farmer or other business that men pursue for gain. Each, while good fortune encounters them in their several walks of life, sits his beast with cheerful mood and keeps a tight grip of the reins and scouts the thought of letting them drop from his hands. And all those who bid him desist, and set limits to his desires, because the future is uncertain, he charges with malice and envy, and will have it that their warning is not of goodwill. But when disappointment and misfortune befall him he does indeed recognize <sup>a</sup> that these were true prophets, fully competent to guard against the chances of the future, but he lays all the blame on wholly guiltless objects, the farming, the trading, the other pursuits, which of his own judgement he followed for lucre.

XI. And these pursuits, though they have no vocal organs, will utter the language which speaks in the reality of facts, a language which is plainer than the language of the tongue. "False slanderer," they will cry, "are we not they on whom you rode proud-necked as on some beast of burden? Have we ever in mere insolence <sup>b</sup> brought disaster on you? (Numb. xxii. 30). Behold the armed angel, the reason of God, standing in the way against you (ibid. 31), the source through whom both good and ill

<sup>b</sup> Or "heedlessness." In the LXX. the ass asks Balaam
μη̄ ὑπεροράσει ὑπεριδοῦσα ἐποίησά σοι οὕτως;

36 οὐχ ὄρας; τί οὖν νῦν ἡμᾶς αἰτιᾶ πρότερον, ὅτε εὐώδει σοι τὰ πράγματα, οὐχὶ μεμψάμενος; μένομεν γὰρ αἱ αὐταὶ μηδὲ τῆς ἑαυτῶν φύσεως μεταβάλλουσαι τὸ παράπαν στιγμῆν· σὺ δὲ κριτηρίοις χρώμενος οὐχ ὑγιέσιν ἀλόγως σφαδάζεις· εἰ γὰρ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἔμαθες, ὅτι οὐχ ἄττ' ἂν ἐπιτηδεύης ἀγαθῶν μετουσίας ἢ κακῶν ἐστὶν αἷτια, ἀλλ' ὁ δίοπος<sup>2</sup> καὶ κυβερνήτης τοῦ παντὸς λόγος θεῖος, ῥᾶον ἂν ἔφερες τὰ συμπίπτοντα παυσάμενος τοῦ συκοφαντεῖν καὶ ἐπιγράφειν ἡμῖν ἅ μὴ δυνάμεθα.

37 ἔαν οὖν πάλιν καθελῶν ἐκείνος τὸν πόλεμον καὶ τὰς ἐπ' αὐτῷ συννοίας<sup>3</sup> καὶ κατηφείας σκεδάσας εἰρήνην ἐπικηρυκεύσεται βίου, φαιδρὸς καὶ γεγηθῶς τὴν δεξιὰν ἐμβαλεῖς ἡμῖν ταῖς ἐν ὁμοίῳ μενούσαις· ἡμεῖς δ' οὔτ' εὐμενεῖα τῇ σῆ φυσώμεθα οὔτ' ἔαν δυσμεναίνης ἐπιστρεφόμεθα, ἴσμεν γὰρ ἑαυτὰς μῆτ' ἀγαθῶν μῆτε κακῶν αἰτίας οὔσας, κἂν σὺ περὶ ἡμῶν τοιαῦτα δοξάζῃς, εἰ μὴ καὶ τὴν θάλατταν εὐπλοίας ἢ τῶν συμβαινόντων ναυαγίων ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τὰς τῶν πνευμάτων διαφορὰς τοτὲ μὲν ἐπιεικῶς τοτὲ δὲ μετὰ βιαιοτάτου συρμοῦ καταπνεόντων αἰτιατέον· φύσει γὰρ
 38 παντὸς ὕδατος | ἠρεμίαν ἐξ αὐτοῦ λαχόντος, ὅταν
 [146] μὲν πνεῦμα οὖριον κατ' οἰάκων ἐπιγένηται, παντὸς ἀνασεισθέντος κάλου, πλησίστιοι μέχρι λιμένων αἱ νῆες καταίρουσιν, ὅταν δὲ αἰφνίδιον κατὰ πρῶρας ἐξεναντίας κατασκήψῃ, πολὺν σάλον καὶ κλόνον ἐγείρει καὶ ἀνατρέπει· καὶ τοῦ συμβαίνοντος ἢ μηδὲν αἷτια θάλαττα τὴν πρόφασιν ἴσχει, φανερώς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μηδὲν.

<sup>2</sup> So Cohn from δίοπος of F. The other mss. have πηδαλιούχος.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἐννοίας.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 36-38

come to fulfilment. See where he stands. Why then blame us now, on whom you cast no blame before, when things fared well with you? We stay the same, we change not a jot of our nature. But the tests you use are false and your impatience is without reason. If you had learnt from the first that it is not your life-pursuits which bring your share in good or ill, but the divine reason, the ruler and steersman of all, you would bear with more patience what befalls you, and cease from slandering and ascribing to us what we have no power to bring about.

If then that ruler should in turn subdue those warring elements,<sup>a</sup> scatter the thoughts of disheartenment which war brings, and send a message of peace<sup>a</sup> to your life, you will give us the hand of friendship with a bright and cheerful face, though we are what we ever were. But we are not elated at your goodwill, nor care we for your anger. We know that we cause not good or ill, though you imagine such things of us. It were as foolish to lay a prosperous voyage or the disasters of shipwreck to the charge of the sea itself instead of to the changes of the winds, which sometimes blow gently, sometimes in fiercest riot. For stillness is the natural self-engendered quality of all water, but when the favouring breeze follows behind the rudder and every reef is let out, the ship with full sail goes safely to the harbour, and again when a head-wind swoops suddenly down against the prow it raises a wild commotion, and overturns the bark. And all this is laid to the charge of the guiltless sea, though

<sup>a</sup> Or "put an end to the war . . . and proclaim peace."

- ταῖς ἀνέσεσι καὶ σφοδρότησι τῶν ἀνέμων ἢ γαληνιάζουσα ἢ κυμαίνουσα.”
- 39 Διὰ τούτων οὖν ἀπάντων ἱκανῶς οἶμαι δεδηλωσθαι, ὅτι λόγον ἢ φύσιν δυνατώτατον σύμμαχον ἀνθρώπῳ δημιουργήσασα τὸν μὲν αὐτῷ χρῆσθαι δυνάμενον ὀρθῶς ἀπέδειξεν εὐδαίμονα καὶ λογικὸν ὄντως, τὸν δὲ μὴ δυνάμενον ἀλογόν τε καὶ κακοδαίμονα.
- 40 XII. “ Ἀδὰμ δὲ ἔγνω τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ· καὶ συνέλαβε καὶ ἔτεκε τὸν Κάιν, καὶ εἶπεν Ἐκτεσάμην ἄνθρωπον διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ. καὶ προσέθηκε τεκεῖν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν Ἄβελ ” (Gen. iv. 1, 2). οἷς ἀρετὴν μεμαρτύρηκεν ὁ νομοθέτης, τούτους γνωρίζοντας γυναῖκας οὐκ εἰσάγει, τὸν Ἀβραάμ, τὸν Ἰσαάκ, τὸν Ἰακώβ, τὸν Μωυσῆν,
- 41 καὶ εἴ τις αὐτοῖς ὁμόζηλος· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ φαμεν εἶναι γυναῖκα τροπικῶς αἰσθησιν, ἀλλοτριώσει δ’ αἰσθήσεως καὶ σώματος ἐπιστήμη συνίσταται, τοὺς σοφίας ἐραστὰς αἰσθησιν<sup>1</sup> ἀποδοκιμάζοντας μᾶλλον ἢ αἵρουμένους ἐπιδείξεται· καὶ μήποτ’ εἰκότως· αἱ γὰρ τούτοις συνοικοῦσαι λόγῳ μὲν εἰσι γυναῖκες, ἔργῳ δὲ ἀρεταί, Σάρρα μὲν ἄρχουσα καὶ ἡγεμονίς, Ῥεβέκκα δὲ ἐπιμονὴ τῶν καλῶν, Λεῖα δὲ ἀνανευμένη καὶ κοπιῶσα ἐπὶ τῇ συνεχείᾳ τῆς ἀσκήσεως, ἣν ἐκνένευκε καὶ ἀποστρέφεται πᾶς ἄφρων ἀρνούμενος, Σεπφώρα δὲ ἢ Μωυσέως ἀπὸ γῆς εἰς οὐρανὸν ἀνατρέχουσα καὶ τὰς ἐκεῖ θείας καὶ εὐδαίμονας φύσεις κατανοοῦσα, καλεῖται δὲ ὀρνίθιον.
- 42 Ἴνα δὲ τὴν ἀρετῶν κύησιν καὶ ὠδῖνα εἴπωμεν,

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἔστησεν.<sup>a</sup> That Philo perversely takes the subject of εἶπεν to be

ON THE CHERUBIM, 38-42

plainly it is calm or stormy according to the lightness or the violence of the winds."

Surely all this is sufficient proof that nature who has provided for men a mighty champion in reason makes him who can use this champion aright a truly happy and reasonable being. Him who cannot use it aright she leaves to unreason and misery.

XII. "And Adam knew his wife and she conceived and bare Cain, and he said, 'I have gotten a man through God,' and He added to this that she bore his brother Abel" (Gen. iv. 1, 2).<sup>a</sup> The persons to whose virtue the lawgiver has testified, such as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Moses, and others of the same spirit, are not represented by him as knowing women. For since we hold that woman signifies in a figure sense-perception, and that knowledge comes into being through estrangement from sense and body, it will follow<sup>b</sup> that the lovers of wisdom reject rather than choose sense. And surely this is natural. For the helpmeets of these men are called women, but are in reality virtues. Sarah "sovereign and leader," Rebecca "steadfastness in excellence," Leah<sup>c</sup> "rejected and faint" through the unbroken discipline, which every fool rejects and turns from with words of denial, Zipporah, the mate of Moses, whose name is "bird," speeding upwards from earth to heaven and contemplating there the nature of things divine and blessed.

The virtues have their conception and their birth-

Adam and that of προσέθηκε to be God appears from § 124 and De Sac. 10.

<sup>b</sup> Literally "it" or "he" will show. If "it," the subject is either "the fact that women symbolize sense," or perhaps "knowledge"; if "he," the legislator.

<sup>c</sup> See App. p. 483.

PHILO

ἀκοὰς ἐπιφραξάτωσαν οἱ δεισιδαίμονες τὰς ἑαυτῶν
ἢ μεταστήτωσαν· τελετὰς γὰρ ἀναδιδάσκομεν
θείας τοὺς τελετῶν ἀξίους τῶν ἱερωτάτων μύστας,
οὗτοι δ' εἰσὶν οἱ τὴν ἀληθῆ καὶ οὖσαν ὄντως
ἀκαλλώπιστον εὐσέβειαν μετὰ ἀτυφίας ἀσκοῦντες·
ἐκείνοις δὲ οὐχ ἱεροφαντήσομεν κατεσχημένοις
ἀνιάτῳ κακῷ τύφῳ, ῥημάτων καὶ ὀνομάτων
γλισχρότητι καὶ τερθρείαις ἔθῳ ἄλλῳ δὲ οὐδενὶ
[147] τὸ εὐαγὲς καὶ ὄσιον | παραμετροῦσιν.

43 XIII. ἀρκτέον οὖν τῆς τελετῆς ᾧδε. ἀνὴρ μὲν
γυναικί, ἄνθρωπος δ' ἄρρην ἀνθρώπῳ θηλείᾳ τὰς
ἐπὶ γενέσει παίδων ὀμιλίας ἐπακολουθῶν τῇ φύσει συνέρχεται ποιησόμενος· ἀρεταῖς δὲ πολλὰ καὶ
τέλεια τικτούσαις θέμις οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνδρὸς ἐπιλαχεῖν θνητοῦ· μὴ δεξάμεναι δὲ παρά τινος ἑτέρου γονήν,<sup>1</sup>

44 ἐξ ἑαυτῶν μόνον οὐδέποτε κηήσουσι. τίς οὖν ὁ σπείρων ἐν αὐταῖς τὰ καλὰ πλὴν ὁ τῶν ὄντων
πατήρ, ὁ ἀγέννητος θεὸς καὶ τὰ σύμπαντα γεννῶν;
σπεῖρει μὲν οὖν οὗτος, τὸ δὲ γέννημα τὸ ἴδιον, ὁ
ἔσπειρε, δωρεῖται· γεννᾷ γὰρ ὁ θεὸς οὐδὲν αὐτῷ,
χρεῖος ἅτε ὢν οὐδενός, πάντα δὲ τῷ λαβεῖν 45 δεομένῳ. παρέξω δὲ τῶν λεγομένων

ἐγγυητὴν ἀξιόχρεων τὸν ἱερώτατον Μωυσῆν· τὴν
γὰρ Σάρραν εἰσάγει τότε κύουσαν, ὅτε ὁ θεὸς
αὐτὴν μονωθεῖσαν ἐπισκοπεῖ (Gen. xxι. 1), τίκτουσαν δ' οὐκέτι τῷ τὴν ἐπίσκεψιν πεποιημένῳ,
ἀλλὰ τῷ σοφίας τυχεῖν γλιχομένῳ, οὗτος δὲ 46 Ἀβραὰμ ὀνομάζεται. γνωριμώτερον δ'

ἐπὶ τῆς Λείας ἐκδιδάσκει λέγων, ὅτι τὴν μὲν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐπιγονήν.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 42-46

pangs, but when I purpose to speak of them let them who corrupt religion into superstition close their ears or depart. For this is a divine mystery and its lesson is for the initiated who are worthy to receive the holiest secret, even those who in simplicity of heart practise the piety which is true and genuine, free from all tawdry ornament. The sacred revelation is not for those others who, under the spell of the deadly curse of vanity, have no other standards for measuring what is pure and holy but their barren words and phrases and their silly usages and ritual.<sup>a</sup>

XIII. Thus then must the sacred instruction begin. Man and Woman, male and female of the human race, in the course of nature come together to hold intercourse for the procreation of children. But virtues whose offspring are so many and so perfect may not have to do with mortal man, yet if they receive not seed of generation from another they will never of themselves conceive. Who then is he that sows in them the good seed save the Father of all, that is God unbegotten and begetter of all things? He then sows, but the fruit of His sowing, the fruit which is His own, He bestows as a gift. For God begets nothing for Himself, for He is in want of nothing, but all for him who needs<sup>b</sup> to receive.

I will give as a warrant for my words one that none can dispute, Moses the holiest of men. For he shows us Sarah conceiving at the time when God visited her in her solitude (Gen. xxi. 1),<sup>a</sup> but when she brings forth it is not to the Author of her visitation, but to him who seeks to win wisdom, whose name is Abraham.

And even clearer is Moses' teaching of

<sup>b</sup> Or "prays."

- μήτραν ἀνέωξεν αὐτῆς ὁ θεός (Gen. xxix. 31)—
 ἀνοιγνύναι δὲ μήτραν ἀνδρὸς ἴδιον—, ἢ δὲ συλλαβοῦσα ἔτεκεν οὐ θεῶ—ϊκανὸς γὰρ μόνος καὶ αὐταρκέστατος ἑαυτῷ—, ἀλλὰ τῷ κάματον ἀναδεχομένῳ ὑπὲρ τοῦ καλοῦ Ἰακώβ, ὥστε τὴν ἀρετὴν δέχεσθαι μὲν παρὰ τοῦ αἰτίου τὰ θεῖα
 σπέρματα, τίκτειν δὲ τινι τῶν ἑαυτῆς ἐραστῶν,
 ὃς ἂν τῶν μνηστήρων ἀπάντων προκριθῆ. πάλιν 47 Ἰσαὰκ τοῦ πανσόφου τὸν θεὸν ἱκετεύσαντος, ἐκ
 τοῦ ἱκετευθέντος ἔγκυος ἢ ἐπιμονῆ Ῥεβέκκα
 γίνεται (Gen. xxv. 21). χωρὶς δὲ ἱκετείας καὶ
 δεήσεως τὴν πτηνὴν καὶ μετάρσιον ἀρετὴν Σεπφώραν Μωυσῆς λαβὼν εὕρισκει κύουσαν ἐξ
 οὐδενὸς θνητοῦ τὸ παράπαν (Exod. ii. 22).
- 48 XIV. ταῦτα, ᾧ μύσται κεκαθαρμένοι
 τὰ ὦτα, ὡς ἱερὰ ὄντως μυστήρια ψυχαῖς ταῖς
 ἑαυτῶν παραδέχεσθε καὶ μηδενὶ τῶν ἀμυήτων ἐκλαλήσητε, ταμιευσάμενοι δὲ παρ' ἑαυτοῖς φυ-λάττετε θησαυρόν, οὐκ ἐν ᾧ χρυσὸς καὶ ἄργυρος, οὐσίαι φθαρταί, κατάκεινται, ἀλλὰ τῶν ὄντων
 κτημάτων τὸ καλλιστεῦον, ἢ περὶ τοῦ αἰτίου καὶ ἀρετῆς καὶ τρίτου τοῦ γεννήματος ἀμφοῖν ἐπιστήμη. εἰ δὲ τινι τῶν τετελεσμένων ἐντυγχά-νητε, λιπαρῶς ἐγκείμενοι περιέχεσθε, μὴ τινα ἄρα
 καινοτέραν εἰδῶς τελετὴν ἐπικρύπτηται, μέχρις ἂν 49 αὐτὴν σαφῶς ἀναδιδαχθῆτε. καὶ γὰρ
 ἐγὼ παρὰ Μωυσεῖ τῷ θεοφιλεῖ μνηθεὶς τὰ μεγάλα
 [148] μυστήρια ὅμως αὐθις Ἰερεμίαν τὸν | προφήτην
 ἰδὼν καὶ γνοὺς, ὅτι οὐ μόνον μύστης ἐστὶν ἀλλὰ
 καὶ ἱεροφάντης ἱκανός, οὐκ ὤκνησα φοιτῆσαι πρὸς
 αὐτόν· ὁ δ' ἄτε τὰ πολλὰ ἐνθουσιῶν χρησμόν τινα

ON THE CHERUBIM, 46-49

Leah, that God opened her womb (Gen. xxix. 31). Now to open the womb belongs to the husband. Yet when she conceived she brought forth not to God (for He is in Himself all-sufficing for Himself), but to him who endures toil to gain the good, even Jacob. Thus virtue receives the divine seed from the Creator, but brings forth to one of her own lovers, who is preferred above all others who seek her favour. Again Isaac the all-wise besought God, and through the power of Him who was thus besought Steadfastness or Rebecca became pregnant (Gen. xxv. 21). And without supplication or entreaty did Moses, when he took Zipporah the winged and soaring virtue, find her pregnant through no mortal agency (Exod. ii. 22).

XIV. These thoughts, ye initiated, whose ears are purified, receive into your souls as holy mysteries indeed and babble not of them to any of the profane. Rather as stewards guard the treasure in your own keeping, not where gold and silver, substances corruptible, are stored, but where lies that most beautiful of all possessions, the knowledge of the Cause and of virtue, and, besides these two, of the fruit which is engendered by them both. But, if ye meet with anyone of the initiated, press him closely, cling to him, lest knowing of some still newer secret he hide it from you; stay not till you have learnt its full lesson.

I myself was initiated under Moses the God-beloved into his greater mysteries,<sup>a</sup> yet when I saw the prophet Jeremiah and knew him to be not only himself enlightened, but a worthy minister of the holy secrets, I was not slow to become his disciple. He out of his manifold inspiration gave forth

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

ἔξεῖπεν ἐκ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ λέγοντα πρὸς τὴν εἰρηνικωτάτην ἀρετὴν ταῦτα· “ οὐχ ὡς οἶκόν με ἐκάλεσας καὶ πατέρα καὶ ἄνδρα τῆς παρθενίας σου; ” (Jer. iii. 4) ἐμφαντικώτατα παριστάς ὅτι ὁ θεὸς καὶ οἶκός ἐστιν, ἀσωμάτων ἰδεῶν ἀσώματος χώρα, καὶ τῶν συμπάντων πατήρ, ἅτε γεγεννηκῶς αὐτά, καὶ σοφίας ἀνὴρ σπέρμα τῷ θνητῷ γένει καταβαλλόμενος εὐδαιμονίας εἰς ἀγαθὴν καὶ παρ-50 θένον γῆν. ἀμιάντῳ γὰρ καὶ ἀψαύστῳ καὶ καθαρᾷ φύσει, τῇ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν παρθένῳ, διαλέγεσθαι πρεπῶδες θεόν, ἐναντίως ἡμῖν· ἀνθρώπων μὲν γὰρ ἢ ἐπὶ γενέσει τέκνων σύνοδος τὰς παρθένους γυναῖκας ἀποφαίνει· ὅταν δὲ ὀμιλεῖν ἄρξῃται ψυχῇ θεός, πρότερον αὐτὴν οὔσαν γυναῖκα παρθένον αὐθις ἀποδείκνυσιν, ἐπειδὴ τὰς ἀγεννεῖς καὶ ἀνάνδρους ἐπιθυμίας, αἷς ἐθελύνετο, ἐκποδῶν ἀνελῶν τὰς αὐθυγενεῖς καὶ ἀκηράτους ἀρετὰς ἀντεισάγει· Σάρρα γοῦν οὐ διαλέξεται, πρὶν ἐκλιπεῖν ἐκείνην τὰ γυναικεῖα πάντα (Gen. xviii.
 11) καὶ ἀναδραμεῖν εἰς ἀγεννεούσης παρθένου
 51 τάξιν. XV. ἀλλ’ ἐνδέχεται τάχα πού καὶ παρθένον ψυχὴν πάθεισιν ἀκολάστοις μινανθεῖσαν αἰσχυρῆσθαι· διόπερ ὁ χρησμὸς πεφύλακται θεὸν ἄνδρα εἰπῶν οὐ παρθένου—τρεπτὴ γὰρ ἦδε καὶ θνητὴ—ἀλλὰ “ παρθενίας ” (Jer. iii. 4), τῆς αἰεὶ κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ ὡσαύτως ἐχούσης ἰδέας· γενέσει γὰρ καὶ φθορὰν ἐνδεχομένων φύσει τῶν ποιῶν, ἄφθαρτον αἰ τυποῦσαι δυνάμεις τὰ<sup>1</sup> ἐν μέρει
 52 κλῆρον εἰλήχασιν. τὸν οὖν ἀγέννητον καὶ ἄτρεπτον

<sup>1</sup> So Wendland: mss. τῶν (which Cohn retains), or τὸν. The former, which makes the ideas belong to the particulars, seems hardly intelligible.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 49-52

an oracle spoken in the person of God to Virtue the all-peaceful. "Didst thou not call upon Me as thy house, thy father and the husband<sup>a</sup> of thy virginity?" (Jer. iii. 4). Thus he implies clearly that God is a house, the incorporeal dwelling-place of incorporeal ideas, that He is the father of all things, for He begat them, and the husband of Wisdom, dropping the seed of happiness for the race of mortals into good and virgin soil. For it is meet that God should hold converse with the truly virgin nature, that which is undefiled and free from impure touch; but it is the opposite with us. For the union of human beings that is made for the procreation of children, turns virgins into women. But when God begins to consort with the soul, He makes what before was a woman into a virgin again, for He takes away the degenerate and emasculate passions which unmanned it and plants instead the native growth of unpolluted virtues. Thus He will not talk with Sarah till she has ceased from all that is after the manner of women (Gen. xviii. 11), and is ranked once more as a pure virgin.

XV. Again even a virgin soul may perchance be dishonoured through the defilement of licentious passions. Therefore the oracle makes itself safe by speaking of God as the husband not of a virgin, for a virgin is liable to change and death, but of virginity, the idea which is unchangeable and eternal. For particulars within a class are of their nature such as to come into being and pass out of it again, but to the potencies which give their form to these particulars is allotted an existence indestructible. It is meet and right therefore that

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

θεὸν ἀθανάτων καὶ παρθένων ἀρετῶν σπείρειν
 ιδέας μηδέποτε εἰς γυναικὸς μεταβαλλούση σχῆμα παρθενία προεπέδωκε. τί οὖν, ὦ ψυχή, δέον ἐν οἴκῳ θεοῦ παρθενεύεσθαι καὶ ἐπιστήμης
 περιέχεσθαι, τούτων μὲν ἀποστατεῖς, αἴσθησιν δὲ
 ἀσπάζῃ τὴν ἐκθηλύνουσάν σε καὶ μαιίνουσαν;
 τοιγάρτοι γέννημα πάμφυρτον καὶ πανώλεθρον
 ἀποτέξῃ τὸν ἀδελφοκτόνον καὶ ἐπάρατον Κάιν, κτῆσιν οὐ κτητῆν· λέγεται γὰρ ὁ Κάιν κτῆσις.

- 53 XVI. Θαυμάσειε δ' ἂν τις τὸν τῆς ἑρμηνείας
 τρόπον, ὧς πολλάκις ἐπὶ πολλῶν ὁ νομοθέτης
 [149] χρῆται | τὸ σύνηθες ἐξαλλάττων. μετὰ γὰρ τοὺς
 φύντας ἐκ γῆς ἀρχόμενος δηλοῦν τὸν γεννηθέντα
 πρῶτον ἐξ ἀνθρώπων, περὶ οὗ τὸ παράπαν οὐδὲν εἴρηκεν, ὡς ἤδη πολλάκις τοῦνομα αὐτοῦ προειπῶν
 ἀλλὰ μὴ νῦν αὐτὸ κατατάττων εἰς τὴν ἐν λόγῳ χρήσιν, φησὶν ὅτι ἔτεκε τὸν Κάιν. ποῖον, ὦ τεχνῖτα; περὶ οὗ τί μικρὸν ἢ μέγα πάλαι δεδή-54 λωκας; καὶ μὴν οὐκ ἀγνοεῖς τὴν οἰκίαν θέσιν
 τῶν ὀνομάτων· ἤδη γοῦν προελθὼν ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ
 δηλώσεις προσώπου φάσκων, ὅτι “ ἔγνω Ἀδὰμ Εὐάν τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ· καὶ συλλαβοῦσα ἔτεκεν υἱὸν καὶ ἐπωνόμασε τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Σήθ ” (Gen.
 iv. 25). οὐκοῦν πολὺ μᾶλλον ἐχρήν ἐπὶ τοῦ
 πρωτοτόκου, ὃς ἦν ἀρχὴ τῆς ἐξ ἀλλήλων γενέσεως
 ἀνθρώπων, τὴν τε φύσιν τοῦ ἀποκυηθέντος δηλῶσαι
 πρῶτον ὅτι ἄρρεν, εἶτα τὸ οἰκεῖον ὄνομα θέσθαι, 55 Κάιν εἰ τύχοι. ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν οὐκ ἀπειρία τρόπων,

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 483, 484.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 52-55

God the uncreated, the unchanging, should sow the ideas of the immortal and virgin virtues in virginity which changes not into the form of woman.

Why then, soul of man, when thou shouldst live the virgin life in the house of God and cling to knowledge, dost thou stand aloof from them and embrace outward sense, which unmans and defiles thee? For this thou shalt bring forth that thing of ruin and confusion, Cain, the fratricide, the accursed, the possession which is no possession. For the meaning of Cain is "possession."

XVI. We may note<sup>a</sup> with surprise the form of expression, which, contrary to the usual practice, the lawgiver often employs and in the case of many persons. For when after speaking of the earth-born pair he begins the story of the first-born child of man, though he has said nothing at all of him hitherto, he says simply "she brought forth Cain." It is as though the name had been often mentioned before, instead of being now for the first time introduced for use in the narrative. We may ask the author "Who or what is this Cain?" What has he told us small or great about him in the past? Surely he is not ignorant how the names of persons should be given. We see indeed that later on he will show his knowledge plainly in speaking of this same person Eve. "Adam knew Eve his wife; and she conceived and brought forth a son, and called his name Seth" (Gen. iv. 25). Surely it was far more necessary in the case of the firstborn, who was the beginning of human generation through two parents, first to state the male sex of the child, and then to give his personal name, Cain, as it might be. Since then it was clearly not because he was ignorant how ὡς ὀνόματα δεῖ τίθεσθαι, φαίνεται τὴν ἡθελήσασθαι ἐπὶ τῶν περὶ Κάλιν ἀνελῶν, σκεῶν ἢ εἴη, τίνος αἰτίας ἕνεκα οὕτως ἐκάλεσε ὡς ἐκ τῶν πρώτων παραδηγήσεως μᾶλλον ἢ σεως ὀνομάτων τύπῳ χρησάμενος. ἔστι δ', ὡς μοιγε τοχαζομένῳ καταφαίνεται, ἡ αἰτία ἦδε.

PHILO

XVII. ὁ μὲν ἄλλος ἅπας ἀνθρώπων ὄμιλος ὀνόματα τίθεται πράγμασι διαφέροντα τῶν πραγμάτων, ὥσθ' ἕτερα μὲν εἶναι τὰ τυγχάνοντα, ἑτέρας δὲ κλήσεις τὰς ἐπ' αὐτοῖς· παρὰ Μωυσεῖ δὲ αἱ τῶν ὀνομάτων θέσεις ἐνάργεια<sup>1</sup> πραγμάτων εἰσὶν ἐμφαντικώταται, ὡς αὐτὸ τὸ πρᾶγμα ἐξ ἀνάγκης εὐθὺς εἶναι τοῦνομα καὶ <τοῦνομα καὶ> καθ' οὗ τίθεται διαφέρειν μηδέν. μάθοις δ' ἂν σαφέστερον κακ τοῦ προτεθέντος ὃ λέγω.

57 ὅταν ὁ ὅς ἡμῖν νοῦς—κεκλήσθω δὲ Ἀδάμ—ἐντυχὼν αἰσθήσει, παρ' ἣν ζῆν δοκεῖ τὰ ἔμψυχα (Gen. iii. 20) —καλεῖται δὲ Εὐά—, [συνουσίας ἴσης ὀρεχθεῖς]<sup>2</sup> πλησιάξῃ, ἡ δὲ συλλαμβάνῃ καθάπερ δικτύῳ καὶ θηρεύῃ φυσικῶς τὸ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητόν, διὰ μὲν ὀφθαλμῶν τὸ χρῶμα, διὰ δὲ ὠτων φωνήν, διὰ δὲ μυκτῆρων ἀτμόν, χυλόν γε μὴν διὰ τῶν γεύσεως ὀργάνων, καὶ διὰ τῶν ἀφῆς ἅπαν σῶμα, συλλαβοῦσα ἐγκύμων τε γίνεται καὶ εὐθὺς ὠδίνει καὶ τίκτει κακῶν ψυχῆς τὸ μέγιστον, οἷσιν· ὥθη γὰρ αὐτοῦ πάντ' εἶναι κτήματα, ὅσα εἶδεν, ὧν ἤκουσεν, ὧν ἐγεύσατο, ὧν ὠσφρήσατο, ὧν ἤψατο, καὶ πάντων ὑπέλαβεν εὐρετὴν καὶ τεχνίτην ἑαυτόν.

58 XVIII. ἔπαθε δὲ τοῦτο οὐκ ἀλόγως· ἦν γὰρ ποτε χρόνος, ὅτε νοῦς οὐ διελέγετο αἰσθήσει οὐδ' εἶχεν αἰσθησιν, πάμπλου διεστῶς τῶν συννόμων καὶ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐνέργειαί.

<sup>2</sup> Bracketed by Cohn as otiose.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 55-58

names should be given, that he rejects the usual method in the case of Cain, we must consider why he speaks thus of the children of our first parents and uses the form natural to an incidental mention of the names, rather than that which is usual when names are originally assigned. I conjecture that the reason is as follows.

XVII. Elsewhere the universal practice of men as a body is to give to things names which differ from the things, so that the objects are not the same as what we call them. But with Moses the names assigned are manifest images of the things, so that name and thing are inevitably the same from the first and the name and that to which the name is given differ not a whit. My meaning will be seen more clearly from the case before us.

The Mind in us—call it Adam—having met with outward Sense, called Eve, the source, we hold, of life to all living bodies (Gen. iii. 20) approaches her for their mutual intercourse. She for her part takes in and catches as in a net the external objects of sense, as nature bids. Through the eyes comes colour, through the ears sound, through the nostrils smell, through the organs of taste flavours and through the touch all solid matter. Thus conceiving and being made pregnant, she straightway becomes in labour and bears the worst evil of the soul, vanity of thought. For the Mind thought that all these were his own possessions, all that he saw or heard or smelt or tasted or touched—all his own invention and handiwork.

XVIII. That it should have been so with the Mind was not strange. For there was a time when Mind neither had sense-perception, nor held converse with it, but a great gulf divided it from associated inter-

- [150] ἀγελαίων, εἰκὼς τοῖς | μονοτρόποις καὶ μονω-τικοῖς ζῴοις· τότε δὴ καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἐξεταζόμενος σώματος οὐκ ἐφήπτετο, ἀθρόον<sup>1</sup> <οὐκ> ἔχων ὄργανον περὶ ἑαυτὸν, ᾧ θηρεύσει τὸ ἐκτός, ἀλλ'
 ἦν τυφλὸς καὶ ἀδύνατος, οὐχ ὃν οἱ πολλοὶ λέγουσιν,
 ὅταν πηρωθέντα τὰς ὄψεις θεάσωνται· μίαν γὰρ
 οὗτος αἰσθησιν ἀφαιρεθεὶς τῶν ἄλλων ἄγει πολλήν 59 περιουσίαν· ἐκεῖνος δὲ πάσας τὰς αἰσθητικὰς δυνάμεις περικεκομμένος, ἀδύνατος ὄντως, ἡμισυ
 ψυχῆς τελείας, ἐνδέων δυνάμεως, ἣ καταλαμβάνεσθαι σώματα πέφυκε, τμήμα καθ' ἑαυτὸν στερόμενον τοῦ συμφυοῦς οὐκ εὐτυχές, [οὐκ] ἄνευ
 βάκτρων τῶν αἰσθητικῶν ὀργάνων ἐτύγχανεν,
 οἷς ἰκανὸς ἦν σκηρίπτεσθαι κραδαινόμενος· παρ'
 ἦν αἰτίαν καὶ πολὺ σκότος πάντων κατεκέχυτο
 τῶν σωμάτων, οὐδενὸς φανῆναι δυναμένου· ᾧ γὰρ
 γνωρίζεσθαι ἐμελλεν, αἰσθησις οὐκ ἦν.
 60 βουληθεὶς οὖν ὁ θεὸς μὴ μόνον τῶν ἀσωμάτων ἀλλὰ καὶ στερεῶν σωμάτων κατάληψιν αὐτῷ παρα-σχεῖν, ἐξεπλήρου τὴν ὅλην ψυχὴν τὸ ἕτερον τῷ
 προειργασμένῳ τμήμα συνυφαίνων, ὃ κέκληκε
 προσηγορικῶς μὲν γυναικα ὀνομαστικῶς δὲ Εὐαν 61 αἰνιττόμενος αἰσθησιν. XIX. ἣ δὲ εὐθύς γενομένη δι' ἐκάστου τῶν μερῶν αὐτῆς ὡσπερ διὰ
 τινων ὁπῶν ἀθρόον φῶς εἰς τὸν νοῦν ἐπεισέχεε καὶ
 τὴν ἀχλὺν ἀποσκεδάσασα τηλαυγῶς καὶ σφόδρα

<sup>1</sup> Cohn ἀθρόον (part. of ἀθρέω), "a discerning instrument." This seems a very strange expression, though it is true that "all-collecting" is an unusual sense for ἀθρόος. Perhaps read with Markland ἀρκοῦν, or possibly σώματος οὐκ ἐφήπτετο ἀθρόως, <οὐκ> ἔχων. Cf. below, 62.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 58-61

dependent things.<sup>a</sup> Rather was it then like the solitary ungregarious animals. At that time it formed a class by itself; it had no contact with body, no all-collecting instrument in its grasp wherewith to bring into its power the external objects of sense. It was blind, incapable, not in the common meaning of blindness as applied to those whom we observe to have lost their eyesight, for they though deprived of one sense have the others more abundantly. No, the Mind was docked of all its powers of sense-perception, thus truly powerless. It was but half the perfect soul, lacking the power whereby it is the nature of bodies to be perceived, a mere unhappy section bereft of its mate without the support of the sense-perceiving organs, whereby it could have propped as with a staff its faltering steps. And thus all bodily objects were wrapped in profound darkness and none of them could come to the light. For sense, the means whereby they were to become the objects of knowledge, was not.<sup>b</sup>

God then, wishing to provide the Mind with perception of material as well as immaterial things, thought to complete the soul by weaving into the part first made the other section, which he called by the general name of "woman" and the proper name of "Eve," thus symbolizing sense.

XIX. This Eve or sense from the very moment of coming into being through each of her parts as through orifices poured multitudinous light into the Mind, and purging and dispersing the mist set it as it were in

<sup>a</sup> Literally "things that dwell together and belong to a herd."

<sup>b</sup> Or "for he to whom they were to be made known lacked sense."

- ἐκδήλως τὰς φύσεις τῶν σωμάτων ἰδεῖν καθάπερ 62 δεσπότην παρεσκευάσεν. ὁ δ' ὡσπερ ἐκ νυκτὸς
 ἡλιακῶ φέγγει καταυγασθεὶς ἀπαστράπτουσι ἢ ἐκ βαθέος ὕπνου περιαναστὰς ἢ οἷα τυφλὸς ἐξαίφνης
 ἀναβλέψας ἐνετύγχανε πᾶσιν ἀθρώως ὧν γένεσις
 ἐστίν, οὐρανῶ, γῆ, ὕδατι, ἀέρι, φυτοῖς, ζώοις, σχέσεσιν αὐτῶν, ποιότησι, δυνάμεσιν, ἕξεσι, δια-
 θέσεσι, κινήσεσιν, ἐνεργείαις, πράξεσι, μεταβολαῖς, φθοραῖς, καὶ τὰ μὲν ἑώρα, τῶν δὲ ἤκουε, τῶν δὲ
 ἐγεύετο, τῶν δὲ ὠσφραίνετο, τῶν δὲ ἤπτετο· καὶ
 πρὸς ἃ μὲν ἐπικλινῶς εἶχεν, ἡδονὰς ἐργαζόμενα,
 τῶν δὲ ἀπεστρέφετο, ἐμποιούντων ἀλγηδόνας.
 63 περιβλεψάμενος οὖν ὧδε κάκεισε καὶ περιαθρήσας ἑαυτὸν τε καὶ τὰς δυνάμεις ἐτόλμησε ταῦτόν αὐχῆμα αὐχῆσαι τῷ βασιλεῖ Μακε-δόνων Ἀλεξάνδρῳ· καὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνόν φασιν, ἡνίκα Εὐρώπης καὶ Ἀσίας ἔδοξεν ἀνάψασθαι τὸ κράτος,
 ἐν ἐπικαίρῳ χώρῳ στάντα καὶ πάντα περιαθρήσαντα εἰπεῖν, ὅτι "καὶ τὰ τῆδε καὶ τὰ τῆδε ἐμά," μειρακιώδους καὶ νηπίας καὶ ἰδιωτικῆς τῷ ὄντι
 ψυχῆς, οὐ βασιλικῆς, ἐπιδειξάμενον κουφότητα.
 64 πρότερος δ' ὁ νοῦς τὴν αἰσθητικὴν δύναμιν ἐξ-αιψάμενος καὶ δι' αὐτῆς πᾶσαν ἰδέαν θηρεύσας
 σώματος, ὑποπλησθεὶς ἀλόγου φρονήματος, ἐφυ-
 [151] σῆθη, ὡς τὰ πάντα ἑαυτοῦ νομίσαι κτήματα | καὶ
 μηδενὸς ἄλλου τὸ παράπαν μηδέν.
 65 XX. Οὗτός ἐστιν ὃν χαρακτηρίσας Μωσῆς
 τρόπον ἐν ἡμῖν ἐπεφήμισε Κάιν, ἐρμηνευόμενον
 κτήσι, εὐθηλείας μᾶλλον δὲ ἀσεβείας μεστὸν ὄντα·

<sup>a</sup> In Stoic terminology ἐξις is something less permanent than διάθεσις. Thus the mastery of the arts is a ἐξις (and therefore μέση, see 9), while virtue is a διάθεσις.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 61-65

the place of a master, able to see in luminous clearness the natures of things bodily. And the Mind, like one enlightened by the flash of the sun's beam, after night, or as one awakened from deep sleep, or like a blind man who has suddenly received his sight, found thronging on it all things which come into being, heaven, earth, air, water, the vegetable and animal world, their phases, qualities, faculties, dispositions whether temporary or permanent,<sup>a</sup> movements, activities, functions, changes, extinctions. Some it saw, some it heard, some it tasted, some it smelt, and some it touched; and to some it was attracted, because they work pleasure, from others it was averse because they cause pain.

So then it gazed around on every side and, beholding itself and its powers, feared not to utter the same boast as the Macedonian king Alexander. For the story is that, when he seemed <sup>b</sup> to have gained the mastery of Europe and Asia, he stood in some commanding spot and, looking at the view around, said "this way and that all are mine." The words showed the lightness of an immature and childish soul, the soul of a common man in truth and not of a king. But before Alexander's day the Mind, having acquired the faculty of sense and through its agency laid hold of every form of bodily things, was filled and puffed up with unreasoning pride, and thus thought that all things were its own possessions and none belonged to any other.

XX. It is this feeling in us which Moses expresses under the name of Cain, by interpretation Possession, a feeling foolish to the core or rather

<sup>b</sup> Or "he thought."

ἀντὶ γὰρ τοῦ νομίσει θεοῦ πάντα κτήματα, ὑπέλαβεν ἑαυτοῦ, μηδ' αὐτὸν ἔχειν βεβαίως δυνάμενος, ἀλλὰ μηδ' ὅστις ἐστὶ τὴν οὐσίαν εἰδώς. ἀλλ' ὅμως εἰ πεπίστευκε ταῖς αἰσθήσεσιν ὡς ἱκαναῖς θηρεῦσαι τὸ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητόν, εἰπάτω, πῶς παρορᾶν ἢ παρακούειν ἢ κατὰ τινα ἄλλην αἴσθησιν μὴ ἀμαρτάνειν 66 ἔτι δυνήσεται. καὶ μὴν τοὺς ὀλίσθους ἀνάγκη τούτους περὶ ἕκαστον ἡμῶν ἀεὶ συμβαίνειν, κἂν τὰ μάλισθ' ἡμεῖς ἠκριβωμένοις τοῖς ὀργάνοις χρώμενοι τυγχάνωμεν· τὰς γὰρ φυσικὰς κήρας καὶ τὸν ἀκούσιον πλάνον εἰσάπαν ἐκδῦναι χαλεπὸν, μᾶλλον δ' ἀμήχανον, ἀπείρων ὅσων ψευδοῦς δόξης ποιητικῶν ἐν τε ἡμῖν καὶ περὶ ἡμᾶς καὶ ἐκτὸς ἡμῶν ἐν ἅπαντι τῷ θνητῷ γένει ὑπαρχόντων. οὐκ ἄρα ὑγιῶς κτήμαθ' ἑαυτοῦ ὑπέλαβε τὰ πάντα, κἂν φρναττόμενος ὑψαυχενῆ.

67 XXI. Γέλωτά μοι πλατὺν καὶ Λάβαν ὁ τῶν ποιότητων ἠρτημένος δοκεῖ παρασχεῖν Ἰακώβ τῷ πρὸ τούτων τὴν ἄποιον φύσιν ὀρῶντι, ἠνίκα ἐτόλμα πρὸς αὐτὸν λέγειν, ὅτι “ αἱ θυγατέρες θυγατέρες μου καὶ οἱ υἱοὶ υἱοὶ μου καὶ τὰ κτήνη κτήνη μου καὶ πάντα ὅσα σὺ ὀρᾶς ἐμά ἐστι καὶ τῶν θυγατέρων μου ” (Gen. xxxi. 43). ἐφ' ἑκάστου γὰρ οὗτος τὸ “ ἐμὸν ” προστιθεὶς περὶ αὐτοῦ λέγων ἅμα καὶ
 68 σεμνομυθῶν οὐ παύεται. τὰς θυγατέρας, εἰπέ μοι,—τέχνηαι δέ εἰσι καὶ ἐπιστήμαι ψυχῆς—θυγατέρας σαυτοῦ λέγεις εἶναι; τίνα τρόπον; οὐ πρῶτον μὲν παρὰ τοῦ διδάξαντος αὐτὰς νοῦ παρα-

<sup>a</sup> The construction is confused. Perhaps (a) transfer the μη to before παρορᾶν (as in the translation) or (b) omit it. In this case the sense will be “ let him tell us how it is that

ON THE CHERUBIM, 65-68

impious. For instead of thinking that all things are God's possession, the Mind fancied that they were its own, though it cannot possess even itself securely, or even know what its own real being is. Yet if it trusts in the senses and their ability to lay hold of the objects of sense, let it tell us how it thinks to have power to avoid error in sight or hearing or any other sense.<sup>a</sup> Indeed these errors must always befall us in each of our doings, to whatever pitch of accuracy the organs we use are brought. For to free ourselves altogether from natural sources of decay or involuntary delusions is hard or rather impossible, so innumerable in ourselves and around us and outside us throughout the whole race of mortals are the causes which produce false opinion. How foolish then, be its boasting ever so loud and its bearing ever so high, is the Mind's thought that all things are its own possessions.

XXI. Surely Laban, whose heart was fixed on particular qualities, must have made Jacob laugh loud and long, Jacob who discerns rather than these the nature which is outside class or category. Laban dared to say to him "the daughters are my daughters, the sons are my sons, the cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest are mine and my daughters'" (Gen. xxxi. 43). In each case he adds the "my," and his proud talk about himself goes on without ceasing. The daughters, tell me—daughters, you know, are the arts and branches of knowledge in the soul—do you say they are your daughters? How yours? Why in the first place you only received them from the mind that taught them to you.

(as he knows is the case) he will still be capable of sense-error."

λαβὼν ἔχεις; εἶτα καὶ πέφυκας ἀποβάλλειν, ὡσπερ ἄλλ' ἄττα, καὶ ταύτας ἢ διὰ μέγεθος ἐτέρων φροντίδων ἐκλαθόμενος ἢ διὰ χαλεπὰς καὶ ἀνηκέστους<sup>1</sup> ἀρρωστίας σώματος ἢ διὰ τὴν ὠρισμένην τοῖς πρεσβύταις ἀθεράπευτον νόσον γῆρας ἢ δι' ἄλλα μυρία, ὧν ἀριθμὸν ἄπορον εὐρεῖν.

69 τί δέ; τοὺς υἱοὺς—υἱοὶ δέ εἰσιν οἱ κατὰ μέρος τῆς ψυχῆς λογισμοί—φάσκων εἶναι σαυτοῦ σωφρονεῖς ἢ μέμηνas τοιαῦτα δοξάζων; αἱ γὰρ μελαγχολίαι σου καὶ παράνοιαὶ καὶ φρενῶν ἐκστάσεις καὶ εἰκασίαι ἀβέβαιοι καὶ φαντασίαι πραγμάτων ψευδεῖς καὶ κενοὶ τινες ἐννοημάτων ὀνειροῖς εἰκότες ἔλκυσμοί<sup>2</sup> σπασμοὺς ἐνδιδόντες ἐξ ἑαυτῶν καὶ ἡ σύντροφος ψυχῆς νόσος λήθη καὶ ἄλλα τῶν εἰρημένων πλείω τὸ ἐχυρόν σου τῆς δεσποτείας ἀφαιρεῖται καὶ ἐπιδείκνυται ταῦτα ἐτέρου τινός,

70 οὐχὶ σά, κτήματα. πῶs δὲ τὰ κτήνη—

κτήνη δέ εἰσιν αἱ αἰσθήσεις, ἄλογον γὰρ καὶ [152] κτηνῶδες αἰσθησιs—σαυτοῦ | λέγειν εἶναι τολμᾶs; παρορῶν, εἶπέ μοι, παρακούων αἰεὶ, τοὺς γλυκεῖς χυλοὺς ἀλμυροὺς ἔστιν ὅτε καὶ ἔμπαλιν τοὺς πικροὺς γλυκεῖς ἠγούμενος καὶ κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰσθησιν πλείω τῶν κατορθουμένων εἰωθῶs διαμαρτάνειν οὐκ ἐρυθριᾶs, ἀλλ' ὡσπερ ἀπταιστοῖs κεχρημένος ταῖs περὶ ψυχὴν ἀπάσαιs δυνάμεσί τε καὶ ἐνεργείαιs

71 γαυριᾶs καὶ πεφύσῃσαι; XXII. ἀλλ' εἰάν μεταβάλῃs καὶ ὧν χρῆι φρενῶν μοιραθῆs, ἐρεῖs πάντα τοῦ θεοῦ κτήματα, οὐχὶ σαυτοῦ, τὰs διανοήσεις, τὰs ἐπιστήμαs, τὰs τέχναs, τὰ θεωρήματα,

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μηκίστους.

<sup>2</sup> Cohn prints εἰκότες <λογισμοί> ἔλκυσμοὺs καὶ. The MSS. vary between ἔλκυσμοί and ἔλκυσμοὺs καὶ. See App. p. 484.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 68-71

Secondly, it is in the course of nature that like other things you should lose them too, perhaps through the burden of other thoughts which drive them from your memory, or through cruel and incurable infirmities of the body, or that disease which is the doom of advancing years and no treatment can heal—old age—or a host of other causes, which no man can number.

The sons—sons are the particular reasoned thoughts—when you say they are yours are you sane or mad to suppose such a thing? Fits of melancholy and insanity, bursts of frenzy, baseless conjectures, false impressions of things, mere notions, which are but unsubstantial will-o'-the-wisps<sup>a</sup> made of the stuff of dreams, with their self-engendered throes and throbbings, loss of memory, the curse which so besets the soul, and other things more numerous than these, sap the security of your lordship, and show that these things are not your possessions but another's.

As for the cattle—the senses, that is, for sense is unreasoning and bestial—do you dare to say that they are yours? Consider your constant errors in sight and hearing, how you sometimes think bitter flavours sweet and sweet bitter, and in every sense are more often wrong than right. Surely a matter for blushing rather than for boasting and elation, as though you found all the faculties and activities of your soul infallible.

XXII. But, if you reform and obtain a portion of the wisdom that you need, you will say that all are God's possessions and not yours, your reflections, your knowledge of every kind, your arts, your conclusions, your reasonings on particular questions, your sense-perceptions, in fact

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 484.

- τοὺς ἐν μέρει λογισμούς, τὰς αἰσθήσεις, τὰς διὰ τούτων καὶ ἄνευ αὐτῶν ψυχῆς ἐνεργείας· ἐὰν δὲ μέχρι παντὸς ἀπαιδαγώγητον καὶ ἀδίδακτον ἑάσης σεαυτὸν, δουλεύσεις τὸν αἰῶνα χαλεπαῖς δεσποίναις, οἰήσεσιν, ἐπιθυμίαις, ἡδοναῖς, ἀδικίαις, ἀφρο-
 72 σύναις, ψευδέσι δόξαις. “εἰ” γάρ φησιν “ἀποκριθεὶς εἶποι ὁ παῖς Ἠγάπηκα τὸν κύριόν μου καὶ τὴν γυναῖκά μου καὶ τὰ παιδιά, οὐκ ἄπειμι<sup>1</sup> ἐλεύθερος,” ἄχθεις πρὸς τὸ κριτήριον τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ δικαστοῦ τυχῶν αὐτοῦ βέβαιον σχήσει ὃ ἡτήσατο, πρότερον τρυπηθεὶς τὸ οὖς ὀπητίῳ (Exod. xxī. 5, 6), ἵνα μὴ δέξηται θείαν ἀκοήν ὑπὲρ ἐλευ-
 73 θερίας ψυχῆς· ἐκκεκριμένου γάρ ἐστιν ὡσπερ ἐξ ἀγῶνος ἱεροῦ καὶ ἀποδοδοκιμασμένου παιδὸς ὄντως νηπίου κομιδῆ λογισμοῦ σεμνολογεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ τὸν νοῦν ἡγαπηκέαι καὶ τὸν νοῦν νομίζειν ἑαυτοῦ κύριον εἶναι καὶ εὐεργέτην καὶ ἐπὶ τῷ τὴν αἴσθησιν σφόδρα στέργειν καὶ κτῆμα ἴδιον αὐτὴν καὶ ἀγαθῶν τὸ μέγιστον ἡγεῖσθαι καὶ τὰ τούτων ἀμφοῖν παιδιά, τοῦ μὲν τὸ νοεῖν, τὸ λογίζεσθαι, τὸ διανοεῖσθαι, τὸ βουλευέσθαι, τὸ στοχάζεσθαι, τῆς δὲ τὸ ὄραν, τὸ ἀκούειν, τὸ γεύεσθαι, τὸ ὀσφραίνεσθαι, τὸ ἄπτεσθαι, κοινῶς τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι.
- 74 XXIII. ἀνάγκη μέντοι τὸν τούτοις οἰκειούμενον μηδ’ ὄναρ ἐλευθερίας ἐπησθῆθαι· φυγῇ γὰρ αὐτῶν καὶ ἀλλοτριώσει μεταποιούμεθα ἀδείας. ἄλλος δέ τις πρὸς τῷ φιλαύτῳ καὶ τὸ μανιῶδες ἐπιδεικνύμενός φησιν ὅτι, κὰν ἀφαιρῆται μέ τις,

<sup>1</sup> MSS. οὐκέτ <οὐκ ἔτ’> εἰμι or οὐκ ἐξελεύσομαι. Cohn’s conjecture agrees with the citation of the text in Quis Rer. Div. Her. 38. The LXX. has οὐκ ἀποτρέχω, in which form Philo quotes it, L.A. iii. 198.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 71-74

the activities of your soul, whether carried on through the senses or without them. But if you leave yourself for ever unschooled and untaught, you will be eternally enslaved to hard mistresses, vain fancies, lusts, pleasures, promptings to wrongdoing, follies, false opinions. For if, says Moses, the servant should answer and say "I have come to love my master, my wife and my children, I will not go out free," he shall be brought to the tribunal of God, and with God as judge shall have his request ratified, having first had his ear bored with an awl (Exod. xxi. 5, 6), that he may not receive the divine message of the freedom of the soul. For lofty words like these of having come to love the mind and thinking it his master and benefactor are worthy of a reasoning disqualified and rejected as it were from the sacred arena, a slave<sup>a</sup> in very truth and wholly childish. And so too when he speaks of his exceeding affection for outward sense and his belief that she is his own possession and the greatest of blessings. So too with the children of these two, the children of mind—reflection, reasoning, judging, deliberating, conjecturing—the children of sense—sight, hearing, smell, taste, touch, in fact sense-perception in general. XXIII. He who seeks intimacy with these can have had no perception, cannot even have dreamt, of freedom. For it is only by flight and estrangement from these that we can make a claim to the lot of the fearless. We read of another<sup>b</sup> who crowns his self-love with madness, and declares that, though what I have be taken from me, I will contend

<sup>a</sup> Or "boy." Philo plays with the double sense of παῖς.

<sup>b</sup> i.e., Pharaoh.

ὡς περὶ οἰκείων ἀγωνισάμενος οἶσομαι τὸ κράτος· “διώξας” γάρ φησιν “καταλήψομαι, μεριῶ σκῦλα,
 ἐμπλήσω ψυχὴν μου, ἀνελῶ τῇ μαχαίρᾳ μου,
 κυριεύσει ἡ χεὶρ μου” (Exod. xv. 9).

- 75 πρὸς ὃν εἶπομι' ἄν· λέληθέ σε, ὦ μωρέ, ὅτι πᾶς ὁ
 δοκῶν ἐν γενέσει διώκειν διώκεται· νόσοι γὰρ καὶ
 γῆρας καὶ θάνατος μετὰ τῆς ἄλλης τῶν ἐκουσίων
 καὶ ἀκουσίων <κακῶν> πληθύς ἕκαστον ἡμῶν ἐλαύνουσι καὶ στροβοῦσι καὶ διώκουσι, καὶ ὁ νομίζων καταλαμβάνειν ἢ κρατεῖν καταλαμβάνεται
 καὶ κρατεῖται, καὶ τις λαφυραγωγῆσειν ἐλπίσας
 καὶ μοίρας λείας διατιθεῖς ἠττηθεῖς ὑπὸ κεκρατη-
 [153] κόσιν ἐχθροῖς | ἐγένετο, κένωσιν ἀντὶ πλησμονῆς
 καὶ δουλείαν ἀντὶ δεσποτείας ψυχῇ δεξάμενος τῇ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀνελεῖν ἀναιρεθεῖς καὶ πάνθ'
 ὅσα δράσειν ἐνενόησε παθῶν ἀνὰ κράτος.
- 76 ἦν μὲν γὰρ ὡς ἀληθῶς ἐχθρὸς οὗτος αἰροῦντος
 λόγου καὶ φύσεως αὐτῆς, καὶ τὰ ἐν τῷ ποιεῖν
 ἅπαντα περιάπτων αὐτῷ καὶ μηδενὸς τῶν ἐν τῷ πάσχειν ἔτι μεμνημένος, ὡς τὰς ἀφ' ἐκάστου
- 77 κῆρας ἀθρόας ἐκδεδυκώς. XXIV. “εἶπε” γάρ φησιν “ὁ ἐχθρὸς Διώξας καταλήψομαι.” τίς οὖν
 ἂν γένοιτο δυσμενέστερος ψυχῇ πολέμιος τοῦ διὰ
 μεγαλαυχίας τὸ ἴδιον θεοῦ προσκληροῦντος ἑαυτῷ;
 ἴδιον μὲν δὴ θεοῦ τὸ ποιεῖν, ὃ οὐ θέμις ἐπιγρά-78 ψασθαι γενητῷ, ἴδιον δὲ γενητοῦ τὸ πάσχειν. ὁ προλαβὼν μὲν τις ὡς οἰκείον καὶ ἀναγκαῖόν ἐστι,
 ῥαδίως οἶσει τὰ προσπίπτοντα, κὰν ἦ βαρύτερα,
 νομίσας δὲ ἀλλότριον ἀνηνύτω πιεζόμενος ἄχθει
 Σισύφειον τιμωρίαν ἀναδέξεται, μηδ' ὅσον ἀνα-

ON THE CHERUBIM, 74-78

for it as my own and win the victory. "I will pursue," he says, "I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; I will satisfy my soul; I will destroy with my sword; my hand shall have the mastery" (Exod. xv. 9).

To such a one I would say "Fool, is it hidden from you that every created being, who thinks he pursues, is pursued?" For maladies and old age and death, with all the other host of evils voluntary and involuntary, drive and hustle and pursue each one of us, and he who thinks to overtake and conquer is overtaken and conquered, and many a one who thinks to spoil and is already in his thoughts parcelling out the booty has fallen under the foot of victorious enemies. He receives into his soul emptiness for satisfaction, slavery for lordship, he is killed instead of killing, and all that he thought to do to others falls with full measure upon himself.

For in very truth this man was the enemy of convincing reason and of nature herself, when he took to himself all active functions and forgot the passive, as though he was secure from the mass of calamities which these severally bring. XXIV. For it was "the enemy," as we read, who said "I will pursue and overtake." What deadlier foe to the soul can there be than he who in his vainglory claims to himself that which belongs to God alone? For it belongs to God to act, and this we may not ascribe to any created being. What belongs to the created is to suffer, and he who accepts this from the first, as a necessity inseparable from his lot, will bear with patience what befalls him, however grievous it may be. He who thinks it a strange and alien thing will incur the penalty of Sisyphus, crushed by a vast and hopeless burden, unable even to lift his head, over-

κῦψαι δυνάμενος, ἀλλὰ πᾶσι τοῖς ἐπιτρέχουσι καὶ τραχηλίζουσι δεινοῖς ὑποβεβλημένους καὶ προστιθεῖς ἐκάστω τὸ ὑπέικον καὶ εὐένδοτον, ἀγεννοῦς
 καὶ ἀνάνδρου ψυχῆς πάθη· τλήναι γὰρ ἔδει καὶ ἀντιτάξασθαι καὶ ἀντερείσασθαι γνώμην ὀχυρωσά-μενον καὶ ἀναφραξάμενον τῇ ἑαυτοῦ καρτερίᾳ καὶ 79 ὑπομονῇ, δυνατωτάταις ἀρεταῖς. ὡσπερ
 γὰρ τὸ κείρεσθαι διττόν, τὸ μὲν ὡς ἀντιπεπονθὸς
 κατὰ ἀντέρεισιν, τὸ δὲ ὡς ὑπέικον καθ' ὑπόπτωσιν
 —πρόβατον μὲν γὰρ ἢ δέρμα ἢ τὸ λεγόμενον κώδιον οὐδὲν ἐνεργοῦν ἐξ αὐτοῦ πάσχον δὲ μόνον
 ὑφ' ἑτέρου κείρεται, ὁ δ' ἄνθρωπος συνδρῶν καὶ σχηματίζων καὶ ἐπιτήδειον παρέχων ἑαυτόν, ἀνακερνὰς τῷ πάσχειν τὸ ποιεῖν—, οὕτως καὶ τὸ 80 τύπτεσθαι· τὸ μὲν ὁ συμβέβηκε πληγῶν ἄξια ἡδίκηκότητι οἰκέτη ἢ ἐλευθέρῳ διὰ ῥαδιουργίαν ἐπὶ τροχοῦ κατατεινομένῳ ἢ τινι τῶν ἀψύχων—τύπτον-ται γὰρ λίθοι καὶ ξύλα καὶ χρυσοὶ καὶ ἄργυρος
 καὶ ὅσαι ἐν χαλκοτυπείῳ ἐλαυνόμεναι ὑλαὶ ἢ
 διαιρούμεναι—, τὸ δὲ <ὁ> συμβέβηκεν ἀθλητῇ 81 ἀγωνιζομένῳ· οὗτος μὲν οὖν τὰς ἐπιφερομένας πληγὰς ἐκατέρα τῶν χειρῶν ἀποσειέται καὶ τὸν
 αὐχένα περιάγων ὧδε κἀκέισε τὸ μὴ τυφθῆναι
 φυλάσσειται, πολλάκις δὲ καὶ δακτύλοις ποδῶν
 ἄκροισ ἐπιβεβηκῶς καὶ πρὸς ὕψος αὐτὸν ἐξάρας ἢ στείλας καὶ συναγαγὼν ἔμπαλιν κατὰ κενοῦ φέρειν
 τὰς χεῖρας τὸν ἀντίπαλον ἠνάγκασε σκιαμαχία τι παραπλήσιον δρῶντα ὁ δὲ οἰκέτης ἢ ὁ χαλκὸς μηδὲν ἀντιδρῶν ὑπέρριπται πάντα πεισόμενος, ὅσα
 ἂν ὁ διατιθεῖς ἐργάσασθαι διανοήται.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 484.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 78-81

whelmed by all the terrors which beset and prostrate him, and increasing each misery by that abject spirit of surrender, which belongs to the degenerate and unmanly soul. Rather should he bravely bear, take his place firmly in the opposing ranks, and with those mightiest of virtues, which he himself contributes, patience and endurance, fortify his resolution and close the gates against the foe.

There are two ways of undergoing shearing or shaving; one when there is reaction <sup>a</sup> and reciprocity by the object, the other when there is complete submission or subjection. A sheep or a fleece <sup>a</sup> or a "fell" puts forth no activity of itself, but is merely passive to the shearing process in the hands of another, but the man who is shaved acts with the barber, places himself in position, and accommodates himself, thus combining the active with the passive. So too with receiving blows. There is one kind which befalls a slave, whose wrongdoing has deserved it, or a free man who is stretched on the wheel for his crimes, or any lifeless things, such as stones or wood or gold or silver and all materials which are beaten or divided in a forge. The other kind we find in the case of an athlete in a boxing-match or pancratium for a crown of victory. As the blows fall upon him he brushes them off with either hand, or he turns his neck round this way and that and thus evades the blows, or often he rises on his tip-toes to his full height, or draws himself in and compels his adversary to lay about him in empty space, much as men do when practising the movements. But the slave or the metal lies impotent and irresponsive, passive to endure whatever the agent may determine to execute. This is a condition we should

PHILO

- 82 τοῦτο μὲν οὖν τὸ πάθος μήτε σώματι μήτε πολὺ μάλλον ψυχῇ δεξώμεθ' ἄ ποτε, τὸ δ' ἀντιπεπονθὸς ἐκείνο—ἐπειδὴ πάσχειν ἀνάγκη τὸ θνητόν—, ἵνα μὴ καθάπερ οἱ θηλυδρίαὶ κεκλασμένοι καὶ παρ-
 [154] εἰμένοι | καὶ προαναπίπτοντες μετ' ἐκλύσεως ψυχικῶν δυνάμεων ἐξασθενῶμεν, ἀλλ' ἐρρωμένοι τοῖς διανοίας τόνοις ἐπελαφρίζειν κάπικουφίζειν ἰσχύωμεν τὴν φορὰν τῶν ἐπαρτωμένων δεινῶν.
- 83 Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν θνητὸς οὐδεὶς οὐδενὸς ἐπιδέδεικται παγίως καὶ βεβαίως κύριος, οἱ δὲ λεγόμενοι δεσπότηαι δόξῃ μόνον, οὐ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν, ὀνομάζονται, ἀνάγκη δ' ὡς ὑπήκοον καὶ δοῦλον, οὕτως ἡγεμόνα ἐν τῷ παντὶ εἶναι καὶ κύριον, γένοιτ' ἂν ὁ τῷ ὄντι ἄρχων καὶ ἡγεμὼν· εἰς ὃ θεός, ᾧ λέγειν ἦν πρεπῶδες, ὅτι πάντα αὐτοῦ κτήματα.
- 84 XXV. Καὶ ὡς μεγαλοπρεπῶς ἅμα καὶ θεοπρεπῶς διεξέρχεται περὶ τούτων, κατανοήσωμεν.<sup>1</sup> “ὅλα μου, φησὶν, ἐστίν.” ὅλα δ' ἐστὶν ἃ φησι “δῶρα καὶ δόματα καὶ καρπώματα, ἃ διατηροῦντες προσοίσετε ἐν ταῖς ἐμαῖς ἑορταῖς ἐμοί” (Num. xxviii. 2), πάνυ ἐκδήλως παριστὰς ὅτι τῶν ὄντων τὰ μὲν χάριτος μέσης ἡξίωται, ἣ καλεῖται δόσις, τὰ δὲ ἀμείνονος, ἧς ὄνομα οἰκεῖον δωρεά, τὰ δὲ τοιαῦτα γέγονεν, ὡς μὴ μόνον δύνασθαι καρποφορεῖν ἀρετάς, ἀλλὰ καὶ δι' ὅλων ἤδη πεφυκέναι καρπὸς ἐδώδιμος, ᾧ μόνω ψυχῇ τοῦ φιλοθεά-85 μονος τρέφεται. ὁ δὲ ταῦτα διδαχθεὶς καὶ διατη-

<sup>1</sup> Cohn has κατανοήσωμεν τό, ὅλα μου, φησὶν, ἐστίν. There is much confusion in the mss. here. The insertion of τό makes κατανοήσωμεν have two objects and though the article prefacing a quotation is common enough it hardly suits a quotation where φησὶν is inserted in the middle.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 82-85

never admit into our bodies, much less into our souls. As mortals we must suffer, but let our suffering be that other kind which is the reaction of our own activity. Let us not like womanish folk, nerveless and unstrung, flagging ere the struggle begin, with all our spiritual forces relaxed, sink into utter prostration. Rather let the tension of our minds be firm and braced, that so we may be strong to relieve and lighten the force and onset of the misfortunes which menace us.

Since then it has been shown that no mortal can in solid reality be lord of anything, and when we give the name of master we speak in the language of mere opinion, not of real truth; since too, as there is subject and servant, so in the universe there must be a leader and a lord, it follows that this true prince and lord must be one, even God, who alone can rightly claim that all things are His possessions.

XXV. Let us mark how sublime and worthy of the Deity is the enumeration of those possessions. "All things," God says, "are Mine."<sup>a</sup> And these "all things" are the "bounties, and gifts and fruits which ye shall observe and offer to Me at My feasts" (Numb. xxviii. 2). Here Moses clearly shows that among existing things there are some which rank lower as benefits, and this benefit is called "giving." In others the benefit is of a higher kind and this has the special name of "bounty." Others again are such that not only can they bear virtue as their fruit, but in their very nature through and through they are fruit meet for eating, even that one and only fruit which feeds the soul of him whose quest is the Vision. He who has learnt this lesson, and

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 484, 485.

ρεῖν καὶ διαφυλάττειν ἐν διανοίᾳ δυνάμενος ἄμωμον
 καὶ κάλλιστον ἱερεῖον οἷσει θεῷ πίστιν ἐν οὐ θνητῶν
 ἑορταῖς· ἑαυτῷ γὰρ τὰς ἑορτὰς προσκεκλήρωκε
 δόγμα τιθεὶς ἀναγκαιότατον τοῖς φιλοσοφίας θιασώ-86 ταις. τὸ δὲ δόγμα τοῦτ' ἐστὶ· μόνος ὁ θεὸς ἀψευδῶς ἑορτάζει· καὶ γὰρ μόνος γήθει καὶ μόνος χαίρει καὶ μόνος εὐφραίνεται καὶ μόνῳ τὴν
 ἀμιγῆ πολέμου συμβέβηκεν εἰρήνην ἄγειν· ἄλυπός
 ἐστὶ καὶ ἄφοβος καὶ ἀκοινωνήτος κακῶν, ἀνένδοτος, ἀνώδυνος, ἀκμῆς, εὐδαιμονίας ἀκράτου μεστός—
 τελειοτάτῃ ἢ τούτου φύσις—· μᾶλλον δὲ αὐτὸς ἄκρα
 καὶ τέλος καὶ ὄρος εὐδαιμονίας ὁ θεός, μετέχων
 μὲν οὐδενὸς ἑτέρου πρὸς βελτίωσιν, τὸ δὲ ἴδιον μεταδεδωκὼς ἅπασιν τοῖς ἐν μέρει τῆς τοῦ καλοῦ
 πηγῆς, ἑαυτοῦ· τὰ γὰρ ἐν κόσμῳ καλὰ οὐποτ' ἂν
 ἐγεγένητο τοιαῦτα, μὴ πρὸς ἀρχέτυπον τὸ πρὸς
 ἀλήθειαν καλὸν τὸ ἀγένητον καὶ μακάριον καὶ 87 ἄφθαρτον ἀπεικονισθέντα. XXVI. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καὶ τὸ “σάββατον”—ἐρμηνεύεται δ' ἀνάπαυσις—“θεοῦ” φησὶν εἶναι Μωυσῆς πολλαχοῦ τῆς νομοθεσίας (Exod. xx. 10 al.), οὐχὶ
 ἀνθρώπων, ἀπτόμενος φυσιολογίας ἀναγκαίας—τὸ
 [155] γὰρ ἐν τοῖς οὔσιν ἀναπαυόμενον, | εἰ δεῖ τάληθές
 εἰπεῖν, ἐν ἐστὶν ὁ θεός—, ἀνάπαυλαν δὲ οὐ τὴν ἀπραξίαν καλῶν, ἐπειδὴ φύσει δραστήριον τὸ τῶν
 ὄλων αἴτιον παῦλαν οὐδέποτε ἴσχον τοῦ ποιεῖν τὰ
 κάλλιστα, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἄνευ κακοπαθείας μετὰ πολλῆς 88 εὐμαρείας ἀπονωτάτην ἐνέργειαν· ἥλιον μὲν γὰρ
 καὶ σελήνην καὶ τὸν σύμπαντα οὐρανόν τε καὶ

ON THE CHERUBIM, 85-88

can keep and ponder it in his heart, will offer to God the blameless and fairest sacrifice of faith at feasts which are no feasts of mortals. For God has claimed the feasts for Himself, and herein He lays down a principle which they who belong to the company of the philosophers must not fail to know.

The principle is this. God alone in the true sense keeps festival. Joy and gladness and rejoicing are His alone ; to Him alone it is given to enjoy the peace which has no element of war. He is without grief or fear or share of ill, without faint-heartedness or pain or weariness, but full of happiness unmixed. Or rather since His nature is most perfect, He is Himself the summit, end and limit of happiness. He partakes of nothing outside Himself to increase His excellence. Nay He Himself has imparted of His own to all particular beings from that fountain of beauty—Himself. For the good and beautiful things in the world could never have been what they are, save that they were made in the image of the archetype, which is truly good and beautiful, even the uncreate, the blessed, the imperishable.

XXVI. And therefore Moses often in his laws calls the sabbath, which means 'rest,' God's sabbath (Exod. xx. 10, etc.), not man's, and thus he lays his finger on an essential fact in the nature of things. For in all truth there is but one thing in the universe which rests, that is God. But Moses does not give the name of rest to mere inactivity. The cause of all things is by its nature active ; it never ceases to work all that is best and most beautiful. God's rest is rather a working with absolute ease, without toil and without suffering. For the sun and moon and the whole heaven and universe, since they are κόσμον, ἅτε καὶ οὐκ ὄντα αὐτεξούσια καὶ κινού-μενα καὶ φερόμενα συνεχῶς, θέμις εἰπεῖν κακοπαθεῖν· καὶ τοῦ καμάτου μαρτύριον ἐναργέστατον

PHILO

 αἱ ἐτήσιοι ὥραι· τά τε γὰρ συνεκτικώτατα τῶν ἐν
 οὐρανῷ τὰς κινήσεις ἐναλλάττει, τοτὲ μὲν βορείους
 τοτὲ δὲ νοτίους τοτὲ δὲ ἀλλοίας ποιούμενα τὰς περιφοράς, ὃ τε ἀῆρ ἀλεινόμενος καὶ ψυχόμενος
 καὶ πάσας τροπὰς τρεπόμενος ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων παθη-μάτων ἐλέγχεται κάμνων, ἐπεὶ τὸ συνεκτικώτατον 89 μεταβολῆς αἴτιον κάματος· εὐῆθες δ' ἐστὶ περὶ
 τῶν χερσαίων ἢ καθ' ὕδατος μακρηγορεῖν τὰς
 καθόλου καὶ κατὰ μέρη τροπὰς αὐτῶν ἐπὶ μήκιστον
 διεξιόντα· ταῦτα γὰρ πολὺ πλείω τῶν μεταρσίων
 κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς ἀσθένειαν ἐνδέχεται, ἅτε πλείστον
 μετέχοντα τῆς ὑστάτης καὶ γεώδους οὐσίας.

90 ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν τὰ μὲν τρεπόμενα καμάτῳ πέφυκε
 μεταβάλλειν, ἄτρεπτος δὲ καὶ ἀμετάβλητος ὁ θεός,
 ἀκμῆς ἂν εἴη φύσει· τὸ δ' ἀσθενείας ἀμέτοχον,
 κἂν πάντα ποιῆ, δι' αἰῶνος ἀναπαυόμενον οὐποτε
 λήξει· ὥστε οἰκειότατον μόνῳ θεῷ τὸ ἀναπαύεσθαι.

XXVII. ἐδείχθη δὲ καὶ τὸ ἐορτάζειν
 ἐπιβάλλον αὐτῷ· μόνου ἄρα καὶ ἐβδόμαι καὶ ἐορταὶ 91 τοῦ αἰτίου, ἀνθρώπων δὲ συνόλως οὐδενός ἴθι γάρ, εἰ θέλεις, συνεπίσκειψαι τὰς ἀοιδίμους πανηγύρεις ἡμῶν. ὅσαι μὲν δὴ κατ' ἔθνη βαρβαρικά
 τε καὶ ἐλληνικὰ ἐκ μυθικῶν πλασμάτων συνέστησαν
 ἄλλαι παρ' ἄλλοις κενὸν τῦφον ἔχουσαι τὸ τέλος, ἀφείσθωσαν· καὶ γὰρ οὐδ' ὁ σύμπας ἀνθρώπων
 βίος ἐξαρκέσει πρὸς τὸ τὰς ἐνυπαρχούσας ἀτοπίας
 ἐκάσταις ἀκριβῶσαι· ἃ δ' <ἂν> ἀντὶ πολλῶν εἴποι

ON THE CHERUBIM, 88-91

not self-mastering and move and revolve continually, we may rightly say do suffer. Their labouring is most clearly seen by the seasons of the year. For of the heavenly bodies the chiefest change their courses, sometimes revolving to the south, sometimes to the north, sometimes elsewhere; and the air grows colder and warmer and undergoes all manner of changes; and these changes in condition peculiar to it prove that it labours and is weary. For weariness is the principal cause of change. It were folly to pursue the subject through the creatures of air and water and enumerate at length their general and particular changes: for these are naturally liable to far greater weakness than the creatures of the upper world, since they in largest measure partake of the lowest form of substance, namely the earthly. Since then weariness is the natural cause of change in things that turn and vary, and since God turns not and changes not, He must be by nature unwearying. But a being that is free from weakness, even though he be making all things, will cease not to all eternity to be at rest, and thus rest belongs in the fullest sense to God and to Him alone.

XXVII. Now we showed that keeping festival pertained to Him and therefore we see that all such festivals, whether they be weekly sabbaths or (the occasional) feasts, are His, who is the Cause, and pertain not to any man at all. Let us consider our famous festal assemblies. Different nations, whether Greek or barbarian, have their own, the product of myth and fiction, and their only purpose is empty vanity. We need not dwell on them, for the whole of human life would not suffice to tell in detail of the follies inherent in them. Yet, without over-

PHILO

τις ἐφ' ἀπάσας ὀλίγα στοχαζόμενος τοῦ καιροῦ, 92 λεκτέον. πάσης ἑορτῆς τε καὶ πανηγύρεως τῶν παρ' ἡμῶν τὰ θαυμαστά καὶ περιμάχητα ἔργα
 ταῦτα· ἄδεια ἄνεσις ἐκεχειρία μέθη παροιμία κῶμοι
 χλιδὴ θρύψις θυραυλῖαι παννυχίδες, ἀπρεπεῖς
 ἡδοναί, μεθημερινοὶ γάμοι, βιαιόταται ὕβρεις,
 ἀσκήσεις ἀκρασίας, ἀφροσύνης μελέται, ἐπιτηδεύσεις αἰσχυρῶν, φθορὰ παντελῆς τοῦ καλοῦ, νυκτ-[156] εγερσίαι πρὸς ἀπλήστους ἐπιθυμίας, | ὕπνος ἐν
 ἡμέρᾳ, ὅποτε καιρὸς ἐγρηγόρσεως, φύσεως ἔργων 93 ἐναλλαγῆ· τότε ἀρετὴ μὲν ὡς βλαβερὸν γελᾶται, κακία δὲ ὡς ὠφέλιμον ἀρπάζεται, τότε τὰ μὲν
 πρακτέα ἄτιμα, τὰ δὲ μὴ πρακτέα ἐπίτιμα, τότε
 μουσικὴ μὲν καὶ φιλοσοφία καὶ πᾶσα παιδευσις,
 τὰ τῆς θείας ψυχῆς θεῖα ὡς ἀληθῶς ἀγάλματα,
 ἀφωνίαν ἴσχει, αἱ δὲ μαστροπεύουσαι καὶ προ-ξενοῦσαι <τέχναι> τὰς ἡδονὰς γαστρὶ καὶ τοῖς
 μετὰ γαστέρα ῥητορεύουσι.

XXVIII.

94 τοιαῦται τῶν λεγομένων εὐδαιμόνων αἱ ἑορταί.
 καὶ μέχρι μὲν <ἐν> οἰκίαις ἢ χωρίοις βεβήλοις
 ἀσχημονοῦσιν, ἤττον ἁμαρτάνειν μοι δοκοῦσιν·
 ἐπειδὴν δὲ ὡσπερ χειμάρρου φορὰ πάντῃ νεμηθεῖσα καὶ ἱερῶν τοῖς ἀγιωτάτοις προσπελάσασα
 βιάσῃται, τὰ ἐν τούτοις εὐαγῆ πάντα εὐθὺς ἔρριψεν,
 ὡς ἀπεργάσασθαι θυσίας ἀνιέρους, ἱερεῖα ἄθυτα,
 εὐχὰς ἀτελεῖς, ἀμυήτους μυήσεις, ἀνοργιάστους
 τελετάς, νόθον εὐσέβειαν, κεκιβδηλευμένην ὀσιό-

ON THE CHERUBIM, 91-94

stepping the right limit, a few words, to serve for many, may be said to cover them all. In every feast and gathering in our country what is it that men admire and seek so eagerly? Freedom from the fear of punishment, from sense of restraint, from stress of business; drunkenness, tipsy rioting, routs and revels, wantonness, debauchery; lovers thronging their mistresses' doors, nightlong carouses, unseemly pleasures, daylight chamberings, deeds of insolence and outrage, hours spent in training to be intemperate, in studying to be fools, in cultivating baseness, wholesale depravation of all that is noble: the works to which nature prompts us are turned upside down: men keep vigil by night to indulge their insatiable lust: the day time, the hours given for wakefulness, they spend in sleep. At such times virtue is jeered at as mischievous, vice snatched at as profitable. At such times right actions are dishonoured, wrong actions honoured. At such times music, philosophy, all culture, those truly divine images set in the divinely given soul, are mute. Only the arts which pander and minister pleasure to the belly and the organs below it are vocal and loud-voiced.

XXVIII. Such are the feasts of those whom men call happy. And so long as they confine their unseemly doings to houses or unconsecrated places, their sin seems less to me. But when their wickedness like a rushing torrent spreads over every place and invades and violates the most sacred temples, it straightway overturns all that is venerable in them, and as a result come sacrifices unholy, offerings unmeet, vows unfulfilled, their rites and mysteries a mockery, their piety but a bastard growth, their holiness debased, their τητα, ἀγνείαν ἀναγνον, κατεψευσμένην ἀλήθειαν, 95 βωμολόχον θεραπείαν θεοῦ. καὶ πρὸς τούτοις ἔτι

PHILO

 τὰ μὲν σώματα λουτροῖς καὶ καθαρσίοις ἀπορρύπτονται, τὰ δὲ ψυχῆς ἐκνύσασθαι πάθη, οἷς
 καταρρυπαίνεται ὁ βίος, οὔτε βούλονται οὔτε ἐπιτηδεύουσι· καὶ λευχειμονοῦντες μὲν εἰς τὰ ἱερὰ βαδίζουσιν σπουδάζουσιν ἀκηλιδῶτους ἐσθῆτας ἀμπεχόμενοι, διάνοιαν δὲ κεκληιδωμένην ἄχρι τῶν 96 ἀδύτων εἰσάγοντες οὐκ αἰδοῦνται. κὰν μὲν τι τῶν
 θρεμμάτων μὴ παντελὲς καὶ ὀλόκληρον εὐρίσκηται,
 ἕξω περιρραντηρίων ἀπελαύνεται βωμοῖς οὐκ
 ἐώμενον προσαχθῆναι, καίτοι ταῖς σωματικαῖς λώβαις ἀπάσαις κεχρημένον ἀκουσίοις· κατατετρωμένοι δὲ τὰς ψυχὰς ἐκ νοσημάτων χαλεπῶν, ἃ κακίας ἀμήχανος δύναμις προσέβαλε, μᾶλλον <δὲ>
 ἠκρωτηριασμένοι καὶ ἐκτετμημένοι τὰ κάλλιστα,
 φρόνησιν καρτερίαν δικαιοσύνην εὐσέβειαν, τὰς
 ἄλλας ὅσας τὸ ἀνθρώπειον γένος χωρεῖν πέφυκεν ἀρετάς, καὶ καθ' ἐκούσιον γνώμην ἐνδεδεγμένοι
 τὰς λύμας, ὅμως ἱεουργεῖν τολμῶσι νομίζοντες
 τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ ὀφθαλμὸν τὰ ἐκτὸς μόνον ὄραν ἡλίου
 συνεργοῦντος, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ πρὸ τῶν ἐμφανῶν τὰ 97 ἀφανῆ καταθεᾶσθαι φωτὶ χρώμενον ἑαυτῷ· ὁ γὰρ τοῦ ὄντος ὀφθαλμὸς φωτὸς ἐτέρου πρὸς κατάληψιν οὐ δεῖται, αὐτὸς δ' ὢν ἀρχέτυπος ἀγγή μυρίας ἀκτῖνας ἐκβάλλει, ὧν οὐδεμία ἐστὶν αἰσθητή, νοηταὶ δ' ἅπασαι· παρὸ καὶ μόνος ὁ νοητὸς θεὸς
 αὐταῖς χρῆται, τῶν δὲ γενέσεως μεμοιραμένων

ON THE CHERUBIM, 94-97

purity impure, their truth falsehood, their worship a sacrilege. Furthermore they cleanse their bodies with lustrations and purifications, but they neither wish nor practise to wash off from their souls the passions by which life is defiled. They are zealous to go to the temples white-robed, attired in spotless raiment, but with a spotted heart they pass into the inmost sanctuary and are not ashamed. And if an animal be found to be blemished or imperfect, it is driven out of the consecrated precincts<sup>a</sup> and not suffered to approach the altar, though it is through no will of its own that it has any of these bodily defects. But they themselves—their souls are a mass of wounds from the hideous maladies with which the irresistible power of vice has smitten them, or rather they are mutilated, docked of their noblest parts, prudence, courage to endure, justice, piety and all the other virtues of which human nature is capable. And though it is with free deliberate judgement that they have imbibed the mischief, yet they dare to handle the holy thing, and think that the eye of God sees nothing but the outer world through the co-operation of the sun. They do not know that He surveys the unseen even before the seen, for He Himself is His own light. For the eye of the Absolutely Existent needs no other light to effect perception, but He Himself is the archetypal essence of which myriads of rays are the effluence, none visible to sense, all to the mind. And therefore they are the instruments of that same God alone, who is apprehended by mind, not of any who have part and lot

<sup>a</sup> Literally "the boundaries (of the ἀγορά) marked out by the sprinkling of the lustral water."

οὐδείς· αἰσθητὸν γὰρ τὸ γενόμενον, αἰσθήσει δὲ ἀκατάληπτος ἢ νοητὴ φύσις.

- 98
[157] XXIX. | Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν ἀοράτως τὸδε τῆς ψυχῆς χωρίον εἰσδύεται, παρασκευάζωμεν τὸν τόπον ἐκείνον ὡς ἔνεστι κάλλιστον, ἀξιοχρεῶν ἐνδιαίτημα θεοῦ γενησόμενον· εἰ δὲ μή, λήσεται μεταναστὰς εἰς ἕτερον οἶκον, ὃς ἂν ἄμεινον αὐτῷ 99 δοκῆ δεδημιουργῆσθαι. εἰ γὰρ βασιλεῖς ὑποδέχεσθαι μέλλοντες λαμπροτέρας κατασκευάζομεν τὰς ἰδίας οἰκίας, μηδενὸς τῶν εἰς κόσμον ὀλιγορῶντες, ἀλλὰ πᾶσιν ἀδεῶς καὶ ἀφθόνως χρώμενοι, τοῦ τὴν καταγωγὴν ἠδίστην ἅμα καὶ μετὰ τοῦ πρέποντος ἀξιώματος αὐτοῖς γενέσθαι στοχαζόμενοι, τῷ βασιλέων βασιλεῖ καὶ τῶν συμπάντων ἡγεμόνι θεῷ δι' ἡμερότητα καὶ φιλανθρωπίαν ἀξιώσαντι τὸ γενητὸν ἐπισκέψεως καὶ ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ περάτων μέχρι γῆς ἐσχάτων ἐπ' εὐεργεσία τοῦ γένους ἡμῶν κατελθόντι ποδαπὸν οἶκον ἄρα χρῆ 100 κατασκευάζεσθαι; λίθων μὲν ἢ ξυλίνης ὕλης; ἄπαγε, ἀλλ' οὐδ' εἰπεῖν εὐαγές· οὐδὲ γάρ, εἰ πᾶσα γῆ χρυσὸς ἢ τι χρυσοῦ τιμαλφέστερον μεταβαλοῦσα ἐξαίφνης γένοιτο κᾶπειτα δημιουργῶν τέχναις στοᾶς καὶ προπύλαια καὶ ἀνδρῶνας καὶ προτεμενίσματα καὶ νεῶς κατασκευαζόντων ἀναλωθεῖη, γένοιτ' ἂν βᾶσις αὐτοῦ τοῖς ποσίν· ἀξιοχρεῶς μέντοι 101 γε οἶκος ψυχῆ ἐπιτήδειος. XXX. οἶκον οὖν ἐπίγειον τὴν ἀόρατον ψυχὴν τοῦ ἀοράτου θεοῦ λέγοντες ἐνδίκως καὶ κατὰ νόμον φήσομεν.

Ἴνα δὲ βέβαιος καὶ περικαλλέστατος εἴη ὁ οἶκος, θεμέλιοι μὲν ὑποβεβλήσθωσαν εὐφυῖα καὶ διδασκαλία, ἀρεταὶ δὲ μετὰ καλῶν πράξεων ἐποικοδομείσθωσαν αὐτῷ, τὰ δὲ προκοσμῆματα ἔστω

ON THE CHERUBIM, 97-101

in the world of creation. For the created is approached by sense, which can never grasp the nature which is apprehended by mind.

XXIX. Seeing then that our souls are a region open to His invisible entrance, let us make that place as beautiful as we may, to be a lodging fit for God. Else He will pass silently into some other home, where He judges that the builder's hands have wrought something worthier. When we think to entertain kings we brighten and adorn our own houses. We despise no embellishment, but use all such freely and ungrudgingly, and make it our aim that their lodging shall have every delight and the honour withal that is their due. What house shall be prepared for God the King of kings, the Lord of all, who in His tender mercy and loving-kindness has deigned to visit created being and come down from the boundaries of heaven to the utmost ends of earth, to show His goodness to our race? Shall it be of stone or timber? Away with the thought, the very words are blasphemy. For though the whole earth should suddenly turn into gold, or something more precious than gold, though all that wealth should be expended by the builder's skill on porches and porticos, on chambers, vestibules, and shrines, yet there would be no place where His feet could tread. One worthy house there is—the soul that is fitted to receive Him. XXX. Justly and rightly then shall we say that in the invisible soul the invisible God has His earthly dwelling-place.

And that the house may have both strength and loveliness, let its foundations be laid in natural excellence and good teaching, and let us rear upon them virtues and noble actions, and let its external

PHILO

- 102 ἡ ἀνάληψις τῶν ἐγκυκλίων προπαιδευμάτων· ἐκ
 μὲν γὰρ εὐφύτας εὐθιξία ἐπιμονὴ μνήμη, ἐκ
 δὲ διδασκαλίας εὐμάθεια προσοχὴ καθάπερ τινὸς
 ῥίζαι δένδρου μέλλοντος ἡμέρους καρποὺς ἀποκυΐσκειν συνίστανται, ὧν ἄνευ τελεσιουργηθῆναι 103 διάνοιαν ἀμήχανον· ἐκ δὲ ἀρετῶν καὶ τῶν κατ'
 αὐτὰς πράξεων τὸ ἐχυρὸν καὶ βέβαιον τῆς ἀσφαλούς ἰδρύσεως περιγίνεται, τοῦ διαστήσαι καὶ φυγαδεῦσαι καὶ μετανάστιν ἀπεργάσασθαι τοῦ καλοῦ
 ψυχὴν ἐγνωκότος πρὸς οὕτως καρτερὰν ἰσχύν 104 ἐξασθενούντος· ἐκ δὲ τῆς ἐγκυκλίου τῶν προπαιδευμάτων μελέτης τὰ πρὸς κόσμον τῆς ψυχῆς
 ὡς ἐστίας ἤρτηται· καθάπερ γὰρ κονιάματα καὶ γραφαὶ καὶ πινάκια καὶ λίθων πολυ-
 [158] τελῶν διαθέσεις, αἷς οὐ μόνον τοίχους ἀλλὰ | καὶ
 τὰ ἐδάφη ποικίλλουσι, καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα τοιαῦτα πρὸς
 μὲν ἰσχύν οὐ συμβάλλεται, τέρψιν δὲ περιποιεῖ 105 μόνον τοῖς ἐνοικοῦσιν, οὕτως ἡ τῶν ἐγκυκλίων ἐπιστήμη τὸν ψυχικὸν οἶκον ἅπαντα διακοσμεῖ, γραμματικῆ<sup>1</sup> μὲν ποιητικὴν ἐρευνῶσα καὶ παλαιῶν
 πράξεων ἱστορίαν μεταδιώκουσα, γεωμετρία δὲ
 τὴν κατ' ἀναλογίαν ἰσότητα περιποιούσα, τὸ δὲ ἐν
 ἡμῶν ἄρρυθμον καὶ ἄμετρον καὶ ἐκμελὲς ῥυθμῶ καὶ μέτρῳ καὶ μέλει διὰ μουσικῆς ἀστείου θεραπεύουσα, ῥητορικὴ δὲ τὰς τε ἐν ἐκάστοις δεινότητος ἐξετάζουσα καὶ πᾶσιν τὴν πρέπουσαν ἐρμηνείαν ἐφαρμόζουσα, τονώσεις καὶ περιπαθήσεις καὶ ἔμ-

<sup>1</sup> Cohn suggests γραμματικῆ . . . γεωμετρία . . . ῥητορικῆ.

<sup>a</sup> Or, taking ἤρτηται ἐκ τῆς μελέτης together, "on the study . . . depend." But the form of the sentence and the fuller sense given to ἤρτηται suggest the way adopted in the transla-

ON THE CHERUBIM, 102-105

ornaments be the reception of the learning of the schools. The first of these, natural excellence, brings quickness of apprehension, perseverance and memory. From teaching are borrowed readiness to learn and concentration. They are like the roots of the tree that will bring forth good fruit, and without them the mind cannot be brought to its fullness. Virtues and the good actions that follow them provide the stability and firmness that make the structure secure, so that all that purposes to banish or sever or draw away the soul from good is powerless against such steadfastness and strength. From the study of the introductory learning of the schools come the ornaments of the soul, which are attached to it as to a house.<sup>a</sup>

For as stuccoes, paintings, and tablets and arrangements of precious stones and the like, with which men adorn pavements as well as walls, contribute nothing to the strength of the building, but only serve to give pleasure to the inmates, so the knowledge of the schools adorns the whole house of the soul. Grammar or literature <sup>b</sup> makes research into poetry and pursues the study of the doings of old time. Geometry gives us the sense of equality produced by proportion. It also heals by the means of fine music <sup>b</sup> all that is harsh and inharmonious or discordant in the soul, under the influence of rhythm, metre, and melody. Rhetoric <sup>b</sup> seeks out and weighs the materials for shrewd treatment in all the subjects which it handles, and welds them to the language that befits them. Sometimes it raises us to a pitch of strong emotion,<sup>c</sup> at other times. Philo often uses ἀπρᾶσθαι with the simple genitive, e.g. τῶν ποιητῶν ἡρημένος, 67.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 485.

<sup>c</sup> Or "procures us the means of expressing."

PHILO

παλιν ἀνέσεις καὶ ἡδονὰς μετὰ στωμυλίας καὶ τῆς περὶ γλῶτταν καὶ τὰ φωνητήρια ὄργανα εὐπραγίας περιποιούσα.

- 106 XXXI. Τοιούτου κατασκευασθέντος οἴκου παρὰ τῷ θνητῷ γένει, χρηστῶν ἐλπίδων τὰπίγεια πάντα ἀναπλησθήσεται κάθοδον δυνάμεων θεοῦ προσδοκήσαντα· αἱ δὲ νόμους ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ καὶ θεσμοὺς ἐπιφερόμεναι τοῦ καθαγιασάσαι καὶ καθιερώσαι χάριν ἀφίξονται κατὰ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτῶν ἐπικέλευσιν· εἶθ' ὁμοδίαιτοι καὶ ὁμοτράπεζοι ταῖς φιλαρέτοις γενόμεναι ψυχαῖς σπείρουσιν ἐν αὐταῖς γένος τὸ εὐδαιμον, καθὰ καὶ Ἀβραὰμ τῷ σοφῷ τῆς παρ' αὐτῷ καταγωγῆς τὸν Ἰσαὰκ τελειοτάτην
- 107 χάριν δεδώρηται. χαίρει δ' ἐπ' οὐδενὶ μᾶλλον ἢ κεκαθαρμένη διάνοια ἢ τῷ δεσπότην ἔχειν τὸν ἡγεμόνα πάντων ὁμολογεῖν· τὸ γὰρ δουλεύειν θεῷ μέγιστον αὔχημα καὶ οὐ μόνον ἐλευθερίας ἀλλὰ καὶ πλούτου καὶ ἀρχῆς καὶ πάντων ὅσα τὸ θνητὸν ἀσπάζεται γένος τιμιώτερον.
- 108 τῆς δὲ τοῦ ὄντος ἡγεμονίας ὁ χρησμὸς ἀληθῆς μάρτυς λέγων ὧδε· “καὶ ἡ γῆ οὐ πραθήσεται εἰς βεβαίωσιν· ἐμὴ γάρ ἐστι πᾶσα ἡ γῆ, διότι προσήλυτοι καὶ πάροικοι ὑμεῖς ἐστε ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ” (Lev. xxv. 23). ἀρ' οὐκ ἐναργέστατα παρίστησιν,
- 109 ὅτι κτήσει μὲν τὰ πάντα θεοῦ, χρήσει δὲ μόνον γενέσεώς ἐστι; βεβαίως, γάρ φησιν, οὐδὲν οὐδενὶ πεπράσεται τῶν ἐν γενέσει, ὡς [ἄν] ἐνὸς ὄντος οὐ κυρίως βεβαία ἢ τῶν ὄλων κτήσις·
- [159] | κέχρηκε γὰρ ὁ θεὸς τὰ γενητὰ πάντα πᾶσιν, οὐδὲν τῶν κατὰ μέρος τέλειον ἐργασάμενος, ὃ μὴ πάντως χρεῖον ἄλλου, ἢν' οὐ δεῖται τυχεῖν γλιχόμενον ἐξ ἀνάγκης τῷ παρασχεῖν δυναμένῳ πλησιάζῃ

ON THE CHERUBIM, 105-109

times the tension is relaxed in a sense of pleasure. With all this it gives fluency and facility in using our tongues and organs of speech.

XXXI. If such a house be raised amid our mortal race, earth and all that dwells on earth will be filled with high hopes, expecting the descent of the divine potencies. With laws and ordinances from heaven they will descend, to sanctify and consecrate them on earth, according to their Father's bidding. Then,<sup>a</sup> joined in commonalty of daily life and board with virtue-loving souls, they sow within them the nature of happiness, even as they gave to wise Abraham in Isaac the most perfect thank-offering for their stay with him. The purified mind rejoices in nothing more than in confessing that it has the lord of all for its master. For to be the slave of God is the highest boast of man, a treasure more precious not only than freedom, but than wealth and power and all that mortals most cherish.

To this sovereignty of the Absolutely Existent the oracle is a true witness in these words, "and the land shall not be sold in perpetuity, for all the land is mine, because ye are strangers and sojourners before me" (Lev. xxv. 23). A clear proof surely that in possession all things are God's, and only as a loan do they belong to created beings. For nothing, he means, will be sold in perpetuity to any created being, because there is but One, to whom in a full and complete sense the possession of all things is assured.

For all created things are assigned as a loan to all from God, and He has made none of these particular things complete in itself, so that it should have no need at all of another. Thus through the desire to obtain

<sup>a</sup> An allusion to Gen. xviii. 5 ff.

PHILO

- 110 καὶ ἐκεῖνο τούτῳ καὶ ἀμφοτέρα ἀλλήλοις· οὕτως γὰρ ἐπαλλάττοντα καὶ ἐπιμιγνύμενα λύρας τρόπον ἐξ ἀνομοίων ἡρμοσμένης φθόγγων εἰς κοινωνίαν καὶ συμφωνίαν ἐλθόντα συνηχῆσειν ἔμελλεν, ἀντίδοσίν τινα καὶ ἀντέκτισιν πάντα διὰ πάντων ὑπομένοντα πρὸς τὴν τοῦ κόσμου παντὸς ἐκ-
- 111 πλήρωσιν· ταύτη καὶ ἄψυχα ἐμψύχων καὶ ἄλογα λογικῶν καὶ δένδρα ἀνθρώπων καὶ ἀνθρωποφυτῶν καὶ ἡμέρων ἀτίθασα καὶ ἀγρίων χειροθήτη καὶ ἄρρεν θήλεος καὶ θῆλυ ἄρρενος καὶ συνελόντι φράσαι χερσαῖα ἐνύδρων καὶ ἐνυδρα ἀεροπόρων καὶ πτηνὰ τῶν προειρημένων καὶ προσέτι γῆς μὲν οὐρανός, οὐρανοῦ δὲ γῆ, ἀῆρ δὲ ὕδατος, ὕδωρ δὲ πνεύματος, καὶ πάλιν αἱ μεταξύ φύσεις ἀλλήλων τε καὶ τῶν ἄκρων καὶ αἱ ἄκραι τῶν μέσων καὶ
- 112 ἑαυτῶν ἐρώσι· χειμῶν γε μὴν θέρους καὶ θέρος χειμῶνος καὶ ἕαρ ἀμφοῖν καὶ μετόπωρον ἕαρος καὶ ἕκαστον ἐκάστου καὶ ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν πάντα πάντων ἐπίδεᾶ τε καὶ χρεῖα, ἵνα τὸ ὄλον, οὐ μέρη ταῦτα, παντελὲς ἔργον ἀξιόν τε εἶη τοῦ δημιουργοῦ, ὅδε ὁ κόσμος.
- 113 XXXII. Οὕτως οὖν αὐτὰ συνθεῖς τὸ μὲν κράτος ἀπάντων ἀνῆψεν ἑαυτῷ, τὴν δὲ χρῆσιν καὶ ἀπολαυσιν ἐνεῖμε τοῖς ὑπηκόοις ἑαυτῶν τε καὶ ἀλλήλων· καὶ γὰρ ἑαυτοὺς καὶ ὅσα περὶ ἡμᾶς χρῆσιν ἔχομεν· ἐγὼ γοῦν ἐκ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος συνεστῶς, νοῦν λόγον αἰσθησιν ἔχειν δοκῶν, οὐδὲν αὐτῶν ἴδιον
- 114 εὐρίσκω· ποῦ γάρ μου τὸ σῶμα πρὸ γενέσεως ἦν; ποῖ δὲ καὶ χωρήσει μεταστάντος <μου>; ποῦ δὲ καὶ τοῦ δοκοῦντος ὑφεστάναι τῶν ἡλικιῶν αἱ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 485.

<sup>b</sup> Or "all our surroundings."

<sup>c</sup> Literally, "as a thing to be used" or "a loan."

ON THE CHERUBIM, 110-114

what it needs, it must perforce approach that which can supply its need, and this approach must be mutual and reciprocal. Thus through reciprocity and combination, even as a lyre is formed of unlike notes, God meant that they should come to fellowship and concord and form a single harmony, and that an universal give and take should govern them, and lead up to the consummation of the whole world. Thus love draws lifeless to living, unreasoning to reasoning, trees to men, men to plants, cultivated to wild, savage to tame, each sex to the other ; so too, in a word, the creatures of the land to the creatures of the water, these to the fowls of the air and those to both : so again heaven to earth, earth to heaven, air to water, and water to air. So natures intermediate yearn for each other and those at either extreme ; these too for their fellows and the intermediate beings. Winter needs summer, summer winter, spring both, and autumn spring. Thus each, we may say, wants and needs each ; all need all, that so this whole, of which each is a part, might be that perfect work worthy of its architect, this world.<sup>a</sup>

XXXII. In this way combining all things He claimed the sovereignty of all for Himself ; to His subjects He assigned the use and enjoyment of themselves and each other. For indeed we have ourselves and all that go to make these selves<sup>b</sup> for use.<sup>c</sup> I am formed of soul and body, I seem to have mind, reason, sense, yet I find that none of them is really mine. Where was my body before birth, and whither will it go when I have departed ? What has become of the changes produced by life's various stages in the seemingly permanent self ? Where is

- διαφοραί; ποῦ τὸ βρέφος, ποῦ ὁ παῖς, ποῦ ὁ ἀντίπαις, ποῦ ὁ ἄρτι ἡβῶν, ποῦ τὸ μειράκιον, ὁ πρωτογένειος, ὁ νεανίας, ὁ τέλειος ἀνὴρ; πόθεν δὲ ἦλθεν ἡ ψυχὴ, ποῖ δὲ χωρήσει, πόσον δὲ χρόνον ἡμῖν ὁμοδαίτος ἔσται; τίς δὲ ἐστὶ τὴν οὐσίαν ἔχομεν εἰπεῖν; πότε δὲ καὶ ἐκτησάμεθα αὐτήν; πρὸ γενέσεως; ἀλλ' οὐχ ὑπῆρχομεν· μετὰ τὸν θάνατον; ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐσόμεθα οἱ μετὰ σωμάτων σύγκριτοι ποιοί, ἀλλ' εἰς παλιγγενεσίαν ὀρμήσομεν
- 115 οἱ μετὰ ἀσωμάτων ἀσύγκριτοι ἄποιοί.<sup>1</sup> ἀλλὰ νῦν
 [160] ὅτε ζῶμεν κρατούμεθα μᾶλλον ἢ ἄρχομεν καὶ γνωρίζομεθα μᾶλλον ἢ γνωρίζομεν· οἶδε γὰρ ἡμᾶς οὐ γνωριζομένη πρὸς ἡμῶν καὶ ἐπιτάγματα ἐπιτάττει, οἷς ἐξ ἀνάγκης ὑπηρετοῦμεν ὡς οἰκέται δεσποίνῃ· ἀπόλειψίν τε ὅταν ἐθέλῃ πρὸς τὸν ἄρχοντα χρηματίσασα μεταναστήσεται ἔρημον καταλιπούσα ζωῆς τὸν ἡμέτερον οἶκον, κὰν ἐπιμένειν βιαζόμεθα, διαλύσεται· λεπτομερῆς γὰρ αὐτῆς ἡ φύσις, ὡς μηδεμίαν ἐμπαρέχειν λαβὴν
- 116 σώματι. XXXIII. ὁ δὲ νοῦς ἐμόν ἐστὶν ἴδιον κτῆμα<sup>2</sup>; ὁ ψευδῶν εἰκαστικός, ὁ πλάνης οἰστικός,<sup>3</sup> ὁ παρανοῶν, ὁ μωραίνων, ὁ εὐρισκόμενος ἄνους ἐν ἐκστάσει καὶ μελαγχολία καὶ μακρῶ γήρα; ἀλλ' ὁ λόγος κτῆμα ἐμόν; ἢ τὰ φωνῆς ὄργανα; μικρὰ νόσου πρόφασις οὐ τὴν γλῶτταν ἐπήρωσεν, οὐ τὸ στόμα καὶ τῶν πάντων λογίων ἀπέρραψεν; οὐχὶ δεινοῦ προσδοκία καταπλήξασα
- 117 μυρίους ἀχανεῖς ἐποίησε; καὶ μὴν οὐδὲ τῆς αἰσθήσεως ἡγεμῶν εὐρίσκομαι, τάχα δὲ που καὶ δοῦλος ἀκολουθῶν ἢ ἂν ἄγῃ, πρὸς χρώματα, πρὸς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μετὰ (ἀ)σώματα ἀσωμάτων σύγκριτοι ποιοί: Cohn retains σύγκριτοι ποιοί. See App. p. 485.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 114-117

the babe that once I was, the boy and the other gradations <sup>a</sup> between boy and full-grown man? Whence came the soul, whither will it go, how long will it be our mate and comrade? Can we tell its essential nature? When did we get it? Before birth? But then there was no "ourselves." What of it after death? But then we who are here joined to the body, creatures of composition and quality, shall be no more, but shall go forward to our rebirth,<sup>a</sup> to be with the unbodied, without composition and without quality. Even now in this life, we are the ruled rather than the rulers, known rather than knowing. The soul knows us, though we know it not; it lays on us commands, which we must fain obey, as a servant obeys his mistress. And when it will, it will claim its divorce in court <sup>b</sup> and depart, leaving our home desolate of life. Press it as we may to stay, it will escape from our hands. So subtle is it of nature, that it affords no grip or handle to the body.

XXXIII.

Is my mind my own possession? That parent of false conjectures, that purveyor of delusion, the delirious, the fatuous, and in frenzy or melancholy or senility proved to be the very negation of mind. Is my utterance my own possession, or my organs of speech? A little sickness is a cause sufficient to cripple the tongue and sew up the lips of the most eloquent, and the expectation of disaster paralyses multitudes into speechlessness. Not even of my sense-perception do I find myself master, rather, it may well be, its slave, who follows it where it leads,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 485.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 486.

---

<sup>2</sup> Conj. Cohn: mss. δαιτήμα.

<sup>3</sup> Conj. Mangey: mss. οιητικός: Cohn ὁ πλάνης <ὁ> οιητικός.

σχήματα, πρὸς φωνάς, πρὸς ὀσμάς, πρὸς χιλοῦς, πρὸς τὰ ἄλλα σώματα.

- Δι' ὧν ἀπάντων δεδηλώσθαι νομίζω, ὅτι τοῖς ἀλλοτρίοις κτήμασι χρώμεθα, καὶ οὔτε δόξαν οὔτε πλοῦτον οὔτε τιμὰς οὔτε ἀρχὰς οὔθ' ὅσα περὶ σῶμα ἢ ψυχὴν ἴδια κεκτήμεθα, ἀλλ' οὐδ' αὐτὸ τὸ
- 118 ζῆν· χρῆσιν δὲ ἔχοντες εἶν μὲν γινώμεν, ἐπιμελησόμεθα ὡς θεοῦ κτημάτων, προλαβόντες ὅτι τῷ δεσπότῃ νόμος ὅταν θέλῃ τὰ ἑαυτοῦ κομίζεσθαι· οὔτως γὰρ τὰς ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀφαιρέσεσιν ἀνίας ἐπικουφιοῦμεν· νυνὶ δὲ οἱ πολλοὶ νομίζοντες ἑαυτῶν πάντα κτήματα κατὰ τὴν τινος ἀπουσίαν καὶ
- 119 ἔνδειαν εὐθὺς περιπαθοῦσι. γίνεται οὖν οὐ μόνον ἀληθές ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν μάλιστα συντεινόντων εἰς παρηγορίαν τὸ τὸν κόσμον καὶ τὰ ἐν κόσμῳ τοῦ γεννήσαντος ἔργα τε εἶναι καὶ κτήματα. τὸ δὲ ἔργον τὸ ἴδιον ὁ κεκτημένος δεδώρηται, ὅτι οὐ δεῖται ὁ δὲ χρώμενος οὐχὶ κεκτηται, ὅτι κύριος εἰς ἀπάντων καὶ δεσπότης ἐστίν, ὃς ὀρθότατα ἐρεῖ· “ἐμὴ πᾶσά ἐστιν ἢ γῆ” —ἴσον τῷ, τὸ γενητὸν ἅπαν ἐμόν—, “ὕμεις δὲ προσήλυτοι καὶ πάροικοι ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ” (Lev. 120 xxv. 23). XXXIV. πρὸς μὲν γὰρ ἀλλήλους οἱ γενόμενοι πάντες αὐτοχθόνων καὶ εὐπατριδῶν ἔχουσι λόγον, πάντες ἰσοτιμίαν καὶ ἰσοτέλειαν καρπούμενοι, πρὸς δὲ θεὸν ἐπηλύτων καὶ παροίκων
- [161] ἕκαστος γὰρ ἡμῶν | ὥσπερ εἰς ξένην πόλιν ἀφίκται τόνδε τὸν κόσμον, ἧς πρὸ γενέσεως οὐ μετεῖχε, καὶ ἀφικόμενος παροικεῖ, μέχρις ἂν τὸν ἀπο-
- 121 νεμηθέντα τοῦ βίου χρόνον διαντλήσῃ. ἅμα μέντοι

<sup>a</sup> Aborigines and nobles—two well-known terms in Athenian use. See Dictionary.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 117-121

to colours, shapes, sounds, scents, flavours, and the other material things.

All this surely makes it plain that what we use are the possessions of another, that nor glory, nor wealth, nor honours, nor offices, nor all that makes up body or soul are our own, not even life itself. And if we recognize that we have but their use, we shall tend them with care as God's possessions, remembering from the first, that it is the master's custom, when he will, to take back his own. The thought will lighten our sorrow when they are taken from us. But as it is, with the mass of men, the belief that all things are their own makes their loss or absence at once a source of grief and trouble.

And so the thought that the world and all that therein is are both the works and the possessions of Him that begat them becomes not only a truth but a doctrine most comfortable.

But this work which is His own He has bestowed freely, for He needs it not. Yet he who has the use does not thereby become possessor, because there is one lord and master of all, who will most rightly say "all the land is mine (which is the same as 'all creation is mine'), but ye are strangers and sojourners before me" (Lev. xxv. 23). XXXIV. In relation to each other all created beings rank as men of longest descent and highest birth<sup>a</sup>; all enjoy equal honour and equal rights, but to God they are aliens and sojourners. For each of us has come into this world as into a foreign city, in which before our birth we had no part, and in this city he does but sojourn, until he has exhausted his appointed span of life. And there is another lesson of wisdom

PHILO

καὶ δόγμα εἰσηγεῖται πάνσοφον, ὅτι μόνος κυρίως ὁ θεὸς πολίτης ἐστὶ, πάροικον δὲ καὶ ἐπήλυτον τὸ γενητὸν ἅπαν, οἱ δὲ λεγόμενοι πολῖται καταχρήσει μᾶλλον ὀνόματος ἢ ἀληθεία προσαγορεύονται· δωρεὰ δὲ ἀποχρῶσα σοφοῖς ἀνδράσι πρὸς τὸν μόνον πολίτην θεὸν ἀντεξετασθεῖσιν, ἐπηλύτων καὶ παροίκων λαβεῖν τάξιν, ἐπειδὴ τῶν ἀφρόνων ἔπηλυσ μὲν ἢ πάροικος ἀπλῶς οὐδεὶς ἐν τῇ τοῦ θεοῦ πόλει γίνεται, φυγὰς δὲ πάντως ἀνευρίσκεται.

- οἶον δὴ καὶ προσανεφθέγξατο ὡς δογματικώτατον. “πράσει” φησὶν “οὐ πραθήσεται ἡ γῆ”· καὶ ὑπὸ τίνος ἠσύχασεν, ἢ ἐκ τοῦ παρασιωπηθέντος ὁ μὴ φυσιολογίας ἀμύητος εἰς
- 122 ἐπιστήμην ὠφελῆται. εὐρήσεις τοίνυν σκοπῶν ἅπαντας καὶ τοὺς λεγομένους χαρίζεσθαι πιπράσκοντας μᾶλλον ἢ δωρουμένους καὶ οὓς οἴομεθα λαμβάνειν χάριτας πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ὠνουμένους· οἱ μὲν γὰρ διδόντες, ἀμοιβὴν ἔπαινον ἢ τιμὴν θηρώμενοι, ζητοῦντες χάριτος ἀντίδοσιν, εὐπρεπεῖ δωρεᾶς ὀνόματι κυρίως πράσιν ἐργάζονται, ἐπεὶ καὶ τοῖς πωλοῦσιν ἀνθ’ ὧν ἂν παράσχωσιν ἔθος λαμβάνειν ἐστίν· οἱ δὲ προσιέμενοι τὰς δωρεάς, μελετῶντες ἀποδοῦναι καὶ ἐπὶ καιρὸν ἀποδιδόντες, ἔργον ὠνουμένων δρῶσι, καὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνοι ὡσπερ
- 123 λαβεῖν ἴσασι καὶ ἀποδοῦναι. ὁ δὲ θεὸς οὐ πωλητὴρ ἐπευωνίζων τὰ ἑαυτοῦ κτήματα, δωρητικὸς δὲ τῶν ἀπάντων, ἀενάους χαρίτων πηγὰς ἀναχέων, ἀμοιβῆς οὐκ ἐφίεμενος· οὔτε γὰρ ἐπιδεῆς αὐτὸς οὔτε τις τῶν γεγονότων ἱκανὸς ἀντιδοῦναι δωρεάν.
- 124 XXXV. Πάντων οὖν ἀνωμολογημένων θεοῦ κτημάτων λόγοις τε ἀληθέσι καὶ μαρτυρίαις, ἃς

ON THE CHERUBIM, 121-124

that he teaches in these words, even this—God alone is in the true sense a citizen, and all created being is a sojourner and alien, and those whom we call citizens are so called only by a licence of language.<sup>a</sup> But to the wise it is a sufficient bounty, if when ranged beside God, the only citizen, they are counted as aliens and sojourners, since the fool can in no wise hold such a rank in the city of God, but we see him an outcast from it and nothing more.

Such a lesson too He has proclaimed to us in an utterance of deepest meaning. "The land shall not be sold at all."<sup>a</sup> No word of the seller there, that through this very silence he, who has access to the secrets of nature-truth, may profit in the quest of knowledge. Look round you and you shall find that those who are said to bestow benefits sell rather than give, and those who seem to us to receive them in truth buy. The givers are seeking praise or honour as their exchange and look for the repayment of the benefit, and thus, under the specious name of gift, they in real truth carry out a sale; for the seller's way is to take something for what he offers. The receivers of the gift, too, study to make some return, and do so as opportunity offers, and thus they act as buyers. For buyers know well that receiving and paying go hand in hand. But God is no salesman, hawking his goods<sup>a</sup> in the market, but a free giver of all things, pouring forth eternal fountains of free bounties, and seeking no return. For He has no needs Himself and no created being is able to repay His gift.

XXXV. Thus we have agreed that all things are God's possessions on the strength of true reasonings

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 486.

PHILO

- οὐ θέμις ψευδομαρτυριῶν ἀλῶναι—χρησιμοὶ γάρ, οὓς ἐν ἱεραῖς βίβλοις Μωυσῆς ἀνέγραψεν, οἱ μαρτυροῦντές εἰσι—, παραιτητέον τοίνυν τὸν νοῦν, ὃς τὸ γεννηθὲν κατὰ τὴν πρὸς αἴσθησιν σύνοδον κτῆμα ἴδιον ᾤθη τε καὶ ἐκάλεσε [τὸν] Κάιν καὶ εἶπεν· “ἐκτησάμην ἄνθρωπον διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ,” καὶ
- 125 κατὰ τοῦτο διαμαρτῶν· τί δήποτε; ὅτι ὁ θεὸς αἴτιον, οὐκ ὄργανον, τὸ δὲ γινόμενον δι’ ὄργανου μὲν ὑπὸ δὲ αἰτίου πάντως γίνεται. πρὸς γὰρ τὴν
- [162] τίνος γένεσιν πολλὰ δεῖ συνελθεῖν, | τὸ ὑφ’ οὗ, τὸ ἐξ οὗ, τὸ δι’ οὗ, τὸ δι’ ὃ· καὶ ἔστι τὸ μὲν ὑφ’ οὗ τὸ αἴτιον, ἐξ οὗ δὲ ἡ ὕλη, δι’ οὗ δὲ τὸ ἐργαλεῖον,
- 126 δι’ ὃ δὲ ἡ αἰτία. φέρε γάρ, εἴ τις ἀνέροιτο, οἰκία καὶ πόλις πᾶσα ἵνα κατασκευασθῇ, τίνα συνελθεῖν δεῖ; ἄρ’ οὐ δημιουργὸν καὶ λίθους καὶ ξύλα καὶ ὄργανα; τί οὖν ἔστι δημιουργὸς πλὴν τὸ αἴτιον ὑφ’ οὗ; τί δὲ λίθοι καὶ ξύλα πλὴν ἡ ὕλη, ἐξ ἧς ἡ κατασκευή; τί δὲ τὰ ὄργανα πλὴν τὰ δι’ ὧν;
- 127 τίνος δὲ ἔνεκα πλὴν σκέπης καὶ ἀσφαλείας, τὸ <δὲ><sup>1</sup> δι’ ὃ τοῦτό ἐστι; μετελθὼν οὖν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐν μέρει κατασκευῶν ἴδε τὴν μεγίστην οἰκίαν ἢ πόλιν, τόνδε τὸν κόσμον· εὐρήσεις γὰρ αἴτιον μὲν αὐτοῦ τὸν θεὸν ὑφ’ οὗ γέγονεν, ὕλην δὲ τὰ τέσσαρα στοιχεῖα ἐξ ὧν συνεκράθη, ὄργανον δὲ λόγον θεοῦ δι’ οὗ κατεσκευάσθη, τῆς δὲ κατασκευῆς αἰτίαν τὴν ἀγαθότητα τοῦ δημιουργοῦ. φιλαλήθων ἦδε διάκρισις ἐπιστήμης ἀληθοῦς καὶ ὑγιоῦς ἐφειμένων· οἱ δὲ φάσκοντες διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ τι κεκτῆσθαι

<sup>1</sup> <δὲ> ins. Tr.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 486.

ON THE CHERUBIM, 124-127

and testimonies which none may convict of false witness, for our witnesses are the oracles which Moses wrote in the sacred books. And therefore we must make our protest against the Mind, which thought the offspring engendered by union with sense his own possession, called it Cain and said "I have gotten a man through God." Even in these last two words he erred. You ask how? Because God is the cause not the instrument, and that which comes into being is brought into being through an instrument, but by a cause. For to bring anything into being needs all these conjointly, the "by which," the "from which," the "through which," the "for which,"<sup>a</sup> and the first of these is the cause, the second the material, the third the tool or instrument, and the fourth the end or object. If we ask what combination is always needed that a house or city should be built, the answer is a builder, stones or timber, and instruments. What is the builder but the cause "by which"? What are the stones and timber but the material "from which"? What are the instruments but the means "through which"? And what is the end or object of the building but shelter and safety, and this constitutes the "for which." Let us leave these merely particular buildings, and contemplate that greatest of houses or cities, this universe. We shall see that its cause is God, by whom it has come into being, its material the four elements, from which it was compounded, its instrument the word of God, through which it was framed, and the final cause of the building is the goodness of the architect. It is thus that truth-lovers distinguish, who desire true and sound knowledge. But those who say that they

PHILO

- τὸ μὲν αἷτιον ὄργανον τὸν δημιουργόν, τὸ δ' ὄργανον αἷτιον τὸν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν ὑπολαμ-128 βάνουσιν. αἰτιάσαιτ' ἂν ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος καὶ Ἰωσήφ εἰπόντα, διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ τὴν σαφήνειαν
 εὔρεθήσεσθαι τῶν ἐνυπνίων (Gen. xl. 8). ἔχρη
 γὰρ εἰπεῖν, ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ὡς αἰτίου τὴν τῶν ἀφανῶν
 ἀνάπτυξίν τε καὶ ἀκρίβειαν δεόντως ἔσεσθαι.
 ὄργανα γὰρ ἡμεῖς, δι' ὧν αἱ κατὰ μέρος ἐνέργειαι,
 ἐπιτεινόμενα καὶ ἀνιέμενα, τεχνίτης δὲ ὁ τὴν
 πληξίν ἐργαζόμενος τῶν σώματός τε καὶ ψυχῆς
 δυνάμεων, ὑφ' οὗ πάντα κινεῖται.
- 129 Τοὺς μὲν οὖν πραγμάτων διαφορὰς ἀδυνατοῦντας
 διαστέλλειν ὡς ἀμαθεῖς ἀναδιδακτέον, τοὺς δὲ ὑπὸ φιλονεικίας τὰς τῶν σημαινομένων τάξεις ἐναλ-λάττοντας ὡς ἐριστικούς φευκτέον, τοὺς δὲ μετὰ
 τῆς τῶν ἐμφερομένων ἀκριβοῦς ἐρεύνης ἐκάστῳ
 τῶν εὔρεθέντων τὴν οἰκείαν χώραν προσνέμοντας
 ὡς ἀψευδῆ φιλοσοφίαν μετιόντας ἐπαινετέον.
- 130 Μωυσῆς γοῦν τοῖς δεδιόσι, μή ποτε πρὸς τοῦ
 φαύλου πανστρατιᾶ διώκοντος ἀπόλωνται, φησί· “στῆτε καὶ ὀράτε τὴν σωτηρίαν τὴν παρὰ τοῦ κυρίου, ἣν ποιήσει ὑμῖν” (Exod. xiv. 13), ἐκ
 διδάσκων ὅτι οὐ διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ ἀλλὰ παρ' αὐτοῦ ὡς αἰτίου τὸ σώζεσθαι.

---

<sup>a</sup> The LXX. has οὐχὶ διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ ἢ διασάφησις αὐτῶν ἐστι ;

ON THE CHERUBIM, 127-130

possess something through God, suppose the Cause, that is the Maker, to be the instrument, and the instrument, that is the human mind, they suppose to be the cause.

Right reason too would not hold Joseph free from blame, when he said that through God would the true meaning of dreams be found (Gen. xl. 8).<sup>a</sup> He should have said that by Him as cause the unfolding and right interpretation of things hidden would fitly come to pass. For we are the instruments, wielded in varying degrees of force, through which each particular form of action is produced ; the Craftsman it is who brings to bear on the material the impact of our forces, whether of soul or body, even He by whom all things are moved.

There are those who have not of themselves the capacity to distinguish differences in things ; these we must instruct as ignorant. There are those who through contentiousness reverse and confuse the thoughts which their words express : these we must eschew as mere lovers of strife. But there are also those, who with careful search into what comes before them, assign to each as it is presented its proper place : these we must praise as the followers of a philosophy that cannot lie. And these Moses supports, when he says to those who feared to perish at the hands of the wicked one and his pursuing host, "Stand fast and see the salvation from the Lord, which he will accomplish for you" (Exod. xiv. 13). Thus he showed that not through God, but from Him as cause does salvation come.

ON THE BIRTH OF ABEL AND THE SACRIFICES OFFERED BY HIM AND BY HIS BROTHER CAIN

(DE SACRIFICIIS ABELIS ET CAINI)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

THE main theme of this treatise is the interpretation of Gen. iv. 2-4.

v. 2 I. (1-10). He added to this that she brought forth his brother Abel.

II. (11-49). And Abel became a shepherd of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the land.

v. 3 III. (50-87). And it came to pass after some days that Cain brought of the fruits of the earth as a sacrifice to the Lord.

v. 4 IV. (88-end). And Abel brought also himself of the first-born of his sheep and of their fats.

In I. Philo principally meditates on the word "added," the subject of which he assumes to be God. He holds that addition always implies a removal of something and thus the birth of the Abel attitude of mind, which refers all things to God, implies the removal of the opposite Cain attitude. His thought then passes (5) to the phrase used of the patriarchs "he was added to his people." He makes comparisons in this respect between Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, thought of as the three who learn respectively by teaching, nature, and practice, and finally contrasts them (8) with Moses, who is not "added" but translated to God's presence.

The treatment of II. opens (11) with a discussion as to why Abel the younger is mentioned in v. 2

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN

before his elder brother, the answer being that vice is older in point of time, but virtue in point of worth. This is illustrated (15) from experience of life, for the philosophical calm comes later than the passions of youth, then (17) from the story of Jacob and Esau, and finally (19) by the law of Deut. xxi. 15-17, that the first-born who is the child of the hated wife (i.e. Virtue) is not to be disinherited in favour of the younger child of the beloved wife (i.e. Vice). This leads Philo on to the elaborate allegory (20-44) of the two, as courtesan and chaste woman, pressing their claims upon the mind. Virtue's harangue, beginning 28, which contains what is probably the most formidable catalogue of bad qualities ever drawn up (32), includes an impassioned eulogy of toil (35-41) and ends with some loosely connected thoughts (43-44) on the inferior value of the secular learning. Her pleading prevails with the mind (45), which becomes what Abel was—a shepherd, and thus we resume the real consideration of the text. The true shepherd controls the unreasoning, but not vicious, faculties (46) and the greatness of the calling is illustrated from various verses in the Pentateuch (48-51). We should here expect some similar interpretation of Cain's occupation, but Philo dismisses this with the remark that he has treated it in an earlier book (51).

III. The charges brought against Cain in v. 3 are (a) that he offered only "after some days," (b) that he offered of the fruits, but not of the first-fruits. The first naturally leads to a homily (53) on the duty of ready service. The causes of tardiness are discussed and rebuked by appropriate texts (54-57), and an example of ready thankfulness is found (59) in the story of Abraham, when he bids Sarah hasten to prepare a meal for the angelic visitors of Gen. xviii. Two side thoughts are suggested by this story, (1) an interpretation of the three measures of meal (59), (2) of the phrase "buried cakes" (i.e., cakes baked in the ashes (60) which Philo explains as the duty of reticence about sacred truths; and as this phrase is also used of the dough brought out of Egypt, we are led on to some thoughts about the symbolism of the passover (60-63). We return (64) to the duty of avoiding delay, and Philo dwells on the timelessness of God's actions, which we should imitate in our worship (64-68). This is contrasted (69) with Pharaoh's postponement of Moses' prayers on his behalf, which again is compared with the human tendency to seek help in misfortune from earthly remedies rather than from God (70-71).

PHILO

The second charge brought against the Cain spirit necessitates an examination of what "first-fruits" are. They must be first in "value," i.e. virtues (73), but the ἀπαρχή or "first offering" of these is rather an εὐχαριστητικὸς λόγος or body of pious meditation. At this point (74-75) Philo, remembering that in Lev. ii. 14 the offering is to be "new, roasted, sliced, pounded," passes on to an examination of these four, which are treated with much richness of thought. The substance of our meditation must be fresh inspired thoughts (76-79) which will supersede the old-world learning of the schools, dear as that is to Philo (78). It must be hardened by the fire of close reasoning (80-81). It must be "sliced" or divided by careful analysis and classification of the thoughts under their proper headings (82-85), and finally it must be "pounded," i.e. made part of ourselves by the discipline of repeated meditation (85-87).

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN

IV. The introduction of the subject of Abel's offering of the first-born of his sheep is immediately followed by a quotation of the directions with regard to the offering of the first-born in Exod. xiii. 11-13, and the sections 90-117 are almost entirely short homilies on the different parts of this passage. Thus (a) the time of the offering is put at the entrance to Canaan, the "wavering reasoning" from which God means us to escape (90); (b) we have then an apologetic discussion of the words "God swear," showing that such expressions are a concession to the human tendency to anthropomorphism (91-96); (c) by reading an "if" into the words "and shall give thee," he draws his favourite moral that we can only give what God has given (97); (d) dwelling on the words "thou shalt set apart" or "separate," he argues that the ideas of God which we offer to Him must be kept apart from lower and profane conceptions of Him (98-101); (e) "the males to the Lord" means that while the male offspring of the soul are the virtues, those of the "beasts" or senses are such as are kept under control of the mind (102-106); (f) we have an illustrative digression on the similar command in Numb. xv. 19-20, to make offering from the "mixture," i.e. our compound being, and a contrast with the offerings of perfection, in which there is no setting apart (107-112); (g) on the last verse of Exod. xiii. 11-13, "all that openeth the womb of the ass, thou shalt exchange it for a sheep, but if thou dost not exchange it, thou shalt redeem it," we are told that the ass is labour, the sheep progress, and that labour, at least in the case of things indifferent, is futile, unless it brings progress, and if futile must be "redeemed," i.e. set free (112-116).

PHILO

At this point the word "redeemed" seems to lead Philo to a different line of thought. What is meant by the saying that the Levites were a ransom or redemption for the first-born? Levi—'sanctified Reason,' Israel's first-born, is accepted by God before Reuben, Jacob's first-born, 'natural ability' (118-121). But it means also that the wise are the ransom for the fools. This was shown in God's willingness to spare Sodom for the sake of ten righteous, and we see it in the saving influence of good men in a commonwealth, and so in the commonwealth of the individual virtuous thoughts redeem the evil (121-126). This last explains the saying that the cities of the Levites are "ransomed for ever," for this ransom of the soul is a perpetual process (127). This again leads on to a discussion why these cities were assigned as a refuge for the homicide. The Levite like the homicide is a fugitive—from natural ties (129). He too has slain—wicked doctrines as in Exod. xxxii. (130), and he represents the merciful side of God's legislative power, as the homicide does the punitive, for he slew "whom the Lord delivered into his hand" (131-133). Finally, when the sanctification of the Levite is assigned to the day when God smote Egypt, we are taught that since that smiting is perpetual, the sanctification is also perpetual (134-135).

We return for a moment to Abel and his offering of the fat, but pass at once to a comment on the fact that neither heart nor brain, the seat of the dominant principle, appear in the sacrificial ritual. Only when this mind of ours has been purged of its tendency to lapses will it be admitted as a proper part of the ὄλοκαύτωμα or "whole burnt offering" (136-end).

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN

There are two special points in connexion with the text which require mention.

The first is that we have for this treatise and that of Quis Rer. Div. Her. the valuable help of a papyrus discovered in Upper Egypt in 1889. Not only is this papyrus considerably older than the other mss. to which it is most akin, but the analysis given by Cohn goes far to justify his opinion that it presents on the whole a better text.

The other is the history of the sections 21-32, which do not appear in this place in Mangey's edition nor in Yonge's translation. These sections containing the allegory of the two women had been incorporated in an otherwise spurious treatise, De Mercede Meretricis. In consequence the archetype of the mss. from which Turnebus made his edition of 1552 omitted <sup>a</sup> them here, and this was followed in subsequent editions. That their proper place is in this treatise is shown not only by their presence in other mss., but also by the evidence that Ambrose, whose treatise on Cain and Abel draws largely from Philo, evidently had these sections before him.

<sup>a</sup> "Inepte," says Cohn. But most people will feel that except for the harshness of the connexion of 20 with 33, though it was patched up in a way by the mss. which omitted it, the treatise is improved by their absence. The picture has a certain vigour, but is not on the whole in Philo's best vein, and the catalogue of vices with which it concludes is surely ridiculous.

ΠΕΡΙ ΓΕΝΕΣΕΩΣ ΑΒΕΛ ΚΑΙ ΩΝ ΑΥΤΟΣ
 ΤΕ ΚΑΙ Ο ΑΔΕΛΦΟΣ ΑΥΤΟΥ ΚΑΙΝ
 ΙΕΡΟΥΡΓΟΥΣΙΝ

<sup>1</sup>
 [163] I. “Καὶ προσέθηκε τεκεῖν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ
 τὸν “Αβελ” (Gen. iv. 2). ἡ τινὸς πρόσθεσις ἀφαίρεσις ἐστὶν ἑτέρου, ὡς ἀριθμητικῆς μορίων,
 καὶ ψυχῆς λογισμῶν. εἰ δὴ τὸν “Αβελ προσ-τίθεσθαι φατέον, τὸν Κάιν ἀφαιρεῖσθαι νομιστέον.
 ἵνα δὲ μὴ τὸ τῶν ὀνομάτων ἀσύνητες ἐπισκοτῆ
 πολλοῖς, τὴν ἐμφαινομένην φιλοσοφίαν ἀκριβοῦν <sup>2</sup> ὡς ἂν οἶόν τε ἢ πειρασόμεθα. δύο τοίνυν δόξαι εἶναι συμβέβηκεν ἐναντίας καὶ μαχομένας ἀλλήλαις,
 τὴν μὲν τῷ νῶ πάντα ἐπιγράφουσαν ὡς ἡγεμόνι
 τῶν ἐν τῷ λογίζεσθαι ἢ αἰσθάνεσθαι ἢ κινεῖσθαι ἢ ἴσχεσθαι, τὴν δὲ τῷ θεῷ ἐπομένην ὡς αὐτοῦ
 δημιουργίαν οὔσαν<sup>1</sup> τῆς μὲν προτέρας ἐκτύπωσις
 ἐστὶν ὁ Κάιν καλούμενος κτῆσις παρὰ τὸ πάντα

<sup>1</sup> These words are regarded by Cohn as corrupt and the result of an attempt to complete a sentence, the real ending of which was illegible. His reasons are (1) that to describe the δόξα as believing itself to be God's handiwork is illogical; (2) more important, that Ambrose, who translates the passage almost literally, has “altera quae tamquam operatori et creatori omnium Deo defert et eius tamquam parentis atque rectoris subdit omnia gubernaculo.” Following this Cohn supposes something as follows: τὴν δὲ τῷ θεῷ ἐπομένην καὶ ἐπ' αὐτὸν πάντα ἀναφέρουσαν ὡς πατέρα καὶ ἡγέμονα.

ON THE BIRTH OF ABEL AND THE SACRIFICES OFFERED BY HIM AND BY HIS BROTHER CAIN

I. AND He <sup>a</sup> added to this that she brought forth Abel his brother (Gen. iv. 2). The addition of one thing implies the removal of some other, as in the case of arithmetical quantities or of our successive inward thoughts.<sup>b</sup> If we must say that Abel was added we must suppose that Cain was taken away. In case these unfamiliar terms may cause perplexity to many, I will attempt to give as clear an account as I can of the underlying philosophical thought. It is a fact that there are two opposite and contending views of life, one which ascribes all things to the mind as our master, whether we are using our reason or our senses, in motion or at rest, the other which follows God, whose handiwork it believes itself to be. The first of these views is figured by Cain who is called Possession, because he

<sup>a</sup> That Philo takes the subject to be God appears clearly in 10; see note on De Cher. 40.

<sup>b</sup> The meaning is shown in Ambrose's (see p. 93) adaptation: "addito enim numero fit alius numerus, aboletur superior, et cogitatio nova excludit superiorem." Possibly some equivalent of this has fallen out of the text.

- [164] κεκτῆσθαι δοκεῖν, τῆς δὲ ἐτέρας ὁ "Αβελ, | ἔρμη-
 3 νεύεται γὰρ ἀναφέρων ἐπὶ θεόν. ἀμφοτέρας μὲν
 οὖν τὰς δόξας ὠδίνει μία ψυχὴ· ἀνάγκη δὲ αὐτάς, ὅταν ἀποκουηθῶσι, διακριθῆναι· συνοικεῖν γὰρ πολεμίους ἄχρι παντὸς ἀμήχανον. ἕως μὲν οὖν οὐκ
 ἔτεκεν ἡ ψυχὴ τὸ φιλόθεον δόγμα τὸν "Αβελ, διητᾶτο τὸ φίλαυτον ὁ Κάιν <ἐν> αὐτῇ· ὁπότε δὲ
 τὴν πρὸς τὸ αἴτιον ὁμολογίαν ἐγέννησε, τὴν πρὸς
 4 τὸν δοκησίσοφον νοῦν ἐξέλιπε. II. δηλώσει δὲ ἐναργέστερον ταῦτα καὶ τὸ τῇ ὑπομονῇ χρησιμωδηθὲν 'Ρεβέκκα (Gen. xxv. 21 ff.). τὰς γὰρ μαχο-μένας δύο φύσεις ἀγαθοῦ καὶ κακοῦ συλλαβοῦσα
 καὶ ἑκατέραν ἄκρως φαντασιωθεῖσα κατὰ τὴν τῆς
 φρονήσεως ἐπικέλευσιν, ἀνασκιρτώσας αὐτὰς ἰδοῦσα
 καὶ τινα τοῦ μέλλοντος πολέμου δι' ἀκροβολισμῶν
 προάγωνα ποιουμένας, ἰκετεύει τὸν θεόν, τί τέ
 ἐστι τὸ πάθος αὐτῇ παραστῆσαι καὶ τίς ἂν ἴασις
 αὐτοῦ γένοιτο· ὁ δὲ πυνθανομένη φησί· "δύο
 ἔθνη ἐν τῇ γαστρί σου ἐστι"—τὸ μὲν πάθος τοῦτο, ἀγαθοῦ καὶ κακοῦ γένεσις—, ἀλλὰ "καὶ δύο λαοὶ
 ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας σου διασταλήσονται"—ἡ ἴασις ἦδε, διασταλῆναι καὶ χωρισθῆναι ταῦτα ἀπ' ἀλλήλων
 καὶ μηκέτι τὸν αὐτὸν χῶρον οἰκῆσαι.
 5 Προσθεῖς οὖν ὁ θεὸς τῇ ψυχῇ καλὸν δόγμα τὸν
 "Αβελ ἀφείλεν αὐτῆς δόξαν ἄτοπον τὸν Κάιν. καὶ
 γὰρ 'Αβραὰμ ἐκλιπὼν τὰ θνητὰ "προστίθεται τῷ
 θεοῦ λαῶ" (Gen. xxv. 8), καρπούμενος ἀφθαρ-σίαν, ἴσος ἀγγέλοις γεγονώς· ἄγγελοι γὰρ στρατός

<sup>a</sup> Or "received a vivid impression of each," which agrees better with the general meaning of φαντασιῶσθαι, though not so well with κατὰ τὴν τῆς φρονήσεως ἐπικέλευσιν.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 2-5

thinks he possesses all things, the other by Abel, whose name means "one who refers (all things) to God." Now both these views or conceptions lie in the womb of the single soul. But when they are brought to the birth they must needs be separated, for enemies cannot live together for ever. Thus so long as the soul had not brought forth the God-loving principle in Abel, the self-loving principle in Cain made her his dwelling. But when she bore the principle which acknowledges the Cause, she abandoned that which looks to the mind with its fancied wisdom. II. This will be shown still more clearly by the oracle which was given to Rebecca or Patience (Gen. xxv. 21 ff.). She had conceived the two contending natures of good and evil and considered earnestly, as wisdom bade her, the character of both,<sup>a</sup> when she perceived them leaping and as in a skirmish preluding the war that should be between them. And therefore she besought God to show her what had befallen her, and how it might be remedied. He answered her question thus: "two nations are in thy womb." That was what had befallen her—to bear both good and evil. But again "two peoples shall be separated from thy womb." This is the remedy, that good and evil be separated and set apart from each other and no longer have the same habitation.

So then when God added the good conviction Abel to the soul, he took away the foolish opinion Cain. So too, when Abraham left this mortal life, "he is added to the people of God"<sup>b</sup> (Gen. xxv. 8), in that he inherited incorruption and became equal to the angels, for angels—those unbodied and blessed souls

<sup>b</sup> The LXX. has προσετέθη πρὸς τὸν λαὸν αὐτοῦ.

εἰσι θεοῦ, ἀσώματοι καὶ εὐδαίμονες ψυχαί· ὁ τε ἀσκητῆς τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον Ἰακώβ λέγεται προστίθεσθαι τῷ βελτίονι (Gen. xlix. 33), ὅτε ἐξ-
 6 ἔλιπε τὸ χεῖρον. ὁ δὲ αὐτομαθοῦς ἐπιστήμης ἀξιωθείς Ἰσαὰκ ἐκλείπει μὲν καὶ αὐτὸς ὅσον σωματοειδές αὐτοῦ τῇ ψυχῇ συνύφαντο, προστίθεται δὲ καὶ προσκληροῦται οὐκέθ' ὡς οἱ πρότεροι λαῶ, "γένει" δέ, καθάπερ φησὶ Μωυσῆς (Gen. xxxv. 29)· γένος μὲν γὰρ ἐν τῷ ἀνωτάτῳ,
 7 λαὸς δὲ ὄνομα πλειόνων· ὅσοι μὲν οὖν μαθήσει καὶ διδασκαλίᾳ προκόψαντες ἐτελειώθησαν, προσκληροῦνται πλείοσιν· οὐ γὰρ ὀλίγος ἐστὶν ἀριθμὸς τῶν ἐξ ἀκοῆς καὶ ὑφηγήσεως μαυθανόντων, οὓς λαὸν ὠνόμασεν· οἱ δὲ ἀνθρώπων μὲν ὑφηγήσεις ἀπολελοιπότες, μαθηταὶ δὲ εὐφυνεῖς θεοῦ γεγονότες, τὴν ἄπονον ἐπιστήμην ἀνειληφότες, εἰς τὸ ἀφθαρτον καὶ τελεώτατον γένος μετανίστανται
 [165] κληρον ἀμείνω τῶν | προτέρων ἐνδεδεγμένοι, ὧν ὁ Ἰσαὰκ θιασώτης ἀνωμολόγηται.

8 III. Δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ ἕτερον τοιοῦτον * * * [νοῦν ἀθάνατον.]<sup>1</sup> εἰσὶ δὲ οὓς ἀνωτέρω προαγαγὼν εἶδη μὲν καὶ γένη πάντα ὑπερπτήναι παρεσκεύασεν, ἴδρυσεν δὲ πλησίον ἑαυτοῦ, καθὰ καὶ Μωυσῆς ᾧ φησι· "σὺ δὲ αὐτοῦ στήθι μετ' ἐμοῦ" (Deut. v. 31). ἡνίκα γοῦν τελευτᾶν ἔμελλεν οὗτος, οὐκ ἐκλιπὼν προστίθεται ὡσπερ οἱ πρότεροι μήτε πρόσθεσιν μήτε ἀφαίρεσιν κεχωρηκῶς, ἀλλὰ "διὰ ῥήματος" τοῦ αἰτίου μετανίσταται (Deut. xxxiv.

<sup>1</sup> The sentence does not make sense as it stands. In the Papyrus there is a lacuna of four lines after τοιοῦτον followed by ἣν θανατον.

<sup>a</sup> LXX. προσετέθη πρὸς τὸ γένος αὐτοῦ. See App. p. 488.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 5-8

—are the host and people of God. In the same way again the Practiser Jacob, we read, is added to something better, when he left the worse (Gen. xlix. 33).

Once more there is Isaac to whom was granted the higher gift of self-learnt knowledge. He too abandoned all such bodily elements as had been interwoven with the soul, and is added and allotted to another company; but not this time, with the others, to a people, but to a 'race' or 'genus,' as Moses says (Gen. xxxv. 29).<sup>a</sup> For genus is one, that which is above all, but people is a name for many. Those who have advanced to perfection as pupils under a teacher have their place among many others; for those who learn by hearing and instruction are no small number, and these he calls a people. But those who have dispensed with the instruction of men and have become apt pupils of God receive the free unlaboured knowledge and are translated into the genus of the imperishable and fully perfect. Theirs is a happier lot than the lot of the people, and in this sacred band Isaac stands confessed as a chorister.

III. A further thought of the same nature is revealed to us. . . . There are still others, whom God has advanced even higher, and has trained them to soar above species and genus alike and stationed them beside himself. Such is Moses to whom He says "stand here with Me"<sup>b</sup> (Deut. v. 31). And so when Moses was about to die we do not hear of him "leaving" or "being added" like those others. No room in him for adding or taking away. But through the 'Word' of the Supreme Cause he is trans-

<sup>b</sup> The context perhaps slightly suggests that Philo took these words, which he quotes several times, as "stand with Me Myself."

5), δι' οὗ καὶ ὁ σύμπας κόσμος ἐδημιουργεῖτο· ἵνα μάθῃς, ὅτι τὸν σοφὸν ἰσοτίμον κόσμῳ ὁ θεὸς ἡγείται τῷ αὐτῷ λόγῳ καὶ τὸ πᾶν ἐργαζόμενος καὶ τὸν τέλειον ἀπὸ τῶν περιγείων ἀνάγων ὡς
 9 ἑαυτὸν. οὐ μὴν οὐδέ, ὅτε τοῖς περιγείοις χρήσας αὐτὸν εἴασεν ἐνομιλεῖν, ἄρχοντας ἢ βασιλέως κοινὴν τινα ἀρετὴν ἀνῆπτεν αὐτῷ, καθ' ἣν ἀνὰ κράτος ἡγεμονεύσει τῶν τῆς ψυχῆς παθῶν, ἀλλ' εἰς θεὸν αὐτὸν ἐχειροτόνει πᾶσαν τὴν περὶ τὸ σῶμα χώραν καὶ τὸν ἡγεμόνα αὐτῆς νοῦν ὑπήκοα καὶ δοῦλα ἀποφύνας· “ δίδωμι γάρ σε” φησί “ θεὸν Φαραώ” (Exod. vii. 1). θεὸς δὲ ἔλλειψιν ἢ πρόσθεσιν οὐκ ἀνέχεται πλήρης καὶ
 10 ἰσαίτατος ὢν ἑαυτῷ. παρὸ καὶ τὴν ταφὴν λέγεται μηδὲ εἰς εἰδέναι τούτου (Deut. xxxiv. 6). τίς γὰρ ἂν γένοιτο ἱκανὸς τὴν πρὸς τὸν ὄντα μετανάστασιν ψυχῆς τελείας κατανοῆσαι; οὐδὲ αὐτὴν οἶμαι τὴν τοῦθ' ὑπομένουσαν εἰδέναι τὴν βελτίωσιν αὐτῆς, ἅτε κατ' ἐκεῖνον τὸν χρόνον ἐπιθειάζουσαν· τῷ γὰρ εὖ πάσχοντι συμβούλω ὁ θεὸς περὶ ὧν μέλλει χαρίζεσθαι οὐ χρῆται, μὴ προλαβόντι δὲ τὰς εὐεργεσίας ἀφθότους εἴωθεν ὀρέγειν.

Τοιοῦτόν ἐστι τὸ προσθεῖναι θεὸν γένεσιν ἀγαθοῦ τελείου διανοία· τὸ δὲ ἀγαθὸν ὀσιότης ἐστίν, ἧς ὄνομα Ἄβελ.

11 IV. “ Καὶ ἐγένετο Ἄβελ ποιμὴν προβάτων, Κάιν δὲ ἦν ἐργαζόμενος τὴν γῆν” (Gen. iv. 2). τί δήποτε πρεσβύτερον εἰσαγαγὼν τοῦ Ἄβελ τὸν Κάιν νυνὶ τὴν τάξιν μετατέθεικεν, ὡς τοῦ νεω-

<sup>a</sup> LXX. ἐτελεύτησε διὰ ῥήματος Κυρίου, A.V. “ according to the word of the Lord.”

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 488.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 8-11

lated (Deut. xxxiv. 5),<sup>a</sup> even through that Word by which also the whole universe was formed. Thus you may learn that God prizes the Wise Man as the world, for that same Word, by which He made the universe, is that by which He draws the perfect man from things earthly to Himself.

And even when He sent him as a loan to the earthly sphere and suffered him to dwell therein, He gifted him with no ordinary excellence, such as that which kings and rulers have, wherewith to hold sway and sovereignty over the passions of the soul, but He appointed him as god, placing all the bodily region and the mind which rules it in subjection and slavery to him. "I give thee," He says, "as god to Pharaoh"<sup>b</sup> (Exod. vii. 1); but God is not susceptible of addition or diminution, being fully and unchangeably himself. And therefore we are told that no man knows his grave (Deut. xxxiv. 6). For who has powers such that he could perceive the passing of a perfect soul to Him that "is"? Nay I judge that the soul itself which is passing thus does not know of its change to better things, for at that hour it is filled with the spirit of God. For God does not consult with those whom He blesses as to the gifts He means to bestow. His wont is to extend His loving-kindness unstinted to those who have no thought of them.

Such is the meaning of the words that God added to the mind the birth of the perfect good. The good is holiness and the name of holiness is Abel.<sup>b</sup>

IV. "And Abel became a shepherd of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground" (Gen. iv. 2). Why is it that while he showed us Cain as older than Abel, he has now changed the order and mentions the

- τέρου μεμνησθαι πρότερον κατὰ τὴν τῶν βίων προαίρεσιν; εἰκὸς γὰρ ἦν τὸν μὲν πρεσβύτατον πρότερον ἐπὶ γεωργίαν ἐλθεῖν, τὸν δὲ νεώτερον
- 12 αὐθις ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν θρεμμάτων ἐπιμέλειαν. ἀλλὰ
 [166] γὰρ οὐ τὰ εἰκότα καὶ πιθανὰ | Μωυσῆς ἀσπάζεται, τὴν δὲ ἀλήθειαν ἀκραιφνή μεταδιώκει· καὶ ὅταν γε μόνος ἰδίᾳ τῷ θεῷ προσέρχηται, μετὰ παρρησίας φησὶ μὴ εἶναι εὐλογος—ἴσον τῷ μὴ τῶν εὐλόγων καὶ πιθανῶν ἐφίεσθαι—, πεπονθέναι δὲ τοῦτο πρὸ τῆς ἐχθρῆς καὶ τρίτης, ἀφ' οὗ τὸν θεὸν ἄρξασθαι διαλέγεσθαι ὡς θεράποντι αὐτῷ
- 13 (Exod. iv. 10). τοῖς μὲν γὰρ εἰς τὸν τοῦ βίου σάλον καὶ κλύδωνα παρεληλυθόσιν ἐπινηχομένοις ἀνάγκη φορεῖσθαι, μηδενὸς ἐχυροῦ τῶν ἐπιστήμης ἐνειλημμένοις, εἰκότων δὲ καὶ πιθανῶν ἠρτημένοις· τῷ δὲ θεοῦ θεραπευτῇ πρεπῶδες ἀληθείας περιέχεσθαι, τὴν τῶν εὐλόγων εἰκαστικὴν καὶ
- 14 ἀβέβαιον μυθοποιίαν χαίρειν ἐῶντι. τί οὖν καὶ τὸ ἐν τούτοις ἀληθές; κακίαν ἀρετῆς χρόνῳ μὲν εἶναι πρεσβυτέραν, δυνάμει δὲ καὶ ἀξιώματι νεωτέραν. ὅταν μὲν οὖν ἡ γένεσις ἀμφοῖν εἰσάγηται, προεκτρεχέτω ὁ Κáιν· ὅταν δὲ ἐπιτηδεύσεων σύγκρισις ἐξετάζηται, φθανέτω ὁ
- 15 Ἄβελ. γενομένῳ γὰρ τῷ ζῳῷ συμβέβηκεν εὐθὺς ἔτ' ἐκ σπαργάνων, ἄχρις ἂν ἡ νεωτεροποιὸς ἀκμῆς ἡλικία τὸν ζέοντα φλογμὸν τῶν παθῶν σβέση, συντρόφους ἔχειν ἀφροσύνην ἀκολασίαν ἀδικίαν φόβον δειλίαν, τὰς ἄλλας συγγενεῖς κῆρας, ὧν ἐκάστην ἀνατρέφουσι καὶ συναύξουσι τιτθαὶ καὶ παιδαγωγοὶ καὶ ἐθῶν καὶ νομίμων

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 488, 489.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 11-15

younger first, when he comes to speak of their choice of occupations? For the probability was that the elder proceeded to his husbandry first, and the younger at a later time to his charge of the flock. But Moses sets no value on probabilities and plausibilities, but follows after truth in its purity. And when he comes alone to God apart from all, he frankly says that he has no gift of speech (by which he means that he has no desire for eloquence or persuasiveness), and this he says has been his condition from a few days ago when God first began to talk with him as His servant (Exod. iv. 10).<sup>a</sup> Those who have fallen into the surge and stormy sea of life must needs float on, not holding firmly to any strong support which knowledge gives, but trailed along by the flotsam of the probable and the plausible. But for the servant of God it is meet to hold fast to truth and spurn the fabulous inventions of eloquence, which are but baseless guesswork.<sup>b</sup>

What then is the special truth which here he brings before us? Surely that in point of time vice is senior to virtue, but that in point of value and honour the reverse is the case. And therefore when the birth of each is brought before us, Cain may have the precedence. When we make a comparison of the occupations of the two, Abel should take the lead.

<sup>b</sup>For when the life of man begins, from the very cradle till the time when the age of maturity brings the great change and quenches the fiery furnace of the passions, folly, incontinence, injustice, fear, cowardice, and all the kindred maladies of soul are his inseparable companions, and each of them is fostered and increased by nurses and tutors and by

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 489.

εὐσέβειαν μὲν ἐλαυνόντων δεισιδαιμονίαν δὲ πρᾶγμα ἀδελφὸν ἀσεβεία κατασκευαζόντων εἰσηγήσεις καὶ 16 θέσεις. ὅταν δὲ ἤδη παρηβήσῃ καὶ ἡ τῶν παθῶν παλμώδης νόσος χαλάσῃ, καθάπερ νηνεμίας ἐπιγενομένης, ἄρχεται τις γαλήνην ἄγειν ὅψε καὶ μόλις βεβαιότητι ἀρετῆς ἰδρυθεῖς, ἢ τὸν ἐπάλληλον καὶ συνεχῆ σεισμόν, βαρύτατον κακὸν ψυχῆς, ἐπράυνεν.

Οὕτως μὲν δὴ τὰ χρόνου πρεσβεία οἴσεται κακία, τὰ δὲ ἀξιώματος καὶ τιμῆς καὶ εὐκλείας ἢ ἀρετῆς. πιστὸς δὲ τούτου μάρτυς ὁ νομοθέτης
 17 αὐτός· τὸν γὰρ ἀφροσύνης ἐπώνυμον Ἡσαῦ εἰσαγαγὼν χρόνῳ πρεσβύτερον τῷ γενέσει μὲν νεωτέρῳ ἐπωνύμῳ δὲ ἀσκήσεως τῶν καλῶν Ἰακώβ χαρίζεται τὰ πρεσβεία· ὁ δὲ οὐ πρότερον αὐτὰ
 [167] φέρεσθαι | διαγνώσεται, ἢ καθάπερ ἐν ἀγῶνι τὸν ἀντίπαλον ἀπειπεῖν χεῖρας ὑπ' ἀσθενείας καθέντα καὶ τὰ βραβεῖα καὶ τὸν στέφανον παραχωρήσαι τῷ πόλεμον ἄσπονδον καὶ ἀκήρυκτον πρὸς τὰ πάθη πεποιημένῳ· “ἀπέδοτο” γὰρ φησι “τὰ
 18 πρωτοτόκια τῷ Ἰακώβ” (Gen. xxv. 33), ὁμολογήσας ἀντικρυσ, ὅτι τὰ δυνάμει πρῶτα καὶ κατ' ἀρετὴν τίμια φαύλου μὲν ἐστὶν οὐδενός, μόνου δὲ τοῦ σοφίας ἐραστοῦ, καθάπερ καὶ αὐλὸς καὶ λύρα καὶ τὰ ἄλλα μουσικῆς ὄργανα μόνου τοῦ μουσικοῦ.
 19 V. Περὶ δὲ τοῦ δόγματος τούτου καὶ νόμον ἀναγράφει πάννυ καλῶς καὶ συμφερόντως τιθεῖς. ἔχει δὲ ὡδε· “ἐὰν γένωνται ἀνθρώπων δύο γυναῖκες,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 489.

<sup>b</sup> Literally, dropped his hands.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 15-19

the fact that the rules and customs which impress and exercise their authority upon him expel piety and set up in its stead that superstition which is the sister of impiety. But when the prime is past, and the throbbing fever of the passions is abated, as though the storm winds had dropped, there begins in the man a late and hard-won calm. Virtue has lulled to rest the worst enemy of the soul, that commotion whose waves of passion follow each other in swift succession, and in that firm support of virtue he stands secure.<sup>a</sup>

Thus vice will carry off the honour of precedence in time, virtue the precedence in repute and honour and good name. And to this truth we have a faithful witness in the legislator himself. For he shows us Esau, who is named after his folly,<sup>a</sup> as elder in point of age, but it is to the younger brother named from his discipline and practice of things excellent, even Jacob, that he awards the prize of precedence. Yet Jacob will not judge himself worthy to accept this prize until, as in some contest of the arena, his adversary has surrendered<sup>b</sup> in exhaustion and yielded up the victor's crown to him who has waged war without parley or quarter against the passions. For Esau 'sold,' we read, the 'birth-right to Jacob' (Gen. xxv. 33), in full admission that as the flute and lyre and the other instruments of music belong only to the musician, so all that is supreme in value, and all to which virtue gives its place of honour, belong not to any of the wicked, but to the lover of wisdom only.

V. Again the same lesson is taught in a law which Moses enacts, a law both excellent and profitable. It runs thus. "If a man have two wives, one loved

PHILO

μία αὐτῶν ἡγαπημένη καὶ μία μισουμένη, καὶ τέκωσιν αὐτῷ ἢ ἡγαπημένη καὶ ἢ μισουμένη καὶ γένηται ὁ υἱὸς τῆς μισουμένης πρωτότοκος, καὶ ἔσται ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, ἣ ἂν κληροδοτῇ τοῖς υἱοῖς αὐτοῦ τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῦ, οὐ δυνήσεται πρωτοτοκεῦσαι τῷ υἱῷ τῆς ἡγαπημένης ὑπεριδὼν τὸν υἱὸν τῆς μισουμένης τὸν πρωτότοκον, ἀλλὰ τὸν πρωτότοκον υἱὸν τῆς μισουμένης ἐπιγνώσεται δοῦναι αὐτῷ διπλᾶ ἀπὸ πάντων ὧν ἂν εὗρεθῇ αὐτῷ, ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀρχὴ τέκνων αὐτοῦ καὶ τούτῳ καθήκει τὰ πρωτοτόκια" (Deut. xxi. 15-20 17). ἐπίγνωθι, ὦ ψυχῆ, καὶ γνώρισον,

[II. 265] τίς ἐστιν ἡ μισουμένη καὶ τίς ὁ τῆς μισουμένης υἱός, καὶ εὐθύς αἰσθήσῃ, ὅτι ἄλλῳ μὲν οὐδενί, μόνῳ δὲ τούτῳ καθήκει τὰ πρεσβεῖα. | δύο γὰρ ἡμῶν ἐκάστῳ συνοικοῦσι γυναῖκες ἐχθραὶ καὶ δυσμενεῖς ἀλλήλαις, τῶν ζηλοτυπίας τὸν ψυχικὸν οἶκον ἀναπιμπλάσαι φιλονεικιῶν· τούτων τὴν μὲν ἑτέραν ἀγαπῶμεν χειροθήτη καὶ τιθασὸν καὶ φιλιτάτην καὶ οἰκειοτάτην αὐτοῖς νομίζοντες, καλεῖται δὲ ἡδονή· τὴν δὲ ἑτέραν ἐχθαίρομεν ἀτίθασον ἀνήμερον ἐξηγριωμένην πολεμιωτάτην ἡγούμενοι, 21 ὄνομα δὲ [καὶ] ταύτης ἐστὶν ἀρετή. ἡ

μὲν οὖν προσέρχεται πόρνης καὶ χαμαιτύπης τὸν τρόπον τεθρυμμένη, κεκλασμένῳ τῷ βαδίσματι ὑπὸ τρυφῆς τῆς ἄγαν καὶ χλιδῆς, σαλεύουσα τὸ ὄφθαλμῷ, οἷς τὰς τῶν νέων ἀγκιστρεύεται ψυχὰς, θράσος μετ' ἀναισχυντίας ἐμβλέπουσα, τὸν αὐχένα ἐπαίρουσα, πλέον τῆς φύσεως ἑαυτὴν ἐνορθιάζουσα,<sup>1</sup> σεσαρυῖα καὶ κιχλίζουσα, περιέργῳ ποικιλίᾳ τὰς τῆς κεφαλῆς τρίχας ἀναπεπλεγμένη, ὑπογεγραμμένη τὴν ὄψιν, ἐγκεκαλυμμένη τὰς ὀφρῦς,

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 19-21

and the other hated, and each bear a son to him, and the son of her that is hated is the first-born, it shall be that on the day on which he allots his goods to his sons he shall not be able to give the right of the first-born to the son of her whom he loves, and set aside the first-born, the son of her whom he hates, but he shall acknowledge the first-born, the son of her whom he hates, to give him a double portion of all that he has gotten; for he is the beginning of his children, and to him belong the rights of the first-born" (Deut. xxi. 15-17).

Mark well then, my soul, and understand who is she that is hated, and who is her son, and thou wilt straightway perceive that to this last alone and to none other belong the honours of the elder. For each of us is mated with two wives, who hate and loathe each other, and they fill the house of the soul with their jealous contentions. And one of these we love, because we find her winning and gentle, and we think her our nearest and dearest. Her name is pleasure. The other we hate; we think her rough, ungentle, crabbed and our bitter enemy. Her name is virtue.

<sup>a</sup> So Pleasure comes languishing in the guise of a harlot or courtesan. Her gait has the looseness which her extravagant wantonness and luxury has bred; the lascivious roll of her eyes is a bait to entice the souls of the young; her look speaks of boldness and shamelessness; her neck is held high; she assumes a stature which Nature has not given her; she grins and giggles; her hair is dressed in curious and elaborate plaits; under her eyes are pencil lines; her eyebrows are smothered

---

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 489, 490.

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps ἐξορθ. or ἐπορθ.

- [II. 266] θερμολουσίαις ἐπαλλήλοις | χρωμένη, ἔρευθος εἰργασμένη, πολυτελεῖς ἐσθῆτας ἐπηγθισμένας ἄκρωσ ἀμπεχομένη, περιβραχιόνια καὶ περιαιυχένια καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα χρυσοῦ καὶ λίθων πολυτελῶν δημιουργηθέντα κόσμος ἐστὶ γυναικείος περικαθειμένη, μύρων εὐωδεστάτων ἀποπνέουσα, τὴν ἀγορὰν οἰκίαν νομίζουσα, τριοδίτις σοβάς, χήτει γνησίου
- 22 κάλλους τὸ νόθον μεταδιώκουσα. συνομαρτοῦσι δὲ αὐτῇ τῶν συνηθεστάτων πανουργία
προπέτεια ἀπιστία κολακεία φενακισμὸς ἀπάτη ψευδολογία ψευδορκία ἀσέβεια ἀδικία ἀκολασία,
ὧν ἐν μέσῳ καθάπερ ἡγεμῶν χοροῦ σταῖσά φησι
πρὸς τὸν νοῦν τάδε· “εἰσὶν, ὦ οὗτος, θησαυροὶ πάντων ἀγαθῶν ὅσα ἀνθρώπεια παρ’ ἐμοί—τὰ γὰρ
θεῖα ἐν οὐρανῶ—, ὧν ἐκτὸς οὐδὲν εὐρήσεις· τούτους, ἣν ἐθέλης μοι συνοικεῖν, τοὺς θησαυροὺς
ἀναπετάσασα χρήσιν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν τῶν ἐνότων
- 23 ἀφθονωτάτην εἰσαεὶ παρέξω. βούλομαι δέ σοι
προειπεῖν τὸ πλῆθος τῶν ταμιευομένων ἀγαθῶν,
ἵνα κὰν συναινῆς ἐκὼν ἀσμενίζης, κὰν ἀποστρέφῃ
μὴ ἀγνοῶν ἀρνή· ἀνεσίς ἐστι παρ’ ἐμοὶ καὶ ἄδεια
καὶ ἐκεχειρία καὶ πόνων ἀμελετησία καὶ χρωμάτων ποικιλία καὶ κλάσεις ἐμμελέσταται φωνῆς, σιτία πολυτελῆ καὶ ποτά, ὄσμων ἡδίστων παμ-πληθεῖς διαφοραί, συνεχεῖς ἔρωτες, ἀπαιδαγωγῆτοι παιδιαί, μίξεις ἀνεξέταστοι, ἀνουθέτητοι λόγοι,
ἔργα ἀνυπεύθυνα, ἀφρόντιστος βίος, μαλακώτατος
- 24 ὕπνος, κόρος ἀπλήρωτος. ἐὰν οὖν ἐθε-
λήσης σὺν ἐμοὶ ποιεῖσθαι τὰς διατριβάς, ἐκ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 21-24

in paint ;<sup>a</sup> she revels perpetually in the warmth of the bath ; her flush is artificial ; her costly raiment is broidered lavishly with flowers ; bracelets and necklaces and every other feminine ornament wrought of gold and jewels hang round her ; her breath is laden with fragrant scents ; a strumpet of the streets, she takes the market-place for her home ; devoid of true beauty, she pursues the false.

In her train come a sample of her closest friends, villainy, recklessness, faithlessness, flattery, imposture, deceit, falsehood, perjury, impiety, injustice, profligacy ; and taking her stand in their midst, like the leader of a chorus, she speaks thus to the Mind. " See here," she says, " I have coffers containing all human blessings—such as belong to the gods are in heaven—and outside these coffers you will find no good thing. These I will open, if you will dwell with me, and give you unceasing and unstinted use and enjoyment of all that is therein. But first I wish to recount to you the multitude of joys within my store, so that if you assent it may be with willingness and gladness, and if you turn from them it will not be through ignorance that you refuse. With me you will find freedom from the sense of restraint, from the fear of punishment, from the stress of business, from the discipline of labour ; you will find colours all and sundry, sweet modulations of melodious sounds, costly kinds of food and drink, abundant varieties of delicious perfumes, amours without ceasing, frolics unregulated, chamberings unrestricted, language unrepressed, deeds uncensored, life without care, sleep soft and sweet, satiety ever unfilled.

If then you are willing to pass your time with me, I will be your cateress

PHILO

πάντων εὐτρεπίσασά σοι τὰ ἀρμόζοντα δωρη-σομαι, συνεπισκοποῦσα τί ἂν φαγῶν ἢ πιῶν γανωθείης ἢ τί τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς ἰδῶν ἢ τοῖς ὠσίν ἀκούσας ἢ μυκτῆρσιν ὀσφρόμενος ἤσθειης· ἐλλείψει
 δὲ οὐδὲν ὧν ἂν ἐπιθυμήσης, πλείω γὰρ τῶν ἀνα-25 λισκομένων εὐρήσεις τὰ γεννώμενα. φυτὰ γάρ ἔστιν ἐν τοῖς λεχθεῖσι θησαυροῖς ἀειθαλῆ, βλαστά-νοντα καὶ τίκτοντα καρποὺς ἐπαλλήλους, ὡς τὴν
 τῶν ὠραίων καὶ νέων ἀκμὴν ἐπιτρέχειν καὶ καταλαμβάνειν τοὺς ἤδη πεπανθέντας· πόλεμος οὐδὲ
 εἰς ἐμφύλιος ἢ ξενικὸς τὰ φυτὰ ταῦτα πώποτε
 ἔτεμεν, ἀλλ' ἀφ' οὗ τὸ πρῶτον αὐτὰ γῆ παρέλαβεν, ὡσπερ ἀγαθὴ τροφὸς τιθηνεῖται, ῥίζας μὲν οἰονεὶ
 θεμελίους εἰς τὸ κάτω βαλλομένη κραταιοτάτας,
 τὸ δὲ ὑπὲρ γῆς ἔρνος οὐρανόμηκες ἀνατείνασα,
 κλάδους δὲ ἐκφύσασα τῶν ἐν ζώοις χειρῶν καὶ
 ποδῶν ἀναλογοῦντα μιμήματα, πέταλα δὲ οἶον
 κόμας σκέπην ἐν ταυτῷ καὶ κόσμον ἐπανθῆσαι παρασκευάσασα, καρποὺς δὲ ἐπὶ τούτοις, ὧν ἕνεκα κακεῖνα."

[II. 267] Τούτων ἀκούσασα ἢ ἑτέρα—καὶ γὰρ ἐν ἀποκρύφῳ
 26 μὲν ἐν ἐπηκόῳ δὲ εἰστήκει—, δείσασα μὴ ποτε
 λαθῶν ὁ νοῦς αἰχμάλωτος ἀνδραποδισθεὶς ἀπαχθῆ
 τοσαύταις δωρεαῖς καὶ ὑποσχέσεσιν, ἔτι καὶ πρὸς
 τὴν ὄψιν ἐνδούς εὖ καὶ ποικίλως ἐπὶ ἀπάτη τετεχνιτευμένην—διὰ γὰρ τῶν περιάπτων καὶ μαγγανειῶν ἔνυττεν, ἐκλήλει, γαργαλισμοὺς ἐνειργά-ζετο—, παρελθοῦσα ἐξαίφνης ἐπιφαίνεται ἐλευθέρως
 καὶ ἀστῆς προσφερομένη πάντα, σταθερὸν βάδισμα,

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 24-26

and give you from them all what accords with your wishes. I will join you in considering what food and drink would charm your palate, what sight would please your eyes, what sound your ears, what perfume your nostrils. And of all that you desire nothing shall fail, for you shall find fresh sweets ever springing up to replace and more than replace those which are consumed. For in the treasure-houses I have spoken of are evergreen plants, which bloom and bear fruit in constant succession, so that the fullness of the fresh fruit, each in their season, ever pursues and overtakes those that have already ripened. These plants never once have known the ravages of civil or foreign war, but from the day that earth took them to her bosom, she cherishes them like a kindly nurse. She makes their roots dive deep and fast below like foundations, she extends the growth above the ground till it soars to heaven. She brings forth branches, which imitate and answer to the hands and feet of living creatures. She causes leaves to bloom like hair, at once to shelter and adorn, and then at the last she gives the fruit, the crowning purpose of the whole process."

When the other heard this, standing as she was, hidden from sight, yet within earshot, she feared lest the Mind should unawares be made captive and enslaved, and carried away by this wealth of gifts and promises. She feared too lest he should yield to the spell of that countenance so well and cunningly dressed to deceive, for by her talismans and witchcrafts the sorceress was pricking him, and working in him the itch of desire. So suddenly coming forward she appeared with all the marks of a free-born citizen, a firm tread, a serene counte-

PHILO

ἡρεμαιοτάτην ὄψιν, χρῶμα καὶ τὸ αἰδοῦς καὶ τὸ
 σώματος ἀκιβδηλεύτον, ἀψευδὲς ἦθος, ἀνόθευτον βίον, ἀποίκιλον γνώμην, λόγον οὐ φένακα, διανοίας ὑγιоῦς ἀληθέστατον μίμημα, σχέσιν ἄπλαστον, οὐ
 σεσοβημένην κίνησιν, μετρίαν ἐσθῆτα, τὸν χρυσοῦ 27 τιμιώτερον φρονήσεως καὶ ἀρετῆς κόσμον. συνεἶποντο δὲ αὐτῇ εὐσέβεια ὀσιότης ἀλήθεια θέμις
 ἀγιστεία εὐορκία δικαιοσύνη ἰσότης εὐσυνθεσία
 κοινωνία ἐχεθυμία σωφροσύνη κοσμιότης ἐγκράτεια
 πραότης ὀλιγοδεία εὐκολία αἰδῶς ἀπραγμοσύνη
 ἀνδρεία γενναιότης εὐβουλία προμήθεια φρόνησις
 προσοχή διόρθωσις εὐθυμία χρηστότης ἡμερότης
 ἡπιότης φιλάνθρωπία μεγαλοφροσύνη μακαριότης
 ἀγαθότης· ἐπιλείψει με ἡ ἡμέρα λέγοντα τὰ τῶν 28 κατ' εἶδος ἀρετῶν ὀνόματα. αὗται παρ' ἐκάτερα
 σταῖσαι μέσσην αὐτὴν ἔδορυφόρουν· ἡ δὲ σχῆμα τὸ
 σύνηθες ἑαυτῇ λαβοῦσα λόγων ἤρξατο τοιῶνδε· “τὴν τερατουργὸν καὶ μάχλον καὶ μυθολόγον εἶδον ἡδονὴν τραγικώτερον ἐνεσκευασμένην καὶ λιπαρῶς θαμινά σοι προσομιλοῦσαν,
 ὥστε—εἰμὶ γὰρ μισοπόνηρος φύσει—, δείσασα μὴ
 λάθης ἀπατηθεῖς καὶ συναινέσας κακοῖς μεγίστοις
 ὡς ὑπερβάλλουσιν ἀγαθοῖς, ἤξιῶσα τὰ προσόντα
 τῇ γυναικὶ μετὰ πάσης ἀληθείας προειπεῖν, ἵνα
 μηδὲν ἀγνοία τῶν συμφερόντων ἀπωσάμενος ἀ-29 βούλητον ἐμπορεύσῃ κακοπραγίαν. τὴν μὲν οὖν
 σκευὴν ἣ κέχρηται πᾶσαν ἀλλοτρίαν ἴσθι· τῶν γὰρ

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 26-29

nance, her person and her modesty alike without false colouring, her moral nature free from guile, her conduct from stain, her will from craft, her speech from falsehood, reflecting faithfully the honesty of her thoughts. Her carriage was unaffected, her movements quiet, her clothing plain, her adornment that of good sense and virtue, which is more precious than gold. And in her company came piety, holiness, truth, justice, religion, fidelity to oaths and bonds, righteousness, equity, fellow-feeling, self-control, temperance, orderliness, continence, meekness, frugality, contentment, modesty, a quiet temper, courage, nobility of spirit, good judgement, foresight, good sense, attentiveness, desire for amendment, cheerfulness, kindness, gentleness, mildness, humanity, high-mindedness, blessedness, goodness. The daylight will fail me while I recount the names of the specific virtues. Ranged on each side with her in their midst they formed her body-guard. She assuming her wonted mien thus began.

"I see yonder Pleasure, that lewd dealer in magic and inventor of fables, tricked out as for the stage, importunately seeking parley with you, and as it is my nature to hate evil, I feared lest being off your guard you should be deceived and consent to the worst of ills as though they were the highest good. Therefore, that you may not through sheer ignorance put from you aught that is to your advantage and purchase for yourself unwelcome misfortune, I judged it well to proclaim to you, before it was too late, the full truth of all that attaches to this woman. Know then that the finery with which she is bedizened is all borrowed. For of such things as make for true beauty she brings

PHILO

εἰς γνήσιον κάλλος οὐδὲν οἰκείον ἐξ ἑαυτῆς ἐπιφέρεται, περιῆπται δὲ δίκτυα καὶ πάγας ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ θήρα, νόθην καὶ κίβδηλὸν εὐμορφίαν, ἃ προἰδόμενος, ἦν εὖ φρονήσης, ἀτελῆ τὴν ἄγραν αὐτῇ παρασκευάσεις· ὀφθαλμοὺς μὲν γὰρ φανείσα ἠδύνει, ὦτα δὲ φθεγξαμένα λιγαίνει, ψυχὴν δὲ τὸ πλείστων ἄξιον κτῆμα καὶ διὰ τούτων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων μερῶν πέφυκε λυμαίνεσθαι.

τῶν δὲ περὶ αὐτὴν ἃ μὲν ἔμελλεν ἀκούσαντί σοι
 [II. 268] | προσηγῆ γενήσεσθαι διεξῆλθε, τὰ δὲ ἄλλα ὅσα μὴ ῥαστώνην εἶχεν ἀμύθητα ὄντα ἐβελοκακοῦσα ἐπεκρύψατο, οἷς οὐκ ἂν τινα συναινέσειν εὐχερῶς
 30 προσεδόκησεν. ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ ταῦτα ἀπαμφιάσασα ἀναδείξω καὶ οὐ μιμήσομαι τρόπους ἡδονῆς, ὡς ὅσα μὲν ἐπαγωγὰ ἐστὶν ἐν ἐμοὶ μόνα ἐπιδείξασθαι, τὰ δὲ ἔχοντα δυσκολίαν συσκιάσαι καὶ περιστεῖλαι, ἀλλὰ τούναντίον τὰ μὲν τέρψιν ἐξ ἑαυτῶν καὶ χαρὰν ἐνδιδόντα ἡσυχάσω, εἰδυῖα ὅτι φωνὴν ῥήξει τὴν δι' ἔργων, τὰ δ' ἐπαχθῆ καὶ δυσυπομόνητα κυρίως ἐρμηνεύσω τοῖς ὀνόμασι γυμνοῖς κὰν μέσῳ τιθεῖσα αὐτά, ὡς ἔκδηλον τὴν ἐκάστου φύσιν καὶ τοῖς ἀμυδρῶς ὀρώσι προφαίνεσθαι· τῶν γὰρ ἡδονῆς μεγίστων ἀγαθῶν τὰ παρ' ἐμοὶ μέγιστα δοκοῦντα εἶναι κακὰ καλλίω καὶ τιμιώτερα τοῖς
 31 χρωμένοις ἐξελεγχθήσεται. πρὶν δὲ περὶ τῶν ἰδίων ἄρξασθαι, ὅσα ἂν ἐνδέχεται τῶν ὑπ' ἐκείνης ἡσυχασθέντων ὑπομνήσω· εἰποῦσα γὰρ περὶ ὧν ἐθησαυρίσατο χρωμάτων φωνῶν ἀτμῶν χυλῶν ποιότητων δυνάμεων τῶν κατὰ ἀφήν καὶ

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 29-31

nothing—nothing that comes from herself and is indeed her own. But she has habited herself with a false and spurious comeliness, which is mere nets and snares to take you as her prey, and these, if you are wise, you will see in time and thus make her hunting of none effect. The sight of her is sweetness to your eyes, her voice like music ringing in your ears, but to the soul, the most precious of possessions, her nature is to work mischief through these and all other avenues.

Of what she has to give, she set before you in full such things as were bound to be pleasant hearing, but the innumerable others which do not make for ease and comfort, in malice prepense she hid from you, expecting that none would accept them lightly. But these too I will strip bare and set before you, and will not follow Pleasure's way, to lay before you only what in me is attractive, and slur over and conceal what involves discomfort. Rather all such things as of themselves offer joy and delight I will pass in silence, for I know that they will speak for themselves in the language of facts, but all that spells pain and hardship I will set out in plain terms, without figure of speech, and show them openly, so that the nature of each may be clearly visible, even to those who see but dimly. For what of mine seems most to partake of ill shall be found by those who make trial thereof to be more beautiful and precious than the greatest goods which Pleasure has to give.

But before I begin to speak of me and mine, I will bring to your mind as much as I can of what she left unsaid. For she told you of her treasured stores, of colours, sounds, scents, flavours, and all varieties, of the faculties born of touch and

PHILO

πασαν αἰσθησιν καὶ τῷ τῆς ἀκροάσεως ἐφηδύνασα
 προσαγωγῷ τὰς ἄλλας νόσους καὶ κῆρας ἑαυτῆς
 οὐκ ἐμήνυσεν, αἷς ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἐκεῖνα αἰρούμενος
 χρήσῃ, ἵνα αὖρα τινὸς ὠφελείας ἐπαρθεῖς ἐντὸς 32 ἀρικύων ληφθῆς. ἴσθι οὖν, ὦ οὔτος, ὅτι γενόμενος φιλήδονος πάντ' ἔσει ταῦτα·

πανούργος	ἄπολις	ἀλαζῶν
θρασύς	στασιώδης	δοκησίσοφος
ἀνάρμοστος	ἄτακτος	αὐθάδης
ἄμικτος	ἀσεβῆς	βάνασος
δύσχρηστος	ἀνίερος	βάσκανος
ἔκθεσμος	ἀνίδρυτος	φιλεγκλήμων
ἀργαλέος	ἄστατος	δύσερις
ἀκρόχολος	ἀνοργίαστος	διάβολος
ἀνεπίσχετος	βέβηλος	χαῦνος
φορτικὸς	ἐναγῆς	ἀπατεῶν
	βωμολόχος	ἀγύρτης
ἀνουθέτητος	ἀλάστωρ	εἰκαῖος
εὐχερῆς	παλαμναῖος	ἀμαθῆς
κακότεχνος	ἀνελεύθερος	ἀναίσθητος
ἀδιάγωγος	ἀπότομος	ἀσύμφωνος
ἄδικος	θηριώδης	[ἄπιστος]
ἄνισος	ἀνδραποδώδης	ἀπειθῆς
ἀκοινώνητος	δειλὸς	ἀφηνιαστής
ἀσύμβατος	ἀκόλαστος	γόης
ἄσπονδος	ἄκοσμος	εἴρων
πλεονέκτης	αἰσχροουργὸς	κέρκωψ
κακονομώτατος	αἰσχροπαθῆς	δυσυπονόητος
	ἄχρώματος	δυσώνυμος
[II. 269] ἀφίλος	ἄμετρος	δυσεύρετος
ἄοικος	ἄπληστος	δυσέφικτος

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 31-32

all forms of sense, and she heightened this sweetness with the seductiveness of her discourse. But there are other things which are part and parcel of her, the maladies and plagues which you must needs experience if you choose her gifts, and these she did not tell you, that carried off your feet by windy thoughts of some gain or other you might be caught in her net. Know then, my friend, that if you become a pleasure-lover you will be all these things :

unscrupulous	without city	braggart
impudent	seditions	conceited
cross-tempered	disorderly	stubborn
unsociable	impious	mean
intractable	unholy	envious
lawless	wavering	ensorious
troublesome	unstable	quarrelsome
passionate	excommunicate	slanderous
headstrong	profane	vainglorious
coarse	accursed	deceitful
impatient of re- buke	a buffoon	cheating
reckless	unblest	aimless
evil-planning	murder-stained	ignorant
ill to live with	low-minded	stupid
unjust	rude	dissident
inequitable	beast-like	[faithless]
unfriendly	slavish	disobedient
irreconcilable	cowardly	unruly
implacable	incontinent	a swindler
covetous	unseemly	dissembling
amenable to no law	shame-working	mischievous
without friend	shame-enduring	mistrustful
without home	unblushing	ill-reputed
	immoderate	skulking
	insatiable	unapproachable

PHILO

ἐξώλης	διχόνους	ὑποπτος
κακόνους	δίγλωσσος	ἄπιστος
ἄσύμμετρος	ἐπίβουλος	δύσλυτος
ἀκαιρολόγος	ἐνεδρευτικός	καχυπόνους
μακρήγορος	ῥαδιουργός	δύσελπις
ἄδολέσχης	ἄδιόρθωτος	ἀρίδακρυς
ἀερόμυθος	ἐνδεής	ἐπιχαιρέκακος
κόλαξ	ἄει ἀβέβαιος	λελυττηκῶς
νωθής	ἄλητης	παρακεκομμένος
ἀπερίσκεπτος	ἐπτοημένος	ἀδιατύπτως
ἀπροόρατος	φορᾶ χρώμενος	κακομήχανος
ἀπρονόητος		αισχροκερδής
ὀλίγωρος	εὐεπιχείρητος	φίλαντος
ἀπαράσκευος	ἐπιμανής	ἐθελόδουλος
ἀπειρόκαλος	ἀψίκωρος	ἐθέλεχθρος
πλημμελής	φιλόζωος	δημοκόπος
σφαλλόμενος	δοξοκόπος
διαπίπτων	βαρύμηνις	κακοικονόμος
ἀδιοίκητος	βαρύσπλαγχνος	σκληραύχην
ἀπροστασίαστος	βαρύθυμος	θηλυδρίας
λίχνος	βαρυπενθής	ἐξίτηλος
ἀγόμενος	δυσόργητος	ἐκκεχυμένος
διαρρέων	ψοφοδεής	σκωπτικός
εὐένδοτος	ὑπερθετικός	τρῶκτης
δολιώτατος	μελλητής	ἠλίθιος
	βαρυδαιμονίας ἐμπεφορημένος ἀκράτου.

33 “Τοιαῦτα τῆς περικαλλοῦς καὶ περιμαχίτου ἡδονῆς ἐστι τὰ μεγάλα μυστήρια· ἅπερ ἔκουσα ἀπεκρύψατο δέει τοῦ μὴ γνόντα σε ἀποστραφῆναι τὴν εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ σύνοδον αὐτῆς. τῶν δὲ παρ’ ἐμοὶ θησαυριζομένων ἀγαθῶν τὸ πλῆθος ἢ μέγεθος

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 32-33

abandoned	double-minded	suspicious
evil-minded	double-tongued	faithless
inconsistent	plot-hatching	stubborn
prating	treacherous	evil-thinking
garrulous	rascally	a pessimist
a babbler	incorrigible	lacrimose
windy-worded	dependent	malicious
a flatterer	ever insecure	maniacal
dull-minded	vagrant	deranged
unconsidering	agitated	unformed
unforeseeing	a creature of im-	mischief-plotting improvident	pulse	filthy-lucre-loving
negligent	an easy victim	selfish
unpreparing	frenzied	servile
tasteless	fickle	feud-loving
erring	clinging to life	truckling to the tripping	a glory-hunter	mob
utterly failing	violent-tempered	ill-managing unregulated	ill-conditioned	stiff-necked
unchampioned	sullen	womanish
lickerish	disconsolate	decadent
easily led	quick to wrath	dissolute
flaccid	timorous	a scoffer
pliable	dilatory	a glutton
full of cunning	dawdling	a simpleton
a mass of misery and misfortune without relief.

“Such then is the true story of that grand pageant which Pleasure, the lovely, the much coveted reveals. This truth she purposely concealed for fear lest, if you knew it, you should eschew association with her. But the riches of goodness that I have stored in my

[167] τίς ἂν ἀξίως εἰπεῖν δυνηθεῖη; | ἴσασιν οἱ κεκοινωνηκότες ἤδη καὶ οἷς ἰλεως ἢ φύσις πάλιν γινώσκονται κληθέντες εἰς μετουσίαν θοίνης, οὐκ ἐξ ἧς αἱ γαστροὶ ἠδοναὶ πιμπλαμένης τὸ σῶμα παιίνουσιν, ἀλλ' ἀφ' ἧς διάνοια ἐντρεφομένη καὶ ἐγχορεύουσα
34 ἀρεταῖς γήθει τε καὶ εὐφραίνεται. VI.

διὰ μὲν δὴ ταῦτα καὶ τὸ πάλαι λεχθέν, ὅτι πέφυκεν ἐξ ἑαυτῶν φωνὴν ἀφιέναι, καὶ ἡσυχάζηται, τὰ
[168] ὅσα ἄτε<sup>1</sup> ὄντως ἀγαθὰ, τὸν περὶ αὐτῶν | λόγον ἐῷ· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἥλιος ἢ σελήνη χηρῆζουσιν ἐρμηνέως, ὅτι τὸν σύμπαντα κόσμον, ὁ μὲν ἡμέρας, ἡ δὲ νυκτὸς ἀνασχόντες, φωτὸς ἐμπιπλάσιν· ἀλλ' ἔστιν αὐτοῖς ἡ ἐπιλαμψις ἀμάρτυρος πίστις ὀφθαλμοῖς ὥτων ἐναργεστέρῳ κριτηρίῳ βεβαιουμένη.

35 τὸ δὲ δοκοῦν τῶν παρ' ἐμοὶ μάλιστα δυσκολίαν ἔχει καὶ χαλεπότητα οὐδὲν ὑποστειλαμένη μετὰ παρρησίας λέξω· καὶ γὰρ τοῦτό που φαντασία μὲν κατὰ τὴν πρόχειρον ἐντευξίν ἀργαλέον εἶναι δοκεῖ, μελέτη δὲ ἡδιστον καὶ ἐξ ἐπιλογισμοῦ συμφέρον. ἔστι δὲ ὁ ῥαστώνης ἐχθρὸς πόνος, πρῶτον καὶ μέγιστον ἀγαθόν, προσφερόμενος τὸν ἀκήρυκτον πρὸς ἠδονὴν πόλεμον· ἀρχὴν γάρ, εἰ δεῖ τάληθὲς εἰπεῖν, παντὸς ἀγαθοῦ καὶ ἀρετῆς ἀπάσης ὁ θεὸς ἀνέδειξεν ἀνθρώποις πόνον, οὗ χωρὶς τῶν καλῶν παρὰ τῷ θνητῷ γένει συνιστάμενον οὐδὲν εὐρήσεις.

36 καθάπερ γὰρ ἄνευ φωτὸς ἀμήχανον ἰδεῖν, μήτε χρωμάτων μήτε ὀμμάτων ἱκανῶν ὄντων πρὸς τὴν δι' ὄψεως ἀντίληψιν—δεσμὸν γὰρ ἀμφοῖν προ-

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Wendland τὰ ὅσα παρ' ἐμοὶ.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 33-36

treasuries are such in number and greatness that none can tell of them as is their due. They who have already had part in them know them, and they too whose nature is attuned to them shall in their time know them, when they are bidden to sit down at that banquet, where you shall not find the pleasures that only bring the crammed belly and the bloated body, but where the mind ranging amid the virtues and nourished therewith rejoices and is glad.

VI. For this cause and because, as I said before, things holy in virtue of their essential goodness cannot but through their very nature have speech for us, though we pass them by in silence, I say no more about them. For neither do sun and moon need an interpreter, because their rising by day or night fills the whole world with light. Their shining is a proof that needs no further witness, established by the evidence of the eyes, an evidence clearer than the ears can give.

But in my store there is one thing<sup>a</sup> which seems especially to involve hardship and discomfort, and this I will tell you frankly without concealment; for though at the first encounter it seems on the surface painful to the imagination, practice makes it sweet and reflection shows it to be profitable. This thing is toil, the first and greatest of blessings, the enemy of ease, waging war to the death against pleasure. For in very truth, God has appointed toil as the beginning of all goodness and true worth to men, and without it you shall find that nothing excellent takes shape amongst mortal men. Toil is like light. Without light we cannot see, and neither the eye nor the colour is capable without the other of creating sight-perception; for before either, Nature created light ὑπειργάσατο τὸ φῶς ἢ φύσις, ᾧ συνάγεται καὶ ἀρμόζεται πρὸς χρῶμα ὀφθαλμός, ἐπὶ σκότους δὲ ἢ δύναμις ἀνωφελῆς ἑκατέρου—, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ὄμμα τῶν κατ' ἀρετὴν πράξεων ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι ἀδυνατεῖ μὴ προσχρησάμενον ὡσπερ φωτὶ συνεργῶ τῷ πόνῳ· μέσος γὰρ διανοίας ἰδρυθεὶς καὶ οὐδ' ἀνοία ὀρέγεται καλοῦ, τὸ μὲν ἔνθεν τῆν δὲ ἔνθεν ἐπισπασάμενος ἑκατέρᾳ χειρὶ φιλίαν καὶ συμφωνίαν αὐτὸς ἀγαθὰ τέλεια ἐργάζεται.

37 VII. ὁποῖον γὰρ ἂν ἐθέλης ἐλοῦ τῶν ἀγαθῶν, καὶ τοῦθ' εὐρήσεις πόνῳ περιγινόμενόν τε καὶ βεβαιούμενον· εὐσέβεια καὶ ὁσιότης ἀγαθὰ, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἄνευ θεραπείας θεοῦ τυχεῖν αὐτῶν δυνάμεθα, θεραπεία δὲ ταῖς ἐν πόνοις φιλοτιμίαις συνέζευκται· φρόνησις καὶ ἀνδρεία καὶ δικαιοσύνη καλαὶ πᾶσαι καὶ τέλεια ἀγαθὰ, ἀλλ' οὐ τῇ ῥαστώνῃ ταῦτα ληπτὰ, ἀγαπητὸν δέ, εἰ συνεχέσι ταῖς ἐπιμελείαις ἐξευμενισθήσονται<sup>1</sup>. τὴν πρὸς θεὸν καὶ ἀρετὴν ἀρέσκειαν ὡσπερ τινὰ ἔντονον καὶ σφοδρὰν ἀρμονίαν οὐ δυνηθὲν τὸ πάσης ψυχῆς ὄργανον ἐνεγκεῖν ἀνείθη καὶ ἐχαλάσθη πολλάκις, ὡς ἀπὸ
38 τῶν ἄκρων ἐπὶ τὰς μέσας καταβῆναι τέχνας· ἀλλ' ὅμως κἂν ταῖς μέσαις πολὺς ὁ κάματος· ἴδε τοὺς τῶν ἐγκυκλίων καὶ τῶν λεγομένων προπαιδευμάτων ἀσκητὰς ἅπαντας· ἴδε τοὺς γεωπόνους καὶ ὅσοι τὸν βίον ἐκ τινων ἐπιτηδεύσεων πορίζουσιν· οὗτοι τῶν φροντίδων οὐ μεθ' ἡμέραν οὐ νύκτωρ ἀφίστανται, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ τὸ λεγόμενον δὴ
[169] τοῦτο χειρὶ καὶ ποδὶ καὶ | πάσῃ δυνάμει κακοπαθοῦντες οὐ παύονται, ὡς καὶ θάνατον ἀντικα-
39 ἀλλάττεσθαι πολλάκις. VIII. ἀλλ' ὡσπερ

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Mangey ἐξευμαρισθήσονται.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 36-39

to be a link between the two, a link which unites and connects the colour and the eye, while in the darkness each is powerless. And so the eye of the soul cannot grasp the practices of virtue, unless it take toil, like light, to co-operate with it. Toil stands midway between the mind and the excellence which the mind desires : with its right hand it draws to it the one, with its left the other, and of itself it creates that perfection of goodness, friendship and harmony between the two.

VII. Choose any good thing whatsoever, and you will find that it results from and is established through toil. Piety and holiness are good, but we cannot attain to them save through the service of God, and service calls for earnest toil as its yoke-fellow. Prudence, courage, justice, all these are noble and excellent and perfectly good, yet we cannot acquire them by self-indulgent ease. It is much indeed if by constant care and practice there arise a kindliness between us and them. Service pleasing to God and to virtue is like an intense and severe harmony,<sup>a</sup> and in no soul is there an instrument capable of sustaining it, without such frequent relaxation and unstringing of the chords that it descends from the higher forms of art<sup>a</sup> to the lower. Yet even these lower forms demand much toil. Consider all who practise the school-learning, the so-called preparatory culture. Consider the labourers on the soil and all who get their living by some trade or profession. Neither by day nor night do they cast their cares aside, but always and everywhere they cease not to bear affliction, as the saying goes, in hand and foot and every faculty, so that often they choose death in its stead.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

τοῖς ψυχὴν τὴν ἑαυτῶν ἔλεων σπουδάζουσι λαβεῖν
 θεραπευτέον ἐξ ἀνάγκης τὰς ψυχῆς ἀρετάς, οὕτως
 καὶ τοῖς ἔλεων τὸ σῶμα ἔχειν προαιρουμένοις
 θεραπευτέον ὑγίειαν καὶ τὰς συγγενεῖς αὐτῇ
 δυνάμεις, καὶ δῆτα θεραπεύουσι μετ' ἀνηνύτων καὶ
 ἀπαύστων πόνων οἷς φροντὶς εἰσέρχεται τῶν ἐν
 αὐτοῖς δυνάμεων, ἐξ ὧν συνεκρίθησαν.

- 40 “ Πάντ' οὖν ὄρας τὰ ἀγαθὰ ἐκ πόνου καθάπερ ἐκ
 ῥίζης μιᾶς ἐκπεφυκότεα καὶ βλαστάνοντα· ὃν
 μήποτε ὑπομείνης μεθέσθαι, λήση γὰρ ἅμ' αὐτῷ καὶ σωρὸν ἀθρόον<sup>1</sup> ἀγαθῶν μεθέμενος. ὁ μὲν γὰρ
 τοῦ σύμπαντος ἡγεμῶν οὐρανοῦ τε καὶ κόσμου
 καὶ ἔχει καὶ παρέχει οἷς ἂν ἐθέλη τὰ ἀγαθὰ μετὰ
 πάσης εὐμαρείας, ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸν τοσοῦτον κόσμον
 ἄνευ πόνων πάλαι μὲν εἰργάζετο, νυνὶ δὲ καὶ
 εἰσαεὶ συνέχων οὐδέποτε λήγει—θεῶ γὰρ τὸ
 ἀκάματον ἀρμοδιώτατον—, θνητῶ δὲ οὐδενὶ κτήσιν
 ἀγαθοῦ δίχα πόνων ἢ φύσις δεδωρήται, ἵνα καὶ
 ταύτῃ τὸ μακάριον ἐν τοῖς οὐσι μόνον ὁ θεὸς 41 εὐδαιμονίζηται. IX. δοκεῖ γάρ μοι πόνος τὴν αὐτὴν προσφέρεισθαι δύναμιν τροφῆ·

 καθάπερ γοῦν αὕτη τὸ ζῆν ἐξήρτηκεν ἑαυτῆς συναρτήσασα καὶ τὰ ἐν τῷ ζῆν ἅπαντα ἔργα τε
 καὶ πάθη, οὕτως καὶ πόνος ἐκκεκρέμακεν ἑαυτοῦ
 τὰ ἀγαθὰ. ὥσπερ οὖν τοῦ ζῆν τοῖς γλιχομένοις
 τροφῆς οὐκ ἀμελητέον, οὕτως τοῖς τῶν ἀγαθῶν
 κτήσεως ἐφιεμένοις πόνου προνοητέον· ὁ γὰρ πρὸς
 τὸ ζῆν τροφή, τοῦτο πρὸς τὸ καλὸν πόνος.

- “ Ἐνὸς οὖν ὄντος αὐτοῦ μηδέποτε ὀλιγωρήσης,
 42 ἵνα τὰ πάντα ἀγαθὰ ἀθρόα καρπώση. οὕτως καὶ

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps ἀθρόων with Pap.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Seneca, Ep. 34. 1 “generosos animos labor nutrit.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 39-42

VIII. But just as those who desire to have their soul attuned and favourable must needs cultivate the virtues of the soul, so those who purpose to gain the same qualities for their body must cultivate health and the powers that accompany health ; and indeed all who take thought for the faculties within them, which combine to make them what they are, do so cultivate them with constant and unremitting toil.

“ You see then how good things spring and grow from toil as from a single root. Never therefore suffer yourself to lose your hold of toil, for with it will be lost, though you little know it, a vast heap of blessings. The Ruler indeed of all heaven and the world possesses and provides to whom He wills good things in ease absolute. Without toil He made this vast universe long ages ago, and now without toil He holds it in perpetual existence, for to know no weariness is an attribute most fitting to God. But it is not so with mortals. To them Nature has given no good thing to be acquired without toil, that here too God may alone be accounted happy—the one and only blessed being.

IX. Toil, it seems to me, assumes a function similar to that of food.<sup>a</sup> As food has made itself a necessity to life and has joined in the same connexion with itself all the conditions active or passive that are involved in life, so toil has made all good things dependent on itself. And therefore just as those who seek to live must not neglect food, so those who desire the acquisition of the good must make provision for toil, for it bears to the noble and excellent the same relation as food does to life.

“ Never then despise toil, that from the one you may reap a multitude, even the harvest of every

γενέσει νεώτερος ὢν πρεσβύτερος νομισθήσῃ καὶ τῶν πρεσβείων ἀξιωθήσῃ· ἔαν δὲ βελτιούμενος αἰεὶ πρὸς τέλος ἀφίκη, οὐ μόνον σοι τὰ πρεσβεῖα ὁ πατήρ ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ πατρῶα χαριεῖται πάντα, καθάπερ καὶ τῷ τὰς ἔδρας τοῦ πάθους καὶ βάσεις πτερινίζοντι Ἰακώβ, ὃς ὠμολόγησεν ὃ ἔπαθεν εἰπὼν ὅτι ἠλέησέ με ὁ θεός, καὶ ἔστι μοι πάντα' (Gen. xxxiii. 11), δογματικῶς ἅμα καὶ παιδευτικῶς· ἐν γὰρ τῷ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐλέω τὰ πάντα ὀρμεῖ.

- 43 X. μεμάθηκε δὲ ταῦτα παρὰ τῷ πάππῳ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ παιδείας<sup>1</sup> Ἀβραάμ, ὃς τῷ πανσόφῳ Ἰσαὰκ δίδωσι τὰ ὑπάρχοντα πάντα (Gen. xxv. 5), οὐδὲν ὑπολειπόμενος τῶν ὑπαρκτῶν τοῖς νόθοις καὶ πλαγίοις τῶν παλλακῶν λογισμοῖς, ἀλλὰ μικρὰ χαρίζεται καὶ μικροῖς ἐκείνοις· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ὑπαρκτά, αἱ τέλειοι ἀρεταί, μόνου τοῦ τελείου καὶ γνησίου κτήματα, τὰ δὲ μέσα τῶν καθηκόντων
 170] ἐφαρμόττει καὶ τοῖς | ἀτελέσι μέχρι τῶν ἐγκυκλίων προπαιδευμάτων ἐλθοῦσιν, ὧν Ἄγαρ καὶ Χεττοῦρα κατάρχουσιν, ἡ μὲν Ἄγαρ παροίκησις, ἡ δὲ
 14 Χεττοῦρα θυμιῶσα· ὁ γὰρ τοῖς ἐγκυκλίοις μόνοις ἐπανεχῶν παροικεῖ σοφία, οὐ κατοικεῖ, καθάπερ τινὰ ὀδμὴν ἠδεῖαν ἐκ τῆς περὶ τὴν θεωρίαν γλαφυρότητος ἐπιπέμπων τῇ ψυχῇ· τροφῶν δὲ οὗτος, οὐκ ὀσμῶν, δεῖται πρὸς τὸ ὑγιαίνειν· ὄσφρησις δὲ ὑπηρέτιν γεύσεως καθάπερ βασιλίδος προγευστρίδα ὑπήκοον λέγεται ἢ φύσις εὐμηχάνως δημιουργῆσαι·

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Mangey παρὰ τῷ πάππῳ ἑαυτοῦ παιδευθεῖς: Cohn πάππῳ <καὶ διδασκάλῳ> τῆς ἑαυτοῦ παιδείας.

* If the text is right, the idea may be that the father is the father of his children's education, and his father of 126

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 42-44

good thing. And so though you be the younger in birth you shall be accounted the elder and judged worthy of the elder's place. And if your life to the end be a progress to the better, the Father will give you not only the birthright of the elder, but the whole inheritance, even as He did to Jacob, who overthrew the seat and foundation of passion—Jacob who confessed his life's story in the words 'God has had mercy on me and all things are mine' (Gen. xxxiii. 11), words of sound doctrine and instruction for life, for on God's mercy, as a sure anchor, all things rest.

X. He had learnt this lesson under Abraham, who stood as grandfather to his early training,<sup>a</sup> who gave to wise Isaac all his wealth (Gen. xxv. 5), leaving nothing for the false bastard thoughts bred of his concubines, save little gifts for those of little worth. For the real wealth, the perfect virtues, are the possessions of the perfect and true-born only. But the secondary things of the daily duties are fitting to the imperfect, who have risen only to the primary learning of the schools. These have Hagar and Keturah for their source, Hagar meaning 'sojourning,'<sup>b</sup> and Keturah 'incense-burning.' For he who contents himself with the secular learning only does but sojourn and is not domiciled with wisdom. He sheds indeed over the soul, as it were, a sweet fragrance from the exquisite niceties of his studies, but yet it is food, not fragrance, that he needs for his health. The sense of smell is but the minister of the sense of taste; she is as the slave who tastes each dish before the monarch; we call her indeed a useful his, and that therefore the grandfather's influence extends to his grandson.

<sup>b</sup> See on L.A. iii. 244.

τὰς δὲ ἡγεμονίδας πρὸ τῶν ἀρχομένων ἀεὶ θεραπευτέον καὶ τὰς αὐτόχθονας πρὸ τῶν παροίκων ἐπιστήμας.”

- 45 Ταῦτα ἀκούσας ὁ νοῦς ἀποστρέφεται μὲν ἡδονήν, ἀρμόζεται δὲ ἀρετῇ, τὸ κάλλος ἄπλαστον καὶ γνήσιον καὶ ἱεροπρεπέστατον αὐτῆς κατανοήσας. τότε καὶ γίνεται ποιμὴν προβάτων, τῶν κατὰ ψυχὴν ἀλόγων δυνάμεων ἡνίοχός τε καὶ κυβερνήτης, οὐκ ἔων αὐτὰς ἀτάκτως φέρεσθαι καὶ πλημμελῶς δίχα ἐπιστάτου καὶ ἡγεμόνος, ἵνα μὴ καθάπερ τινὰ ἀπροστασίαστον καὶ ἀνεπιτρόπευτον ὄρφανίαν ὑποστάντες ἐρημίᾳ συμμάχων οἱ ἀφηνιασταὶ τρόποι παραπόλωνται. XI.

- 46 οἰκειότατον γοῦν ὁ ἀσκητῆς ὑπολαβὼν ἀρετῇ τὸ ἔργον ὑπομένει “ ποιμαίνειν τὰ πρόβατα Λάβαν ” (Gen. xxx. 36), τοῦ χρώμασι καὶ σχήμασι καὶ συνόλως ἀψύχοις σώμασι ἐγκειμένου, καὶ οὐχ ἅπαντα ἀλλὰ “ τὰ ὑπολειφθέντα ” (ib.). τί δὲ τοῦτ’ ἐστὶ; διττὸν εἶναι πέφυκε τὸ ἄλογον, τὸ μὲν παρὰ τὸν αἰροῦντα λόγον, ὡς ἄλογον τὸν ἄφρονά φασί τινες, τὸ δὲ κατ’ ἐκτομὴν λόγου, ὡς τῶν ζώων τὰ
- 47 μὴ λογικά. τὰς μὲν οὖν ἀλόγους αὐτοῦ φοράς, λέγω δὲ τὰς παρὰ τὸν αἰροῦντα λόγον δυνάμεις, οἱ υἱοὶ Λάβαν “ τριῶν ἡμερῶν ἀποστάντες ὁδὸν ” (ib.) τημελοῦσι, συμβολικῶς ἅπαντα χωρισθέντες τὸν αἰῶνα τοῦ σπουδαίου· τριμερῆς γὰρ ὁ χρόνος, ἐκ παρεληλυθότος καὶ ἐνεστώτος καὶ μέλλοντος συνεστώσ· τὰς δὲ καθ’ ἑτέραν ἐκδοχὴν ἀλόγους,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 44-47

contrivance of nature, yet only an underling. And the sovereign forms of knowledge must ever be served above the subject, and the native-born above the alien sojourner."

After hearing this <sup>a</sup> the mind turns away from pleasure and cleaves to virtue, for it apprehends her loveliness, so pure, so simple, so holy to look upon. Then too it becomes a shepherd of the sheep, one who guides the chariot and controls the helm of the unreasoning faculties of the soul, who does not suffer them to be swept away in disorder and discord, without a master or a guide, lest their unbridled instincts come to perdition, when they lack the protection and control of a father's hand, and help is far away.

XI. Surely when the Practiser submitted to "shepherd the sheep of Laban" (Gen. xxx. 36), of him, that is, whose thoughts are fixed on colours and shapes and lifeless bodies of every kind, he felt that it was a task most congenial to virtue. And note that he does not tend all the sheep, "but those that were left" (ibid.). What does this mean? Unreasonableness is of two kinds. One is the unreasonableness that defies convincing reason, as when men call the foolish man unreasonable. The other is the state from which reason is eliminated, as with the unreasoning animals. The first of these, the unreasoning movements of the mind, I mean the activities which defy convincing reason, are the charge of the sons of Laban, who were "three days' journey away" (ibid.), a parable which tells us that they were severed for all time from a good life; for time has three divisions, compounded as it is of past, present and future. But the forces which are unreasonable in the other οὐχ αἶ παρὰ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον εἰσὶν ἀλλ' ὅσαι μὴ λογικαί, ὧν καὶ τὰ ἄλογα ζῶα κοινωνεῖ, ὁ ἀσκητῆς ἐπιμελείας ἀξιῶσει, τὰ σφάλματα αὐταῖς οὐκ ἀπὸ κακίας πανούργου μᾶλλον ἢ ἀπὸ ἀμαθίας ἀν-48 αγωγῆς προσγεγενῆσθαι νομίζων. ἀμαθία μὲν οὖν, ἀκούσιον καὶ κοῦφον πάθος, θεραπείαν οὐ δύσεργον ἔχει διδασκαλίαν· πανουργία δέ, ἐκούσιον ψυχῆς ἀρρώστημα, χαλεπὴν εἰ καὶ μὴ πάντως ἀνίατον ἐργάζεται τὴν ἀποτροπὴν.

[171] Ἄτε οὖν παρὰ πανσόφῳ | πατρὶ παιδευθέντες οἱ τοῦδε νιεῖς, κἂν εἰς τὸ Αἰγύπτιον φιλοπαθὲς σῶμα καταβῶσι καὶ τῷ σκεδαστῇ τῶν καλῶν ἐντύχωσι Φαραῶ, ὃς βασιλεὺς εἶναι δοκεῖ τοῦ συγκρίτου ζώου, μηδὲν καταπλαγέστες τῆς ἀφθόγου παρασκευῆς ὁμολογήσουσιν ὅτι "ποιμένες προβάτων εἰσὶν, οὐ μόνον αὐτοί, ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν"

49 (Gen. xlvii. 3). XII. καίτοι γε οὐκ ἂν τις ἐπ' ἀρχῇ καὶ δυναστείᾳ τοσοῦτον αὔχημά ποτε αὐχῆσαι, ὅσον ἐπὶ τῷ ποιμένες εἶναι οἱ ἄνδρες οὗτοι. τοῖς μέντοι δυναμένοις λογίζεσθαι σεμνότερον βασιλείας ἐστὶ τὸ ἔργον, ἰσχυῖσαι, καθάπερ πόλεως ἢ χώρας, σώματός τε καὶ αἰσθήσεων καὶ γαστρὸς καὶ τῶν μετὰ γαστέρα ἡδονῶν καὶ παθῶν τῶν ἄλλων καὶ γλώττης καὶ συνόλως ἅπαντος τοῦ συγκρίματος εὐτόνως καὶ σφόδρα ἐρρωμένως καὶ πάλιν ἐπιεικῶς ἀφηγήσασθαι· πῆ μὲν γὰρ ἐπανιέναι δεῖ καθάπερ ἡνίοχον τοῖς ὑπεξευγμένοις τὰς ἡνίας, πῆ δὲ ἀντισπᾶν καὶ ἀναχαιτίσειν, ὅποτε πλείων ἢ πρὸς τὰ ἐκτὸς ῥύμη<sup>1</sup> καὶ φορὰ σὺν ἀφημισμῶ γίνουτο.

50 Ἄγαμαι καὶ τοῦ θεσμοφύλακος Μωνσέως, ὃς

<sup>1</sup> mss. ῥώμη (some ὀρμη).

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 47-50

sense, not those which defy right reason, but merely lack reason (and in these the unreasoning animals participate), the Man of Practice will not disdain to tend. He feels that error has befallen them not so much through sinful wickedness, as through untutored ignorance. Ignorance is an involuntary state, a light matter, and its treatment through teaching is not hopeless. But wickedness is a wilful malady of the soul, and its action is such that to remove it is hard, if indeed it is not hopeless.

Thus Jacob's sons, trained under an all-wise father, may go down into Egypt the passion-loving body, and meet with Pharaoh the disperser of the good, who deems himself the sovereign of the animal and the composite; yet they will not be dazzled by his lavish pomp and splendour, but will confess that they are shepherds of sheep, and not only they, but their fathers also (Gen. xlvii. 3). XII.-And indeed no one could in power and sovereignty find so lofty a cause for boasting as these can in their office as shepherds. Surely to those who can reason it is a prouder task than kingship to have the strength to rule, as a king in a city or country, over the body and the senses and the belly, and the pleasures whose seat is below the belly, and the other passions and the tongue and in general all our compound being—aye and to rule them with vigour and with a right strong yet ever-gentle hand. For like the charioteer he must sometimes give the rein to his team, sometimes pull them in and draw them back, when they rush too wildly in unreined career towards the world of external things.

How admirable again is the example of Moses

μέγα καὶ λαμπρὸν ἡγούμενος τὸ ποιμαίνειν περιἤψεν ἑαυτῷ τὸ ἔργον· τῶν γὰρ τοῦ περιττοῦ Ἰσθὸρ ἐπιστατεῖ καὶ ἀφηγεῖται δογμάτων, ἄγων αὐτὰ
 ἀπὸ τῶν ὀχλικῶν τῆς πολιτείας σπουδασμάτων
 εἰς ἔρημίαν τοῦ μὴ ἀδικεῖν· “ ἦγε γὰρ τὰ πρόβατα 51 ὑπὸ τὴν ἔρημον ” (Exod. iii. 1). παρὸ καὶ ἀκολουθεῖ “ βδέλυγμα Αἰγυπτίων εἶναι πάντα
 προβάτων ποιμένα ” (Gen. xlii. 34)· τὸν γὰρ κυβερνήτην καὶ ὑφηγητὴν τῶν καλῶν ὀρθὸν λόγον βδελύττεται πᾶς φιλοπαθής, καθάπερ οἱ τῶν παίδων ἀφρονέστατοι τοὺς διδασκάλους καὶ παιδαγωγούς
 καὶ πάντα νουθετητὴν καὶ σωφρονιστὴν λόγον.
 Μωυσῆς δὲ “ τὰ βδελύγματα Αἰγύπτου θύσειν τῷ
 θεῷ ” (Exod. viii. 26) φησί, τὰς ἀρετάς, ἄμωμα
 καὶ πρεπωδέστατα ἱερεῖα, ἃ βδελύττεται πᾶς ἄφρων.

“ Ὡστ’ εἰκότως ὁ τὰ ἄριστα ἐπὶ θεὸν ἀναφέρων
 Ἄβελ ποιμὴν κέκληται, ὁ δὲ ἐφ’ ἑαυτὸν καὶ τὸν
 ἴδιον νοῦν γῆς ἐργάτης ὁ Κάιν. τί δὲ ἐστὶ τὸ
 γῆν ἐργάζεσθαι (Gen. iv. 2), διὰ τῶν προτέρων
 βιβλίων ἐδηλώσαμεν.

52 XIII. “ Καὶ ἐγένετο μεθ’ ἡμέρας, ἤνεγκε Κάιν ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν τῆς γῆς θυσίαν τῷ κυρίῳ ”
 (Gen. iv. 3). δύο ἐγκλήματα τοῦ φιλαύτου· ἐν
 μὲν τὸ “ μεθ’ ἡμέρας ” ἀλλ’ οὐκ εὐθύς εὐχαριστήσαι θεῷ, ἕτερον δὲ τὸ “ ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν ”
 [172] ἀλλὰ μὴ ἀπὸ τῶν πρώτων | καρπῶν, ὧν σύνθετον
 ὄνομα πρωτογεννήματα. ἑκατέραν δὲ τῶν αἰτιῶν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

<sup>b</sup> The LXX. has τῶν Αἰγυπτίων. Note that this verse does not assist the argument, which shows the nature of the shepherd's calling, but is introduced and explained merely because of its close resemblance to Gen. xlii. 34.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 50-52

the guardian of the laws, who, judging the business of a shepherd to be a great and glorious task, took it upon himself. For we find him ruling and leading the thoughts and counsels of the worldling <sup>a</sup> Jethro and drawing them away from the absorbing crowd and tumult of the citizen's life into the lonely land where injustice is not; for he "led his sheep down into the wilderness" (Exod. iii. 1). It is a natural consequence of what we have said, that "every shepherd of sheep is an abomination to the Egyptians" (Gen. xlvi. 34). For the right reason which is our pilot and guide to things excellent is an abomination to all who love the passions, just as really foolish children hate their teachers and tutors and every form of reason which would warn them and bring them to wisdom. And we find Moses saying that "he will sacrifice to God the abominations of Egypt" (Exod. viii. 26),<sup>b</sup> meaning thereby the virtues, these offerings unblemished and most worthy, which are the abominations of every fool.

With good reason then is Abel who refers all that is best to God called a shepherd, while Cain who refers them to himself and his own mind is called a tiller of the soil. But what is meant by a tiller of the soil (Gen. iv. 2) I have shown in earlier books.<sup>c</sup>

XIII. "And it came to pass after some days that Cain brought of the fruits of the earth as an offering to God" (Gen. iv. 3). There are two charges against the self-lover: one that he made his thank-offering to God "after some days," instead of at once; the other that he offered of the fruits and not of the earliest fruits, or in a single word the first-fruits. Let us

<sup>c</sup> See App. pp. 490, 491.

- ἔρευνησωμεν, καὶ προτέραν γε τὴν προτέραν τῆ 53 τάξει. φθάνοντας καὶ προεκτρέχοντας δεῖ πράττειν
 τὰ καλὰ τῶν ἔργων βραδυτῆτα καὶ μέλλησιν
 ἐκποδῶν ποιουμένους· ἔργον δὲ ἄριστον ἢ πρὸς
 τὸ πρῶτον καλὸν ἀνυπέρθετος ἀρέσκεια. διὸ καὶ προστέτακται· “ἐὰν εὕξη εὐχὴν, μὴ χρονίσῃς<sup>1</sup>
 ἀποδοῦναι αὐτήν” (Deut. xxiii. 21). εὐχὴ μὲν οὖν ἐστὶν αἴτησις ἀγαθῶν παρὰ θεοῦ,<sup>2</sup> ἢ δὲ πρόσ-ταξις τυχόντα τῶν ἐλπισθέντων στεφανῶσαι θεόν,
 μὴ ἑαυτόν, καὶ εἰ οἶόν τε ἀχρόνως καὶ ἀμελλητῆ 54 στεφανῶσαι. τῶν δὲ μὴ κατορθούντων
 ἐν τούτῳ οἱ μὲν διὰ λήθην ὧν εὖ πεπόνθασιν
 μεγάλου κτήματος εὐχαριστίας ἐσφάλησαν, οἱ δὲ
 ὑπὸ σφοδρᾶς οἰήσεως ἑαυτοὺς τῶν συμβεβηκότων ἀγαθῶν αἰτίους ἐνόμισαν, ἀλλ’ οὐ τὸ ὄντως αἴτιον, τρίτοι δ’ εἰσὶν οἱ τούτων μὲν κουφότερον ἀμάρτημα
 τῶν δὲ προτέρων βαρύτερον δρῶσιν· ἀναγράφοντες
 γὰρ αἴτιον τῶν καλῶν τὸν ἡγεμόνα νοῦν φασιν
 εἰκότως τυχεῖν αὐτῶν, εἶναι γὰρ φρόνιμοι καὶ
 ἀνδρεῖοι καὶ σώφρονες καὶ δίκαιοι, ὥστε ἄξιοι διὰ
 ταῦτα καὶ παρὰ θεῷ χαρίτων νομισθῆναι.
- 55 XIV. πρὸς ἕκαστον οὖν ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος ἀντιταχθεὶς
 φησὶ πρώτῳ τῷ μνήμην μὲν ἀνηρηκότι λήθην δὲ ζωπυροῦντι· “μὴ φαγών, ὧ οὗτος, καὶ ἐμπλησθεὶς
 καὶ οἰκίας καλᾶς οἰκοδομήσας καὶ κατοικήσας καὶ
 τῶν προβάτων σου καὶ βοῶν ἀξυθέντων καὶ
 ἀργυρίου καὶ χρυσοῦ καὶ πάντων ὅσα σοὶ ἐστί

<sup>1</sup> mss. μὴ χρονίσαι (some οὐ χρονίσαις).

<sup>2</sup> After θεοῦ perhaps a lacuna is to be supplied from Ambrose who has “votum est autem postulatio bonorum a deo cum solvendi promissiono.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 52-55

examine each of the charges, taking first that which is first in order. Our good deeds should be done in the spirit of eagerness to anticipate the call, and with slackness and hesitation put right away; and the best of deeds is to do without delay the pleasure of the Primal Good. And therefore it is commanded "if thou vowest a vow, delay not to pay it" (Deut. xxiii. 21). Now the vow is a request of good things from God, and this commandment bids him, whose hopes have been fulfilled, to give the crown of honour to God and not to himself, and to give that crown, if it may be, without delay or loss of time.

Those who fail in this fall into three classes. The first are those who through forgetfulness of their blessings have lost that great treasure, the spirit of thankfulness. The second are those who through overweening pride think that they themselves have caused the good things which have fallen to them, and not He who is the true cause. But there is also a third class who are guilty of an error less blameworthy than these last, but more so than the first named. They accept the Ruling Mind as the cause of the good, yet they say that these good things are their natural inheritance. They claim that they are prudent, courageous, temperate, and just, and are therefore in the sight of God counted worthy of His favours.

XIV. To each of these the sacred pages have their counterword. To the first, with whom memory is dead and oblivion strong and living, the scripture says: "When thou hast eaten and art filled, and hast built fair houses and dwelt in them, and thy sheep and oxen are increased, and thy silver and gold and all that thou hast is multiplied, take heed lest thou πληθυνθέντων ὑψωθῆς τῇ καρδίᾳ καὶ ἐπιλάβῃ κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ σου" (Deut. viii. 12-14). πότε οὖν οὐκ ἐπιλήσῃ θεοῦ; ὅταν μὴ ἐπιλάβῃ σεαυτοῦ· μεμνημένος γὰρ τῆς ἰδίου περι πάντα οὐδενείας μεμνήσῃ καὶ τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ περι πάντα ὑπερβολῆς.

56 τὸν δὲ ἑαυτὸν νομίζοντα τῶν συμβαινόντων ἀγαθῶν αἴτιον σωφρονίζει τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον· "μὴ εἴπῃς," φησὶν "ἡ ἰσχὺς μου ἢ τὸ κράτος τῆς χειρός μου ἐποίησέ μοι πᾶσαν τὴν δύναμιν ταύτην· ἀλλὰ μνεία μνησθήσῃ κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ σου τοῦ δίδόντος σοι ἰσχὺν ποιῆσαι δύναμιν"

57 (Deut. viii. 17, 18). ὁ δὲ ἀξιόχρεων ἑαυτὸν ὑπολαμβάνων κτήσεως καὶ ἀπολαύσεως ἀγαθῶν χρησιμῶ μεταδιδαχθήτω λέγοντι· "οὐχὶ διὰ τὴν δικαιοσύνην σου οὐδὲ διὰ τὴν ὀσιότητα τῆς καρδίας σου εἰσπορεύῃ τὴν γῆν κληρονομήσαι αὐτήν, ἀλλὰ" πρῶτον μὲν "διὰ τὴν ἀνομίαν τῶν ἔθνῶν τούτων," ὄλεθρον κακίαις ἐπάγοντος θεοῦ, ἔπειθ' "ἵνα στήσῃ τὴν διαθήκην, ἣν ὤμοσε τοῖς πατράσιν ἡμῶν" (Deut. ix. 5). διαθήκη δ' ἐστὶ

[173] θεοῦ συμβολικῶς | αἱ χάριτες αὐτοῦ, θέμις δὲ οὐδὲν ἀτελὲς αὐτῷ χαρίζεσθαι, ὥσθ' ὀλόκληροι καὶ παντελεῖς αἱ τοῦ ἀγενήτου δωρεαὶ πᾶσαι· ὀλόκληρον δὲ ἐν τοῖς οὔσις ἀρετῇ καὶ αἱ κατ' ἀρετὴν πράξεις.

58 Ἐὰν οὖν λήθῃν καὶ ἀχαριστίαν καὶ φιλαυτίαν καὶ τὴν γεννητικὴν τούτων κακίαν<sup>1</sup> ἀνέλωμεν οἴησιν, οὐκέτι διαμέλλοντες ὑστεριοῦμεν γνησίου θεραπείας, ἀλλ' ὑπερτροχάζοντες καὶ ὑπερπηδῶντες τὰ ἐν γενέσει, πρὶν ἀσπάσασθαι τι τῶν θνητῶν, ἐν-τευξόμεθα τῷ δεσπότῃ παρεσκευακότες ἐτοιμοὺς τὰ

<sup>1</sup> Cohn suggests τούτων τῶν κακιῶν.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 55-58

be uplifted in thy heart and forget the Lord thy God" (Deut. viii. 12-14). When then wilt thou not forget God? Only when thou dost not forget thyself. For if thou rememberest thine own nothingness in all things, thou wilt also remember the transcendence of God in all things.

But him that believes himself to be the cause of the good things which befall him the scripture recalls to wisdom thus: "Say not 'my strength or the might of my hand hath gotten me all this power,'<sup>a</sup> but thou shalt keep ever in remembrance the Lord thy God who gave thee strength to get power" (Deut. viii. 17 f.).

The third, he, that is, who thinks himself worthy of the possession and enjoyment of good, may learn a better lesson from the oracle which says "Not for thy righteousness nor for the holiness of thy heart dost thou go into the land to inhabit it," but first "because of the iniquity of these nations," since God visited their wickedness with destruction, and next "that he might establish the covenant which he swore to our fathers" (Deut. ix. 5). Now the covenant of God is an allegory of His gifts of grace, and it may not be that any of His gifts should be imperfect. Thus, all the bounty of the Uncreated must be perfect and complete. But amongst all existing things the one that is complete is virtue and virtuous actions.<sup>b</sup>

If then we destroy forgetfulness and ingratitude and self-love and their parent vice, vainglory, we shall no longer through backwardness fall short of true service, but passing over things created, and staying not to embrace aught that is mortal, we shall run and leap to meet our Master, having made

<sup>a</sup> Or "wealth."

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 491.

59 κελευόμενα ποιεῖν ἑαυτούς. XV. καὶ γὰρ Ἀβραὰμ μετὰ σπουδῆς καὶ τάχους καὶ προθυμίας πάσης ἔλθων παρακελεύεται τῇ ἀρετῇ Σάρρα σπεύσαι καὶ φυρᾶσαι τρία μέτρα σεμιδάλεως καὶ ποιῆσαι ἐγκρυφίας (Gen. xviii. 6), ἥνικα ὁ θεὸς δορυφορούμενος ὑπὸ δυεῖν τῶν ἀνωτάτω δυνάμεων ἀρχῆς τε αὐτῆς καὶ ἀγαθότητος εἰς ὧν ὁ μέσος τριττὰς φαντασίας ἐνειργάζετο τῇ ὁρατικῇ ψυχῇ, ὧν ἑκάστη μεμέτρηται μὲν οὐδαμῶς—ἀπερίγραφος γὰρ ὁ θεός, ἀπερίγραφοι δὲ καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις αὐτοῦ—, μεμέτρηκε δὲ τὰ ὅλα· ἡ μὲν οὖν ἀγαθότης αὐτοῦ μέτρον ἀγαθῶν ἐστίν, ἡ δὲ ἐξουσία μέτρον ὑπηκόων, ὁ δὲ ἡγεμὼν αὐτὸς ἀπάντων καὶ σωματίων καὶ ἀσωμάτων, δι' ὃν καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις κανόνων καὶ παραπηγμάτων λαβοῦσαι λόγον τὰ μεθ' αὐτὰς
 60 ἐσταθμήσαντο. τὰ δὲ τρία μέτρα ταῦτα καλὸν ἐν ψυχῇ ὥσπερ φυραθῆναι τε καὶ συνενεχθῆναι, ἵνα πεισθεῖσα τὸν ἀνωτάτω εἶναι θεόν, ὃς ὑπερκέκυφε τὰς δυνάμεις ἑαυτοῦ καὶ χωρὶς αὐτῶν ὁρώμενος καὶ ἐν αὐταῖς ἐμφαινόμενος, δέξεται χαρακτῆρας ἐξουσίας τε καὶ εὐεργεσίας αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν τελείων μύστις γενομένη τελετῶν μηδενὶ προχείρως ἐκλαλῆ τὰ μυστήρια, ταμειομένη δὲ αὐτὰ καὶ ἐχεμυθοῦσα ἐν ἀπορρήτῳ φυλάττη·
 [174] γέγραπται γὰρ | “ἐγκρυφίας ποιεῖν,” ὅτι κεκρύφθαι δεῖ τὸν ἱερόν περὶ τοῦ ἀγενήτου καὶ τῶν δυνάμεων αὐτοῦ μύστην λόγον, ἐπεὶ θείων παρακαταθήκην
 61 ὀργίων οὐ παντός ἐστι φυλάξαι. XVI. τὸ γὰρ τῆς ἀκράτορος ψυχῆς νᾶμα ἔξω ῥέον διὰ στόματός τε καὶ γλώττης πάσαις ἀκοαῖς ἐπ-

<sup>a</sup> Philo deduces an allegory from ἐγκρυφίας (so the LXX.) which means “cakes baked in the ashes.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 59-61

ourselves ready to do His bidding. XV. For Abraham went with all zeal and speed and eagerness and bade Sarah (that is Virtue) hasten and knead three measures of meal and make "buried"<sup>a</sup> cakes (Gen. xviii. 6), when God came attended by His two highest potencies, sovereignty and goodness, and He, the one between the two, called up before the eye of the soul, which has power to see, three separate visions or aspects. Each of these aspects, though not subject itself to measurement—for God and His potencies are alike uncircumscribed—is the measure of all things. His goodness is the measure of things good, His sovereignty of its subjects, and the Ruler Himself is the measure of all things corporeal and incorporeal, and it is to serve Him that these two potencies assume the functions of rules and standards, and measure what lies within their province.<sup>b</sup>

It is well that these three measures should be as it were kneaded and blended in the soul, that she, convinced that God who is above all exists—God who overtops His potencies in that He is visible apart from them and yet is revealed in them—may receive the impression of His sovereignty and beneficence. Thus too, being admitted into the inmost mysteries, she will learn not to blab or babble them thoughtlessly, but to store them up and guard them in secrecy and silence. For it is written "make buried cakes," because the sacred story that unveils to us the truth of the Uncreated and His potencies must be buried, since the knowledge of divine rites is a trust which not every comer can guard aright.

XVI. The stream that issues through the mouth and tongue of the ill-controlled soul floods in wherever

<sup>b</sup> Or "the things below them."

αντλείται, ὧν αἱ μὲν εὐρυχώρους δεξαμενὰς ἔχουσαι τὸ ἐπεισχεόμενον φυλάττουσιν, αἱ δὲ διὰ στενότητα πόρων ἀδυνατοῦσιν ἄρδεσθαι· τὸ δ' ὑπερβλύζον ἀκατασχέτως ἐκχεόμενον σκίδνεται πάντη, ὡς ὑπαναπλεῖν καὶ ἐπινήχεσθαι τὰ κεκρυμμένα καὶ φορντοῦ τρόπον εἰκαίου τὰ πάσης ἄξια σπουδῆς

- 62 μετὰ συρμοῦ καταφέρεσθαι. παρὸ μοι δοκοῦσιν ὀρθῶς βεβουλευθῆναι οἱ πρὸ τῶν μεγάλων τούτων τὰ μικρὰ μυστήρια μνηθέντες· “ἐπιεσαν γὰρ τὸ σταῖς αὐτῶν, ὃ ἐξήνεγκαν ἐξ Αἰγύπτου, ἐγκρυφίας ἀζύμους” (Exod. xii. 39), τουτέστι τὸ ἀτίθασον καὶ ὠμόν πάθος κατειργάσαντο ὡσπερ τροφήν λόγῳ πεπαίνοντι, καὶ τὸν τρόπον τῆς πεπάνσεως καὶ βελτιώσεως ἐκ τινος θείας κατοκωχῆς γεγεννημένον οὐκ ἐξελάλησαν, ἀλλὰ ἐν ἀποκρύφοις αὐτὸν ἐθησαυρίσαντο, οὐκ ἐπαρθέντες τῇ τελετῇ, ὑπενδόντες δὲ καὶ ταπεινωθέντες τὸ
- 63 αὐχῆμα. XVII. πρὸς οὖν εὐχαριστίαν καὶ τιμὴν τοῦ παντοκράτορος εὐζωνοὶ καὶ εὐτρεπεῖς ἀεὶ γινώμεθα μέλλησιν παραιτούμενοι. καὶ γὰρ τὸ Πάσχα, τὴν ἐκ παθῶν εἰς ἄσκησιν ἀρετῆς διάβασιν, προστέτακται ποιεῖσθαι “τὰς ὀσφύς περιεζωσμένους” ἐτοιμῶς πρὸς ὑπηρεσίαν ἔχοντας, καὶ τὸν σάρκινον ὄγκον, “τὰ ὑποδήματα” λέγω,<sup>1</sup> περιεληφότας ἀκλινῶς καὶ παγίως ἐστῶσι<sup>2</sup> “τοῖς ποσὶ,” καὶ τὴν παιδείαν “διὰ χειρὸς” ἔχοντας “ῥάβδον” πρὸς τὴν τῶν ἐν τῷ βίῳ πραγμάτων πάντων ἄπταιστον κατόρθωσιν, καὶ τὸ τελευταῖον “μετὰ σπουδῆς” ἐντραφήναι (Exod.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. λόγῳ.

<sup>2</sup> Pap. ἐστῶτες, from which Wendland conj. ἐστῶτας.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 61-63

there are ears to hear. Some of these have spacious cisterns which retain the influx. Others, because the passages are narrow, cannot imbibe the stream, and the overflow pouring forth unchecked is dispersed in all directions, while to its surface rise and float the secret truths, and thus like a mass of flotsam our most precious treasures are borne away in the current.

And therefore they, who became partakers in the lesser before the greater mysteries,<sup>a</sup> judged wisely, as I think, for they "baked<sup>b</sup> their dough which they brought out of Egypt into buried unleavened cakes" (Exod. xii. 39), that is, they kneaded the savage untamed passion with aid of reason that softened it as though it were food. And the method by which they softened it and wrought it to something better was revealed to them by divine inspiration, and they did not utter it aloud, but treasured it in silence. Their hearts were not lifted up by the revelation; rather they were bowed in submission, and all proud thoughts were humbled.

XVII. Let us then say nay to all hesitation, and present ourselves ever up-girded and ready to give thanks and honour to the Almighty. For we are bidden to keep the Passover, which is the passage from the life of the passions to the practice of virtue, "with our loins girded" ready for service. We must grip the material body of flesh, that is the sandals,<sup>a</sup> with "our feet," that stand firm and sure. We must bear "in our hands the staff" of discipline, to the end that we may walk without stumbling through all the business of life. Last of all we must eat our xii. 11)· διάβασις γάρ ἐστιν οὐ θνητή, ἐπεὶ τοῦ ἀγενήτου καὶ ἀφθάρτου τὸ Πάσχα εἶρηται· καὶ σφόδρα προσηκόντως· οὐδὲν γάρ ἐστι τῶν καλῶν, ὃ μὴ θεοῦ τε καὶ θεῖον.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 491.

<sup>b</sup> Philo in the following words plays with the double sense of πέσσω, (a) bake, (b) ripen and thus soften.

- 64 Ταχέως οὖν αὐτὸ ἀναζήτησον, ὡς ψυχῇ, καθάπερ ὁ ἀσκητῆς Ἰακώβ, ὃς πυνθανομένου τοῦ πατρὸς “ τί τοῦτο ὃ ταχὺ εὔρες, ὡς τέκνον; ” δογματικῶς ἀποκρίνεται “ ὃ παρέδωκε κύριος ὁ θεὸς ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ ” (Gen. xxvii. 20)· πολλῶν γὰρ ἔμπειρος
- [175] πραγμάτων γεγονῶς | ἠπίστατο, ὅτι ἅ μὲν ἂν διδῶ γενεσις ψυχῇ χρόνῳ μακρῶ βεβαιούται, ὡσπερ οἱ τὰς τέχνας καὶ τὰ τῶν τεχνῶν παραγγέλματα τοῖς μανθάνουσι παραδιδόντες· οὐ γὰρ εὐθύς<sup>1</sup> ὡσπερ οἱ προχέοντες εἰς ἄγγος ἰσχύουσιν ἀποπληρῶσαι τὴν τῶν εἰσαγομένων διάνοιαν· ἐπειδὴν δὲ ἡ πηγὴ τῆς σοφίας, ὁ θεός, παραδιδῶ τὰς ἐπιστήμας τῷ θνητῷ γένει, παραδίδωσιν ἀχρόνως· οἱ δ’ ἄτε τοῦ μόνου σοφοῦ μαθηταὶ γεγονότες εὐφυεῖς ταχέως τὰς εὐρέσεις ὧν ἐζήτησαν ἔλαβον.
- 65 XVIII. πρώτη δὲ τῶν εἰσαγομένων ἀρετὴ τὸ διδάσκαλον ὡς ἔνεστι τέλειον ἀτελεῖς μιμῆσθαι γλίχεσθαι. ὁ δὲ διδάσκαλος φθάνει καὶ τὸν χρόνον οὐδ’ ὅτε τὸ πᾶν ἐγέννα συνεργήσαντα, ἐπειδὴ καὶ αὐτὸς γινομένῳ τῷ κόσμῳ συνυφίστατο· ὁ γὰρ θεὸς λέγων ἅμα ἐποίει, μηδὲν μεταξύ ἀμφοῖν τιθεῖς· εἰ δὲ χρή δόγμα κινεῖν ἀληθέστερον, ὁ λόγος ἔργον ἦν αὐτοῦ. λόγου δὲ ὀξυκινήτοτερον οὐδὲν καὶ παρὰ τῷ θνητῷ γένει, παραμείβεται γὰρ ἡ ῥύμη τῶν ὀνομάτων καὶ ῥημάτων τὴν ἐπ’ αὐτοῖς
- 66 φθάνουσα κατάληψιν. ὡσπερ οὖν τὰ διὰ κρουνῶν

<sup>1</sup> To avoid the loose construction Cohn suggests παραδιδόντες οὐ [γὰρ] εὐθύς.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 63-66

meal "in haste" (Exod. xii. 11). For it is no mortal passage, since it is called the passover of the Uncreate and Immortal one. And right fitly is it so called, for there is no good thing which is not divine and is not of God.

Be this then thy quest, my soul, and that quickly, even as it was with the Practiser Jacob. He, when his father asked him "What is this that thou hast found so quickly, my son?" replied (and the words convey an important truth), "It is what the Lord God set before me" (Gen. xxvii. 20). Long experience had taught him that what the world of creation gives <sup>a</sup> to the soul it makes secure <sup>a</sup> only after long time, as it is with those who impart the arts and their rules to their pupils. They cannot at once fill to the brim the mind of the beginners,<sup>b</sup> as one fills a vessel. But when the fountain of wisdom, God, imparts each form of knowledge to the mortal race, He needs not time for the work. Such persons become apt disciples of the only wise Being and discover quickly what they seek.

XVIII. Now the first virtue of beginners<sup>b</sup> is to desire that their imperfection may imitate as far as possible the perfection of the teacher. But the divine Teacher is swifter even than time, for not even when He created the Universe did time co-operate with Him, since time itself only came into being with the world. God spake and it was done—no interval between the two—or it might suggest a truer view to say that His word was deed. Now even amongst us mortals there is nothing swifter than word, for the outrush of the parts of speech leaves behind the hearer's understanding of them. As the perennial streams which pour through the

<sup>a</sup> Or "offers . . . carries out."

<sup>b</sup> Or "pupils."

ἐκχεόμενα ἀέναα ρεῖθρα ἄληκτον ἔχει τὴν φορὰν, ἐπικαταλαμβάνοντος αἰὲ τὴν λήξιν τοῦ ἐπιόντος ρεύματος, οὕτως ἢ τοῦ λόγου πλήμμυρα, ὅταν ἄρξηται φέρεσθαι, τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν τῷ ὀξύκνητοτάτῳ διανοίᾳ, ὃ καὶ τὰς πτηνὰς παραμείβεται φύσεις, συντρέχει. καθάπερ οὖν ὁ ἀγέννητος φθάνει πᾶσαν γένεσιν, οὕτως καὶ ὁ τοῦ ἀγενήτου λόγος παραθεῖ τὸν γενέσεως, κὰν ὀξύτατα ἐπὶ νεφῶν καταφέρηται· διὸ καὶ παρρησιάζεται φάσκων· “ἦδη ὄψει, εἰ ἐπικαταλήψεταιί σε ὁ λόγος μου ἢ οὐ” (Num. xi. 23), ὡς πάντα ἐφθακότος καὶ κατειληφότος τοῦ
 67 θείου λόγου. εἰ δὲ ὁ λόγος ἐφθακε, πολὺ μᾶλλον ὁ λέγων αὐτός, καθάπερ ἐν ἐτέροις μαρτυρεῖ φάσκων· “ὦδε ἐγὼ ἔστηκα ἐκεῖ πρὸ τοῦ σέ” (Exod. xvii. 6)· δηλοῖ γὰρ ὅτι πρὸ παντός ὑφέστηκε τοῦ γενομένου καὶ ὁ ἐνταῦθα ὢν κἀκεῖ καὶ ἀλλαχόθι καὶ πανταχοῦ πεπληρωκῶς πάντα διὰ πάντων καὶ οὐδὲν ἔρημον ἑαυτοῦ καταλελοιπῶς
 68 ὑπάρχει· οὐ γὰρ φησιν “ὦδε ἐγὼ στήσομαι καὶ ἐκεῖ,” ἀλλὰ καὶ νῦν ὅτε πάρεμι ἔστηκα κατὰ τὸν
 [176] αὐτὸν | χρόνον κἀκεῖθι, ἀλλ’ οὐ μεταβατικῶς κινούμενος, ὡς τὸν μὲν ἐπιλαμβάνειν τὸν δὲ ἀπολείπειν τόπον, ἀλλὰ τονικῇ χρώμενος τῇ κινήσει.

Δεόντως οὖν μιμούμενοι τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς φύσιν οἱ ὑπήκοοι παῖδες ἀμελλητὶ μετὰ σπουδῆς πάσης τὰ καλὰ δρῶσιν, ὢν ἔργον ἐστὶ κάλλιστον ἢ
 69 ἀνυπέρθετος θεοῦ τιμῆ. XIX. Φαραῶ

<sup>a</sup> Literally, “overtakes their cessation.”

<sup>b</sup> The LXX. has ὦδε for ὦδε and of course does not intend the meaning which Philo deduces of the omnipresence of God. Similarly the elliptical phrase πρὸ τοῦ σέ means “before outlets of their springs never cease their motion, and cannot rest, for the oncoming flow ever impels them,<sup>a</sup> so the current of words, when it begins to move, keeps pace with that swiftest of things in us—swifter than the flight of birds—the understanding. Thus as the Uncreated anticipates all created being, so the word of the Uncreated outruns the word of the created, though that ride with all speed upon the clouds. Therefore it is that He does not hesitate to say, “now thou shalt see if my word shall overtake thee or not” (Numb. xi. 23), implying that the divine word has outrun and overtaken all things.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 66-69

But if the word has proved swifter than all, much more is it so with Him who speaks, as He testifies in another place. “Here I stand there before thou wast” (Exod. xvii. 6).<sup>b</sup> He shows hereby that His subsistence is before all created being, and that He who is here exists also there and elsewhere and everywhere, for He has filled all wholly and entirely and left nothing where His presence is not. For He does not say “I will stand here and there,” but even now, when I am present here, I stand at the same time there also. My motion is not one of transference in space, where the traveller leaves one place when he occupies another, but it is a motion of self-extension<sup>c</sup> and self-expansion.

Necessarily then do His loyal children imitate their Father's nature and, with a forwardness that brooks no delay, do what is excellent, and the most excellent deed of all is before aught else to honour God.

XIX. But Pharaoh the “Disperser thou comest,” but the next words show that Philo took it as in the translation. Cf. L.A. iii. 4.

<sup>c</sup> See App. p. 491.

δὲ ὁ σκεδαστῆς τῶν καλῶν ἀχρόνων δυνάμεων φαντασίαν οὐχ οἷός τε ὦν δέξασθαι, τὰ ψυχῆς ὄμματα πεπηρωμένος, οἷς μόνοις αἱ ἀσώματοι καταλαμβάνονται φύσεις, οὐδὲ ὠφεληθῆναι δι' ἀχρόνων ὑπομένει, ἀλλὰ ταῖς ἀψύχοις δόξαις, λέγων δὲ “βατράχοις,” πιεσθεὶς ἤχον καὶ ψόφον ἔρημοι καὶ κενὸν πραγμάτων ἀποτελούσαις, εἰπόντος Μωυσέως “τάξαι πρὸς μέ, πότε εὕξομαι περὶ σοῦ καὶ τῶν θεραπόντων σου, ἀφανίσαι τοὺς βατράχους” (Exod. viii. 9), δέον ἐν ἀνάγκαις σφοδραῖς ὄντα εἰπεῖν “εὐθύς εὐχου,” ὑπερτίθεται λέγων “εἰς αὔριον,” ἵνα διὰ πάντων τὴν ὁμαλότητα

70 τῆς ἀθεότητος διαφυλάξῃ. τοῦτο σχεδὸν ἅπασι παρακολουθεῖ τοῖς ἐπαμφοτερισταῖς, κἂν μὴ διὰ τῶν ὀνομάτων καὶ ῥημάτων ὁμολογῶσιν· ἐπειδὴν γὰρ συμβῆ ἢ τι τῶν ἀβουλήτων, ἅτε μὴ πεπιστευκότες παγίως τῷ σωτήρι θεῷ πρότερον καταφεύγουσιν ἐπὶ τὰς ἐν γενέσει βοηθείας, ἰατρούς, βοτάνας, φαρμάκων συνθέσεις, δίαιται ἠκριβωμένην, τᾶλλα πάνθ' ὅσα παρὰ τῷ θνητῷ γένει βοηθήματα· κἂν ἄρα εἶπη τις “καταφεύγετε. ὦ μάταιοι, ἐπὶ τὸν μόνον ἰατρὸν ψυχῆς ἀρρωστημάτων μεθέμενοι τὴν ἀπὸ γενέσεως τῆς παθητῆς ψευδώνυμον ὠφέλειαν,” γελῶσι καὶ χλευάζουσιν ἐπιφωνοῦντες “ταῦτα εἰς αὔριον,” ὡς οὐδ' ἂν εἴ τι γένοιτο περὶ τῆς τῶν παρόντων κακῶν

71 ἀποτροπῆς ἰκετεύσοντες τὸ θεῖον· ἀλλ' ὅταν γε τῶν ἀνθρωπειῶν μηδὲν ἀρκῆ, πάντα δὲ εὐρίσκηται καὶ τὰ παιώνια βλαβερά, τηνικαῦτα ἐξ ἀμηχανίας πολλῆς, τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ἄλλων ὠφέλειαν ἀπογνόντες, ἄκοντες οἱ δεῖλαιοι καταφεύγουσιν ὀψὲ καὶ μόλις ἐπὶ τὸν μόνον σωτήρα θεόν· ὁ δ' ἅτε εἰδὼς τὰ ἐν

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 69-71

of the excellent" cannot receive the vision of timeless values, for the eyes of the soul, whereby alone incorporeal natures are apprehended, are blinded in him, nor will he bring himself to get help through what is timeless. When he is plagued by the frogs, those soulless opinions and conjectures, which produce noise and sound destitute and devoid of all reality, Moses said to him, "Appoint with me a time, when I shall pray for thee and thy servants, to take away the frogs" (Exod. viii. 9). Though in that dire strait he should have said "Pray for me at once," he puts it off with the word "to-morrow." He must needs maintain to the end the unchanging level of his godlessness.

This is the case with almost all the Facing-both-ways, even though they do not admit it in so many words. When anything befalls them which they would not, since they have never had any firm faith in God their Saviour, they first flee to the help which things created give, to physicians, herbs, drug-mixtures, strict rules of diet, and all the other aids that mortals use. And if one say to them, "Flee, ye fools, to the one and only physician of soul-sickness and cast away the help, miscalled as such, of the created and the mutable," they laugh and mock, and all their answer is "to-morrow for that," as though, whatever may befall, they would never supplicate God to save them from the ills that beset them. But when no human help avails, and all things, even healing remedies, prove to be but mischievous, then out of the depths of their helplessness, despairing of all other aid, still even in their misery reluctant, at this late hour they betake themselves to the only saviour, God. He, for He ἀνάγκαις ἄκυρα οὐκ ἐπὶ πάντων χρήται τῷ νόμῳ, ἀλλ' ἐφ' ὧν καλὸν καὶ συμφέρον χρήσθαι.

Πᾶς οὖν λογισμὸς κτήματα ἑαυτοῦ τὰ πάντα ἡγούμενος καὶ ἑαυτὸν προτιμῶν θεοῦ—τὸ γὰρ “ μεθ' ἡμέρας θύειν ” τοιοῦτον ὑποβάλλει νοῦν— ἔνοχος ὢν ἀσεβείας ἴστω γραφῆ.

- 72 XX. Καὶ τὸ μὲν πρότερον ἔγκλημα τοῦ Κάιν ἀποχρώντως ἐπεξήλθομεν. τὸ δ' ἕτερον τοιοῦτον ἦν· τί δήποτε ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ [177] τῶν πρώτων καρπῶν φέρει τὴν ἀπαρχήν; μήποτε διὰ τὴν αὐτὴν αἰτίαν, ἵνα τὰ μὲν πρεσβεία γενέσει δῶ, τοῖς δὲ δευτερείοις ἀμείψηται τὸ θεῖον· ὡσπερ γὰρ εἰσὶ τινες οἱ ψυχῆς προκρίνουσι σῶμα, τῆς δεσποίνης τὸ δοῦλον, οὕτως εἰσὶν οἱ γένεσιν μᾶλλον θεοῦ τετιμῆκασι, πρόσταγμα τεθεικότος τοῦ νομοθέτου, ἵνα “ τὰς ἀπαρχὰς τῶν πρωτογεννημάτων τῆς γῆς εἰσφέρωμεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ ” (Exod. xxiii. 19), ἀλλὰ μὴ ἑαυτοῖς ἐπιγράφωμεν· καὶ γὰρ δίκαιον τῶν τῆς ψυχῆς κινήματων ὅσα πρῶτα ἢ τάξει ἢ δυνάμει θεῷ ὁμολογεῖν.
- 73 τὰ μὲν οὖν τῇ τάξει πρῶτα τοιαυτὰ ἔστιν, οἷς κατὰ τὴν πρώτην γένεσιν εὐθὺς ἐκοινωνήσαμεν, τροφή αὔξησις ὄρασις ἀκοή γεῦσις ὄσφρησις ἀφή λόγος νοῦς, μέρη ψυχῆς, μέρη σώματος, αἱ τούτων ἐνέργειαι, συνόλως κινήσεις αὐτῶν καὶ σχέσεις αἱ κατὰ φύσιν· τὰ δὲ ἀξιώματι καὶ δυνάμει τὰ κατορθώματα, αἱ ἀρεταί, αἱ κατ' ἀρετὰς
- 74 πράξεις. δίκαιον οὖν ἀπὸ τούτων ἀπαρχεσθαι, αἱ δὲ ἀπαρχαὶ λόγος ἔστιν ἐκ διανοίας

<sup>a</sup> A strange use of νόμος, but neither Mangey's εὐμενεία nor Wendland's δυνάμει are satisfactory.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 71-74

knows that what is done under stress of necessity has no sure foundation, does not in all cases follow His law (of mercy),<sup>a</sup> but only when it may be followed for good and with profit.

So then every imagination which counts that all things are its own possession and honours itself before God—and such a mind is shown by the words “to sacrifice after some days”—may know that it stands in danger to be brought to the judgement-bar for impiety.

XX. We have now sufficiently considered the first charge against Cain. The second was as follows. Why does he make his offering of firstlings from the fruits instead of from the first-fruits? Surely for the same reason, namely to give the first honour to created being and render only the second to God. For as there are some who prefer the body to the soul, the slave to the mistress, so there are those who have honoured the created rather than God. And yet the Lawgiver laid down that we should bring “the firstlings of the first-fruits of the land into the house of the Lord God” (Exod. xxiii. 19), and not ascribe them to ourselves. For it is right that we should acknowledge as belonging to God all the movements of the soul that come first either in order or in value.

The first in order are those in which we became at once participators, when we came into existence, taking nourishment, growth, sight, hearing, taste, smell, touch, reason, mind, the parts of the soul, the parts of the body, their activities, in general their natural movements and states. The first in worth and value are righteous conduct, virtues, and virtuous actions.

Of these then it is right to offer the firstlings, and the

- ἀληθοῦς ἀναπεμπόμενος εὐχαριστητικός· τέμνε δὲ αὐτὸν κατὰ τὰς οἰκείας τομὰς, ὄνπερ τρόπον ἢ λύρα καὶ τὰ ἄλλα μουσικῆς ὄργανα τέτμηται· τῶν γὰρ ἐν τούτοις φθόγγων καὶ καθ' αὐτὸν ἕκαστος ἤρμοσται καὶ πρὸς τὴν ἑτέρου συμφωνίαν μάλιστα ὤκείωται, καθάπερ καὶ τῶν ἐν γραμματικῇ στοιχείων τὰ λεγόμενα φωνήεντα, ἃ καὶ καθ' αὐτὰ φωνεῖται καὶ σὺν ἑτέροις ὀλόκληρον ἀποτελεῖ
- 75 φωνήν. πολλὰς γὰρ δυνάμεις αἰσθητικὰς τε καὶ λογικὰς καὶ νοητὰς ἐν ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς ἢ φύσις δημιουργήσασα καὶ πρὸς τι τῶν οἰκείων ἑκάστην τείνασα ἔργων καὶ πάλιν πάσας ἀρμοσαμένη δι' ἀναλογίας κοινωνία καὶ συμφωνία τῇ πρὸς ἀλλήλας ὀρθότατα ἂν καὶ ἐφ' ἑκάστη καὶ ἐφ' ἀπάσαις εὐδαιμονίζουτο.
- 76 XXI. Διόπερ “ἐὰν προσφέρῃς θυσίαν πρωτογεννημάτων,” οὕτως διαίρει, ὡς ὑφηγεῖται ὁ ἱερός λόγος (Lev. ii. 14)· “νέα” τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα “πεφρυγμένα,” ἔπειτα “χίδρα,” καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσιν “ἐρικτά.” “νέα” μὲν διὰ τὸδε· τοὺς τὸν παλαιὸν καὶ γέροντα καὶ μυθώδη χρόνον ἀσπαζομένους, ταχεῖαν δὲ καὶ ἄχρονον θεοῦ δύναμιν μὴ συνεωρακότας ἐκδιδάσκει νέα καὶ ἐπακμάζοντα καὶ ἀνηβῶντα προτρέπων ἐνθύμια λαμβάνειν, ἵνα μὴ παλαιαῖς ἐντρεφόμενοι μυθο-
- [178] ποίαις, | ὡς ὁ μακρὸς αἰὼν ἐπὶ ἀπάτῃ τοῦ θνητοῦ παραδέδωκε, ψευδοδοξῶσιν, ἀλλὰ παρὰ τοῦ αἰετῶ ἀγήρω [νέου] θεοῦ τὰ νέα καὶ καινὰ ἀγαθὰ μετὰ πάσης ἀφθονίας λαμβάνοντες ἐκδιδάσκονται μηδὲν ἠγγεῖσθαι παρ' αὐτῷ παλαιὸν ἢ συνόλως

<sup>a</sup> That Philo gives this meaning to χίδρα is clear from 82 ff., but it is difficult to see what process he is thinking

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 74-76

firstlings are the word of thanksgiving, sent up out of a true and sincere mind. This thank-offering we should divide into its proper sections, just as the lyre and other musical instruments have their parts. There each of the notes has music in itself and also is fully adapted to make harmony with another. Or again in the alphabet the vocals or vowels are each sounded by themselves and also with the consonants form entire and single sounds. So with ourselves, for nature has framed in us manifold powers of sense-perception and reason and intelligence, each attuned to some function of its own, and also she has so adjusted them all in due proportion, that they work in unity and harmony with each other. Whether we consider each severally or all together, we may justly say that nature has indeed been happy in her work.

XXI. Wherefore, "if you bring an offering of first-fruits," make such division as Holy Writ prescribes (Lev. ii. 14). First the new, then the roasted, then the sliced,<sup>a</sup> and last the ground. The new is for the following reason. To those who cling to the old-world days with their fabled past and have not realized the instantaneous and timeless power of God, it is a lesson bidding them accept ideas that are new and fresh and in the vigour of youth. It bids them feed no more on effete fables, which the long course of the ages has handed down for the deception of mortal kind, and thus be filled with false opinions, but rather receive in full and generous measure new, fresh, blessed thoughts from the ever ageless God. So shall they be schooled to understand that with Him nothing is ancient, nothing of. In the LXX. the word properly means "groats" and is the substantive to which the other three are adjectives.

παρῆλυθός, ἀλλὰ γινόμενόν τε ἀχρόνως καὶ ὑφ-77 εστηκός.

XXII. οὐ χάριν καὶ δι' ἑτέρων
φησίν· “ ἀπὸ προσώπου πολιουῦ ἐξαναστήσῃ, καὶ τιμήσεις πρόσωπον πρεσβυτέρου ” (Lev. xix. 32),
ὡς παμμεγέθους διαφορᾶς οὔσης· πολὺς μὲν γὰρ
ὁ μηδὲν ἐνεργῶν ἐστι χρόνος, ἀφ' οὗ μετανίστασθαι
καὶ ἀποδιδράσκεν δεῖ τὴν μυρίουσ ἀπατῶσαν
ἐκκλίνοντας ὑπόληψιν, ὡς ἄρα τι ποιεῖν οὗτος πέφυκε· πρεσβύτερος δὲ ὁ τιμῆς καὶ γέρως καὶ
πρεσβείων ἐπάξιος ὢν, ὃν Μωυσῆ τῷ θεοφιλεῖ δοκιμάζειν ἐπιτέτραπται· “ οὗς γὰρ σὺ οἶδας,” φησίν “ οὗτοί εἰσι πρεσβύτεροι ” (Num. xi. 16),
ὡς ἂν μηδεμίαν ἀποδεχομένου νεωτεροποιίαν,
ἀλλὰ πρεσβυτέρων καὶ τῆς ἀνωτάτω τιμῆς ἀξίω 78 δογμάτων εἰωθότος ἐρᾶν.

ὠφέλιμον μὲν
οὖν, εἰ καὶ μὴ πρὸς ἀρετῆς κτῆσιν τελείας, ἀλλὰ
τοι πρὸς πολιτείαν, καὶ τὸ παλαιαῖς καὶ ὠγγυίοις
ἐντρέφεσθαι δόξαις καὶ ἀρχαίαν ἀκοὴν ἔργων καλῶν μεταδιώκειν, ἅπερ ἱστορικοὶ καὶ σύμπαν
τὸ ποιητικὸν γένος τοῖς τε καθ' αὐτοὺς καὶ τοῖς ἔπειτα μνήμη παραδεδώκασιν. ἀλλ' ὅταν γε μὴ προϊδομένοις μηδὲ ἐλπίσασι φέγγος αἰφνίδιον ἐπιλάμψῃ τὸ αὐτομαθοῦς σοφίας, ἥ δὲ τὸ μεμυκὸς ὄμμα ψυχῆς διοίξασα ἀντὶ ἀκροατῶν θεατὰς ἐπιστήμης
ἐργάσῃται τὴν ὠκυδρομωτάτην αἰσθήσεων ὄψιν
πρὸ τῆς βραδυτέρας ἀκοῆς ἐν διανοίᾳ θείσα, 79 μάταιον ἔτι διὰ λόγων ὦτα γυμνάζειν. XXIII.

<sup>a</sup> Or perhaps “ using another figure,” literally “ through other things.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 76-79

at all past, but all is in its birth and existence timeless.

XXII. And therefore in another place <sup>a</sup> we find, "thou shalt rise up away from the head of the hoary <sup>b</sup> and thou shalt honour the head of the elder" (Lev. xix. 32). He suggests a vast contrast between the two words. For by "hoary" is meant time which has no activity, from whose presence we must hurry to depart and shun the illusion which deceives the multitude, that time is capable of effecting anything. By "elder" is meant he that is worthy of honour and privilege and high place, and to approve such was the task entrusted to Moses, the friend of God. For "whom thou knowest," it runs, "these are the elders" (Numb. xi. 16), meaning that he would welcome no mere innovation, but his wont is to love the truths that come from older days and are worthy of the highest reverence.

No doubt it is profitable, if not for the acquisition of perfect virtue, at any rate for the life of civic virtue, to feed the mind on ancient and time-honoured thoughts, to trace the venerable tradition of noble deeds, which historians and all the family of poets <sup>c</sup> have handed down to the memory of their own and future generations. But when, unforeseen and un hoped for, the sudden beam of self-inspired wisdom has shone upon us, when that wisdom has opened the closed eye of the soul and made us spectators rather than hearers of knowledge, and substituted in our minds sight, the swiftest of senses, for the slower sense of hearing, then it is idle any longer to exercise the ear with words. XXIII. And διὸ καὶ λέγεται· “ φάγεσθε παλαιὰ καὶ παλαιὰ παλαιῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ παλαιὰ ἐκ προσώπου νέων ἐξοίσετε ” (Lev. xxvi. 10), ὡς δέον πολιὸν μὲν μάθημα χρόνῳ μηδὲν ἀρνεῖσθαι πειρωμένους καὶ γράμμασι σοφῶν ἀνδρῶν ἐντυγχάνειν καὶ γνώμαις καὶ διηγήσεσιν ἀρχαιολογούντων παρεῖναι καὶ φιλοπευστεῖν αἰεὶ περὶ τῶν προτέρων καὶ ἀνθρώπων καὶ πραγμάτων, τοῦ μηδὲν ἀγνοεῖν ὄντος ἡδίστου, νέας δὲ ὅταν ἀνατείλῃ βλάστας αὐτοδιδάκτου σοφίας ὁ θεὸς ἐν ψυχῇ, τὰ ἐκ διδασκαλίας εὐθὺς περιγράφειν καὶ περισύρειν ὑπονοστοῦντα καὶ ὑπορρέοντα ἐξ ἑαυτῶν· τὸν γὰρ θεοῦ φοιτητὴν ἢ γνώριμον ἢ μαθητὴν ἢ ὃ τί ποτε χρῆ θεμένους ὄνομα καλεῖν αὐτὸν ἀμήχανον ἔτι θνητῶν ὑφ-γγήσεως ἀνέχεσθαι.

<sup>b</sup> The LXX. no doubt means, as in our version, "thou shalt rise up before the hoary head."

<sup>c</sup> Cf. description of γραμματική in De Cher. 105 and note in App. p. 485.

- 80 XXIV. “ Ἐστω δὲ ἡ νέα<sup>1</sup> ψυχῆς ἀκμὴ “ πεφρυγ-
 [179] μένη,” τουτέστιν, | ὡς πυρὶ χρυσός, λόγῳ δυνατῶ
 βεβασανισμένη· τοῦ δὲ βεβασανίσθαι καὶ δεδοκι-μάσθαι σημεῖον τὸ πεπηγέναι· καθάπερ γὰρ ὁ τῶν
 τεθηλότων ἀσταχῶν καρπός, ἵνα μηκέτι πλαδᾶ, φρύγεται, τοῦτο δ’ οὐκ ἄνευ πυρὸς πέφυκε συμβαίνειν, οὕτως καὶ τὴν νέαν πρὸς ἀρετῆς ἀκμὴν
 ἀνάληψιν<sup>2</sup> δυνατῶ καὶ ἀνικῆτῳ λόγῳ χρῆ πάγιον
 καὶ σταθερωτάτην ἀπεργάζεσθαι· πέφυκε δὲ ὁ λόγος οὐ μόνον πῆττειν ἐν ψυχῇ τὰ θεωρήματα
 διαρρεῖν αὐτὰ κωλύων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν τοῦ ἀλόγου 81 πάθους ὄρμην εὐτόνως ἐκλύειν. ἴδε γέ τοι τὸν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. νέας.

<sup>2</sup> Conj. Mangey ἀνάληψιν ἀκμὴν.

<sup>a</sup> Literally “ old of old.” The real meaning of the verse

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 79-81

so we read "ye shall eat the old and older yet,"<sup>a</sup> but also bear out the old from the face of the new" (Lev. xxvi. 10). The meaning is this. We must not indeed reject any learning that has grown grey through time, nay, we should make it our aim to read the writings of the sages and listen to proverbs and old-world stories from the lips of those who know antiquity, and ever seek for knowledge about the men and deeds of old. For truly it is sweet to leave nothing unknown. Yet when God causes the young shoots of self-inspired wisdom to spring up within the soul, the knowledge that comes from teaching must straightway be abolished and swept off. Ay, even of itself it will subside and ebb away. God's scholar, God's pupil, God's disciple, call him by whatever name you will, cannot any more suffer the guidance of men.

XXIV. Again, let the fresh ripeness of the soul be "roasted," that is tested by the might of reason, as gold is tested by the furnace. The sign that it has been tested and approved is its solidity. For as the grain in the full-grown ears is roasted, that it may no longer be soft and flaccid, and this result can only be attained by fire, so too young aspirations to the ripeness of virtue must be made solid and steadfast by the invincible power of reason. Reason indeed not only can harden<sup>b</sup> within the soul the principles it has acquired and save them from looseness and dissolution, but it also has the vigour<sup>c</sup> to reduce to weakness the impulses of unreasoning passion. Behold the Practiser Jacob "seething" presumably is "you shall have so much old corn, that you will cast it away when the new is ready."

<sup>b</sup> Or "fix."

<sup>c</sup> See App. p. 491.

ἀσκητὴν Ἰακώβ ἔφοντα αὐτήν, ὅτε καὶ “ Ἡσαῦ ἐκλείπων ” (Gen. xxv. 29) εὐθύς εὐρίσκεται· θεμέλιος γὰρ τῷ φαύλῳ κακία καὶ πάθος, οἷς ἐπερηρισμένος, ὅταν ἐξήττημένα καὶ παρειμένα ὑπὸ τοῦ αἰρούντος αὐτὰ λόγου θεάσῃται, κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς ἐκλύεται τοὺς ἰσχύος δεσμούς.

- 82 Ἔστω δὲ ὁ λόγος μὴ συγκεχυμένος, ἀλλ’ εἰς οἰκείους τετμήσθω τομάς· τὸ “ χίδρα ” ποιῆσαι τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν· ἐν ἅπαντι μὲν γὰρ ἀταξίας ἄμεινον ἢ τάξις, μάλιστα δ’ ἐν ὀξύτατα ρεούσῃ φύσει, τῷ λόγῳ. XXV. διαιρετέον οὖν αὐτὸν εἰς κεφάλαια προηγούμενα, τὰ λεγόμενα ἐμπίπτοντα, καὶ ἐφαρμοστέον ἐκάστῳ τὰς οἰκείους κατασκευάς, μιμουμένους τοὺς ἀγαθοὺς τῶν τοξοτῶν, οἳ σκοπόν τινα προθέμενοι τὰ βέλη πάντα ἐπ’ αὐτὸν ἀφιέναι πειρῶνται· σκοπῷ μὲν γὰρ τὸ κεφάλαιον, βέλεσι
- 83 δὲ ἔοικεν ἡ κατασκευή. οὕτως τὸ πάντων ἀριστον ἐσθημάτων ὁ λόγος ἀρμονίως συνυφαίνεται· καὶ γὰρ τὰ πέταλα τοῦ χρυσοῦ κατατέμνει ὁ νομοθέτης εἰς τρίχας, ὥστε συνυφῆναι τὰ οἰκεία ἐπιμόνως (Exod. xxxvi. 10)· οὕτως ὁ τιμιώτερος χρυσοῦ λόγος ποίκιλμα ὢν ἐκ μυρίων ἰδεῶν ἐπαινετῶς τελεσιουργεῖται, ὅταν ἄχρι τῶν λεπτοτάτων κεφαλαίων τμηθεὶς τρόπον τινὰ νήματος δέξῃται
- 84 καθάπερ κρόκην ἀποδείξεις ἐναρμονίους. προστέτακται μέντοι καὶ “ τὸ ὀλοκαύτωμα δείραντας εἰς μέλη διανεῖμαι ” (Lev. i. 6), ὑπὲρ τοῦ πρῶτον μὲν γυμνὴν ἄνευ σκεπασμάτων, ὅσα περιποιούσιν αἱ

<sup>a</sup> The whole verse in the LXX. is ἦλθε δὲ Ἰακώβ ἔφημα, ἦλθε δὲ Ἡσαῦ ἐκ τοῦ πεδίου ἐκλείπων. Philo deduces from the juxtaposition of Jacob's "seething" and Esau's "fainting" that the bad man's power is destroyed by the fire of reason, which subdues passion.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 491.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 81-84

these impulses, and then the next moment we find Esau "fainting" (Gen. xxv. 29).<sup>a</sup> For the bad man is based on vice and passion and, when he sees the props on which he rests conquered and robbed of strength by the reason which convicts them, he must in natural consequence find the bonds loosened which knit his strength together.

But again this reason <sup>b</sup> must not be a confused mass, but divided into its proper sections. This is the meaning of "slicing" the offering. Order is better than disorder everywhere, but especially in that nature of swiftest outflow, reason. XXV. It must therefore be divided into main or leading thoughts, the so-called 'relevant topics,' and each of these must be provided with its properly constructed development. In this way we shall imitate the skilled archers, who set up a target and aim all their arrows at it. For the main thought is like the target and the developments like the arrows. In this way we weave into a harmonious whole that noblest of garments, reason; for the lawgiver cuts the plate of gold into threads, to weave them each in its fitting place into a lasting whole (Exod. xxxvi. 10). And so reason, which is more precious than gold, the rich and manifold union of myriad forms, is brought to its excellent perfection, if first it be shredded into the utmost nicety of leading thoughts and points, and then through these the arguments and demonstrations which they need are passed like wool through the warp. Further, there is the command that, when the victim destined to be burnt whole has been flayed, it shall be divided into its limbs (Lev. i. 6), in order that first the soul should be seen in its nakedness without the covering with

κεναὶ καὶ ψευδεῖς ὑπολήψεις, τὴν ψυχὴν φανῆναι, εἶτα δέξασθαι διαιρέσεις ἐμμελεῖς· τὸ γὰρ ὅλον καὶ ἐν γένει ἢ ἀρετῇ, ἢ κατὰ εἶδη τὰ προσεχῆ [180] τέμνεται, φρόνησιν καὶ σωφροσύνην | καὶ ἀνδρείαν καὶ δικαιοσύνην, ἵνα τὰς καθ' ἕκαστον εἰδότες διαφορὰς ἐκούσιον ὑπομένωμεν λατρείαν καὶ καθ' 85 ὅλα καὶ κατὰ μέρη. σκοπῶμεν δὲ ὅπως τὴν τε ψυχὴν γυμνάσομεν, μὴ ὀλοσχερέσι καὶ ἀτυπώτοις φαντασίαις ὑποσυγχύτως ἀπατᾶσθαι, τομὰς δὲ καὶ διαιρέσεις ποιουμένην τῶν πραγμάτων διακύπτειν εἰς ἕκαστον ἔρευναν μετὰ πάσης ἀκριβείας ληψομένην, τὸν τε λόγον, ὃς [οὐκ] ἀτάκτῳ ῥύμῃ φερόμενος ἀσάφειαν ἐργάζεται, τμηθεὶς δὲ εἰς τὰ οἰκεῖα κεφάλαια καὶ τὰς εἰς ἕκαστον ἀποδείξεις ὥσπερ ζῶον ἐκ τελείων μερῶν συμπαγεῖς ἀρμοσθήσεται.

Χρῆ δέ, εἰ μέλλει ταῦτα παρ' ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς βεβαιουῦσθαι, μελέτην καὶ ἀσκήσιν αὐτῶν ποιεῖσθαι συνεχῆ· ὡς τό γε ἀψαμένους ἐπιστήμης μὴ ἐπιμεῖναι ὁμοίον ἐστὶ τῷ γευσασμένους σιτίων ἢ ποτῶν εἰς κόρον 86 κωλυθῆναι τραφῆναι. XXVI. μετὰ τὸ “ χίδρα ” οὐδὲν ἀρμόττει ποιεῖν “ ἐρικτά,” τουτέστι μετὰ τὴν διαίρεσιν ἐνδιατρίβειν καὶ ἐνσχολάζειν τοῖς ἐπινοηθεῖσι· συνεχῆς γὰρ ἀσκήσις ἐπιστήμην πάγιον ἐργάζεται, ὡς ἀμαθίαν ἀμελετησία· μυριοὶ γοῦν ἀθλήσεως ὄκνω καὶ τὴν ἐκ φύσεως ἰσχύον ἐξέλυσαν, οὓς οὐκ ἐμμήσαντο οἱ τροφῆ θείᾳ τὴν ψυχὴν τρα-

<sup>a</sup> γυμνάζω in ordinary use means simply “exercise.” But there is perhaps a play on its derivation from γυμνός.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 84-86

which false and idle conjectures invest it, and then be divided as the limbs demand. It is virtue which is the whole and is seen as a genus, and it is then divided into its primary species, prudence, temperance, courage, and justice, so that observing the distinctions between each of these we may undertake willing service to them both severally and together.

Let us see to it that we exercise our soul stripped of its encumbrances,<sup>a</sup> that it be not confused and deceived by vague, wholesale, indiscriminate ideas of things, but may divide and classify such things as come before it, and look closely into each, so that it may make its scrutiny with strictest care. And so too we must train our reason, which so long as it flows in disordered current can only create obscurity, but when divided into its proper heads, with the arguments and demonstrations suited to each, will like a living animal be compacted of parts complete in themselves, and made into a harmonious whole.

Once more, if these things are to be our lasting possession we must continually exercise and discipline ourselves therein. For contact with knowledge without abiding in it is as if we should taste food or drink, and then be barred from receiving its nourishment to the full. XXVI. So after the "slicing" must come the "pounding," that is, after division and classification we must continually dwell in and linger over the thoughts presented to our minds. Continued exercise makes solid knowledge, as its absence makes ignorance. We see how great is the multitude of those who, through shirking bodily training, have enfeebled their natural strength. Not such an example did those follow who fed their φέντες τῷ λεγομένῳ μάννα· οὗτοι γὰρ ἤλουν καὶ ἔτριβον αὐτὸ ποιοῦντες ἐγκρυφίας (Num. xi. 8), τὸν οὐράνιον ἀρετῆς λόγον ἀνατρίβειν καὶ ἐπιλαίειν ἔνεκα τοῦ τυπῶσαι βεβαιότερον τὴν διάνοιαν ἐγνωκότες.

87 "Ὅταν οὖν "νέα" τὴν ἀκμὴν καὶ "πεφρυγμένα" τὸν πεπυρωμένον καὶ ἀνίκητον λόγον καὶ "χίδρα" τὴν τομὴν καὶ διαίρεσιν τῶν πραγμάτων καὶ "ἐρικτὰ" τὴν τριβὴν καὶ μελέτην τῶν ἐπινοηθέντων ὁμολογῆς κατὰ θεόν, πρωτογεννημάτων οἴσεις θυσίαν, ὧν πρώτων καὶ ἀρίστων ἐγέννησεν ἡ ψυχὴ. καὶ ἡμεῖς μέντοι βραδύνωμεν, αὐτὸς οὐ βραδύνει τοὺς ἐπιτηδείους πρὸς θεραπείαν λαβεῖν ἑαυτῷ· "λήψομαι" γὰρ φησιν "ὑμᾶς ἑμαυτῷ λαὸν ἐμοὶ καὶ ἔσομαι ὑμῶν θεός" (Exod. vi. 7) "καὶ ὑμεῖς ἔσεσθέ μοι λαός· ἐγὼ εἰμι κύριος" (Lev. xxvi. 12).

88 XXVII. Τὰ μὲν δὴ τοῦ Κάλω μεθ' ἡμέρας φέροντος θυσίαν ἐγκλήματα τοιαῦτα ἦν. "Ἄβελ δὲ ἤνεγκεν οὐ τὰ αὐτὰ οὐδὲ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον, ἀλλ' ἀντὶ μὲν ἀψύχων ἔμψυχα, ἀντὶ δὲ νεωτέρων καὶ δευτερείων πρεσβύτερα καὶ πρῶτα, ἀντὶ δὲ ἡσθενηκότων ἐρρωμένα καὶ πιότερα· "ἀπὸ γὰρ τῶν πρωτοτόκων τῶν προβάτων αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν στεάτων αὐτῶν" φησὶ τὴν θυσίαν ποιήσασθαι

89 (Gen. iv. 4), κατὰ τὸ ἱερώτατον διάταγμα· ἔστι [181] δὲ τοιούδε· "καὶ ἔσται" | φησὶν "ὡς ἂν εἰσαγάγῃ σε κύριος ὁ θεός σου εἰς τὴν γῆν τῶν Χανααναίων, ὃν τρόπον ὤμοσε τοῖς πατράσι σου, καὶ δῶ σοι αὐτήν, καὶ ἀφελεῖς πᾶν διανοῖγον μῆτραν, τὰ

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 86-89

soul with the heavenly food called manna. They ground and chafed it and made of it "buried" cakes (Numb. xi. 8), judging it right to crush and grind virtue's heaven-sent discourse, that its impress on their understanding might be the firmer.

When then you acknowledge as God wills these four things, the 'new,' that is the blossom or vigour; the 'roasted,' that is the fire-tested and invincible reason; the 'sliced,' that is the division of things into their classes; the 'pounded,' that is the persistent practice and exercise in what the mind has grasped, you will bring an offering of the first-fruits, even the first and best offspring of the soul. Yet even if we are slow to do this, He Himself is not slow to take to Himself those who are fit for His service. "I will take you," He says, "to be My people and I will be your God (Exod. vi. 7), and ye shall be to Me a people. I am the Lord" (Lev. xxvi. 12).

XXVII. Such were the charges brought against Cain who made his offering after many days. But Abel brought other offerings and in other manner. His offering was living, Cain's was lifeless. His was first in age and value, Cain's but second. His had strength and superior fatness, Cain's had but weakness.<sup>a</sup> For we are told that Abel offered of the firstlings of the sheep and of their fat (Gen. iv. 4). And thus he fulfilled the sacred ordinance, "It shall be when the Lord thy God has brought thee into the land of the Canaanites, as He sware to thy fathers, and shall give it unto thee, thou shalt separate everything that opens the womb that is ἀρσενικά, τῷ κυρίῳ, πᾶν διανοίγον <μήτραν> ἐκ τῶν βουκολίων ἐν τοῖς κτήνεσιν ὅσα ἂν γένηται σοι, τὰ ἀρσενικά, τῷ κυρίῳ. πᾶν διανοίγον μήτραν ὄνου ἀλλάξεις προβάτω· ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ἀλλάξης, λυτρώση αὐτό" (Exod. xiii. 11-13). τὸ γὰρ διανοίγον μήτραν τὸ "Ἀβελ δῶρόν ἐστι πρωτότοκον, ὃ τότε καὶ πῶς δεῖ φέρειν ἐρεύνησον.

<sup>a</sup> If the tense of ἡσθενηκότων is to be pressed the idea may be that Cain's fruits, not being first-fruits, had lost their strength.

90 καιρὸς μὲν δὴ ἐπιτηδειότατος, ὅταν εἰσαγάγῃ σε ὁ θεὸς εἰς τὸν σαλεύοντα λόγον, τὴν τῶν Χανααίων γῆν, οὐχ ὄν τύχοι τρόπον, ἀλλ' ὄν ὤμοσεν αὐτός· οὐχ ἵνα σάλον καὶ τροπὴν καὶ κλύδωνα ὧδε κάκεισε φορούμενος ἀστάτως ὑπομένης, ἀλλ' ἵνα τοῦ σάλου παυσάμενος αἰθρίαν καὶ γαλήνην ἀγάγῃς καὶ ὡσπερ εἰς ὑπόδρομον ἢ ὑφορμον ἢ ναυλοχώτατον λιμένα τὴν ἀρετὴν ἀφικόμενος βεβαίως ἰδρυθῆς.

91 XXVIII. "Ὅταν δὲ λέγῃ τὸν θεὸν ὀμνύειν, σκεπτέον εἰ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ὡς ἐπιβάλλον αὐτῷ τοῦτο ἀποφαίνεται, ἐπεὶ μυρίοις ἔδοξεν ἀνοίκειον εἶναι· ὄρκου γὰρ ἔννοιά ἐστι μαρτυρία θεοῦ περὶ πράγματος ἀμφισβητουμένου· θεῷ δὲ οὐδὲν ἄδηλον οὐδὲ ἀμφισβητούμενον, ὃς καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις τὰ γνωρίσματα τῆς ἀληθείας ἐναργῶς ἐπιδέδειχε· μάρτυρός γε μὴν οὐδενὸς δεῖται, οὐδὲ γάρ ἐστιν
92 ἄλλος θεὸς ἰσότημος αὐτῷ. ἐῷ λέγειν ὅτι ὁ μαρτυρῶν, παρόσον μαρτυρεῖ, κρείττων ἐστὶ τοῦ ἐκμαρτυρουμένου· ὁ μὲν γὰρ δεῖται, ὁ δὲ ὠφελεῖ, τὸ δὲ ὠφελοῦν ἀξιονικότερον<sup>1</sup> αἰεὶ τοῦ δεομένου.

<sup>1</sup> So Cohn from Pap. ἀξιοκότερον. Other mss. ἀξιοπιστότερον.

<sup>a</sup> In the Hebrew "Thou shalt break its neck."

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 89-92

male unto the Lord; everything that opens the womb from thy herds among thy cattle, all that are born to thee, the males to the Lord. All that opens the womb of an ass, thou shalt exchange for a sheep; but if thou dost not exchange it, thou shalt redeem it" <sup>a</sup> (Exod. xiii. 11-13). That which opens the womb is the first-born, that is Abel's gift, and the time and method of this offering is a matter for thy search.

The fittest time indeed is when God has brought thee where reason is tossed to and fro, that is to the land of the Canaanites. He brought thee there in no random manner, but according to His own oath. And He brought thee there not to be carried hither and thither, ever passive amid the surge and eddy and swirl, but that quit of the wild sea thou shouldst spend thy days under clear sky and in calm water, and reaching virtue as an anchorage or roadstead, or haven of most sure shelter, mightest there find a stable resting-place.

XXVIII. But, when he tells us that God swore an oath, we must consider whether he lays down that such a thing can with truth be ascribed to God, since to thousands it seems unworthy of Him. For our conception of an oath is an appeal to God as a witness on some disputed matter. But nothing is uncertain or open to dispute with God. He it is who has shown to all others plainly the signs whereby they may know the truth. Truly He needs no witness, for there is no other god to be His peer. I need not argue that he who bears witness, in so far as he is a witness, is superior to him for whom the witness is given. For the one craves help, the other renders it, and the latter condition is always more excellent than the former. But there is ἄμεινον δὲ οὐδὲ ἐπινοῆσαι θέμις τοῦ αἰτίου, ὅποτε

 οὐδὲ ἴσον αὐτοῦ ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ὀλίγω καταδεέστερον,
 ἀλλ' ὅλω γένει καταβεβηκὸς ἅπαν τὸ μετὰ θεὸν 93 εὐρίσκεται. τοῦ γε μὴν πιστευθῆναι χάριν ἀ-πιστούμενοι καταφεύγουσιν ἐφ' ὄρκον ἄνθρωποι· ὁ δὲ θεὸς καὶ λέγων πιστὸς ἔστιν, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς
 λόγους αὐτοῦ βεβαιότητος ἕνεκα μηδὲν ὄρκων διαφέρειν. καὶ συμβέβηκε τὴν μὲν ἡμετέραν γνώ-μην ὄρκω, τὸν δὲ ὄρκον αὐτὸν θεῷ πεπιστώσθαι·
 οὐ γὰρ δι' ὄρκον πιστὸς ὁ θεός, ἀλλὰ δι' αὐτὸν 94 καὶ ὁ ὄρκος βέβαιος. XXIX. τί οὖν
 ἔδοξε τῷ ἱεροφάντῃ παρεισαγαγεῖν αὐτὸν ὀμνύντα;
 ἵνα τὴν ἀσθένειαν διελέγξῃ τοῦ γενητοῦ καὶ
 διελέγξας ἅμα παρηγορήσῃ· οὐ γὰρ δυνάμεθα
 διηνεκῶς τὸ ἄξιον τοῦ αἰτίου κεφάλαιον ἐν ψυχῇ ταμιεύεσθαι τῇ ἑαυτῶν, τὸ “ οὐχ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ θεός ” (Num. xxiii. 19), ἵνα πάντα τὰ ἀνθρωπο-95 λογούμενα ὑπερκύψωμεν· ἀλλὰ πλείστον μετ-
 [182] ἔχοντες τοῦ θνητοῦ καὶ χωρὶς ἑαυτῶν | ἐπινοῆσαι μηδὲν δυνάμενοι μηδὲ ἐκβῆναι τὰς ἰδίους κῆρας
 ἰσχύοντες, ἀλλ' εἰς τὸ θνητὸν εἰσδύομενοι καθάπερ
 οἱ κοχλῖαι καὶ περὶ ἑαυτοὺς ὥσπερ οἱ ἐχῖνοι
 σφαιρηδὸν εἰλούμενοι, καὶ περὶ τοῦ μακαρίου καὶ
 ἀφθάρτου τὰ αὐτὰ ἅ καὶ περὶ ἑαυτῶν δοξάζομεν
 τὴν μὲν ἀτοπίαν τοῦ λόγου, ὅτι ἀνθρωπόμορφον
 τὸ θεῖον, ἀποδιδράσκοντες, τὴν δὲ ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις 96 ἀσέβειαν, ὅτι ἀνθρωποπαθές, ἐπαναιρούμενοι. διὰ
 τοῦτο χεῖρας πόδας εἰσόδους ἐξόδους ἐχθρας ἀποστροφὰς ἀλλοτριώσεις ὄργας προσαναπλάττομεν,

<sup>a</sup> Literally “ everything which comes after God is found to have descended by a whole genus.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 92-96

nothing better than the Cause—even to think the thought were blasphemy—since there is nothing equal to Him, or even but a little below. The gulf that separates God from what comes next to Him is one of kind and nature.<sup>a</sup> Now men have recourse to oaths to win belief, when others deem them untrustworthy; but God is trustworthy in His speech as elsewhere, so that His words in certitude and assurance differ not a whit from oaths. And so it is that while with us the oath gives warrant for our sincerity, it is itself guaranteed by God. For the oath does not make God trustworthy; it is God that assures the oath.

XXIX. Why then did it seem well to the prophet and revealer to represent God as binding Himself by an oath? It was to convince created man of his weakness and to accompany conviction with help and comfort. We are not able to cherish continually in our souls the thought which sums so worthily the nature of the Cause, that "God is not as man" (Numb. xxiii. 19), and thus rise superior to all the human conceptions of Him. In us the mortal is the chief ingredient. We cannot get outside ourselves in forming our ideas; we cannot escape our inborn infirmities. We creep within our covering of mortality, like snails into their shells, or like the hedgehog we roll ourselves into a ball, and we think of the blessed and the immortal in terms of our own natures. We shun indeed in words the monstrosity of saying that God is of human form, but in actual fact we accept the impious thought that He is of human passions. And therefore we invent for Him hands and feet, incomings and outgoings, enmities, aversions, estrangements, anger, in fact such parts and passions as can never

PHILO

- ἀνοίκεια καὶ μέρη καὶ πάθη τοῦ αἰτίου· ὧν ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ ὄρκος τῆς ἡμετέρας ἐπίκουρος ἀσθενείας.
- 97 “ Ἐὰν οὖν δῶ σοι ὁ θεός, ἀφελεῖς ” (Exod. xiii. 11) λέγει Μωυσῆς ὀριζόμενος· μὴ δόντος γὰρ οὐχ ἕξεις, ἐπεὶ πάντα αὐτοῦ κτήματα, καὶ τὰ ἐκτός καὶ τὸ σῶμα καὶ ἡ αἴσθησις καὶ ὁ λόγος καὶ ὁ νοῦς καὶ αἱ πάντων ἐνέργειαι καὶ οὐ σὺ μόνος ἀλλὰ καὶ ὄδε ὁ κόσμος· ὅ τι ἂν ἀποτέμνη καὶ διαιρῆ, τοῦτ’ ἀλλότριον εὐρήσεις· καὶ γὰρ γῆν καὶ ὕδωρ καὶ πνεῦμα καὶ οὐρανὸν καὶ ἀστέρας καὶ ζώων καὶ φυτῶν ἀφθάρτων τε καὶ φθαρτῶν ἰδέας ἀπάσας οὐκ ἴδια κέκτησαι, ὥσθ’ ὅ τι ἂν αὐτῶν ἱερείου τρόπον προσάγης, τὸ θεοῦ προσάξεις κτήμα, οὐ τὸ σαντοῦ.
- 98 XXX. Παρατῆρει δὲ ὡς πάνυ εὐαγῶς ἀπὸ τῶν δοθέντων ἀφελεῖν διείρηται, οὐχ ὅλα προσάγειν τὰ δοθέντα. μυρία γὰρ ἡμῖν ἡ φύσις ἐπιβάλλοντα ἀνθρώπων γένει δεδώρηται, ὧν ἀμέτοχος ἀπάντων ἐστὶν αὐτή, γένεσιν ἀγέννητος οὔσα, τροφήν τροφῆς οὐ δεομένη, αὔξησιν ἐν ὁμοίῳ μένουσα, τὰς κατὰ χρόνον ἡλικίας ἀφαίρεσιν ἢ πρόσθεσιν οὐκ ἐπιδεχομένη, σῶμα ὀργανικὸν ᾧ λαβεῖν, ᾧ δοῦναι, προελθεῖν, ἰδεῖν, ἀκοῦσαι, προσενέγκασθαι τροφήν, τὴν ἐξικμασθεῖσαν ἀποπέμψασθαι πάλιν, ἀτμῶν ἐπικρῖναι διαφοράς, λόγῳ χρήσασθαι γεγωνῶ, πολλὰ καὶ ἄλλα τῶν εἰς τὰς ἀναγκαίας ἅμα καὶ ὠφελί-
99 μους ὑπηρεσίας ἔνεστιν. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ἀδιάφορα ἂν τις εἴποι, τὰ δὲ ὁμολογούμενα

<sup>a</sup> Nature here, as often in Philo, is practically identified with the Divine Agency in things. Thus it is called in 100 “the uncreated.” Philo’s point is that, if blessings are bestowed on us by nature, it does not follow that they are worthy as offerings to the power behind nature.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 96-99

belong to the Cause. And of such is the oath—a mere crutch for our weakness.

So to resume, "if God gives such and such to thee, thou shalt separate them" (Exod. xiii. 11). Thus does Moses condition his command. Yes, for unless He gives, thou shalt not have, since all things are His possessions, all things outside thee, and the body, the senses, the reason, the mind, and the functions of them all; and not thyself only, but this world also. And whatsoever thou severest or dividest from it for thy use, thou shalt find to be not thine but Another's. Earth and water, air, sky, stars, all forms of living creatures and plants, things that perish and things that perish not, thou dost not hold in ownership. Therefore whatsoever thou bringest as an offering, thou wilt offer God's possession and not thine own.

XXX. Again note the true sense of holiness shown in the command to separate from what has been given us, not to bring all. For numberless are the gifts assigned by nature<sup>a</sup> to mankind as their portion, in none of which does she herself participate. She is unborn yet gives birth, needs no nourishment yet gives it, changes not yet gives growth, admits neither of diminishment nor increase yet gives the ages of life in succession; she gives that bodily organization which has the power to take and give, advance, see, hear, absorb food, cast it forth when digested, distinguish flavours, utter speech, and do the many other things which belong to those offices which are at once useful and necessary. Perhaps it may be said that, while these are but indifferent things, nature must have taken for her own undoubted forms ἀγαθὰ δεῖν ἀνῆφθαι τὴν φύσιν. φέρ' οὖν ἐξετάσω-μεν καὶ τῶν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθῶν τὰ μάλιστα

 παρ' ἡμῖν θαυμαζόμενα, ὧν ἀπάντων μὲν τυχεῖν
 κατὰ καιροὺς τοὺς ἀρμόζοντας εὐχόμεθα, τυχόντες 100 δὲ εὐδαιμονέστατοι νομιζόμεθα. τίς οὖν ἀγνοεῖ ὅτι εὐγηρία καὶ εὐθανασία μέγιστα τῶν ἀνθρωπείων ἀγαθῶν ἐστίν, ὧν οὐδετέρου κοινωνὸς ἡ
 φύσις ἀγήρως τε καὶ ἀθάνατος οὔσα; καὶ τί
 [183] παράδοξον, εἰ τὸ | ἀγένητον γεννητῶν ἀγαθοῖς οὐκ
 ἀξιοῖ προσχρῆσθαι, ὅποτε καὶ τὸ γενόμενον αὐτὸ κατὰ τὰς τῶν εἰδῶν εἰς ἃ τέμνεται διαφορὰς ἀνομοίων μεταποιεῖται ἀρετῶν; ἄνδρες γοῦν <οὐ>
 γυναιξίν οὐδὲ γυναῖκες ἀνδράσιν ἀμιλλήσαιντο ἂν
 περὶ ὧν μόνοις τοῖς ἑτέροις ἀρμόττει προσεῖναι·
 ἀλλ' αἱ μὲν γυνάνδρων, εἰ ζηλώσαιεν τὰ ἀνδρῶν,
 οἱ δὲ ἀνδρογύνων, εἰ τοῖς γυναικῶν ἐπίθοιντο 101 ἐπιτηδεύμασι, δύσκειαν οἴσονται. ἐνίας δὲ ἀρετὰς
 ἡ φύσις οὕτως διακέκρικεν, ὡς μηδὲ ἐξ ἐπιτη-δεύσεως εἰς κοινωνίαν ἀχθῆναι δύνασθαι· τὸ γοῦν
 σπεῖρειν καὶ γεννᾶν κατ' ἀρετὴν ἀνδρῶν ἴδιον,
 οὐκ ἂν εὖροι τοῦτό γε γυνή· καὶ μὴν ἀγαθὸν οὔσαν
 γυναικῶν εὐτοκίαν ἀνδρὸς οὐ δέχεται φύσις. ὥστε οὐδὲ τὸ "ὡς ἄνθρωπος"<sup>1</sup> (Deut. i. 31) ἐπὶ θεοῦ κυριολογεῖται, κατάχρησις δὲ ὀνομάτων ἐστὶ παρηγοροῦσα τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀσθένειαν. ἀφελεῖς οὖν, ὧ ψυχῇ, πᾶν γενητὸν θνητὸν μεταβλητὸν βέβηλον
 ἀπὸ ἐννοίας τῆς περὶ θεοῦ τοῦ ἀγενήτου καὶ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. τὰ ὅσα ἀνθρώποις with variations.

<sup>a</sup> This sentence is added as another illustration of the truth that what are ἀγαθὰ with men cannot necessarily be predicated of God.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 486, note on De Cher. 121.

<sup>c</sup> The word 'separate' is clearly used with reference to its 168

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 99-101

of good. Let us test then, among these truly named "good" things, those which in our judgment are most admired, all of which we pray to attain at their proper seasons, and whose attainment is counted our greatest happiness. Such are a happy old age and a happy death. We all know that they are the greatest blessings that can befall mankind, and yet in neither has nature any share, for she knows neither old age nor death. And why should we count it strange that the uncreated does not deign to use the good which belongs to the created, when even the created itself lays claim to virtues varying according to the different species into which it is divided? Men could not contest with women, nor women with men, the functions which fitly belong only to the other sex. If women should affect the practices of men, or men attempt those of women, they will in each case be held to belie their sex and win an ill name thereby. And some virtues and excellences nature has so discriminated, that not even long practice could make them common property. To sow and beget belongs to the man and is his peculiar excellence, and no woman could attain to it. Again welfare in child-bearing is a good thing belonging to women, but the nature of man admits not of it. Thus even the phrase<sup>a</sup> "as a man" (cherisheth his son) (Deut. i. 31) is not used of God in its literal sense, but is a term used in figure,<sup>b</sup> a word of help to our feeble apprehension. Separate,<sup>c</sup> therefore, my soul, all that is created, mortal, mutable, profane, from thy conception of God the uncreated, the use in Ex. xiii. 11, though there properly the thing set apart or separated was to be offered, not as here, discarded.

ἀφθάρτου καὶ ἀτρέπτου καὶ ἀγίου καὶ μόνου μακαρίου.

- 102 XXXI. Τὸ δὲ “ παντὸς διανοίγοντος μήτραν τὰ ἀρσενικά τῷ κυρίῳ ” (Exod. xiii. 12) φυσικώτατα ἔχει. ὡσπερ γὰρ ταῖς γυναιξὶ πρὸς ζώων γένεσιν οἰκειότατον μέρος ἢ φύσις ἔδωκε μήτραν, οὕτως πρὸς γένεσιν πραγμάτων ὤρισεν ἐν ψυχῇ δύναμιν, δι’ ἧς κυφορεῖ καὶ ὠδίνει καὶ ἀποτίκτει
- 103 πολλὰ διάνοια. τῶν δὲ ἀποκουμένων ἐννοημάτων τὰ μὲν ἄρρενα, τὰ δὲ θήλεα, καθάπερ ἐπὶ ζώων εἶναι συμβέβηκε· θήλυ μὲν οὖν ἔγγονον ψυχῆς ἐστὶ κακία καὶ πάθος, οἷς καθ’ ἕκαστον τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων ἐκθηλυνόμεθα, ἄρρεν δὲ εὐπάθεια καὶ ἀρετή, ὑφ’ ὧν ἐγειρόμεθα καὶ ῥωννύμεθα. τούτων δὲ τὴν μὲν ἀνδρωνίτιν ἐστὶαν πᾶσαν ἀνιερωτέον θεῷ, τὴν δὲ γυναικωνίτιν ἀπονεμητέον ἑαυτοῖς· διὸ καὶ προστέτακται· “ πᾶν διανοίγον μήτραν, τὰ ἀρσενικά, τῷ κυρίῳ.”
- 104 XXXII. Ἀλλὰ καὶ “ παντὸς ” φησὶ “ διανοίγοντος μήτραν ἐκ τῶν βουκολίων ἐν τοῖς κτήνεσιν ὅσα ἂν γένηται σοι τὰ ἀρσενικά τῷ κυρίῳ ” (Exod. xiii. 12). εἰπὼν περὶ τῶν τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ γεννημάτων ἄρχεται διδάσκειν καὶ περὶ τῶν τοῦ ἀλόγου, ὅπερ αἱ αἰσθήσεις κεκλήρωνται, ἃς κτήνεσιν ἀπεικάζει. θρεμμάτων δὲ ὅσα ἐν βουκολίοις ἀνατρέφεται τιθασὰ καὶ χειροθήη, ἅτε ὑπὸ ἐπιστάτου φροντίδος ἀγόμενα βουκόλου· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄφετα καὶ ἀπελευθεριάζοντα ἐρημία τοῦ πρᾶυνοντος ἐξαγριαίνεται, ὧν δὲ ἡγέμονες αἰπόλοι βουκόλοι νομεῖς, τῶν καθ’ ἕκαστον εἶδος ἐπιστάται

<sup>a</sup> Or, “ a state of good affections ”; see App. p. 495, note on Quod Det. 120.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 101-104

unchangeable, the immortal, the holy and solely blessed.

XXXI. The words "of all that openeth the womb, the males to the Lord," are indeed true to nature. For as nature has given the womb to women as the proper part for generation of living offspring, so she has set in the soul for the generation of things a power by which the understanding conceives and travails and is the mother of many children. Of the thoughts thus brought to the birth some are male and some female, just as in the case of living beings. The female offspring of the soul is vice and passion, that emasculating influence which affects us in each of our pursuits. The male offspring is health of soul<sup>a</sup> and virtue, by which we are stimulated and strengthened. Of these the men's quarters must be dedicated wholly to God, the women's quarters must be set to our own account, and therefore we have the command "all that openeth the womb, the males to the Lord."

XXXII. But we also find "everything which openeth the womb from thy herds amongst thy cattle, all that are born to thee, the males to the Lord" (Exod. xiii. 12). Having spoken of the offspring of the ruling element he proceeds to instruct us as to the offspring of the unreasoning element, the element allotted to the senses, which he likens to cattle. Now the younglings that are reared among the herd are tame and docile, because they are guided by the care of the herdsman who rules them. For those that roam at large and in liberty become wild for want of one to tame them, but those who are led by goatherd, neat-herd, shepherd, and the like, the herdsman, that is, who tends whatever kind of animal it

- 105 ζώων, ταῦτ' ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἡμεροῦται. πέφυκεν [184] οὖν καὶ τὸ αἰσθήσεων γένος τῇ μὲν ἀτίθασον τῇ
 δ' εἶναι χειρόηθες· ἀτίθασον μὲν ὅταν ἀφηνιάσαν
 ὡσπερ βουκόλου τοῦ νοῦ φέρηται πρὸς τὰ ἐκτὸς
 ἀλόγως αἰσθητά, ἡμερον δὲ ὅταν ὑπεῖξαν πειθηνίως
 τῷ τοῦ συγκρίματος ἡγεμόνι λογισμῶ κυβερνᾶται
 τε καὶ ἡνιοχῆται πρὸς αὐτοῦ. ὅσα μὲν οὖν ἂν ἴδη
 ἢ ἀκούσῃ ἢ συνόλως αἰσθηται κατὰ τὴν ἐπικέλευσιν
 τοῦ νοῦ, πάντα ἐστὶν ἄρρενα καὶ τέλεια, προσγίνεται 106 γὰρ ἐκάστῳ τὸ εἶ· ὅσα δ' ἂν χωρὶς ἡγεμόνος, ὑπὸ
 ἀναρχίας ὡσπερ πόλιν τὸ σῶμα ἡμῶν διόλλυσι.
 πάλιν οὖν καὶ τῶν αἰσθήσεων τὰς μὲν ἐπομένας
 τῷ νῷ κινήσεις, αἵπερ ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἀμείνους εἰσὶν, ὁμολογητέον κατὰ θεὸν συμβαίνειν, τὰς δὲ ἀφηνια-ζούσας ἀναθετέον ἑαυτοῖς ἀλόγως ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν
 ἐκτὸς αἰσθητῶν φορᾶς ἀγομένοισι.
- 107 XXXIII. Ἄλλ' οὐ μόνον ἀπὸ τούτων, ἀλλὰ
 καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ φυράματος ὄλου προστέταχεν ἀφαιρεῖν.
 ἢ δὲ πρόσταξις ἐστὶ τοιάδε· “καὶ ἔσται, ὅταν
 ἐσθήητε ἀπὸ τῶν ἄρτων τῆς γῆς, ἀφελεῖτε ἀφαίρεμα
 ἀφόρισμα τῷ κυρίῳ· ἀπαρχὴν φυράματος ὑμῶν
 ἄρτον, ἀφαίρεμα ἀφελεῖτε αὐτόν· ὡς ἀφαίρεμα
 ἀπὸ ἄλωνος, οὕτως ἀφελεῖτε” (Num. xv. 19-20).
- 108 τὸ τοίνυν φύραμα κυρίως, εἰ χρὴ τάλθηθές εἰπεῖν,
 ἡμεῖς ἐσμεν αὐτοί, συμπεφορημένων καὶ συγ-κεκκριμένων πλείστων οὐσιῶν, ἵνα ἀποτελεσθῶμεν·
 ψυχρὸν γὰρ θερμῷ καὶ ξηρὸν ὑγρῷ, δυνάμεις
 ἐναντίας, ἀναμίξας καὶ ἀνακερασάμενος ὁ ζωο-

<sup>a</sup> The R. V. has “so shall ye heave it,” and above “heave-offering.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 105-108

may be, must needs be tame and gentle. So then, the senses also as a kind may be either wild or tame. They are wild when, throwing off the control of their herdsman the mind, they are carried away in their unreason into the outer sphere of things perceptible by them. They are tame when they respond submissively to reflection, the ruling element in our compound nature, and accept its guidance and control. Whatsoever then sense sees or hears or in general perceives under the direction of the mind is male and perfect, for each perception is made under good conditions. But whatsoever lacks that guide works destruction in our body, as anarchy does in a city. So then here, as in the former case, we must admit that the motions of the senses, which obey the mind and necessarily are of the better kind, come to pass through God's will, but those which reject control must be held to belong to ourselves, when propelled by the external objects of sense we are carried away in unreasoning course.

XXXIII. Again we are bidden to set apart not only from these but from the "whole mixture." The words of the commandment are as follows, "and it shall be that when ye eat of the bread of the land, ye shall set apart a portion marked out for the Lord: a loaf as the first offering of your mixture, ye shall set it apart as a portion. As ye do with a portion from the threshing-floor, so shall ye set it apart" (Numb. xv. 19-20). The "mixture" then is ourselves, and indeed in a literal sense, so many substances are brought together and compounded in us, to make our complete selves. Cold and heat, wet and dry, such opposite forces as these were blended and combined by the moulder of living creatures to produce

PHILO

πλάστης ἐν ἑκ πασῶν ἕκαστον ἡμῶν ἀπειργάζετο
 συμφόρημα, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ φύραμα εἶρηται.

τούτου τοῦ συμφορήματος, ὃ ψυχὴ καὶ σῶμα δύο
 τὰ ἀνωτάτω τμήματα κεκλήρωται, τὰς ἀπαρχὰς

109 ἀνιερωτέον. ἀπαρχαὶ δὲ εἰσιν ἅγιοι κινήσεις αἱ
 κατ' ἀρετὴν ἑκατέρου, διὸ καὶ ἄλλω παραβέβληται·
 καθάπερ οὖν ἐν ταῖς ἄλωσι πυροὶ καὶ κριθαὶ καὶ
 ὅσα τοιαῦτα καθ' ἑαυτὰ χωρίζεται, ἀθέρεις δὲ καὶ
 ἄχυρα καὶ εἴ τις ἄλλος φορυτὸς ἐτέρωσε σκίδναται, οὕτως καὶ παρ' ἡμῶν τὰ μὲν ἐστὶν ἄριστα καὶ
 ὠφέλιμα καὶ τὰς ἀληθεῖς τροφὰς παρέχοντα, δι'
 ὧν ὁ ὀρθὸς ἀποτελεῖται βίος, ἄπερ ἀναθετέον θεῷ,
 τὰ δὲ ἄλλα ὅσα μὴ θεία ὑπολειπτέον ὥσπερ

110 ἀφαιρετέον. εἰσὶ δὲ δυνάμεις ἀμιγεῖς
 κακίας ὅλαι δι' ὄλων, ἃς οὐ θέμις ἀκρωτηριάξιν
 διαιροῦντας, αἱ ἐοικυῖαι ταῖς ἀμερίστοις θυσίαις, ὀλοκαυτώμασιν, ὧν ἐναργὲς παράδειγμα ὁ Ἰσαάκ,

[185] ὃν ἱερείου τρόπον ἀνάγειν | προστέτακται μηδενὸς

111 πάθους φθοροποιῦ μεμοιραμένον. λέγεται δὲ καὶ δι' ἐτέρων· “ τὰ δῶρά μου, δόματά μου, καρπῶματά μου διατηρήσετε προσφέρειν ἐμοὶ ἐν ταῖς
 ἑορταῖς μου ” (Num. xxviii. 2), οὐκ ἀφαιροῦντες
 οὐδὲ διανεμόντες, ἀλλ' ἔμπλεα καὶ ὀλόκληρα καὶ
 τέλεια προσάγοντες· ἑορτὴ γὰρ ψυχῆς ἢ ἐν ἀρεταῖς
 εὐφροσύνη τελείαις, τέλειαι δὲ αἱ κηρῶν ἀμέτοχοι, ὅσας τὸ ἀνθρώπειον γένος χωρεῖ. μόνος δὲ
 ἑορτάζει τὴν τοιαύτην ἑορτὴν ὁ σοφός, τῶν δὲ

<sup>a</sup> Philo supposes that φύραμα is derived from συμφόρημα.

<sup>b</sup> Or “ the impulses of either which accord with virtue.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 108-111

that single congeries the individual, and it is from this that it is here called a "mixture."<sup>a</sup>

Of this congeries, in which soul and body hold the place of primary divisions, we must dedicate the firstlings. These firstlings are the sacred impulses which accord with the excellence of either,<sup>b</sup> and therefore also we have the comparison with the threshing-floor. For as on the threshing-floor the wheat, barley, and other grain are gathered apart, while the chaff and husk and any other refuse are scattered elsewhere, so too in us there are the best, the profitable elements which provide that true nourishment, whereby right living is brought to its fullness. These it is which must be dedicated to God, while the rest which has nothing of the divine must be left as refuse to mortality. It is from the former then that we must take for our offering.

But there are some powers which are pure from evil through and through, and these we must not mutilate by severing into their parts. These are like the undivided sacrifices, the whole burnt-offerings of which Isaac is a clear example, whom God commanded to be offered in victim's fashion, because he had no part or lot in any passion which breeds corruption. And the same truth is taught in another passage, "my gifts, my offerings, my fruits ye shall observe to offer me at my feasts" (Numb. xxviii. 2). No word here of setting apart or dividing: they are to be brought full, perfect, and complete. For the soul's feast is the joy and gladness which the perfect virtues bring, and by perfect is meant virtues unspotted by all the tainting evils to which the human race is liable. Such a feast the wise man<sup>c</sup> only can keep and save him none

<sup>a</sup> Or "the wise being," i.e. God.

ἄλλων οὐδὲ εἰς· ἄγευστον γὰρ παθῶν ἢ κακιῶν ψυχὴν εὐρεῖν σπανιώτατον.

- 112 XXXIV. Ἀποδοὺς οὖν τὸν περὶ τῶν μερῶν τῆς ψυχῆς λόγον ἡγεμονικοῦ τε καὶ ὑπηκόου καὶ τί ἐστὶν ἐν ἑκατέρῳ τὸ ἄρρεν ἢ θῆλυ, μετὰ ταῦτα περὶ τῶν ἀκολουθῶν ἐκδιδάσκει. σαφῶς γὰρ εἰδὼς ὅτι δίχα πόνου καὶ ἐπιμελείας οὐχ οἷόν τε γενεᾶς τῆς ἄρρενος ἐπιλαχεῖν, φησὶν ἐξῆς· “πᾶν διανοῖγον μήτραν ὄνου ἀλλάξεις προβάτω” (Exod. xiii. 13), ἴσον τῷ πάντα πόνον ἀντικαταλλάττου προκοπῆς· πόνου μὲν γὰρ ὄνος—τλητικὸν γὰρ τὸ ζῶον—, προκοπῆς δὲ πρόβατον, ὡς καὶ αὐτὸ
- 113 δηλοῖ τοῦνομα, σύμβολον. ἴθι οὖν ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν τεχνῶν καὶ ἐπιτηδευμάτων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα διδακτὰ μελέτην, μὴ ὀλιγώρως μηδὲ ῥαθύμως ἀλλὰ μετὰ φροντίδος τῆς πάσης παρεσκευακῶς τὴν σαυτοῦ διάνοιαν ὑποστήναι καρτερῶς πάντα κάματος, καὶ σπούδαζε μὴ ὑπὸ ἀτελοῦς κατασχεθῆναι πόνου, προκοπὴν δὲ καὶ βελτίωσιν ἐπὶ τὸ εὐκλεέστατον ἄγοντα τέλος εὐρέσθαι· προκοπῆς
- 114 γὰρ χάριν οἰστὸς ὁ πόνος. εἰάν δὲ ἄρα σὺ μὲν ἀναδέχη τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πονεῖν κάματος, ἢ δὲ φύσις μηδὲν ἐπιδιδῶ πρὸς τὸ ἄμεινον ἐναντιουμένη ταῖς ἐκ προκοπῆς βελτιώσεσι, μετατραπόμενος ἡρέμει· χαλεπὸν γὰρ ἐναντιοῦσθαι φύσει. διὸ καὶ προστίθησιν· “εἰάν δὲ” φησί “μὴ ἀλλάξης, λυτρώση αὐτό” (Exod. xiii. 13), ὅπερ ἐστίν, εἰάν μὴ δυνηθῆς προκοπὴν ἀλλάξασθαι τοῦ πονεῖν, μέθες καὶ τὸν πόνον· τὸ γὰρ λυτρώσασθαι τοιοῦτον ὑποβάλλει νοῦν, ἐλευθερώσαι τὴν ψυχὴν ἀνηνύτου other. For hardly ever shall you find a soul which has never tasted of passions or vices.

<sup>a</sup> Philo absurdly derives ὄνος from πόνος and πρόβατον (probably correctly) from προβαίνω.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 111-114

XXXIV. Having given us the doctrine of the parts of the soul, of the ruling part and the subject part, and having shown also in each of these what is the masculine and what the feminine element, Moses proceeds to teach us the lesson that follows next. He knows well that without toil and care it is not possible for male offspring to fall to our lot. Thus his next words are "all that openeth the womb of an ass, thou shalt exchange for a sheep" (Exod. xiii. 13). It is as much as to say exchange all toil for progress. For the ass is the symbol of toil—he is a patient beast—and the sheep of progress,<sup>a</sup> as the very name shows. Come then to the study of the arts, or the trades, or whatever else can be taught and learnt, not with disdain or slackness, but with all care and attention, with your mind braced to endure patiently all manner of drudgery, and at the same time be at pains not to be held in bondage by fruitless toil, but to bring your labour to the most honourable conclusion and win progress and betterment. For toil is to be borne for the sake of progress. But if it should chance that with all your acceptance of labour and its drudgery your nature gains nothing, but refuses the improvement which progress should bring, turn from it and desist. It is a weary task to oppose nature. And therefore it is that he adds "if thou dost not exchange it, thou shalt redeem it" (Exod. xiii. 13): that is, if you cannot gain progress in exchange for your labour, let the labour go as well, for the word "redeem" suggests such a meaning, namely that you shall free your soul from the care that has no end and accomplishes nothing.

- 115 καὶ ἀτελοῦς φροντίδος. XXXV. λέγω
 δὲ ταῦτα οὐ περὶ τῶν ἀρετῶν ἀλλὰ περὶ τῶν
 μέσων τεχνῶν καὶ ὧν ἄλλων ἀναγκαίων περὶ τε σώματος ἐπιμέλειαν καὶ τὴν τῶν ἐκτὸς περιουσίαν
 πραγματεύονται, ἐπεὶ ὁ γε περὶ ἀγαθῶν καὶ καλῶν
 [186] τελείων πόνος, | καὶ ὑστερίζῃ τοῦ τέλους, ἱκανὸς
 ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ προωφελῆσαι τοὺς χρωμένους, τὰ δὲ
 ὅσα ἐκτὸς ἀρετῆς, εἴαν μὴ προσγένηται τὸ πέρασ, ἀνωφελῆ πάντα· ὡσπερ ἐπὶ ζώων, εἴαν ἀφέλης
 κεφαλῆν, οἴχεται τᾶλλα· κεφαλὴ δὲ πραγμάτων
 ἐστὶ τὸ τέλος αὐτῶν, ἃ ζῆ μὲν τρόπον τινὰ ἐφαρμοζομένου, θνήσκει δέ, εἴαν ἐκτεμεῖν καὶ ἀκρωτηριά-116 ζειν ἐθέλης. ὥστε καὶ ἀθληταὶ μὴ δυνάμενοι
 νικηφορεῖν, αἰεὶ δὲ ἡττώμενοι, καταλυέτωσαν· καὶ
 εἴ τις ἔμπορος ἢ ναύκληρος θαλαττεύων ἐπαλλήλοις κακοπραγίαις χρήται, μετατραπόμενος ἡρεμείτω·
 ὅσοι τε τὰς μέσας ἐπιτηδεύσαντες τέχνας μηδὲν
 ἡδυνήθησαν διὰ σκληρότητα φύσεως μάθημα
 παραδέξασθαι, ἐπαινετοὶ καταλύοντες· οὐ γὰρ
 ἔνεκα ἀσκήσεως ἀσκεῖται τὰ τοιαῦτα, ἀλλὰ τοῦ 117 πρὸς ὃν ἀναφέρεται σκοποῦ. εἴαν οὖν ἐμποδοστατῆ πρὸς τὰς ἀμείνους ἐπιδόσεις ἢ φύσις, μὴ ἀνόνητα
 ἀντιτείνωμεν, συμπραττούσης δὲ ἀπαρχαῖς καὶ
 τιμαῖς γεραίρωμεν τὸ θεῖον, αἱ λύτρα τῆς ἡμετέρας ψυχῆς εἰσι, δεσποτῶν ἀνημέρων αὐτὴν ἀπαλλάτ-τουσαι καὶ εἰς ἐλευθερίαν ἐξαιρούμεναι.
- 118 XXXVI. Καὶ γὰρ τοὺς Λευίτας ὁμολογεῖ Μωυσῆς τοὺς ἀντὶ τῶν πρωτοτόκων γενομένους θεραπευτὰς τοῦ μόνου ἀξίου θεραπεύεσθαι λύτρα
 τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων εἶναι· “κἀγὼ” γὰρ φησιν

° Literally, “for the superfluity of external things.”

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 115-118

XXXV. But these words do not apply to the virtues, but only to the secondary arts and any necessary trades which men practise to provide for the needs of the body, or to procure additional and material comforts.<sup>a</sup> Labour undertaken for the perfectly good and excellent in any form, even though it fail to attain its end, is of itself strong to benefit the labourer from the first. It is those things which lie outside virtue which are all profitless, unless the result crown the work. It is just as it is with animals. If you take from them the head, all else goes with it. And the head of actions is their end or object. While it is in its place they live in some sort. If you choose to cut it off or amputate it, they die. So athletes who cannot win a victory, but are always defeated, will do well to retire. Merchants or shipmen who meet with perpetual disasters at sea should desist and change their occupation. Those who have studied the lower subjects, but have been unable through dullness of nature to imbibe any knowledge, will deserve praise if they abandon them. For exertion in such matters is not engaged in for the sake of the exercise, but for the sake of the object at which they aim. If then our nature opposes our efforts for progress in them, let us not fruitlessly resist her. If she forwards those efforts, let us do homage to God with those firstlings and honours which are the ransom of our souls, for they rescue it from cruel task-masters and redeem it into liberty.

XXXVI. We have it indeed on the authority of Moses that the Levites, who in place of the first-born were appointed to the service of Him who alone is worthy of service, were a ransom for all the others. "And behold I have taken," he says, "the Levites

- “ ἰδοὺ εἴληφα τοὺς Λευίτας ἐκ μέσου <τῶν> υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ ἀντὶ παντὸς πρωτοτόκου διανοίγοντος μήτραν παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ· λύτρα αὐτῶν ἔσονται, καὶ ἔσονται ἐμοὶ οἱ Λευῖται. ἐμοὶ γὰρ πᾶν πρωτότοκον· ἐν ἣ ἡμέρα ἐπάταξα πᾶν πρωτότοκον ἐν γῆ Αἰγύπτῳ, ἡγίασα ἐμοὶ πᾶν πρωτότοκον
- 119 ἐν Ἰσραὴλ” (Num. iii. 12, 13). ὁ καταπεφευγὸς ἐπὶ θεὸν καὶ ἰκέτης αὐτοῦ γεγονὼς λόγος ὀνομάζεται Λευίτης· τοῦτον ἐκ τοῦ μεσαιτάτου καὶ ἡγεμονικωτάτου τῆς ψυχῆς λαβῶν, τουτέστι προσλαβόμενος καὶ προσκληρώσας ἑαυτῷ, τῆς τῶν πρεσβείων ἡξίωσε μερίδος· ὥστε ἐνθένδε δῆλον εἶναι, ὅτι ὁ μὲν Ῥουβὴν τοῦ Ἰακώβ, ὁ δὲ Λεὺὶ τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ πρωτότοκός ἐστιν, ὁ μὲν τὰ χρόνου, ὁ δὲ τὰ ἀξιώματος καὶ δυνάμεως φερόμενος
- 120 πρεσβεῖα· πόνου μὲν γὰρ καὶ προκοπῆς, ὧν Ἰακώβ σύμβολον, τὸ εὐφυνὲς ἀρχή, καθ’ ὃ Ῥουβὴν καλεῖται, θεωρίας δὲ τῆς τοῦ μόνου σοφοῦ, καθ’ ἣν Ἰσραὴλ τέτακται, πηγὴ τὸ θεραπευτικῶς ἔχειν αὐτοῦ, θεραπείας δὲ ὁ Λεὺὶ ἐστὶ σημεῖον. καθάπερ οὖν τῶν Ἡσαῦ προτοτοκίων κληρονόμος
- [187] Ἰακώβ ἀνευρίσκεται, | τῆς περὶ κακίαν σπουδῆς ἡττωμένης τοῦ πρὸς τὸ καλὸν πόνου, οὕτως καὶ τὰ Ῥουβὴν πρεσβεῖα τοῦ εὐφυοῦς ὁ κεχρημένος ἀρετῇ τελεία Λεὺὶ οἴσεται· τῆς δὲ τελειότητος δεῖγμα ἐναργέστατον πρόσφυγα γενέσθαι θεοῦ καταλιπόντα τὴν τῶν ἐν γενέσει πραγματείαν.
- 121 XXXVII. Ταῦτ’ ἐστὶ κυρίως εἰπεῖν τὰ ψυχῆς ἐλευθερίας ἐφιεμένης σῶστρά τε καὶ λύτρα. μήποτε δὲ καὶ δόγμα εἰσηγείται σφόδρα ἀναγκαῖον,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 491.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 118-121

from the midst of the sons of Israel, in place of every first-born that opens the womb from among the sons of Israel. They shall be their ransom and the Levites shall be mine, for every first-born is mine. On the day when I smote every first-born in the land of Egypt, I hallowed to myself every first-born in Israel" (Numb. iii. 12, 13). It is Reason, who has taken refuge with God and become His suppliant, that is here given the name of Levite. This Reason God took from the midmost and most sovereign part of the soul, that is He drew it and allotted it to Himself and adjudged to it the portion of the eldest son. And thus it is clear from this that, while Reuben is the first-born of Jacob, Levi is the first-born of Israel. The former has the precedence in years, the latter in honour and value. For labour and progress of which Jacob is the symbol have their source in natural ability<sup>a</sup> which gives Reuben his name, but the fountain of that devout contemplation of the only wise being, on which Israel's rank is based, is the habit of service to God, and this service is symbolized by Levi. So then, just as Jacob appears as inheritor of the birthright of Esau, when labour striving for the good was victorious over the craving that pursues evil, so too Reuben the man of natural gifts must yield the rights of the elder to Levi, whose life is one of perfect virtue. And this perfection is shown most clearly in that he makes God his refuge and forsakes all dealing with the world of created things.

XXXVII. This is the primary meaning of the price which the soul that craves liberty pays for its deliverance and ransom. But it may be that the prophet also means to show another truth and one

- ὅτι πᾶς σοφὸς λύτρον ἐστὶ τοῦ φαύλου, μηδ' ἂν πρὸς ὀλίγον χρόνον ἐξαρκέσαντος, εἰ μὴ ἔλέω καὶ προμηθείᾳ χρώμενος ἐκείνος προϋνόει τῆς διαμονῆς αὐτοῦ, καθάπερ ἰατρὸς τοῦ νοσοῦντος ἀντιτεταγμένος τοῖς ἀρρωστήμασι καὶ πραότερα κατασκευάζων αὐτὰ ἢ συνόλως ἀναιρῶν, εἰ μὴ που μετὰ φορᾶς ἀνεπισχέτου βιασάμενα καὶ τὴν τῆς θερα-
- 122 πείας ὑπερβάλλοι φροντίδα. οὕτως γὰρ καὶ Σόδομα φθειρεται, μηδενὸς οἶα ἐπὶ πλάστιγγος ἀμυθῆται πλήθει κακῶν ἀντιρρέψαι δυνηθέντος ἀγαθοῦ· ὡς εἶ γε ὁ πεντηκοστὸς λόγος εὐρέθη, καθ' ὃν ἄφεις ψυχῇ δουλείας καὶ παντελῆς ἐλευθερίας προκηρύττεται (Lev. xxv. 10), ἢ τις τῶν μετ' αὐτὸν ἀριθμῶν, οὓς ὁ σοφὸς Ἀβραὰμ καταλέγεται μέχρι τῆς κατὰ παιδείαν ὀρίζων δεκάδος τὴν ὕφεσιν, οὐκ ἂν οὕτως ἀκλεῶς ὁ νοῦς ἐφθάρη (Gen. xviii.
- 123 24 ff.). πειρᾶσθαι μέντοι δεῖ καὶ τοὺς πάντως ὑπὸ τῆς ἐν αὐτοῖς διαφθαρησομένους κακίας ὡς οἶόν τε διασώζειν μιμουμένους τοὺς ἀγαθοὺς τῶν ἰατρῶν, οἳ, κἂν ὀρώσιν ἀδύνατον τοῖς κάμνουσι τὸ σῶζεσθαι, προσφέρουσι τὴν θεραπείαν ὅμως ἄσμενοι, τοῦ μὴ τῇ παρ' αὐτοῦ ὀλιγωρίᾳ δοκεῖν συμβῆναί τι τῶν παρὰ γνώμην· εἰ δέ τι καὶ μικρὸν ὅσον ὑγείας σπέρμα ἐμφαίνοιτο, τοῦτο ὥσπερ ἐμπύρευμα πάσαις ἐπιμελείαις ζωπυρητέον· ἐλπίς γὰρ μηκυνθέντος καὶ συναυξηθέντος ἀμείνουσι καὶ ἀπταιστοτέρῳ χρήσασθαι τῷ βίῳ.
- 124 ἔγωγ' οὖν ὅταν τινὰ τῶν σπουδαίων διαιτώμενον κατ' οἰκίαν ἢ κατὰ πόλιν θεάσωμαι,

<sup>a</sup> Where the fiftieth year is decreed as the year of Jubilee.

<sup>b</sup> Literally "limiting the diminution at": cf. μέχρι τοῦδε ὠρίσθω ἢ βραδυτής, Thuc. i. 71. See also App. pp. 491, 492.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 121-124

that we could ill spare, namely that every wise man is a ransom for the fool, whose existence could not endure for an hour, did not the wise provide for his preservation by compassion and forethought. The wise are as physicians who fight against the infirmities of the sick, alleviate them or altogether remove them, unless the violence of the malady's impetuous course overpower the careful treatment of the physician. It was such overpowering evil that destroyed Sodom, when no good could balance the vast sum of evil that weighed down the scale. If there had been found in Sodom the number fifty, the number which brings the message of redemption from slavery and full liberty to the soul (Lev. xxv. 10<sup>a</sup>), or any of the numbers which wise Abraham named in succession from fifty downwards till he reached the lower limit <sup>b</sup> of ten, the number sacred to education,<sup>c</sup> the mind would not have perished in such shameful downfall (Gen. xviii. 24 ff.).

Yet we should try, as well as we may, to save even those whom the evil within them is bringing to certain ruin, and follow the example of the good physicians, who, though they see that there is no hope for the patient, yet render their services gladly, lest others should think, in the event of some disaster which they did not expect, that it is due to the physician's neglect.<sup>d</sup> And if some seed of recovery should appear in him, however little, it should be cherished as we fan an ember with every care. For we may hope that the germ may grow and spread, and that thus the man may lead a better and more stable life.

For my own part, when I see a good man living in a house or city, I hold that house or

<sup>c</sup> See App. pp. 491-492.

<sup>d</sup> See App. p. 492.

- τὴν οἰκίαν ἢ τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην εὐδαιμονίζω καὶ οἶομαι τὴν τε τῶν παρόντων ἀγαθῶν ἀπόλαυσιν βέβαιον καὶ τὴν τῶν ἀπόντων προσδοκίαν τελεσφορουμένην σχήσειν, τοῦ θεοῦ τὸν ἀπεριόριστον καὶ ἀπερίγραφον πλοῦτον αὐτοῦ διὰ τοὺς ἀξίους καὶ τοῖς ἀναξίοις δωρουμένου· καὶ εὐχομαι ὡς πολυχρονιωτάτους αὐτούς, ἐπειδὴ ἀγήρως οὐκ ἔνεστι, γενέσθαι, νομίζων ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον παραμένειν ἀνθρώποις τὰ ἀγαθὰ, ἐφ' ὅσον ἂν οὗτοι
- [188] 125 χρόνον ζῆν | δυνηθῶσιν. ὅταν οὖν ἢ ἴδω ἢ ἀκούσω τινὰ αὐτῶν τεθνεῶτα, σφόδρα κατηφῶ καὶ ἄχθομαι καὶ οὐ μᾶλλον αὐτούς ἢ τοὺς ζῶντας ὀλοφύρομαι· τοῖς μὲν γὰρ ἀκολουθία φύσεως τὸ ἀναγκαῖον ἀποβῆναι τέλος, βίον μὲν εὐδαιμόνα εὐκλεᾶ δὲ θάνατον ἐνδεξαμένοις, τοὺς δὲ ἐρήμους μεγάλης καὶ δυνατῆς χειρός, δι' ἣν ἐσώζοντο, ἀπολειφθέντας ταχὺ δὴ μάλα τῶν ἰδίων αἰσθήσεσθαι κακῶν, εἰ μὴ πάλιν ἀντὶ τῶν προτέρων ἢ φύσις ὥσπερ δένδρῳ τοὺς ἤδη πεπανθέντας καρποὺς ἀποβάλλοντι νέους ἐτέρους ἀναβλαστῆσαι παρασκευάσει πρὸς τροφήν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν τῶν χρῆσθαι
- 126 δυναμένων. ὥσπερ οὖν τῶν πόλεων τὸ ἐχυρώτατον εἰς διαμονὴν ἄνδρες εἰσὶν ἀγαθοί, οὕτως καὶ τῆς περὶ ἕκαστον ἡμῶν πόλεως, ἣ συνέστηκεν ἐκ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος, τὸ βεβαιότατον εἰς ἴδρυσιν ἔλαχον οἱ φρονήσεως καὶ ἐπιστήμης ἐρασταὶ λόγοι, οὓς ὁ νομοθέτης μεταφορᾷ χρώμενος λύτρα καὶ πρωτοτόκους καλεῖ δι' αἷς εἶπον αἰτίας ἤδη.
- 127 Ταύτῃ καὶ τὰς πόλεις τῶν Λευιτῶν “λυτρωτὰς διὰ παντὸς” εἶναί φησιν (Lev. xxv. 32), ὅτι ὁ θεοῦ θεραπευτῆς αἰώνιον ἐλευθερίαν κεκάρπωται

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 124-127

city happy and believe that their enjoyment of their present blessings will endure, and that their hopes for those as yet lacking will be realized. For God for the sake of the worthy dispenses to the unworthy also His boundless and illimitable wealth. I know indeed that they cannot escape old age, but I pray that their years may be prolonged to the utmost. For I believe that, as long as they may live, it will be well with the community. So when I see or hear that any of them are dead, my heart is sad and heavy. Not for them. They have reached in the due course of nature the end we all must reach. They have lived in happiness and died in honour. It is for the survivors that I mourn. Deprived of the strong protecting arm, which brought them safety, they are abandoned to the woes which are their proper portion, and which they soon will feel, unless indeed nature should raise up some new protectors to replace the old, as in the tree which sheds its now ripened fruit, her agency makes other fruits grow up to give sustenance and pleasure to those who can pluck them.

As then in a city good men are the surest warrant of permanence, so in the commonwealth of the individual composed of soul and body, the strongest force to ensure stability belongs to those aspirations of the reason to wisdom and knowledge, which the lawgiver in his parable calls on grounds already stated "ransom" and "first-born."

And thus too he speaks of the cities of the Levites as "ransomed for ever" (Lev. xxv. 32), because the worshipper of God has reaped eternal freedom, and,

κατὰ τὰς συνεχεῖς τροπὰς τῆς ἀεικινήτου ψυχῆς
 ἰάσεις δεχόμενος ἐπαλλήλους· τὸ γὰρ λυτρωτὰς
 μὴ ἀπαξ ἀλλὰ διὰ παντός, ὡς φησι, γίνεσθαι
 τοιοῦτον ὑποβάλλει νοῦν, αἰὲ μὲν τρέπεσθαι, αἰὲ
 δὲ ἐλευθεροῦσθαι, τῆς μὲν τροπῆς διὰ τὸ φύσει
 θνητὸν ἐγγυνομένης, τῆς δὲ ἐλευθερίας χάριτι τοῦ
 εὐεργέτου, ὃν κλῆρον ἔλαχεν, βεβαιουμένης.

- 128 XXXVIII. "Ἄξιον δὲ μὴ παρέργως σκέψασθαι, τί δὴ ποτε τὰς πόλεις τῶν Λευιτῶν ἀνῆκε τοῖς
 φυγάσι, τοῖς ἱερωτάτοις τοὺς ἀνιέρους εἶναι δοκοῦντας συνοικεῖν ἀξιώσας· οὗτοι δ' εἰσὶν οἱ
 τὸν ἀκούσιον φόνον δράσαντες. λεκτέον οὖν πρῶ-τον μὲν τὰκόλουθον τῷ πάλαι λεχθέντι, ὅτι ὁ σπουδαῖος τοῦ φαύλου λύτρον, ὡστ' εἰκότως πρὸς
 τοὺς ἱερωμένους οἱ διαμαρτάνοντες ἀφίξονται τοῦ καθαρθῆναι χάριν· ἔπειθ' ὅτι φυγάδας
 οἱ Λευῖται προσίενται καὶ αὐτοὶ δυνάμει φυγάδες 129 ὄντες· ὡς γὰρ ἐκεῖνοι τῶν πατριδῶν ἐλαύνονται, οὕτως καὶ οὗτοι καταλελοίπασιν τέκνα, γονεῖς,
 ἀδελφούς, τὰ οικειότατα καὶ φίλτατα, ἵνα ἀντὶ
 θνητοῦ τὸν ἀθάνατον κλῆρον εὕρωται· διαφέρουσι
 δὲ ὅτι ἐκεῖνοις μὲν ἀβούλητος ἢ φυγὴ δι' ἔργον
 ἀκούσιον, τούτοις δὲ ὁ δρασμὸς ἐκούσιος δι'
 ἔρωτα τῶν ἀρίστων, καὶ ὅτι τοῖς μὲν οἱ Λευῖται καταφυγῇ, τοῖς δὲ Λευίταις ὁ πάντων ἡγεμῶν
 [189] ἔστιν, ἵν' οἱ | μὲν ἀτελεῖς νομὸν<sup>1</sup> ἔχωσι τὸν ἱερόν

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Tr. : Cohn and mss. νόμον : perhaps μόνον.

<sup>a</sup> Or "error succeeds error."

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 127-129

while in the continuous flux of the soul change<sup>a</sup> succeeds change, healing also succeeds healing in him. For the saying that the cities may be redeemed not once for all, but for ever, suggests the thought that for the worshipper with perpetual change goes perpetual liberation. The one is incidental to mortal nature, the other stands firm through the grace of the Benefactor, who is that worshipper's portion and possession.

XXXVIII. And here we may turn to another matter, which deserves more than a passing consideration. Why did he throw open the cities of the Levites to the fugitives from vengeance and deem fit that there the holiest should live side by side with men reckoned unholy, namely those who had committed involuntary homicide? The first answer is one that follows from what has been already said. We showed that the good are a ransom for the bad, and therefore it is with good reason that the sinners come to the consecrated to get purification.

Secondly, as they whom the Levites receive are exiles, so too the Levites themselves are virtually exiles. For as the homicides are expelled from the home of their nativity, so too the Levites have left children, parents, brothers, their nearest and dearest, to win an undying portion in place of that which perishes. The two differ in that the flight of these is not of their own desire, but for an involuntary deed, while those have fled of their own free will in loving quest of the highest. Again, the homicides find their refuge in the Levites, the Levites in Him who is ruler of all. The former in their imperfection think to have for their allotted province the holy word, the latter to have the God λόγον, οὗτοι δὲ τὸν ᾧ ἱερῶνται θεόν.

- 130 ἔτι γε μὴν οἱ τὸν ἀκούσιον φόνον δράσαντες τὰς αὐτὰς τοῖς Λευίταις πόλεις ἔλαχον οἰκεῖν, ὅτι καὶ οὗτοι διὰ φόνον ὅσιον προνομίας ἠξιώθησαν· ὅτε γοῦν ἡ ψυχὴ τραπεῖσα τὸν Αἰγύπτιον θεόν, τὸ σῶμα, ὡς χρυσὸν ἐξετίμησε, τόθ' οἱ ἱεροὶ λόγοι πάντες αὐτοκέλευστοι μεθ' ὄπλων ὀρμήσαντες ἀμυντηρίων, τῶν κατ' ἐπιστήμην ἀποδείξων, ἡγεμόνα προστησάμενοι καὶ στρατηγὸν τὸν ἀρχιερέα καὶ προφήτην καὶ φίλον τοῦ θεοῦ Μωυσῆν πόλεμον ἀκήρυκτον ὑπὲρ εὐσεβείας ἐπολέμου<sup>1</sup> καὶ οὐ πρότερον ἀπηλλάγησαν, ἢ πάντα τὰ τῶν ἐναντιομένων δόγματα καταλύσαι (Exod. xxxii. 26-28)· ὥστ' εἰκότως σύνοικοι γεγόνασιν οἱ τὰς ὁμοίας εἰ καὶ μὴ τὰς αὐτὰς πράξεις ἐργασάμενοι.
- 131 XXXIX. "Αδεται δέ τις καὶ τοιοῦτος ἐν ἀπορήτοις λόγος, ὃν ἀκοαῖς πρεσβυτέρων παρακατατίθεσθαι χρὴ νεωτέρων ὦτα ἐπιφράξαντας. τῶν γὰρ περὶ τὸν θεὸν δυνάμεων ἀρίστων πασῶν μία οὔσα ταῖς ἄλλαις ἰσότημος ἢ νομοθετικῇ—νομοθέτης γὰρ καὶ πηγὴ νόμων αὐτός, ἀφ' οὗ πάντες οἱ κατὰ μέρος νομοθέται—διχῇ πέφυκε τέμνεσθαι, τῇ μὲν εἰς εὐεργεσίαν κατορθούντων, τῇ δὲ εἰς
- 132 κόλασιν ἀμαρτανόντων. τοῦ μὲν οὖν προτέρου τμήματος ὑπηρέτης ὁ Λευίτης ἐστί· τὰς γὰρ λειτουργίας ἀπάσας ἀναδέχεται, ὅσαι πρὸς ἱερωσύνην ἀναφέρονται τελείαν, καθ' ἣν διασυνίσταται καὶ γνωρίζεται τὸ θνητὸν θεῷ, ἢ δι' ὀλοκαυτωμάτων ἢ διὰ σωτηρίων ἢ διὰ μετανοίας ἀμαρτη-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. πολεμοῦσι.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 129-132

to whom they have been consecrated. And, once more, they who slew involuntarily were granted the right of living in the same cities as the Levites, because these too were privileged as a reward for slaying in a righteous cause. We find that when the soul fell and honoured the god of Egypt, the body, as gold, with an honour which was not its due, the holy thoughts with one accord of their own motion rushed to the defence in arms. These arms were the proofs and arguments which knowledge gives. And they set before them as their captain and leader the high priest and prophet and friend of God, Moses. They waged war to the death for true religion, and held not their hands till they had made an end of all the false doctrines of their enemies (Exod. xxxii. 26-28). And thus it is natural that Levite and homicide should dwell together, for their deeds though not the same are alike.

XXXIX. There is another interpretation current of this matter, though not for vulgar knowledge. It may be entrusted to the hearing of the elders: younger ears may well be sealed against it. It is this. Amongst all the highest powers that attach to God, there is one excelled by none, the legislative. For He Himself is the lawgiver and the fountain of laws, and on Him depend all particular lawgivers. This legislative power is such as to be divided into two parts, one for rewarding those who do well, the other for the punishment of evil-doers. Of the first of these divisions the Levite is the minister. For he undertakes all the rites that belong to that perfect priesthood, by which mortality is commended to and recognized by God, whether it be through burnt-offering or peace-offering or repentance of sins. But

- μάτων· τοῦ δὲ δευτέρου καὶ κολαστηρίου τμήματος οἱ τὸν ἀκούσιον φόνον δρῶντες ὑπηρεταὶ γεγόνασι.
- 133 καὶ μαρτυρεῖ Μωυσῆς φάσκων· “ὁ δὲ οὐχ ἑκών, ἀλλ’ ὁ θεὸς παρέδωκεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὰς χεῖρας αὐτοῦ” (Exod. xxi. 13), ὥστε τὰς μὲν τούτου χεῖρας ὀργάνων τρόπον παραλαμβάνεσθαι, τὸν δὲ διὰ τούτων ἀοράτως ἐνεργοῦντα ἕτερον εἶναι, τὸν ἀόρατον. συνοικείτωσαν οὖν δύο θεράποντες τῶν νομοθετικῆς ὑπηρεταὶ δυεῖν εἰδῶν, τοῦ μὲν πρὸς εὐεργεσίαν ὁ Λευίτης, τοῦ δὲ πρὸς κόλασιν ὁ ἀκουσίως ἀνελών.
- 134 “Ἐν ἧ” δέ φησιν “ἡμέρα ἐπάταξα πᾶν πρωτότοκον ἐν γῆ Αἰγύπτῳ, ἡγίασα ἐμοὶ πᾶν πρωτότοκον ἐν Ἰσραὴλ” (Num. iii. 13), οὐχ ἵνα τοῦθ’ ὑποτοπήσωμεν, ὅτι κατ’ ἐκείνον μόνον τὸν χρόνον, καθ’ ὃν ἐπλήγη τὴν μεγάλην πληγὴν φθορᾶ τῶν πρωτοτόκων Αἰγυπτῶν, οἱ Ἰσραὴλ πρωτότοκοι ἐγένοντο ἅγιοι, ἀλλ’ ὅτι καὶ πάλαι καὶ νῦν καὶ αὖθις καὶ αἰεὶ τοῦτο συμβαίνει ἐπὶ ψυχῆς πέφυκεν· ὅταν τὰ τοῦ τυφλοῦ πάθους ἡγεμονικώτατα διαφθαρῆ, τῆνικαῦτα τὰ τοῦ θεοῦ ὀξυδερκῶς ὀρῶντος
- [190] πρεσβύτερα καὶ | τίμια ἔκγονα γίνεται ἅγια.
- 135 κακίας γὰρ ἕξοδος ἀρετῆς εἴσοδον ἐργάζεται, ὡς καὶ τὸναντίον ὑπεκστάντος ἀγαθοῦ τὸ ἐφεδρεῖον κακὸν ἐπεισέρχεται· ὅσον οὐδέπω γοῦν ἐξῆλθεν Ἰακώβ (Gen. xxvii. 30), καὶ πάρεστιν ἐπὶ τὴν πανδεχῆ διάνοιαν Ἡσαῦ ἀντὶ τῶν ἀρετῆς τύπων ἐνσφραγιούμενος κακίας, ἣν δύνηται, χαρακτῆρας· ἀλλ’ οὐκ ἂν ἰσχύσαι τοῦτ’ ἐργάσασθαι, πτερυσθεῖς γὰρ καὶ κληρονομηθεῖς ὑπὸ τοῦ σοφοῦ λήσεται φθάσαντος πρὶν ἢ παθεῖν ἀμύνασθαι.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 132-135

of the second division, whose function is to punish, they who shed blood involuntarily have thereby become the ministers. To this Moses testifies in the words "he did it not of intention, but God delivered him into his hands" (Exod. xxi. 13). The slayer's hands we see were used as instruments, but He who worked invisibly by these was another, even the Invisible One. It is well then that the two should dwell together who are the ministers of the two forms of law-giving, the Levite serving that which bestows reward, the involuntary slayer that which executes vengeance.

When we read "on the day that I smote all the first-born in Egypt, I sanctified to myself all the first-born in Israel" (Numb. iii. 13), we must not suppose that at that time only when Egypt was dealt that mighty blow by the destruction of her first-born did the first-born of Israel become holy. No, the lesson is that in the past, in the present, in the future, that hallowing may be for ever repeated in the soul. When the most dominant elements of blind passion are destroyed then comes the sanctification of the elder and precious offspring of Israel who has the clear vision of God. For the exodus of evil works the entrance of virtue, and the opposite is true also. When good withdraws, the evil that is biding its time takes its place. Hardly has Jacob gone out (Gen. xxvii. 30) when Esau is with our mind, which is open to all that come. He thinks to efface the image of virtue and impress in its stead, if he can, the stamp of vice. Yet he shall not be able to accomplish his purpose. The wise man will ward off the blow before it fall, and Esau shall wake to find himself tripped, supplanted, and his inheritance passed to the other.

- 136 XL. Προσάγει δ' οὐ μόνον ἀπὸ τῶν πρωτοτόκων τὰς ἀπαρχὰς ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν στεάτων, ἐμφαίνων ὅτι τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς γεγηθότα καὶ πίονα καὶ φυλακτικά καὶ χαρτὰ πάντα θεῷ παραχωρητέον. ὁρῶ δ' ἔγωγε καὶ ἐν ταῖς τῶν θυσιῶν διατάξεσι τρία προστεταγμένον ἀναφέρειν ἀπὸ τῶν ἱερείων τὰ πρῶτα, στέαρ καὶ νεφροὺς καὶ λοβὸν ἥπατος (Lev. iii. 3 ff.), περὶ ὧν κατ' ἰδίαν λέξομεν, οὐδαμοῦ δὲ ἐγκέφαλον ἢ καρδίαν, ἅπερ εἰκὸς ἦν πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων καθαγιῆσθαι, εἴ γε καὶ κατὰ τὸν νομοθέτην ἐν τῷ ἐτέρῳ τούτων τὸ
- 137 ἡγεμονικὸν ἀνωμολόγηται. ἀλλὰ μήποτε ὁσίως πάνυ κἂκ περισκέψεως ἀκριβοῦς αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ βωμὸν οὐκ ἀνῆκεν, ὅτι τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν κατὰ ἀμερῆ χρόνων διαστήματα πολλὰς<sup>1</sup> πρὸς ἐκάτερον τό τε εὖ καὶ χεῖρον τροπὰς λαμβάνον καὶ διαλλάττοντας αἰεὶ τύπους δέχεται τοτὲ μὲν καθαροῦ καὶ δοκίμου τοτὲ δὲ παρακεκομμένου καὶ
- 138 κιβδηλοῦ νομίσματος. τὴν δεδεγμένην οὖν χώραν ἄμφω τὰ μαχόμενα καλὸν τε καὶ αἰσχρὸν καὶ πρὸς ἐκάτερον ὠκείωμένην καὶ τὴν ἴσην τιμὴν ἀμφοτέροις ἀπονέμουσαν οὐχ ἤττον ἀναγνον ἢ εὐαγῆ κρίνας ὁ νομοθέτης ἀπὸ τοῦ θείου βωμοῦ κατεβίβασε· τὸ γὰρ αἰσχρὸν βέβηλον, τὸ δὲ βέβηλον
- 139 πάντως ἀνίερων. τοῦτο δὲ<sup>2</sup> τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν διακεχώρικεν<sup>3</sup>. εἰ δ' ἀπόκρισιν<sup>4</sup> πάσχοι, τῆνικαῦτα πάντων τῶν μερῶν κεκαθαρμένων ἀ-

<sup>1</sup> Ins. Cohn from Pap. πολλὰ εἰ; mss. omit.

<sup>2</sup> Cohn suggests διὰ τοῦτο δή.

<sup>3</sup> mss. διακεχώρηκεν.

<sup>4</sup> Conj. Tr., lit. "separation"; cf. Plato, Def. 415 D κάθαρσις, ἀπόκρισις χειρόνων ἀπὸ βελτιόνων; mss. ἐπίκρισιν, which, though a common word in Philo, is unsuitable here.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 136-139

XL. But Abel offers the firstlings not only from the first-born, but from the fat, showing that the gladness and richness of the soul, all that protects and gives joy, should be set apart for God.

I note that also in the ordering of the sacrifices the worshipper is bidden to bring from the victims these three first, the fat, the kidneys, and the lobe of the liver (Lev. iii. 3 ff.). Of these I will speak separately. But nowhere is there a word of the brain or the heart,<sup>a</sup> which we should have supposed would be offered before all, seeing that also in the Lawgiver's words<sup>a</sup> it is acknowledged that the ruling principle resides in one or other of these.

Yet perhaps it was in true piety and after careful thought that he excluded them from the altar of God, because this ruling principle from moment to moment is subject to many changes either way, to good and bad. And thus it is ever assuming different impressions : sometimes that of a coin pure and approved by the test, sometimes of one that is base and adulterated. This region then which admits both contending elements, the noble and the shameful, which is familiar with both, and honours both alike, seemed no less unholy than holy to the lawgiver, and therefore he dismissed it from the altar of God. For the shameful is profane, and the profane is surely unholy.

It is this profaneness which has excluded the ruling principle. But if that should undergo purgation, then, when all the parts have been cleansed, there shall be given to the

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 492.

PHILO

κηλίδωτον ἄχραντον ὀλοκαυτωθήσεται· νόμος γὰρ ὀλοκαυτωμάτων οὗτος, μηδὲν ἔξω τροφῆς σκυβάλων καὶ δέρματος, ἃ σωματικῆς ἀσθενείας δείγματα, οὐχὶ κακίας, ἐστίν, ὑπολείπεσθαι τῷ γενητῷ, τὰ δ' ἄλλα ὅσα ψυχὴν ὀλόκληρον κατὰ πάντα τὰ μέρη παρέχεται ὀλοκαυτοῦν θεῷ.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN, 139

sacrificial fire a whole offering free from stain and pollution. For this is the law of burnt-offerings, that nothing save the excrement and hide<sup>a</sup> which are the tokens of bodily weakness, not of wickedness, should be left to created being, but the rest, which show a soul wholly complete in all its parts, should be given in their entirety as a burnt-offering to God.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 492.

THAT THE WORSE IS WONT TO ATTACK THE BETTER (QUOD DETERIUS POTIORI INSIDIARI SOLEAT)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

CAIN and Abel signify to Philo opposing principles, love of self and love of God (32). The call to Abel to go out into the "plain" is a challenge to a disputation. The opening of the Treatise is mainly occupied in showing that in Genesis "plain" suggests a contest of opposing principles. Why does Jacob call Leah and Rachel to the plain? Because it is there that he "tends his flocks," i.e. disciplines his lower impulses. The plain is the obvious place for Joseph, the wearer of a many-coloured patchwork of inconsistent tenets, to be sent to by his father that he may be taught better by his brethren, who are there becoming proficient in the work of disciplining their lower nature (their flocks). Even Isaac, going out into the plain to meditate is, in Philo's eyes, the peerless champion, who finds the field emptied by the retirement of all his adversaries. "The plain," says Philo in 32, "has now been shown to be a figure of a contest," and so he passes on to his next point.

Abel was ill-advised to accept Cain's challenge. Self-love can plead for itself (33 f.) with an eloquence which can be met only by one versed in dialectic, and Abel lacked such training. Moses was wiser in shrinking from meeting the sophists of Egypt,

198

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER

acknowledging himself to be without eloquence, nay, devoid of speech itself, and waiting for "Aaron," who commonly represents for Philo the uttered word. Thought should ever be wedded to speech. Glib fools are contemptible, but dumb wise men are ineffective (44 ff.). This is a theme to which Philo returns later on (126 ff.), where he enlarges on the joy of speech in interpreting thought.

Yet the seeming victory of the false view is really a defeat (47), as is evident when we consider well what is implied in the words, "the voice of thy brother's blood." Here is the great truth, which is plainly stated in Lev. xvii. 11, that "the Life is in the Blood." The Life which is Life indeed emerges from seeming death no longer "speechless." It has now a "voice," which God hears (47 ff. and 92 f.). This theme is taken up again in 70 ff., where the question put to Cain, "What hast thou done?" is treated as equivalent to "Thou hast effected nothing," and as signifying the futility of sophism, 'clothing itself with' Balaam or anyone else, in contrast with the undying life of virtue.

The seeming victor, moreover, brings on himself a curse which comes to him "from the earth," i.e. the senses which are his chosen field (98 ff.). He may toil at it, but can never till it (104 ff.). It will never second his efforts (112 f.). He must go "groaning and trembling" (119, 129 f.), never finding rest with 'Noah,' or laughter with 'Isaac,' or joy in himself with 'Aaron,' or hope with 'Enos' (120 ff.). He will taste abandonment (141 ff.) and the shame of exposure to the eyes of God (158 ff.).

PHILO

A few points may be noticed—

- (a) Suggestions illustrated by the New Testament.
- (a) God asks questions to convict men out of their own mouths, and to elicit an utterance of the heart's desire (58-60). We are reminded of our Lord's way with men.
- (β) Blood is distinguished, as the essence of our animal vitality, from the inbreathed breath of our reason (79-91). Our thoughts go to the Epistle to the Hebrews and 1 St. John.
- (b) Philo's habit of going off at a word.
- (a) The word "keeper" in Cain's insolent question leads to 'guardianship': this to Levites, guardians of the oracles of God. Their active service from the age of twenty-five to that of fifty, when they become guardians, leads to Memory, guarding what it has learned, and assisted in the high task of teaching by Utterance ("His brother shall minister," Numb. viii. 26) (62-68).
- (β) The words "God hath made me to laugh" (literally "hath made laughter for me") leads to the thought of God as "Poet" ("Maker") whose Poetry produces gladness (123 ff.).
- (γ) Joseph is sent from "Hebron," the place of "hollows," which at once suggests the differences of level and colour which are a symptom of leprosy, and are therefore suited to mark the unhealthy state which Joseph must be rid of (15 f.).
- (δ) Joseph, having lightly started in the right direction, is presently found "wandering."

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER

We may, with a right but superficial intention, go wrong, mistaking forced asceticism for healthy self-control, and outward piety for true religion (17-21).

- (ε) The two stages of education are reached by way of the two cakes made of Manna, which is a synonym for the Rock, from which flows the spring of Divine wisdom (117 f.).

ΠΕΡΙ ΤΟΥ ΤΟ ΧΕΙΡΟΝ ΤΩΙ ΚΡΕΙΤΤΟΝΙ
ΦΙΛΕΙΝ ΕΠΙΤΙΘΕΣΘΑΙ

- <sup>1</sup>
[191] I. “ Καὶ εἶπε Κάιν πρὸς Ἀβελ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ Διέλθωμεν ἐπὶ τὸ πεδίον. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ εἶναι αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ, ἀνέστη Κάιν ἐπὶ Ἀβελ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπέκτεινεν αὐτόν ” (Gen. iv. 8). ὁ βούλεται ὁ Κάιν τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν, ἐκ προκλήσεως τὸν Ἀβελ εἰς συζήτησιν ἀγαγὼν εἰκόσι καὶ πιθανοῖς σοφίσμασιν ελεῖν ἀνὰ κράτος· τὸ γὰρ πεδίον, εἰς ὃ προτρέπεται παραγενέσθαι, σημεῖον ἀμίλλης καὶ διαμάχης εἶναι φαμεν ἀπὸ τῶν προφανῶν τεκμαιρόμενοι περὶ τῶν ἀδήλων.
- <sup>2</sup> ὀρῶμεν γὰρ τοὺς πλείστους τῶν ἀγώνων κατὰ τε πόλεμον καὶ κατ’ εἰρήνην ἐν πεδίοις συνισταμένους· ἐν εἰρήνῃ μὲν οὖν ὅσοι τοὺς γυμνικοὺς ἄθλους διαθλοῦσι, στάδια καὶ λεωφόρα πεδία μεταδιώκουσι, κατὰ δὲ τὸν πόλεμον τὰς πεζομαχίας καὶ ἵππομαχίας οὐκ ἐν γεωλόφοις ἔθος ἐστὶ ποιεῖσθαι· πλείους γὰρ ἐκ τῆς ἀνεπιτηδειότητος τῶν χώρων αἱ βλάβαι, ὧν ἀντεπιφέρουσιν ἀλλήλοις οἱ ἐχθροί,
- <sup>3</sup> γένοιντ’ ἄν. II. σημεῖον δὲ μέγιστον, ὁ ἀσκητῆς ἐπιστήμης τὴν ἐναντίαν διάθεσιν πολεμῶν ἀμαθίαν, ὅταν τὰς ἐν ψυχῇ δυνάμεις ἀλόγους τρόπον τινὰ ποιμαίνῃ νουθετῶν καὶ σωφρονίζων, ἐν πεδίῳ θεωρεῖται· “ ἀποστείλας γὰρ Ἰακώβ ἐκάλεσε Λεῖαν

THAT THE WORSE IS WONT TO ATTACK THE BETTER

I. "And Cain said to Abel his brother, Let us make our way to the plain." And it came to pass when they were on the plain that Cain rose up against his brother Abel and killed him" (Gen. iv. 8). What Cain is aiming at is by means of a challenge to draw Abel into a dispute, and to gain the mastery over him by plausible sophistries that have the appearance of truth. For, drawing our conclusions about things that are obscure from things that are manifest, we say that the plain, the rendezvous to which he summons him, is a figure of contest and desperate battle. For we see that most contests both in war and peace take place on plains. In peace those who contend in athletic sports look out for race-courses and spacious plains; and in war it is not usual to fight infantry or cavalry battles on hills; for the casualties arising from the unfavourable nature of the ground would outnumber those inflicted on each other by the combatants. II. Here is a signal proof of this. The earnest seeker of knowledge, at war with ignorance, the contrary condition, when shepherding (so to speak) with admonition and correction the irrational powers in the soul, is presented to us on a plain: for "Jacob sent and called Leah

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 493.

καὶ 'Ραχὴλ εἰς τὸ πεδίον, οὐ τὰ ποιμνία" (Gen. xxxi. 4), παριστὰς ἐναργῶς ὅτι φιλονεικίας σημεῖον
 4 τὸ πεδίον | ἐστὶ. καλεῖ δὲ αὐτὰς <διὰ τί>; "ὄρῳ
 [192] τὸ πρόσωπον τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν" ἔφη "ὅτι οὐκ
 ἔστι πρὸς ἐμὲ ὡς ἐχθρὸς καὶ τρίτην ἡμέραν· ὁ δὲ θεὸς τοῦ πατρὸς μου ἦν μετ' ἐμοῦ" (Gen. xxxi. 5).
 διὰ τοῦτο γάρ, εἴπομι' ἄν, ὁ Λάβαν οὐκ ἔστι πρὸς
 σοῦ, ὅτι μετὰ σοῦ ὁ θεός· ἐν ἧ μὲν γὰρ ψυχῇ τὸ
 ἐκτὸς αἰσθητὸν ὡς μέγιστον ἀγαθὸν τετίμηται, ἐν ταύτῃ λόγος ἀστείος οὐχ εὐρίσκεται· ἡ δ' ἐμ-περιπατεῖ ὁ θεός, τὸ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητὸν ἀγαθὸν οὐχ
 ὑπείληπται, καθ' ὃ νενόηται καὶ προσηγόρευται
 5 Λάβαν. καὶ ὅσοι δὲ ἐν μέρει λόγου τοῦ προ-κόπτοντος κατὰ τὸν πατέρα κοσμοῦνται, τὰς ψυχῆς ἀλόγους φοράς μεταδιδάσκουσιν ἐκλεξάμενοι ἐπιτήδειον τόπον τὸ πεδίον. λέγεται γὰρ τῷ Ἰωσήφ·
 "οὐχ οἱ ἀδελφοί σου ποιμαίνουσιν ἐν Συχέμ;
 δεῦρο ἀποστείλω σε πρὸς αὐτούς. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν Ἴδου
 ἐγώ. εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ Πορευθεὶς ἴδε, εἰ ὑγιαίνουσιν
 οἱ ἀδελφοί σου καὶ τὰ πρόβατα, καὶ ἀνάγγειλόν
 μοι. καὶ ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν ἐκ τῆς κοιλάδος τῆς Χεβρών, καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς Συχέμ. καὶ εὔρεν αὐτὸν
 ἄνθρωπος πλανώμενων ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ· ἠρώτησε δὲ
 αὐτὸν ὁ ἄνθρωπος Τί ζητεῖς; ὁ δὲ εἶπε Τοὺς ἀδελφούς μου ζητῶ, ἀνάγγειλόν μοι ποῦ βόσκουσιν.
 εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ ἄνθρωπος Ἀπήρκασιν ἐντεῦθεν·
 ἤκουσα γὰρ αὐτῶν λεγόντων Πορευθῶμεν εἰς 6 Δωθαεῖμ" (Gen. xxxvii. 13-17). III. ὅτι μὲν οὖν ἐν πεδίῳ τῶν ἐν αὐτοῖς ἀλόγων δυνάμεων
 ποιοῦνται τὴν ἐπιστάσιαν, δηλὸν ἐστὶν ἐκ τῶν
 εἰρημένων. ὁ δὲ Ἰωσήφ πέμπεται πρὸς αὐτούς,

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 3-6

and Rachel to the plain, where the flocks were" (Gen. xxxi. 4), making it clear that the plain is a figure for contentiousness. And what is his motive for calling them? "I see your father's face," he said, "that it is not toward me as it used to be: but the God of my father has been with me" (Gen. xxxi. 5). 'The reason,' I should be inclined to say, 'that Laban is not on thy side, is that God is with thee; for in a soul in which the outward object of sense is valued as a supreme good, in that soul excellent reason is not found: but in one in which God walks, the outward object of sense is not regarded as a good thing: and it is to this that the conception and name of Laban corresponds.' And such men as order themselves by the principle of gradual progress in accordance with their father's rule, have chosen the plain as a suitable place for their task of teaching the soul's irrational impulses a better way. For the words addressed to Joseph are: "Do not thy brethren tend their flocks in Sychem? Come let me send thee to them." And he said "Here am I." And he said to him "Go see, whether thy brethren are in good health and the sheep, and bring me word." And he sent him out of the valley of Hebron, and he came to Sychem. And a man found him wandering in the plain: and the man asked him "What seekest thou?" And he said "I seek my brethren, tell me where they feed their flocks." And the man said to him "They have departed hence, for I heard them saying 'Let us go to Dothaim.'" (Gen. xxxvii. 13-17). III. It is evident from these words that they are in the plain, caring for the irrational powers within them. And, because he is unable to bear the too great severity

PHILO

ἐπεὶ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς ἐπιστήμην αὐστηροτέραν
οὐσαν ἀδυνατεῖ φέρειν, ἵνα μάθῃ παρὰ τιθασωτέροις ὑφηγηταῖς τὰ πρακτέα καὶ συνοίσοντα· κέχρηται
γὰρ δόγματι ἐκ διαφερόντων συνυφασμένῳ, πάνυ ποικίλῳ καὶ πολυπλόκῳ, παρὸ καὶ χιτῶνα κατ-εσκευάσθαι ποικίλον φησὶν ὁ νομοθέτης αὐτῷ
(Gen. xxxvii. 3), δηλῶν ὅτι λαβυρινθώδους καὶ
7 δυσεκλύτου δόξης ἐστὶν εἰσηγητής· πρὸς γὰρ πολιτείαν μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν φιλοσοφῶν τὰ
τρία γένη τῶν ἀγαθῶν, τὰ τε ἐκτὸς καὶ περὶ σῶμα
καὶ ψυχὴν, ὅλαις φύσεσιν ἀλλήλων διηρημένα εἰς
τὸ αὐτὸ ἄγει καὶ συνείρει, χρεῖον ἕκαστον ἑκάστου
καὶ πάντα πάντων ἀποφαίνειν ἀξιῶν καὶ τὸ ἐξ
ἀθρόων συντεθὲν ἄρτιον καὶ πλήρες ὄντως ἀγαθόν,
τὰ δ' ἐξ ὧν τοῦτο ἐπάγῃ μέρη μὲν ἢ στοιχεῖα
[193] 8 ἀγαθῶν, | ἀγαθὰ δ' οὐκ εἶναι τέλεια· καθάπερ γὰρ
μήτε πῦρ μήτε γῆν μήτε τι τῶν τεττάρων, ἐξ ὧν ἐδημιουργήθη τὸ πᾶν, κόσμον εἶναι, τὴν δὲ τῶν στοιχείων εἰς ταῦτο σύνοδόν τε καὶ κρᾶσιν, τὸν
αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ τὸ εὐδαιμον μήτε ἐν τοῖς ἐκτὸς
ιδία μήτε ἐν τοῖς περὶ σῶμα μήτε ἐν τοῖς περὶ
ψυχὴν καθ' αὐτὰ ἐξετάζεσθαι—τῶν γὰρ εἰρημένων
ἕκαστον μερῶν τινα καὶ στοιχείων λόγον ἔχειν—
9 ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸ ἐκ πάντων ἄθροισμα. IV. ταύτην

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 493.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 6-9

of his father's knowledge, Joseph is sent to them, that in the hands of more lenient instructors he may learn what he ought to do and what will be beneficial ; for the creed he has hitherto followed is one woven of incongruous elements, multifarious and complex in the highest degree. This is why the lawgiver says that a coat of many colours was made for him (Gen. xxxvii. 3), indicating by this that he is the promulgator of a doctrine full of mazes and hard to disentangle. He is one who moulds his theories with an eye to statecraft rather than to truth. This appears in his treatment of the three kinds of good things,<sup>a</sup> those pertaining to the outside world, to the body, and to the soul. These, though separated from each other by complete diversity of nature, he brings together and combines into one, claiming to show that each is in need of each and all of all, and that the aggregate resulting from taking them all together in a body is a perfect and really complete good ; but that the constituents out of which this is compacted, though indeed parts or elements of good things, are not good things in perfection. He points out that neither fire nor earth nor any of the four elements, out of which the universe was formed, is a world, but the coming together and blending of the elements into one ; and argues that in precisely the same way happiness is found to be neither a peculiar property of the things of the outside world, nor of the things pertaining to the body, nor of those pertaining to the soul, taken by themselves. He argues that each of the three classes mentioned has the character of a part or element and that it is only when they are all taken together in the aggregate that they produce happiness. IV. In order, then, that he

PHILO

- οὖν τὴν δόξαν πέμπεται μεταδιδασκῆσόμενος πρὸς ἄνδρας μόνον τὸ καλὸν ἀγαθὸν νομίζοντας, ὁ ψυχῆς ὡς ψυχῆς ἐστὶν ἴδιον, τὰ δ' ἐκτὸς καὶ περὶ σῶμα πλεονεκτήματα λεγόμενα μόνον, οὐ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ὄντα, ἀγαθὰ πεπιστευκότας. “ἰδοὺ” γὰρ φησιν “οἱ ἀδελφοί σου ποιμαίνουσι” καὶ ἄρχουσι παντὸς ἀλόγου μέρους τῶν ἐν αὐτοῖς “ἐν Συχέμ” (Gen. xxxvii. 13). ὤμος δὲ ἐρμηνεύεται, τλητικοῦ σημεῖον πόνου· βαστάζουσι γὰρ ἄχθος μέγιστον οἱ φιλάρετοι, τὴν πρὸς σῶμα καὶ τὴν σώματος ἡδονὴν καὶ πάλιν αὐτὴν πρὸς τὰ ἐκτὸς καὶ τὰς ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἐγγυνομένας τέρψεις ἀντίταξιν.
- 10 “δεῦρο οὖν ἀποστείλω σε πρὸς αὐτούς” (ib.), τουτέστι μετακλήθητι καὶ πρόσελθε τῇ διανοίᾳ λαβὼν ὄρμην ἐκούσιον εἰς τὸ τὰ ἀμείνω μαθεῖν. ἀλλ' ἄχρι γε τοῦ παρόντος ἐπιμορφάζεις ὡς παιδείαν δεξάμενος τὴν ἀληθῆ· μήπω γὰρ παρὰ σαυτῷ τοῦτο ὠμολογηκῶς ἔτοιμος εἶναι λέγεις ἀναδιδάσκεσθαι, ὅταν φῆς “ἰδοὺ ἐγώ,” ἐξ οὗ μοι δοκεῖς εἰκαιότητα καὶ εὐχέριαν ἀπελέγχειν σεαυτοῦ μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς τὸ μαθεῖν ἐτοιμότητα μηνύειν. τεκμήριον δέ, εὐρήσει σε μικρὸν ὕστερον ὁ ἀληθινὸς ἄνθρωπος πλανώμενον ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ (Gen. xxxvii. 15), οὐκ ἂν πλανηθέντα, εἰ ἀπὸ γνώμης ὑγιοῦς ἐπὶ τὴν
- 11 ἄσκησιν ἦλθες. καὶ μὴν ὁ γε προτρεπτικὸς λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς ἀνάγκην ἐπιτίθησιν οὐδεμίαν, ἵνα ἐθελουργὸς καὶ αὐτοκέλευστος ἐπιτηδεύῃς τὰ βελτίω, φησὶ γάρ· “πορευθεὶς ἴδε,” θέασαι καὶ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 493.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 9-11

may be taught better ideas than these, he is sent to men who hold that nothing is a good thing "but what has true beauty, and that this is a property belonging to the soul as soul; men who are convinced that advantages pertaining to things outside and to the body are good things in name only, not in reality. For it says "Behold thy brethren tend their flocks," and govern every irrational element of their being "in Sychem". (Gen. xxxvii. 13). "Sychem" means "shoulder," a symbol of patient toil; for lovers of virtue carry a very great burden, namely resistance to the body and bodily pleasure, and in addition to these resistance to external things and the delights which they afford us. "Come then let me send thee to them," (ibid.), that is, 'submit to be summoned elsewhere, and draw nigh and entertain in thine understanding a ready eagerness for the receiving of better teaching. Up to the present time thou deludest thyself with the idea that thou hast welcomed the true education. For thou professest to be ready to be taught otherwise, though thou hast not yet in thine own heart acknowledged thy need of this. Thy cry "Here am I" seems to me to convict thee of rash and reckless compliance, rather than to indicate readiness to learn. A proof of this is that soon afterwards the real man will find thee wandering in the way (Gen. xxxvii. 15), whereas thou never wouldst have lost the way hadst thou with a healthy resolve come to be trained. And mark, the words in which thy father urges thee to go put no compulsion on thee, in order that thou mayest follow the better course at thine own prompting and by thine own spontaneous action. His words are: "Go see," contemplate and observe and

PHILO

- κατανόησον καὶ πάνυ ἀκριβῶς περίσκεψαι τὸ πρᾶγμα· εἶδέναι γάρ σε δεῖ περὶ ὃ μέλλεις πονεῖσθαι πρότερον, εἴτ' αὖθις ἐπὶ τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν αὐτοῦ
- 12 χωρεῖν. ὅταν μέντοι διακύψῃς καὶ περιαγαγὼν ὄμμα ὄλον δι' ὄλων καταθεάσῃ, προσεξέτασον καὶ τοὺς ἐπιθεμένους ἤδη καὶ ἀσκητὰς αὐτοῦ γεγονότας, εἰ τοῦτο δρῶντες "ὕγιαίνουσιν" ἀλλὰ μὴ μεμήνασι, καθάπερ οἱ φιλήδονοι διασύροντες καὶ ἐπιχλευάζοντες νομίζουσι. μήτε δὲ τὴν θέαν τοῦ πράγματος μήτε τὴν περὶ τοῦ ὑγιαίνειν τοὺς ἀσκητὰς διάγνωσιν βεβαιώσῃ παρὰ σεαυτῶ, πρὶν "ἀναγγεῖλαι" καὶ ἀνενεγκεῖν τῷ πατρί· γινῶμαι γὰρ αἱ μὲν τῶν ἄρτι μανθάνειν ἀρχομένων ἄστατοι καὶ ἀνίδρυτοι, πάγιοι δ' αἱ τῶν προκεκοφόντων, |
- [194] ἀφ' ὧν τὸ ἀκλινὲς κἀκείνους λαμβάνειν ἀναγκαῖον.
- 13 V. Τοῦτον, ᾧ διάνοια, τὸν τρόπον ἔαν ἐρευνᾷς τοὺς ἱεροφαντηθέντας λόγους μὲν θεοῦ, νόμους δὲ ἀνθρώπων θεοφιλῶν, οὐδὲν ταπεινὸν οὐδ' ἀνάξιον τοῦ μεγέθους αὐτῶν ἀναγκασθήσῃ παραδέχεσθαι. αὐτὸ γὰρ τοῦτο, περὶ οὗ νῦν ὁ λόγος ἐστὶ, πῶς ἂν τις τῶν εὖ φρονούντων παραδέξαιτο; ἄρα τοσαύτην σπάνιν οἰκετῶν ἢ ὑπηρετῶν εἰκὸς εἶναι τῷ βασιλέως ἔχοντι περιουσίαν Ἰακώβ, ὡς υἱὸν ἐπὶ τὴν ξένην ἐκπέμπειν διαγγελοῦντα περὶ τῶν ἄλλων παίδων, εἰ ὑγιαίνουσιν, καὶ προσέτι
- 14 τῶν θρεμμάτων; ὁ πάππος αὐτοῦ χωρὶς τοῦ πλήθους τῶν αἰχμαλώτων, οὓς ἐννέα βασιλεῖς καθελὼν ἀπήγαγεν, ὑπὲρ τριακοσίουσ ἐσχεν οἰκότριβας· μεμείωται δὲ τῆς οἰκίας οὐδὲν, ἀλλὰ χρόνου

° The word is that for "it be well with" in Gen. xxxvii. 14.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 11-14

with perfect exactness consider the matter ; for thou must first know that at which thou art about to labour, and then afterwards proceed to attend to it. When however thou hast surveyed it and with comprehensive glance obtained a complete view of it in all its parts, go on further to examine those who have already applied themselves to it and become its devotees. Thou must find out whether in pursuing this course they are of sound mind,<sup>a</sup> and not mad, as those who love pleasure imagine in their mocking depreciation of them. Consider the matter, I say, and judge whether they be sane who practise this discipline ; and yet let not thy judgement be final till thou hast brought word and made a report to thy father : for the judgements of those who are beginning to learn are unsettled and unstable, while in those who have made much progress they are firmly fixed ; and the only way is for the others to acquire stedfastness from these.'

V. If, O my understanding, thou searchest on this wise into the oracles which are both words of God and laws given by men whom God loves, thou shalt not be compelled to admit anything base or unworthy of their dignity. Why, how could any sensible person admit the very narrative of which we are now speaking ? Is it likely that Jacob, who had the wealth of a king, was so badly off for household servants or attendants as to send a son out abroad to bring word about his other children, whether they are in good health, and about the cattle to boot ? His grandfather, apart from the multitude of prisoners of war whom he carried off after defeating nine kings, had over three hundred home-bred servants ; and since then there has been no curtailing of his menage,

- προϊόντος πάντα διὰ πάντων ἔλαβεν αὐξήσιν. οὐκ ἂν οὖν ἀφθόνου θεραπείας ὑπαρχούσης υἷον ἡξίου πέμπειν, οὗ μάλιστα ἐκήδετο, ἐπὶ πράξιν, ἦν καὶ τῶν εὐτελεστάτων ἂν τις ῥαδίως κατώρθωσεν.
- 15 VI. ἀλλ' ὄρας ὅτι καὶ τὸ χωρίον, ὅθεν αὐτὸν ἐκπέμπει, περιττῶς ἀναγράφει μόνον οὐκ ἐναργῶς προτρέπων ἀφίστασθαι τοῦ ῥητοῦ· “ ἐκ γὰρ τῆς κοιλάδος τῆς Χεβρών ” (Gen. xxxvii. 14)· συζυγὴ δὲ καὶ συνεταιρὶς Χεβρῶν καλεῖται συμβολικῶς ἡμῶν τὸ σῶμα, ὅτι συνέζευκται καὶ ὡσπερ ἑταιρίαν καὶ φιλίαν πρὸς ψυχὴν τέθειται· κοιλάδας δὲ ἔχει τὰ αἰσθητήρια, μεγάλας δεξαμενὰς ἀπάντων ὅσα ἐκτὸς αἰσθητά, ἃ τὰς παμπληθεῖς ποιότητας ἐπαντλοῦντα καὶ διὰ τῶν δεξαμενῶν ἐπεισχέοντα τῇ διανοίᾳ κατακλύζει καὶ βύθιον αὐτῆν
- 16 ἀπεργάζεται. διὰ τοῦτο ἐν τῷ νόμῳ τῆς λέπρας, ὅταν ἐν οἰκίᾳ κοιλάδες χλωρίζουσαι ἢ πυρρίζουσαι φανῶσι, διείρηται τοὺς λίθους, ἐν οἷς γεγόνασιν, ἐξελόντας ἐτέρους ἀντιτιθέναι (Lev. xiv. 37 ff.)· τούτέστιν, ὅταν διαφέρουσαι ποιότητες, ἃς ἔδημιούργησαν ἡδοναὶ καὶ ἐπιθυμίαι καὶ τὰ ἀδελφὰ τούτων πάθη, βαρύνασαι καὶ πῖεσασαι τὴν ὅλην ψυχὴν κοιλοτέραν καὶ ταπεινοτέραν αὐτῆν ἑαυτῆς ἐργάσωνται, τοὺς τῆς ἀσθενείας αἰτίους λόγους ἀνελεῖν, ὑγιεινοὺς δὲ δι' ἀγωγῆς νομίμου ἢ καὶ παιδεύσεως ὀρθῆς ἀντισταγαγεῖν.
- 17 VII. Τὸν Ἰωσήφ οὖν ὅλον εἰς τὰς τοῦ σώματος καὶ τῶν αἰσθήσεων κοιλότητας εἰσdedυκότα ὄρω·

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 493.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 14-17

but as time went on it has in every way grown greater. Having then an abundant supply of servants he would never have thought fit to send a son, of whom he was specially fond, on a business which could easily have been carried out quite well even by one of the least valuable of his dependents.

VI. Now you notice that Scripture goes out of its way to record even the place from which he dispatches him, all but giving the reader a plain hint to avoid the literal interpretation. For it says "out of the vale of Hebron" (Gen. xxxvii. 14). Now "Hebron," a "coupling" and "comradeship," is a figurative title for our body, because it is "coupled" with a soul, and has established a friendship and "comradeship" with it. As "vales" it has organs of sense, great receivers of all objects of sense outside it. These pump over the understanding the countless qualities of things, and pour them in upon it through the receivers, flooding it and totally submerging it. This is why in the Law of Leprosy, when greenish or reddish depressions show themselves in a house, an injunction is given to remove the stones in which they have appeared and to put others in their place (Lev. xiv. 57 ff.). That is to say, when diverse qualities, the handiwork of pleasures and desires and passions akin to these, press and weigh down the whole soul, hollowing it out and lowering its level, we are to get rid of the principles which cause the infirmity, and introduce in their place good healthy principles by means of a training under the law or indeed of a good education.<sup>a</sup>

VII. Seeing, therefore, that Joseph has utterly sunk into the hollows of the body and the senses, προκαλείται τῶν φωλεῶν ἔξω προελθόντα ἐλευ-θέρου σπάσαι τοῦ καρτερίας πνεύματος φοιτήσαντα

 πρὸς τοὺς πάλαι μὲν ἀσκητὰς νυνὶ δὲ διδασκάλους
 αὐτῆς. ὁ δὲ προεληλυθέναι δόξας πλανώμενος
 εὐρίσκεται. “εὖρε” γάρ φησιν “αὐτὸν ἄνθρωπος
 [195] | πλανώμενον ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ” (Gen. xxxvii. 15),
 δηλῶν ὅτι οὐχ ὁ πόνος καθ’ αὐτὸν ἀλλ’ ὁ μετὰ 18 τέχνης ἀγαθόν. ὡσπερ γὰρ οὔτε μουσικὴν ἀμούσως
 οὔτε γραμματικὴν ἀγραμμάτως οὐδὲ συνόλως
 φράσαι τέχνην ἀτέχνως ἢ κακοτέχνως ἀλλὰ τεχνικῶς ἐκάστην ἐπιτηδεύειν προσήκειν, οὕτως
 οὐδὲ φρόνησιν πανούργως οὐδὲ σωφροσύνην φειδωλῶς καὶ ἀνελευθέρως οὐδὲ θρασέως ἀνδρείαν
 οὐδὲ δεισιδαιμόνως εὐσέβειαν οὐδ’ ἄλλην τινα
 κατ’ ἀρετὴν ἐπιστήμην ἀνεπιστημόνως· ἀνοδία
 γὰρ ὁμολογουμένως ταῦτα πάντα. παρὸ καὶ
 νόμος κείμενος “δικαίως τὸ δίκαιον διώκειν” (Deut. xvi. 20), ἵνα δικαιοσύνην καὶ πᾶσαν ἀρετὴν
 τοῖς συγγενέσιν ἔργοις αὐτῆς ἀλλὰ μὴ τοῖς ἐναν-19 τίοις μετερχώμεθα. εἴαν οὖν τινα θεάσῃ σῖτα καὶ ποτὰ μὴ ἐν καιρῷ προσιέμενον ἢ λουτρά καὶ
 ἀλείμματα παραιτούμενον ἢ τῶν περὶ σῶμα σκεπασμάτων ἀμελοῦντα ἢ χαμευνίαις καὶ δυσ-αυλίαις χρώμενον, εἴτ’ ἐκ τούτων ἐπιμορφάζοντα ἐγκράτειαν, οἴκτον λαβὼν τῆς περὶ αὐτὸν πλάνης
 τὴν ἀληθῆ τῆς ἐγκρατείας ὁδὸν δεῖξον· ἃ γὰρ ἐπετήδευσεν, ἀνήνυτοι καὶ ἄτρυτοι πόνοι λιμῶ καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις κακώσεσι ψυχὴν καὶ σῶμα ἐκτρα-20 χηλίζοντες. μὴδ’ εἴ τις περιρραντηρίοις ἢ καθαρ-

* Omitting τῶν after τινα with HL. If τῶν be read with

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 17-20

he challenges him to quit his lurking-place and go forward and draw a free draught of the spirit of stedfastness by resorting to those who were once aspirants after it, and are now teachers of it. But he, though he fancied that he had made a move forward, is found wandering: for he says, "a man found him wandering in the plain" (Gen. xxxvii. 15), showing that toil by itself is not good, but toil accompanied by skill. For just as it is our business not to practise music unmusically or grammar ungrammatically, or, to say it in a word, any art without art or with bad art, but to practise each art in the way which that art requires, so neither is it our business to practise good sense with cunning, or self-mastery with stinginess and meanness, or courage with rashness, or piety in a superstitious way, or any other virtue-governed knowledge in a spirit of ignorance;<sup>a</sup> for everyone knows that these are trackless regions. Accordingly there is a law bidding us "follow what is just in a just way" (Deut. xvi. 20), that we pursue justice and all virtue by doing the deeds akin to it, but not those that are contrary to it. If then thou observest anyone not taking food or drink when he should, or refusing to use the bath and oil, or careless about his clothing, or sleeping on the ground, and occupying wretched lodgings, and then on the strength of all this fancying that he is practising self-control, take pity on his mistake, and show him the true method of self-control; for all these practices of his are fruitless and wearisome labours, prostrating soul and body by starving and in other ways maltreating them. A man may submit

Cohn, render "nor any other pursuit of the proper understanding of the implications of virtue, without real understanding."

σίοις χρώμενος διάνοιαν μὲν ρυπαίνει τὴν ἑαυτοῦ, τὸ δὲ σῶμα φαιδρύνει, μηδ' εἰ πάλιν ὑπὸ περιουσίας νεῶν ἰδρύεται λαμπροτάταις χορηγίαις καὶ δαπάναις χρώμενος ἢ ἑκατόμβας ἀνάγει καὶ βουθυτῶν οὐ παύεται ἢ πολυτελέσιν ἀναθήμασι κοσμεῖ τὸ ἱερὸν ἀφθόνουσ μὲν ὕλας τέχνας δὲ παντὸς ἀργύρου καὶ χρυσοῦ τιμιωτέρας εἰσάγων, μετ' 21 εὐσεβῶν ἀναγεγράφθω. πεπλάνηται γὰρ καὶ οὗτος τῆς πρὸς εὐσέβειαν ὁδοῦ, θρησκείαν ἀντὶ ὁσιότητος ἠγούμενος καὶ δῶρα τῷ ἀδεκάστῳ διδοὺς οὐδέποτε ληψομένῳ τὰ τοιαῦτα καὶ κολακεύων τὸν ἀκολάκευτον, ὃς γνησίους μὲν θεραπείας ἀσπάζεται—γνήσιοι δ' εἰσὶν αἱ ψυχῆς ψιλῆν καὶ μόνην θυσίαν φερούσης ἀλήθειαν—τὰς δὲ νόθους ἀποστρέφεται· νόθοι δ' ὅσαι διὰ τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀφθονιῶν ἐπιδειξίεις.

- 22 VIII. Τοῦ δὲ εὐρόντος ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ πλανώμενον αὐτὸν ἀνθρώπου (Gen. xxxvii. 15) τὸ κύριον ὄνομα οὗ φασὶ τινες δεδηλώσθαι, καὶ αὐτοὶ τρόπον τινὰ πεπλανημένοι διὰ τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι τὴν ὀρθὴν ὁδὸν τῶν πραγμάτων ἐναργῶς ὄραν· εἰ γὰρ μὴ τὸ ψυχῆς ὄμμα ἐπεπήρωντο, ἔγνωσαν ἂν ὅτι τοῦ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀνθρώπου τὸ ἰδιαίτατον καὶ εὐθυβολώτατον ὄνομά ἐστιν αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἄνθρωπος, ἡρθρωμένης καὶ λογικῆς διανοίας 23 οἰκειοτάτη πρόσρησις. οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐν [196] ἐκάστου τῆ ψυχῇ | κατοικῶν τοτὲ μὲν ἄρχων καὶ βασιλεὺς εὐρίσκεται τοτὲ δὲ δικαστῆς καὶ βραβευτῆς τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον ἀγώνων, ἔστι δ' ὅτε 216

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 20-23

to sprinklings with holy water and to purifications, befouling his understanding while cleansing his body ; he may, having more money than he knows what to do with, found a temple, providing all its furniture on a scale of lavish magnificence ; he may offer up hecatombs, and never cease sacrificing bullocks ; he may adorn the sacred building with costly votive offerings, employing on them rich material in abundance, and skilled craftsmanship that is more priceless than silver and gold ; yet shall he not be inscribed on the roll of the pious. No, for this man, like those others, has gone astray from the road that accords with piety, deeming it to be ritual instead of holiness, and offering gifts to Him who cannot be bribed and will not accept such things, and flattering Him who cannot be flattered, who welcomes genuine worship of every kind, but abhors all counterfeit approaches. Genuine worship is that of a soul bringing simple reality as its only sacrifice ; all that is mere display, fed by lavish expenditure on externals, is counterfeit.

VIII. Some say that the proper name of the man who found him wandering on the plain has not been mentioned (Gen. xxxvii. 15). Those who say so are themselves, too, in some sort astray, owing to their inability to see clearly the right way in matters generally. For had they not been smitten with partial blindness of the soul's eye, they would have recognized that the name which most correctly describes the real man and most thoroughly belongs to him is simply " man," the most proper title of a mind endowed with reason and articulate utterance. This " man," dwelling in the soul of each of us, is discovered at one time as king and governor, at another as judge and umpire of life's contests.

μάρτυρος ἢ κατηγοροῦ λαβὼν τάξιν ἀφανῶς ἡμᾶς
 ἔνδοθεν ἐλέγχει μηδὲ διαῖραι τὸ στόμα ἑῶν, ἐλλαμβανόμενος δὲ καὶ ἐπιστομίζων ταῖς τοῦ συνειδότης
 ἡνίας τὸν αὐθάδη μετὰ ἀφηνιασμοῦ δρόμον 24 γλώττης ἐπέσχευ. οὗτος ὁ ἔλεγχος ἐπύθετο τῆς
 ψυχῆς, ἡνίκα τὴν πλάνην εἶδεν αὐτῆς· “ τί ζητεῖς
 (Gen. xxxvii. 15);” ἄρα γε φρόνησιν; τί οὖν ἐπὶ πανουργίας βαίνεις; ἀλλὰ σωφροσύνην; ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ φειδωλίαν ἢ τρίβος ἄγει· ἀλλὰ ἀνδρείαν; θρασύ-τῆς προσέρχεται ταύτῃ· ἀλλ’ εὐσέβειαν μετέρχη;
 25 δεισιδαιμονίας ἢ ὁδός. ἐὰν δὲ φάσκη ζητεῖν τοὺς
 ἐπιστήμης λόγους καὶ ποθεῖν ὡς τοὺς ἐγγυτάτω
 γένους ἀδελφούς, μὴ πάνυ πιστεύωμεν αὐτῇ· οὐ
 γὰρ ἂν ἐπυνθάνετο “ ποῦ βόσκουσιν” (ib. v. 16),
 ἀλλὰ “ ποῦ ποιμαίνουσιν”· οἱ μὲν γὰρ βόσκοντες
 τροφὰς τὰ αἰσθητὰ πάντα παρέχουσι τῷ τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἀλόγῳ καὶ ἀπλήστῳ θρέμματι, δι’ ἃς
 ἀκράτορες ἑαυτῶν γινόμενοι καὶ κακοδαιμονοῦμεν,
 οἱ δὲ ποιμαίνοντες ἀρχόντων καὶ ἡγεμόνων ἔχοντες
 δύναμιν τὰ ἐξηγηριωμένα ἡμεροῦσι στέλλοντες τὸ 26 τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν μέγεθος. εἴπερ οὖν ἐζήτει τοὺς
 ἀρετῆς πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀσκητάς, ἐσκέπτει’ ἂν αὐτοὺς ἐν βασιλεύσειν, οὐκ ἐν οἰνοχόοις ἢ σιτο-ποιοῖς ἢ μαγεύοις· οὗτοι μὲν γὰρ τὰ πρὸς ἡδονὰς εὐτρεπιζουσιν, ἐκεῖνοι δὲ ἡδονῶν ἄρχουσι. IX.
 διὸ καὶ ἀποκρίνεται ὀρθῶς ὁ τὴν ἀπάτην ἰδὼν ἄνθρωπος· “ ἀπήρκασιν ἐντεῦθεν” (Gen. xxxvii.
 27 17). δείκνυσιν δὲ τὸν σωματικὸν ὄγκον δηλῶν ὅτι
 πάντες, οἷς ὑπὲρ κτήσεως ἀρετῆς πόνος διαθλεῖ-

a “Elenchus,” used of the Word and Angel and Priest of God; of Conscience; of our real self. See especially De Fuga et Inventione 131.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 23-27

Sometimes he assumes the part of witness or accuser, and, all unseen, convicts us from within, not allowing us so much as to open our mouth, but, holding in and curbing the tongue with the reins of conscience, checks its wilful and rebellious course. This challenger <sup>a</sup> inquired of the soul when he saw it wandering, "What seekest thou?" (Gen. xxxvii. 15). 'Is it sound sense thou art seeking? Why then dost thou walk upon the path of cunning? Is it self-mastery? But this road leads to stinginess. Is it courage? Rashness meets thee by this way. Is it piety thou art in quest of? This road is that of superstition.' But if it says that it is seeking the principles of science and longs after them as its brethren nearest of kin, let us not believe it at all; for its inquiry would not have been "where do they feed" (ibid. v. 16), but "where do they tend" their flocks? For those who feed us supply nourishment in the shape of all objects of sense to the irrational and insatiable flock of the senses, nourishment which robs us of self-control and plunges us in misery; whereas those who tend, having the power of rulers and governors, tame what has become wild by repressing the vehemence of the desires. Had the soul, then, been seeking the real devotees of virtue, it would have looked for them among kings, not among cup-bearers or confectioners or cooks; for whereas these prepare the things that minister to pleasures, those rule over pleasures. IX. So it is a right answer that the man gives who has seen the deceit: "they have departed hence" (Gen. xxxvii. 17). He points to the material frame, showing that all who maintain a toilsome contest for the winning

PHILO

ται, τὸν περίγειον καταλελοιπότες χῶρον μετεωροπολεῖν ἐγνώκασιν οὐδεμίαν τῶν σωματικῶν
ἐφελκόμενοι κηρῶν· καὶ γὰρ λεγόντων ἀκηκοέναι
28 φησὶν αὐτῶν· “ εἰς Δωθαεῖμ πορευθῶμεν ” (ib.)
—ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ ἔκλειψις ἱκανή—παριστάντων
ὅτι οὐ μέσως ἀλλ’ ἄκρως ἀπόλειψιν καὶ ἔκλειψιν
τῶν ἃ μὴ πρὸς ἀρετὴν συνεργεῖ μεμελετήκασι,
καθὰ καὶ “ Σάρρα ἔτι γίνεσθαι τὰ γυναικεῖα
ἐξέλιπε ” (Gen. xviii. 11)· θήλεα δὲ φύσει τὰ
πάθη, ὧν ἔκλειψιν ἐπιτηδευτέον παρὰ τοὺς ἄρρενας τῶν εὐπαθειῶν χαρακτῆρας.

Οὐκοῦν “ ἐν πεδίῳ ” τουτέστιν ἐν ἀμίλλῃ λόγων
εὐρίσκεται καὶ ὁ ποικίλου δόγματος εἰσηγητῆς
πρὸς πολιτείας μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς ἀληθείας τύπον 29 χρησίμου πλανώμενος Ἰωσήφ. εἰσὶ δὲ τινες τῶν
ἀγωνιστῶν οἱ διὰ σώματος εὐεξίαν, ἀπειπόντων
τῶν ἀντιπάλων, ἐστεφανώθησαν ἀμαχὶ μηδ’ αὐτὸ
[197] μόνον κονισάμενοι ἀσυγκρίτου | ῥώμης εὐράμενοι
τὰ πρωτεῖα. τοιαύτη δυνάμει χρησάμενος περὶ
τὸ θειότατον τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν τὴν διάνοιαν Ἰσαὰκ “ ἐξέρχεται μὲν εἰς τὸ πεδίον ” (Gen. xxiv. 63), ἀμίλλησόμενος δ’ οὐδενί, πάντων κατεπτηχότων
τῶν ἀνταγωνιστῶν τὸ μεγαλεῖον καὶ ὑπερβάλλον
ἐν ἅπασιν τῆς φύσεως αὐτοῦ, μόνον δὲ ἰδιάσαι
βουλόμενος καὶ ἰδιολογήσασθαι τῷ συνοδοιπόρῳ
καὶ ἡγεμόνι τῆς τε ὁδοῦ καὶ τῆς ψυχῆς θεῷ.
30 τεκμήριον δὲ ἐναργέστατον τοῦ μηδένα προσ-
220

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 27-30

of virtue quit the earthly region and are resolved to mount the skies, carrying in their train no bodily disabilities. For the man says that he also heard them saying, "Let us go to Dothaim" (ibid.). Now "Dothaim" means "thorough quitting." So their words are a guarantee that, not in any half-and-half way but out-and-out, have they set themselves to study how to forsake and quit all that does not contribute to virtue. In like manner we read, "Sarah was quit of her experience of what belongs to women" (Gen. xviii. 11); and the passions are by nature feminine, and we must practise the quitting of these for the masculine traits that mark the noble affections.

Well, then, it is on a plain, that is, amid a contest of words, that Joseph is found wandering, the advocate of a subtle form of doctrine serving to inculcate statecraft rather than truth. Among those who contend in the sports there are some whose bodies are in such splendid condition that their opponents withdraw from the contest, and they are crowned without having to fight, winning the prize on the score of their incomparable strength, without so much as having had themselves sprinkled with dust in preparation for the combat. Endowed in mind, the divinest part of us, with a strength such as that of these athletes, Isaac "goeth out into the plain" (Gen. xxiv. 63), not to contend with anyone, for those who would oppose him have cowered before the greatness of his nature, so far beyond them in all ways. No, he goes forth desiring only to be alone with God, the Guide and Fellow-traveller of his path and of his soul, and to have converse with Him. We have a very plain proof that it was no mortal talking

- ομιλοῦντα τῷ Ἰσαὰκ θνητὸν εἶναι· Ῥεβέκκα γὰρ ἢ ὑπομονὴ πεύσεται τοῦ παιδὸς ἕνα ὄρῳσα καὶ ἑνὸς μόνου λαμ<sup>α</sup>άνουσα φαντασίαν· “ τίς ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος ὁ πορευόμενος εἰς συνάντησιν ἡμῶν (ib. v. 65); ” ἢ γὰρ ἐπιμένουσα τοῖς καλοῖς ψυχὴ ἱκανὴ μὲν ἐστὶ τὴν αὐτομαθῆ σοφίαν καταλαμβάνειν, ἐπὶ κλησιν Ἰσαὰκ, οὐπω δὲ δυνατὴ τὸν
- 31 τῆς σοφίας ἡγεμόνα θεὸν ἰδεῖν. παρὸ καὶ ὁ παῖς ἐπισφραγιζόμενος τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι καταλαβεῖν τὸν αἰετὴ καὶ προσομιλοῦντα ἀοράτως φησὶν· “ οὗτος ὁ κύριός μου ” (ib.), τὴν δεῖξιν φέρων ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰσαὰκ μόνον· οὐ γὰρ εἰκὸς προφανέντων δυεῖν ἕνα δεικνύναι, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἄδεικτον οὐκ εἶδε πᾶσι τοῖς μέσοις ἀόρατον ὄντα.
- 32 X. Ὡς μὲν τοῖνον τὸ πεδίον, εἰς ὃ προκαλεῖται τὸν Ἀβελ ὁ Κάιν ἐλθεῖν, σύμβολον ἀμίλλης καὶ διαμάχης ἐστίν, ἱκανῶς δεδηλωσθαι νομίζω. διαπορητέον δὲ ἐξῆς, περὶ τίνων ποιοῦνται τὰς ζητήσεις προελθόντες. ἢ δῆλον ὅτι περὶ ἐναντίων καὶ μαχομένων δοξῶν; ὁ μὲν γὰρ Ἀβελ ἀναφέρων ἐπὶ θεὸν πάντα φιλόθεον δόγμα, ὁ δὲ Κάιν ἐφ’ ἑαυτὸν—κτῆσις γὰρ ἐρμηνεύεται—φίλαυτον· φίλαυτοι δέ, ὅταν τοῖς ἀρετὴν τιμῶσιν ἐπαποδυσάμενοι κονίσωνται, [καὶ] παγκρατιάζοντες οὐ παύονται πρὶν ἢ ἀπειπεῖν βιάσασθαι ἢ παντελῶς διαφθεῖραι.
- 33 πάντα γάρ, τὸ τοῦ λόγου δὴ τοῦτο, κινουσι λίθον φάσκοντες· οὐκ οἰκία ψυχῆς τὸ σῶμα; διὰ τί οὖν οἰκίας, ὡς μὴ γένοιτο ἐρείπιος, οὐκ ἐπιμελησόμεθα;

<sup>a</sup> Called “Pancratium.”

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 30-33

to Isaac. For Rebecca, who is persistence, will presently inquire of the servant as seeing one and receiving an impression of one only, "Who is this man who is coming to meet us?" (ibid. v. 65). For the soul that persists in noble courses is indeed capable of apprehending self-taught wisdom, which is represented by the title "Isaac," but is unable as yet to see God the Ruler of wisdom. In keeping with this the servant, confirming her inability to apprehend Him who is unseen and who is invisibly conversing with him, says, "this is my master" (ibid.), pointing at Isaac only; for it is not likely that if two had been visible he would have pointed at one. No, he did not see Him who cannot be pointed at, for He is invisible to all who are but midway on their course.

X. Well, I think it has been made sufficiently clear that the plain on to which Cain challenges Abel to come is a figure of a contest to be fought out. We must next endeavour to discover what the subjects of their investigations are when they have gone forth. It is evident that they are to investigate opposing views clean contrary to each other. For Abel, referring all things to God, is a God-loving creed; but Cain, referring all to himself—his name means "acquisition"—a self-loving creed. And lovers of self, when they have stripped and prepared for conflict with those who value virtue, keep up the boxing and wrestling<sup>a</sup> until they have either forced their opponents to give in, or have completely destroyed them. For they leave no stone unturned, as the saying is, while they ply their questions. 'Is not the body the soul's house?' Why, then, should we not take care of a house, that it may not

οὐκ ὀφθαλμοὶ καὶ ὄτα καὶ ὁ τῶν ἄλλων χορὸς αἰσθήσεων ψυχῆς ὥσπερ τινὲς δορυφόροι καὶ
 φίλοι; συμμάχους οὖν καὶ φίλους οὐκ ἐν ἴσῳ τιμητέον ἑαυτοῖς; ἡδονὰς δὲ καὶ ἀπολαύσεις καὶ
 τὰς παρὰ πάντα τὸν βίον τέρψεις τοῖς τεθνεῶσιν ἢ
 [198] τοῖς | μηδὲ γενομένοις τὸ παράπαν ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τοῖς
 ζῶσιν ἢ φύσις ἐδημιούργει; πλοῦτον δὲ καὶ δόξαν
 καὶ τιμὰς καὶ ἀρχὰς καὶ τὰ ἄλλα ὅσα τοιαῦτα τί
 παθόντες οὐ ποριούμεθα, ἐξ ὧν οὐ μόνον τὸ
 ἀσφαλῶς ἀλλὰ καὶ εὐδαιμόνως ζῆν περιγίνεται;
 34 μάρτυς δὲ ὁ βίος τούτων· οἱ μὲν γὰρ λεγόμενοι
 φιλάρετοι ἄδοξοι σχεδὸν ἅπαντες, εὐκαταφρόνητοι, ταπεινοί, τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐνδεεῖς, ὑπηκόων μᾶλλον
 δὲ καὶ δούλων ἀτιμότεροι, ῥυπῶντες, ὠχροί, κατεσκελετευμένοι, λιμὸν ὑπ' ἀσιτίας ἐμβλέποντες, νοσερώτατοι, μελετῶντες ἀποθνήσκειν· οἱ δ' αὐτῶν
 ἐπιμελούμενοι ἔνδοξοι, πλούσιοι, ἡγεμόνες, ἐπ-αινούμενοι, τιμώμενοι, [πάλιν] ὑγιεινοί, πίονες, ἐρρω-μένοι, ἀβροδίατοι, θρυπτόμενοι, πόνον οὐκ εἰδότες,
 ἡδοναῖς συζῶντες διὰ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἐπὶ 35 τὴν πανδεχῆ ψυχὴν τὰ ἡδέα φερούσαις. XI. τοιου-τονί τινα δόλιχον ἀπομηκύναντες λόγῳ νικᾶν τοὺς
 οὐκ εἰωθότας σοφιστεύειν ἔδοξαν. αἰτία δὲ τῆς νίκης οὐχ ἢ τῶν περιγεγενημένων ἰσχύς, ἀλλ' ἢ
 περὶ ταῦτα τῶν ἀντιπάλων ἀσθένεια. τῶν γὰρ

<sup>a</sup> μελετῶντες ἀποθνήσκειν. See Plato, Phaedo 67 E, and App. pp. 493-494.

fall into ruins? Are not eyes and ears and the band of the other senses bodyguards and courtiers, as it were, of the soul? Must we not then value allies and friends equally with ourselves? Did nature create pleasures and enjoyments and the delights that meet us all the way through life, for the dead, or for those who have never come into existence, and not for the living? And what is to induce us to forgo the acquisition of wealth and fame and honours and offices and everything else of that sort, things which secure for us a life not merely of safety but of happiness? The mode of life of these two classes is a witness to the truth of what I say. The so-called lovers of virtue are almost without exception obscure people, looked down upon, of mean estate, destitute of the necessaries of life, not enjoying the privileges of subject peoples or even of slaves, filthy, sallow, reduced to skeletons, with a hungry look from want of food, the prey of disease, in training for dying.<sup>a</sup> Those, on the other hand, who take care of themselves are men of mark and wealth, holding leading positions, praised on all hands, recipients of honours, portly, healthy and robust, revelling in luxurious and riotous living, knowing nothing of labour, conversant with pleasures which carry the sweets of life to the all-welcoming soul by every channel of sense.' XI. When they have covered the dreary length of a long-distance course of talk like this, they are held to have defeated men unaccustomed to quibbling arguments. But their victory lies not in the strength of those who have won, but in their opponents' weakness at this sort of thing. For those who apply themselves to the pursuit of virtue may be placed in

PHILO

ἐπιτηδευόντων ἀρετὴν οἱ μὲν ἐν ψυχῇ μόνῃ τὸ
 καλὸν ἐθησαύρισαντο πράξεων ἐπαινετῶν ἀσκηταὶ γενόμενοι, τερθρείας λόγων ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὄναρ ἐπ-ησθημένοι, τοῖς δὲ ἀμφότερα ἐξεγένετο, τὴν μὲν
 διάνοιαν εὐβουλίᾳ καὶ ἀγαθοῖς ἔργοις, τοὺς δὲ
 λόγους ταῖς περὶ αὐτοὺς τέχναις μάλιστα ὀχυρώ-36 σασθαι· τούτοις μὲν οὖν πρὸς τὰς ἐριστικὰς ἐνίων ἀμίλλας ἀπαντᾶν ἐμπρεπές, οἷς τοὺς ἐναντίους
 ἀμύνονται πεπορισμένοι ἐξ ἐτοίμου, τοῖς δὲ
 προτέροις οὐδεμία ἀσφάλεια· γυμνοὶ γὰρ πρὸς
 ὤπλισμένους τίνες ἂν ἰσοκρατῶς ἀπομάχεσθαι
 δυνηθεῖεν, ὁπότε καὶ παρεσκευασμένοι ἀγῶν 37 ἄνισος; ὁ τοίνυν "Ἀβελ τέχνας μὲν λόγων οὐκ
 ἔμαθε, διανοία δὲ μόνῃ τὸ καλὸν οἶδεν· οὐ χάριν
 τὴν εἰς τὸ πεδίον ἀφίξιν ἐχρῆν παραιτήσασθαι καὶ τῆς τοῦ δυσμενοῦς προκλήσεως ἀλογῆσαι· ἤττης
 γὰρ πᾶς ὄκνος ἀμείνων· τὸν δὲ ὄκνον τοῦτον οἱ μὲν ἐχθροὶ δειλίαν, ἀσφάλειαν δ' οἱ φίλοι προσαγορεύουσι· φίλοις δὲ πρὸ δυσμενῶν ἄτε ἀψευδοῦσι
 38 πιστευτέον. XII. οὐχ ὄρας ὅτι Μωυσῆς τοὺς ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ τῷ σώματι σοφιστάς, οὓς φαρμακείας
 ὀνομάζει, παραιτεῖται—σοφισμάτων γὰρ τέχναις
 καὶ ἀπάταις ἦθη χρηστὰ τρόπον τινὰ φαρμακεύεται
 [199] καὶ διαφθείρεται— | φάσκων μὴ εἶναι "εὐλόγος"
 (Exod. iv. 10), ἴσον τῷ μὴ πεφυκέναι πρὸς τὴν
 τῶν εὐλόγων καὶ πιθανῶν εἰκαστικὴν ῥητορείαν, ἔπειθ' ἐξῆς διαβεβαιούμενος, ὅτι οὐ μόνον οὐκ 226

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 35-38

two classes. Some, making the soul alone the treasure-house of the good at which they aim, devote themselves to praiseworthy actions, without having so much as dreamt of jugglery with words. The others are doubly successful; their mind is secured by wisdom in counsel and good deeds, their speech by the arts of eloquence. Now to encounter the wranglings in which some folk delight is eminently fitting for these latter, ready and equipped as they are with the means of withstanding their enemies, but for the former class it is not at all safe to do so. For who are there that unarmed could meet armed men, and fight them on equal terms, seeing that, even were they fully equipped, the combat would be an unequal one? Now Abel has never learned arts of speech, and knows the beautiful and noble with his mind only. For this reason he should have declined the meeting on the plain, and have paid no regard to the challenge of the man of ill-will: for any shrinking back is better than defeat, and such shrinking back as this, though our enemies call it cowardice, is called caution by our friends; and since they are free from falsehood, we should believe friends in preference to men who have ill-will towards us. XII. Do you not see that Moses fights shy of the sophists in "Egypt," that is, in the body? He calls them "magicians," because good morals are spoiled by the tricks and deceptions of sophistry acting on them like the enchantments of magic. Moses' plea is that he is not "eloquent" (Exod. iv. 10), which is equivalent to saying that he has no gift for the oratory which is but specious guesswork at what seems probable. Afterwards he follows this up by emphatically stating that he is not merely

- εὐλογος ἀλλὰ καὶ παντελῶς “ ἄλογός ” ἐστὶν (Exod. vi. 12); ἄλογος δέ, οὐχ ὡς φαμεν τὰ μὴ λογικὰ τῶν ζώων, ἀλλ’ ὁ μὴ δικαίων τῷ διὰ τοῦ φωνητηρίου ὄργανου γεγωνῶ λόγῳ χρῆσθαι, μόνῃ δὲ σημειούμενος καὶ ἐνσφραγιζόμενος διανοία τὰ τῆς ἀληθοῦς σοφίας, ἣτις ἀντίθετός ἐστι ψευδεῖ
- 39 σοφιστεία, θεωρήματα. καὶ οὐ βαδιεῖται πρότερον εἰς Αἴγυπτον οὐδ’ εἰς ἄμιλλαν ἀφίξεται τοῖς αὐτῆς σοφισταῖς, πρὶν ἢ τὸν προφορικὸν ἄκρως ἀσκηθῆναι λόγον, τὰς πρὸς ἐρμηνείαν ἀπάσας ἰδέας ἀναδείξαντος καὶ τελειώσαντος θεοῦ διὰ τῆς Ἁαρὼν χειροτονίας, ὃν ἀδελφὸν Μωυσέως ὄντα “ στόμα ” καὶ ἐρμηνέα καὶ “ προφήτην ” (Exod.
- 40 iv. 16, vii. 1) εἶωθε καλεῖν· πάντα γὰρ ταῦτα τῷ λόγῳ συμβέβηκεν, ὃς ἀδελφός ἐστι διανοίας· πηγῇ γὰρ λόγων διάνοια καὶ στόμιον αὐτῆς λόγος, ὅτι τὰ ἐνθυμήματα πάντα διὰ τούτου καθάπερ νάματα ἀπὸ πηγῆς εἰς τοῦμφανές ἐπιρρέοντα ἀναχεῖται· καὶ ἐρμηνεύς ἐστὶν ὢν ἐν τῷ ἑαυτῆς βουλευτηρίῳ βεβούλευκεν· ἔτι μέντοι καὶ προφήτης καὶ θεοπρόπος ὢν ἐξ ἀδύτων καὶ ἀοράτων χρησμοφδοῦσα οὐ παύεται.
- 41 XIII. Τοῦτον μὲν οὖν τὸν τρόπον ἐναντιοῦσθαι τοῖς περὶ τὰ δόγματα ἐριστικοῖς χρήσιμον· γεγυμνασμένοι γὰρ περὶ τὰς τῶν λόγων ἰδέας οὐκέτ’ ἀπειρία σοφιστικῶν παλαισμάτων ὀκλάσομεν, ἐξαναστάντες δὲ καὶ διερεισάμενοι τὰς ἐντέχνους αὐτῶν περιπλοκάς εὐμαρῶς ἐκδυσόμεθα. οἱ δ’

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 494.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 38-41

not eloquent but absolutely "speechless" (Exod. vi. 12). He calls himself "speechless," not in the sense in which we use the word of animals without reason, but of him who fails to find a fitting instrument in the language uttered by the organs of speech, and prints and impresses on his understanding the lessons of true wisdom, the direct opposite of false sophistry. And he will not go to Egypt nor engage in conflict with its sophists, until he has been fully trained in the word of utterance, God having shown and perfected all the qualities<sup>a</sup> which are essential to expression of thought by the election of Aaron who is Moses' brother, and of whom he is wont to speak as his "mouth" and "spokesman" and "prophet" (Exod. iv. 16; vii. 1); for all these titles belong to Speech or Word, which is brother of Mind. For mind is the fountain of words and speech is its outlet. For all the thoughts of the heart, like streams from a spring, well up and flow forth into the open through speech; and Speech is the expounder of the plans which Understanding has formed in its own council-chamber. Speech, moreover, is the spokesman and prophet of the oracles which the understanding never ceases to utter from depths unseen and unapproachable.

XIII. It will be well for us to counter in this manner those who are pugnacious over the tenets which they maintain; for when we have been exercised in the forms which words take, we shall no more sink to the ground through inexperience of the tricks of the sophistic wrestling, but we shall spring up and carry on the struggle and disentangle ourselves with ease from the grips which their art has taught them. And when we have once found

ἀπαξ εὐρεθέντες σκιαμάχων ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀγωνιστῶν ἐπιδείκνυσθαι δόξουσι δύναμιν· καὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνοι καθ' ἑαυτοὺς μὲν χειρονομοῦντες εὐδοκιμοῦσι, πρὸς δ' 42 ἄμιλλαν ἐλθόντες οὐ μετρίως ἀδοξοῦσιν. εἰ δέ τις
 τὴν μὲν ψυχὴν ἀρεταῖς ἀπάσαις κεκόσμηται, τέχνας
 δὲ λόγων οὐκ ἐμελέτησεν, ἡσυχία χρώμενος
 ἀσφάλειαν γέρας ἀκίνδυνον εὐρήσεται, παρελθὼν
 δ' ὡς Ἄβελ εἰς σοφιστικὸν ἀγῶνα πρὶν διερηρεῖ-43 σθαι πεσεῖται. καθάπερ γὰρ ἐν ἰατρικῇ τινες μὲν θεραπεύειν εἰδότες πάντα σχεδὸν πάθη καὶ νοσή-ματα καὶ ἀρρωστήματα λόγον οὐδενὸς αὐτῶν οὔτε
 ἀληθῆ οὔτ' εἰκότα ἀποδοῦναι δύνανται, οἱ δ' ἔμπαλιν τὰ μὲν περὶ λόγους εἰσὶ δεινοί, σημείων
 καὶ αἰτιῶν καὶ θεραπειῶν, ἐξ ὧν ἡ τέχνη συνέστηκεν, ἐρμηνεῖς ἄριστοι, τὰ δὲ πρὸς καμνόντων ἐπι-[200] μέλειαν σωμάτων φαυλότατοι, τῶν εἰς ἴασιν | ἀλλ'
 οὐδὲ τὸ μικρότατον παρασχεῖν ἱκανοί, τὸν αὐτὸν
 τρόπον οἱ μὲν τῆς δι' ἔργων ἀσκηταὶ σοφίας
 πολλάκις λόγων ἠμέλησαν, οἱ δὲ τὰς ἐν λόγῳ
 τέχνας ἀναδίδαχθέντες οὐδὲν ἐν ψυχῇ παιδεύμα 44 καλὸν ἐθησαυρίσαντο. τούτους μὲν οὖν ἀχαλίνῳ κεκρημένους γλώττη μετ' αὐθαδείας θρασύνεσθαι
 παράδοξον οὐδέν, ἀπόνοϊαν γὰρ ἦν ἐξ ἀρχῆς
 ἐμελέτησαν ἐπιδείκνυνται· ἐκείνοις δ' ὡς περ ἰατροῖς
 τὸ ὑγιάζον τὰς ψυχῆς νόσους τε καὶ κῆρας ἀναδιδαχθεῖσι μέρος ἐπέχειν ἀναγκαῖον, μέχρις ἂν ὁ

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 41-44

them out, they will be seen to be exhibiting the prowess of men sparring for practice, not that of men engaged in a real combat. For they are boxers who win admiration in a mock encounter among themselves and are thought very little of when they engage in a match. But if a man, though equipped in soul with all the virtues, has had no practice in rhetoric, so long as he keeps quiet he will win safety, a prize that entails no risk, but, when like Abel he steps out for a contest of wits, he will fall before he has obtained a firm footing. For, just as in medicine there are some practitioners who know how to treat almost all afflictions and illnesses and cases of impaired health, and yet are unable to render any scientific account either true or plausible of any one of them; and some, on the other hand, who are brilliant as far as theories go, admirable exponents of symptoms and causes and treatment, the subject matter of the science, but no good whatever for the relief of suffering bodies, incapable of making even the smallest contribution to their cure : in just the same way, those who have given themselves to the pursuit of the wisdom that comes through practice and comes out in practice have often neglected expression, while those who have been thoroughly instructed in the arts that deal with speech have failed to store up in soul any grand lesson which they have learned. It is in no way surprising that these latter should discover an arrogant audacity in the unbridled use of their tongue. They are only displaying the senselessness which has all along been their study. Those others, having been taught, as doctors would be, that part of the art which brings health to the sicknesses and plagues of the soul, must be content to wait, until

θεὸς καὶ τὸν ἄριστον ἐρμηνεῖα κατασκευάσῃ τὰς
 τοῦ λέγειν πηγὰς ἀνομβρήσας καὶ ἀναδείξας αὐτῷ.
 45 XIV. Σύμφορον οὖν ἦν εὐλαβεῖα σωτηρίῳ ἀρετῇ χρησάμενον τὸν "Αβελ οἴκοι καταμεῖναι τῆς εἰς
 τὸν ἐριστικὸν καὶ φιλόνεικον ἀγῶνα προκλήσεως
 ἀλογήσαντα, μιμησάμενον 'Ρεβέκκαν τὴν ὑπομονήν, ἣτις ἀπειλοῦντος 'Ἡσαῦ τοῦ κακίας θιασώτου τὸν
 ἀρετῆς ἀσκητὴν 'Ἰακῶβ <ἀποκτενεῖν> ἀναχωρήσαι
 τῷ μέλλοντι ἐπιβουλεύεσθαι παραγγέλλει, μέχρις 46 ἂν ἐκεῖνος τῆς ἐπ' αὐτῷ σχετλίου λύττης ἀνῆ. καὶ
 γὰρ ἀφόρητόν τινα ἀπειλὴν ἐπανατείνεται φάσκων·
 "ἐγγισάτωσαν αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ πένθους τοῦ πατρὸς
 μου, ἵνα ἀποκτείνω 'Ἰακῶβ τὸν ἀδελφόν μου"
 (Gen. xxvii. 41). εὐχεται γὰρ τὸ μόνον ἀπαθὲς
 εἶδος ἐν γενέσει τὸν 'Ἰσαάκ, ᾧ χρησμός ἐστι "μὴ καταβῆναι εἰς Αἴγυπτον" (Gen. xxvi. 2), ἀλόγῳ
 πάθει χρῆσθαι, ἵνα, δοκῶ, ἡδονῆς ἢ λύπης ἢ τινος ἄλλου πάθους κέντροις τρωθῆ, δηλῶν ὡς ὁ ἀτελέστερος καὶ ἐπιπόνῳ προκοπῇ χρώμενος οὐ τραῦμα
 μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ παντελῆ φθορὰν δέξεται· ὁ μέντοι
 χρηστός θεὸς οὔτε ἀλωτὸν πάθει τὸ ἀτρώτου
 γένους εἶδος ἐργάσεται οὔτε τὴν ἀρετῆς ἀσκησιν 47 ἐπ' ὀλέθρῳ φονῶντι καὶ δαιμονῶντι ἐκδώσει. διὸ
 καὶ τὸ ἐπιφερόμενον "ἀνέστη Κάιν ἐπὶ "Αβελ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπέκτεινεν αὐτὸν" (Gen. iv. 8)
 κατὰ μὲν τὴν πρόχειρον φαντασίαν ὑποβάλλει, ὅτι
 "Αβελ ἀνήρηται, κατὰ δὲ τὴν ἀκριβεστέραν
 ἐξέτασιν, ὅτι αὐτὸς ὁ Κάιν ὑφ' ἑαυτοῦ ὡσθ' οὕτως

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 494.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER. 44-47

God shall have equipped in addition the most perfect interpreter, pouring out and making manifest to him the fountains of utterance.

XIV. It would have been well, then, for Abel to have exercised the saving virtue of caution, and to have stayed at home taking no notice of the challenge to the contest in wrangling. He should have imitated Rebecca, who represents patient waiting. When Esau, the votary of wickedness, threatens to murder Jacob, the devotee of virtue, she charges him against whom the plot was being hatched to go away, until Esau's cruel madness against him be allayed. For it is indeed an insufferable threat that he holds over him, when he says: "Let the days of my father's mourning<sup>a</sup> draw near, that I may slay Jacob my brother" (Gen. xxvii. 41); for he prays that Isaac, the only example of freedom from passion beneath the sun, who receives the divine warning "not to go down into Egypt" (Gen. xxvi. 2), may become the subject of irrational passion, desiring him, I take it, to be wounded by the darts of pleasure or sorrow or some other passion. By so desiring he makes it clear that the man who falls short of perfection and knows only toilsome progress will be liable not to be wounded only but to be utterly destroyed. God, however, in His loving-kindness will neither cause a being of an inviolable kind to be the victim of a passion, nor will He hand over the pursuit of virtue to a mad murderer for ruin.<sup>b</sup> So the words that follow "Cain rose up against Abel his brother and slew him" (Gen. iv. 8), suggest, so far as superficial appearance goes, that Abel has been done away with, but when examined more carefully, that Cain has

<sup>b</sup> i.e., "neither will Isaac fall nor Jacob perish."

PHILO

- ἀναγνωστέον· “ἀνέστη Κάιν καὶ ἀπέκτεινεν 48 ἑαυτὸν,” ἀλλ’ οὐχ ἕτερον. εἰκότως δὲ τοῦτο
 ἔπαθεν· ἢ γὰρ ἐξ αὐτῆς ἀνελοῦσα ψυχὴ τὸ φι-ἄρετον καὶ φιλόθεον δόγμα τὸν ἀρετῆς τέθνηκε βίον·
 ὥσθ’ ὁ “Ἀβελ, τὸ παραδοξότατον, ἀνήρηται τε καὶ
 ζῆ· ἀνήρηται μὲν ἐκ τῆς τοῦ ἄφρονος διανοίας, ζῆ
 δὲ τὴν ἐν θεῷ ζωὴν εὐδαίμονα. μαρτυρήσει δὲ τὸ
 χρησθὲν λόγιον, ἐν ᾧ “φωνῆ” χρώμενος καὶ “βοῶν” (Gen. iv. 10) ἂ πέπονθεν ὑπὸ κακοῦ
 συνδέτου τηλαυγῶς εὐρίσκεται· πῶς γὰρ ὁ μηκέτ’
 ὢν διαλέγεσθαι δυνατός;
- 49 XV. Ὁ μὲν δὴ σοφὸς τεθνηκέαι δοκῶν τὸν
 [201] φθαρτὸν | βίον ζῆ τὸν ἄφθαρτον, ὁ δὲ φαῦλος ζῶν
 τὸν ἐν κακίᾳ τέθνηκε τὸν εὐδαίμονα. ἐπὶ μὲν γὰρ
 τῶν διεστηκότων ζῶων τε καὶ κοινῶς σωμάτων
 ἕτερα μὲν τὰ ποιοῦντα, ἕτερα δ’ εἶναι τὰ πάσχοντα δυνατόν καὶ ῥάδιον· ὁπότε γὰρ πατήρ υἱὸν τύπτει σωφρονίζων ἢ διδάσκαλος γνώριμον, ἕτερος ὁ τύπτων καὶ ἕτερος ὁ τυπτόμενός ἐστιν· ἐπὶ δὲ
 τῶν ἠνωμένων περὶ ὃ τὸ ποιεῖν καὶ τὸ πάσχειν
 εὐρίσκεται, καὶ οὔτε ἐν ἐτέρῳ χρόνῳ οὔτε ἕτερον, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν καὶ τὸ αὐτό· ἐπειδὴν γοῦν
 ἀθλητῆς ἑαυτὸν τοῦ γυμνάσασθαι χάριν ἀνατρίβη,
 πάντως τρίβεται, καὶ εἴ τις μέντοι παίζει ἑαυτὸν
 ἢ τιτρώσκει, παίεται τε καὶ τιτρώσκειται, καὶ γὰρ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 494.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 47-49

been done away with by himself. It must be read in this way, "Cain rose up and slew himself," not someone else. And this is just what we should expect to befall him. For the soul that has extirpated from itself the principle of the love of virtue and the love of God, has died to the life of virtue. Abel, therefore, strange as it seems, has both been put to death and lives: he is destroyed or abolished out of the mind of the fool, but he is alive with the happy life in God. To this the declaration of Scripture shall be our witness, where Abel is found quite manifestly using his "voice" and "crying out" (Gen. iv. 10) the wrongs which he has suffered at the hands of a wicked brother. For how could one no longer living speak?

XV. What we arrive at is this: the wise man, when seeming to die to the corruptible life, is alive to the incorruptible; but the worthless man, while alive to the life of wickedness, is dead to the life happy. For, when we are thinking of living beings, or material forms generally, which are separate from one another, it is possible, nay easy, for the active to be one set and the passive another. For, when a father beats a son by way of correction or a teacher a pupil, he that beats is one, and he that is beaten another. But when we are thinking of beings or bodies which are not separate,<sup>a</sup> then action and passivity are found in the same subject. And they are found not at different times and in relation to different subjects, but at the same time and in relation to the same subject. For example, whenever an athlete rubs himself down for purposes of training, there is no question that he is rubbed down; and if a man strikes or wounds himself, he is struck or

PHILO

- ὁ πηρῶν ἢ κτείνων ἑαυτὸν πηροῦται καὶ κτείνεται.
- 50 πρὸς τί δὴ ταῦτ' εἶπον; ὅτι τὴν ψυχὴν οὐχὶ τῶν διεσθηκότων ἀλλὰ τῶν ἠνωμένων οὖσαν ἀνάγκη πάσχειν ὃ ποιεῖν δοκεῖ, καθάπερ ἀμέλει καὶ νῦν· δόξασα γὰρ ἀνελεῖν τὸ θεοφιλέστατον δόγμα ἑαυτὴν ἀνήρηκε. μάρτυς δὲ Λάμεχ ὁ τῆς Κάιν ἀσεβείας ἔκγονος, ὃς φησι γυναιξὶ ταῖς ἑαυτοῦ, δυσὶ γνώμαις ἀγνώμοσιν· “ἄνδρα ἀπέκτεινα εἰς τραῦμα ἐμοί, καὶ νεανίσκον εἰς μῶλωπα ἐμοί”
- 51 (Gen. iv. 23). δῆλον γὰρ ὅτι, εἴ τις τὸν ἀνδρείας λόγον κτείνει, ἑαυτὸν ἐναντία νόσῳ τιτρώσκει δειλίας, καὶ εἴ τις τὴν ἀνηβῶσαν ἰσχὺν ἐν ἀσκήσει τῶν καλῶν ἀναιρεῖ, πληγὰς καὶ μεγάλας αἰκίας μετ' οὐ μετρίας αἰσχύνῃς ἐπιφέρει ἑαυτῷ. λέγει μέντοι καὶ ἡ ὑπομονὴ ὅτι, ἐὰν ἀσκησις ἀναιρεθῆ καὶ προκοπὴ, οὐχ ἔν μόνον ἔκγονον ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα ἀποβάλλει, ἀτεκνίαν ἐνδεξαμένη παντελῆ (Gen. xxvii. 45).
- 52 XVI. “Ὡσπερ δ' ὁ βλάπτων τὸν ἀστείον ἐπιδέδεικται ζημιῶν ἑαυτὸν, οὕτως καὶ ὁ προνομίας τοὺς ἀμείνους ἀξιῶν λόγῳ μὲν ἐκείνοις, ἔργῳ δὲ αὐτῷ περιποιεῖται ἀγαθόν. μαρτυρεῖ δέ μου τῷ λόγῳ ἡ φύσις καὶ τὰ ἀκολουθῶσα αὐτῇ νομοθετηθέντα, διείρηται γὰρ ἀντικρυς καὶ σαφῶς οὕτως· “τίμα τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν μητέρα, ἵνα εὖ σοι γένηται” (Exod. xx. 12). οὐχὶ τοῖς τιμωμένοις, φησὶν, ἀλλὰ “σοί”. ἐάν τε γὰρ τὸν νοῦν ὡς πατέρα τοῦ συγκρίματος ἐάν τε τὴν αἴσθησιν ὡς

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 494.

<sup>b</sup> i.e., Jacob.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 49-52

wounded, for even he who maims and kills himself is maimed and killed. What am I driving at in saying this? That the soul, not coming under the head of persons or things distinct and separate from each other but under that of those which form a single whole, must needs suffer what it seems to do, as of course in the present instance; for when it seemed to destroy the doctrine most dear to God, it turns out to have destroyed itself. This is proved by Lamech, the offspring of Cain's impiety, who, addressing his wives, who are two ill-judging judgements,<sup>a</sup> says: "I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my scourging myself" (Gen. iv. 23). For it is clear that if a man slays the principle of courage, he wounds himself with the opposite disease of cowardice, and if a man does away with the strength that is attaining its prime in a training for noble deeds, he inflicts upon himself blows and great indignities with no small shame. Indeed she who represents patient waiting (Rebecca) says that, if training and gradual progress<sup>b</sup> be done away with, she loses not one progeny only but the rest as well, and incurs complete childlessness (Gen. xxvii. 45).

XVI. Just as the man who injures the man of lofty character has been shown to inflict loss on himself, so correspondingly he who recognizes the dignity of his betters gains something good, nominally for them, actually for himself. Nature and the commandments given in harmony with nature testify to what I say. For we have this plain and direct injunction: "Honour thy father and thy mother, that it may be well with thee" (Exod. xx. 12): it does not say "with those who are honoured" but "with thee"; for if we hold in honour the mind as father of our

PHILO

μητέρα διὰ τιμῆς ἔχωμεν, εὖ πρὸς ἐκείνων αὐτοὶ 53 πεισόμεθα. τιμὴ δὲ τοῦ μὲν νοῦ <τὸ> διὰ τῶν
 συμφερόντων ἀλλὰ μὴ διὰ τῶν ἡδέων θεραπεύεσθαι
 —πάντα δὲ τὰ ἀπ' ἀρετῆς συμφέροντα—τῆς δὲ αἰσθήσεως τὸ μὴ ἀφεθῆναι ῥύμη μιᾷ φέρεσθαι
 πρὸς τὰ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητά, ἐγχαλινωθῆναι δὲ ὑπὸ
 νοῦ κυβερνᾶν καὶ ἡνιοχεῖν τὰς ἀλόγους ἐν ἡμῖν 54 δυνάμεις ἐπισταμένου. εἰάν μὲν οὖν ἦς εἶπον ἐκάτερον λάχῃ τιμῆς αἰσθησίς τε καὶ νοῦς, ἀνάγκη
 τὸν κεχρημένον ἀμφοτέροις ἐμὲ εὐεργετεῖσθαι· εἰάν
 δὲ πόρρω τὸν λόγον ἀπὸ νοῦ καὶ αἰσθήσεως
 ἀπαγαγὼν πατέρα μὲν τὸν γεννήσαντα <τὸν>
 [202] κόσμον, | μητέρα δὲ τὴν σοφίαν, δι' ἧς ἀπ-
 ετελέσθη τὸ πᾶν, τιμῆς ἀξιώσεως, αὐτὸς εὖ πείσῃ· δεῖται γὰρ οὐδενὸς οὔτε ὁ πλήρης θεὸς οὔτε ἡ
 ἄκρα καὶ παντελής ἐπιστήμη, ὥστε τὸν θεραπευτικὸν τούτων μὴ τοὺς θεραπευομένους ἀνεν-55 δεεῖς ὄντας ἀλλ' ἑαυτὸν μάλιστα ὠφελεῖν. ἵππικὴ μὲν γὰρ καὶ σκυλακευτικὴ, ἐπιστήμη θεραπείας
 ἢ μὲν ἵππων ἢ δὲ σκυλάκων οὔσα, πορίζει τοῖς
 ζώοις τὰ ὠφέλιμα, ὧν ἐκεῖνα δεῖται· μὴ πορίζουσα
 δὲ ἀμελεῖν ἂν δοκοίη. τὴν δὲ εὐσέβειαν θεοῦ θεραπείαν ὑπάρχουσαν οὐ θέμις ποριστικὴν εἰπεῖν
 τῶν ὠφελησόντων τὸ θεῖον· ὠφελεῖται γὰρ ὑπ'
 οὐδενός, ἅτε μήτε ἐνδεὲς ὄν μήτε τινὸς τὸ ἐν ἅπασιν αὐτοῦ κρεῖττον πεφυκότος ὄνησαι, τοῦ-ναντιὸν δὲ τὰ σύμπαντα συνεχῶς καὶ ἀπαύστως
 56 ὠφελεῖ. ὥστε ὅταν τὴν εὐσέβειαν λέγωμεν εἶναι

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 52-56

complex being, and sense as mother, we ourselves shall receive good treatment at their hands. Now honour is shown to the mind when it is cared for by the provision not of things that give it pleasure but of things that do it good, and all things that have their source in virtue do it good. To sense honour is shown when it is not left free to be borne with concentrated force towards its objects in the outer world, but is reined in by the mind, which has skill to direct the irrational powers within us like a pilot or a charioteer. If each, then, sense and mind, obtains such honour as I have described, it must needs be that I to whom they belong derive benefit from it. Let us drop altogether the application to mind and sense. If you accord a father's honour to Him who created the world, and a mother's honour to Wisdom, by whose agency the universe was brought to completion, you will yourself be the gainer. For neither God, Who is full, nor supreme and consummate knowledge, need anything. It follows that he, who cares for these, confers benefits not on the objects of his care, since they lack nothing, but on himself chiefly. Horse-training and dog-fancying, being skill in caring for horses and dogs respectively, provide the animals with the things good for them which they require. Should they fail to provide them they would be held guilty of neglect. But it would be impiety to say that religion, which is a caring for God, is a way of providing what will benefit the Deity ; for He gains benefit from nothing, seeing that He is neither in need of anything nor does any exist capable of adding to His superiority in all things. Nay, He constantly and unceasingly benefits the universe. So that when we say that θεοῦ θεραπείαν, ὑπηρεσίαν τινὰ τοιαύτην φαμέν, ὁποῖαν δούλοι δεσπόταις τὸ κελευόμενον ἀόκνως ποιεῖν ἐγνωκότες ὑπηρετοῦσι. διοίσει δὲ πάλιν, ὅτι οἱ μὲν δεσπόται ὑπηρεσίας ἐνδεεῖς, ὁ δὲ θεὸς οὐ χρεῖος· ὥστε ἐκείνοις μὲν τὰ ὠφελήσοντα αὐτοὺς ὑπηρετοῦσι, τῷ δ' οὐδὲν ἕξω φιλοδεσπότου γνώμης παρέξουσι· βελτιῶσαι μὲν γὰρ οὐδὲν εὐρήσουσι, τῶν δεσποτικῶν πάντων ἕξ ἀρχῆς ὄντων ἀρίστων, μέγала δ' αὐτοὺς ὀνήσουσι γνωρισθῆναι θεῷ προμηθούμενοι.

- 57 XVII. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἱκανῶς εἰρησθαι νομίζω πρὸς τοὺς εὖ ἢ κακῶς ἑτέρους ποιεῖν δοκοῦντας· εὐρέθησαν γὰρ ἑαυτοὺς ἑκάτερον δρῶντες. τὰ δ' ἕξῆς ἐρευνήσωμεν. ἔστι δὲ πεῦσις τοιαύτη· “ ποῦ ” Ἀβελ ὁ ἀδελφός σου (Gen. iv. 9);” πρὸς ἣν ἀποκρίνεται· “ οὐ γινώσκω, μὴ φύλαξ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ μου εἰμι ἐγώ (ib.);” οὐκοῦν ἄξιον διαπορηῆσαι, εἰ κυρίως ἐνδέχεται πυνθάνεσθαι θεόν· ὁ γὰρ ἐρωτῶν ἢ πυνθανόμενος περὶ ὧν ἀγνοεῖ ἐρωτᾷ τε καὶ πυνθάνεται ζητῶν ἀπόκρισιν, ἕξ ἧς ὁ μὴ οἶδεν εἴσεται· πάντα δὲ θεῷ γνώριμα, οὐ τὰ παρόντα μόνον καὶ παρεληλυθότα ἀλλὰ καὶ
58 τὰ μέλλοντα. τί οὖν καὶ ἀποκρίσεως ὄφελος μὴ μελλούσης τινὰ περιποιεῖν τῷ πυνθανομένῳ κατάληψιν; ἀλλὰ ῥητέον, ὅτι τοιαῦτα οὐ πέφυκεν ἐπὶ τοῦ αἰτίου κυριολογεῖσθαι, ἀλλ' ὡσπερ ψεῦδος λέγειν ἔστι μὴ ψευδόμενον, οὕτως καὶ ἐρώτημα religion is a caring for God, we mean some such service as slaves render to their masters when they are set on doing promptly what they are told to do. But here again the parallel is not perfect; for the masters are in want of service, but God does not need it. It follows that, while to masters their slaves render services that will benefit them, to God men can bring nothing except a disposition full of love to their Master. For they will find nothing which they can improve, everything that their Master has being perfect to start with; but themselves they will vastly benefit by taking steps to be admitted to intimacy with God.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 494.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 56-58

XVII. I think that I have now said enough as to those who seem to do good or evil to others. For we have found that it is to themselves that they do the one or the other. Let us investigate what follows. A question is put thus, "Where is Abel thy brother?" (Gen. iv. 9). To this question Cain replies, "I know not. Am I my brother's keeper?" (ibid.). This requires us to consider the point, whether God can strictly be said to ask a question. For he that makes an inquiry or asks a question<sup>a</sup> does so in regard to matters about which he is ignorant, looking for an answer, as the result of which he will know what now he does not know. But all things are known to God, not only things present and things past, but also things future. What advantage then does an answer confer, when it is not going to bring about for the inquirer any acquisition of knowledge? The fact is that such expressions cannot be used in their strict sense in the case of the First Cause (i.e. God). Just as it is possible to tell a verbal lie without lying, so it is

- καὶ πύσμα προφέρεσθαι μήτε ἐρωτῶντα μήτε πυνθανόμενον. τίνος οὖν ἔνεκα, φήσει τις ἴσως, λέγεται τοιαῦτ ; ἴν' ἢ μέλλουσα τὰς ἀποκρίσεις
 ποιεῖσθαι ψυχὴ δι' ἑαυτῆς ἐλέγχηται περὶ ὧν εἶ
 ἢ κακῶς ἀποφαίνεται, μήτε κατηγορῶ μήτε
 59 συναγωνιστῆ χρωμένῃ ἑτέρῳ. ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸν σοφὸν
 [203] ὁπότε | ἀνερωτᾷ " ποῦ ἐστὶ σοι ἡ ἀρετή;" (Gen.
 xviii. 9)—τὸν Ἀβραάμ λέγω περὶ Σάρρας—
 οὐκ ἀγνοῶν ἐρωτᾷ, ἀλλὰ δεῖν οἰόμενος αὐτὸν ἀποκρίνεσθαι ἔνεκα τοῦ τὸν ἔπαινον τὸν ἐξ αὐτοῦ
 τοῦ λέγοντος παραστήσαι· φησὶ γοῦν ὅτι εἶπεν·
 " ἴδου ἐν τῇ σκηνῇ " τουτέστι τῇ ψυχῇ. τί οὖν
 τὸ ἐκ τῆς ἀποκρίσεως ἐπαινετόν; ἴδου τὴν ἀρετὴν,
 φησὶν, ἔχω παρ' ἑμαυτῷ καθάπερ τι κειμήλιον, 60 καὶ διὰ τοῦτ' <οὐκ><sup>1</sup> εὐθὺς εὐδαιμονῶ. χρήσις γὰρ
 καὶ ἀπόλαυσις ἀρετῆς τὸ εὐδαιμον, οὐ ψιλὴ μόνον
 κτήσις· χρῆσθαι δ' οὐκ ἂν δυναίμην, εἰ μὴ σὺ καθεὶς ἐξ οὐρανοῦ τὰ σπέρματα ἀπεργάσαιο αὐτὴν
 ἐγκύμονα, ἢ δὲ εὐδαιμονίας γένος ἀποτέκοι τὸν Ἰσαάκ—εὐδαιμονίαν δὲ χρῆσιν ἀρετῆς τελείας ἐν
 βίῳ τελείῳ νενόηκα—. παρὸ καὶ τῆς προαιρέσεως ἀγάμενος αὐτὸν ὁμολογεῖ τελεσφορήσειν καιρίως
 ἂ ἤτήσατο.
- 61 XVIII. Τούτῳ μὲν οὖν ἢ ἀπόκρισις ἔπαινον
 ἤνεγκεν ὁμολογοῦντι μηδὲ τὴν ἀρετὴν ἄνευ θείας ἐπιφροσύνης ἱκανὴν ἐξ ἑαυτῆς ὠφελεῖν εἶναι, τῷ
 δὲ Κάιν ἀκολουθῶς ψόγον φάσκοντι μὴ εἰδέναι,

<sup>1</sup> οὐκ is inserted from conjecture (Tr.).

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER. 58-61

possible to propound a question or inquiry without either asking or inquiring. What then, someone will perhaps say, is the object of the use of such expressions? That the soul that is to give the answers may be convicted by itself touching its good or evil utterances, with no other, either to accuse it or to plead on its behalf. When God puts a question to the wise one, "Where is thy virtue?" (Gen. xviii. 9)—(I refer to the question put to Abraham about Sarah), He asks not because He is ignorant, but because He thinks it necessary that Abraham should answer, with a view to set in bold relief the praise shown by the speaker's own words to be due. We are told, you see, that he said "Lo, she is in the tent," that is, in the soul. What matter for praise, then, is it that springs out of the answer? What he says is, "Lo, I have virtue laid up by me as some precious treasure, and this by itself does not make me happy. For happiness consists in the exercise and enjoyment of virtue, nor in its mere possession. But I could not exercise it, shouldst Thou not send down the seeds from heaven to cause her to be pregnant, and were she not to give birth to Isaac, i.e. happiness in its totality, and I have made up my mind that happiness is the exercise of perfect virtue in a perfect life." Accordingly God is well pleased with the motive of his answer, and consents to bring to pass in due season what he had requested.

XVIII. To Abraham, then, his answer brought praise, acknowledging as he did that even virtue, without God's directing care, is insufficient of itself to do us good: while to Cain, correspondingly, his answer brought blame, since he said that he did not know

ποῦ ὁ δολοφονηθεὶς ἐστὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ· ἔδοξε<sup>1</sup> γὰρ
 τὸν ἀκούοντα ἀπατήσῃν ὡς οὐ πάντα διορῶντα
 καὶ τὴν ἀπάτην ἢ μέλλει χρῆσθαι προκατειληφότα·
 ἔκθεσμος δὲ καὶ ἔκφυλος πᾶς ὁ τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ 62 ὀφθαλμὸν οἰόμενός τι παρορᾶν. ὁ δέ γε καὶ ἐπινεανιεύεται φάσκων· “ μὴ φύλαξ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ μου εἶμι ἐγὼ (Gen. iv. 9); ” πάνυ γάρ, εἴπομι'
 ἄν, ἀθλίως ἔμελλε βιώσεσθαι, εἰ σὲ φρουρὸν καὶ φύλακα ἢ φύσιν ἀγαθοῦ τοσοῦτου κατέστησεν. ἢ
 οὐχ ὄρας ὅτι τὴν τῶν ἀγίων διατήρησίν τε καὶ φυλακὴν οὐ τοῖς ἐπιτυχοῦσιν ὁ νομοθέτης ἀλλὰ
 τοῖς τὰς γνώμας ἱερωτάτοις Λευίταις ἐπιτρέπει;
 ὧν ἀνάξιος κλῆρος γῆ καὶ ὕδωρ καὶ ἀήρ ἔτι δὲ
 οὐρανὸς καὶ πᾶς ὁ κόσμος ἐνομίσθη, μόνος δ'
 ἀξιόχρεως ὁ δημιουργός, ᾧ προσπεφεύγασιν ἰκέται
 γνήσιοι καὶ θεράποντες αὐτοῦ γινόμενοι, τὸ φιλοδέσποτον διὰ τῆς συνεχοῦς ὑπηρεσίας καὶ τῆς
 τῶν ἐπιτραπέντων ἀοκνοτάτης ἐπιδεικνύμενοι φυ-63 λακῆς. XIX. καὶ οὐδ' ἅπασιν ἐξεγένετο τοῖς ἰκέταις γενέσθαι φύλαξιν ἱερῶν, ἀλλ' εἴ τινες
 ἀριθμὸν πεντηκοστὸν ἔλαχον ἄφεςιν καὶ ἐλευθερίαν
 παντελῆ καὶ ἐπάνοδον εἰς τὰς ἀρχαίας λήξεις
 προκηρύττοντα. “ τοῦτο ” γάρ φησιν “ ἐστὶ τὸ
 περὶ τῶν Λευιτῶν· ἀπὸ πέντε καὶ εἴκοσιν ἐτῶν [204] εἰσελεύσεται | ἐνεργεῖν ἐν τῇ σκηνῇ τοῦ μαρτυρίου, καὶ ἀπὸ πενήκοντα ἐτῶν ἀποστήσεται τῆς
 λειτουργίας, καὶ οὐκ ἐργάσεται ἔτι, λειτουργήσει
 δὲ ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ· ὁ δὲ φυλάξει φυλακάς, ἔργα.
 64 δὲ οὐκ ἐργάσεται ” (Num. viii. 24-26). οὐκοῦν
 τῷ μὲν ἡμίσει τὴν τελειότητα—τέλειος γὰρ ὁ

<sup>1</sup> ἔδοξε from Mangey's conjecture.

<sup>a</sup> See De Sac. 122.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 494.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 61-64

where his brother was whom he had treacherously slain : for he imagined that he would deceive Him to whom he gave the answer, as though He did not clearly see all things, and had not anticipated the deception to which he was going to resort : but everyone who thinks that anything escapes the eye of God is an outlaw and an outcast. Cain has the insolence to say, moreover, " Am I my brother's keeper ? " (Gen. iv. 9). ' Wretched indeed was his life likely to be,' I should say, ' had nature constituted thee the guardian and keeper of so great a good.' Or seest thou not that the lawgiver commits the keeping and guardianship of the holy things not to ordinary persons, but to Levites, men fully consecrated in their minds ? For these earth and sea and air, yea, moreover, heaven and all the world, was deemed a portion of too little worth. The Creator alone was deemed meet for them, with Whom they have taken refuge as genuine suppliants and become His attendants, discovering their love for their Master by constant service and untiring guardianship of the sacred things committed to their care. XIX. Nor was it to all the suppliants that it fell to become guardians of sacred things, but to such as obtained by lot the number 50, announcing release<sup>a</sup> and complete freedom and return to their portions of old time. For we read " This is that which concerneth the Levites : from twenty and five years old shall he go in to do active service in the Tabernacle of witness ; and from (the age of) fifty years shall he cease from the ministry, and shall work no more, but his brother shall minister. He shall keep watch, but shall not work " (Numb. viii. 24-26). Remembering, then, that the number 50 is perfect,<sup>b</sup> and that 25 is πεντηκοστὸς λόγος, ὁ δὲ τῶν πέντε καὶ εἴκοσι

PHILO

 ἡμισυ μέρος—ἐνεργεῖν ἐπιτρέπει καὶ δρᾶν τὰ
 ἅγια τὴν δι' ἔργων ἀρέσκειαν ἐπιδεικνυμένῳ—
 ἀρχὴ δέ, ὡς ἔφη τις τῶν πάλαι, τοῦ παντὸς
 ἡμισυ μέρος—, τῷ δὲ τελείῳ μηκέτι πονεῖν, τὰ
 δ' ὅσα ἐκ μελέτης καὶ πόνου περιεποιήσατο
 φυλάττειν· μὴ γὰρ γενοίμην ἀσκητῆς ὧν μὴ 85 φύλαξ αὐθις. ἡ μὲν οὖν ἀσκησις μέσον, οὐ τέλειον, γίνεται γὰρ ἐν οὐ τελείαις μὲν ἀκρότητος
 δὲ ἐφιεμέναις ψυχαῖς· ἡ δὲ φυλακὴ παντελής, μνήμη τὰ<sup>1</sup> ἀσκή<σει περιποιη>τὰ παραδοῦναι
 θεωρήματα τῶν ἀγίων, ἐπιστήμης καλὴν παρα-καταθήκην φύλακι πιστῇ, ἡ μόνη τῶν λήθης πολυμηχάνων δικτύων ἀλογεῖ· ὥστε τὸν μνήμονα
 ὧν ἔμαθεν ὑγιῶς καὶ εὐθυβόλως καλεῖ φύλακα.
 86 οὗτος δὲ πρότερον ὅτε ἐγυμνάζετο μαθητῆς ἦν
 διδάσκοντος ἐτέρου· ὅποτε δὲ ἰκανὸς φυλάττειν
 ἐγένετο, διδασκάλου δύναμιν καὶ τάξιν ἔλαχε,
 τὸν ἀδελφὸν εἰς τὰς ὑπηρεσίας τῆς διδασκαλίας
 χειροτονήσας τὸν ἑαυτοῦ προφορικὸν λόγον· λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι “ λειτουργήσει ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ ” (Num.
 viii. 26)· ὥστε ὁ μὲν τοῦ ἀστείου νοῦς φύλαξ καὶ
 ταμίας τῶν ἀρετῆς ἔσται δογμάτων, ὁ δ' ἀδελφὸς
 αὐτοῦ λόγος λειτουργήσει τοῖς παιδείαν μετιούσι
 διεξιῶν τὰ σοφίας δόγματά τε καὶ θεωρήματα.
 87 διὸ καὶ ὁ Μωυσῆς ἐν ταῖς εὐλογίαις Λευὶ πολλὰ

<sup>1</sup> Following Wendland's conjecture.

---

<sup>a</sup> For the antithesis of ἀσκητῆς and φύλαξ cf. L.A. i. 54 ff.
246

half this, and that the beginning as one of the ancients said, is the half of the whole, we note that he charges him who is but half perfect to set to work and do holy actions, showing active obedience ; while he charges the perfect one to labour no more, but to keep watch over all that he has acquired as the result of toilsome practice. May I indeed never devote study and pains to anything of which I am not afterwards to be a guardian. Study or practice is a mean, a half-way stage, not a perfect final achievement. It is seen in souls that are not perfect, but bent on reaching the summit. Watching or guarding is something complete, consisting in entrusting to memory those principles of holy things which were acquired by practice. To do this is to commit a fair deposit of knowledge to a trustworthy guardian,<sup>a</sup> to her who alone makes light of the nets of forgetfulness with all their cunning devices. "Guardian" is therefore the sound and appropriate name which he gives to the man who remembers what he had learnt. At an earlier stage, when he was in training, this man was a pupil with another to teach him, but when he became capable of watching and guarding, he obtained the power and position of a teacher, and appointed for the subordinate duties under the teacher his own brother, the word of utterance : for it is said "his brother shall minister" (Numb. viii. 26). Accordingly the mind of the truly noble man will be guardian and steward of the teachings of virtue, while his brother, utterance, will minister to those who are seeking education, going over with them the doctrines and principles of wisdom. This is the reason why Moses, in the blessings which he pronounces on Levi, crowns many marvellous

- καὶ θαυμάσια προειπὼν ἐπιφέρει· “ ἐφύλαξε τὰ λόγια σου, καὶ τὴν διαθήκην σου διετήρησεν”· εἰθ’ ἐξῆς· “ δηλώσουσι τὰ δικαιώματά σου Ἰακώβ καὶ τὸν νόμον σου Ἰσραήλ” (Deut. xxxiii. 9, 10).
- 68 οὐκοῦν ὅτι καὶ λόγων καὶ διαθήκης θεοῦ φύλαξ ὁ ἀστείος ἐστίν, ἐναργῶς παρίστησι· καὶ μὴν ὅτι δικαιωμάτων καὶ νόμων ἐρμηνεύς καὶ ὑφηγητῆς ἄριστος, πάλιν δεδήλωκε, τῆς μὲν ἐρμηνείας διὰ συγγενικοῦ ὄργανου, τοῦ φωνητηρίου δήπου, συνισταμένης, τῆς δὲ φυλακῆς περὶ τὸν νοῦν ἐξεταζομένης, ὃς μέγα ταμεῖον ὑπὸ φύσεως δημιουργηθεὶς τὰς ἀπάντων καὶ σωμάτων καὶ πραγμάτων ἐννοίας εὐμαρῶς κεχώρηκεν. ἐλυσιτέλει δὴ καὶ τῷ φιλαύτῳ Κάιν φυλάξαι τὸν Ἀβελ· εἰ γὰρ διετήρησεν αὐτόν, κεκραμένου<sup>1</sup> καὶ μέσου βίου μετεποιήσατ’ αὐν, ἀλλ’ οὐκ ἀμιγοῦς καὶ ἀκράτου κακίας ἐνεφορήθη.
- 69 [205] XX. | “ Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ θεός Τί ἐποίησας; φωνῆ αἵματος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου βοᾶ πρὸς μέ ἐκ τῆς γῆς” (Gen. iv. 10). τὸ “ τί ἐποίησας” καὶ ἀγανάκτησιν ἐμφαίνει ἐπὶ οὐκ εὐαγεῖ πράξει καὶ χλευασμὸν ἐπὶ τῷ δολοφονῆσαι δοκοῦντι. ἢ μὲν οὖν ἀγανάκτησις ἐπὶ <τῇ> τοῦ δεδρακότος γνώμη γίνεται, ὅτι τὸ καλὸν ἀνελεῖν ἐβούλευσεν· ἢ δὲ χλεύη διὰ τὸ οἶεσθαι μὲν ἐπιβεβουλευκέναι τῷ κρείττονι, ἐπιβεβουλευκέναι δ’ οὐκ ἐκείνῳ μᾶλλον
- 70 ἢ ἑαυτῷ· ζῆ μὲν γάρ, ὡς καὶ πρότερον ἔφην, ὁ τεθνάναι δοκῶν, εἴ γε καὶ ἰκέτης ὢν θεοῦ καὶ φωνῆ χρώμενος εὐρίσκεται, τέθνηκε δὲ ὁ περιεῖναι

<sup>1</sup> Mangey's conjecture for κεκριμένου.

eulogies by saying " he guarded Thine oracles, and Thy covenant did he diligently keep "; then immediately afterwards " they shall expound Thy judgements to Jacob and Thy law to Israel " (Deut. xxxiii. 9 f.). So he expressly avouches that the fully accomplished man is guardian of the words and covenant of God. Furthermore he has made it clear that he is the best utterer and setter forth of judgements and laws. For utterance is an operation of the organ of speech which is akin to it, and watchful guardianship is found to be the function of the mind, which was created by nature to be a vast storehouse, and has ample room for the conceptions of all substances and all circumstances. It would have been to the advantage even of Cain, the lover of self, to have guarded Abel; for had he carefully preserved him, he would have been able to lay claim only to a mixed <sup>b</sup> " half and half " life indeed, but would not have drained the cup of sheer unmitigated wickedness.

XX. " And God said, ' What hast thou done? The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to Me out of the ground ' " (Gen. iv. 10). The words " What hast thou done? " express as well indignation at an unrighteous act, as mockery of the man who thought that his treachery had accomplished his brother's death. Indignation is kindled by the intention of the doer of the deed, at his having purposed to destroy that which was noble; the mockery is occasioned by his thinking that his evil design was against him who was better than he, whereas it had been against himself rather than his brother: for, as I said before, he that seems to be dead is alive, since he is found acting as God's suppliant and using His voice; whereas he who is supposed to survive

- νομιζόμενος τὸν ψυχικὸν θάνατον, ἀρετῆς καθ' ἣν ἄξιον μόνην ἐστὶ ζῆν ἀποσχοινοισθείς· ὥστε καὶ τὸ “ τί ἐποίησας ” ἴσον εἶναι τῷ “ οὐδὲν ἐποίησας,”
- 71 οὐδὲν ἤνυσας. οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ σοφιστῆς Βαλαάμ, μάταιος ὢν ὄχλος ἐναντίων καὶ μαχομένων δοξῶν, βουλευθεὶς ἀρὰς τίθεσθαι καὶ βλάπτειν τὸν ἀστεῖον ἴσχυσε, τοῦ θεοῦ τὰς κατάρας εἰς εὐλογίαν τρέποντος (Num. xxiii. 8), ἵνα καὶ τῆς πανουργίας ἀπελέγξῃ τὸν ἄδικον καὶ ἑαυτοῦ τὸ φιλάρετον
- 72 παραστήσῃ. ΧΧΙ. πεφύκασι δὲ οἱ σοφισταὶ πολέμοιοι χρησθαι ταῖς ἐν αὐτοῖς δυνάμεσι, λόγων ἐνθυμήμασι καὶ βουλευμάτων λόγοις ἀντιστατούντων καὶ μηδαμῆ μηδαμῶς συναδόντων· ἀποκναίουσι γοῦν ἡμῶν τὰ ὄψα, τὴν δικαιοσύνην κοινωνικόν, τὴν σωφροσύνην συμφέρον, τὴν ἐγκράτειαν ἀστεῖον, τὴν εὐσέβειαν ὠφελιμώτατον, τὴν ἄλλην ἀρετὴν ὑγιεινιώτατόν τε καὶ σωτήριον ἀποφαίνοντες, καὶ πάλιν τὴν ἀδικίαν ἄσπονδον, τὴν ἀκολασίαν νοσερόν, τὴν ἀσέβειαν ἔκθεσμον, τὴν ἄλλην κακίαν
- 73 βλαβεριώτατον διεξιόντες· καὶ ὁμῶς τὰ ἐναντία τοῖς λεγομένοις φρονοῦντες οὐ παύονται, ἀλλ' ὅταν φρόνησιν καὶ σωφροσύνην καὶ δικαιοσύνην καὶ εὐσέβειαν ὑμνῶσι, τότε δὴ μάλιστα ἀφραίνοντες ἀκολασταίνοντες ἀδικοῦντες ἀσεβοῦντες πάνθ' ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν ἀνθρώπεια καὶ θεῖα συγχέοντές τε καὶ
- 74 ἀνατρέποντες εὐρίσκονται. πρὸς οὓς εἶποι τις ἂν ὀρθῶς, ὅπερ καὶ ὁ χρησμὸς ἔφη τῷ Κάλῳ· τί

has died the death of the soul, being debarred from virtue, the only worthy rule of life. Hence the question, "What hast thou done?" is tantamount to "You have done nothing, accomplished nothing." It was so with Balaam also. He was a sophist, an empty conglomeration of incompatible and discordant notions. It was his desire to do harm to the goodly one by laying curses upon him. But he could not, for God turned his curses into a blessing (Numb. xxiii. 8), in order that He might at once convict the unrighteous one of his villainy, and at the same time make good his own love of virtue. XXI. Sophists are bound to find the powers within them at strife, words running counter to ideas and wishes to words, in absolute and utter discord. They make our ears ache with their demonstrations of the social character of righteousness, the advantageous nature of moderation, the nobility of self-control, the great benefits conferred by piety, the power of every kind of virtue to bring health and safety. On the other hand they dwell at great length on the unsociability of injustice, on the loss of health entailed by a licentious life, and prove ad nauseam that irreligion makes you a pariah, and that serious harm is occasioned by all other forms of wickedness. And nevertheless they entertain all the time sentiments quite at variance with the things which they say. At the very moment when they are singing the praises of good sense and moderation and righteousness and piety, they are found to be more than ever practising foolishness, licentiousness, injustice, and impiety, to be confounding and overturning, you may wellnigh say, every ordinance of God or man. To these men one might rightly put the question put to Cain in the ἐποιήσατε; τί εἰργάσασθε αὐτοὺς ἀγαθόν; τί οἱ τοσοῦτοι περὶ ἀρετῆς λόγοι τὴν ὑμετέραν ψυχὴν ὠφέλησαν; τί τοῦ βίου μικρὸν ἢ μέγα μέρος ἐπληρωθῶσασθε; τί δ'; οὐχὶ τὰναντία διαβολὰς καθ' αὐτῶν ἀληθεῖς ἠρانیσατε, ὅτι συνιέντες τὰ καλὰ καὶ τῷ λόγῳ φιλοσοφοῦντες ἐρμηνεῖς μὲν ἄριστοι γεγόνατε, τὰ δ' αἰσχιστα καὶ φρονοῦντες καὶ ἐπιτηδεύοντες αἰεὶ ἀλίσκεσθε; οὐ μὴν ἔτι γε ἐν ταῖς ὑμετέραις ψυχαῖς τέθνηκε τὰ καλὰ, ζωπυρῆθέντων κακῶν; διὰ τοῦτο ἕκαστος ὑμῶν οὐ 75 [206] περιέστω. ὥσπερ γὰρ μουσικοῦ τινος ἢ γραμματικοῦ τελευτήσαντος ἢ μὲν ἐν τοῖς ἀνδράσι μουσικὴ καὶ γραμματικὴ συνέφθαρται, αἱ δὲ τούτων ιδέαι μένουσι καὶ τρόπον τινὰ βιοῦσιν ἰσοχρόνιοι τῷ κόσμῳ, καθ' ἃς οἳ τε ὄντες καὶ οἱ μέλλοντες διαδοχαῖς ταῖς εἰσαεὶ μουσικοὶ τε καὶ γραμματικοὶ γενήσονται, οὕτως καὶ τὸ ἐν τινι φρόνιμον ἢ σῶφρον ἢ ἀνδρεῖον ἢ δίκαιον ἢ συνόλως σοφὸν ἂν ἀναιρεθῆ, οὐδὲν ἦττον ἐν τῇ τοῦ παντὸς ἀθανάτῳ φύσει φρόνησις ἀθάνατος καὶ ἀρετὴ σύμπασα ἄφθαρτος ἐστηλίτευται, καθ' ἣν καὶ νῦν 76

PHILO

 εἰσὶν ἀστείοι τινες καὶ αἰθῆς γενήσονται· εἰ μὴ καὶ ἀνθρώπου τινὸς τῶν ἐν μέρει θάνατον φθορὰν ἐργάσασθαι φήσομεν ἀνθρωπότητι, ἣν εἶτε γένος

---

<sup>a</sup> Philo now gives another turn to the words spoken to Cain, taking "What hast thou done?" as equivalent to "How little hast thou accomplished in killing not goodness but a good man."

sacred record, "What have you done?" What have you wrought that has done you good? What benefit have all these harangues on the subject of virtue conferred on your own souls? What portion, great or small, of life have you set right? Nay, have you not done the reverse? Have you not furnished true charges against yourselves, in that, while you have shown yourselves lecturers of the highest order as far as understanding of beautiful things and philosophical discourses are concerned, you are invariably caught cherishing sentiments and indulging in practices that are utterly base? May we not go further and say that in your souls all noble qualities have died, while evil qualities have been quickened? It is because of this that not one of you is really still alive.<sup>a</sup> When a musician or a scholar has died, the music or scholarship, that has its abode in individual masters, has indeed perished with him, but the original patterns of these remain, and may be said to live as long as the world lasts; and by conforming to these the men of this generation, and those of all future generations in perpetual succession, will attain to being musicians or scholars. In exactly the same way, if what is sensible or modest or brave or just or, to say it in one word, wise, be destroyed, none the less does there stand, inscribed on the undying tablets of the universe, good sense with a life that dies not, and all virtue exempt from decay; and it is by having part in this excellence that men are truly wise to-day, and will be so in days to come. It must be so, unless we are to say that the death of some individual man has wrought destruction on mankind. What "mankind" is, whether a class, or an original pattern, or a con-

PHILO

- εἴτε ἰδέαν εἴτε ἐννόημα εἴθ' ὃ τί ποτε χρῆ καλεῖν οἱ
 ζητητικοὶ τῶν κυρίων ὀνομάτων εἴσονται. μία σφραγὶς πολλάκις μυρίας ὄσας ἀπείρους οὐσίας
 τυπώσασα πάντων ἔστιν ὅτε τῶν τύπων ἐξιτήλων αὐταῖς οὐσίαις γενομένων ἐν τῇ ἑαυτῆς φύσει μηδὲν 77 βλαβεῖσα κατὰ χώραν ἔμεινεν. εἰτ' οὐκ οἰόμεθα τὰς ἀρετάς, κἂν πάντες οἱ χαρακτῆρες, οὓς ἐν-εσημήναντο ταῖς τῶν προσεληλυθότων ψυχαῖς, ὑπὸ
 μοχθηρᾶς διαίτης ἢ τινος ἐτέρας ἐξ αἰτίας ἐξιτήλοι
 γένωνται, τὴν ἀκήρατον ἑαυτῶν καὶ ἄφθαρτον
 φύσιν εἰσαεὶ σχήσειν; οὐκ εἰδότες οὖν οἱ παιδείας
 ἀμύητοι διαφορὰς οὐθ' ὄλων πρὸς μέρη οὔτε γενῶν
 πρὸς εἶδη οὔτε τὰς ἐν τούτοις ὁμωνυμίας πάντα 78 διὰ πάντων συγχέουσι καὶ φύρουσι. διὸ πᾶς φίλαυτος, ἐπίκλησιν Κάιν, διδαχθήτω ὅτι τὸ
 ὁμώνυμον τοῦ "Αβελ ἀνήρηκε, τὸ εἶδος, τὸ μέρος, τὸν ἀπεικονισθέντα τύπον, οὐ τὸ ἀρχέτυπον, οὐ τὸ
 γένος, οὐ τὴν ἰδέαν, ἅπερ οἴεται μετὰ ζώων ἄφθαρτα
 ὄντα συνεφθαρκεῖναι. λεγέτω δὴ τις κατακερτομῶν
 αὐτὸν κἀπιχλευάζων· τί πεποίηκας, ὦ κακόδαιμον;
 οὐχ ἦν μὲν δοκεῖς ἀνηρηκεῖναι φιλόθεον δόξαν, ζῆ
 παρὰ θεῷ; σαυτοῦ δὲ γέγονας αὐθέντης, ὦ μόνω
 βιοῦν ἀνυπαιτίως ἠδύνασο ἐξ ἐνέδρας ἀνελῶν.
- 79 XXII. Πάνυ δὲ πεφώνηται καὶ πρὸς κάλλος
 ἐρμηνείας καὶ πρὸς νοημάτων εὔρεσιν τὰ ἐπι-254

ception, or whatever we may call it, is a matter for the decision of those who make exactness in the use of terms their study. A single seal has often left its impress on innumerable substances, and it has sometimes happened that all the impressions have vanished with the very substances on which they were made, while the seal has in its own nature taken no hurt but remains just as it was to begin with. In the face of a fact like this, must we not believe that the virtues will retain for ever their own nature, incapable of damage or decay, even if all the characters which they have stamped on the souls of those who have come under their influence have become faint, owing to a bad life or from some other cause? We see, then, that those who are devoid of culture being uninitiated into the difference between wholes and parts and between classes and species, and know not how, though different, they may bear the same name, completely mix up and confound all things. Wherefore let every lover of self, surnamed "Cain," be taught that he has slain that which shares Abel's name, the specimen, the part, the impression stamped to resemble him, not the original, not the class, not the pattern, though he fancies that these, which are imperishable, have perished together with the living beings. Let some one say, taunting and ridiculing him: What have you done, poor wretch? Does not the God-loving creed, which you imagine you have annihilated, live with God? You have proved to be your own murderer, having slain by guile that which alone had the power to enable you to live a guiltless life.

XXII. The words which follow are an utterance of great richness, whether we look at the beauty of

- λεγόμενα ταῦτα· “ φωνὴ αἵματος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου βοᾷ πρὸς με ἐκ τῆς γῆς ” (Gen. iv. 10). ἡ μὲν οὖν κατὰ τὴν φράσιν ὑψηγορία πᾶσι τοῖς μὴ λόγων ἀμυήτοις γνώριμος· τὰ δ’ ἐμφαινόμενα νοήματα, ὡς ἂν οἰοί τε ὦμεν, ἐπισκεψώμεθα, καὶ πρότερόν
- 80 γε περὶ τοῦ αἵματος. πολλαχοῦ μὲν γὰρ τῆς νομοθεσίας οὐσίαν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀποφαίνεται τὸ αἷμα λέγων ἀντικρυς· “ ἡ γὰρ ψυχὴ πάσης σαρκὸς αἱμᾶ ἐστίν ” (Lev. xvii. 11 al.)· ὁπότε δὲ πρῶτον μετὰ τὴν οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς καὶ τῶν μεταξὺ γένεσιν
- [207] ἐδημιούργει | <τὸν> ἄνθρωπον ὁ ζωοπλάστης, φησὶν ὅτι “ ἐνεφύσησεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνεῦμα ζωῆς, καὶ ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν ” (Gen. ii. 7), πάλιν διὰ τούτου παριστάς, ὅτι
- 81 πνεῦμά ἐστίν ἡ ψυχῆς οὐσία. καὶ μὴν τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὑποθέσεων ἄκρως εἴωθε διαμεμνήσθαι, τὰ ἀκόλουθα καὶ ὁμολογούμενα τοῖς προτέροις δικαίων ἐφαρμοττεῖν· οὐκ ἂν οὖν πνεῦμα ψυχῆς οὐσίαν προειπὼν αἷμα διαφέρον σῶμά τι αἰθίς ἔλεγεν, εἰ μὴ πρὸς τι τῶν ἀναγκαιοτάτων καὶ συνεκτικω-
- 82 τάτων τὴν ἀναφορὰν ἐποιεῖτο. τί οὖν λεκτέον; ἕκαστον ἡμῶν κατὰ τὰς προσεχεῖς τομὰς ἀριθμῶ δύο εἶναι συμβέβηκε, ζῶόν τε καὶ ἄνθρωπον· ἑκατέρῳ δὲ τούτων συγγενῆς δύναμις τῶν κατὰ ψυχὴν ἀποκεκλήρωται, τῷ μὲν ἡ ζωτικὴ, καθ’ ἣν ζῶμεν, τῷ δ’ ἡ λογικὴ, καθ’ ἣν λογικοὶ γεγόναμεν· τῆς μὲν οὖν ζωτικῆς μετέχει καὶ τὰ ἄλογα, τῆς δὲ

<sup>a</sup> Literally, “ of those which have soul as their principle.”

expression or at the thoughts conceived. The words are : "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to Me from out of the ground" (Gen. iv. 10). The loftiness of the phrasing is patent to all who are conversant with literature. Let us examine, according to our ability, the ideas expressed. And first, as to the blood. In many passages of the Law Moses pronounces the blood to be the essence of the life, saying in plain words, "for the life of all flesh is the blood" (Lev. xvii. 11 etc.). Yet, when first after the creation of heaven and earth and of what lies between them, the Framers of living beings fashioned man, we read, "He breathed into his face the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. ii. 7), showing hereby, on the contrary, that the essence of life is breath. Now we must notice that it is the writer's invariable habit never to forget for a moment the principles which he has laid down at the outset ; he is scrupulously careful to let his later statements be such as follow from and agree with what he has said before. He would not therefore, having already said that the essence of life is breath, have said further on that it is some different substance, namely blood, had he not been bringing the matter under some most vital and essential principle. What then are we to say ? Each one of us, according to the primary analysis, is two in number, an animal and a man. To either of these has been allotted an inner <sup>a</sup> power akin to the qualities of their respective life-principles, to one the power of vitality, in virtue of which we are alive, to the other the power of reasoning, in virtue of which we are reasoning beings. Of the power of vitality the irrational creatures partake with us ; of the power of reasoning

PHILO

λογικῆς οὐ μετέχει μὲν, ἄρχει δὲ ὁ θεός, ἢ τοῦ 83 πρεσβυτάτου λόγου πηγῆ. XXIII. ἢ μὲν οὖν κοινῇ πρὸς τὰ ἄλογα δύνάμις οὐσίαν ἔλαχεν αἷμα, ἢ δὲ ἐκ τῆς λογικῆς ἀπορρνεῖσα πηγῆς τὸ πνεῦμα, οὐκ ἀέρα κινούμενον, ἀλλὰ τύπον τινὰ καὶ χαρακτήρα θείας δυνάμεως, ἣν ὀνόματι κυρίῳ Μωυσῆς
 εἰκόνα καλεῖ, δηλῶν ὅτι ἀρχέτυπον μὲν φύσεως
 λογικῆς ὁ θεός ἐστι, μίμημα δὲ καὶ ἀπεικόνισμα 84 ἀριστον εἶδος, ὃ νοῦς καὶ λόγος κέκληται. διὰ
 τοῦτο σαρκὸς μὲν ψυχὴν φησι τὸ αἷμα, εἰδὼς ὅτι
 ἢ σαρκῶν φύσις νοῦ μὲν οὐ μεμοίραται, ζωῆς δὲ
 καθάπερ καὶ ὄλον ἡμῶν τὸ σῶμα μετέχει, ἀνθρώπου δὲ ψυχὴν πνεῦμα ὀνομάζει, ἀνθρωπον οὐ τὸ
 σύγκριμα καλῶν, ὡς ἔφην, ἀλλὰ τὸ θεοειδὲς ἐκείνο
 δημιούργημα, ᾧ λογιζόμεθα, οὗ τὰς ρίζας εἰς
 οὐρανὸν ἔτεινε καὶ τῆς ὑστάτης τῶν λεγομένων 85 ἀπλανῶν ἀψίδος ἐξῆψε. μόνον γὰρ δὴ τῶν ἐπὶ
 γῆς φυτὸν οὐράνιον ὁ θεὸς ἀνθρωπον εἰργάσατο,
 τῶν μὲν ἄλλων τὰς κεφαλὰς πηξάμενος ἐν χέρσῳ
 —κατωκάρῃ γὰρ πάντα—ἀνθρώπου δὲ εἰς τὸ ἄνω
 προαγαγών, ἵνα τὰς τροφὰς ὀλυμπίους καὶ ἀφθάρτους ἀλλὰ μὴ γεώδεις καὶ φθαρτὰς ἔχοι· παρὸ καὶ
 τοῦ σώματος ἡμῶν τὸ μὲν ὅσον ἀναισθητότατον
 πλείστον ἀποστήσας λογισμοῦ τὰς βάσεις γῆ
 προσερρίζου, τὰς δὲ νοῦ δορυφόρους αἰσθήσεις καὶ
 αὐτὸν ἐκείνον πορρωτάτω μὲν τῶν περὶ γῆν
 [208] ἐξώκισε, ταῖς δὲ | ἀέρος καὶ οὐρανοῦ περιόδοις

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 494, 495.

<sup>b</sup> Timaeus 91 E.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 82-85

God is, not indeed partaker, but originator, being the Fountain of archetypal reason. XXIII. To the faculty which we have in common with the irrational creatures blood has been given as its essence ; but to the faculty which streams forth from the fountain of reason breath has been assigned ; not moving air, but, as it were, an impression stamped by the divine power, to which Moses gives the appropriate title of " image," thus indicating that God is the Archetype of rational existence, while man is a copy and likeness. By " man " I mean not the living creature with two natures, but the highest form in which the life shows itself ; and this has received the title of " mind " and " reason." This is why he says that the blood is the life of the flesh, being aware that the fleshly nature has received no share of mind, but partakes of vitality just as the whole of our body does ; but man's life he names " breath," giving the title of " man " not to the composite mass, as I have said, but to that God-like creation with which we reason, whose roots He caused<sup>a</sup> to reach even to heaven and come forth from the outmost circles of the so-called fixed stars. For God made man, alone of things on the earth, a heavenly growth, fixing on the ground the heads of all others ; for they all have the head bending downwards<sup>b</sup> ; but raising man's upward, that his nourishment may be celestial and imperishable, not perishable and earthly. In accordance with this He attached our feet to the earth, thus removing as far as possible from the reasoning faculty that part of our body which is least capable of feeling, but our senses, which are satellites of the mind, and our mind itself he set at the greatest distance from the ground, linking them with the

- 86 ἀφθάρτοις οὐσαις ἐνεδήσατο. XXIV. μηκέτ' οὖν ἀπορῶμεν, πῶς ἔννοϊαν ἔλαβεν ἄνθρωπος θεοῦ τοῦ αἰδιούδης, οἱ Μωυσέως γνώριμοι· τὴν γὰρ αἰτίαν χρησμῶ μαθὼν αὐτὸς ἡμῖν ὑφηγήσατο. ἔλεγε δὲ ᾧδε· ψυχὴν οὐδεμίαν τῷ σώματι ὁ ποιῶν εἰργάζετο ἱκανὴν ἐξ ἑαυτῆς τὸν ποιητὴν ἰδεῖν, λογισάμενος δὲ μεγάλα ὀνήσειν τὸ δημιούργημα, εἰ λάβοι τοῦ δημιουργήσαντος ἔννοϊαν—εὐδαιμονίας γὰρ καὶ μακαριότητος ὄρος οὗτος—ἄνωθεν ἐνέπνει τῆς ἰδίου θειότητος· ἢ δ' ἀόρατος ἀοράτῳ ψυχῇ τοὺς ἑαυτῆς τύπους ἐνεσφραγίζετο, ἵνα μηδ' ὁ περίγειος
- 87 χῶρος εἰκόνας ἀμοιρήσῃ θεοῦ. τὸ δ' ἀρχέτυπον οὕτως ἦν ἄρα αἰιδές, ὥστε καὶ ἢ εἰκὼν οὐχ ὀρατὴ, τυπωθεῖσα μέντοι κατὰ τὸ παράδειγμα οὐκέτι θνητὰς ἀλλ' ἀθανάτους ἐννοίας ἐδέχετο· πῶς γὰρ ἂν θνητὴ φύσις μένειν ἅμα καὶ ἀποδημεῖν ἠδύνατο ἢ τὰ ἐνταῦθα καὶ τὰ ἐτέρωθι καθορᾶν ἢ θάλατταν μὲν περιπλεῖν ἅπασαν, γῆν δὲ ἄχρι περάτων ἐπέρχεσθαι, ἢ νόμων καὶ ἔθων ἢ συνόλως πραγμάτων καὶ σωμάτων ἐφάπτεσθαι; ἢ δίχα τῶν ἐπιγείων καὶ τὰ μετάρσια καταλαμβάνειν, ἀέρα καὶ τροπὰς αὐτοῦ καὶ καιρῶν ἰδιότητος καὶ ὅσα ταῖς ἐτησίοις ὥραις καινουργούμενά τε καὶ ἔθους
- 88 ἀποτελεῖται; ἢ πάλιν δι' ἀέρος εἰς οὐρανὸν ἀπὸ γῆς ἀνίπτασθαι καὶ τὰς ἐν οὐρανῷ φύσεις ἐξετάζειν,

<sup>a</sup> Timaeus 90 D.

<sup>b</sup> Or "it is he who."

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 86-88

circuits<sup>a</sup> of air and heaven, which are imperishable. XXIV. Let not us then, the pupils of Moses, be any longer at a loss as to how man came to have a conception of the invisible God. For Moses himself learnt it by a divine communication, and has taught us how it was. He stated it thus. The Creator wrought for the body no soul capable by itself of seeing its Maker, but, accounting that it would be greatly to the advantage of the thing wrought should it obtain a conception of Him who wrought it, since this is what<sup>b</sup> determines happiness and blessedness, He breathed into him from above of His own Deity. The invisible Deity stamped on the invisible soul the impress of Itself, to the end that not even the terrestrial region should be without a share in the image of God. But the Archetype is, of course, so devoid of visible form that even His image could not be seen. Having been struck in accord with the Pattern, it entertained ideas not now mortal but immortal. For how could a mortal nature at one and the same time have stayed at home and been abroad, or have seen what is here and what is elsewhere, or have sailed round every sea and traversed earth to its furthest bounds, or have grasped laws and customs, or, to say all in one word, circumstances and substances? Or, going beyond earthly things, how could it have apprehended also things on high, air and its changes, characteristics of special times, and all that is brought to pass by the seasons of the year, whether unexpectedly or in keeping with the usual course of things? How, again, would it have been possible for him to fly up from the earth through the air into the sky and to examine the condition and movement of the heavenly bodies, discovering

- ὡς ἔχουσιν, ὡς κινουῦνται, τίνες ὅροι τῆς κινήσεως ἀρχῆς καὶ τέλους αὐταῖς, πῶς ἀλλήλαις τε καὶ τῷ παντὶ κατὰ τι συγγενείας δίκαιον ἀρμόζονται; τέχνας τε καὶ ἐπιστήμας ἐπινοῆσαι, ὅσαι τὰ τε ἐκτὸς δημιουργοῦσι καὶ τὰ περὶ σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν, ὡς ἐκάτερον βελτιωθήσεται, πραγματεύονται, καὶ μυρία ἄλλα, ὧν οὔτε ἀριθμὸν οὔτε φύσιν λόγῳ
- 89 περιλαβεῖν εὐπορον; μόνον γὰρ αὐτὸ τῶν παρ' ἡμῖν ὁ νοῦς ἅτε πάντων ὠκυδρομώτατος καὶ τὸν χρόνον, ἐν ᾧ γίνεσθαι δοκεῖ, φθάνει καὶ παραμείβεται, κατὰ ἀοράτους δυνάμεις ἀχρόνως τοῦ τε παντὸς καὶ μερῶν καὶ τῶν τούτων αἰτίων ἐπιψαύων. ἤδη δὲ οὐ μόνον ἄχρι τῶν γῆς καὶ θαλάττης ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀέρος καὶ οὐρανοῦ περάτων ἔλθων οὐδ' ἐνταῦθα ἔσται, βραχὺν ὅρον τοῦ συνεχοῦς καὶ ἀπαύστου δρόμου νομίσας τὸν κόσμον εἶναι, προσωτέρω δὲ χωρῆσαι γλιχόμενος καὶ τὴν ἀκατάληπτον θεοῦ φύσιν, ὅτι μὴ πρὸς τὸ εἶναι μόνον, καταλαβεῖν, ἣν
- 90 δύνηται. πῶς οὖν εἰκὸς βραχὺν οὕτως ὄντα τὸν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν μῆνιγγι ἢ καρδίᾳ, βραχέσιν ὄγκοις, ἐγκατελιημμένον μέγεθος οὐρανοῦ καὶ κόσμου
- [209] | χωρῆσαι τοσοῦτον, εἰ μὴ τῆς θείας καὶ εὐδαίμονος ψυχῆς ἐκείνης ἀπόσπασμα ἦν οὐ διαιρετόν; τέμνεται γὰρ οὐδὲν τοῦ θεοῦ κατ' ἀπάρτησιν, ἀλλὰ μόνον ἐκτείνεται. διὸ μεμοιραμένος τῆς ἐν τῷ παντὶ τελειότητος, ὅταν ἐννοῇ κόσμον, τοῖς πέρασι τοῦ παντὸς συνευρύνεται ῥῆξιν οὐ λαμβάνων· ὀλκὸς γὰρ ἢ δύναμις αὐτοῦ.
- 91 XXV. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὡς ἐν βραχέσιν εἰρήσθω

how the beginning of their movement and its cessation is determined, in what manner they are, in accordance with some law of congruity, adjusted both to one another and to the universe? How would it have been possible for him to devise arts and sciences, which produce material objects, or deal with the betterment of soul and body, and to do a thousand other things, the number and nature of which are almost beyond telling? For the mind, alone of all our endowments, being swifter than all things, outruns and leaves behind the time in which it seems to find itself, and, by virtue of invisible faculties, comes timelessly into contact with both the whole and its parts, and with the causes which give rise to both. And now, having come not only as far as the bounds of earth and sea but of air and sky also, not even there did it stay its steps, deeming the limit of the universe to be too narrow for its constant and unceasing course, and aiming at proceeding further, and at apprehending if possible the nature of God, which, beyond the bare fact that He is, is inapprehensible. How, then, was it likely that the mind of man being so small, contained in such small bulks as a brain or a heart, should have room for all the vastness of sky and universe, had it not been an inseparable portion of that divine and blessed soul? For no part of that which is divine cuts itself off and becomes separate, but does but extend itself. The mind, then, having obtained a share of the perfection which is in the whole, when it conceives of the universe, reaches out as widely as the bounds of the whole, and undergoes no severance; for its force is expansive.

XXV. Regarding the essence of life these few

- περὶ οὐσίας ψυχῆς. τὸ δὲ “ φωνὴν αἵματος βοᾶν ” (Gen. iv. 10) κατ’ ἀκόλουθον οὕτως ἀποδώσομεν. τῆς ἡμετέρας ψυχῆς τὸ μὲν ἄφωνόν ἐστι, τὸ δὲ φωνῆεν· τὸ μὲν ἄλογον ἄφωνον, φωνῆεν δ’ ὅσον λογικόν, ὃ δὴ μόνον ἔννοϊαν εἴληφε θεοῦ· τοῖς γὰρ ἄλλοις μέρεσιν οὔτε θεὸν οὔτε τι νοητὸν κατα-
- 92 λαβεῖν δυνάμεθα. τῆς οὖν ζωτικῆς δυνάμεως, ἧς τὸ οὐσιώδες αἷμα, μοῖρά τις ἐξαιρέτον ἔσχε γέρας φωνῆν καὶ λόγον, οὐ τὸ διὰ στόματος καὶ γλώττης ῥέον νᾶμα, ἀλλὰ τὴν πηγὴν, ἀφ’ ἧς αἱ τοῦ προφορικοῦ δεξαμεναὶ πληροῦσθαι πεφύκασιν· ἡ δὲ πηγὴ νοῦς ἐστι, δι’ οὗ τὰς πρὸς τὸν ὄντα ἐντεύξεις καὶ ἐκβοήσεις τῇ μὲν ἐκόντες τῇ δὲ καὶ ἄκοντες
- 93 ἀναφθεγγόμεθα. ὃ δὲ ἅτε ἀγαθὸς ὢν καὶ ἕλεως τοὺς ἰκέτας οὐκ ἀποστρέφεται, καὶ μάλισθ’ ὅταν ἐπὶ τοῖς Αἰγυπτίοις ἔργοις καὶ πάθει στενάζοντες ἀψευδῶς καὶ ἀπλάστως ἐκβοῶσι· τότε γὰρ ἀναβαίνειν φησὶ Μωυσῆς τοὺς λόγους αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸν θεόν (Exod. ii. 23), τὸν δὲ ἐπακούσαντα ῥύεσθαι
- 94 τῶν παρεστώτων κακῶν· ταῦτα δὲ πάντα γίνεσθαι, ὅταν ὁ βασιλεὺς Αἰγύπτου τελευτήσῃ· τὸ παραδοξότατον· εἰκὸς γὰρ ἦν ἀποθανόντος τυράννου χαίρειν καὶ γεγηθέναι τοὺς τυραννουμένους· ἀλλὰ τότε λέγονται στενάζειν· “ μετὰ γὰρ τὰς ἡμέρας τὰς πολλὰς ἐκείνας ἐτελεύτησεν ὁ βασιλεὺς Αἰγύπτου, καὶ κατεστέναξαν οἱ υἱοὶ Ἰσραὴλ ”
- 95 (ib.). πρὸς μὲν οὖν τὸ ῥητὸν ἢ λέξις τὸ εὐλογοῖ οὐ περιέχει, πρὸς δὲ τὰς ἐν ψυχῇ δυνάμεις τὸ κατ’ αὐτὴν ἀκόλουθον εὐρίσκεται. ὃ γὰρ ἀνασκιδνάς καὶ ἀπορρίπτων τὰς περὶ τῶν καλῶν δόξας ὅταν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 495.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 91-95

remarks may suffice. In due sequence we must go on to interpret "the voice of blood crieth" in this way. One part of our life or soul is dumb, another part has a voice. The irrational part is dumb; the rational part has a voice, it only having attained to the conception of God; for with the other parts we can apprehend neither God nor any other mental object.<sup>a</sup> In the vital faculty, then, whose essence is blood, a portion has obtained, as a special prize, voice and speech; I do not mean the stream flowing through the mouth and over the tongue, but the fountain-head from which, by nature's ordering, the cisterns of uttered speech are filled. This fountain-head is the mind, through which, partly voluntarily, partly involuntarily, we utter aloud entreaties and outcries to Him that is. He, in His goodness and graciousness, does not disregard His suppliants, above all when they cry out without pretence or falsehood, groaning over their tasks and sufferings in Egypt: for then, says Moses, their words go up to God (Exod. ii. 23), and He listens to them and delivers them from evils that are upon them. All this comes to pass upon the death of the king of Egypt. Here is a thing clean contrary to expectation; for one would expect, when a tyrant dies, those over whom he has tyrannized to be glad and rejoice; yet it is then that they are said to lament, for we are told "after those many days the king of Egypt died, and the children of Israel lamented sorely" (ibid.). Taken literally the sentence is contradictory to reason: If it apply to the powers that sway the soul, the statement of the second clause is seen to be consequent upon that in the first. Pharaoh is the power that scatters to the winds and flings away all ideas of

ἐν ἡμῶν ζωπυρῆται Φαραὼ καὶ ὑγιαίνειν δοκῆ, εἰ δὴ τινα τῶν φαύλων ὑγιαίνειν λεκτέον, τὴν ἡδονὴν ἀποδεχόμεθα ἐγκράτειαν πέραν ὄρων ἐλαύνοντες· ὅταν δὲ ἀπόκρατος γένηται καὶ τρόπον τινὰ τελευτήσῃ ὁ τοῦ βδελυρῶς καὶ ἀσελγῶς ζῆν αἴτιος, τὸν σῶφρονα ἐναυγασθέντες βίον μετακλαίωμεν καὶ μεταστένομεν τῆς παλαιᾶς διαίτης ἑαυτοῦς, ὅτι ἡδονὴν ἀρετῆς προτιμήσαντες θνητὸν βίον ἀθανάτῳ ἐπεζεύξαμεν· λαβὼν δ' οἶκτον τῆς συνεχοῦς ἡμῶν [210] ὀλοφύρσεως ὁ μόνος | εὐμενῆς προσίεται ψυχὰς ἰκέτιδας, τὸν δὲ ἐπισεισθέντα τῶν παθῶν Αἰγύπτιον σκηπτὸν ῥαδίως ἀπωθεῖται.

- 98 XXVI. Τῷ δὲ μὴ δεχομένῳ μετάνοιαν Κάιν δι' ὑπερβολὴν ἄγους ἀδελφοκτονίας οἰκειοτάτας ἀρὰς τίθεται· πρῶτον μὲν γάρ φησιν αὐτῷ· “καὶ νῦν ἐπικατάρατος σὺ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς” (Gen. iv. 11), δηλῶν πρῶτον ὅτι οὐχὶ νῦν <πρῶτον><sup>1</sup> ὅτε ἐδολοφόνησεν ἐναγῆς καὶ ἐπάρατός ἐστιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρότερον ὅτε ἐβούλευσε τὸν φόνον, τῆς γνώμης
97 ἴσον τῷ τελείῳ δυναμένης. ἕως μὲν γὰρ τὰ αἰσχρὰ μόνον ἐννοοῦμεν κατὰ ψιλὴν τοῦ νοῦ φαντασίαν, τότε τῆς διανοίας <οὐκ> ἐσμεν ὑποχοι, δύναται γὰρ καὶ ἀκουσίως ἢ ψυχῇ τρέπεσθαι· ὅταν δὲ προσγένηται τοῖς βουλευθεῖσιν ἢ πρᾶξις, ὑπαίτιον γίνεται καὶ τὸ βουλεύσασθαι, τὸ γὰρ ἐκουσίως διαμαρτάνειν ταύτῃ μάλιστα δια-
98 γνωρίζεται. κατάρατον δὲ φησι τὸν νοῦν οὐκ ἀπ' ἄλλου τινὸς ἢ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἔσεσθαι· τῶν γὰρ χαλεπωτάτων αὐτοῦ συμφορῶν τὸ περὶ ἕκαστον

<sup>1</sup> πρῶτον is inserted from conjecture.

<sup>a</sup> Or “we laid upon life immortal the imprisoning bar of mortality.”

what is noble. When this power is quick and active in us and seems to be strong and healthy, if indeed any evil power may be said to be healthy, we drive self-control far from us, and welcome pleasure. But, when the author of our foul and licentious life weakens and, so to speak, dies, we are brought all at once to a clear view of the life of self-mastery, and turn to lamenting and bewailing ourselves for our old mode of living, seeing that, preferring pleasure to virtue, we overlaid immortal with mortal life.<sup>a</sup> But He Who alone is gracious, taking pity on our ceaseless mourning, accepts our suppliant souls, and without effort dispels the Egyptian tornado of passions which had burst upon us.

XXVI. On Cain, who rejects repentance, He proceeds, owing to the enormity of his guilt, to lay curses most appropriate to the murder of a brother. And first He says to him "Now also art thou accursed from the earth" (Gen. iv. 11), showing that it is not now for the first time, when he has perpetrated the treacherous deed, that he is abominable and accursed, but that he was so before also when he plotted the murder, since the purpose is as important as the completed act. For so long as we only conceive disgraceful actions with the bare imagination of the mind, so long we are not guilty of the intent, for the soul may even against our will move amiss. But when the deeds planned have also been carried out, the very planning involves guilt, for the deliberateness of the offence is the chief point made evident by its execution. Now He says that the mind will be accursed not from anything else than from the earth; for the earthly part of each one of us is discovered ἡμῶν γεῶδες αἴτιον εὐρίσκεται· τὸ γοῦν σῶμα ἢ νόσω χρησάμενον τὰς ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ προσβαλὼν κῆρας ἄσης καὶ ἀδημονίας αὐτὸν ἐνέπλησεν ἢ πιανθὲν ἀμέτρως ἀπολαύσει ἡδονῶν ἀμβλυτέρας τὰς εἰς τὸ καταλαμβάνειν ἀκμὰς ἀπειργάσατο.

99 καὶ μὲν δὴ ἐκάστη τῶν αἰσθήσεων δεκτικὴ βλάβη ἐστίν· ἢ γὰρ κάλλος ἰδὼν ἔρωτος ἐτρώθη δεινοῦ πάθους βέλεσιν ἢ θάνατον ἀκούσας γένει προσήκοντός τινος ὑπὸ λύπης ἐκάμφθη· πολλάκις δὲ καὶ γεῦσις αὐτὸν κατέβαλεν ἀηδέσι χυλοῖς αἰκισαμένη ἢ πλήθει ἡδέων βαρύνασα· τῶν μὲν γὰρ πρὸς συνουσίαν οἴστρων τί δεῖ μεμνήσθαι; πόλεις ὅλας καὶ χώρας καὶ κλίματα μεγάλα γῆς οὔτοι διέφθειραν, ὧν μάρτυς ἢ ποιητῶν καὶ συγγραφέων πληθὺς σχεδὸν ἅπανα.

100 XXVII. Τὸν δὲ τρόπον, καθ' ὃν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς κατάρατος ὁ νοῦς γίνεται, προσυπογράφει λέγων· “ ἢ ἔχανε τὸ στόμα αὐτῆς δέξασθαι τὸ αἷμα τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου ” (Gen. iv. 11). χαλεπὸν γὰρ δι-οιχθῆναί τε καὶ ἀνευρυνθῆναι τὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων στόμια, ὡς ἀχανέσιν αὐτοῖς τὴν τῶν αἰσθητῶν φορὰν ποταμοῦ πλημμυροῦντος δίκην ἐπιχεῖσθαι, μηδενὸς τὴν βίαιον ὄρμην ἀνωθοῦντος· τότε γὰρ ἐγκαταποθεῖς ὁ νοῦς τοσοῦτω κλύδωνι βύθιος εὐρίσκεται, μηδ' ὅσον ἀνανήξασθαι καὶ ὑπερ-
101 κῦψαι δυνάμενος. ἀλλὰ χρὴ τούτων ἐκάστῳ καταχρησθαι μὴ πρὸς ἃ δύναται μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς τὰ βέλτιστα· δύναται μὲν γὰρ πάνθ' ὁρᾶν χρώματα καὶ σχήματα ἢ ὄψεις, ἀλλ' ὁράτω τὰ φωτὸς, μὴ σκότους, ἄξια· δύναται δὲ καὶ τὸ οὖς πασῶν ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι φωνῶν, ἀλλ' ἐνίων παρακουέτω, μυρία γὰρ τῶν

to be accountable for our most dire misfortunes. For instance, the body either suffers from illness and inflicts on its owner the maladies that arise from itself, filling him with nausea and distress, or, having become outrageously gross through indulgence in pleasures, blunts his keenness of perception. And, as we all know, every one of the senses is an avenue for the entrance of harm. A man sees beauty, and is wounded by the darts of the dread passion of love ; or he hears of the death of a kinsman and is bowed down with grief. Frequently too his palate brings about his downfall, upsetting him with disagreeable viands, or oppressing him with a surfeit of delicacies. I need hardly refer to the incitements to sexual indulgence. These have ruined entire cities and countries and vast regions of the earth, as wellnigh all the poets and historians of the world testify.

XXVII. The manner in which the mind becomes accurst from the earth is next indicated by the words, " which opened its mouth to receive thy brother's blood " (Gen. iv. 11). It is a cruel thing that the inlets of the senses should be opened wide for the torrent of the objects of sense to be poured, like a river in spate, into their gaping orifices, with nothing to stay their violent rush. For then the mind, swallowed up by the huge inpouring, is found at the bottom, unable so much as to rise to the surface and look out.

We ought to employ each one of these faculties, not on all that it is capable of doing but rather on the objects of greatest value. The eye is capable of seeing all colours and all forms, but let it see those that are meet for light not for darkness. The ear too is capable of apprehending all uttered words, but some let it refuse to hear, for countless things that

- [211] λεγομένων αἰσχροῦ· μηδ' ὅτι γεύσεώς | σοι μεταδέδωκεν ἢ φύσις, ὧ τετυφωμένε, τρόπον αἰθυίης
 πάντων ἀπλήστως ἐμποροῦ· πολλὰ γὰρ τῶν οὐ
 τροφίμων μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ περιττῶν νόσους μετὰ 102 χαλεπῆς ὠδίνος ἔτεκε· μηδ' ὅτι μερῶν τῶν πρὸς γονὰς ἠξιώθης ἔνεκα τῆς διαμονῆς τοῦ παντός, φθορὰς καὶ μοιχείας καὶ τὰς ἄλλας οὐκ εὐαγεῖς
 μίξεις μετέρχου, ἀλλ' ὅσαι μετὰ νόμου τὸ ἀνθρώπων σπείρουσί τε καὶ φυτεύουσι γένος· μηδ' ὅτι γλώττης καὶ στόματος καὶ φωνητηρίων ὀργάνων
 μεμοίρασαι, πάντ' ἐκλάλει, καὶ τὰ ἄρρητα· τὸ γὰρ ἐχεμυθεῖν ἔστιν ὅπου χρήσιμον, καὶ μοι δοκοῦσιν
 οἱ μαθόντες λέγειν μεμαθηκέναι καὶ ἠσυχάζειν, τῆς
 αὐτῆς δυνάμεως περιποιούσης ἐκάτερον, οἱ δ' ὅσα
 μὴ προσῆκε διεξιόντες οὐ δύναμιν λόγων ἀλλ' 103 ἠσυχίας ἀσθένειαν ἐπιδείκνυσθαι. διὸ σπουδάζωμεν ἕκαστον τῶν εἰρημένων στομιῶν καταδεῖν
 τοῖς ἀρρήκτοις ἐγκρατείας δεσμοῖς· “ὅσα γὰρ
 οὐχὶ δεσμῶ καταδεῖται” φησὶ Μωυσῆς ἐν ἑτέροις
 (Num. xix. 15) “ἀκάθαρτα εἶναι,” ὡς ἂν τοῦ
 κεχαλάσθαι καὶ κεχηγνέναι καὶ λελύσθαι τὰ ψυχῆς
 μέρη κακοδαιμονίας αἰτίου, τοῦ δὲ συνῆχθαι καὶ
 συνεσφίγγθαι ὀρθὸν καὶ βίον καὶ λόγον ἐργαζομένου.
 τὸν ἄθεον οὖν καὶ ἀσεβῆ Κάιν δεόντως καταρᾶται,
 ὅτι τοὺς φωλεοὺς τοῦ συγκρίματος διοίξας ἐπι-κέχηγε πᾶσι τοῖς ἐκτός, εὐχόμενος δι' ἀπληστίαν

<sup>a</sup> Or “food taken not for simple nourishment but in excess.”

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 101-103

are said are disgraceful. And because nature has given you taste, as she has to us all, do not, O senseless one, be like a cormorant and greedily devour all things. For maladies causing acute pain have been brought on in many cases by food that was not nourishing only but rare and expensive.<sup>a</sup> And because, with a view to the persistence of the race, you were endowed with generative organs, do not run after rapes and adulteries and other unhallowed forms of intercourse, but only those which are the lawful means of propagating the human race. And because a tongue and a mouth and organs of speech have been allotted to you, do not blurt out all things, even those which are secrets ; for there are places where it is good to refrain from speech ; and it seems to me that those who have learned to speak have learned also to be silent, since the same faculty renders us capable both of exercising speech and of refraining from its exercise ; and those who talk about things they should not, appear to me to display not power of speech but weakness in keeping silent. So let us make it our earnest endeavour to bind up each of the openings which we have mentioned with the adamantine chains of self-control. For Moses says elsewhere (Numb. xix. 15) that " every open vessel which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean," implying that wretchedness is due to the different parts of the soul having been left loose and gaping and unfastened, while proper ordering of life and speech is the result of these being kept close and tight. So we see that God cannot but curse the godless and impious Cain, because, opening wide the inner chambers of his complex being, he stood agape for all outward things, praying in his greed to be δέξασθαί τε αὐτὰ καὶ χωρῆσαι ἐπ' ὀλέθρῳ τοῦ φιλοθέου δόγματος Ἄβελ.

- 104 XXVIII. Ἐργάσεται διὰ τοῦτο τὴν γῆν (Gen. iv. 12), οὐ γεωργήσει· γεωργὸς μὲν γὰρ πᾶς τεχνίτης, ὅτι τέχνη καὶ ἡ γεωργία, πολλοὶ δὲ τῶν ἰδιωτῶν γεωπόνοι τὴν ἄνευ ἐμπειρίας ἕνεκα τῶν ἀναγκαίων μετιόντες ὑπηρεσίαν· οὗτοι μὲν οὖν ἐν οἷς δρῶσι πολλὰ βλάπτουσι ἐπιστάτου μὴ τυχόντες· ἂ δ' ἂν καὶ εὖ ἐργάσωνται, κατὰ τύχην, οὐ σὺν λόγῳ, κατορθοῦσι· τὰ δὲ τῶν γεωργῶν τὰ μετ' ἐπιστήμης ἐνεργούμενα πάντ' ἐστὶν ἐξ ἀνάγκης
- 105 ὠφέλιμα. τούτου χάριν ὁ νομοθέτης τῷ δικαίῳ Νῶε τὴν γεωργικὴν ἀνῆψε τέχνην (Gen. ix. 20), ἐκδιδάσκων ὅτι καθάπερ γεωργὸς ἀγαθὸς ὁ σπουδαῖος τῆς τε ἀγρίας ὕλης τὰ μὲν ὅσα βλαβερὰ ἔρνη πρὸς παθῶν ἢ κακιῶν φυτευθέντα ἐκκόπτει, τὰ δ' ὅσα μὴ καρποτόκα μὲν δύναται δὲ ἀντὶ τείχους φραγμὸς εἶναι ψυχῆς ὀχυρώτατος ἐᾷ, καὶ πάλιν αὖ τῆς ἡμέρου πάσης κατὰ διαφέροντας καὶ οὐχὶ τοὺς αὐτοὺς τρόπους ἐπιμελεῖται, τῶν μὲν ἀφαιρῶν, τοῖς δὲ προστιθείς, καὶ τὰ μὲν εἰς μέγεθος αὐξῶν,
- 106 τὰ δὲ εἰς βραχύτητα συντέμνων· ἤδη δὲ καὶ ἄμπελον ἰδὼν εὐθηνούσαν τὰς κληματίδας ἔτεινε κατὰ γῆς, τάφρους ὀρυζάμενος καὶ τὸν χοῦν αὖθις [212] ἐπενεγκῶν· αἱ δ' ἀντὶ | μερῶν ὄλαι καὶ ἀντὶ θυγατέρων μητέρες οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν ἐγίνοντο, ἔτι καὶ τῆς φύσει μητρὸς ἀποδύσασαι τὸ γῆρας· παυσαιμένη

able both to take them in, and to find room for them for the destruction of Abel, or the teaching devoted to God.

XXVIII. For this reason he shall "work" the earth (Gen. iv. 12), not "till" it: for every tiller of the soil is a skilled workman, since tilling, too, is a matter of skill, but plenty of untrained men are workers on the soil, plying the task of unskilled labourers to procure the necessaries of life. These people do much mischief in their agricultural operations from not having found anyone to direct them; and if they do anything well, they succeed by accident, not with the aid of reason; but the scientific labours of the tillers of the soil are all of necessity beneficial. This explains why the lawgiver ascribed to righteous Noah the skilled trade of a tiller of the soil (Gen. ix. 20), wishing to bring out the truth that, just as a good husbandman does, the man of sound character in dealing with trees in a wild state cuts away all harmful shoots grown from passions or vices, leaving such as, though not fruit-bearing, can serve as a wall and be a most firm fence of the soul: while, on the other hand, he tends all the cultivated trees, not by the same but by different methods, taking away from some, making additions to others, making some larger, and reducing others in size. And now I come to an illustration that particularly interests me. Noticing a luxuriant vine he will bend down its tendrils to the ground, dig trenches, throw the soil back to cover them. In a short time these become wholes instead of parts, mothers instead of daughters. Not only so, but they relieve the mother who bore them of the burden of old age. For, released from a task which used to impoverish and γὰρ τοῦ διανέμειν καὶ κατακερματίζειν τὴν τροφήν πολλοῖς ἐκγόνοις ἅτε ἱκανοῖς γεγονόσιν ἐξ ἑαυτῶν τρέφεσθαι, παρ' ἣν αἰτίαν λιμώττουσα ἡσθένει, μάλιστα διακορῆς ἐγένετο, ὡς πιανθεῖσαν πάλιν

 107 ἀνηβῆσαι. ἕτερον δὲ ἔθεασάμην, ὃς τῶν ἡμέρων δένδρων οὐκ εὐγενὲς ὃ μὲν ὑπερεῖχε τῆς γῆς ἔρνος ἔτεμε, μικρὸν δ' ὅσον πρὸς αὐταῖς ρίζαις ἀνέχον εἴασε, λαβῶν δ' ἀπ' εὐγενοῦς ἐτέρου κλάδον εὐφυᾶ τὸν μὲν ἄχρι τῆς ἐντεριώνης καθ' ἓν μέρος ἀπέξεσε, τὸ δὲ πρὸς ταῖς ρίζαις οὐ κατὰ πολλοῦ βάθους ἐντεμών, ἀλλ' ὥστε διαστήσαι μόνον τὴν ἔνωσιν, τὸ ἀπεξεσμένον ὑπενεγκῶν ἐνηρμόσατο τῷ
 108 διαστήματι· ἐξ ὧν ἀμφοτέρων μία δένδρου φύσις ἠνωμένη γίνεται, ἑκατέρου μέρους ἀντίδοσιν τῆς ὠφελείας θατέρῳ ποιουμένου· αἱ μὲν γὰρ ρίζαι τὸν ἐφαρμοσθέντα τρέφουσι καὶ κωλύουσιν ἀφαναινεσθαι κλάδον, ὃ δ' εὐκαρπίαν ἀμοιβὴν τροφῆς ἀντιχαρίζεται ταύταις.

Ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἄλλα μυρία τῶν κατὰ γεωργίαν τεχνικὰ ἔργα, ὧν περιττὸν ἐν τῷ παρόντι μνησθαι· τοῦ γὰρ διαφορὰν ἐνδείξασθαι μόνον ἔργατου γῆς καὶ γεωργοῦ χάριν ταῦτ' ἐμη-109 κύναμεν. XXIX. ὃ μὲν δὴ φαῦλος τὸ γεῶδες σῶμα καὶ τὰς συγγενεῖς αἰσθήσεις αὐτῷ καὶ ὅσα ἐκτὸς αἰσθητὰ ἐργαζόμενος ἀτέχνως οὐ παύεται, καὶ βλάπτει μὲν τὴν παναθλίαν ψυχὴν ἑαυτοῦ, βλάπτει δὲ καὶ ὃ δοκεῖ μάλιστα ὠφελεῖν τὸ ἴδιον σῶμα· τῷ δὲ σπουδαίῳ—τέχνης γὰρ ἔμπειρος weaken her, that of dividing up her sustenance and distributing it to her numerous progeny, these having now become capable of drawing sustenance from themselves, after many a set-back she gets the nourishment she needs, and enriched by it renews her youth.
 274

I have watched another man dealing with cultivated trees. He would cut away all that was above ground of a poor one among these, leaving a very small portion of it close to the roots projecting. Then, taking a well-grown branch from another tree of good stock, he would pare this away at one end as far as the pith, make an incision in the shoot which he had docked near the roots, not of any great depth but just sufficient to make an opening for insertion. Then he would bring the branch which he had pared and fit it into the opening. The result is a single tree grown out of these two into one, each portion reciprocally benefiting the other. For the roots feed the branch grafted on them and save it from withering, and the branch, as a requital for its nourishment, bestows fruitfulness on the roots.

There are in agriculture countless other operations requiring skill, which it would be out of place to mention just now. I have written at such length merely for the sake of making clear the difference between a labourer and a (skilled) agriculturalist. XXIX. The worthless man never ceases spending unskilled labour on his earthly body and the senses akin to it and all external objects of sense, and he goes on doing harm to his utterly miserable soul, doing harm also to that which he imagines he is chiefly benefiting, his own body. But in the case of the worthy man, since he is expert in the skilled

- γεωργικῆς ἐστίν—ἡ ὕλη πᾶσα τεχνικῶς καὶ σὺν λόγῳ μεθοδεύεται. ὅταν μὲν γε αἱ αἰσθήσεις ἐξυβρίζωσι πρὸς τὰ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητὰ μετὰ ἀκατασχέτου ρύμης ἐκφερόμεναι, μηχανῇ τινι ὧν ἡ
- 110 τέχνη κατεσκευάσατο ραδίως στέλλονται· ὅταν δὲ παλμῶδες ἐν ψυχῇ πάθος ὠμὸν γένηται κνησμούς καὶ γαργαλισμούς ἐξ ἡδονῆς καὶ ἐπιθυμίας ἢ πάλιν δηγμούς τε καὶ πτοίας ἐκ φόβου καὶ λύπης ἐμποιοῦν, προευτρεπισθέντι σωτηρίῳ πεπαίνεται φαρμάκῳ· καὶ μὴν εἴ τις ἐπινεμομένη κακία μηκύνεται, τῆς ἐν σώματι ἐρπηνώδους ἀδελφῆ νόσου, λόγῳ τομῆι τῷ κατ' ἐπιστήμην τέμνεται.
- 111 τὸν μὲν δὴ τρόπον τοῦτον τὰ τῆς ἀγρίας ὕλης τιθασεύεται, τῶν δ' ἡμέρων καὶ καρποτόκων ἀρετῶν τὰ φυτὰ πάντα βλαστὰ μὲν ἔχει τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα, καρπὸν δὲ τὰς καλὰς πράξεις· ὧν ἕκαστον ἡ γεωργικὴ ψυχῆς τέχνη συναύξει καὶ τό γε ἐφ' ἑαυτὴν ἦκον μέρος ἀπαθανατίζει ταῖς ἐπιμελείαις.
- 112 XXX. Ἐναργῶς οὖν ἐπιδέδεικται γεωργὸς μὲν ὁ ἀστείος, γεωπόνος δὲ ὁ φαῦλος. καὶ εἶθε μέντοι γεωπονοῦντι αὐτῷ προσετίθει τὴν ἰσχὺν τὸ περὶ
- [213] αὐτὸν γεῶδες, ἀλλὰ μὴ καὶ τῆς | οὔσης ὑφῆρει δυνάμεως· λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι “ οὐ προσθήσει τὴν
- 113 ἰσχὺν αὐτῆς δοῦναί σοι ” (Gen. iv. 12)· ὁποῖός τις ἂν γένοιτο ἄνθρωπος ἐσθίων μὲν ἢ πίνων ἀεὶ, ἐμπιπλάμενος δὲ μηδέποτε, ἢ ταῖς μετὰ γαστέρα χρώμενος ἡδοναῖς ἐπαλλήλοις καὶ ἔτι ταῖς πρὸς συνουσίαν ὀρέξεσιν ἀκμάζων· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἔνδεια
- 276

work of agriculture, everything that comes under his hands is managed with skill and as reason requires. Whenever the senses run riot and are borne forth with irresistible rush towards their outward objects, they are easily checked by one of the contrivances of science. Whenever throbbing passion in the soul rages savagely, producing there itchings and ticklings arising from lust and indulgence, or again gnawing pains and scared flutterings, the result of fear and grief, it is assuaged by a curative medicine prepared beforehand. Once again, if some vice is spreading itself more and more widely, sister to that bodily disease which creeps and runs over the skin, it is lanced by reason's knife under the guidance of science. After this manner, then, the growths of the wild wood are subdued, but all plants of the cultivated and fruit-bearing virtues have men's endeavours for sprouts, and for fruit their noble actions. Each of these the skilled husbanding of the soul fosters, and, so far as in it lies, brings to immortality by the care bestowed upon them.

XXX. The man of parts, therefore, has been clearly shown to be a tiller of the soil, and the worthless man a mere worker on it. And would that the earthly part of him had lent its strength to him as he worked on the soil, instead of actually diminishing the strength he has; for it is said, "it shall not add its strength, to give it thee" (Gen. iv. 12). His plight is that to which a man would come, if he were always eating and drinking, and never being filled, or indulging perpetually in sexual pleasures with his cravings after sexual intercourse continuing in full force. For weakness is brought

- ἀσθένειαν, ἰσχὺν δ' ἢ πλήρωσις ἀπεργάζεται· τὸ δ' ἀκόρεστον ὁ μετ' ἀφθονίας τῶν ἐπιτηδείων σὺν ἀκρασίᾳ δεινῇ λιμός ἐστιν· ἄθλιοι δ' ὦν μεστοὶ μὲν οἱ ὄγκοι, κεναὶ δ' αἱ ἐπιθυμίαι καὶ ἔτι διψῶσαι.
- 114 ἀλλὰ τοὺς ἐραστὰς ἐπιστήμης ἐν ᾧδῃ μεγάλη φησὶν ὅτι “ἀνεβίβασεν ἐπὶ τὴν ἰσχὺν τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἐψώμισε γεννήματα ἀγρῶν” (Deut. xxxii. 13), δηλῶν ὅτι ὁ μὲν ἄθεος ἀτυχεῖ τοῦ τέλους, ἵνα μᾶλλον ὀδυνᾶται, μὴ προστιθεμένης ἰσχύος οἷς ἐνεργεῖ, τοῦναντίον δ' ὑφαίρουμένης, οἱ δὲ μετιόντες ἀρετὴν ὑπεράνω τῶν ὅσα γεώδη καὶ θνητὰ ἰστάμενοι τοῦ κράτους αὐτῶν κατὰ πολλὴν περιουσίαν ἀλογοῦσιν, ἅτε ἡγεμόνι χρησάμενοι τῆς ἀνόδου θεῷ, ὃς καὶ τὰ γεννήματα τῶν ἀγρῶν εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν καὶ χρῆσιν ὠφελιμωτάτην αὐτοῖς ὀρέγει, τὰς μὲν ἀρετὰς ἀγροῖς, ἃ δ' ἀποκύουσι γεννήμασι παρὰ τὴν γένεσιν ἀπεικάζων· γίνεται μὲν γὰρ ἐκ φρονήσεως τὸ φρονεῖν, ἐκ δὲ σωφροσύνης τὸ σωφρονεῖν, ἐκ δὲ εὐσεβείας τὸ εὐσεβεῖν, καὶ ἀφ' ἐκάστης τῶν ἄλλων τὸ κατ' αὐτὴν ἐνέργημα.
- 115 XXXI. ταῦτα δὲ ψυχῆς τροφαὶ κυρίως εἰσὶ τῆς θηλάζειν ἱκανῆς, ὡς ὁ νομοθέτης φησί, “μέλι ἐκ πέτρας καὶ ἔλαιον ἐκ στερεᾶς πέτρας” (ib.), πέτραν τὴν στερεὰν καὶ ἀδιάκοπον ἐμφαίνων σοφίαν θεοῦ, τὴν τροφὸν καὶ τιθηνοκόμον καὶ κουροτρόφον τῶν ἀφθάρτου διαίτης ἐφιμεμένων.
- 116 αὕτη γὰρ οἶα μήτηρ τῶν ἐν κόσμῳ γενομένη τὰς

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 113-116

about by emptiness, and strength by fullness ; and insatiability is the hunger that is experienced when an abundant supply of food is combined with dire intemperance : and those are in wretched case whose carcasses are full, while their appetites are empty and still athirst. But of the lovers of knowledge he says in the Great Song that " He caused them to mount over the strength of the earth, and fed them with the products of the fields " (Deut. xxxii. 13), showing that the godless man misses his goal, to the end that he may suffer the greater pain through strength not being added to, but on the contrary taken away by, his activities, while those who follow after virtue, raised high above all that is earthly and mortal, are abundantly able to disregard the power wielded by these things, seeing that they have God to guide their ascent, who extends to them for use and enjoyment and highest benefit the very products of the fields. He likens virtues to fields, and what they yield to products. He chooses the word " products " because he is thinking of production : for out of good sense is produced sensible conduct, out of moderation modest behaviour, out of piety pious demeanour, and from each of the other virtues, the activity that corresponds to it. XXXI. These " products " are nourishment in the strict meaning of the word, supplied by the soul that is able, as the lawgiver says, to " suck honey out of the rock and oil out of the hard rock " (ibid.). He uses the word " rock " to express the solid and indestructible wisdom of God, which feeds and nurses and rears to sturdiness all who yearn after imperishable sustenance. For this divine wisdom has appeared as mother of all that are in the world,

- τροφὰς ἐξ ἑαυτῆς εὐθύς ἤνεγκε τοῖς ἀποκυηθεῖσιν· ἀλλ' οὐχ ἅπαντα τροφῆς θείας ἠξιώθη, τὰ δ' ὅσα τῶν ἐκγόνων ἐπάξια τῶν γεννησάντων εὐρίσκετο· πολλὰ γὰρ ἔσθ' ἃ λιμὸς ἀρετῆς, ὁ τοῦ περὶ τὰ
- 117 σιτία καὶ ποτὰ σχετλιώτερος, διέφθειρε. φέρεται δ' ἡ τῆς θείας σοφίας πηγὴ τοτὲ μὲν ἡρεμαιοτέρῳ καὶ πραοτέρῳ ρεύματι, τοτὲ δὲ αὖ μετ' ὀξυτέρου τοῦ τάχους καὶ πλείονος φορᾶς τε καὶ ρύμης· ὅταν μὲν οὖν ἡρέμα κατέρχηται, μέλιτος γλυκαίνει τὸν τρόπον, ὅταν δὲ μετ' ὠκύτητος, ἀθρόα
- 118 ὕλη καθάπερ ἔλαιον ψυχικοῦ γίνεται φωτός. τὴν πέτραν ταύτην ἐτέρωθι συνωνυμία χρώμενος καλεῖ
- [214] μάννα, τὸν πρεσβύτατον | τῶν ὄντων λόγον θεῖον, ὃς ὀνομάζεται τὸ γενικώτατον τί, ἀφ' οὗ δύο ἐγκρίδες, ἡ μὲν ἐκ μέλιτος, ἡ δὲ ἐξ ἐλαίου, γίνονται, τουτέστιν ἀγωγαὶ δύο σφόδρα ἀδιάκριτοι καὶ σπουδῆς ἄξιοι, κατ' ἀρχὰς μὲν γλυκύτητα ἐμποιοῦσαι τῶν ἐπιστήμης θεωρημάτων, αὐθις δὲ καὶ φῶς τηλαυγέστατον ἀπαστράπτουσαι τοῖς μὴ ἀψικόρως κραταιῶς δὲ καὶ παγίως ἐξ ἀδιαστάτου καὶ συνεχοῦς ἐπιμονῆς ἐλλαμβανομένοις ὧν ἐρῶσιν. οὗτοι μὲν οὖν, ὡς ἔφην, “ ἐπὶ τὴν ἰσχὺν τῆς γῆς ἀναβιβάζονται ” (Deut. xxxii. 13).
- 119 XXXII. Τῷ δὲ ἀθέῳ Κάιν οὐδὲν ἡ γῆ τῶν εἰς εὐτονίαν προστίθησι, καίτοι μηδὲν ἕξω τῶν περὶ αὐτὴν πραγματευομένῳ. διὸ καὶ κατ' ἀκόλουθον “ στένων καὶ τρέμων ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ” εὐρίσκεται (Gen. iv. 12), τουτέστι λύπη καὶ φόβῳ χρώμενος.

<sup>a</sup> Or “ Reason.”

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 495.

<sup>c</sup> Literally “ trainings,” “ leadings.”

affording to her offspring, as soon as they are born, the nourishment which they require from her own breasts. But not all her offspring are deemed meet for divine food, but such as are found worthy of their parents; for many of them fall victims to the famine of virtue, a famine more cruel than that of eatables and drinkables. The fountain of the divine wisdom runs sometimes with a gentler and more quiet stream, at other times more swiftly and with a fuller and stronger current. When it runs down gently, it sweetens much as honey does; when it runs swiftly down, it comes in full volume as material for lighting up the soul, even as oil does a lamp. In another place he uses a synonym for this rock and calls it "manna." Manna is the divine word,<sup>a</sup> eldest of all existences, which bears the most comprehensive name of "Somewhat." Out of it are made two cakes,<sup>b</sup> the one of honey, the other of oil. These are two inseparable and all-important stages in education,<sup>c</sup> at the outset causing a sweetness to flow from what knowledge opens, and afterwards causing a most brilliant light to flash from them on those who handle in no fickle and perfunctory way the subjects which they love, but lay hold of them strongly and firmly with a persistence that knows no slackness or intermission. These, as I have said, "are caused to rise up over the strength of the earth" (Deut. xxxii. 13).

XXXII. To the godless Cain, on the other hand, the earth affords nothing that contributes to healthy vigour, in spite of his being occupied with nothing beyond the concerns of earth. It is a natural consequence of this that he is found "groaning and trembling upon the earth" (Gen. iv. 12), that is to

- τοιούτος δ' ὁ φαῦλος κακοδαίμονος βίος, τῶν τεττάρων παθῶν τὰ ὀδυνηρότερα ἀποκεκληρωμένος
 φόβον τε καὶ λύπην, τὴν μὲν τοῦ στένειν, τὸν δὲ
 τοῦ τρέμειν συνώνυμον· ἀνάγκη γὰρ ἢ παρεῖναι τι
 κακὸν ἢ μέλλειν γε τῷ τοιούτῳ· τοῦ μὲν οὖν
 μέλλοντος ἢ προσδοκία φόβον, τοῦ δὲ παρόντος ἢ 120 χρήσις λύπην ἐγέννησεν. ἀλλ' ὁ γε μετιῶν ἀρετὴν
 ἐν εὐπαθείαις ἀναλογούσαις ἐξετάζεται· ἢ γὰρ περιπεποιήται τὰγαθὸν ἢ περιποιήσεται· τὸ μὲν
 οὖν ἔχειν ἀποτελεῖ χαρὰν, κτημάτων τὸ κάλλιστον,
 τὸ δὲ σχήσειν προσδοκᾶν τὴν τροφήν φιλαρέτων
 ψυχῶν ἐλπίδα, δι' ἣν ὄκνον μεθιέμενοι σὺν αὐτο-
 κελεύστῳ ἐτοιμότητι πρὸς τὰ καλὰ τῶν ἔργων 121 ἀπαντῶμεν. ἢ μὲν οὖν ἀποκεκύηκε δικαιοσύνη ψυχῇ γενεὰν ἄρρενα, τὸν δίκαιον λογισμὸν, ταύτης
 τὰ λυπηρὰ πάντα ἐξώκισται. μαρτυρήσει δ' ἡ Νῶε· γένεσις—ὁ ἐρμηνεύεται δίκαιος—ἐφ' οὗ λέγεται· “ οὗτος διαναπαύσει ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων ἡμῶν καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν λυπῶν τῶν χειρῶν ἡμῶν καὶ
 ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἧς κατηράσατο κύριος ὁ θεός ” 122 (Gen. v. 29). ἐέφυκε γὰρ ἡ δικαιοσύνη πρῶτον
 μὲν ἀνάπαυλαν ποιεῖν ἀντὶ καμάτου τὰ μεθόρια
 κακίας καὶ ἀρετῆς ἐξαδιαφοροῦσα, πλούτον καὶ
 δόξαν καὶ ἀρχὰς καὶ τιμὰς καὶ ὅσα τούτων ἀδελφά,
 περὶ ἃ πραγματεύεται τὸ πλεῖστον ἀνθρώπων
 γένος, ἔπειτα λύπας ἀναιρεῖν, αἱ συνίστανται κατὰ
 τὰς ἐξ ἡμῶν αὐτῶν ἐνεργείας—οὐ γάρ, ὡς ἔνιοι
 τῶν ἀσεβῶν, τὸν θεὸν αἴτιον κακῶν φησι Μωυσῆς,

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 495.

say, a victim to fear and grief. Such is the sorry life of the wretched man, a life to which have been allotted the more grievous of the four passions, fear and grief, the one identical with groaning, the other with trembling. For such a life some evil thing must either be present or on its way. The expectation of that which is on its way begets fear, the experience of that which is present begets grief. But the man that follows after virtue is sure to be in corresponding states of blessedness<sup>a</sup>; he has either won the prize or is on the way to win it; then to have it produces joy, fairest of possessions; to be expecting that you will reach it produces that food of souls that love virtue, hope, which makes us cast away hesitation, and essay with hearty alacrity all noble deeds. When righteousness has, for some soul, given birth to a male progeny in the shape of righteous reasoning, from that soul all painful things are forthwith banished. Our witness for this shall be the birth of Noah. "Noah" means righteous, and it is said of him, "This man shall cause us to rest from our works and from the pains of our hands and from the earth which the Lord God hath cursed" (Gen. v. 29). For it is the nature of justice in the first place to create rest in the place of toil, owing to its complete indifference to objects on the border-land between vice and virtue, such as wealth, fame, official posts, honours, and everything of that sort, with which the majority of mankind are busy. It is its nature, in the next place, to abolish griefs which take shape under the action of things that we do entirely of our own motion. For Moses does not, as some impious people do, say that God is the author of ills. Nay, he says that "our own

ἀλλὰ τὰς ἡμετέρας χεῖρας, συμβολικῶς τὰ ἡμέτερα
 παριστὰς ἐγχειρήματα καὶ τὰς ἐκουσίους τῆς διανοίας πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον τροπὰς—. XXXIII. ἐπὶ πᾶσι μέντοι “ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἧς κατηράσατο κύριος
 123 ὁ θεὸς ” διαναπαύειν· αὕτη δὲ ἐστὶ κακία, | ἢ ταῖς
 [215] τῶν ἀφρόνων ἐνίδρυται ψυχαῖς, ἧς καθάπερ νόσου βαρείας ἀποτροπὴ ὁ δίκαιος εὐρίσκεται πανακειάς τυχῶν δικαιοσύνης.

“Ὅταν μέντοι διώσθηται τὰ κακά, χαρᾶς ἀνα-πίμπλαται, ὡσπερ ἡ Σάρρα· φησὶ γάρ· “ γέλωτά μοι ἐποίησε κύριος ” καὶ προστίθησιν· “ ὅς γὰρ
 ἂν ἀκούσῃ, συγχαρεῖταί μοι ” (Gen. xxi. 6).
 124 δημιουργὸς γὰρ ὁ θεὸς σπουδαίου γέλωτος καὶ
 χαρᾶς ἐστίν, ὡστε οὐ γενέσεως πλάσμα τὸν Ἰσαάκ, ἔργον δὲ τοῦ ἀγενήτου νομιστέον· εἰ γὰρ γέλως
 μὲν Ἰσαάκ ἐρμηνεύεται, γέλωτος δὲ ποιητῆς ὁ
 θεὸς κατὰ τὴν Σάρρας ἀψευδῆ μαρτυρίαν, καὶ τοῦ Ἰσαάκ ὀρθότατα λέγοιτ’ ἂν εἶναι πατήρ. μετα-δίδωσι δὲ καὶ τῷ σοφῷ τῆς ἰδίου κλήσεως Ἀβραάμ,
 ᾧ καὶ τὸ χαίρειν, ἐπιγέννημα σοφίας, ἐκτεμῶν
 λύπην δεδώρηται. εἴ τις οὖν ἰκανὸς ἐστὶν ἀκούσαι
 τῆς θεοῦ ποιητικῆς, γέγηθε μὲν ἐξ ἀνάγκης αὐτός,
 συγχαίρει δὲ καὶ τοῖς ἀκροατικῶς πρότερον 125 ἐσχηκόσιν. ἐν δὲ τῇ τοῦ θεοῦ ποιητικῇ μύθου
 μὲν πλάσμα οὐδὲν εὐρήσεις, τοὺς δὲ ἀληθείας ἀσινεῖς κανόνας ἅπαντας ἐστηλιτευμένους, οὐδ’
 αὖ τὰ φωνῆς μέτρα καὶ ῥυθμοὺς καὶ μέλη ἀκοᾶς
 διὰ μουσικῆς ψυχαγωγούντα, τὰ δὲ φύσεως αὐτῆς τελειότατα ἔργα τὴν ἴδιον εὐαρμοστίαν κεκληρω-
 μένα. καθάπερ δὲ ὁ νοῦς ἀκροατικῶς ἔχων τῶν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 495.

hands " cause them, figuratively describing in this way our own undertakings, and the spontaneous movement of our minds to what is wrong. XXXIII. But the crowning purport of righteousness is to give us full rest " from the earth which the Lord God hath cursed." By this is meant wickedness, which has set up its abode in the souls of the unwise, like some fell disease. Yet we may find in the righteous man a safeguard against it, for he has in his righteousness a sovereign remedy.

So when he has thus routed evil things, he is filled with joy, as Sarah was ; for she says, " the Lord hath made for me laughter," and goes on, " for whosoever shall hear, will rejoice with me " (Gen. xxi. 6). For God is the Creator of laughter that is good, and of joy, so that we must hold Isaac to be not a product of created beings, but a work of the uncreated One. For if " Isaac " means " laughter," and according to Sarah's unerring witness God is the Maker of laughter, God may with perfect truth be said to be Isaac's father. But he gives to Abraham, the wise one, a share in His own title, and by the excision of grief He has bestowed on him gladness, the offspring of wisdom. If, therefore, a man be capable of hearing the poetry which God makes, he is of necessity glad himself, and he rejoices with those who had an ear for it already. God is an author in whose works you will find no myth or fiction, but truth's inexorable rules all observed as though graven on stone. You will find no metres and rhythms and tuneful verses charming the ear with their music, but nature's own consummate works, which possess a harmony all their own. And even as the mind, with its ear tuned θεοῦ ποιημάτων χαίρει, οὕτως καὶ ὁ λόγος συνωδὸς ὢν τοῖς διανοίας ἐνθυμήμασι καὶ τρόπον τινα προσέχων αὐτοῖς ἐξ ἀνάγκης γέγηθε.

- 126 XXXIV. Δηλώσει δ' ὁ τῷ πανσόφῳ Μωυσεῖ δοθεὶς χρησμός, ἐν ᾧ περιέχεται ταῦτα· “οὐκ ἰδοῦ Ἰσαράων ὁ ἀδελφός σου, ὁ Λευίτης; ἐπίσταμαι ὅτι λαλήσει αὐτός σοι· καὶ ἰδοῦ αὐτὸς ἐξελεύσεται εἰς συνάντησίν σοι, καὶ ἰδὼν σε χαρήσεται ἐν ἑαυτῷ” (Exod. iv. 14). τὸν γὰρ προφορικὸν λόγον διανοίας ἀδελφὸν ὄντα ἐπίστασθαί φησιν ὁ δημιουργὸς ὅτι λαλεῖ· πεποίηκε γὰρ αὐτὸν ὡσπερ ὄργανον τοῦ συγκρίματος ἡμῶν
- 127 παντὸς ἕναρθρον ἡχὴν. οὗτος ὁ λόγος ἐμοί τε καὶ σοὶ καὶ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις φωνεῖ καὶ λαλεῖ καὶ ἐρμηνεύει τὰ ἐνθυμήματα καὶ προσεξέρχεται γε ὑπαντησόμενος οἷς ἢ διάνοια λελόγισται. ἐπειδὴν γὰρ ὁ νοῦς ἐξαναστάς πρὸς τι τῶν οἰκείων ὀρμὴν λάβῃ ἢ κινηθεὶς ἔνδοθεν ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ ἢ δεξάμενος ἀπὸ τῶν ἐκτὸς τύπους διαφέροντας, κυφορεῖ τε καὶ ὠδίνει τὰ νοήματα· καὶ βουλόμενος ἀποτεκεῖν ἀδυνατεῖ, μέχρις ἂν ἢ διὰ γλώττης καὶ τῶν ἄλλων
- 128 φωνητηρίων ὀργάνων ἡχὴ δεξαμένη μαίας τρόπον
[216] εἰς φῶς προαγάγῃ τὰ νοήματα. φωνὴ | δὲ τηλαυγεστάτη νοημάτων ἐστὶν αὕτη· καθάπερ γὰρ τὰ ἀποκείμενα ἐν σκοτῷ κέκρυπται, ἕως ἂν ἐπιλάμψαν φῶς αὐτὰ δεῖξῃ, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον τὰ ἐνθυμήματα ἐν ἀοράτῳ χωρίῳ, διανοία, ταμιεύεται, μέχρις ἂν οἷα φῶς ἐναυγάσασα ἢ φωνὴ πάντ'
- 129 ἐκκαλύψῃ. XXXV. παγκάλως οὖν εἴρηται, ὅτι

<sup>a</sup> Or “different.”

<sup>b</sup> Or “gives voice to thoughts like a far-shining light.”

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 125-129

to the poems of God, is glad, so the speech, being in tune with the conceptions of the understanding, and, if we may so speak, lending its ear to them, cannot but rejoice.

XXXIV. This will be made clear by the divine communication to Moses, the man of large wisdom. It contains these words: "Lo, is not Aaron thy brother, the Levite? I know that he will speak for thee; and lo! he shall come forth to meet thee, and on seeing thee he shall rejoice in himself" (Exod. iv. 14). The Creator says that He knows that the uttered word, brother as it is of the mind, can speak; for He has made it, as it were, an instrument of music, to be an articulate utterance of our whole complex being. This "speech," both for me and for thee and for all men, sounds and speaks and interprets our thoughts, and more than this, goes out to meet the reasonings of the understanding. For when the mind bestirs itself and receives an impulse towards some object belonging to its own sphere, either moved from within itself or experiencing marked <sup>a</sup> impressions from external objects, it becomes pregnant and is in travail with its thoughts. It wishes to be delivered of them and cannot, until the sound produced by the tongue and the other organs of speech takes the thoughts into its hands like a midwife, and brings them forth to the light. And such sound is a most far-shining utterance of our thoughts. <sup>b</sup> For just as things laid up in darkness are hidden, until a light shine on them and show them, in the same way conceptions are stored in the understanding, a place that is out of sight, until the voice illumine them like a light and uncover them all. XXXV. Right finely then is it said that speech goes forth ἐξέρχεται ὁ λόγος τοῖς νοήμασιν ὑπαντησόμενος, καὶ ἐπιτρέχει γε σπουδάζων καταλαβεῖν αὐτά, διὰ

PHILO

 τὸν τοῦ μηνῦσαι πόθον. ἐκάστω γὰρ τὸ ἴδιον
 ἔργον ποθεινότατον· ἴδιον δὲ λόγου τὸ λέγειν, πρὸς
 ὃ οἰκειώσει φυσικῇ τινι σπεύδει. γέγηθε δὲ καὶ χαίρει, ὅταν ὡσπερ ἐναυγασθεῖς ἴδη καὶ καταλάβῃ
 τὸν νοῦν τοῦ δηλουμένου πράγματος ἄκρως· τότε
 γὰρ περιδραξάμενος ἄριστος ἔρμηνεὺς γίνεται.
 130 τοὺς γοῦν μὴ πάνυ τῶν νοημάτων ἐν ταῖς τοῦ
 λέγειν διεξόδοις περικρατοῦντας ἀδολέσχους καὶ
 ἀπεραντολόγους ὄντας παραιτούμεθα, κενὰ καὶ
 μακρὰς ἔτι δὲ ἀψύχους κυρίως εἰπεῖν ῥήσεις
 συνείροντας. ἀσχημονῶν οὖν ὁ τῶν τοιούτων
 λόγος δικαίως ἂν στένοι, ὥστε ἔμπαλιν χαίρειν
 ἀναγκαῖον τὸν ἐκ περισκέψεως τῶν ἐνθυμημάτων
 ἱκανῶς ἐπὶ τὴν ὦν εἶδε καὶ ὦν δυνατῶς κατέλαβε 131 μὴνυσιν ἐλθόντα. γνωρίζεται δὲ τοῦτο σχεδὸν
 ἅπασιν ἐκ τῆς καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν πείρας· ὅταν
 μὲν γὰρ ἄκρως εἰδῶμεν ὃ λέγομεν, χαίρων καὶ
 γεγηθῶς ὁ λόγος ἐμφαντικωτάτων καὶ κυρίων
 ὀνομάτων πλουτεῖ, οἷς κατὰ πολλὴν περιουσίαν
 εὐτρόχως καὶ ἀπταιστως ἔτι δὲ ἐναργῶς καὶ ἀνυσίμως τὸ δηλούμενον παρίστησιν· ὅταν δὲ τοῦ
 νοήματος ἐπαμφοτερίζῃ κατάληψις, ὑπὸ δεινῆς ἀπορίας προσεχῶν καὶ εὐθυβόλων ὀνομάτων παραπαίων ἀκυρολογεῖ· διόπερ αὐτός τε ἐν ἀηδία καὶ

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 129-131

to meet the thoughts, yea runs toward them in its anxiety to grasp them, owing to its desire to interpret them. For to each one his proper work is most an object of desire, and speaking is the proper work of speech, and so it hastens to it, taught by nature to treat it as its own. And it rejoices and is glad, when, as though illumined, it sees and fully apprehends the sense of the matter shown to it; for then it lays hands upon it, and gets hold of it, and becomes a perfect interpreter of it. At all events, we avoid people who, in their verbal expositions, show a lack of complete mastery of the ideas to be expressed. We regard them as prating fellows who never cease talking, stringing together idle, long, and (what is worse) soulless harangues—to give them the epithet they deserve. The speech of such people, disgracing itself as it does, might rightly groan, and so, on the other hand, the speech of that man needs must rejoice, who, after consideration of the mental conceptions, has come adequately equipped to the setting forth of things which he has seen, and of thoughts which he has effectively grasped. Almost all of us are familiar with this from everyday experience. When we perfectly know the thing we are saying, our speech is glad and joyous, and is rich in words of the utmost vividness and fitness, and using these in ample measure it runs along without hitch or stumbling; and it succeeds, moreover, in presenting the theme which it is expounding clearly and to good purpose. But when apprehension of the thought to be expressed lacks definiteness, our speech suffers from a grievous dearth of apt terms, strikes a false note, and uses words in an improper sense. The result is that not only is our speech itself plunged ἄση περιρρέων καὶ πλανώμενος γίνεται τοὺς τε ἀκούοντας ἀντὶ τοῦ πείθειν τὰ ὦτα ἀλγεῖν ἀναγκάζει.

- 132 XXXVI. Μήτε δ' ὁ πᾶς λόγος ὑπαντάτω μήτε πᾶσι τοῖς ἐνθυμήμασιν, ἀλλ' ὁ τέλειος Ἀαρὼν τοῖς τοῦ τελειοτάτου Μωυσέως· ἐπεὶ τίνος ἕνεκα τῷ "ἰδοὺ Ἀαρὼν ὁ ἀδελφός σου" προσέθηκεν "ὁ Λευίτης", εἰ μὴ τοῦ διδάξαι χάριν, ὅτι μόνῳ τῷ Λευίτῃ καὶ ἱερεῖ καὶ σπουδαίῳ λόγῳ προσήκει μνηύειν τὰ ἐνθυμήματα ψυχῆς τελείας ὄντα
- 133 βλαστήματα; μὴ γάρ ποτε φαύλου λόγος ἔρμηνεύς γένοιτο δογμάτων θείων—τὸ γὰρ κάλλος αὐτῶν οἰκείοις μιάσμασιν αἰσχύνει—μηδ' ἔμπαλιν σπουδαίου προφορᾷ τὰ ἀκόλαστα καὶ αἰσχροῦ μνηύοιτο, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ τὴν τῶν ἀγίων διήγησιν
- 134 ἱεροὶ καὶ ἅγιοι ποιείσθωσαν λόγοι. ἐν τιμῇ τῶν [217] εὐνομωτάτων πόλεων ἔθος εἶναί | φασὶ τοιοῦτον· ἐπειδὴν τις ἢ βουλῇ ἢ δῆμῳ τῶν μὴ βεβιωκότων ὀρθῶς ἐπιχειρῇ γνώμην εἰσηγεῖσθαι, κωλύεται μὲν αὐτὸς δι' ἑαυτοῦ τοῦτο πράττειν, ἀναγκάζεται δὲ πρὸς τῶν ἀρχόντων ἀνενεγκεῖν τὴν γνώμην ἐνὶ τῶν καλῶν καὶ ἀγαθῶν ἀνδρῶν· εἴτ' ἐκεῖνος ἀναστὰς ἂ ἤκουσε διηγεῖται, ἀπερραμμένου τὸ στόμα τοῦ διδάξαντος ὁ ἐξ ὑπογυίου μαθητῆς ἀναφανείς, καὶ ἀλλοτρίας εὐρέσεις ἐπιδείκνυται, οὐδ' ἀκροατοῦ τάξιν ἢ θεατοῦ τὸν ἐπινενοηκότα λαχεῖν ἀξιώσας. οὕτως οὐδὲ ὠφελήθηναί τινες πρὸς ἀδίκων ἀξιοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ τῆς γενησομένης

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 495.

into distress and discomfort, as it flounders about not knowing where it is, but also instead of convincing the audience it makes their ears ache.

XXXVI. But neither must all speech without exception meet thoughts, nor must it meet all thoughts without exception, but the perfect Aaron must meet the thoughts of the most perfect Moses. With what other object, pray, did he add "the Levite" to the words "lo! Aaron thy brother," save with that of teaching that only to the Levite, and priest, and speech that is in deep earnest, is it fitting to reveal the thoughts, seeing that they are blooms of a perfect mind? Never may the speech of a worthless man essay to interpret Divine ordinances. He disgraces their beauty by his own pollutions. On the other hand, let base and licentious ideas never be set forth by the lips of a man of worth, but let holy things always be expounded by sacred and holy speech. It is said that in a certain unusually well governed city<sup>a</sup> the following custom prevails. When one of those who have not led a respectable life takes in hand to introduce a proposal to senate or people, he is not allowed to do so in his own person, but is required by the magistrates to impart the substance of his motion to some man of unblemished character. Thereupon this man rises and reproduces what has been said to him. Appearing as pupil, for the nonce, of the man who instructed him, this gentleman's mouth having been sewn up, he exhibits what another has devised, and does not regard the man who hit upon the idea as fit to occupy even the position of listener or looker-on. So far do some carry their unwillingness even to derive benefit from bad men, holding the harm arising from the shame ὠφελείας μείζον τὸ ἐκ τῆς παρακολουθούσης

βλαβερὸν αἰσχύνης νομίζουσι.

- 135 XXXVII. Τοῦτο τὸ δίδαγμα Μωυσῆς ὁ ἱερώ-τατός πως ἔοικεν ἀναδιδάξαι· τοιοῦτον γὰρ ἔστι
τὸ Ἄαρὼν τὸν Λευίτην ὑπαντᾶν τῷ ἀδελφῷ Μωυσεῖ καὶ ἰδόντα χαίρειν ἐν ἑαυτῷ (Exod. iv.
14). τὸ δὲ ἐν ἑαυτῷ χαίρειν ἐμφαίνει δίχα τοῦ λεχθέντος ἤδη καὶ πολιτικώτερον δόγμα,<sup>1</sup> δηλοῦν-
τος τοῦ νομοθέτου τὴν γνήσιον καὶ οἰκειοτάτην 136 ἀνθρώπῳ χαράν. κυρίως γὰρ οὔτε ἐπὶ χρημάτων
ἢ κτημάτων περιουσία οὔτε ἐπὶ δόξης λαμπρότητι
οὔδὲ συνόλως ἐπὶ τινι τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀψύχων τε
ὄντων καὶ ἀβεβαίων καὶ ἐξ ἑαυτῶν τὰς φθορὰς δεχομένων χαίρειν ἔνεστι, καὶ μὴν οὔδὲ ἐπὶ ῥώμῃ
καὶ εὐτονίᾳ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις σώματος πλεονεκτήμασιν, ἃ καὶ τῶν φαυλοτάτων ἔστι κοινὰ καὶ τοῖς
ἔχουσι. πολλάκις ὄλεθρον ἀπαραίτητον ἤνεγκεν.
137 ἐπεὶ οὖν ἐν τοῖς τῆς ψυχῆς μόνοις ἀγαθοῖς ἢ ἀνόθευτος χαρὰ καὶ ἀκιβδήλευτος εὐρίσκεται, ἐν
ἑαυτῷ δὴ πᾶς σοφὸς χαίρει, οὐκ ἐν τοῖς περὶ
αὐτόν· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἐν ἑαυτῷ διανοίας εἰσὶν ἀρεταί, ἐφ' αἷς ἄξιον σεμνύνεσθαι, τὰ δὲ περὶ αὐτόν ἢ ἢ εὐπάθεια σώματος ἢ ἢ τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀφθονία, ἐφ'
οἷς οὐ μεγαλαυχητέον.
138 XXXVIII. Ἐπιδεδειχότες οὖν, ὡς ἐνῆν, διὰ μάρτυρος ἀψευδεστάτου Μωυσέως ὅτι σοφοῦ τὸ
χαίρειν ἴδιον, αὐθις ἐπιδείξωμεν ὅτι καὶ τὸ ἐλπί-

<sup>1</sup> πολιτικοῦ ἕτερον conj. Trs. See App. pp. 495, 496.

<sup>a</sup> Or "lifeless."

entailed to be greater than the advantage that would accrue to them.

XXXVII. This lesson would seem to have been taught by the most holy prophet Moses. It is taught by the fact of Aaron the Levite meeting his brother Moses and on seeing him rejoicing in himself (Exod. iv. 14). The words "rejoicing in himself," apart from what I have already remarked about them, bring out a truth of yet greater importance for unselfish service. The lawgiver is directing attention to the kind of joy that is genuine and most fully proper to man. For strictly speaking there is no ground for rejoicing over abundance of wealth and possessions, or over brilliant position, or, generally, over anything outside us, since all these things are soulless,<sup>a</sup> and insecure, and have the germs of decay in themselves. Nor indeed is there ground for rejoicing over strength and robust health and other bodily advantages. Not only have we these in common with the most worthless of men, but many a time they bring inexorable ruin on those who have them. Since, then, joy that is free from all sham and counterfeit is found only in the good things of the soul, it is "in himself," not in the accidents of his position, that every wise man rejoices; for the things that are "in himself" are excellences of mind, on which we have a right to pride ourselves, but the accidents of our position are either bodily well-being or plenty of external advantages, and of these we must not boast.

XXXVIII. Having shown, then, as far as in us lay, citing in the person of Moses a most truthful witness, that joy is peculiar to the wise man, let us show in the next place that hope is so also, calling

- ζειν, οὐχ ἑτέρω χρώμενοι μάρτυρι. τὸν γὰρ τοῦ
 Σῆθ υἱὸν ὄνομα Ἐνώς—ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ <ἀν-
 [218] θρωπος> — * * * ἐλπίς. “οὗτος ἤλπισε | πρῶτον”
 φησὶν “ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸ ὄνομα κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ”
 (Gen. iv. 26), λέγων ὑγιῶς· ἀνθρώπῳ γὰρ τῷ γε
 πρὸς ἀλήθειαν τί ἂν γένοιτο οἰκειότερον ἐλπίδος
 καὶ προσδοκίας κτήσεως ἀγαθῶν παρὰ τοῦ μόνου
 φιλοδώρου θεοῦ; τοῦτ’ ἐστίν, εἰ δεῖ τάληθές
 εἰπεῖν, ἢ μόνῃ κυρίως γένεσις ἀνθρώπων, ὡς τῶν
 μὴ ἐλπίζόντων ἐπὶ θεὸν λογικῆς φύσεως οὐ 139 μεμοιραμένων. διὸ καὶ προειπὼν ἐπὶ τοῦ Ἐνώς
 ὅτι “οὗτος ἤλπισεν ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸ ὄνομα κυρίου
 τοῦ θεοῦ,” ῥητῶς ἐπιφέρει· “αὕτη <ἡ> βίβλος
 γενέσεως ἀνθρώπων” (Gen. v. 1), σπουδαιολογῶν· ἐγγράφεται γὰρ τῇ θεοῦ βίβλῳ, ὅτι μόνος εὐελπίς ἀνθρωπος, ὥστε κατὰ τὰ ἐναντία ὁ δύσ-ελπίς οὐκ ἀνθρωπος. ὅρος οὖν τοῦ μὲν συγκρίματος ἡμῶν ζῶον λογικὸν θνητὸν ἐστὶ, τοῦ δὲ
 κατὰ Μωυσῆν ἀνθρώπου διάθεσις ψυχῆς ἐπὶ τὸν 140 ὄντως ὄντα θεὸν ἐλπίζουσης. ἀστεῖοι μὲν οὖν χαρὰν καὶ ἐλπίδα κλῆρον λαχόντες εὐδαίμονα ἢ ἐχέτωσαν ἢ προσδοκάτωσαν πάντως ἀγαθὰ· φαῦλοι
 δ’, ὧν Κάιν ἐστὶ θιασώτης, ἐν λύπαις καὶ φόβοις ὄντες ἢ μετουσίαν ἢ προσδοκίαν κακῶν ἀργαλεω-τάτην μερίδα καρπούσθωσαν, ἐπὶ μὲν τοῖς ἐν χερσὶν ὀδυνηροῖς στένοντες, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖς προσδοκωμένοις φοβεροῖς τρέμοντές τε καὶ φρίττοντες (cf. Gen. iv. 12).
 141 XXXIX. Ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ἀρκοῦντως λελέχθω·
 τὰ δ’ ἐξῆς ἐρευνήσωμεν. “καὶ εἶπε” φησὶ

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 138-141

in the same witness as before. For the son of Seth named Enos, which means "man" [was distinguished by] hope. "This man," it says, "first hoped to call on the name of the Lord God" (Gen. iv. 26). It is a sound statement. For what could be found more in keeping with one who is truly a man than a hope and expectation of obtaining good things from the only bountiful God? This is, to tell the truth, men's only birth in the strict sense, since those who do not set their hope on God have no part in a rational nature. Accordingly having first said of Enos "this man hoped (and ventured) to call on the name of the Lord God," he adds expressly, "this is the book of the nativity of men" (Gen. v. 1.). In saying this he utters an important truth, for an entry is hereby made in the book of God to the effect that man only is hopeful. The converse therefore is true, that he that is despondent is not man. The definition, then, of our complex being is "a living creature endowed with reason subject to death," but that of man as Moses portrays him "a soul so constituted as to hope on the God that really is." Well, then, let goodly men, having obtained joy and hope as their happy portion, either enjoy or at all events expect good things: but let worthless men, of whose company Cain is a member, living in constant pains and terrors, gather in a most grievous harvest, in the experience or expectation of evils, groaning over the painful case in which they are already, and trembling and shuddering at the fearful things which they expect (cf. Gen. iv. 12).

XXXIX. Let what we have said on this passage suffice: let us investigate the words that follow. They are these: "And Cain said to the Lord, The

“Καὶν πρὸς κύριον Μείζων ἢ αἰτία μου τοῦ ἀφεθῆναι” (Gen. iv. 13). τοῦθ’ οἷόν ἐστιν, ἀπὸ τῶν ὁμοίων φανείται. εἰ θαλαττεύουσαν ναῦν ἀπολείποι κυβερνήτης, ἄρ’ οὐκ ἀνάγκη τὰ περὶ πλοῦν τῇ νηὶ διαμαρτάνεσθαι; τί δ’, εἰ τέθριππον ἡνίοχος ἐν ἵπποδρομίας ἀγῶνι, οὐκ ἀναγκαῖον ἄτακτον καὶ πλημμελῆ τὸν δρόμον γίνεσθαι τῷ τεθρίππῳ; τί δ’, ὅταν ἀπολειφθῆ πόλις πρὸς ἀρχόντων ἢ νόμων—ἐν ἄρχουσι δὲ γράφονται δήπου καὶ νόμοι—οὐκ ἀναρχία καὶ ἀνομία, κακοῖς μεγίστοις, ἢ πόλις ἐκείνη διαφθείρεται; καὶ μὴν σῶμα μὲν ἀπουσία ψυχῆς, ψυχὴ δὲ ἀπουσία λογισμοῦ, λογισμὸς δὲ ἐνδεία ἀρετῆς
 142 πέφυκε παραπόλλυσθαι. εἰ δ’ ἕκαστον ὧν εἶπον ζῆμῖα τοῖς ἀπολειφθεῖσι γίνεται πρὸς αὐτῶν, πόση τινὶ χρήσεσθαι κακοπραγία τοὺς ὑπὸ θεοῦ καταλειφθέντας γνωρίζομεν, οὓς ἀποστραφεῖς καθάπερ λιποτάκτας ἱερωτάτων θεσμῶν ἐξώρισεν ἀναξίους ἐπιστασίας καὶ ἀρχῆς τῆς ἑαυτοῦ δοκιμάσας; συνόλως γὰρ εἰδέναι χρή, ὅτι ὁ πρὸς τοῦ κρείττονος καὶ ὠφελουῦντος ἀφεθεῖς ἐν αἰτίαις καὶ ἐγκλήμασι μεγίστοις γίνεται. πότε γὰρ εἶποις ἂν τὸν ἄτεχνον μάλιστα βλάπτεσθαι; ἄρ’ οὐχ ὅταν πρὸς ἐπιστήμης κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς ἔαθῃ;
 143 πότε δὲ τὸν ἀμαθῆ καὶ λίαν ἀπαίδευτον; οὐχ ὅταν ἀπόλειψιν τὴν ἐπ’ αὐτῷ χρηματίσῃ διδα-
 [219] σκαλία | καὶ μάθησις; πότε δὲ τοὺς ἄφρονας κακοδαιμονίζομεν μᾶλλον; οὐχ ὅταν φρόνησι

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 486, note on De Cherubim 115.

charge to which abandonment exposes me is too great" (Gen. iv. 13). The character of this cry will appear from a comparison of like cases. If the helmsman should abandon a ship at sea, must not all arrangements for sailing the ship go wrong? Again, if a charioteer quit a horse-chariot during a race, does it not necessarily follow that the chariot's course will lose all order and direction? And again, when a city has been abandoned by rulers or laws—and of course rulers are living tables on which laws are inscribed<sup>a</sup>—does not that city become a prey to two very great evils, anarchy and lawlessness? Need I add that it is a law of nature that the body perishes if the soul quit it, and the soul if reason quit it, and reason if it be deprived of virtue? Now if each presence that I have named becomes an occasion of loss and damage to those abandoned by it, how great a disaster must we infer that those will experience who have been forsaken by God; men whom He rejects as deserters, false to the most sacred ordinances, and sends into banishment, having tested them and found them unworthy of His rule and governance? For, to say all in a word, it is certain that he who is left by a benefactor far greater than himself is involved in charges and accusations of the most serious kind. For when would you say that the unskilled man suffers the greatest harm? Would it not be when he is entirely let alone by science? When would you say it of the man that is unlearned and utterly uneducated? Would it not be when instruction and pupilage have executed a deed of abandonment<sup>b</sup> in his case? And when do we pronounce foolish people more than usually unhappy? Is it not when sound sense rejects them for

- αὐτοὺς εἰσάπαν ἀπόσῃται; πότε δὲ τοὺς ἀ-κολάστους ἢ ἀδίκους; οὐκ ἐπειδὰν σωφροσύνη καὶ δικαιοσύνη φυγὴν αἰδίου κατ' αὐτῶν ψηφίσωνται;
 πότε δὲ τοὺς ἀσεβεῖς; οὐχ ὅταν εὐσέβεια τῶν 144 ἰδίων ὀργίων ἀποσχοινίση; διό μοι δοκοῦσιν οἱ
 μὴ τελείως δυσκάθαρτοι εὐξασθαι ἂν κολασθῆναι
 μᾶλλον ἢ ἀφεθῆναι· ἢ μὲν γὰρ ἄφεςις αὐτοὺς
 ὥσπερ ἀνερμάτιστα καὶ ἀκυβέρνητα πλοῖα ῥᾶστα 145 ἀνατρέψει, ἢ δὲ κόλασις ἐπανορθώσεται. ἢ οὐκ
 ἀμείνους μὲν τῶν ἀπαιδαγωγῶν οἱ ὑπὸ παιδ-αγωγῶν ἐν οἷς ἀμαρτάνουσιν ἐπιπληττόμενοι, ἀμεί-νους δὲ τῶν ἀνεπιτιμῆτων οἱ ὑπὸ διδασκάλων ἐν
 οἷς περὶ τὰς τέχνας οὐ κατορθοῦσιν ὄνειδιζόμενοι, εὐτυχέστεροι δὲ καὶ κρείττους τῶν ἀνεπιτροπεύ-
 των νέων οἱ μάλιστα μὲν ἐπιστασίας καὶ ἀρχῆς ἀξιοθέντες φυσικῆς, ἢν οἱ γεννήσαντες ἐπὶ τέκνοις
 κεκλήρωνται, εἰ δὲ μὴ, δευτέρων γοῦν ἡγεμόνων ἐπιλαχόντες, οὓς ὀρφανίας ἔλεος ἐπιτρόπους εἴωθε χειροτονεῖν τὴν γονέων ἐν ἅπασι τοῖς συμφέρουσι
 τάξιν ἐκπλήσοντας;
- 146 XL. Ἰκετεύωμεν οὖν τὸν θεὸν οἱ συνειδήσει
 τῶν οἰκείων ἀδικημάτων ἐλεγχόμενοι, κολάσαι
 μᾶλλον ἡμᾶς ἢ παρεῖναι· παρεῖς μὲν γὰρ οὐκέτι
 τοῦ ἴλεω δούλους ἑαυτοῦ, γενέσεως δὲ τῆς ἀνηλεοῦς ἀπεργάσεται, κολάζων δὲ ἐπιεικῶς τε καὶ πράως ἅτε χρηστὸς ὢν ἐπανορθώσεται τὰ ἀμαρτή-ματα, τὸν σωφρονιστὴν ἔλεγχον, τὸν ἑαυτοῦ λόγον,
 εἰς τὴν διάνοιαν ἐκπέμψας, δι' οὗ δυσωπήσας καὶ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

good and all? When do we so regard the licentious or the unjust? Is it not when self-mastery and justice issue against them a sentence of eternal banishment? When the irreligious? Is it not when religion excludes them from her own sacred rites? This being so, it seems to me that those who are not utterly beyond cleansing would pray to be punished rather than be let go; for dismissal will most easily overturn them like vessels without ballast or helmsman, while punishment will set them up again. Are not boys who are rebuked by their slave-tutors when they do wrong better than those who are without tutors? Are not apprentices<sup>a</sup> who are found fault with by their masters when they do not succeed in the craft they are learning better than those who have no one to chide them? Are not youths without someone to direct them inferior to, and less well off than, those who, best of all, have been vouchsafed the natural direction and guidance which has been assigned to parents over their children, or, failing that, have been placed under the next-best sort of guides, whom pity for fatherless children so often appoints<sup>a</sup> to fill the place of parents in all that is for their good?

XL. Let us then, who are convicted by consciousness of our own acts of unrighteousness, beseech God to punish us rather than let us alone. For if He lets us alone, He will make us servants, not as before, of Himself the gracious One, but of the creation that has no pity; but if He punishes us, He will of His gracious goodness gently and kindly correct our faults, by sending forth into our mind His own word, that reproves and chastens, by means of which He will upbraid it, and make it ashamed of its errors,

- ὄνειδίσας περὶ ὧν ἐπλημμέλησεν αὐτὴν ἰάσεται.
- 147 διὰ τοῦτο “πάνθ’ ὅσα ἂν εὕξηται χήρα καὶ ἐκβεβλημένη κατὰ τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτῆς” φησὶν ὁ νομοθέτης μενεῖν αὐτῇ (Num. xxx. 10). τὸν μὲν γὰρ θεὸν ἄνδρα καὶ πατέρα τῶν ὄλων σπορὰν καὶ γένεσιν ἀπάντων παρεχόμενον ἐνδίκως φήσομεν, διάνοιαν δὲ ἐκβεβλησθαι καὶ χήραν θεοῦ, ἥτις ἢ γονὰς θείας οὐ παρεδέξατο ἢ παραδεξαμένη ἔκου-
- 148 σίως αὐθις ἐξήμβλωσε. τοιγαροῦν ὅσα ἂν ὀρίσῃται, καθ’ ἑαυτῆς ὀριεῖται, καὶ ταῦτα μενεῖ πάντως ἀνίατα· πῶς γὰρ οὐ κακὸν ἀπευκτόν, ὀρίζεσθαι τι καὶ παγίως ἀποφαίνεσθαι περὶ αὐτῆς γένεσιν τὴν ἄστατον πάντη καὶ φορητὴν, ἐπιγράφουσιν αὐτῇ τὰς τοῦ ποιούντος ἀρετάς; ὧν μία ἐστὶ, καθ’ ἣν
- 149 ἀνευδοιάστως καὶ ἀκλινῶς ἕκαστα ὀρίζεται. τοιγαροῦν οὐ χηρεύσει μόνον ἐπιστήμης, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐκβεβλήσεται· τοῦτο δ’ ἐστὶ τοιοῦτον· ἢ χηρεύουσα μὲν μήπω δὲ ἐκβεβλημένη τοῦ καλοῦ ψυχὴ δύναται πῶς ἐγκαρτερήσασα τὰς πρὸς τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον τὸν νόμιμον <ἄνδρα> συμβάσεις καὶ καταλλαγὰς εὐρεῖν.
- [220] ἢ δ’ ἄπαξ διαζευχθεῖσα καὶ | διοικισθεῖσα ὡς ἄσπονδος μέχρι τοῦ παντὸς αἰῶνος ἐκτετόξευται, εἰς τὸν ἀρχαῖον οἶκον ἐπανελθεῖν ἀδυνατοῦσα.
- 150 XLI. Περὶ μὲν οὖν τοῦ “μείζων ἢ αἰτία μου τοῦ ἀφεθῆναι” τοσαῦτα εἰρήσθω· τὰ δ’ ἀκόλουθα σκεψώμεθα. “εἰ ἐκβάλλεις με” φησί “σήμερον

<sup>a</sup> Or “to receive Divine impregnation.”

and so will heal it. It is for this reason that the lawgiver says that "whatever one widowed and ejected shall have vowed against her soul" shall stand for her (Numb. xxx. 10). For we may justly say that God is husband and father of the universe, supplying, as He does, the germs of life<sup>a</sup> and well-being to all; and that a mind has been cast forth and widowed of God, which has either failed to welcome divinely-bestowed power to bear children, or, after welcoming it, has subsequently chosen to bring about abortion. Accordingly, whatever she shall have determined, against herself shall she determine, and the things determined shall stand absolutely incurable. For how can it be anything but a deplorable evil that an unstable creature never continuing in one stay should determine and fix by announcing it aught concerning itself, thus arrogating to itself the prerogatives of the Creator? One of these prerogatives is that in virtue of which He decisively and unswervingly determines all things. So it comes about that the mind shall not only be widowed of knowledge, but shall also be cast out from it. Let me explain. The soul that is widowed but not yet cast out of the good and beautiful, may still by steadfast persistence find a means of reconciliation and agreement with right reason, her lawful husband. But the soul that has once been dismissed from hearth and home as irreconcilable, has been expelled for all eternity, and can never return to her ancient abode.

XLI. What has been said about the words, "The charge to which abandonment exposes me is too great," must suffice, and we must consider the words that follow. "If" he says "Thou castest me out

PHILO

ἀπὸ προσώπου τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου
 σου κρυβήσομαι" (Gen. iv. 14). τί λέγεις, ὦ
 γενοαῖε; ἐὰν ἐκβληθῆς ἐξ ἀπάσης τῆς γῆς, ἔτι 151 κρυβήσῃ; τίνα τρόπον; ζῆν γὰρ δύναιο ἄν; ἢ τοῦτ' ἠγνόησας, ὅτι τοῖς ζώοις ἢ φύσις δια-φέροντας καὶ οὐχὶ τοὺς αὐτοὺς τόπους πρὸς δια-μονήν ἐδωρήσατο, θάλατταν μὲν ἰχθύσι καὶ παντὶ
 τῷ ἐνύδρῳ γένει, γῆν δὲ ἅπασιν τοῖς χερσαίοις;
 χερσαῖον δὲ κατὰ γούν τὰς σώματος συγκρίσεις
 ζῶον καὶ ἄνθρωπός ἐστι· διὰ τοῦτο ἀμείψαντα τὰς οἰκείους χώρας ἕκαστα καὶ ὡσπερ εἰς ἀλλοδαπήν
 ἐλθόντα ῥαδίως τελευτᾶ, τὰ μὲν χερσαῖα καθ'
 ὕδατος δύντα, τὰ δ' ἐνυδρα ἐπὶ χέρσον ἀνα-152 πλεύσαντα. εἶπερ οὖν ἐκβληθείης ἀπὸ γῆς ἄνθρωπος
 ὢν, ποῖ τετράψῃ; νήξῃ καθ' ὕδατος τὴν τῶν
 ἐνύδρων ἀπομιμούμενος φύσιν; ἀλλ' ὑποβρύχιος αὐτίκα τεθνήξῃ. ἀλλὰ πτερώσας καὶ μετεωρίσας
 σαυτὸν ἀεροβατεῖν ἐθελήσεις τὸ χερσαῖον εἰς πτηνοῦ γένος μεταβαλὼν; ἀλλ' εἰ δύνασαι μετάπλαττε καὶ μεταχάραττε τὸ θεῖον νόμισμα· ἀλλ'
 οὐ δυνήσῃ· ὅσῳ γὰρ ἂν μετεωρότερον σεαυτὸν
 ἐξάρῃς, τοσοῦτω θᾶττον ἀφ' ὑψηλοτέρου μετὰ 153 πλείονος φορᾶς ἐπὶ γῆν τὸ οἰκεῖον χωρίον ἐνε-χθήσῃ. XLII. ἄνθρωπος δ' ἂν ἢ τι τῶν γενομένων κρύπτεσθαι δυνηθείη θεόν; ποῦ; τὸν
 ἐφθακότα πάντη, τὸν ἄχρι περάτων ἀποβλέποντα,
 τὸν πεπληρωκότα τὸ πᾶν, οὗ τῶν ὄντων οὐδὲ τὸ
 βραχύτατον ἔρημον; καὶ τί παράδοξον, εἰ μηδενὶ
 τῶν γενομένων ἐφικτὸν κρύπτεσθαι τὸ ὄν, ὅποτε 302

to-day from the face of the earth, from Thy face also shall I be hidden" (Gen. iv. 14). What are you saying, good sir? If you shall have been cast out of all the earth, will you still hide yourself? How? Could you live? Or did you not know that nature has not given to all living creatures the same abiding-place, but different ones, the sea to fish and all the watery tribe, and earth to all land creatures? And man, so far at all events as the constituents of his body go, is a land creature. For this reason, each living creature, when he leaves his proper abode and enters so to speak a foreign one, dies without more ado, the land creatures on going under water, the aquatic animals on making their way to dry land. If, therefore, being a man, you should be cast out from earth, whither will you turn? Will you take on the nature of aquatic creatures and swim under water? Nay, under water you will be dead in a moment. But perhaps you will take wings and raise yourself aloft and elect to traverse the air, transforming land-kind into bird-kind? Aye, change if you can the moulding and stamp of the Divine coinage. You will never be able to do that: for the further you lift yourself aloft, so much the more swiftly will you be borne from a higher region with greater impetus to earth, your proper quarter.

XLII. But could you, being a man, or any other created thing, hide yourself from God? Where? From Him who is there before us whichever way we go; from Him Whose sight reaches to the ends of earth; from Him Who has filled the universe; from Him of Whom the least thing that exists is not void? And can this surprise you, that no created thing can manage to hide itself from that which is, seeing that

οὐδὲ τὰς ὑλικὰς ἀρχὰς ἔνεστι διεκδῦναι, ἀλλ' ἀνάγκη τῷ μίαν διαφυγόντι εἰς ἑτέραν μεταβῆναι; 154 εἰ τὸ ὄν, καθ' ἣν τέχνην ἐποίει τὰ ἀμφίβια, κατὰ ταύτην καὶ ζῶον πανταχοῦ βιωσόμενον ἐβουλήθη καινουργῆσαι, τοῦτο τὸ ζῶον, εἰ μὲν τὰ βάρως ἔχοντα ἀπεδίδρασκε γῆν καὶ ὕδωρ, πρὸς τὰ τῆ φύσει κοῦφα ἀέρα καὶ πῦρ ἤκεν ἄν, ἔμπαλιν δ' ἐνομιλήσαν τοῖς μεταρσίοις, εἰ μετανάστασιν ἐζήτει τὴν ἀπ' αὐτῶν, τὸν ἐναντίον ἤμευεν ἄν χῶρον· ἔδει γὰρ αὐτὸ πάντως καθ' ἓν τοῦ κόσμου μέρος προφαίνεσθαι, ἐπειδὴ τοῦ παντὸς ἔξω δραμεῖν ἦν ἀδύνατον, πρὸς τῷ μηδὲ ἐκτὸς ὑπολελείφθαι τι τὸν δημιουργὸν ὅλας δι' ὅλων τὰς τέτταρας ἀρχὰς εἰς τὴν τοῦ κόσμου σύστασιν ἀναλώσαντα, ἵνα ἐκ [221] μερῶν τελείων τελειότατον | ἀπεργάσῃται τὸ πᾶν. 155 ὁπότ' οὖν ὅλον ἐκφυγεῖν τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ἔργον ἀμήχανον, πῶς οὐκ ἀδύνατον μᾶλλον ἀποδρᾶναι τὸν ποιητὴν καὶ ἡγεμόνα τούτου; μηδεὶς οὖν τὴν πρόχειρον ἐκδοχὴν τοῦ λόγου παραδεχόμενος ἀνεξετάστως τῷ νόμῳ τὴν ἰδίαν εὐήθειαν προσαρτάτω, περισκεψάμενος δ' ὅπερ αἰνίττεται δι' 156 ὑπονοιῶν τὸ σαφὲς διαγνώτω. XLIII. μήποτ' οὖν ὅπερ ἐμφαίνεται διὰ τοῦ "εἰ ἐκβάλλεις με σήμερον ἀπὸ προσώπου τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου σου κρυβήσομαι" τοῦτ' ἐστίν· εἰ μὴ παρέχεις μοι τὰ γῆς ἀγαθὰ, οὐδὲ τὰ οὐρανοῦ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

we cannot get out of the first elements of material things, but, having made our escape from one, must ever pass thence into another? If the existent One had willed to employ the skill, by which He made amphibious creatures, in making a new kind of creature capable of living in all elements, this creature, if it had sped away from the heavy elements of the earth and water, would have arrived at the elements that are naturally light, namely air and fire; and again, after making acquaintance with the regions on high, if it had wanted to remove from them, it would have merely exchanged them for the opposite region. It would have been necessary for it in any case to show itself in some one quarter of the universe, since it was impossible for it to speed away outside it. And, besides this, the Creator had left nothing remaining outside, having entirely used up all the four elements to constitute the world, that out of perfect parts He might make the whole most perfect.<sup>a</sup> Seeing then that it is in all cases out of the question to escape beyond the handiwork of God, must it not be still more impossible to flee from its Maker and Ruler? Let no one therefore accept without examining it the way of understanding the language that first suggests itself, and by so doing make the Law guilty of his own foolishness. Let him carefully note the sense which it conveys in a figure through deeper meanings underlying the expressions employed, and so attain to certain knowledge. XLIII. Probably, then, what is expressed by the words "if Thou art casting me out this day from the face of the earth, from Thy face also shall I be hidden" is this: "if Thou art ceasing to supply me with the good things of earth, neither do I accept

- δέχομαι· καὶ εἰ μὴ τίς ἐστι χρῆσις καὶ ἀπόλαυσις ἡδονῆς, καὶ ἀρετὴν παραιτοῦμαι· καὶ εἰ τῶν ἀνθρωπείων μὴ μεταδίδως ἀγαθῶν, ἔχε καὶ τὰ 157 θεῖα. τὰ γὰρ παρ' ἡμῖν ἀναγκαῖα καὶ τίμια καὶ γνήσια ὡς ἀληθῶς ἀγαθὰ ταῦτα· φαγεῖν, πιεῖν, [περιβαλέσθαι], ποικιλίαις χρωμάτων δι' ὄψεως ἡσθῆναι, μελωδίαις παντοδαπῶν ἤχων δι' ἀκοῆς τερφθῆναι, ἀτμῶν ἀποφοραῖς εὐώδεσι διὰ μυκτῆρων γανωθῆναι, ταῖς γαστρὸς καὶ μετὰ γαστέρα ἡδοναῖς ἀπάσαις εἰς κόρον χρήσασθαι, τῆς ἀργύρου καὶ χρυσοῦ κτήσεως μὴ ἀμελήσαι, τιμᾶς καὶ ἀρχᾶς καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα συντείνοντα πρὸς δόξαν περιβαλέσθαι· φρόνησιν δ' ἢ καρτερίαν ἢ δικαιοσύνης αὐστηρὰς διαθέσεις ἐπίπονον παρασκευαζούσας βίον ἐῷμεν· εἰ δ' ἄρα καὶ χρηστέον αὐταῖς, οὐχ ὡς ἀγαθοῖς τελείους χρηστέον, ἀλλὰ ὡς ποιητικοῖς ἀγαθοῦ.
- 158 Σὺ μὲν οὖν, ὦ καταγέλαστε, φῆς ὅτι τῶν σωματικῶν καὶ τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀφαιρεθεῖς πλεονεκτημάτων εἰς ὄψιν οὐκ ἀφίξῃ θεοῦ; ἐγὼ δέ σοι λέγω ὅτι, ἐὰν ἀφαιρεθῆς, πάντως ἀφίξῃ λυθεῖς γὰρ τῶν ἀρρήκτων σώματος καὶ περὶ σῶμα δεσμῶν φαντα-
 159 σιώση τὸν ἀγέννητον. XLIV. <τὸν> Ἀβραάμ οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι “ γῆν καὶ συγγένειαν καὶ πατρὸς οἶκον,” τὸ σῶμα, τὴν αἴσθησιν, τὸν λόγον, “ καταλιπὼν ” (Gen. xii. 1) ἄρχεται ταῖς τοῦ ὄντος ἐντυγχάνειν δυνάμεσιν; ὅταν γὰρ ὑπεξέελθῃ πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκίαν, λέγει ὁ νόμος ὅτι “ ὤφθη ὁ θεὸς αὐτῷ ” (Gen. xii. 7)

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 496, 497.

<sup>b</sup> Philo makes these words mean “ where you cannot see God.”

those of heaven ; and if I am being cut off from the experience and enjoyment of pleasure, I decline virtue also ; and if Thou art giving me no part in what is human, keep back also what is divine. For the good things that are,<sup>a</sup> in our judgement, necessary and of value and really genuine are these, eating, drinking ; delighting in variety of colours by the use of sight ; being charmed through hearing by all kinds of melodious sounds, and through the joy of fragrant scents which our nostrils inhale ; indulging to the full in all the pleasures arising from digestive and other organs ; unceasing attention to the acquisition of gold and silver ; being adorned with honours and public offices, and all else that tends to make us distinguished. But let us have nothing to do with sound sense, or hardy endurance, or righteousness with her stern disposition filling life with labour and travail. But if these prove to be a necessary part of our experience, they must be treated not as good things to be sought for their own sake, but as means to and productive of good."

Oh ! ridiculous man ! Do you assert that, when stripped of bodily and outward advantages, you will be out of sight of God ?<sup>b</sup> I tell you that, if you be stripped of them, you will be more than ever in sight of Him : for when set free from bonds that cannot be broken, imposed by the body and bodily requirements, you will have a clear vision of the Uncreated. XLIV. Do you not see that Abraham, when he had " forsaken land and kindred and his father's house," i.e. the body, sense, and speech (Gen. xii. 1), begins to meet with the powers of Him that is ? For when he has gone out from all his house, the Law says that " God appeared to him " (Gen. xii. 7), showing

δηλῶν ὅτι ἐναργῶς φαίνεται τῷ τὰ θνητὰ ὑπεκδύντι καὶ εἰς ἀσώματον τοῦδε τοῦ σώματος ψυχὴν 160 ἀναδραμόντι. διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς “ λαβὼν τὴν αὐτοῦ σκηνην ἔξω πῆττει τῆς παρεμβολῆς ” (Exod. xxxiii. 7) καὶ μακρὰν διοικίζει τοῦ σωματικοῦ στρατοπέδου, μόνως ἂν οὕτως ἐλπίσας ἰκέτης καὶ θεραπευτῆς ἔσσεσθαι τέλειος θεοῦ.

Τὴν δὲ σκηνην ταύτην κεκλήσθαι φησι μαρτυρίου,
 [222] σφόδρα παρατετηρημένως, ἵν’ ἡ τοῦ ὄντος | ὑπάρχη, μὴ καλῆται μόνον· τῶν γὰρ ἀρετῶν ἡ μὲν θεοῦ πρὸς ἀλήθειάν ἐστι κατὰ τὸ εἶναι συνεστῶσα, ἐπεὶ καὶ ὁ θεὸς μόνος ἐν τῷ εἶναι ὑφέστηκεν· οὐ χάριν ἀναγκαίως ἐρεῖ περὶ αὐτοῦ· “ ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ὢν ” (Exod. iii. 14), ὡς τῶν μετ’ αὐτὸν οὐκ ὄντων κατὰ τὸ εἶναι, δόξῃ δὲ μόνον ὑφεστάναι νομιζομένων· ἡ δὲ Μωυσέως σκηνη συμβολικῶς οὐσα ἀνθρώπου ἀρετῆ κλήσεως, οὐχ ὑπάρξεως, ἀξιωθήσεται, μίμημα καὶ ἀπεικόνισμα τῆς θείας ἐκείνης
 161 ὑπάρχουσα. τούτοις ἔπεται καὶ τὸ Μωυσῆν, ὁπότε χειροτονεῖται “ θεὸς τοῦ Φαραώ,” μὴ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν γεγενῆσθαι, δόξῃ δὲ μόνον ὑπολαμβάνεσθαι· θεὸν γὰρ διδόντα μὲν οἶδα καὶ χαριζόμενον, διδόμενον δὲ οὐ δύναμαι νοῆσαι, λέγεται δὲ ἐν ἱεραῖς βίβλοις· “ δίδωμί σε θεὸν Φαραώ ” (Exod. vii. 1), τοῦ διδομένου πάσχοντος, οὐ δρώντος· δραστήριον δὲ τὸ ὄντως ὄν, οὐ πάσχον, 162 ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι. τί οὖν διὰ τούτων συναγεται; ὅτι ὁ σοφὸς λέγεται μὲν θεὸς τοῦ ἄφρονος, πρὸς ἀλήθειαν δὲ οὐκ ἔστι θεός, ὥσπερ οὐδὲ τὸ ἀδόκιμον

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 497.

that He clearly manifests Himself to him that escapes from things mortal and mounts up into a soul free from the encumbrance of this body of ours. So Moses "taking his tent sets it up outside the camp" (Exod. xxxiii. 7), and places its abode far from the bodily encampment, expecting that only thus might he become a perfect suppliant and worshipper of God.

Of this tent he says that it has received the title of "Tent of Testimony," using his words quite advisedly, to show that the Tent of the Existent One really is, and does not merely receive the title. For, among the virtues, that of God really is, actually existing, inasmuch as God alone has veritable being. This is why Moses will say of Him as best he may "in human speech, "I AM He that is" (Exod. iii. 14), implying that others lesser than He have not being, as being indeed is, but exist in semblance only, and are conventionally said to exist. To Moses' Tent, however, which figuratively represents human virtue, must be accorded not existence but only a title, seeing that it is a copy and likeness of that divine virtue. It follows as a consequence of this that, when Moses is appointed "a god unto Pharaoh," he did not become such in reality, but only by a convention is supposed to be such; for I do indeed know God as granting favours and giving, but I am unable to conceive of Him as being given; yet it is said in the sacred books, "I give thee as a god to Pharaoh" (Exod. vii. 1), that which is given being passive not active; but He that really is must needs be active not passive. What then do we gather from these words? That the wise man is said to be a god to the foolish man, but that in reality he is not God,

PHILO

- τετραδραχμόν ἐστι τετράδραχμον· ἀλλ' ὅταν μὲν τῷ
 ὄντι παραβάλληται, ἄνθρωπος εὐρεθήσεται θεοῦ, ὅταν δὲ ἄφρονι ἀνθρώπῳ, θεὸς πρὸς φαντασίαν καὶ
 δόκησιν, οὐ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν καὶ τὸ εἶναι, νοοῦμενος.
- 163 XLV. τί οὖν ματαιάζεις λέγων “ εἴ με ἐκβάλλεις
 ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, καὶ σὲ κρυβήσομαι ” (Gen. iv. 14);
 τοῦναντίον γὰρ εἴ σε τοῦ γεώδους ἀπελάσαι, τὴν
 εἰκόνα ἐμφανῶς δείξει τὴν ἑαυτοῦ. τεκμήριον δέ· σὺ μὲν ἐκ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ μεταστήσῃ, μεταναστὰς δὲ τὸ γήινον σῶμα οὐδὲν ἤττον οἰκήσεις·
 λέγει γὰρ αὖθις· ἐξῆλθε δὲ Κάιν ἀπὸ προσώπου
 τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ᾤκησεν <ἐν> τῇ γῇ ” (Gen. iv. 16).
 ὥστε οὐκ ἐκβληθεὶς ἀπὸ γῆς ἀποκέκρυψαι τὸν ὄντα, ἀλλ' ἐκτραπείσῃ αὐτὸν εἰς γῆν καταπέφευγας,
- 164 τὸ θνητὸν χωρίον. καὶ μὴν οὐδὲ πᾶς “ ὁ εὐρίσκων
 σε ἀποκτενεῖ, ” καθάπερ σοφιζόμενος διεξήεις
 (Gen. iv. 14). τὸ γὰρ εὐρισκόμενον ὑπὸ δυοῖν, ἢ ὁμοίου ἢ ἀνομοίου, πάντως εὐρίσκεται, ὑπὸ μὲν [οὖν] τοῦ ὁμοίου καὶ συγγενοῦς διὰ τὴν ἐν ἅπασιν οἰκειότητα καὶ κοινωνίαν, ὑπὸ δὲ τοῦ ἀνομοίου διὰ
 τὴν ἀντίπαλον ἀλλοτριότητα· τὸ μὲν οὖν ὁμοίον
 ἐστὶ καὶ φυλακτικὸν τοῦ παραπλησίου, τὸ δ'
- 165 ἀνόμοιον καὶ φθαρτικὸν τοῦ διαλλάττοντος. ἴστωσαν δὴ καὶ ὁ Κάιν καὶ εἴ τις ἕτερος πανοῦργος, ὅτι οὐχ ὑπὸ παντὸς τοῦ ἐντυγχάνοντος ἀναιρεθήσεται, ἀλλὰ ῥαδιουργοὶ μὲν ἀδελφὰς καὶ συγγενεῖς
 κακίας ἐζηλωκότες φρουροὶ καὶ φύλακες αὐτοῦ

just as the counterfeit four-drachma piece is not a tetradrachm. But when the wise man is compared with Him that is, he will be found to be a man of God ; but when with a foolish man, he will turn out to be one conceived of as a god, in men's ideas and imagination, not in view of truth and actuality. XLV. Why then do you talk idly saying, " If Thou art casting me out of the earth, Thee also shall I hide from myself " (Gen. iv. 14) ? For, on the contrary, were He to expel you from the earthly sphere, He will show you His own image clearly manifested. This can be proved. You are going to remove out of the presence of God, and having so removed you will none the less inhabit your earthly body ; for he says afterwards, " and Cain went out from the presence of God and dwelt in the earth " (Gen. iv. 16) ; so that, instead of having been cast out of the earth and having hidden from yourself Him that is, you have turned away from Him and have taken refuge in earth, i.e. the mortal region. Moreover, it is not really true that " everyone that findeth you shall kill you," as you dishonestly argued (Gen. iv. 14). For the thing that is found is assuredly found by one of two, either by one like it or by one unlike it. He that is like it and akin to it finds it because of their congruity and fellowship in all respects ; he that is unlike it, owing to their opposition and incongruity. That which is like is prone to guard and keep what is so nearly related to it : that which is unlike is on its part ready to destroy what differs from it. Let Cain and every other scoundrel know assuredly that he will not be killed by everyone that meets with him, but whereas unscrupulous people, given to vices closely akin to his, will prove his guards and keepers, γενήσονται, φρόνησιν δ' ὅσοι καὶ ἄλλην ἀρετὴν ἐξεπόνησαν ὡς ἄσπονδον ἐχθρόν, ἣν δύνωνται, καθελούσι· πάντα γάρ, ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, καὶ σώματα [223] καὶ | πράγματα πρὸς μὲν οἰκείων καὶ φίλων σώζεται, πρὸς ἄλλοτρίων δὲ καὶ δυσμενῶν δια-

 166 φθείρεται. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὁ χρησμός ἀντιμαρτυρῶν τῇ προσποιήτῳ εὐηθείᾳ τοῦ Κάιν φησὶν· “ οὐχ οὕτως ” φρονεῖς ὡς λέγεις (Gen. iv. 15). λέγεις μὲν γὰρ ὅτι πᾶς ὁ τὰ παλαιίσματά σου τῆς τέχνης εὐρῶν ἀνελεῖ, οἶδας δὲ ὅτι οὐχὶ πᾶς, μυρίων ἐν τῇ σῆ τεταγμένων συμμαχία, ἀλλὰ μόνος ὁ ἀρετῇ μὲν φίλος σοὶ δὲ ἐχθρὸς ἀσύμβατος.

167 XLVI. “ Ὁ δ' ἀποκτείνας ” φησὶ “ Κάιν ἐπὶ τὰ ἐκδικούμενα παραλύσει ” (Gen. iv. 15). καὶ τοῦτο τίνα ἔχει λόγον πρὸς τὰς ῥητὰς διερμηνεύσεις, οὐκ οἶδα· οὔτε γὰρ τίνα ἐστὶ τὰ ἐπὶ οὔτε πῶς ἐκδικούμενα οὔτε ὃν τρόπον παρίεται καὶ ἐκλύεται, δεδήλωκεν· ὥστε τροπικώτερον καὶ δι' ὑπονοιῶν ἀνάγκη πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα λέγεσθαι νομίζω. μήποτ' οὖν ὃ βούλεται παριστάνειν ἐστὶ
 168 τοιόνδε· τὸ ἄλογον τῆς ψυχῆς εἰς ἐπὶ διανέμεται μοίρας, ὄρασιν ἀκοῆν ὄσφρησιν γεῦσιν ἀφῆν λόγον γόνιμον· εἰ δὴ τις τὸν ὄγδοον ἀνέλοι, νοῦν τὸν ἡγεμόνα τούτων Κάιν, παραλύσει καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τὰ ῥώμη μὲν γὰρ τῆς διανοίας καρτερᾷ πάντα συρρών-

all who have engaged in the toilsome quest of sound sense and other virtues, will regard him as an enemy with whom there can be no truce, and destroy him if they can. For it is an almost invariable rule that both persons and causes are cherished by those who are friendly and attached to them, but brought to ruin by those who have nothing in common with them, and look on them with no favour. For this cause the sacred utterance, testifying in opposition to the feigned simplicity of Cain, says "Not so" are you minded as your words run' (Gen. iv. 15); for you say that everyone that has found your artifices in the wrestling-bout of words will kill you, but you know that not everyone will do so, since countless numbers have been enrolled on your side, and only he will do so who is a friend of virtue, but to you an irreconcilable enemy.

XLVI. "He" it continues, "that slayeth Cain shall loosen seven punishable objects" (Gen. iv. 15). What meaning this conveys to those who interpret literally, I do not know. For there is nothing to show what the seven objects are, nor how they are punishable, nor in what way they become loose and unstrung. We must make up our minds that all such language is figurative and involves deeper meanings. It would seem, then, that the thought which Moses desires to convey is of this nature. The irrational side of the soul is divided into seven parts, seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, touching, speaking, begetting. Were a man to do away with the eighth, mind, which is the ruler of these, and here called Cain, he will paralyse the seven also. For they are all strong by sharing the strength and vigour of the mind, and with its weak-

- νυται, ἀσθενεία δὲ συγκάμνει, φθορᾶ δὲ ἦν ἐπάγει κακία παντελεῖ πάρεσίν τε καὶ ἔκλυσιν λαμβάνει.
- 169 τὰ δὲ ἑπτὰ ταῦτα ἐν μὲν σοφοῦ ψυχῇ ἀμίαντα καὶ
 καθαρὰ, ταύτη καὶ τιμῆς ἐπάξια εὐρίσκεται, ἐν δὲ
 ἄφρονος ἀκάθαρτα καὶ μεμιασμένα καὶ ὅπερ εἶπεν ἐκδικούμενα, ἴσον τῷ δίκης ἐπάξια καὶ τιμωρίας.
- 170 ὁπότε γοῦν τὴν γῆν ὕδατι καθαίρειν ὁ δημιουργὸς
 διενόηθη καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν τῶν ἀμυθήτων ἀδικημάτων
 κάθαρσιν λαβεῖν ἐκνιψαμένην καὶ ἀπολουσαμένην
 τὰ μιάσματα τρόπον ἀγνείας ἱερᾶς, παραινεί τῷ φανέντι δικαίῳ, ὃς οὐ παρεσύρη τῇ τοῦ κατα-κλυσμοῦ φορᾶ, εἰσάγειν εἰς τὴν κιβωτόν, ὅπερ ἦν τὸ
 ψυχῆς ἀγγεῖον τὸ σῶμα, “ ἀπὸ τῶν κτηνῶν τῶν καθαρῶν ἑπτὰ, ἄρρεν καὶ θῆλυ ” (Gen. vii. 2), δικαίως τὸν ἀστείον λογισμὸν χρῆσθαι μέρεσι
- 171 τοῖς τοῦ ἀλόγου πᾶσι καθαροῖς. XLVII. καὶ τοῦθ’ ὅπερ ὤρισεν ὁ νομοθέτης ἐξ ἀνάγκης παρ-ακολουθεῖ πᾶσι τοῖς σοφοῖς· ἔχουσι γὰρ κεκα-θαρμένην ὄρασιν καὶ ἐξητασμένην ἀκοὴν καὶ πᾶσαν
 αἴσθησιν, ἔχουσι μέντοι καὶ λόγον ἀκηλίδωτον καὶ
- 172 τὰς πρὸς συνουσίας οὐκ ἐκνόμους ὀρμάς. ἕκαστον
 δὲ τῶν ἑπτὰ τῇ μὲν ἄρρεν γίνεται, τῇ δὲ καὶ θῆλυ·
 ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἢ ἴσχεται ἢ κινεῖται, ἴσχεται μὲν κατὰ
 τοὺς ὕπνους ἡρεμοῦντα, κινεῖται δὲ ἐν ταῖς ἐγρη-γόρσεσιν ἤδη ἐνεργοῦντα, τὸ μὲν καθ’ ἕξιν καὶ
 ἡρεμίαν ἄτε πρὸς τὸ παθεῖν ὑποβεβλημένον καλεῖται
- [224] θῆλυ, τὸ δὲ | κατὰ κίνησιν τε καὶ ἐνέργειαν ἄτε ἐν
- 173 τῷ δρᾶν ἐπινοούμενον ἄρρεν ὀνομάζεται. οὕτως

° See Vol. I., App. p. 476, note on De Op. 117.

ness they wax feeble, and by the complete corruption brought on them by wickedness they incur a weakening and slackening. These seven in a wise man's soul are found to be pure and undefiled, and herein deserving of honour, but in the soul of a foolish man unclean and polluted, and, just as Moses said, exposed to punishment which is equivalent to "deserving of penalty and retribution." Let me give an illustration. When the Creator was minded to purge the earth by water, and determined that the soul should receive a cleansing from its unutterable wrongdoings by washing away and purging out its defilements after the fashion of a sacred purification, He charges the man who proved righteous, who was not swept away by the oncoming of the deluge, to bring into the ark, which was the body or the vessel that contains the soul, "from among the clean beasts seven, male and female" (Gen. vii. 2), for He deemed it right that the goodly reasoning faculty should find all parts of the irrational side clean for its use. XLVII. And this that the lawgiver prescribed is an unfailing characteristic of all wise men: they have sight purged and cleansed, hearing and every sense severely tested; yes, and they have utterance unsullied, and the impulses of sex under control. Each of the seven faculties<sup>a</sup> shows itself in one way as male, in another way as female; for since it is either in restraint or in motion, in restraint when at rest in sleep, in motion when now awake and active—when regarded under the aspect of restraint and inaction, it is called female owing to its having been reduced to passivity; when looked at under the aspect of movement and employment of force, being thought of as in action, it is described as male. Thus in the

PHILO

- μὲν ἐν τῷ σοφῷ τὰ ἐπτά φαίνεται καθαρὰ, κατὰ δὲ τὰ ἐναντία ἐν τῷ φαύλῳ πάντα ἐκδικούμενα· πόσῃ γὰρ ὑπολαμβάνομεν πληθὺν καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν ὑπ' ὀφθαλμῶν προδίδοσθαι πρὸς τὰ χρώματα καὶ σχήματα καὶ ἃ μὴ θέμις ὄρᾶν αὐτομολούντων; πόσῃ δὲ ὑπὸ ὤτων ἀπάσαις φωναῖς ἐπακολουθούτων; πόσῃ δὲ πρὸς τῶν ὀσφρήσεως καὶ γεύσεως ὀργάνων ὑπὸ τε αἰσμάτων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων
- 174 ἀπλέτου ποικιλίας<sup>1</sup> ἀγομένων; ἔτι τοίνυν σοι λέγω τὸ πλῆθος ὧν ἀχαλίνου γλώττης ῥεῦμα ἀνεπίσχετον διέφθειρεν ἢ ὁ περὶ τὰς μίξεις μετ' ἐπιθυμίας ἀκρατοῦς ἀνιάτος οἴστρος; μεσταὶ μὲν αἱ πόλεις, μεστή δὲ ἀπὸ περάτων ἐπὶ πέρατα πᾶσα ἡ γῆ τῶν κακῶν τούτων, ἐξ ὧν ὁ συνεχῆς καὶ ἄπαστος καὶ μέγιστος πολέμων ὁ κατ' εἰρήνην ἀνθρώπων
- 175 γένοι καὶ ἰδίᾳ καὶ κοινῇ φύεται. XLVIII. διόπερ ἐλέσθαι ἂν μοι δοκοῦσιν οἱ μὴ τελείως ἀπαίδευτοι πεπηρῶσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ τὰ μὴ προσήκονθ' ὄρᾶν <καὶ> κεκωφῶσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ βλαβερῶν ἀκούειν λόγων καὶ ἐκτετμηῆσθαι γλώτταν ὑπὲρ τοῦ μηδὲν
- 176 τῶν ἀρρήτων ἐκλαλήσαι. φασὶ γοῦν ἤδη τινὰς τῶν σοφῶν τροχιζομένους ὑπὲρ τοῦ τὰ ἄρρητα μηνῦσαι γλώτταν ἀποτραγόντας τὴν ἑαυτῶν ἀργαλεωτέραν κατὰ τῶν βασανιστῶν ἀντιτεχνήσασθαι βάσανον οὐ δινηθέντων ἃ ἐπόθουν ἐπιγνώναι. ἐξευνοχισθῆναί γε μὴν ἄμεινον ἢ πρὸς συνουσίας ἐκνόμους λυττᾶν. ἅπαντα δὲ ταῦτα συμφοραῖς ἀνηκέστοις

<sup>1</sup> Reading ἀπλέτου ποικιλίας with Mangey for ἀπλέτοις ποικιλίας.

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 173-176

wise man the seven faculties are evidently clean, but, by the law of contraries, in the worthless man all exposed to punishment. How vast a multitude must we suppose to be betrayed every day by eyes deserting to colours and forms and things that it is wrong to look at? And by ears that go after all sounds? And by the organs of smell and taste led by pleasing odours and an endless variety of other enticements? <sup>a</sup> Need I, then, go on to remind you of the multitude of those who have been ruined by the stream that there is no stopping, flowing from an unbridled tongue, or by the deadly stimulus to sexual sins which accompanies ungoverned lust? Our cities are full of these evils; all the earth is full of them from one end to another; and out of them springs up for mankind, both as individuals and in communities, the war that is waged in time of peace, the war that has no break or pause, and is the greatest of all wars. XLVIII. And so, to my thinking, those who are not utterly ignorant would choose to be blinded rather than see unfitting things, and to be deprived of hearing rather than listen to harmful words, and to have their tongues cut out to save them from uttering anything that should not be divulged. Such things have been done before now. Certain wise men, they tell us, while being tortured on the wheel to induce them to reveal secrets have bitten off their tongue, and so contrived a worse torture for their torturers, who found themselves unable to obtain the information which they wanted. It is better to be made a eunuch than to be mad after illicit unions. All these things, seeing that they plunge the soul in disasters for which there is

PHILO

βαπτίζοντα τὴν ψυχὴν δίκης καὶ τιμωρίας εἰκότως
 177 ἂν τῆς ἀνωτάτω τυγχάνοι. λέγει δ' ἐξῆς ὅτι
 " ἔθετο κύριος ὁ θεὸς σημεῖον τῷ Κάιν, τοῦ μὴ
 ἀνελεῖν αὐτὸν πάντα τὸν εὐρίσκοντα " (Gen. iv. 15).
 καὶ τί τὸ σημεῖόν ἐστιν, οὐ δεδήλωκε, καίτοι γε
 εἰωθὼς τὴν ἐκάστου φύσιν διὰ σημείου δεικνύναι, ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τῶν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ τὴν ῥάβδον μεταβαλὼν
 εἰς ὄφιν καὶ τὴν χεῖρα Μωυσέως εἰς χιόνος ἰδέαν 178 καὶ τὸν ποταμὸν εἰς αἷμα. μήποτ' οὖν αὐτὸ τοῦτο σημεῖόν ἐστι τῷ Κάιν τοῦ μὴ φονευθῆναι τὸ μηδέ-ποτε ἀναιρεθῆναι· οὐ γὰρ θάνατον αὐτοῦ διὰ πάσης
 τῆς νομοθεσίας δεδήλωκεν αἰνιττόμενος ὅτι, ὥσπερ
 ἢ μεμυθευμένη Σκύλλα, κακὸν ἀθάνατόν ἐστιν
 [225] ἀφροσύνη, | τὴν μὲν κατὰ τὸ τεθνάναι τελευτὴν οὐχ
 ὑπομένουσα, τὴν δὲ κατὰ τὸ ἀποθνήσκειν πάντα
 ἐνδεχομένη τὸν αἰῶνα. εἴθε μέντοι συμβαίνοι τὰναντία, ὡς ἐκποδῶν τὰ φαῦλα ἀναιρεῖσθαι παντελῆ φθορὰν ὑπομένοντα· νῦν δ' αἰεὶ ζωπυρούμενα τὴν ἀθάνατον ἐγκατασκήπτει νόσον τοῖς ἅπαξ
 πρὸς αὐτῶν ἀλοῦσιν.

---

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 497

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER, 176-178

no remedy, would properly incur the most extreme vengeance and punishment.

It goes on to say " the Lord God set a sign upon Cain, that everyone that found him might not kill him " (Gen. iv. 15), and what the sign is, he has not pointed out, although he is in the habit of showing the nature of each object by means of a sign, as in the case of events in Egypt when he changed the rod into a serpent, and the hand of Moses into the form of snow, and the river into blood. It would seem then that just this is the sign regarding Cain that he should not be killed, namely that on no occasion did he meet with death. For nowhere in the Book of the Law has his death been mentioned. This shows in a figure that, like the Scylla<sup>a</sup> of fable, folly is a deathless evil, never experiencing the end that consists in having died, but subject to all eternity to that which consists in ever dying. Would that the opposite might come to pass, that worthless things should be taken out of sight and abolished, undergoing absolute destruction. As it is, they are continually kindled into flame, and inflict on those who have once been taken captive by them the disease that never dies.

ON THE POSTERITY OF CAIN AND HIS EXILE
(DE POSTERITATE CAINI)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

THE treatise begins with a denunciation of anthropomorphism and a defence of allegorical interpretation suggested by the statement that "Cain went out from the face of God" (1-7).

What the Lawgiver teaches by these words is that the soul that forfeits with Adam, or forgoes with Cain, the power of seeing God, loses the joy of the quest of Him, experienced by Moses and by Abraham (8-21); and incurs instability, in lieu of the firm standing gained by them through nearness to God (22-32). Moreover, he is 'wedded' to the impious view that "man is the measure of all things," and fails to regard his offspring, as Seth regarded his, as the gift of God (33-48).

The "city builded" by Cain is the creed set up by every impious soul. Its buildings are arguments, its inhabitants the self-conceited, its law lawlessness, its tower of confusion (Babel) the defence of its tenets. Even the lovers of Virtue are forced by the worldly to build such cities for them (49-59).

At this point (§ 60) Philo stops to illustrate, from the instance of Hebron, how names, like 'Enoch,' 'Methuselah,' 'Lamech,' can have two discrepant shades of meaning, as they have when borne by descendants of Cain and when borne by descendants of Seth. He is also led to give examples of that which is later in time being given precedence over what is earlier, as Hebron was placed above Zoan (60-65).

PHILO

Having now made clear the nature of the creed which the Cain-like soul sets up, Philo turns to its offspring—'Gaidad' (or 'Irada') is the "flock" of untended irrational faculties. 'Maiel' (or 'Mehujael') means "away from the Love of God"; 'Methuselah' is one "incurring soul death"; and Lamech one "low-cringing"; who "takes to himself" as wives Adah and Zillah (66-74).

Here Philo cannot refrain from pointing out the wrongness of a man taking a wife to himself instead of receiving her as a gift from God. He makes an attempt to account for the fact that the self-same expression is used of Abraham, Isaac, and Moses (75-78).

'Adah' = 'Witness,' and is like success, leading us to think our actions right because of what they bring. Her son is 'Jobel' = "one altering," the remover of Virtue's boundaries fixed by right reason, making virtues vices (79-93).

Here follow some subtle remarks on Leviticus xxvii. 32 f. ("both shall be holy"), and on the proofs of holiness, and the number 10, all tending to show that the Law is opposed to 'altering' (94-97).

Jobel is also the father of rearers of 'cattle'; and cattle "are soul-less passions (98 f.).

Jobel's son is Jubal, the uttered word, "inclining this way and that," with no sure, firm, speech. He is also the originator of musical instruments, which are inferior to song-birds, but, like articulate speech, capable of such varied utterance, that it is natural that they should be invented by one who knows no abiding, and is son of one who alters all things (100-111).

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN

Adah having been dealt with (79-111), we turn to Zillah, whose name signifies "shadow," and who is therefore a symbol of the unsubstantial goods of the body and the outside world. Her son, Tubal, bears a name meaning "all in one," and represents the "health and wealth" which men deem the sum of human bliss. He is, by trade, a 'hammerer,' maker of war and munitions of war, for lusts are the real war-makers and batterers of mankind. Verily is he son of 'Shadow.' His sister is Noeman or "fatness," the product of plenty (112-123).

Lamech, his wives and progeny having been dealt with (73-123), we are brought to Seth, in whom the murdered Abel comes to life. His name signifies "Watering," for the Mind waters the senses, as the Word of God waters the Virtues, which are symbolized by the four "heads" of the river going out of Eden. The word "heads" is used to indicate the sovereignty conferred by Virtues. The "River" is the Word of God, ever flowing for souls that love God.

"Watering" is so apt a figure of teaching, that Philo is soon showing us Hagar, who represents preliminary education, filling her water-skin from the well of knowledge, to give drink to the boy, who is the soul in its first craving for instruction, that he may grow up to be an 'archer,' directing arguments with sure aim. But Philo hastens to give us the picture of Rebecca supplying the water of perfection to the servant of Abraham. Her going down to the well of God's wisdom shows us that a sense of our own weakness is the beginning of stepping upwards. Her pitcher represents the directness of spiritual teaching, in contrast with the earlier, indirect, instruction through the senses and sensible objects, represented by Hagar's bulky water-skin.

PHILO

Every detail of Rebecca's behaviour to Eliezer brings out a characteristic of the true teacher. She addresses him respectfully. She forgets self in her concern for his need. She says "Drink," not "I will give thee to drink." She lets the pitcher down on her left fore-arm and tilts it, suiting her action to the 'pupil's' capacity. She does not forget to water the camels, i.e. to encourage memory, for these animals chew the cud; and they are watered from the well, itself a symbol of memory, from whose depths we draw by the aid of a reminder. The readiness of the camel for toil brings Philo to the Water of Marah, and to the tree by means of which the Israelites, after their toilsome march from Egypt, tasted the sweetness that is essential to fruitful toil. Philo cannot pass over the water which the worshippers of the golden calf were made to drink. His main point is that the grinding down of the calf, the symbol, like Egypt and the animals it worshipped, of the body, shows the inferiority of bodily advantages. Then the ear-rings of which the calf was made show the inferiority of hearing to sight, and the greatness of intuition, implied in the words "See that I AM," words which are equivalent to "Behold My subsistence," the essence or quality of God being invisible (138-169).

Returning to Gen. iv. 25 Philo deduces from the word "raised up out of" (the earth) the doctrine that God sows nothing futile in our souls. He takes the word "another" (seed) to mean 'other than Cain' in one way, 'other than Abel' in another way, and goes on to work out Seth's 'otherness' from Abel. Whereas Abel has relinquished all that is mortal, and gone hence to a higher life, Seth, sprung from human excellence, will never relinquish the human race, but be 'enlarged' in it. He is 'enlarged' in righteous Noah, the tenth from Adam; in faithful Abraham, another tenth; in Moses, wise in all things, seventh from Abraham. The limit of knowledge attained by Seth is Noah's starting-point; Noah's limit is Abraham's starting-point; and Abraham's limit the starting-point of Moses (170-174).

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN

In the passage with which the treatise closes we have one of the writer's contrasts. "God hath raised up to me" is contrasted with the folly and impiety of Lot and his daughters, 'Counsel' and 'Consent,' and with Rachel's faulty cry to Jacob, "Give me children." As she learned from Jacob's rebuke, "Am I in the place of God?" to say "Let God add to me another son," so let us, if we so err, repent. The gross sin of Onan is rebuked, and the act of Phinehas the "Mouth-muzzle," is interpreted as meaning that "he put a stop to the revolt within himself, and turned clean away from his own pleasure." The last words are a reflection, as appropriate to the twentieth as to the first century, that the soul is the theatre of the most dire wars, and that all wars come from disordered souls (175-185).

ΠΕΡΙ ΤΩΝ ΤΟΥ ΔΟΚΗΣΙΣΟΦΟΥ ΚΑΙΝ ΕΓΓΟΝΩΝ ΚΑΙ ΩΣ ΜΕΤΑΝΑΣΤΗΣ ΓΙΓ-ΝΕΤΑΙ

- <sup>1</sup> [226] I. “ Ἐξῆλθε δὲ Κάιν ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ᾤκησεν ἐν γῆ Ναϊδ κατέναντι Ἐδέμ ” (Gen. iv. 16). νυνὶ διαπορῶμεν, εἰ χρή τῶν ἐν ταῖς διερμηνευθείσαις βίβλοις ὑπὸ Μωυσέως τροπικώτερον ἀκούειν, τῆς ἐν τοῖς ὀνόμασι προχείρου φαντασίας πολὺ τάληθοῦς ἀπαδούσης. εἰ γὰρ πρόσωπον μὲν ἔχει τὸ ὄν, ὁ δὲ βουλόμενος αὐτὸ καταλιπεῖν ἐτέρωσε μετανίστασθαι ῥᾶστα δύναται, τί τὴν Ἐπικούρειον ἀσέβειαν ἢ τὴν τῶν Αἰγυπτίῳ ἀθεότητα ἢ τὰς μυθικὰς ὑποθέσεις, ὧν μεστός ὁ βίος ἐστί, παραιτούμεθα; πρόσωπον μὲν γὰρ ζώου τμημά ἐστιν, ὁ δὲ θεὸς ὅλον, οὐ μέρος· ὥστ’ ἀνάγκη καὶ τὰ ἄλλα προσαναπλάττειν, αὐχένα καὶ στέρνα [227] καὶ χεῖρας <καὶ> βάσεις, ἔτι | δ’ αὖ γαστέρα καὶ τὰ γεννητικὰ καὶ τὸ ἄλλο τῶν ἐντὸς τε καὶ ἐκτὸς <sup>4</sup> ἀνάριθμον πλήθος. ἀκολουθεῖ δ’ ἐξ ἀνάγκης τῷ ἀνθρωπομόρφῳ τὸ ἀνθρωποπαθές, ἐπεὶ καὶ ταῦτα οὐ περιττὰ καὶ παρέλκοντα, τῆς δὲ τῶν ἐχόντων ἐπίκουρα ἀσθενείας ἢ φύσις ἀπειργάζεται τὰ ὅσα πρὸς τὰς οἰκείας χρείας τε καὶ ὑπηρεσίας ἀκο-

<sup>a</sup> i.e., that God has a human form. See App. p. 498.

<sup>b</sup> i.e., their worship of animals.

ON THE POSTERITY OF CAIN AND HIS EXILE

I. " And Cain went out from the face of God, and dwelt in the land of Naid, over against Eden " (Gen. iv. 16). Let us here raise the question whether in the books in which Moses acts as God's interpreter we ought to take his statements figuratively, since the impression made by the words in their literal sense is greatly at variance with truth. For if the Existent Being has a face, and he that wishes to quit its sight can with perfect ease remove elsewhere, what ground have we for rejecting the impious doctrines of Epicurus,<sup>a</sup> or the atheism of the Egyptians,<sup>b</sup> or the mythical plots of play and poem of which the world is full? For a face is a piece of a living creature, and God is a whole not a part, so that we shall have to assign to Him the other parts of the body as well, neck, breasts, hands, feet, to say nothing of the belly and genital organs, together with the innumerable inner and outer organs. And if God has human forms and parts, He must needs also have human passions and experiences. For in the case of these organs, as in all other cases, Nature has not made idle superfluities, but aids to the weakness of those furnished with them. And she adjusts to them, according to their several needs. all that enables them λούθως ἐφαρμόττουσα. τὸ δὲ ὄν οὐδενὸς χρεῖον, ὥστ' εἰ μηδὲ τῆς ἀπὸ τῶν μερῶν ὠφελείας, οὐδ' ἂν ἔχοι μέρη τὸ παράπαν.

- 5 II. Ἐξέρχεται δὲ πόθεν; ἢ ἐκ τῶν βασιλείων τοῦ πανηγεμόνος; θεοῦ δὲ οἶκος αἰσθητὸς τίς ἂν εἶη πλὴν ὅδε ὁ κόσμος, ὃν καταλείπειν ἀμήχανόν τε καὶ ἀδύνατον; πάντα γὰρ ὧν γένεσις ἐστὶν οὐρανοῦ κύκλος περισφίγξας ἐντὸς ἑαυτοῦ κατέχει. καὶ γὰρ αἱ τῶν τετελευτηκότων ἀναστοιχειούμεναι μοῖραι πάλιν εἰς τὰς τοῦ παντὸς δυνάμεις ἐξ ὧν συνέστησαν ἀποκρίνονται, τοῦ δανεισθέντος ἐκάστῳ δανείσματος κατὰ προθεσμίας ἀνίσους ἀποδιδόμενου τῇ συμβαλοῦσῃ φύσει, ὅποτε βουλευθεῖν τὰ ἑαυτῆς χρέα κομίζεσθαι.
- 6 Καὶ μὴν ὃ γε ἐξῴων ἀπὸ τινος ἐν ἑτέρῳ χωρίῳ τοῦ ἀπολειπομένου ὑπ' αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup>. τῷ δὲ συμβέβηκεν ἀκολουθεῖν τὸ χηρεύειν τινὰ μέρη τῶν ἐν κόσμῳ, θεοῦ μηδὲν κενὸν μηδὲ ἔρημον ἑαυτοῦ καταλελοιπότης, ἀλλὰ πάντα διὰ πάντων ἐκπεπληρωκότος.
- 7 Εἰ δὲ μήτε πρόσωπον ἔχει ὁ θεὸς ἅτε τὰς τῶν γεγονότων ιδιότητας ἀπάντων ἐκβεβηκῶς μήτε ἐν μέρει καταγίνεται ἅτε περιέχων, οὐ περιεχόμενος, ἀδύνατον <δ'> ἐστὶν ὥσπερ ἐκ πόλεως τοῦδε τοῦ κόσμου μεταναστῆναί τι μέρος αὐτοῦ μηδενὸς ἀπολειφθέντος ἔξω, λοιπὸν ἂν εἶη λογισαμένους ὅτι τῶν προταθέντων οὐδὲν κυριολογεῖται τὴν δι' ἀλληγορίας ὁδὸν φυσικοῖς <φίλην> ἀνδράσι τρέπεσθαι τὴν ἀρχὴν ἐνθένδε τοῦ λόγου ποιησαμένους.

<sup>1</sup> τοῦ ἀπολειπομένου ὑπ' αὐτοῦ is printed from the conjecture of Wendland and Holwerda.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 498.

<sup>b</sup> Those who discard alike mythical and popular interpretations of God and things Divine, and seek to find the truth or reality underlying statements concerning them.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 4-7

to render their own special services and ministries. But the Existent Being is in need of nothing, and so, not needing the benefit that parts bestow, can have no parts at all.

II. And whence does Cain "go out"? From the palace of the Lord of all? But what dwelling apparent to the senses could God have, save this world, for the quitting of which no power or device avails? For all created things are enclosed and kept within itself by the circle of the sky. Indeed the particles of the deceased break up into their original elements and are again distributed to the various forces of the universe out of which they were constituted, and the loan which was lent<sup>a</sup> to each man is repaid, after longer or shorter terms, to Nature his creditor, at such time as she may choose to recover what she herself had lent.

Again he that goes out from someone is in a different place from him whom he leaves behind. (If, then, Cain goes out from God), it follows that some portions of the universe are bereft of God. Yet God has left nothing empty or destitute of Himself, but has completely filled all things.

Well, if God has not a face, transcending as He does the peculiarities that mark all created things; if He is to be found not in some particular part only, seeing that He contains all and is not Himself contained by anything; if it is impossible for some part of this world to remove from it as from a city, seeing that nothing has been left over outside it; the only thing left for us to do is to make up our minds that none of the propositions put forward is literally intended and to take the path of figurative interpretation so dear to philosophical<sup>b</sup> souls. Our argument

8 εἰ τὸ ἐκ προσώπου μεταναστῆναι βασιλέως θνητοῦ χαλεπὸν ἔστι, πῶς οὐ παγχάλεπον τὴν θεοῦ φαντασίαν καταλιπόντα οἴχεσθαι, μηκέτι εἰς ὄψιν ἀφικνεῖσθαι τὴν αὐτοῦ διεγνωκότα; τοῦτο δ' ἔστιν ἀφάνταστον αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι τὸ ψυχῆς ὄμμα πηρω-
 9 θέντα; καὶ ὅσοι μὲν ἐξ ἀνάγκης τοῦτο ὑπέμειναν ἀπαραιτήτου δυνάμεως κράτει πιεσθέντες, ἔλεου μᾶλλον ἢ μίσους τυγχάνοιεν ἂν· ὅσοι δὲ ἐκουσίῳ γνώμῃ τὸ ὄν ἐξετράποντο, ὑπερβάλλοντες καὶ τὸν αὐτῆς ὄρον κακίας—τί γὰρ ἂν ἰσοστάσιον εὐρεθείη κακόν;—μὴ τὰς ἐξ ἔθους, ἀλλὰ καινὰς καὶ παρηλλαγμένας διδότησαν δίκας. ἧ καινοτέραν καὶ μείζονα ἐπινοῶν οὐκ ἂν τις εὖροι τῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ πανηγεμόνος ἐξόδου καὶ φυγῆς.

10 [228] III. | Τὸν μὲν οὖν Ἀδὰμ ὁ θεὸς ἐκβάλλει, ὁ δὲ Κάιν ἐθελοντῆς ἐξέρχεται, δηλοῦντος ἡμῖν Μωυσέως ἐκάτερον τροπῆς εἶδος, ἐκούσιόν τε καὶ ἀκούσιον. ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν ἀκούσιον ἅτε οὐχ ἡμετέρα γνώμῃ συνιστάμενον λήψεται τὴν ἐνδεχομένην αὐθις ἴασιν· “ἐξαναστήσει γὰρ ὁ θεὸς σπέρμα ἕτερον αὐτ’ Ἀβελ, ὃν ἀπέκτεινε Κάιν” (Gen. iv. 25), ψυχῇ τῇ μὴ παρ’ ἑαυτῆς τραπέισι, γέννημα
 11 ἄρρεν, Σῆθ. τὸν ποτισμόν. τὸ δὲ ἐκούσιον ἅτε βουλή καὶ προμηθεία γεγόμενον ἀνιάτους εἰς αἰὲ κῆρας ἐνδέξεται. καθάπερ γὰρ τὰ ἐκ προνοίας ἀμείνω τῶν ἀκουσίων κατορθώματα, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον ἐν τοῖς ἀμαρτήμασι κουφότερα τῶν ἐκουσίων τὰ ἀκούσια.

<sup>a</sup> Heinemann's conjecture is adopted. See De Agricultura 176, 179, 180.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 8-11

must start in this way. If it is a difficult thing to remove out of sight of a mortal monarch, must it not be a thousandfold more difficult to quit the vision of God and be gone, resolved henceforth to shun the sight of Him ; in other words to become incapable of receiving a mental picture of Him through having lost the sight of the soul's eye? Men who have suffered this loss under compulsion, overwhelmed by the force of an inexorable power, deserve pity rather than hatred. But those who have of their own free choice turned away and departed from the Existent Being, transcending the utmost limit of wickedness itself—for no evil could be found equivalent to it—these must pay no ordinary penalties, but such as are specially devised and far beyond the ordinary. Now no effort of thought could hit upon a penalty greater and more unheard of than to go forth into banishment from the Ruler of the Universe.

III. Adam, then, is driven out by God ; Cain goes out voluntarily. Moses is showing us each form of moral failure,<sup>a</sup> one of free choice, the other not so. The involuntary act, not owing its existence to our deliberate judgement, is to obtain later on such healing as the case admits of, " for God shall raise up another seed in place of Abel whom Cain slew " (Gen. iv. 25). This seed is a male offspring, Seth or " Watering," raised up to the soul whose fall did not originate in itself. The voluntary act, inasmuch as it was committed with forethought and of set purpose, must incur woes for ever beyond healing. For even as right actions that spring from previous intention are of greater worth than those that are involuntary, so, too, among sins those which are involuntary are less weighty than those which are voluntary.

PHILO

- 12 IV. Τὸν μὲν οὖν Κάιν ἐκ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ μεταστάντα ἢ τιμωρὸς ἀσεβῶν ἐκδέξεται δίκη. Μωυσῆς δὲ τοῖς γνωρίμοις αὐτοῦ παράγγελμα κάλλιστον ὑποθήσεται, “ἀγαπᾶν τὸν θεὸν καὶ εἰσακούειν καὶ ἔχεσθαι αὐτοῦ” (Deut. xxx. 20). ταύτην γὰρ εἶναι ζωὴν τὴν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν εὐήμερόν τε καὶ μακραίωνα. πάνυ δ’ ἐμφαντικῶς ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ τριποθήτου καὶ ἀξιεράστου καλεῖ τιμὴν εἰπὼν ἔχεσθαι αὐτοῦ, τὸ συνεχές καὶ ἐπάλληλον καὶ ἀδιάστατον τῆς κατ’ οἰκείωσιν ἀρμονίας καὶ ἐνώσεως παριστάς.
- 13 “Α μὲν δὴ τοῖς ἄλλοις παραινεί, ταῦτά ἐστι καὶ τοιαῦτα. αὐτὸς δ’ οὕτως ἀπαύστως ὀρέγεται τοῦ ὄραν καὶ πρὸς αὐτοῦ ὄρασθαι, ὥσθ’ ἵκετευεῖ δυστόπαστον οὖσαν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φύσιν δηλῶσαι γνωρίμωσ (Exod. xxiii. 13), ἕν’ ἤδη ποτὲ ἀψευδοῦσ δόξης μεταλαβῶν ἀβεβαίου ἐνδοιασμοῦ βεβαιοτάτην πίστιν ἀλλάξῃται. καὶ ἐπιτείνων οὐκ ἀνήσει τὸν πόθον, ἀλλὰ καὶ γνοὺς ὅτι δυσθηράτου μᾶλλον δὲ ἀνεφίκτου πράγματος ἐρᾷ, ὅμως ἐπαγωνιεῖται μηδὲν συντόνου σπουδῆς ἀνιείς, ἀλλὰ πᾶσι τοῖς παρ’ ἑαυτοῦ εἰς τὸ τυχεῖν ἀπροφασίστως καὶ
- 14 ἀόκνωσ συγχρώμενος. V. ἤδη γοῦν καὶ εἰς τὸν γνόφον ὅπου ἦν ὁ θεὸς εἰσελεύσεται (Exod. xx. 21). τουτέστιν εἰς τὰς ἀδύτους καὶ ἀειδεῖς περὶ τοῦ ὄντος ἐννοίας. οὐ γὰρ ἐν γνόφῳ τὸ αἴτιον
- [229] οὐδὲ συνόλωσ ἐν τόπῳ, | ἀλλ’ ὑπεράνω καὶ τόπου καὶ χρόνου· τὰ γὰρ γεγονότα πάντα ὑποζεύξας
- 334

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 12-14

IV. Cain, then, has left the face of God to fall into the hands of Justice who takes vengeance on the impious. But Moses will lay down for his pupils a charge most noble "to love God and hearken to and cleave to Him" (Deut. xxx. 20); assuring them that this is the life that brings true prosperity and length of days. And his way of inviting them to honour Him Who is the worthy object of strong yearning and devoted love is vivid and expressive. He bids them "cleave to Him," bringing out by the use of this word how constant and continuous and unbroken is the concord and union that comes through making God our own.

These and other exhortations like these does Moses address to others. But so unceasingly does he himself yearn to see God and to be seen by Him, that he implores Him to reveal clearly His own nature (Exod. xxxiii. 13), which is so hard to divine, hoping thus to obtain at length a view free from all falsehood, and to exchange doubt and uncertainty for a most assured confidence. Nor will he abate the intensity of his desire, but although he is aware that he is enamoured of an object which entails a hard quest, nay, which is out of reach, he will nevertheless struggle on with no relaxation of his earnest endeavour, but honestly and resolutely enlisting all his faculties to co-operate for the attainment of his object. V. So see him enter into the thick darkness where God was (Exod. xx. 21), that is into conceptions regarding the Existent Being that belong to the unapproachable region where there are no material forms. For the Cause of all is not in the thick darkness, nor locally in any place at all, but high above both place and time. For He has placed all

- ἑαυτῷ περιέχεται μὲν ὑπ' οὐδενός, ἐπιβέβηκε δὲ πᾶσιν. ἐπιβεβηκῶς δὲ καὶ ἕξω τοῦ δημιουργηθέντος ὧν οὐδὲν ἦττον πεπλήρωκε τὸν κόσμον ἑαυτοῦ· διὰ γὰρ <τῶν ὄλων τὰς ἑαυτοῦ> δυνάμεις<sup>1</sup>
 ἄχρι περάτων τείνας ἕκαστον ἐκάστω κατὰ τοὺς 15 ἁρμονίας λόγους συνύφημεν. ὅταν οὖν φιλόθεος ψυχὴ τὸ τί ἐστὶ τὸ ὄν κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν ζητῆ, εἰς
 ἀειδῆ καὶ ἀόρατον ἔρχεται ζήτησιν, ἐξ ἧς αὐτῇ περιγίνεται μέγιστον ἀγαθόν, καταλαβεῖν ὅτι ἀ-κατάληπτος ὁ κατὰ τὸ εἶναι θεὸς παντὶ καὶ αὐτὸ 16 τοῦτο ἰδεῖν ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀόρατος. δοκεῖ δέ μοι καὶ
 πρὶν ἄρξασθαι τῆσδε τῆς σκέψεως ὁ ἱεροφάντης
 τὸ ἄχρηστον<sup>2</sup> αὐτῆς κατανοῆσαι, ἐξ ὧν αὐτὸν
 ἱκετεύει τὸν ὄντα μηνυτὴν καὶ ὑφηγητὴν τῆς ἑαυτοῦ φύσεως γενέσθαι. λέγει γάρ· “ἐμφάνισόν
 μοι σεαυτόν” (Exod. xxxiii. 13), ἐναργέστατα διὰ τούτου παριστὰς ὅτι τῶν γεγονότων ἱκανὸς
 οὐδὲ εἰς ἕξ ἑαυτοῦ τὸν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι θεὸν ἀναδιδα-17 χθῆναι. VI. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὸν τόπον, ὃν εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ θεός, τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἀναβλέψας ὄρᾳ τὸν τόπον μακρόθεν (Gen. xxi. 3, 4). ποῖον τόπον; ἄρ' εἰς ὃν ἦλθε; καὶ πῶς ἐστὶ
 18 μακράν, εἴπερ ἔφθη παραγενόμενος; ἀλλὰ μήποτε ὅπερ αἰνίττεται τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν· ὁ σοφὸς αἰεὶ γλιχόμενος κατανοῆσαι τὸν ἡγεμόνα τοῦ παντός, ὅταν
 τὴν δι' ἐπιστήμης καὶ σοφίας ἀτραπὸν βαδίξῃ, λόγοις μὲν προεντυγχάνει θείοις παρ' οἷς προ-

<sup>1</sup> τῶν ὄλων τὰς ἑαυτοῦ δυνάμεις, from Wendland's conjecture based on Diels.

<sup>2</sup> ἄχρηστον is the translator's conjecture for the μέγιστον of the mss. But τὸ μέγιστον might mean “the main point.” See App. p. 498.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 14-18

creation under His control, and is contained by nothing, but transcends all. But though transcending and being beyond what He has made, none the less has He filled the universe with Himself; for He has caused His powers to extend themselves throughout the Universe to its utmost bounds, and in accordance with the laws of harmony has knit each part to each. When therefore the God-loving soul probes the question of the essence of the Existent Being, he enters on a quest of that which is beyond matter and beyond sight. And out of this quest there accrues to him a vast boon, namely to apprehend that the God of real Being is apprehensible by no one, and to see precisely this, that He is incapable of being seen. But the holy Guide seems to me even before he began this search to have discerned its futility. That he did so is evident from his imploring the Existent One to be His own Interpreter and reveal His own Nature. He says, "Manifest Thyself to me" (Exod. xxxiii. 13), showing quite clearly by so saying that there is not a single created being capable of attaining by his own efforts the knowledge of the God Who verily exists. VI. This must be borne in mind if we are to understand what we read about Abraham, how, on reaching the place of which God had told him, he looked up on the third day and "seeth the place from afar" (Gen. xxii. 3 f.). What place? The one which he had reached? And how can it be far off if he is already there? It may be that what we are told under a figure is to this effect. The wise man is ever longing to discern the Ruler of the Universe. As he journeys along the path that takes him through knowledge and wisdom, he comes into contact first with divine words, and

- καταλύει, τρέπεσθαι δὲ τὴν ἄλλην ἐγνωκῶς ἐπέχεται· διοιχθέντων γὰρ τῶν διανοίας ὀμμάτων ὀξυδερκέστερον εἶδεν ὅτι ἐπὶ τὴν δυσαλώτου πράγματος θήραν ἀποδέδυκεν<sup>1</sup> ἐξαναχωροῦντος αἰεὶ καὶ μακρὰν ἀφιστὰμένου καὶ φθάνοντος ἀπείρω τῷ
- 19 μεταξὺ διαστήματι τοὺς διώκοντας. εὖ γοῦν νομίζει, ὅτι πάνθ' ὅσα τῶν ὑπ' οὐρανὸν ὠκυδρομώτατα ἐστάναι ἂν δόξαι πρὸς τὴν ἡλίου καὶ σελήνης καὶ τῶν ἄλλων φορὰν ἀστέρων ἀντεξετασθέντα. καίτοι σύμπας οὐρανοῦς ὑπὸ θεοῦ γέγονεν, αἰεὶ δὲ τὸ ποιοῦν τοῦ γινομένου προελήλυθεν· ὥστε ἐξ ἀνάγκης οὐ μόνον τὰ ἄλλα τῶν παρ' ἡμῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ πάντων ὀξυκινητότατον, ὁ νοῦς, ἀπεριγράφοις <ἂν> ἀπολειφθείη τῆς καταλήψεως τοῦ αἰτίου διαστήμασιν. ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν ἀστέρες παραμείβονται τὰ κινούμενα καὶ αὐτοὶ κινούμενοι, ὁ δὲ θεός, τὸ παραδοξότατον, ἐστὼς
- 20 ἔφθακε πάντα. λέγεται δ' ὅτι καὶ ἐγγύτατα ὁ αὐτὸς ὢν καὶ μακρὰν ἐστίν, ἀπτόμενος μὲν ταῖς ποιητικαῖς καὶ κολαστηρίοις δυνάμεσι πλησίον ὑπαρχούσαις ἐκάστου, πορρωτάτω δὲ τῆς κατὰ τὸ εἶναι φύσεως αὐτοῦ τὸ γενητὸν ἀπεληλακῶς, ὡς μηδὲ κατὰ τὰς ἀκραιφνεῖς καὶ ἀσωμάτους τῆς |
- [230] διανοίας ἐπιβολὰς ψαῦσαι δύνασθαι.
- 21 Τοῖς μὲν οὖν φιλοθείοις τὸ ὄν ἀναζητοῦσι, κἂν μηδέποτε εὖρωσι, συγχαίρομεν—ἱκανὴ γὰρ ἐξ ἑαυτῆς προευφραίνειν ἐστὶν ἢ τοῦ καλοῦ ζήτησις, κἂν ἀτυχήται τὸ τέλος—τῷ δὲ φιλαύτῳ Κἂν συναχθόμεθα, ὃς ἀφάνταστον τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ψυχὴν

<sup>1</sup> ἀποδέδυκεν] Wendland's conjecture for ἀναδέδυκεν.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 18-21

with these he makes a preliminary stay, and though he had meant to go the remainder of the way, he comes to a stop. For the eyes of his understanding have been opened, and he sees perfectly clearly that he has engaged in the chase of a quarry hard to capture, which always eludes its pursuers and is off to a distance leaving them ever so far behind. Rightly does he reflect that all the fleetest things under the sky would be seen to be standing still, if their motion were compared with that of the sun and moon and the other heavenly bodies. And yet (he ponders) all heaven is God's handiwork, and that which makes is ever ahead of the thing made : it follows, then, that not only other things with which we are familiar, but that whose movement surpasses them all in swiftness, the mind, would come short of the apprehension of the First Cause by an immeasurable distance. But the strangest thing of all is, that whereas the heavenly bodies as they go past moving objects are themselves in motion, God who outstrips them all is motionless. Yea, we aver that remaining the same He is at once close to us and far from us. He takes hold of us by those forming and chastening powers which are so close to each one of us ; and yet He has driven created being far away from His essential Nature, so that we cannot touch it even with the pure spiritual contact of the understanding.

With the lovers of God, then, in their quest of the Existent One, even if they never find Him, we rejoice, for the quest of the Good and Beautiful, even if the goal be missed, is sufficient of itself to give a foretaste of gladness. But the self-loving Cain we commiserate, for he has left in the lurch his own soul τοῦ ὄντος καταλέλοιπεν, τὸ ᾧ μόνω βλέπειν ἠδύνατο ἔκουσίως πηρώσας.

- 22 VII. "Ἄξιον δὲ σκέψασθαι καὶ τὴν χώραν, εἰς ἣν ἐκ προσώπου γενόμενος θεοῦ στέλλεται· ἔστι δὲ ἣ καλεῖται σάλος, δηλοῦντος τοῦ νομοθέτου ὅτι ὁ ἄφρων ἀστάτοις καὶ ἀνιδρῦτοις ὄρμαῖς κεχρημένος σάλον καὶ κλόνον, οἷα κυμαῖνον πέλαγος πρὸς ἐναντίων πνευμάτων χειμῶνος ὥρα, ὑπομένει, γαλήνης δὲ ἢ νημερίας ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὄναρ ἐπήσθηται. ὥσπερ δ' ὅταν ναῦς σαλεύη θαλαττεύουσα, τότε οὔτε πλεῖν οὔτε ὀρμεῖν ἔστιν ἰκανή, διαφερομένη δὲ ὠδὲ κἀκεῖσε πρὸς ἑκάτερον τοῖχον ἀποκλίνει καὶ ταλαντεύουσα ἀντιρρέπει, οὕτως ὁ φαῦλος παραφόρῳ καὶ χειμαινούσῃ διανοίᾳ κεχρημένος εὐθύνειν τὸν ἑαυτοῦ πλοῦν ἀπταιστώσως ἀδυνατῶν αἰεὶ σαλεύει βίου μελετῶν ἀνατροπῆν.
- 23 Ὁ δ' εἰρμὸς τῆς ἀκολουθίας οὐ μετρίως με καταπλήττει· συμβαίνει γὰρ τὸ [μὲν] τῷ ἐστῶτι πλησιάζον ἡρεμίας διὰ πόθον ὁμοιότητος ἐφίεσθαι. τὸ μὲν οὖν ἀκλινῶς ἐστὼς ὁ θεὸς ἔστι, τὸ δὲ κινητὸν ἢ γένεσις· ὥστε ὁ μὲν προσίων θεῷ στάσεως ἐφίεται, ὁ δὲ ἀπαλλαττόμενος ἄτε γενέσει τῇ τρεπο-
- 24 μένῃ προσίων κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς φορεῖται. VIII. διὰ τοῦτο ἐν ταῖς ἀραῖς γέγραπται ὅτι "οὐκ ἀναπαύσει σε, οὐδ' οὐ μὴ γένηται στάσις τῷ ἴχνει τοῦ ποδός σου" καὶ μικρὸν ὕστερον ὅτι "ἔσται ἡ ζωὴ σου κρεμαμένη ἀπέναντι τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν σου" (Deut. xxviii. 65, 66). πέφυκε γὰρ ὁ ἄφρων αἰεὶ παρὰ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον κινούμενος ἡρεμία καὶ

<sup>a</sup> "Nod" is akin to the Hebrew for "toss."

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 21-24

bereft of any conception of the Existent One, having deliberately blinded the organ by which alone he could have seen Him.

VII. It is worth while to notice the country also into which he betakes himself when he has left the presence of God : it is the country called " Tossing. <sup>a</sup> " In this way the lawgiver indicates that the foolish man, being a creature of wavering and unsettled impulses, is subject to tossing and tumult, like the sea lashed by contrary winds when a storm is raging, and has never even in fancy had experience of quietness and calm. And as at a time when a ship is tossing at the mercy of the sea, it is capable neither of sailing nor of riding at anchor, but pitched about this way and that it rolls in turn to either side and moves uncertainly swaying to and fro ; even so the worthless man, with a mind reeling and storm-driven, powerless to direct his course with any steadiness, is always tossing, ready to make shipwreck of his life.

I am greatly struck by the perfect sequence of cause and effect in all this. Proximity to a stable object produces a desire to be like it and a longing for quiescence. Now that which is unwaveringly stable is God, and that which is subject to movement is creation. He therefore that draws nigh to God longs for stability, but he that forsakes Him, inasmuch as he approaches the unresting creation is, as we might expect, carried about. VIII. It is for this reason that it is written in the Curses " He shall not cause thee to rest, and there shall be no standing for the sole of thy feet," and a little later " thy life shall be hanging before thine eyes " (Deut. xxviii. 65, 66). For it is the nature of the foolish man to be ever moving contrary to right reason, and to be averse to

- ἀναπαύσει δυσμενῆς εἶναι καὶ ἐπὶ μηδενὸς ἐστάναι 25 παγίως καὶ ἐρηρεῖσθαι δόγματος. ἄλλοτε γοῦν
 ἄλλοῖα δοξάζει καὶ περὶ τῶν αὐτῶν ἔστιν ὅτε
 μηδενὸς περὶ αὐτὰ συμβεβηκότος καινοτέρου τάναν-τία, μέγας καὶ μικρὸς καὶ ἐχθρὸς καὶ φίλος καὶ
 πάνθ', ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, τὰ μαχόμενα ἐν ἀκαρεῖ
 [231] χρόνου γινόμενος. καὶ ἔστιν αὐτῷ, | ὅπερ ἔφη ὁ
 νομοθέτης, πᾶσα ἡ ζωὴ κρεμαμένη, βάσιν οὐκ ἔχουσα ἀκράδαντον, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τῶν ἀντισπώντων
 καὶ ἀντιμεθελκόντων ἀεὶ φορουμένη πραγμάτων.
 26 οὗ χάριν ἐν ἐτέροις "κεκατηραμένον ὑπὸ θεοῦ
 τὸν κρεμάμενον ἐπὶ ξύλου" φησὶν (Deut. xxi. 23),
 ὅτι, θεοῦ δέον ἐκκρέμασθαι, ὃ δὲ ἀπηώρησεν ἑαυτὸν
 σώματος, ὅς ἐστιν ἐν ἡμῖν ξύλινος ὄγκος, ἐπι-θυμίαν ἐλπίδος ἀντικαταλλαξάμενος, ἀγαθοῦ τελείου μέγιστον κακόν. ἐλπίς μὲν γὰρ τῶν ἀγαθῶν οὐσα προσδοκία ἐκ τοῦ φιλοδώρου θεοῦ τὴν διάνοιαν
 ἀρτᾶ, ἐπιθυμία δὲ ἀλόγους ἐμποιοῦσα ὀρέξεις ἐκ
 τοῦ σώματος, ὃ δεξαμενὴν καὶ χώραν ἡδονῶν ἡ 27 φύσις ἐδημιούργησεν. IX. οὗτοι μὲν οὖν ὡσπερ ἀπ' ἀγχόνης τῆς ἐπιθυμίας ἐκκρεμάσθωσαν.
 Ἀβραάμ δὲ ὁ σοφὸς ἐπειδὴ ἔστηκε, συνεγγίζει
 τῷ ἐστῶτι θεῷ· λέγει γὰρ ὅτι "ἐστὼς ἦν ἔναντι κυρίου καὶ ἐγγίσας εἶπεν" (Gen. xviii. 22, 23).
 ὄντως γὰρ ἀτρέπτω ψυχῇ πρὸς τὸν ἀτρεπτον θεὸν
 μόνῃ πρόσδοδος ἐστι, καὶ ἡ τοῦτον διακειμένη τὸν
 τρόπον ἐγγὺς ὡς ἀληθῶς ἴσταται δυνάμειως θείας.
 28 Τό γε μὴν χρησθὲν τῷ πανσόφῳ Μωυσῆ λόγιον ἐναργέστατα δηλοῖ τὴν περὶ τὸν σπουδαῖον βεβαιο-τάτην εὐστάθειαν, ἔστι δὲ τὸ λόγιον τοιόνδε· "σὺ
 δὲ αὐτοῦ στήθι μετ' ἐμοῦ" (Deut. v. 31). ἐξ οὗ

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 24-28

rest and quietness, and never to plant himself firmly and fixedly on any principle. He has one set of views at one time, another set at another, and sometimes holds conflicting views about the same matters, though no fresh element has been introduced into them. He becomes great and small, foe and friend, and nearly every other pair of opposites in a moment of time. And, as the lawgiver said, his whole life is hanging, with no firm foothold, but always swept off its feet by interests drawing and dragging him in opposite directions. This is why the lawgiver says in another place that "he that hangeth on a tree is cursed of God" (Deut. xxi. 23), for, whereas it behoves us to hang upon God, the man of whom we are thinking suspended himself from his body, which is a log-like mass in us. By doing so he gave up hope and took desire in its place, a grievous evil in place of a supreme good. For hope, being an expectation of good things, fastens the mind upon the bountiful God; whereas desire, infusing irrational cravings, fastens it on the body, which Nature wrought as a receptacle and abode of pleasures. IX. Let such men be hung on desire as from a halter. But Abraham the wise, being one who stands, draws near to God the standing One; for it says "he was standing before the Lord and he drew near and said" (Gen. xviii. 22 f.). For only a truly unchanging soul has access to the unchanging God, and the soul that is of such a disposition does in very deed stand near to the Divine power.

But what shows in the clearest light the firm steadfastness of the man of worth is the oracle communicated to the all-wise Moses which runs thus: "But as for thee stand thou here by Me"<sup>a</sup> (Deut. v. 31).

<sup>a</sup> or "by Me myself."

- δύο παρίσταται, ἔν μὲν ὅτι τὸ ὄν τὸ τὰ ἄλλα
 κινοῦν καὶ τρέπον ἀκίνητόν τε καὶ ἄτρεπτον, ἕτερον δ' ὅτι τῆς ἑαυτοῦ φύσεως, ἡρεμίας, τῷ
 σπουδαίῳ μεταδίδωσιν. ὡς γὰρ οἶμαι κανόνι ὀρθῶ
 τὰ στρεβλὰ εὐθύνεται, οὕτως τὰ κινούμενα κράτει 29 τοῦ ἐστῶτος ἐπέχεται τε καὶ ἴσταται. νυνὶ μὲν οὖν ἐτέρῳ στήναι μετ' αὐτοῦ παραγγέλλει. ἀλλα-χόθι δέ φησιν· “ ἐγὼ καταβήσομαι μετὰ σοῦ εἰς Αἴγυπτον, καὶ ἀναβιβάσω σε εἰς τέλος ” (Gen.
 xlv. 4), οὐχί σὺ μετ' ἐμοῦ. διὰ τί; ὅτι θεοῦ
 μὲν ἴδιον ἡρεμία καὶ στάσις, γενέσεως δὲ μετάβασίς 30 τε καὶ μεταβατικὴ πᾶσα κίνησις. ὅταν μὲν οὖν πρὸς τὸ ἴδιον ἀγαθὸν καλῆ, “ σὺ μετ' ἐμοῦ στήθι ”
 φησίν, οὐκ “ ἐγὼ μετὰ σοῦ ”· οὐ γὰρ στήσεται ὁ θεός, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ ἔστηκεν. ὅταν δὲ πρὸς τὸ οἰκείον
 γενέσεως ἔρχηται, ὀρθότατα ἐρεῖ· “ ἐγὼ μετὰ σοῦ καταβήσομαι.” σοὶ γὰρ ἢ τόπων ἐνάλλαξις ἀρμόζει.
 ὥστε μετ' ἐμοῦ μὲν οὐδεὶς κάτεισιν—ἐγὼ γὰρ οὐ τρεπόμενος—στήσεται δ' ὅτιπερ ἡρεμία μοι
 φίλον· σὺν δὲ τοῖς κατιοῦσι μεταβατικῶς—ἀδελφὸν
 γὰρ καὶ συγγενὲς αὐτοῖς μετάβασις—ἐγὼ κατα-βήσομαι τονικῶς, οὐ χωρία ἐναλλάπτων, ὅς τὸ 31 πᾶν ἐμαυτοῦ πεπλήρωκα. καὶ τοῦτο μέντοι ποιῶ
 διὰ φύσεως οἴκτον λογικῆς, ἵνα ἐκ τοῦ τῶν παθῶν
 1232] ἄδου πρὸς τὸν | ὀλύμπιον χῶρον ἀρετῆς ἀναβιβασθῆ
 ποδηγετοῦντος ἐμοῦ, ὅς τὴν εἰς οὐρανὸν ἄγουσαν

<sup>a</sup> τονικῶς (from τείνωμαι “ I extend myself ”; lit., “ by way
 344

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 28-31

This oracle proves two things, one that the Existent Being who moves and turns all else is Himself exempt from movement and turning; and secondly that He makes the worthy man sharer of His own Nature, which is repose. For I take it that, just as crooked things are straightened by a correct ruler, so moving things are brought to a stop and made stationary by the force of Him Who stands. In this case He charges another to stand with Him. Elsewhere He says, "I will go down with thee into Egypt, and will bring thee up at last" (Gen. xlv. 4). He does not say "thou with Me." Why is this? Because quiescence and abiding are characteristic of God, but change of place and all movement that makes for such change is characteristic of creation. When then He invites a man to the good peculiar to Him, He says "Do thou stand with Me," not "I with thee:" for in God's case standing is not a future but an ever present act. But when He comes to that which is proper to creation, His words will quite rightly be "I will go down with thee," for to thee change of place is appropriate. Accordingly with Me no one shall go down—for I know no turning or change—but one shall stand, seeing that quiescence is dear to Me. But with those who go down in the sense of changing their place—for change of place is near of kin to them—I will go down, in all-pervading Presence <sup>a</sup> without any alteration of locality, seeing I have filled the universe with Myself. I do this in pity for rational nature, that it may be caused to rise out of the nether world of the passions into the upper region of virtue guided step by step by Me, Who have laid down the road that leads to of self-extension") from Mangey's conjecture. See De Sacrificiis 68 with note, App. p. 491.

ὁδὸν ἀνατεμῶν λεωφόρον ἰκέτισι ψυχαῖς, ὡς μὴ κάμνοιεν βαδίζουσαι, πάσαις ἀποδέδειχα.

- 32 X. Δεδηλωκότες οὖν ἐκάτερον, ἡρεμίαν τε ἀστείου καὶ ἄφρονος σάλον, τὸ ἐπόμενον τῷ λόγῳ συνεπισκεψώμεθα. φησὶ γὰρ Ναῖδ, τὸν κλόνον, εἰς ὃν ἡ ψυχὴ μετωκίσαστο, ἀπέναντι Ἐδέμ. συμβολικῶς δέ ἐστιν Ἐδέμ ὀρθὸς καὶ θεῖος λόγος, παρὸ καὶ ἐρμηνείαν ἔχει “ τρυφήν,” ὅτι ἐνευφραίνεται καὶ ἐντρυφᾷ πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων, ἀμιγέσι καὶ ἀκράτοις ἔτι δὲ ἀρτίοις καὶ πλήρεσι κεχηρημένος ἀγαθοῖς, ὕοντος τοῦ πλουτοδότου θεοῦ τὰς παρθένους καὶ ἀθανάτους χάριτας αὐτοῦ. φύσει δὲ μάχεται ἀγαθῷ κακόν, ἄδικον δικαίῳ, φρόνιμον ἄφρονι καὶ πάνθ’ ὅσα ἀρετῆς πρὸς τὰ κακίας εἶδη. τοιοῦτόν ἐστι τὸ Ναῖδ ἀντικρὺς [καὶ] εἶναι Ἐδέμ.
- 33 XI. Ταῦτ’ εἰπὼν φησιν ἐξῆς· “ καὶ ἔγνω Κάιν [φησί] τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, καὶ συλλαβοῦσα ἔτεκεν τὸν Ἐνώχ· καὶ ἦν οἰκοδομῶν πόλιν, καὶ ἐπωνόμασε τὴν πόλιν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Ἐνώχ ” (Gen. iv. 17). ἄρ’ οὐκ εἰκὸς διαπορῆσαι, τίνα ἔγνω γυναῖκα ὁ Κάιν; γένεσις γὰρ οὐδεμιᾶς ἄλλης μετὰ τὴν ἐκ τῆς πλευρᾶς διαπλασθεῖσαν
- 34 Εὐᾶν ἄχρι νῦν μεμῆνυται γυναικός. εἰ δὲ φήσει τις ἀδελφῇ τὸν Κάιν συνελθυθέναι, χωρὶς τοῦ ἀνοσίου καὶ ψεύσεται· τὰς γὰρ θυγατέρας Ἀδὰμ ὁψὲ γεγενημένας εἰσάγει. τί οὖν χρὴ λέγειν; γυναῖκα ἀσεβοῦς λογισμοῦ, ὡς γε οἶομαι, καλεῖ δόξαν, ἣν περὶ τῶν πραγμάτων τίθεται καθάπερ μυρίοι τῶν φιλοσοφησάντων, οἱ μὲν τὰ αὐτά, οἱ

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 31-34

heaven and appointed it as a highway for all suppliant souls, that they might not grow weary as they tread it."

X. Having now shown each side of the picture, calm in a good man, restlessness in a foolish one, let us devote our attention to the sequel. The lawgiver says that Naid, "Tumult," to which the soul migrated, is over against Eden. "Eden" is a symbolic name for right and divine reason, and so it is literally rendered "luxuriance." For right reason above all others finds its delight and luxury in the enjoyment of good things pure and undiluted, yea complete and full, while God the Giver of wealth rains down His virgin and deathless boons. And evil is by nature in conflict with good, unjust with just, wise with foolish, and all forms of virtue with all forms of vice. That is the meaning of Naid being over against Eden.

XI. Having said this, he says next: "And Cain knew his wife, and she conceived and bare Enoch; and Cain was building a city, and he called the city after his son's name Enoch" (Gen. iv. 17). Is it not reasonable to inquire, what woman Cain knew? For since Eve, who was formed out of Adam's side, there has been hitherto no record of the creation of any other woman. If anyone should suggest that Cain married his sister, his suggestion will be not only unholy but untrue; for Adam's daughters are mentioned as having been born at a later time. What then must we say? "Wife" is, I think, the name he gives to the opinion held by an impious man's reasoning faculty, the opinion which the impious man (habitually) assumes touching (all) matters. So do a host of those who have professed philosophy, some sects agreeing in the rules which they deduce from

- δὲ καὶ διαφέροντα εἰσηγησάμενοι τῷ βίῳ δόγματα.
- 35 τίς οὖν ἐστὶν ἀσεβοῦς δόξα; μέτρον εἶναι πάντων χρημάτων τὸν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν· ἢ καὶ τῶν παλαιῶν τινα σοφιστῶν ὄνομα Πρωταγόραν φασὶ χρήσασθαι, τῆς Κάλιν ἀπονοίας ἔκγονον. τεκμαίρομαι δὲ ἐνθένδε ὅτι γνωρισθεῖσα αὐτῷ ἢ γυνὴ τὸν Ἐνώχ ἀπέτεκεν· ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ Ἐνώχ χάρις σου.
- 36 εἰ γὰρ πάντων μέτρον ἐστὶν ἄνθρωπος, χάρις ἐστὶ καὶ δωρεὰ τοῦ νοῦ τὰ πάντα, ὥστε ὀφθαλμῷ μὲν κεχάρισται τὸ βλέπειν, ὡσὶ δὲ τὸ ἀκούειν, ἐκάστη δὲ τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθήσεων τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι, καὶ τῷ κατὰ τὴν προφορὰν μέντοι λόγῳ τὸ λέγειν· εἰ δὲ [233] καὶ | ταῦτα, καὶ αὐτὸ δήπου <τὸ> νοεῖν, ἐν ᾧ μυρία ἐννοήματα, διανοήσεις, βουλαί, προμήθειαι, καταλήψεις, ἐπιστήμαι, τέχναι, διαθέσεις, ἄλλων
- 37 ἀριθμὸς δυνάμεων ἀδιεξίτητος. τί οὖν ἔτι σεμνομυθούμενοι περὶ ὀσιότητος καὶ θεοῦ τιμῆς λέγειν τε καὶ ἀκούειν ἐγνώκατε, εἴ γε ἔχετε παρ' ἑαυτοῖς τὸν ἀντίθεον νοῦν, ὃς πάντα ἀνά κράτος τὰ κατ' ἀνθρώπους ἀναψάμενος ἀγαθὰ τε καὶ κακὰ τοῖς μὲν ἀμφότερα κερασάμενος, τοῖς δὲ θάτερα ἄκρατα
- 38 ἐπιπέμπει; κὰν ἄρα τις γραφὴν ἀσεβείας ἐπενέγκῃ καθ' ὑμῶν, ἀπολογούμενοι θαρρεῖτε φάσκοντες παρ' ὑφηγητῆ καὶ διδασκάλῳ πάνυ καλῶ πεπαιδευσθαι Κάλιν, ὃς τὸ πλησίον πρὸ τοῦ μακρὰν αἰτίου παρῆναι τιμᾶν· ᾧ διὰ τε ἄλλα προσεκτέον καὶ μάλισθ' ὅτι σαφέσιν ἔργοις τὴν τοῦ δόγματος ἰσχὺν ἐπεδείξατο νικήσας τὸν τῆς ἐναντίας δόξης εἰσηγητὴν Ἄβελ καὶ ἄμ' αὐτῷ καὶ τὴν δόξαν

<sup>a</sup> Familiar to Philo from Plato, Theaet. 152 A and Cratylus 385 E.

<sup>b</sup> or "dispositions." See De Cher. 62 and note.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 34-38

it for the conduct of life, and some making a variety of deductions. Of what sort then is an impious man's opinion? That the human mind is the measure of all things, an opinion held they tell us by an ancient sophist named Protagoras, an offspring of Cain's madness. I gather that by "wife" this opinion is meant from the fact that when Cain knew her she bore Enoch, and Enoch means "thy gift." For if man is the measure of all things,<sup>a</sup> all things are a present and gift of the mind. It has bestowed on the eye seeing as a favour, on the ears hearing, on each of the other senses their power of perception, yes and speech on the faculty of thought-utterance. But if all these are gifts, so too is thinking, including in itself countless products of thought, resolves, counsels, forethought, comprehension, acquisition of knowledge, skill in arts and in organizing,<sup>b</sup> other faculties too many to recount. Why, pray, are you any longer ready to deliver grave and solemn discourses about holiness and honouring God, and to listen to such discourses from others, seeing that you have with you the mind to take the place of God, and forcibly to appropriate all things human both good and bad, sending to some a blend of both, to others one of the two unmixed? And if someone bring against you an indictment for impiety, you boldly defend yourselves, asserting that you have been trained under an admirable master and instructor, even Cain, who advised you to honour what was near you rather than the far off Cause, and that you are bound to attend to his advice both for other reasons and most of all because he proved the strength of his creed by unmistakable deeds in his victory over Abel, the champion of the opposite opinion, and in getting rid

- 39 ἐκποδῶν ἀνελῶν. ἀλλὰ παρ' ἔμοιγε καὶ φίλοις τοῖς ἐμοῖς τῆς μετὰ ἀσεβῶν ζωῆς ὁ μετὰ εὐσεβῶν αἰρετώτερος ἂν εἶη θάνατος· τοὺς μὲν γὰρ οὕτως ἀποθανόντας ἢ ἀθάνατος ἐκδέξεται ζωῆ, τοὺς δὲ ἐκείνως ζῶντας ὁ αἰδιος θάνατος.
- 40 XII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Κάιν τὸν Ἐνώχ γεγέννηκε καὶ αὐθις ἔκγονος τοῦ Σήθ πάλιν Ἐνώχ ὀνομάζεται (Gen. iv. 17, v. 18), σκεπτέον ἂν εἶη πότερον ἑτέρους ἢ τοὺς αὐτοὺς εἶναι συμβέβηκεν. ἐρευνήσωμεν δ' ἅμα τούτοις καὶ <τὰς> τῶν ἄλλων ὁμωνύμων διαφοράς. ὥσπερ γὰρ Ἐνώχ, οὕτω καὶ Μαθουσάλα καὶ Λάμεχ ἀπόγονοι μὲν Κάιν, ἀπόγονοι δ' οὐδὲν ἦττον καὶ τοῦ Σήθ εἰσι (Gen. 41 iv. 18, v. 21, 25). χρή τοίνυν εἰδέναί ὅτι τῶν λεχθέντων ἕκαστον ὀνομάτων ἐρμηνευθὲν διπλοῦν ἔστιν. ἐρμηνεύεται δ' ὁ μὲν Ἐνώχ, καθάπερ εἶπον, χάρις σου, Μαθουσάλα δ' ἕξαποστολή θανάτου, ὁ δ' αὖ Λάμεχ ταπεινώσις. τὸ μὲν οὖν "χάρις σου" λέγεται μὲν πρὸς τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν νοῦν ὑπ' ἐνίων, λέγεται δὲ καὶ πρὸς τὸν τῶν ὄλων ὑπὸ 2 τῶν ἀμεινόνων. οἱ μὲν οὖν φάσκοντες δωρεὰν εἶναι τῆς ἑαυτῶν ψυχῆς πάνθ' ὅσα ἐν τῷ νοεῖν ἢ αἰσθάνεσθαι ἢ λέγειν, ἀσεβῆ καὶ ἄθεον εἰσηγοῦμενοι δόξαν γένει τῷ Κάιν προσκεκληρώσθησαν, ὃς μὴδ' αὐτοῦ κρατεῖν ἱκανὸς ὢν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων ἀπετόλμησεν [ὡς] εἰπεῖν ὡς ἔχοι τὴν παντελῆ κτῆσιν· οἱ δ' ὅσα ἐν γενέσει καλὰ μὴ σφετεριζόμενοι, χάρισι δὲ ταῖς θείαις ἐπιγράφοντες, εὐγενεῖς πρὸς ἀλήθειαν οὐκ ἐκ παλαιπλουσιῶν ἀλλ' ἐκ φιλαρέτων φύντες, ὑπὸ ἀρχηγέτη both of him and his opinion. But, in my judgement and in that of my friends, preferable to life with impious men would be death with pious men; for awaiting those who die in this way there will be undying life, but awaiting those who live in that way there will be eternal death.

XII. Now since Cain is said to have begotten Enoch, and there is afterwards a descendant of Seth with the name of Enoch again (Gen. iv. 17, v. 18), we must consider whether they were two different persons or the same person. While we are engaged with these, let us investigate also the difference between others who have the same name. Like Enoch, Methuselah and Lamech appear as descendants of Cain, and descendants no less of Seth (Gen. iv. 18, v. 21, 25). It is important, then, that we should know that each of the names mentioned has a meaning that can be taken in two ways. "Enoch," as I have already said, means "thy gift," "Methuselah" "a sending forth of death," and "Lamech" "humiliation." Take the first. Thy gift is, on some people's lips, an address to the mind within us; on the lips of the better kind of men it is addressed to the universal Mind. Those who assert that everything that is involved in thought or perception or speech is a free gift of their own soul, seeing that they introduce an impious and atheistic opinion, must be assigned to the race of Cain, who, while incapable even of ruling himself, made bold to say that he had full possession of all other things as well. But those who do not claim as their own all that is fair in creation, but acknowledge all as due to the gift of God, being men of real nobility, sprung not from a long line of rich ancestors but from lovers of virtue, must remain

- [234]
 43 τῶ | Σῆθ τετάχθωσαν. δυσεύρετον σφόδρα τὸ
 τούτων ἐστὶ γένος ἀποδιδρασκόντων τὸν ἐπί-βουλον καὶ ῥαδιουργὸν καὶ πανοὔργον καὶ κεχυμένον παθῶν τε καὶ κακιῶν πλήρη βίον. οὓς γὰρ
 ὁ θεὸς εὐαρεστήσαντας αὐτῶ μετεβίβασε καὶ μετ-ἔθηκεν ἐκ φθαρτῶν εἰς ἀθάνατα γένη, παρὰ τοῖς 44 πολλοῖς οὐκέθ' εὐρίσκονται. XIII. διεσταλκότες οὖν τὰ περὶ τὸν Ἐνώχ σημαινόμενα μέτιμεν ἐξῆς
 ἐπὶ τὸν Μαθουσαά, ὃς ἦν ἐξαποστολὴ θανάτου.
 δύο δ' ἐκ ταύτης παρίσταται τῆς φωνῆς, ἓν μὲν
 καθ' ὃ τινι ἐπιπέμπεται θάνατος, ἕτερον δὲ καθ'
 ὃ ἀπὸ τινος ἀποστέλλεται. ὅτῳ μὲν οὖν ἐπιπέμπεται, θνήσκει πάντως ἐκείνος, ἀφ' οὗ δὲ ἀπο-45 στέλλεται, ζῆ τε καὶ περίεστι. τῶ μὲν δὴ Κάιν
 ὁ τὸν θάνατον δεχόμενός ἐστιν οἰκείος αἰεὶ τὸν πρὸς ἀρετὴν βίον θνήσκοντι, τῶ δὲ Σῆθ συγγενέστατος
 ἀφ' οὗπερ ἀποστέλλεται καὶ διατειχίζεται τὸ ἀπο-
 θνήσκειν· τὴν γὰρ ἀληθῆ ζωὴν ὁ σπουδαῖος 46 κεκάρπωται. καὶ μὴν ὃ γε Λάμεχ ταπεινώσις ὧν
 ἀμφίβολός ἐστιν· ἢ γὰρ ὑφιεμένων τῶν τῆς ψυχῆς
 τόνων κατὰ τὰ ἐξ ἀλόγων παθῶν ἐγγενόμενα
 νοσήματά τε καὶ ἀρρωστήματα ταπεινούμεθα ἢ
 κατ' ἀρετῆς ζῆλον στέλλοντες ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ οἰδούσης 47 οἰήσεως. ἢ μὲν οὖν προτέρα γίνεται κατ' ἀσθένειαν, εἶδος τῆς πολυμόρφου καὶ πολυτρόπου λέπρας οὔσα· ὅταν γὰρ ἢ ὄψις ταπεινωτέρα φαίνηται τὴν ὀμαλήν καὶ εὔτονον κλασθεῖσα φαντασίαν,
 τὴν χαλεπὴν νόσον λέπραν ὁ νομοθέτης φησὶ
 48 γενέσθαι (Lev. xiii. 3). ἢ δὲ ἑτέρα ἀπὸ ἰσχύος

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 43-48

enrolled under Seth as the head of their race. This sort is very hard to find, since they make their escape from a life beset with passions and vices, with its treachery and unscrupulousness, its villainy and dissoluteness. For those who have been well-pleasing to God, and whom God has translated and removed from perishable to immortal races, are no more found among the multitude. XIII. Having now distinguished between the things signified by Enoch's name, we will pass on next to Methuselah. His name, as we saw, means "a sending forth of death," and these words call up two pictures to the mind. In one of them death is being sent to fall upon somebody; in the other death is being dismissed from somebody. The man on whom it is sent to fall, dies without fail, while he from whom it is dismissed lives and survives. He who receives death is an intimate of Cain, who is ever dying to the way of life directed by virtue; to Seth he is close of kin from whom dying is dismissed and debarred; for the good man has reaped true life as his crop. "Low estate" again, which is the meaning of "Lamech," has a twofold bearing. We are brought low either when the energies of the soul are let down owing to sicknesses and infirmities produced in us as the result of irrational passions, or when in our eager quest of virtue we check in ourselves the swelling of self-conceit. The former kind of being brought low is due to weakness, and is a species of leprosy, that changeful disease which assumes so many different forms. For when the uniform and healthy appearance of the flesh is impaired and the mischief is visible below the surface, the lawgiver says that the cruel disease of leprosy has set in (Lev. xiii. 3). The συνίσταται καρτερᾶς, ἥ καὶ ἰλασμὸς ἔπεται κατὰ τὸν τῆς δεκάδος ἀριθμὸν τέλειον· προστέτακται γὰρ τὰς ψυχὰς ταπεινοῦν δεκάτῃ τοῦ μηνός (Lev. xxiii. 27), ὅπερ ἐστὶ μεγαλαυχίαν ἀποτίθεσθαι, ἧς ἢ ἀπόθεσις ἀδικημάτων ἐκουσίων καὶ ἀκουσίων ἐργάζεται παραίτησιν. ὁ μὲν οὖν οὕτως ταπεινὸς Λάμεχ ἔκγονος μὲν ἐστὶ Σήθ, πατὴρ δὲ τοῦ δικαίου Νῶε, ὁ δὲ ἐκείνως ἐκβλάστημα Κάιν.

- 49 XIV. Ἐπόμενον δ' ἂν εἶη σκέψασθαι, τίνος ἔνεκα κτίζων καὶ οἰκοδομῶν πόλιν αὐτὸς οὗτος εἰσάγεται· πλήθει γὰρ ἀνθρώπων μεγέθους δεῖ πόλεως πρὸς οἴκησιν, τρισὶ δὲ τοῖς κατ' ἐκείνον οὔσι τὸν χρόνον ὑπώρειά τις ἢ μικρὸν ἄντρον αὐταρκέστατον ἦν ἐνδιαίτημα. καὶ γὰρ μὲν εἶπον τρισί, τὸ δ' εἰκὸς ἐνὶ μόνῳ ἑαυτῷ· οὐδὲ γὰρ οἱ γονεῖς τοῦ δολοφονηθέντος τὴν αὐτὴν τῷ κτείναντι πόλιν ὑπέμειναν <ἂν> οἰκεῖν, μείζον ἀνδροφονίας
- [235]
50 ἄγος ἀδελφοκτονίαν | ἐργασαμένῳ. τὸ μὲν γὰρ οὐ παράδοξον μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ παράλογον παντί τῳ δῆλον, ἓνα ἄνδρα πόλιν οἰκοδομεῖν. τίνα ἔστι τρόπον; ἀλλ' οὐδ' ἂν οἰκίας μέρος τὸ ἀφανέστατον, μὴ χρώμενον ὑπηρέταις ἑτέροις. ἢ ὁ αὐτὸς ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ λιθοτομεῖν ἂν δύναίτο, ὑλοτομεῖν, σίδηρον, χαλκὸν ἐργάζεσθαι, τειχῶν μέγαν κύκλον πόλει περιβάλλεσθαι, προπύλαια καὶ προτειχίσματα, ἱερὰ καὶ τεμένη καὶ στοὰς καὶ νεωσοίκους καὶ οἰκίας καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα δημόσια καὶ ἴδια ἔθος οἰκοδομεῖσθαι; καὶ ἔτι πρὸς τούτοις ὀχετοὺς κατὰ
- 354

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 48-50

other form of being brought low results from the exercise of hardy strength, and this has for its sequel propitiation, determined by 10, the perfect number : for there is a command to bring low our souls on the tenth day of the month (Lev. xxiii. 27), and this signifies to put away boasting, a putting away which leads to an imploring of pardon for sins voluntary and involuntary. So the Lamech lowly in this way is a descendant of Seth, and father of righteous Noah ; but the Lamech brought low in the former way is sprung from Cain.

XIV. The next thing for us to consider is why Cain, all alone as he is, appears in the narrative as founding and building a city ; for a multitude of men needs a good-sized city to dwell in, whereas for the three that then existed some foot-hill or small cave would have been a quite adequate habitation. I said "for three," but most likely it was for one, Cain himself only : for the parents of the murdered Abel would not have brooked dwelling in the same city with his slayer, seeing he had incurred a more defiling guilt than that of a man-slayer by slaying his brother. Everyone can see how the building of a city by a single man runs counter not only to all our ideas but to our reason itself. How is such a thing possible ? Why, he could not have built even the most insignificant part of a house without employing others to work under him. Could the same man at the same moment do a stone-mason's work, hew timber, work iron and brass, surround the city with a great circuit of walls, construct great gateways and fortifications, temples and sacred enclosures, porticoes, arsenals, houses, and all other public and private buildings that are customary ? Could he in addition to these γῆν ἀναστέλλειν, στενωποὺς ἀνευρύνειν, κρήνας καὶ ὑδροροὰς καὶ ὄσων ἄλλων πόλει δεῖ κατα-51 σκευάζεσθαι; μήποτ' οὖν, ἐπειδὴ ταῦτα τῆς ἀληθείας ἀπάδει, βέλτιον ἀλληγοροῦντας λέγειν ἔστιν

 ὅτι καθάπερ πόλιν τὸ αὐτοῦ δόγμα κατασκευάζειν
 ὁ Κάλν ἔγνωκε.

52 XV. Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν πᾶσα πόλις ἐξ οἰκοδομη-μάτων καὶ οἰκητόρων καὶ νόμων συνέστηκε, τὰ
 μὲν οἰκοδομήματά ἐστιν αὐτῷ λόγοι οἱ ἀποδεικνύντες, οἷς καθάπερ ἀπὸ τείχους πρὸς τὰς τῶν ἐναντίων ἀπομάχεται προσβολὰς πιθανὰς εὐρέσεις
 κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας μυθοπλαστῶν, οἰκήτορες δὲ οἱ
 ἀσεβείας, ἀθεότητος, φιλαυτίας, μεγαλαυχίας,
 ψευδοῦς δόξης ἑταῖροι δοκησίσοφοι, τὸ πρὸς
 ἀλήθειαν σοφὸν οὐκ εἰδότες, ἄγνοιαν καὶ ἀπαιδευσίαν καὶ ἀμαθίαν καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἀδελφὰς καὶ συγγενεῖς κήρας συγκεκροτηκότες, νόμοι δὲ ἀ-νομίαι, ἀδικίαι, τὸ ἄνισον, τὸ ἀκόλαστον, θρασύτης, ἀπόνοια, ἀθθάδεια, ἡδονῶν ἀμετρίαι, τῶν παρὰ 53 φύσιν ἄλεκτοι ἐπιθυμίαι. τοιαύτης πόλεως ἕκα-στος τῶν ἀσεβῶν ἐν ἑαυτοῦ τῇ παναθλία ψυχῇ δημιουργὸς εὐρίσκεται, μέχρις ἂν ὁ θεὸς βου-λευθεὶς (Gen. xi. 6) ταῖς σοφιστικαῖς αὐτῶν
 τέχναις ἀθρόαν καὶ μεγάλην ἐργάσηται σύγχυσιν.
 τοῦτο δ' ἔσται, ὅταν μὴ μόνον πόλιν, <ἀλλὰ> καὶ πύργον οἰκοδομῶσιν, οὗ ἡ κεφαλὴ εἰς οὐρανὸν ἀφ-ἴξεται (Gen. xi. 4), τουτέστι λόγον ἐκάστου κατασκευαστικόν, ὅπερ<sup>1</sup> εἰσηγοῦνται, κεφαλὴν ἔχοντα
 τὸ οἰκεῖον νόημα, ὃ προσαγορεύεται συμβολικῶς
 οὐρανός· ἀνάγκη γὰρ παντὸς λόγου κεφαλὴν καὶ
 τέλος εἶναι τὸν δηλούμενον νοῦν, οὗ χάριν αἱ

<sup>1</sup> ὅπερ is printed for ὅνπερ from conjecture (Tr.).

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 50-53

construct drains, open up streets, provide fountains and conduits and all else that a city needs? It would seem, then, since all this is at variance with reality, that it is better to take the words figuratively, as meaning that Cain resolves to set up his own creed, just as one might set up a city.

XV. Now, every city needs for its existence buildings, and inhabitants, and laws. Cain's buildings are demonstrative arguments. With these, as though fighting from a city-wall, he repels the assaults of his adversaries, by forging plausible inventions contrary to the truth. His inhabitants are the wise in their own conceit, devotees of impiety, godlessness, self-love, arrogance, false opinion, men ignorant of real wisdom, who have reduced to an organized system ignorance, lack of learning and of culture, and other pestilential things akin to these. His laws are various forms of lawlessness and injustice, unfairness, licentiousness, audacity, senselessness, self-will, immoderate indulgence in pleasures, unnatural lusts that may not be named. Of such a city every impious man is found to be an architect in his own miserable soul, until such time as God takes counsel (Gen. xi. 6), and brings upon their sophistic devices a great and complete confusion. This time will come when they are building, not a city only, but a tower as well, whose top shall reach to heaven (Gen. xi. 4). By a "tower" is meant a discourse working up each (immoral) doctrine which they introduce. The discourse has for a head its own proper point, which is figuratively spoken of as "heaven." For every discourse must needs have as its head and aim the thought brought out by it; and it is to bring this out that men of eloquence are in

- μακραὶ διεξοδοὶ τε καὶ ῥήσεις ὑπὸ λογίων ἀνδρῶν 54 εἰώθασι γίνεσθαι. XVI. τοσοῦτον δ' ἄρα τῆς ἀσεβείας ἐπιβεβήκασιν, ὥστ' οὐ μόνον δι' ἑαυτῶν
 ἐγείρειν τὰς τοιαύτας πόλεις ἀξιούσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ
 τὴν φιλάρετον πληθὺν Ἰσραὴλ ἀναγκάζουσιν ἐπιστάτας καὶ διδασκάλους κακῶν ἔργων ἐπ' αὐτοῖς
 χειροτονήσαντες. λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι κακωθέντες ὑπὸ
 [236] τῶν ἐπιστατῶν τῷ βασιλεῖ τῆς χώρας | τρεῖς
 πόλεις οἰκοδομοῦσι, Πειθῶ, Ῥαμεσσή, Ὡν, ἣ 55 ἐστὶν Ἡλίου πόλις (Exod. i. 11). αὐταὶ δὲ τροπικώτερον νοῦν, αἴσθησιν, λόγον, τὰ περὶ ἡμᾶς
 ὄντα, δηλοῦσιν· ἡ μὲν γὰρ Πειθῶ ὁ λόγος ἐστίν,
 ὅτι περὶ τοῦτον τὸ πείθειν, ἔχει δὲ ἑρμηνείαν στόμα
 ἐκθλιβόν, ἐπειδήπερ καὶ ὁ τοῦ φαύλου λόγος
 ἐξωθεῖν καὶ ἀνατρέπειν τὰ σπουδαῖα μελετᾷ.
 56 Ῥαμεσσή δὲ ἡ αἴσθησις * * * καθάπερ γὰρ
 ὑπὸ σιγῆς ὑφ' ἐκάστης τῶν αἰσθήσεων νοῦς ἐκβιβρώσκειται καὶ διεσθίεται, σειόμενος καὶ σπαρρατόμενος· αἱ γὰρ ἐπεισιούσαι μὴ καθ' ἡδονὴν φαντασίαι λυπηρὸν καὶ ἐπίπονον ἀποτίκτουσι τὸν 57 βίον. ἡ δὲ Ὡν καλεῖται μὲν βουνός, ἔστι δὲ
 συμβολικῶς ὁ νοῦς· ἐπὶ γὰρ τοῦτον οἱ πάντων θησαυρίζονται λόγοι. μάρτυς δὲ καὶ ὁ νομοθέτης
 τὴν Ὡν Ἡλίου πόλιν προσαγορεύσας· ὥσπερ γὰρ
 ἀνατείλας ἥλιος τὰ κρυπτόμενα νυκτὶ ἐμφανῶς ἐπιδείκνυται, οὕτως ὁ νοῦς τὸ οἰκείον φῶς ἀποστέλλων πάντα καὶ τὰ σώματα καὶ τὰ πράγματα 58 τηλαυγῶς παρασκευάζει καταλαμβάνεσθαι. διό-περ οὐκ ἂν τις εἰπὼν ἀμάρτοι τοῦ συγκρίματος
 εἶναι ἡμῶν τὸν νοῦν ἥλιον, ὃς ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ τῷ
 βραχεῖ κόσμῳ μὴ ἀνατείλας καὶ τὸ ἴδιον φέγγος

the habit of delivering their lengthy expositions and perorations. XVI. To such a pitch of impiety have they gone that they think fit not only to raise such cities with their own hands, but they force the virtue-loving host of Israel to do the like, appointing over them taskmasters and instructors in wicked works. For it is said that under the maltreatment of their taskmasters they built for the king of the country three cities, Peitho, Rameses, and On, which is Heliopolis (Exod. i. 11). These signify, when taken as figures, our properties of mind, sense, and speech. Peitho is our speech, because persuasion<sup>a</sup> is its function, and the word means "harassing mouth," for the speech of the worthless man makes a study of harassing and overturning all that is good and worthy. Rameses is sense-perception [for it means a "moth's troubling"],<sup>b</sup> since the mind is eaten out and gnawed through by each of the senses, just as though the moth were at work loosening and tearing it. For when ideas enter the mind such as cannot give it pleasure they fill our life with pain and toil. "On" is by name "Heap" but symbolically it is the mind, for to it as to a treasure-heap<sup>c</sup> all men's words are brought. The lawgiver is evidence of this by calling On "Heliopolis"<sup>d</sup> or "Sun-city." For as the sun, when it has risen, shows clearly the objects which night hides, so the mind sending forth its proper light causes all forms and conditions to be clearly apprehended. It would therefore not be amiss to speak of the mind as the sun of our complex system. For if it does not rise and let its peculiar light shine forth in man, the microcosm, it sheds a

<sup>a</sup> Greek "peitho."

<sup>b</sup> The words which seem to have dropped out here are found in De Somniis i. 77.

<sup>c</sup> See App. p. 498.

- ἐκλάμψας, πολὺ σκότος τῶν ὄντων καταχέας οὐδὲν
 59 ἐᾶ προφαίνεσθαι. XVII. τὸν βουνὸν τοῦτον ὁ ἀσκητῆς Ἰακώβ ἐν τοῖς πρὸς Λάβαν δικαίους
 μάρτυρα καλεῖ (Gen. xxxi. 46, 47) δογματικώτατα
 δηλῶν ὅτι ὁ νοῦς ἐκάστω μάρτυς ἐστὶν ὧν ἐν ἀφανεῖ βουλεύεται καὶ τὸ συνειδὸς ἔλεγχος ἀ-δέκαστος καὶ πάντων ἀψευδέστατος. * * *
- * * * * πρὸ τούτων τῶν πόλεων οἰκοδομεῖται.
 60 φησὶ γὰρ τοὺς κατασκόπους ἐλθεῖν εἰς Χεβρών,
 ἐκεῖ δ' εἶναι Ἀχειμὸν καὶ Σεσεῖν καὶ Θαλαμείν, γενεᾶς Ἐνάχ· εἶτ' ἐπιφέρει· “καὶ Χεβρὼν ἑπτὰ ἔτεσιν ὑποδομήθη πρὸ τοῦ Τάνω Αἰγύπτου” (Num. xiii. 22). φυσικώτατον <τὸ> τὰς ὁμονυμίας εἶδеси διαστέλλεσθαι. Χεβρὼν <γὰρ> ἐρ-μηνεύεται συζυγή· δισσοῦν δὲ τοῦτο, ψυχῆς ἢ σώματι συνεζευγμένης ἢ πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἡρμοσμένης.
 61 ἢ μὲν οὖν σωματικαῖς συζυγαῖς ὑποβάλλουσα
 αὐτὴν οἰκήτορας ἔχει τοὺς λεχθέντας· ἐρμηνεύεται
 δὲ ὁ μὲν Ἀχειμὸν ἀδελφός μου, ὁ δὲ Σεσεῖν ἐκτός
 μου, ὁ δὲ Θαλαμείν κρεμᾶμενός τις· ἀνάγκη γὰρ
 ψυχαῖς ταῖς φιλοσωμάτοις ἀδελφὸν μὲν νομίζεσθαι
 τὸ σῶμα, τὰ δὲ ἐκτός ἀγαθὰ διαφερόντως τιτιμῆσθαι· ὅσαι δὲ τοῦτον διάκεινται τὸν τρόπον,
 [237] ἀψύχων ἐκκρέμανται καὶ | καθάπερ οἱ ἀνασκολο-
 πισθέντες ἄχρι θανάτου φθαρταῖς ὕλαις προσήλων-62 ται. ἢ δὲ τῷ καλῷ συνεζευγμένη διαφερόντων ταῖς ἀρεταῖς ἔλαχεν οἰκητόρων, οὓς τὸ διπλοῦν
 σπήλαιον (Gen. xxiii. 9) ζυγάδην κεχώρηκεν, Ἀβραὰμ Σάρραν, Ἰσαὰκ Ῥεβέκκαν, Λεῖαν Ἰακώβ,
 ἀρετὰς καὶ τοὺς ἔχοντας. ἢ Χεβρὼν αὕτη, μνήμας

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 498.

<sup>b</sup> See App. pp. 498, 499.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN. 59-62

deep darkness on all things and prevents anything from being visible. XVII. This "Heap"<sup>a</sup> is called to witness by Jacob, the man of earnest effort, in his controversy with Laban (Gen. xxxi. 46 f.). This conveys the deep truth that the mind is for each man the witness of his secret purposes, and the conscience an impartial scrutineer unequalled in veracity. [But the city of Witness]<sup>b</sup> was built before these cities. For we are told that the spies came to Hebron, and that Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai, the children of Anak, were there; then it is added: "and Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt" (Numb. xiii. 22). It is a thoroughly philosophical proceeding to show how one and the same name has different shades of meaning. "Hebron," for instance, means "union," but union may be of two kinds, the soul being either made the body's yokefellow, or being brought into fellowship with virtue. The soul, then, that submits to bodily couplings has as its inhabitants those mentioned just now. "Ahiman" means "my brother"; "Sheshai" "outside me"; "Talmai" "one hanging": for it is a necessity to souls that love the body that the body should be looked upon as a brother, and that external good things should be valued pre-eminently: and all souls in this condition depend on and hang from lifeless things, for, like men crucified and nailed to a tree, they are affixed to perishable materials till they die. But the soul wedded to goodness obtained inhabitants excelling in the virtues, whom the double cave<sup>c</sup> (Gen. xxiii. 9) received in pairs, Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebecca, Leah and Jacob, these being virtues and their possessors. This Hebron, a treasure-house

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek renders "Machpelah."

ἐπιστήμης <καὶ> σοφίας θησαυροφυλακοῦσα, προτέρα καὶ Τάνεως καὶ πάσης ἐστὶν Αἰγύπτου.
 πρεσβυτέραν γὰρ ἢ φύσις ψυχὴν μὲν σώματος, Αἰγύπτου, ἀρετὴν δὲ κακίας, Τάνεως—ἐντολὴ γὰρ ἀποκρίσεως<sup>1</sup> ἑρμηνεύεται Τάνις—εἰργάζετο, τὸ πρεσβύτερον ἀξιώματι μᾶλλον ἢ χρόνου μήκει δοκιμά-63 σασα. XVIII. παρὸ καὶ τὸν Ἰσραὴλ νεώτερον ὄντα χρόνῳ πρωτόγονον υἱὸν (Exod. iv. 22) ἀξιώματι
 καλεῖ, διασυνιστὰς ὅτι <ὁ> τὸν θεὸν ὄρων, ἀρχεγονώτατον ὄν, τετίμηται, τοῦ ἀγενήτου γέννημα πρώτιστον, ἐκ τῆς παρὰ τοῖς θνητοῖς μισουμένης ἀρετῆς ἀποκυθέν, ᾧ [ὁ] νόμος ἐστὶν ὡς πρεσβυτάτῳ διπλᾶ δίδοσθαι τὰ πρεσβεῖα (Deut. xxi.
 64 17). διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἡ ἑβδομὴ τάξει μὲν ἐπιγέννημά ἐστιν ἑξάδος, δυνάμει δὲ πρεσβυτάτη παντὸς
 ἀριθμοῦ, μηδὲν διαφέρουσα μονάδος. δηλώσει δὲ
 καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν τῷ τῆς κοσμοποιίας ἐπιλόγῳ φάσκων· “καὶ κατέπαυσεν ὁ θεὸς ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἑβδομῇ
 ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦ ὧν ἐποίησε· καὶ
 εὐλόγησεν ὁ θεὸς τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ἑβδομῆν καὶ
 ἡγίασεν αὐτήν, ὅτι ἐν αὐτῇ κατέπαυσεν ἀπὸ
 πάντων τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦ ὧν ἤρξατο ὁ θεὸς
 65 ποιῆσαι” (Gen. ii. 2, 3). εἶτ’ ἐπιλέγει· “αὕτη
 ἡ βίβλος γενέσεως οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, ὅτε ἐγένετο,
 ἡ ἡμέρα ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν
 γῆν” (Gen. ii. 4). τῇ δὲ πρώτῃ ταῦτα γέγονεν, ὥστε τὴν ἑβδομῆν εἰς μονάδα τὴν πρώτην καὶ
 ἀρχὴν τῶν ὄλων ἀναφέρεσθαι. ταῦτ’ ἐμηκύναμεν
 ὑπὲρ τοῦ δεῖξαι τηλαυγέστερον τὴν δόξαν, ἣν ὁ

<sup>1</sup> Wendland suggests ταπεινώσεως for ἀποκρίσεως, from the Tanis mandans humile and Tanis mandatum humile of the Onomastica.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 62-65

guarding personal monuments of knowledge and wisdom, is earlier than Zoan and all Egypt. For nature wrought soul elder than body (or Egypt), and virtue elder than vice (or Zoan); for "Zoan" means "Command of evacuation"<sup>a</sup>; and nature determines precedence not by length of time but by worth. XVIII. Accordingly he calls Israel, though younger in age, his "firstborn" son in dignity (Exod. iv. 22), making it evident that he who sees God, the original Cause of being, is the recipient of honour, as earliest offspring of the Uncreated One, conceived by Virtue the object of the hatred of mortals, and as he to whom there is a law that a double portion, the right of the first-born, should be given as being the eldest (Deut. xxi. 17). For this reason also the seventh day, although in order it is the number born after 6, yet in value takes precedence of every number, in nothing differing from 1. This will be made clear by the law-giver himself, who in his epilogue to the narrative of the creation says: "And God rested on the seventh day from all His works which He had made; and God blessed the seventh day and hallowed it, because in it God rested from all his works which God had begun to make" (Gen. ii. 2 f.). After this he adds: "This is the book of the creation of heaven and earth, when it was created, in the day in which God made the heaven and the earth" (Gen. ii. 4). Now these things were created on the first day, so that the seventh day is referred back to 1, the first and starting-point of all. I have written thus fully with the object of showing the more clearly the opinion which Cain

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 499.

Καίιν ὡσπερ τινα πόλιν οἶεται δεῖν κατασκευάζειν.

- 66 XIX. Υἱὸς δὲ τοῦ Ἐνώχ λέγεται Γαϊδάδ (Gen. iv. 18), ὃ ἐρμηνεύεται ποιμνιον, σφόδρα ἀκολούθως· τὸν γὰρ τῷ νῶ χαριζόμενον τὰ πάντα τῷ μηδὲ τὴν αὐτοῦ φύσιν ἣτις ἐστὶ καταλαβεῖν δυναμένῳ γεννᾶν ἀλόγους ἤρμωτε δυνάμεις, ἀγειρομένας εἰς ποιμνιον· οὐ γὰρ λογικῶν ἀνδρῶν τὸ
- 67 δόγμα. ποιμνη δὲ πᾶσα τὸν ἐπιστάντα οὐκ ἔχουσα ποιμένα μεγάλαις ἐξ ἀνάγκης κακοπραγίαις
- [238] | χρῆται, ἅτ' οὐ δυναμένη δι' ἑαυτῆς ἀπωθῆσθαι μὲν τὰ βλάπτοντα, αἰρεῖσθαι δὲ τὰ ὠφελήσοντα. παρὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς εὐχόμενός φησιν· “ἐπισκεψάσθω κύριος ὁ θεὸς τῶν πνευμάτων καὶ πάσης σαρκὸς ἀνθρωπον ἐπὶ τῆς συναγωγῆς ταύτης, ὅστις ἐξελεύσεται πρὸ προσώπου αὐτῶν καὶ ὅστις εἰσελεύσεται, καὶ ὅστις ἐξάξει αὐτοὺς καὶ ὅστις εἰσάξει, καὶ οὐκ ἔσται ἡ συναγωγή κυρίου ὡσεὶ πρόβατα οἷς οὐκ ἔστι ποιμήν” (Num. xxvii. 16,
- 68 17). ὅταν γὰρ ὁ προστάτης ἢ [ὁ] ἐπίτροπος ἢ πατήρ ἢ ὁ τι φίλον καλεῖν τοῦ συγκρίματος ἡμῶν, ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος, οἴχηται καταλιπὼν τὸ ἐν ἡμῖν ποιμνιον, ἀτημέλητον ἐαθὲν διόλλυται μὲν αὐτό, μεγάλη δὲ τῷ δεσπότῃ ζημία γίνεται· τὸ δ' ἄλογον καὶ ἀπροστασίαστον θρέμμα χηρεῦσαν ἀγελάρχου τοῦ νουθετήσοντός τε καὶ παιδεύσοντος μακρὰν λογικῆς καὶ ἀθανάτου ζωῆς ἀπώκισται.
- 69 XX. Διὸ τοῦ Γαϊδάδ υἱὸς εἶναι λέγεται Μαιήλ (Gen. iv. 18), οὗ τὸ ὄνομα μεταληφθὲν ἐστὶν ἀπὸ ζωῆς θεοῦ. ἐπεὶ γὰρ τὸ ποιμνιον ἄλογον, ὁ δὲ θεὸς πηγὴ λόγου, ἀνάγκη τὸν ἀλόγως βιοῦντα τῆς θεοῦ ζωῆς ἀπεσχοινίσθαι. τὸ μὲν οὖν κατὰ deems it necessary to set up as though he were building a city.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN. 65-69

XIX. The son of Enoch is named Gaidad (Gen. iv. 18), which means "a flock." Such a name follows naturally upon his father's name. For it was fitting that the man who deems himself beholden to mind, which is incapable of comprehending its own nature, should beget irrational faculties, collected into a flock; for men endowed with reason do not profess that creed. Now every flock that has no shepherd over it necessarily meets with great disasters, owing to its inability by itself to keep hurtful things away and to choose things that will be good for it. Accordingly Moses says in his Prayer "Let the Lord, the God of the spirits and of all flesh, appoint a man over this congregation, which shall go out before their face and which shall come in, and which shall lead them out and which shall lead them in, and the congregation of the Lord shall not be as sheep that have no shepherd" (Numb. xxvii. 16 f.). For when the protector, or governor, or father, or whatever we like to call him, of our complex being, namely right reason, has gone off leaving to itself the flock within us, the flock itself being left unheeded perishes, and great loss is entailed upon its owner, while the irrational and unprotected creature, bereft of a guardian of the herd to admonish and discipline it, finds itself banished to a great distance from rational and immortal life. XX. This is why Gaidad is said to have a son Maiel (Gen. iv. 18), whose name translated is "away from the life of God." For since the flock is without reason, and God is the Fountain of reason, it follows that he that lives an irrational life has been cut off from the life of God. Now Moses

θεὸν ζῆν ἐν τῷ ἀγαπᾶν αὐτὸν ὀρίζεται Μωυσῆς· λέγει γὰρ ὅτι ἡ ζωὴ σου τὸ ἀγαπᾶν τὸν ὄντα
 70 (Deut. xxx. 19, 20). τοῦ δ' ἐναντίου βίου παράδειγμα τίθεται τὸν ἐπιτυχόντα τοῦ κλήρου τράγον·
 “στήσει γὰρ αὐτὸν” φησί “ζῶντα ἐναντίον κυρίου τοῦ ἐξιλάσασθαι ἐπ' αὐτοῦ, ὥστε ἐξαποστεῖλαι αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν ἀποπομπήν” (Lev. 71 xvi. 10), ἄγαν ἐξητασμένως· ὡς γὰρ ἡδονῶν ἀπεχομένους πρεσβύτας εὖ φρονῶν οὐκ ἂν τις ἀποδέξαιτο, ὅτι τὸ γῆρας, ἢ μακρὰ καὶ ἀνιάτος νόσος, τοὺς τῶν ὀρέξεων ἐχάλασέ τε καὶ ἔλυσε τόνους, ἐπαίνου δ' ἂν ἀξιώσῃε τοὺς ἡβῶντας, ὅτι φλεγούσης τῆς ἐπιθυμίας ὑπὸ τῆς κατὰ τὴν ἡλικίαν ἀκμῆς ὅμως σβεσθηρίων ὀργάνων τῶν κατὰ παιδείαν λόγων εὐπορήσαντες τὸν πολὺν φλογμὸν ἅμα καὶ βρασμὸν τῶν παθῶν ἐπεκούφισαν, οὕτως οἷς μὲν οὐδὲν νόσημα, οἷα ἐκ πονηρᾶς φιλεῖ διαίτης ἐπανίστασθαι, ἐλάττων ἔπαινος ἔπεται, ὅτι κατὰ φύσεως εὐμοιρίαν ἀπροαιρέτως ἐχρήσαντο εὐτυχία, οἷς δ' ἐξεγερθὲν ἀντιστατεῖ, μείζων, εἰ δὴ διερεισάμενοι καθελεῖν αὐτὸ βουλευθεῖεν τε
 72 καὶ δυνηθεῖεν. τὰ γὰρ ἡδονῆς ὄλκου δελέατα αὐστηρῶ τόνω καθελεῖν ἰσχύσαι τὸν ἐφ' ἑκουσίοις ἔχει κατορθώμασιν ἔπαινον. ἐὰν οὖν τῶν τὸν εὐδαίμονα κλῆρον ἀπολαχόντων<sup>1</sup> μηδέν, ζῆ δὲ ἐν ἡμῖν τὰ ἀποπομπαῖα νοσήματα καὶ ἀρρωστήματα,
 239] | σπουδάζωμεν αὐτὰ ἀνατρέπειν καὶ καταβάλλειν·

<sup>1</sup> τῶν τὸν εὐδαίμονα κλῆρον ἀπολαχόντων is a conjectural reading (Tr.).

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 499.

<sup>b</sup> The reference is to the goat on which the lot fell “for the Lord.”

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 69-72

defines living in accordance with God as consisting in loving Him, for he says "thy life is to love Him that is" (Deut. xxx. 19 f.). As an example of the opposite life he gives the goat on which the lot fell, for he says, "he shall set him alive <sup>a</sup> before the Lord, to make atonement over him, so as to send him forth for dismissal afar" (Lev. xvi. 10). A well considered direction. No one of sound sense would applaud old men for abstaining from indulgences, for old age, that long and incurable illness, renders the vehemence of their cravings far less intense. He would deem praiseworthy young men in their prime, because when appetite was a-flame within them owing to the keenness that belongs to their time of life, they nevertheless fully availed themselves of engines for quenching these fires in the shape of the lessons supplied by a sound education, and so checked the raging flame and assuaged the boiling heat of the passions. On these principles fainter praise is accorded to those who have no disease, such as commonly arises from an evil mode of life, because nature bestowed on them an easy lot, and without any effort of will they simply enjoyed good fortune, whereas those who have developed such a disease and against whom it is doing battle, are more loudly praised, if they set themselves stoutly to combat it and show both the will and the power to master it. For the strength put forth in overcoming by a severe effort the seductive baits of pleasure receives the praise which is accorded to moral victories, won by will-power. If, then, not one of the qualities that have won the happy lot <sup>b</sup> (live in us), but there be alive in us noxious diseases and sicknesses, banes to be rid of, let us be in earnest to overthrow and cast

- τὸ γὰρ ἐξιλάσασθαι ἐπ' αὐτῶν τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν, ὁμολογῆσαι ὅτι ἔχοντες αὐτὰ ἐν ψυχῇ ζῶντα καὶ περιόντα οὐκ ἐνδίδομεν, ἀλλ' ἀντιβάντες ἅπασι καρτερῶς ἀπομαχόμεθα, μέχρις ἂν παντελῶς ἀπο-
- 73 διοπομησώμεθα. XXI. τί δ' ἔπεται τῷ μὴ κατὰ βούλημα τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ζῶντι ἢ θάνατος ὁ ψυχῆς; οὗτος δὲ ὀνομάζεται Μαθουσάλα, ὃς ἐρμηνευθεὶς ἦν ἀποστολή θανάτου, διὸ τοῦ Μαιήλ υἱὸς ἐστὶ (Gen. iv. 18), τοῦ τὸν ἴδιον βίον ἀπολελοιπότος, ᾧ τὸ ἀποθνήσκειν ἐπιπέμπεται, ψυχῆς θάνατος, <ὃς><sup>1</sup> ἢ κατὰ πάθος ἄλογόν ἐστιν αὐτῆς μεταβολή.
- 74 τοῦτο μέντοι τὸ πάθος ὅταν κυφορήσῃ, μετὰ χαλεπῶν ὠδίνων νοσήματα καὶ ἀρρωστήματα ἔτεκεν ἀνιάτα, ὑφ' ὧν ἰλυσπωμένη ταπεινοῦται καὶ κάμπτεται· πιέζει γὰρ αὐτὴν ἕκαστον ἐπιφέρων ἄχθος ἀνήνυτον, ὡς μηδ' ἀνακῦσαι δύνασθαι. τοῦθ' ἅπαν ὠνόμασται Λάμεχ· ἐρμηνείαν γὰρ ἔχει ταπεινώσιν, ἢ εἰκότως τοῦ Μαθουσάλα γένηται ὁ Λάμεχ υἱὸς (Gen. iv. 18), πάθος τοῦ περὶ ψυχὴν θανάτου ταπεινὸν καὶ ὑπεῖκον, ἀλόγου ὁρμῆς ἔκγονον ἀρρώστημα.
- 75 XXII. "Ἐλαβε δ' ἑαυτῷ Λάμεχ δύο γυναῖκας· ὄνομα τῇ μιᾷ Ἀδά, καὶ ὄνομα τῇ δευτέρᾳ Σελλά" (Gen. iv. 19). πᾶν ὅ τι ἂν ἑαυτῷ λαμβάνῃ φαῦλος, πάντως ἐστὶν ἐπίληπτον, ἅτε γνώμη δυσκαθάρτων μαινώμενον· καὶ γὰρ ἔμπαλιν αἱ τῶν σπουδαίων ἐκούσιοι πράξεις ἐπαινεταὶ πᾶσαι. διὸ νῦν μὲν ὁ Λάμεχ ἑαυτῷ γυναῖκας αἱρούμενος κακὰ μέγιστα αἰρεῖται, αὐθις <δ'> Ἀβραάμ, Ἰακώβ, Ἀαρὼν ἑαυτοῖς λαμβάνοντες ἀγαθοῖς οἰκείοις συνέρχονται.

<sup>1</sup> ὃς, which Mangey conjectured for ἢ, is inserted before it.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 72-75

them down ; for this is " to make atonement over them," to acknowledge, that though we have them still living in our soul we refuse to give in, but facing them all we persist in repelling them with vigour, until we shall have fully ensured their complete removal. XXI. What issue awaits him who does not live according to the will of God, save death of the soul? And to this is given the name Methuselah, which means (as we saw) " a dispatch of death." Wherefore he is son of Mahujael (Gen. iv. 18), of the man who relinquished his own life, to whom dying is sent, yea soul-death, which is the change of soul under the impetus of irrational passion. When the soul has conceived this passion, it brings forth with sore travail-pangs incurable sicknesses and debilities, and by the contortion brought on by these it is bowed down and brought low ; for each one of them lays on it an intolerable burden, so that it is unable even to look up. To all this the name " Lamech " has been given, which means " humiliation," that Lamech may prove himself son of Methuselah (Gen. iv. 18), with entire fitness, a low and cringing passion being offspring of the soul's death, a sore debility child of irrational impulse.

XXII. " And Lamech took to himself two wives, the name of the one was Ada, the name of the second Sella " (Gen. iv. 19). All that a worthless man takes to himself is in every case reprehensible, polluted as it is by an intent wellnigh past cleansing, while on the other hand the voluntary actions of good men are all praiseworthy. So in this instance Lamech in choosing wives for himself, chooses very great evils, while Abraham on the other hand and Jacob and Aaron in taking wives for themselves become associ-

- 76 λέγει <γὰρ> ἐπὶ μὲν τοῦ Ἀβραάμ οὕτως· “καὶ ἔλαβον Ἀβραάμ καὶ Ναχωρ ἑαυτοῖς γυναῖκας· ὄνομα τῇ γυναικὶ Ἀβραάμ Σάρρα” (Gen. xi. 29), ἐπὶ <δὲ> τοῦ Ἰακώβ· “ἀναστὰς ἀπόδραθι εἰς τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν εἰς τὸν οἶκον Βαθουήλ πατρός τῆς μητρός σου, καὶ λάβε σεαυτῶ ἐκεῖθεν γυναῖκα ἐκ τῶν θυγατέρων Λάβαν ἀδελφοῦ τῆς μητρός σου” (Gen. xxviii. 2), ἐπὶ δὲ τοῦ Ἀαρών· “ἔλαβε δὲ Ἀαρών τὴν Ἐλισάβετ, θυγατέρα Ἀμιναδάμ, ἀδελφῆν Ναασσών, ἑαυτῶ γυναῖκα”
- 77 (Exod. vi. 23). Ἰσαὰκ δὲ καὶ Μωυσῆς λαμβάνουσι μὲν, οὐ δι’ ἑαυτῶν δὲ λαμβάνουσιν, ἀλλ’ ὁ μὲν Ἰσαὰκ ὅτε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τῆς μητρός λαβεῖν λέγεται (Gen. xxiv. 67), Μωυσῆ δὲ ὁ ἄνθρωπος παρ’ ᾧ κατώκησε τὴν θυγατέρα Σεπφώραν ἐκδίδοται (Exod. ii. 21).
- 78 XXIII. Τούτων δ’ οὐ παρέργως αἱ διαφοραὶ [240] παρὰ τῷ νομοθέτῃ | μεμήνυνται. τοῖς μὲν γὰρ ἀσκηταῖς προκόπτουσι καὶ βελτιουμένοις ἢ ἐκούσιος αἵρεσις τὰγαθοῦ μαρτυρεῖται, ἵνα μηδ’ ὁ πόνος ἀστεφάνωτος ἀφεθῆ· τοῖς δ’ αὐτοδιδάκτου καὶ αὐτομαθοῦς σοφίας ἀξιωθεῖσιν ἔπεται τὸ μὴ δι’ ἑαυτῶν παρὰ θεοῦ δ’ ἐγγυᾶσθαι λόγον καὶ
- 79 λαμβάνειν τὴν σοφῶν σύμβιον ἐπιστήμην. ὁ δὲ τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἀπορριφεῖς, ὁ ταπεινὸς καὶ χαμαί-ζηλος Λάμεχ, προτέραν Ἀδὰ ἄγεται γυναῖκα, ἣτις ἐρμηνεύεται μαρτυρία, προσενήσας ἑαυτῶ αὐτὸς τὸν γάμον· οἴεται γὰρ τὴν κατὰ τὰς εὐθίκτους ἐπιβολὰς λείαν κίνησιν καὶ διέξοδον τοῦ νοῦ, μηδενὸς [τῶν] εἰς εὐμαρῆ κατάληψιν κωλυσι-

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 499.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 76-7

ated with good things appropriate to them. For we read in the case of Abraham as follows : " and Abram and Nahor took to themselves wives ; and the name of Abram's wife was Sarai " (Gen. xi. 29) and in the case of Jacob " arise and escape to Mesopotamia, to the family of Bethuel thy mother's father, and take to thyself from thence a wife from the daughters of Laban thy mother's brother (Gen. xxviii. 2) ; and in the case of Aaron, " and Aaron took to himself Elizabeth, daughter of Aminadab, sister of Naasson, as his wife " (Exod. vi. 23). Isaac and Moses take wives indeed, but they do not take them purely of themselves, but Isaac is said to have taken one when he entered into his mother's dwelling (Gen. xxiv. 67), and to Moses the man with whom he abode gives in marriage his daughter Zipporah (Exod. ii. 21).

XXIII. Not without purpose have the differences between these cases been recorded in the lawgiver's pages. For to those who welcome training, who make progress, and improve, witness is borne of their deliberate choice of the good, that their very endeavour may not be left unrewarded. But the fitting lot of those who have been held worthy of a wisdom that needs no other teaching and no other learning is, apart from any agency of their own, to accept from God's hands Reason as their plighted spouse, and to receive Knowledge, which is partner in the life of the wise. But he that has been cast away from things human, the low and grovelling Lamech, marries as his first wife Ada,<sup>a</sup> which means " Witness." He has arranged the marriage for himself, for he fancies that the prime good for a man is the smooth movement and passage of the mind along the line of well-aimed projects, with nothing to hinder its working towards

- 80 εργοῦντος, ἀγαθὸν εἶναι πρῶτον ἀνθρώπῳ. τί γὰρ ἂν εἴη, φησί, κρεῖττον τοῦ τὰς ἐννοίας, τὰς διανοήσεις, τὰς εἰκασίας, τοὺς στοχασμούς, συνόλως τὰς βουλὰς, τὸ λεγόμενον ἀρτίοις ποσὶ βαίνειν, ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ τέλος ἀπταιστώσως προσέρχεσθαι, μαρτυρομένης ἐν ἅπασιν <τοῖς> λεχθεῖσι διανοίας; ἐγὼ δ', εἰ μὲν τις εὐθυβόλῳ καὶ εὐθίκτῳ γνώμῃ πρὸς μόνα χρῆται τὰ καλὰ, τοῦτον εὐδαίμονα γράφω διδασκάλῳ τῷ νόμῳ χρώμενος· καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸς ἄνδρα ἐπιτυγχάνοντα εἶπε τὸν Ἰωσήφ, οὐκ ἐν ἅπασιν, ἀλλ' ἐν οἷς ὁ θεὸς τὸ εὐδοεῖν ἐχαρίζετο (Gen. xxxix. 2)· δωρεαὶ δ' αἱ τοῦ θεοῦ καλαὶ
- 81 πᾶσαι. εἰ δέ τις τῷ τῆς φύσεως εὐστόχῳ καὶ εὐτρόχῳ μὴ πρὸς τὰ ἀστεῖα μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς τὰ ἐναντία κέχρηται τὰ διάφορα ἐξαδιαφορῶν, κακοδαιμονιζέσθω. ἐν γοῦν ἀρᾶς εἶδει λέγεται κατὰ τὸν τῆς συγχύσεως τόπον, ὅτι “ οὐκ ἐκλείψει ἐξ αὐτῶν πάνθ' ὅσα ἂν ἐπιθῶνται ποιεῖν ” (Gen. xi. 6)· ὄντως γὰρ ἀνήκεστός ἐστι συμφορὰ ψυχῆς
- 82 εὐδοεῖν οἷς ἂν ἐπιθῆται, καὶ τὰ αἰσχιστα. ἐγὼ δ' ἂν εὐξαίμην, εἴ ποτε διανοηθεῖν ἀδικεῖν, ἐπιλιπεῖν τ' ἀδικεῖν, καὶ εἴπερ ζῆν ἀνάδρως, ἐπιλιπεῖν τὸ ἀκολασταίνειν, καὶ εἰ θρασεύς μέντοι καὶ πανούργως, ἔνδειαν θρασύτητος καὶ πανουργίας γενέσθαι παντελῆ· εἰ μὴ καὶ τοῖς κλέπτειν ἢ μοιχεύειν ἢ ἀνδροφονεῖν ἐγνωκόσιν οὐκ ἔστιν ἄμεινον ἐπιδεῖν τούτων ἕκαστον ἐκλελοιπὸς καὶ διεφθαρμένον.
- 83 XXIV. Τὴν οὖν Ἀδὰ παραίτησαι, διάνοια, τὴν μαρτυροῦσάν τε τοῖς φαύλοις καὶ μαρτυρουμένην

<sup>a</sup> Or “in every word spoken.”

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 499.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 80-83

easy attainment. "For what," says he, "could be better than that one's ideas, purposes, conjectures, aims, in a word one's plans, should go, as the saying is, without a limp, so as to reach their goal without stumbling, understanding being evidenced in all the particulars mentioned <sup>a</sup>? Now, if a man brings a correct and unerring judgement to bear only on ends that are good, I for my part set this man down as happy. And in doing so I have the Law for my teacher, for the Law itself pronounced Joseph a successful man. It did not say "in all things" but in those in which God vouchsafed success (Gen. xxxix. 2); and God's gifts are all good. But if a man has used a natural aptness and readiness not only for good and worthy ends, but also for their opposites, treating as alike things widely different,<sup>b</sup> let him be deemed unhappy. Certainly the words in the Babel passage are of the nature of a curse, where we read "nothing shall be wanting to them, which they purpose to do" (Gen. xi. 6); for verily it is a desperate misfortune for the soul to succeed in all things which it attempts, although they be utterly base. I for my part would pray, that if ever I should have made up my mind to do a wrong, the wrongdoing might fail me, and if to live in a way unworthy of a man, the undisciplined life might fail me, and if with impudence and rascality, that there might be no impudence and rascality to be found. For assuredly 'tis better for those who have resolved to steal or commit adultery or murder to behold each of these purposes brought to failure and ruin.

XXIV. Therefore, O mind, have nothing to do with Ada, who bears witness to (the success of) worthless things, and is borne witness to (as helping) in the

- [241] ἐν | ταῖς πρὸς ἕκαστα αὐτῶν ἐπιβολαῖς. εἰ δὲ κοινωνὸν αὐτὴν ἀξιῶσεις ἔχειν, μέγιστον ἀποτέξεται σοι κακόν, τὸν Ἰωβὴλ (Gen. iv. 20), ὃς ἐρμηνεύεται μεταλλοῖων· εἰ γὰρ τῇ μαρτυρίᾳ χαίρεις ὧν ἂν τύχη, στρέφειν καὶ ἀνακυκλεῖν ἕκαστα βουλήσῃ, τοὺς παγέντας ὑπὸ τῆς φύσεως
- 84 τοῖς πράγμασιν ὄρους μετατιθεῖς. σφόδρα δὲ καὶ Μωυσῆς ἀχθόμενος τοῖς τοιούτοις καταράται λέγων· “ἐπικατάρατος ὁ μετατιθεῖς ὄρια τοῦ πλησίον” (Deut. xxvii. 17). καλεῖ δὲ πλησίον καὶ ἐγγὺς τὰγαθόν· οὐ γὰρ ἀναπτῆναι, φησὶν, εἰς οὐρανὸν οὐδὲ πέραν θαλάσσης ἀφικέσθαι δεῖ κατὰ ζήτησιν τοῦ καλοῦ· ἐγγὺς γὰρ καὶ πλησίον ἴστασθαι
- 85 ἐκάστω. καὶ τριχῇ γε αὐτὸ διαιρεῖ φυσικώτατα· “ἐν γὰρ τῷ στόματί σου” φησὶν “ἐστὶ καὶ ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ καὶ ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ” (Deut. xxx. 11-14), τοῦτο δὴ ἐν λόγοις, ἐν βουλαῖς, ἐν πράξεσι· μέρη γὰρ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ταῦτα, ἐξ ὧν πέφυκε πῆγνυσθαι, ὡς ἢ γε ἐνὸς ἔνδεια οὐκ ἀτελὲς μόνον ἀπ-
- 86 ἐργάζεται τὸ πᾶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ συνόλως ἀναιρεῖ. τί γὰρ ὄφελος λέγειν μὲν τὰ βέλτιστα, διανοεῖσθαι δὲ καὶ πράττειν τὰ αἰσχιστα; σοφιστῶν οὗτος ὁ τρόπος· τοὺς γὰρ περὶ φρονήσεως καὶ καρτερίας ἀπομηκύνοντες λόγους τὰ ὦτα καὶ τῶν σφόδρα διψώντων ἀκοῆς ἀποκναίουσιν, ἐν δὲ ταῖς βουλαῖς καὶ ταῖς κατὰ τὸν βίον πράξεσιν εὐρίσκονται
- 87 διαμαρτάνοντες. τί δ’ ὄφελος ἂ μὲν χρή διανοεῖσθαι, ἔργοις δὲ ἀτόποις καὶ λόγοις χρῆσθαι, διὰ μὲν τῶν λόγων τοὺς ἀκούοντας, διὰ δὲ τῶν ἔργων τοὺς ὑπομένοντας ζημιοῦντας; πράττειν γε μὴν τᾶριστα οὐ σὺν διανοίᾳ καὶ λόγῳ πάλιν ὑπαίτιον·

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 83-87

attempts to accomplish each of them. But if you shall think well to have her for a partner, she will bear to you a very great mischief, even Jobel (Gen. iv. 20), which signifies "one altering." For if you delight in the witness borne to (the goodness of) everything that may present itself, you will desire to twist everything and turn it round, shifting the boundaries fixed for things by nature. Moses, full of indignation at such people, pronounces a curse on them saying, "Cursed is he that shifteth his neighbour's boundaries" (Deut. xxvii. 17). What he describes as "near" and "hard by" like a neighbour is the thing that is good. For it is not necessary, he says, to fly up into heaven, nor to get beyond the sea in searching for what is good; for that it stands hard by and is near to each man. And in a thoroughly philosophic way he makes a threefold division of it: saying "It is in thy mouth and in thy heart and in thine hand" (Deut. xxx. 11-14), that is, in words, in plans, in actions. For these are the parts of the good thing, and of these it is compacted, and the lack of but one not only renders it imperfect but absolutely destroys it. For what good is it to say the best things but to plan and carry out the most shameful things? This is the way of the sophists, for as they spin out their discourses on sound sense and endurance they grate on the ears of those most thirsting to listen, but in the choices that they make and the actions of their lives we find them going very far wrong. And what is the good of having right intentions, and yet resorting to unfitting deeds and words, by the words inflicting loss on those who hear them, and by the deeds on those who are their victims? Again, it is blameworthy to practise the things that are excellent without under-

88 τὸ γὰρ ἄνευ τούτων τῆς ἀκουσίου μερίδος ὄν οὐδαμῆ οὐδαμῶς ἐπαινετόν. εἰ δέ τιμι ἐξεγένετο καθάπερ λύραν ἀρμόσασθαι τοὺς τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ πάντας ἤχους καὶ συνωδὸν ἀποφῆναι λόγον μὲν διανοία, διάνοιαν δὲ ἔργω, τέλειος καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν εὐάρμοστος ὁ τοιοῦτος ἂν νομίζοιτο· ὡσθ' ὁ μετατιθεὶς ὄρους τοῦ καλοῦ δικαίως ἐπάρατος ἔστι τε καὶ λέγεται.

- 89 XXV. Τοὺς δ' ὄρους τούτους οὐχ ἡ καθ' ἡμᾶς γένεσις ἔστησεν, ἀλλ' οἱ πρὸ ἡμῶν καὶ παντὸς τοῦ γεώδους πρεσβύτεροι λόγοι καὶ θεῖοι· καθὰ καὶ ὁ νόμος δεδήλωκεν ἐπισκῆπτων ἡμῶν ἐκάστῳ μὴ κιβδηλεύειν τὸ ἀρετῆς νόμισμα ἐν τούτοις· “οὐ μετακινήσεις ὄρια τοῦ πλησίον, ἃ ἔστησεν οἱ πατέρες σου” (Deut. xix. 14), καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις· “ἐπερώτησον τὸν πατέρα σου καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ σοι, τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους σου καὶ ἐροῦσί σοι· ὅτε διεμέριζεν ὁ ὑψιστος ἔθνη, ὡς διέσπειρεν υἱοὺς Ἀδάμ, ἔστησεν ὄρια ἔθνῶν κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ἀγγέλων θεοῦ· καὶ ἐγένετο μερὶς κυρίου λαὸς αὐτοῦ Ἰακώβ, σχοίνισμα κληρονομίας αὐτοῦ Ἰσραήλ” (Deut. 90 xxxii. 7-9). | ἀρ' οὖν ἐὰν πύθωμαι τοῦ γεν- [242] νήσαντος καὶ θρέψαντός με πατρὸς ἢ τῶν ἐκείνου μὲν ἡλικιωτῶν, ἐμοῦ δὲ πρεσβυτέρων, ἦ διένειμεν ἔθνη ὁ θεὸς ἢ ἔσπειρεν ἢ ᾤκισεν, ἀποκρinoῦνταιί μοι παγίως, ὡσπερ τῷ μερισμῷ παρηκολουθηκότες ἐκείνω; οὐ μὲν οὖν, ἀλλὰ φήσουσιν ὅτι καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐφ' ἡλικίας παρὰ τῶν γονέων καὶ ἔτι 376

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 88-90

standing and explicit speech. For what is done apart from these comes under the head of involuntary action, and in no way whatever merits praise. But if a man succeeded, as if handling a lyre, in bringing all the notes of the thing that is good into tune, bringing speech into harmony with intent, and intent with deed, such an one would be considered perfect and of a truly harmonious character. Thus the man who removes the boundaries of the good and beautiful both is accursed and is pronounced to be so with justice.

XXV. These boundaries were fixed not by the creation to which we belong, but on principles which are divine and are older than we and all that belongs to earth. This has been made clear by the Law, where it solemnly enjoins upon each one of us not to adulterate the coinage of virtue, using these words: "thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's boundaries, which thy fathers set up" (Deut. xix. 14), and again in other words: "Ask thy father and he will show thee; thine elders and they will tell thee. When the Most High distributed nations, when He dispersed the sons of Adam, He set boundaries of nations according to the number of the angels of God, and Jacob His people became the Lord's portion, Israel became the lot of His inheritance" (Deut. xxxii. 7-9). If, then, I inquire of the father who begat me and brought me up, or of those of the same age with him but my elders, in what way God distributed or dispersed or settled the nations, will they answer me with steady certainty, as though they had followed that process of distribution step by step? Assuredly not. They will say "We too when we were young made diligent inquiry from our parents ἀρχαιοτέρων φιλοπευστήσαντες οὐδὲν σαφὲς ἀνεμάθομεν· οὐδὲν γὰρ εἶχον ὃ τι διδάξουσιν ἡμᾶς καὶ αὐτοὶ πάλιν ἄλλων ἀξιώσαντες γενέσθαι ἐπιστημόνων ἀνεπιστήμονες γνώριμοι.

- 91 XXVI. Μήποτ' οὖν πατέρα μὲν τῆς ψυχῆς ἡμῶν τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον καλεῖ, πρεσβυτέρους δὲ τοὺς ἐταίρους αὐτοῦ καὶ φίλους. οὗτοι τῆς ἀρετῆς τοὺς ὄρους ἐπήξαντο πρῶτοι, πρὸς οὓς ἄξιον φοιτῆσαι μαθήσεως καὶ διδασκαλίας ἔνεκα τῶν ἀναγκαίων. τὰ δ' ἀναγκαῖα ταῦτα· ὅποτε ὁ θεὸς διένεμε καὶ διετείχιζε τὰ τῆς ψυχῆς ἔθνη τὰ ὁμόφωνα τῶν ἀλλογλώττων διυστὰς καὶ διοικίζων, τοὺς τε γῆς παῖδας ἔσπειρε καὶ ἐξετόξευσε ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, οὓς Ἄδὰμ ὠνόμασεν υἱούς, τότε τῶν ἀρετῆς ἐκγόνων τοὺς ὄρους ἔστησεν ἰσαριθμούς ἀγγέλους· ὅσοι γὰρ θεοῦ λόγοι, τοσαῦτα ἀρετῆς
- 92 ἔθνη τε καὶ εἶδη. τίνες <δ' > αἱ τῶν ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ λήξεις καὶ τίς ἢ τοῦ παντάρχου καὶ ἡγεμόνος ἀποκεκληρωμένη μοῖρα; τῶν μὲν οὖν ὑπηρετῶν αἱ ἐν εἴδει ἀρεταί, τοῦ δὲ ἡγεμόνος τὸ ἐπίλεκτον γένος Ἰσραήλ· ὁ γὰρ ὄρων τὸν θεὸν ὑπὸ ἐκπρεπεστάτου κάλλους ἀγόμενος τῷ ὀρωμένῳ
- 93 προσκεκληρωταί τε καὶ μεμέρισται. πῶς οὖν οὐκ ἐπιπληκτέος Ἰωβήλ, ὃς ἐλλάδι γλώττη μεταλλοῶν καλεῖται τὰς φύσεις τῶν πραγμάτων ἢ μεταποιῶν; τὰ γὰρ φρονήσεως καὶ καρτερίας καὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ τῆς ἄλλης ἀρετῆς κάλλη θεοειδέστατα τύποις ἐναντίοις ἀφροσύνης, [καὶ] ἀκρασίας, ἀδικίας, ἀπάσης κακίας μετεχάραττεν ἀφανί-

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 90-93

and persons still older than they, and we ascertained nothing definite ; for they had nothing to teach us, seeing that they in their time had applied to others, whom they regarded as knowing, to enlighten their ignorance."

XXVI. Probably, then, the lawgiver gives the title of father of our soul to right reason, and of elders to the associates and friends of right reason. These were the first to fix the boundaries of virtue. To the school of these it is advisable to go, to learn by their teaching the essential matters. The essential matters are these. When God divided and partitioned off the nations of the soul, separating those of one common speech from those of another tongue, and causing them to dwell apart ; when He dispersed and put away from Himself the children of earth, whom the lawgiver calls " sons of Adam," then did He fix the boundaries of the offspring of virtue corresponding to the number of the angels ; for there are as many forms or " nations " of virtue as there are words of God. But what are the portions of His angels, and what is the allotted share of the All-sovereign Ruler ? The particular virtues belong to the servants, to the Ruler the chosen race of Israel. For he that sees God, drawn to Him by surpassing beauty, has been allotted as His portion to Him Whom he sees. How, then, should Jobel escape rebuke, whose name when turned into Greek is " altering " the natures of things or making them other than they are ? For he changed the forms of wisdom and endurance and justice and virtue in general, forms of Godlike beauty, substituting contrary shapes of folly, intemperance, injustice, and all wickedness, obliterating the shapes that had been impressed

- 94 ζων τὰ ἐνσημανθέντα πρότερον. XXVII. αἰεὶ γὰρ ἐπιτεθειμέναι δεύτεραι σφραγίδες τοὺς τῶν προτέρων τύπους διαφθείρουσιν. ὁ δέ γε νόμος τοσοῦτον δεῖ κακὰ ἀγαθῶν ἐπιτρέπειν ἀντικαταλλάττεσθαι, ὥστ' οὐδὲ καλὰ πονηρῶν ἔα, πονηρὰ οὐ τὰ φαῦλα παραλαμβάνων—ἐπεὶ τοῦτό γε εὐήθες [243] μὴ προῖεσθαι τὰ κακὰ ὑπὲρ κτήσεως τῶν ἀμεινόνων—ἀλλὰ τὰ καματηρὰ καὶ ἐπίπονα, ἅπερ Ἀττικοὶ τὴν πρώτην ὄξυτονοῦντες συλλαβὴν καλοῦσι πόνηρα.
- 95 "Ἔστι δὲ τὸ διάταγμα τοιοῦτο· "πᾶν ὃ ἐὰν ἔλθῃ ἐν τῷ ἀριθμῷ ὑπὸ τὴν ράβδον, τὸ δέκατον ἅγιον τῷ κυρίῳ. οὐκ ἀλλάξεις καλὸν πονηρῷ· ἐὰν δε ἀλλάξης, αὐτό τε καὶ τὸ ἄλλαγμα ἔσται ἅγια" (Lev. xxvii. 32, 33). καίτοι πῶς τό γε πονηρὸν γένοιτ' ἂν ἅγιον; ἀλλ', ὅπερ ἔφην, τὸ ἐπίπονον ἀλλ' οὐ φαῦλον παρείληπται, ὥστε τοιοῦτον εἶναι τὸ δηλούμενον· τέλειον μὲν ἀγαθὸν ἔστι τὸ καλόν, ἀτελές δὲ ὠφέλιμον πόνος. ἐὰν οὖν τὸ παντελές κτήσῃ, μηκέτι ζήτει τὸ ἐνδέον· εἰ δὲ προσυπερβάλλων ἐθελήσεις ἔτι πονεῖν, ἴσθ' ὅτι δόξεις μὲν ἐνός ἐν ἀντικαταλλάττεσθαι, κτήσῃ δὲ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀμφότερα· ἐκάτερον γὰρ εἰ καὶ ἰσότιμον, ἀλλ' οὐ τὸ πάντως ἅγιόν ἐστιν.
- 96 XXVIII. "Ἄγιον δὲ πρᾶγμα δοκιμάζεται διὰ τριῶν μαρτύρων, ἀριθμοῦ μέσου, παιδείας, ἀριθμοῦ τελείου. διὸ λέγεται· "πᾶν ὃ ἐὰν ἔλθῃ ἐν τῷ ἀριθμῷ ὑπὸ τὴν ράβδον, τὸ δέκατον ἅγιον." τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἀπαξιωθὲν ἀριθμοῦ βέβηλον, οὐχ ἅγιον,

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 499, 500.

<sup>b</sup> The next words explain "absolutely holy."

before. XXVII. For it is always the case that the application of a second seal destroys the impressions made by the first. The Law is so far from allowing what is evil to be substituted for what is good, that it does not even allow that which is beautiful to take the place of what is troublesome. By "troublesome" it does not mean worthless, for it would be folly not to give up bad things for the sake of getting better ones. It means all that involves toil and trouble, for which Attic writers provide a name by changing the accent of their word for "wicked."

The ordinance is this <sup>a</sup>: "Everything that cometh under the rod in the count, the tenth shall be holy to the Lord. Thou shalt not exchange a good with a bad one: and if thou shalt have changed it both it and that for which it is changed shall be holy" (Lev. xxvii. 32 f.). And yet how could the bad one be holy? Nay, as I have just said, what is troublesome, not what is worthless, is meant, so that the thing signified is to this effect; while what is beautiful is a perfect good, toil is an imperfect boon. If then thou shalt win that which is complete, leave off seeking that which is defective. But if in thy excessive zeal thou shalt choose to go on toiling, know this that thou shalt seem to be exchanging one for another, but that in reality thou shalt acquire both; for each by itself, though of no less value, is not the absolutely holy thing. <sup>b</sup>

XXVIII. Now a thing is proved holy by three lines of evidence—ordinary number, discipline, perfect number. Wherefore it is said "everything that cometh in the count under the rod, the tenth is holy." For that which is not deemed worthy of counting is profane, not holy, but that which is counted, being τὸ δὲ καταριθμηθὲν ἄτε ἐγκεκριμένον ἤδη δόκιμον. τὸν γοῦν ὑπὸ Ἰωσήφ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ συναχθέντα σῆτόν φησιν ὁ νόμος μὴ δυνηθῆναι ἀριθμηθῆναι, καὶ ἐπιφέρει· “οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἀριθμός” (Gen. xli. 49), ἐπειδὴ τὰ τοῦ σώματος καὶ τῶν Αἰγυπτίων παθῶν θρεπτικὰ οὐκ ἄξια συνόλως ἀριθμεῖσθαι.

97 ἡ δὲ ῥάβδος παιδείας σύμβολον· ἄνευ γὰρ τοῦ δυσωπηθῆναι καὶ περὶ ἐνίων ἐπιπληχθῆναι νοθεσίαν ἐνδέξασθαι καὶ σωφρονισμόν ἀμύχανον. δεκάς δὲ τῆς κατὰ προκοπὴν τελειώσεως πίστις, ἀφ’ ἧς ὅσιον ἀπάρχεσθαι τῷ τάξαντι, τῷ παιδεύ-

98 σαντι, τῷ τὰ ἐλπισθέντα τελεσφορήσαντι. XXIX. ταῦτα ἀποχρώντως λελέχθω περὶ τοῦ μεταλλοιοῦντος καὶ τὸ ἀρχαῖον νόμισμα κιβδηλεύοντος, ὃν καὶ πατέρα ὀνομάζει κατοικούντων ἐν σκηναῖς κτηνοτρόφων (Gen. iv. 20). κτήνη μὲν οὖν εἰσιν αἱ ἄλογοι αἰσθήσεις, κτηνοτρόφοι δ’ οἱ φιλήδονοι καὶ φιλοπαθεῖς τροφὰς παρέχοντες αὐταῖς τὰ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητά, μακρὰν διεστηκότες ποιμένων. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἀρχόντων τρόπον τὰ πλημμελῶς ζῶντα τῶν θρεμμάτων κολάζουσιν, οἱ δ’ ἐστιατόρων τροφὰς

[244] ἀφθόνους | παρασκευάζοντες ἄδειαν ἀμαρτημάτων παρέχουσιν· ἀνάγκη γὰρ εὐθύς τὴν ἀπληστίας καὶ

99 κόρου θυγατέρα γεννᾶσθαι ὕβριν. πατήρ οὖν ἐστὶν εἰκότως <ὁ> ἅπαντα μεταχαράττων καὶ μεταποιῶν τὰ καλὰ τῶν τὸ αἰσθητὸν καὶ ἄψυχον ἅπαν ἐζηλωκότων· εἰ γὰρ τὰς ἀσωμάτους <καὶ> νοητὰς φύσεις μετεδίωκε, τοὺς ὀρισθέντας ὑπὸ τῶν πρε-

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 500.

included in the reckoning, is ipso facto approved. For instance, the Law says that the corn collected by Joseph in Egypt could not be counted, and adds "for there was not count" (Gen. xli. 49), since the food that sustains the body and the Egyptian passions is absolutely unworthy to be counted. The rod is a symbol of discipline, for there is no way of taking to heart warning and correction, unless for some offences one is chastised and brought to a sense of shame. 10 is the token and pledge of a perfecting by the way of gradual progress. Of that perfecting it is meet and right to offer the first-fruits to Him who marshalled,<sup>a</sup> brought up and disciplined us, and crowned our hopes with fulfilment. XXIX. Let what has been said suffice on the subject of the man who alters and adulterates the original coinage. The lawgiver calls him besides the father of dwellers in tents rearing cattle (Gen. iv. 20). Cattle are the irrational senses, and rearers of cattle the lovers of pleasure and lovers of the passions who provide them with food in the shape of external objects of sense. These differ widely from shepherds, for, whereas the latter after the manner of governors punish the creatures that live amiss, the former after the manner of entertainers supply them with unlimited food and let them feel security in doing wrong; for insolence, the daughter of satiety and greediness, never fails to be immediately engendered. As we might expect, then, the man who alters the make and character of all good things is father of those whose interest is concentrated on everything that is soul-less and an object only of the senses. For, had he taken as the object of his quest the incorporeal natures that come under the cognizance of the mind, he would have

σβυτέρων ὄρους ἐφύλαττεν ἄν, οὓς ὑπὲρ ἀρετῆς ὤρισαν ἕκαστον αὐτῆς εἶδος οἰκείῳ τύπῳ χαράξαντες.

- 100 XXX. Τοῦ δ' Ἰωβὴλ ἀδελφὸν εἶναί φησι τὸν Ἰουβάλ (Gen. iv. 21). ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ καὶ οὗτος μετακλίνων διὰ συμβόλου, ὁ κατὰ προφορὰν λόγος· φύσει γὰρ οὗτος διανοίας ἀδελφός ἐστι. τὸν δὲ τοῦ μεταποιούντος νοῦ τὰ πράγματα λόγον μετακλίνοντα σφόδρα δεόντως ἠνόμασε· συμβαίνει γὰρ τρόπον τινὰ καὶ ἐπαμφοτερίζειν καθάπερ ἐπὶ πλάστιγγος ἀντιρρέπον ἢ ὡσπερ θαλαττεῦον σκάφος ὑπὸ πολλοῦ κλύδωνος πρὸς ἑκάτερον τοῖχον ἀποκλίνον· βέβαιον γὰρ ἢ σταθρὸν οὐδὲν ὁ ἄφρων
- 101 λέγειν ἔμαθε. Μωυσῆς δὲ οὗτ' εἰς δεξιὰ οὗτ' εἰς ἀριστερά οὐδ' ὅλως εἰς μέρη τοῦ γήινου Ἐδώμ ἀποκλίνειν οἶεται δεῖν, τῇ δὲ μέσῃ ὁδῷ παρέρχεσθαι, ἣν κυριώτατα καλεῖ βασιλικήν (Numi. xx. 17). ἐπειδὴ γὰρ πρῶτος καὶ μόνος τῶν ὄλων βασιλεὺς ὁ θεός ἐστι, καὶ ἡ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἄγουσα ὁδὸς ἅτε βασιλέως οὔσα εἰκότως ἠνόμασται βασιλική. ταύτην δ' ἡγοῦ φιλοσοφίαν, οὐχ ἣν μέτεισιν ὁ νῦν ἀνθρώπων σοφιστικὸς ὄμιλος—λόγων γὰρ οὗτοι τέχνας μελετήσαντες κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας τὴν πανουργίαν σοφίαν ἐκάλεσαν ἔργῳ μοχθηρῷ θεῖον ἐπιφημίσαντες ὄνομα—ἀλλ' ἣν ὁ ἀρχαῖος ἀσκητῶν θίασος διήθλει, τὰς τιθασοὺς τῆς ἡδονῆς γοητείας ἀποστρεφόμενος, ἀστείως καὶ αὐστηρῶς χρώμενος τῇ τοῦ καλοῦ μελέτῃ.
- 102 Τὴν βασιλικὴν γοῦν ταύτην ὁδόν, ἣν ἀληθῆ καὶ γνήσιον ἔφαμεν εἶναι φιλοσοφίαν, ὁ νόμος καλεῖ θεοῦ ῥῆμα καὶ λόγον. γέγραπται γάρ· “οὐκ ἐκκλινεῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ ῥήματος οὗ ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαί σοι

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 99-102

kept to the limits laid down by the men of old, which they laid down in the cause of virtue, stamping each form of it with the impress belonging to it.

XXX. Jubal, the lawgiver tells us, was the brother of Jobel (Gen. iv. 21). "Jubal" is akin in meaning to "Jobel," for it means "inclining now this way now that," and it is a figure for the uttered word, which is in its nature brother to mind. It is a most appropriate name for the utterance of a mind that alters the make of things, for its way is to halt between two courses, swaying up and down as if on a pair of scales, or like a boat at sea, struck by huge waves and rolling towards either side. For the foolish man has never learned to say anything sure or well-grounded. Moses thinks that none ought to turn away either to the right or to the left or to the parts of the earthly Edom at all, but to go by along the central road, to which he gives the most proper title of the king's highway or royal road; for since God is the first and sole King of the universe, the road leading to Him, being a King's road, is also naturally called royal. This road you must take to be philosophy, not the philosophy which is pursued by the sophistic group of present-day people, who, having practised arts of speech to use against the truth, have given the name of wisdom to their rascality, conferring on a sorry work a divine title. No, the philosophy which the ancient band of aspirants pursued in hard-fought contest, eschewing the soft enchantments of pleasure, engaged with a fine severity in the study of what is good and fair.

This royal road then, which we have just said to be true and genuine philosophy, is called in the Law the utterance and word of God. For it is written "Thou shalt not swerve aside from the word which σήμερον δεξιὰ οὐδὲ ἀριστερά" (Deut. xxviii. 14)· ὥστε ἐμφανῶς ἐπιδειχθαι ὅτι ταυτόν ἐστι τῆ βασιλικῆ ὁδῷ τὸ θεοῦ ῥῆμα, εἶγε προτρέπει μὴτ' ἀπὸ τῆς βασιλικῆς ὁδοῦ μὴτ' ἀπὸ τοῦ ῥήματος, ὡς συνωνύμων ὄντων, ἀποκλίνοντας ὀρθῆ διανοίᾳ τὴν ἐπ' εὐθείας ἄγουσαν ἀτραπὸν μέσην τε καὶ λεωφόρον βαδίζειν.

- 103 XXXI. "Ὁ δὲ Ἰουβάλ οὗτος" φησὶν "ἐστὶ
 [245] πατὴρ | ὁ καταδείξας ψαλτήριον καὶ κιθάραν" (Gen. iv. 21). πατέρα μουσικῆς καὶ τῶν κατὰ μουσικὴν πάντων ὀργάνων τὸν γεγωνὸν λόγον προσφυστάτα καλεῖ· τὸ γὰρ φωνητήριον ὄργανον ζῳοῖς ἢ φύσις πρῶτον καὶ τελειότατον ἐργασαμένη πάσας αὐτῷ τὰς ἀρμονίας καὶ τὰ γένη τῶν μελωδιῶν εὐθὺς ἐχαρίζετο, ἢ ἢ τοῖς ἐκ τέχνης μέλλουσι δημιουργεῖσθαι προειργασμέ-
 104 σμένον παράδειγμα. [καὶ] καθάπερ γὰρ τὸ οὖς ἡμῶν κύκλους ἐν κύκλοις, ἐλάττους ἐν μείζουσι, γράφουσα σφαιρικὸν ἐτόρνενε τοῦ τὴν προσιοῦσαν φωνὴν μὴ χεομένην ἔξω σκεδάννυσθαι, εἴσω δ' ὑπὸ τῶν κύκλων συναγομένην καὶ σφιγγομένην οἷα διαχεομένην τὴν ἀκοὴν εἰς τὰς τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ δεξαμενὰς ἐπαντλεῖσθαι—καὶ τοῦτ' εὐθὺς ἦν παράδειγμα θεάτρων τῶν κατὰ πόλεις εὐδαίμονας· πρὸς <γὰρ> τὸ ὧτων σχῆμα ἄκρως ἢ θεάτρων κατασκευὴ μεμίμηται—οὕτως καὶ τὴν τραχείαν ἀρτηρίαν ἢ τὰ ζῶα φύσις διαπλάσασα ὥσπερ μουσικὸν κανόνα τείνασα τὰ ἐναρμόνια καὶ χρωματικὰ καὶ διατονικὰ γένη συνυφαίνουσα κατὰ τὰς τῶν συνημμένων καὶ διεζευγμένων μελωδιῶν παμπληθεῖς ποικιλίας παντὸς ὄργανου μουσικοῦ
 105 παράδειγμα ἰδρύετο. XXXII. ὅσα γοῦν αὐλοὶ
 386

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 102-105

I command thee this day to the right hand nor to the left hand" (Deut. xxviii. 14). Thus it is clearly proved that the word of God is identical with the royal road. He treats the two as synonymous, and bids us decline from neither, but with upright mind tread the track that leads straight on, a central highway.

XXXI. "This Jubal," he says, "is a father who invented psaltery and harp" (Gen. iv. 21). Most appropriately does he give to sounding speech the title of father of music and of all musical instruments. For nature, when she had wrought for living creatures the organ or instrument of sound as chief and most perfect of all instruments, went on at once to bestow upon it the concords and the various kinds of melodies to the end that it might be a pattern made ready beforehand for the instruments that were to be fashioned artificially. So too with the ear.<sup>a</sup> Nature turned it with her lathe and made it spherical, drawing circles within circles, lesser within larger, in order that the sound that approached it might not escape and be dispersed outside of it, but that the thing heard might be collected and enclosed within by the circles, and being as it were poured through them, be conveyed into the receptacles of the mind. We see here at once a model for the theatres seen in thriving cities, for theatres are constructed in exact imitation of the shape of the ear. So Nature, who fashioned living creatures, stretched the windpipe as though a musical scale, combining in it the enharmonic and chromatic and diatonic modes, answering to the vast variety of melodies with their shorter or longer intervals, and in this way set up a pattern of every musical instrument. XXXII. To show how true this

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 500.

- καὶ λύραι καὶ τὰ παραπλήσια μελωδοῦσι, τῆς ἀηδόνων ἢ κύκνων μουσικῆς τοσοῦτον ἀπολείπεται, ὅσον ἀπεικόνισμα καὶ μίμημα ἀρχετύπου παραδείγματος, φθαρτὸν εἶδος ἀφθάρτου γένους. τὴν μὲν γὰρ ἀνθρώπων μουσικὴν οὐδενὶ τῶν ἄλλων συγκρίνειν ἄξιον ἔχουσαν γέρας ἐξαιρέτον, ᾧ τετί-
- 106 μηται, τὴν ἑναρθρον σαφήνειαν. τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλα τῇ περὶ τὴν φωνὴν κλάσει χρώμενα καὶ ταῖς ἐπαλλήλοις τῶν τόνων μεταβολαῖς ἀκοᾶς αὐτὸ μόνον ἠδύνει, ὁ δ' ἄνθρωπος, ὥσπερ πρὸς τὸ λέγειν, οὕτως καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄδειν ἀρθρωθεὶς ὑπὸ φύσεως ἐκάτερον, ἀκοὴν τε καὶ νοῦν, ἐπάγεται, τὴν μὲν τῷ μέλει κηλῶν, τὸν δὲ τοῖς νοήμασιν
- 107 ἐπιστρέφων. καθάπερ γὰρ ὄργανον ἀμούσῳ μὲν παραδοθὲν ἀνάρμοστον, μουσικῶ δὲ κατὰ τὴν ἐν αὐτῷ τέχνην εὐάρμοστον γίνεται, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ ὁ λόγος ὑπὸ μὲν φαύλου νοῦ κινούμενος ἀνάρμοστος, ὑπὸ δὲ σπουδαίου πάνυ ἐμμελῆς εὐρί-
- 108 σκεται. λύρα γε μὴν ἢ εἴ τι τῶν ὁμοίων, εἰ μὴ [246] πληχθείη πρὸς τινος, ἡρεμεῖ· λόγος τε αὖ | μὴ πληχθεὶς ὑφ' ἡγεμονικοῦ κατὰ τὰναγκαῖον ἡσυχίαν ἄγει. καὶ μὴν ὥσπερ ὄργανα κατὰ τὰς τοῦ μέλους ἀπείρους ὄσας κράσεις μεθαρμόττεται, οὕτως καὶ ὁ λόγος συνωδὸς τις ἐρμηνεὺς πραγμάτων γινόμενος ἀμυθήτους λαμβάνει μεταβολάς.
- 109 τίς γὰρ ἂν ὁμοίως γονεῦσι καὶ τέκνοις διαλεχθείη, τῶν μὲν φύσει δούλος, τῶν δὲ γενέσει<sup>1</sup> δεσπότης ὢν; τίς δ' ἂν ἀδελφοῖς καὶ ἀνεψιοῖς ἢ συνόλως

<sup>1</sup> γενέσει is printed for γένει from conjecture.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 500.

is, I may mention that all the melodious sounds produced by wind- and stringed-instruments fall as far short of the music that comes from nightingales and swans, as a copy and imitation falls short of an original, or a perishable species of an imperishable genus. For we cannot compare the music produced by the human voice with that produced in any other way, since it has the pre-eminent gift of articulation, for which it is prized. For whereas the other kinds by use of the modulation of the voice and the successive changes of the notes can do no more than produce sounds pleasing to the ear, man, having been endowed by nature with articulate utterance equally for speaking and for singing, attracts alike both ear and mind, charming the one by the tune, and gaining the attention of the other by the thoughts expressed. For just as an instrument put into the hands of an unmusical person is tuneless, but in the hands of a musician answers to the skill which he possesses and becomes tuneful, in exactly the same way speech set in motion by a worthless mind is without tune, but when set going by a worthy one is discovered to be in perfect tune. Moreover, a lyre or anything of that kind, unless struck by someone, is still : speech too, if not struck by the ruling faculty, of necessity maintains silence. Moreover, just as instruments are tuned to vary in accordance with the infinite number of combinations of the music which they have to give forth, so speech proves itself an harmonious interpreter of the matters dealt with and admits of endless variations.<sup>a</sup> For who would talk in the same way to parents and children, being slave of the former by nature, and master of the latter in virtue of the same cause? Who would speak in the same

- τοῖς ἐγγύς γένους καὶ μακρὰν οὖσιν; τίς δ' ἂν οἰκείοις καὶ ἀλλοτρίοις, ἢ πολίταις καὶ ξένοις, οὐ μικρὰς οὐδὲ τὰς τυχοῦσας<sup>1</sup> ἢ φύσεως ἢ ἡλικίας ἔχουσι διαφοράς; πρεσβύτη γὰρ ἐτέρως ὁμιλή-
 τέον καὶ νέω, καὶ πάλιν ἐνδόξω καὶ ταπεινῷ, καὶ πλουσίω καὶ πένητι, καὶ ἄρχοντι καὶ ἰδιώτη, καὶ
 θεράποντι καὶ δεσπότῃ, γυναικί τε αὖ καὶ ἀνδρί, 110 καὶ ἀτέχνῳ καὶ τεχνίτῃ. καὶ τί δεῖ τὰς τῶν
 προσώπων ἀμυθήτους ἰδέας καταλέγεσθαι, πρὸς
 ἃς ὁ λόγος τρεπόμενος ἄλλοτε ἄλλοῖα λαμβάνει
 σχήματα; καὶ γὰρ αἱ τῶν πραγμάτων ἰδιότητες
 τυποῦσιν αὐτὸν κατὰ τοὺς ἰδίους χαρακτῆρας· μεγάλα γὰρ καὶ μικρὰ ἢ πολλὰ καὶ ὀλίγα ἢ ἰδιω-
 τικὰ καὶ δημόσια ἢ ἱερὰ καὶ βέβηλα ἢ ἀρχαῖα
 καὶ νέα οὐ τὸν αὐτὸν ἂν ἐρμηνεύσαι τρόπον, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἐκάστοις ἐφαρμόζοντα τῷ πλήθει καὶ ἀξιῶματι καὶ μεγέθει, τοτὲ μὲν ὑψηλὸν αἴρων ἑαυτὸν,
 τοτὲ δ' ἔμπαλιν συνάγων τε καὶ συστέλλων.
 111 παρέχουσι δ' ὥσπερ τὰ πράγματα καὶ τὰ πρόσωπα
 τῷ λόγῳ μεταβολάς, οὕτως καὶ αἱ τῶν γινο-μένων αἰτίαι καὶ οἱ τρόποι καθ' οὓς γίνεται,
 προσέτι μέντοι καὶ τὰ ὧν οὐκ ἄνευ πάντα, χρόνοι
 καὶ τόποι. παγκάλως οὖν ὁ μετακλίνων λόγους Ἰουβὰλ πατὴρ εἴρηται ψαλτηρίου καὶ κιθάρας,
 ἀπὸ μέρους τῆς ὅλης μουσικῆς, ὡς ἐπιδέδεικται.
 112 XXXIII. Τὰ μὲν οὖν τῆς Ἀδᾶς ἔγγονα καὶ
 αὐτὴ τίς ἐστι δεδήλωται· τὴν δ' ἐτέραν γυναῖκα
 τοῦ Λάμεχ Σελλὰν καὶ ὅσα ἀποκύει θεασώμεθα.

<sup>1</sup> οὐδὲ τὰς τυχοῦσας is Holwerda's conjecture. See App. p. 500.

way to brothers, cousins, near relatives generally, and to those only distantly connected with him? to those associated with him, and to those with whom he has nothing to do; to fellow-citizens and foreigners; to people differing in no slight or ordinary degree in nature or age? For we have to talk in one way to an old man, in another to a young one, and again in one way to a man of importance and in another to an insignificant person, and so with rich and poor, official and non-official, servant and master, woman and man, skilled and unskilled. What need to make a list of the innumerable sorts of persons, in our conversation with whom our talk varies, taking one shape at one time, another at another? For indeed the same thing is true of subjects of thought. Their several peculiarities mould our language in conformity with their characteristic aspects; for it would not set forth great things and little, many and few, private and public, sacred and profane, ancient and modern, in the same style, but in the style suited to their respective number or importance or greatness; at one time rising to a lofty tone, at another restraining and holding itself in. Nor is it only persons and matters dealt with that occasion our speech to vary its form, but the causes too of the things that happen, and the ways in which they happen, and besides these, times and places which enter into all things. Right well then is Jubal, the man who alters the tone and trend of speech, spoken of as the father of psaltery and harp, that is of music, the part being used for the whole, as has been made evident.

XXXIII. We have now described the progeny of Ada and who she herself is. Let us contemplate Lamech's other wife Sella (Zillah) and her offspring.

- Σελλά τοίνυν ἔρμηνεύεται σκιά, τῶν περὶ σῶμα καὶ ἔκτος ἀγαθῶν, ἃ τῷ ὄντι σκιᾶς οὐδὲν διαφέρει, σύμβολον. ἢ κάλλος οὐχὶ σκιά, ὃ πρὸς βραχύν ἀνῆσαν χρόνον ἀφαινεῖται, ἰσχύς δὲ καὶ εὐτομία σώματος, ἃς ἢ τυχοῦσα νόσος ἐξέλυσεν, αἰσθητήρια δὲ καὶ ἢ περὶ ταῦτα ἀκρίβεια, ἣν ῥεῦμα δυσῶδες ἐνέφραξεν ἢ γῆρας, ἢ ἀναγκαῖα καὶ κοινὴ πάντων νόσος, ἐπήρωσεν; ἔτι δ' οὐχὶ τλοῦτοι καὶ δόξαι καὶ ἀρχαὶ καὶ τιμαὶ καὶ ὅσα
 113 γῶν ἔκτος ἀγαθὰ νενόμισται | σκιά πάντα; χρῆ
 [247] δὲ τὴν διάνοιαν ὡς δι' ἀναβαθμῶν ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ παντός ἐπάγειν ἀρχήν. εἰς Δελφοὺς γεγόνασιν ἄνθρωποι τῶν λεγομένων ἐνδόξων, οἱ τοὺς εὐδαίμονας βίους ἐκείσε ἀνατεθείκασι. καθάπερ οὖν ἐξίτηλοι γραφαί, οὐ χρόνου μήκει μόνον [οὐ] διερρῦσαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ καιρῶν ὀξείαις μεταβολαῖς ἐκπεπνεύκασιν, εἰσὶ δ' οὖς οἶα χειμάρρου φορὰ πλημμύροντος ἐξαίφνης ἐπικλύσασα ἠφάνισεν.
- 114 Ἐκ ταύτης τῆς σκιᾶς καὶ τῶν ἀβεβαίων ὄνειράτων ἀποκνεῖται υἱός,<sup>1</sup> ὃν ὠνόμασεν Θεοβέλ (Gen. iv. 22). ἔρμηνεύεται δὲ σύμπασα. τῷ γὰρ ὄντι οἱ τὸ παρὰ πολλοῖς ἀδόμενον ἀγαθὸν σύνθετον πλουθυγείαν κτησάμενοι μικρὰ καὶ μεγάλα καὶ
 115 πάνθ' ἀπλῶς ἀνήφθαι δοκοῦσιν. εἰ δὲ καὶ παραγένουτο τις αὐτεξούσιος ἡγεμονία, φυσηθέντες καὶ μετεωρισθέντες ὑπὸ κούφης ἐννοίας, ἐκλαθόμενοι ἑαυτῶν καὶ ὕλης φθαρτῆς ἐξ ἧς γεγόνασι, μείζονος ἢ κατ' ἀνθρωπίνην σύστασιν οὐκ ἐθέτες φύσεως

<sup>1</sup> υἱός from conjecture for υἱωνός, with Heinemann.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 500.

<sup>b</sup> See App. pp. 500, 501.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 112-115

Well, "Sella" means "a shadow," and is a figure of bodily and external goods, which in reality differ not a whit from a shadow. Is not beauty a shadow, which after a short-lived bloom withers away? What else is strength and vigour of body, which any chance illness breaks up? What else are the organs of sense with all their accuracy, which a noisome rheum can impair, or old age, the disease to which all of us in common must submit, reduces to inefficiency? And, to look further, are not large incomes and high reputations, and magistracies, and honours, and whatever external things are reckoned advantages, a shadow one and all? It behoves us to lead our mind by easy stages<sup>a</sup> to the principle from which the whole matter starts. Men belonging to the number of those who are called distinguished have in former times gone up to Delphi<sup>b</sup> and dedicated there records of their prosperous lives. These then, like evanescent paintings, have not only faded away by lapse of time, but have even breathed their last amid sharp reverses of fortune, or some of them have been swept away suddenly as by the rush of a torrent in spate and have been seen no more.

Of this shadow and its fleeting dreams a son is born, to whom was given the name of Thobel (Gen. iv. 22), meaning "all together." For it is a fact that those who have obtained health and wealth, the compound which is proverbial, think that they have secured absolutely all things. And should a governorship conferring independent authority fall to their lot, puffed up by self-conceit and treading air, they forget themselves and the perishable stuff out of which they were made. They imagine that they have received a nature whose constitution is some-ἐπιλαχεῖν ταῖς τιμαῖς αὐτοὺς ὑπὸ μεγαλαυχίας ἀποσεμνύναντες ἐξεθείωσαν. ἤδη γοῦν τινες ἐπετόλμησαν τὸν ἀληθῆ θεὸν φάναι μὴ εἶδέναι (Exod. v. 2), τῆς περὶ αὐτοὺς ἀνθρωπότητος ἐκλαθόμενοι, διὰ τὴν τῶν περὶ σῶμα καὶ ἐκτὸς ἀμετρίαν.

- 118 XXXIV. Ἀκριβῶς τούτων ἕκαστον χαρακτηρίζων εἰτά<sup>1</sup> φησιν ὅτι “οὗτος ἦν σφυροκόπος χαλκεὺς χαλκοῦ καὶ σιδήρου” (Gen. iv. 22). τοῦ γὰρ σεσοβημένου περὶ τὰς ἢ σωματικὰς ἡδονὰς [ἢ τὰς ἡδονὰς] ἢ τὰς ἐκτὸς ὕλας ἢ ψυχὴ καθάπερ ἐπ’ ἄκμονος σφυρηλατεῖται κατὰ τὰς τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν μακρὰς καὶ διωλυγίους ἐκτάσεις ἐλαυνομένη. τοὺς μὲν γε φιλοσομάτων ἴδοις ἂν αἰεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ λίνα καὶ πάγας πρὸς τῶν ὧν ὀρέγονται θήραν τιθέντας, τοὺς δ’ αὖ φιλαργύρους καὶ φιλοδόξους τὸν περὶ ταῦτα οἴστρον καὶ ἕμερον ἐπὶ τὰ πέρατα γῆς καὶ θαλάττης ἀποστέλλοντας καὶ ὡσπερ δικτύοις ταῖς ἀορίστοις αὐτῶν ὀρέξεσιν ἐπισπωμένους τὰ πανταχόθεν, μέχρις ἂν ὑπὸ βίας ἢ σφοδρὰ τάσις ῥῆξιν λαβοῦσα καὶ τοὺς ἔλκοντας
- 117 ἀντεπισπωμένη πρηνεῖς καταβάλλῃ. δημιουργοὶ δ’ εἰςὶ πάντες οὗτοι πολέμου, παρὸ σίδηρον καὶ χαλκὸν ἐργάζεσθαι λέγονται, δι’ ὧν οἱ πόλεμοι |
- [248] συνίστανται. τὰς μὲν γὰρ μεγίστας καὶ ἀνδρῶν ἰδίᾳ καὶ πόλεων κοινῇ διαφορὰς εὖροι τις ἂν σκοπῶν καὶ πάλαι γεγενημένας καὶ νῦν ὑπαρχούσας καὶ ἐσομένας αὐθις ἢ εὐμορφίας γυναικὸς εἶνεκα ἢ χρημάτων ἢ δόξης ἢ τιμῆς ἢ ἀρχῆς ἢ thing more than human, and boastfully exalting themselves on their honours they deify themselves outright. An instance of this attitude is afforded by certain persons who have dared before now to say that they did not know the true God (Exod. v. 2), forgetting in their excessive enjoyment of bodily and outward things that they were but men.

<sup>1</sup> The punctuation and wording from ἀμετρίαν to εἰτα somewhat differ from Wendland's text.

XXXIV. Accurately characterizing each one of these he goes on to say : " This man was a wielder of the hammer, a smith in brass and iron work " (Gen. iv. 22). For the soul that is vehemently concerned about bodily pleasures or the materials of outward things, is being ever hammered on an anvil, beaten out by the blows of his desires with their long swoop and reach. Always and everywhere you may see those who care for their bodies more than anything else setting lines and snares to catch the things they long for. You may see lovers of money and fame dispatching on expeditions to the ends of the earth and beyond the sea the frenzied craving for these things. They draw to them the produce of every region of the globe, using their unlimited lusts as nets for the purpose, until at last the violence of their excessive effort makes them give way, and the counter pull throws down headlong those who are tugging. All these people are war-makers, and that is why they are said to be workers in iron and bronze, and these are the instruments with which wars are waged. For any who are looking into the matter would find, that the greatest quarrels both of men individually and of states corporately, have arisen in the past, and are going on now, and will take place in the future, either for a woman's beauty, or for money, or glory or honour or dominion, or to acquire some-

- κτῆσεως ἢ συνόλως ὅσα σώματος καὶ τῶν ἐκτός 118 ἐστι πλεονεκτῆματα· παιδείας δὲ καὶ ἀρετῆς
 χάριν, ἃ τοῦ κρατίστου τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν ἀγαθὰ διανοίας ἐστίν, οὔτε ξενικὸς οὔτ' ἐμφύλιος πώποτε κατέσχε
 πόλεμος· εἰρηναῖα γὰρ φύσει ταῦτα, ἐφ' ὧν εὐνομία
 καὶ εὐστάθεια καὶ ὅσα περικαλλέστατα εἶδη τοῖς ψυχῆς ὀξυδερκεστάτοις ὄμμασιν, οὐχὶ τοῖς σώ-ματος ἀμυδροῖς, θεωρεῖται· ταῦτα μὲν γὰρ τὰς
 ἐκτὸς ἐπιφανείας μόνον ὄρα, ὁ δὲ τῆς διανοίας
 ὀφθαλμὸς εἴσω προελθὼν καὶ βαθύνας τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς
 σπλάγχχοις ἐγκεκρυμμένα κατεῖδε.
- 119 Γίνονται δ' αἱ ταραχαὶ ἢ αἱ στάσεις πᾶσαι
 τοῖς ἀνθρώποις αἰεὶ σχεδὸν περὶ μὲν οὐδενὸς ἄλλου, περὶ δὲ τῆς πρὸς ἀλήθειαν σκιᾶς. τὸν γὰρ δημι-ουργὸν τῶν πολεμιστηρίων ὄπλων, χαλκοῦ καὶ
 σιδήρου, Θεοβέλ υἱὸν Σελλᾶς τῆς σκιᾶς ὠνόμασεν, οὐ λόγων τέχναις, ἀλλὰ νοημάτων ὑπερβάλλοντι
 κάλλει φιλοσοφῶν. ἔγνω γὰρ ὅτι πᾶς ἢ ναυτικὸς
 ἢ πεζὸς στρατὸς τοὺς μεγίστους αἰρεῖται κιν-δύνους ἕνεκα σωματικῶν ἡδονῶν ἢ χάριν περιουσίας
 τῶν ἐκτός, ὧν οὐδὲν βέβαιον ἢ πάγιον ὑπὸ τοῦ πάντα ἐξελέγχοντος αἰῶνος μαρτυρεῖται· σκιαγραφίαις γὰρ ἐπιπολαίοις ἐξ ἑαυτῶν διαρρεούσαις ἔοικε.
- 120 XXXV. Τοῦ δὲ Θεοβέλ ἀδελφὴν εἶναί φησι· Νοεμάν (Gen. iv. 22), ἧς ἐρμηνεία πίότης· ἀκολουθεῖ γὰρ τοῖς εὐπάθειαν σώματος καὶ ἄς εἶπον
 ἕλας μεταδιώκουσιν, ὅταν τινὸς ὧν ὀρέγονται λάχωσι, παιαίνεσθαι. τὴν δὲ τοιαύτην πίότητα
 οὐκ ἰσχύν, ἀλλ' ἀσθένειαν ἔγωγε τίθεμαι· διδάσκει

thing, or, in a word, to gain advantages pertaining to the body and outward things. But for the sake of culture and virtue, which are goods of the mind, the noblest part of our being, no war either foreign or civil has ever yet broken out; for these things are by nature peaceful; and when they prevail, a settled condition of society, and the reign of law, and all things fairest to behold, meet, not the body's dim-eyed vision, but the keen sight of the soul. For while the bodily eyes see only the outward surface, the eye of the mind penetrates within, and going deep gets a clear view of all that is hidden up in the very heart.

It is an invariable rule that broils and factions arise among men scarcely ever about anything else than what is in reality a shadow. For the lawgiver named the manufacturer of weapons of war, of brass and iron, Thobel son of Sella the shadow, and his philosophy depends not on verbal artifices, but on surpassing beauty of conception. For he was aware that every naval or land force chooses the greatest dangers for the sake of bodily pleasures or to gain a superabundance of things outward, no one of which is proved sure and stable by all-testing time; for those things resemble pictures that are mere superficial delineations of solid objects, and fade away of themselves.

XXXV. We are told that the sister of Thobel was Noeman (Gen. iv. 22), meaning "fatness"; for when those, who make bodily comfort and the material things of which I have spoken their object, succeed in getting something which they crave after, the consequence is that they grow fat. Such fatness I for my part set down not as strength but as weakness,

- γὰρ ἀφίστασθαι θεοῦ τιμῆς, ἢ πρώτη καὶ ἀρίστη 121 ψυχῆς ἐστὶ δύναμις. μάρτυς δ' ὁ νόμος ἐν ᾧδῇ μείζονι λέγων οὕτως· “ἐλιπάνθη, ἐπαχύνθη, ἐπλα-τύνθη, καὶ ἐγκατέλιπε θεὸν τὸν ποιήσαντα αὐτόν, καὶ ἐπελάθετο θεοῦ σωτήρος αὐτοῦ” (Deut.
 xxxii. 15). ὄντως γὰρ οὐκέτι μέμνηται τοῦ
 αἰωνίου, οἷς πρὸς καιρὸν ὁ βίος ἤνθησε· νομίζουσι 122 γοῦν τὸν καιρὸν θεόν. διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς μαρτυρεῖ προτρέπων πολεμεῖν ταῖς ἐναντίαις δόξαις·
 λέγει γάρ· “ἀφέστηκεν ὁ καιρὸς ἀπ’ αὐτῶν, ὁ δὲ [249] κύριος ἐν ἡμῖν” (Num. xiv. 9). ὥσθ’ | οἷς μὲν ὁ
 ψυχῆς βίος τετίμηται, λόγος θεῖος ἐνοικεῖ καὶ ἐμπεριπατεῖ, οἷς δ’ ὁ τῶν ἡδονῶν, ἐφήμερον καὶ κατεψευσμένην ἔχουσιν εὐκαιρίαν. οὗτοι μὲν οὖν
 ὑπὸ διαρρεούσης πιότητός τε καὶ τέρψεως ἐπὶ
 πλέον οἰδήσαντες καὶ περιταθέντες ἐξερράγησαν·
 οἱ δὲ τῇ τρεφούσῃ τὰς φιλαρέτους ψυχὰς σοφία
 παινόμενοι βέβαιον καὶ ἀκράδαντον ἴσχουσι δύνα-μιν, ἧς ὑπόδειγμα τὸ ὀλοκαυτούμενον ἀπὸ παντὸς 123 ἱερείου στέαρ. λέγει γὰρ Μωυσῆς· “πᾶν στέαρ
 τῷ κυρίῳ νόμιμον αἰώνιον” (Lev. iii. 16, 17),
 ὡς τῆς κατὰ μὲν διάνοιαν πιότητος ἀναφερομένης
 ἐπὶ θεὸν καὶ οἰκειουμένης αὐτῷ, διόπερ ἀπαθανατίζεται, τῆς δὲ κατὰ τὸ σῶμα καὶ τὰ ἐκτὸς ἀναφερομένης ἐπὶ τὸν ἀντίθεον καιρὸν, διὸ καὶ τάχιστα παρήκμασεν.
- 124 XXXVI. Περὶ μὲν οὖν τῶν Λάμεχ γυναικῶν
 τε καὶ ἐγγόνων ἱκανῶς οἶμαι δεδηλωῆσθαι· τὴν δ’
 ὥσπερ παλιγγενεσίαν Ἄβελ τοῦ δολοφονηθέντος 398

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 120-124

for it teaches us to neglect to pay honour to God, which is the chiefest and best power of the soul. The Law testifies to this by what it says in the greater song, "he became sleek, he grew thick, he broadened out, and forsook God which made him, and was unmindful of God his Saviour" (Deut. xxxii. 15). For indeed those for whom life has burst into bloom in the sunshine of the moment, no longer remember the Eternal, taking the lucky moment to be a god. Wherefore Moses also bears his witness by exhorting to warfare against opposing doctrines; for he says "the fair moment has departed from them, but the Lord is among us" (Numb. xiv. 9). From this we see that the Divine word dwells and walks among those for whom the soul's life is an object of honour, while those who value the life given to its pleasures, experience good times that are transient and fictitious. These, suffering from the effects of fatness and enjoyment spreading increasingly, swell out and become distended till they burst; but those who are fattened by wisdom which feeds souls that are lovers of virtue, acquire a firm and settled vigour, of which the fat taken from every sacrifice to be offered with the whole burnt offering is a sign. For Moses says "all the fat is a due for ever to the Lord" (Lev. iii. 16 f.), showing that richness of mind is recognized as God's gift and appropriated to Him, and thus attains to immortality; while that of the body and outward things is ascribed to the fair moment that usurps the place of God, and for this reason quickly has passed its prime.

XXXVI. The subject of Lamech and his wives and progeny has, I think, been adequately dealt with. Let us consider what may be called the new birth of

- σκεψώμεθα. “ ἔγνω ” φησὶν “ Ἄδὰμ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ Εὐάν, καὶ συλλαβοῦσα ἔτεκεν υἱόν, καὶ ἐπωνόμασε τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Σήθ <λέγουσα>· ἐξανέστησε γάρ μοι ὁ θεὸς σπέρμα ἕτερον ἀντὶ “ Ἀβελ, ὃν ἀπέκτεινε Κάιν ” (Gen. iv. 25). Σήθ
- 125 ἐρμηνεύεται ποτισμός. ὥσπερ οὖν τὰ κατὰ γῆν σπέρματα καὶ φυτὰ ποτιζόμενα αὐξεται καὶ βλαστάνει καὶ πρὸς καρπῶν γενέσεις εὐτοκεῖ, στερόμενα δὲ ἐπιρροῆς ἀφαινεῖται, οὕτως ἡ ψυχὴ, καθάπερ φαίνεται, ὅταν νόματι ποτίμῳ σοφίας ἄρδεται, βλαστάνει τε καὶ ἐπιδίδωσι πρὸς τὸ
- 126 βέλτιον. ποτισμός δὲ ὁ μὲν ἐστὶ ποτίζοντος, ὁ δ’ αὖ ποτιζομένου. ἢ οὐκ ἂν εἶποι τις τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἐκάστην ὥσπερ ἀπὸ πηγῆς τοῦ νοῦ ποτίζεσθαι τὰς δυνάμεις καθάπερ ὀχετοὺς ἀνευρύνοντός τε καὶ τείνοντός; οὐδεὶς γοῦν εὖ φρονῶν εἶποι ἂν ὀφθαλμοὺς ὄραν, ἀλλὰ νοῦν δι’ ὀφθαλμῶν, οὐδ’ ὠτα ἀκούειν, ἀλλὰ δι’ ὠτῶν ἐκείνον, οὐδὲ μυκτῆρας ὀσφραίνεσθαι, ἀλλὰ διὰ μυκτῆρων τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.
- 127 XXXVII. Διὸ καὶ ἐν Γενέσει λέγεται· “ πηγὴ δὲ ἀνέβαινε ἐκ τῆς γῆς καὶ ἐπότιζε πᾶν τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γῆς ” (Gen. ii. 6). ἐπεὶ γὰρ ὅλου τοῦ σώματος μέρος ἐξαίρετον ἔνειμεν ἡ φύσις τὸ πρόσωπον αἰσθήσεων, ἢ ἀνιούσ’ ἀφ’ ἡγεμονικοῦ πηγὴ σχιζομένη πολλαχῆ καθάπερ τινὰς ὑδρορροὰς ἀναστείλασα μέχρι προσώπου, δι’ αὐτῶν τὰς δυνάμεις ἐφ’ ἕκαστον ἄγει τῶν αἰσθητικῶν ὀργάνων.
- [250] οὕτως μέντοι καὶ ὁ θεοῦ λόγος | ποτίζει τὰς ἀρετάς· ἀρχὴ γὰρ καὶ πηγὴ καλῶν πράξεων
- 128 οὗτος. δηλοῖ δ’ ὁ νομοθέτης φάσκων· “ ποταμὸς δ’ ἐκπορεύεται ἐξ Ἐδέμ ποτίζων τὸν παράδεισον. ἐκεῖθεν ἀφορίζεται εἰς τέσσαρας ἀρχάς ” (Gen.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 124-128

the murdered Abel. "Adam," it says, "knew Eve his wife, and she conceived and bare a son, and called his name Seth (saying): God hath raised up to me another seed in the place of Abel, whom Cain slew" (Gen. iv. 25). "Seth" means "watering." As, then, the seeds and plants in the earth, when watered, grow and sprout and are prolific in producing fruit, but, if no water be poured on them, wither away, so the soul, as is evident, when it is fostered with a fresh sweet stream of wisdom shoots up and improves. Watering is either the act of one watering, or the experience of one being watered. Would not everyone say that each of the senses is watered from the mind as from a spring, and that it broadens and extends their powers as water does channels? For instance, nobody of sound sense would say that eyes see, but mind by means of eyes, nor that ears hear, but mind by their agency, nor that noses smell, but the ruling faculty by using them.

XXXVII. This is the reason for what is said in Genesis, "A spring went up out of the earth and watered all the face of the earth" (Gen. ii. 6). For since Nature allotted the face to the senses as the choicest portion of the whole body, the spring that rises from the dominant faculty, dividing itself in many directions, sends up conduits, so to speak, as far as the face, and by them conveys the powers they need to each of the organs of sense. It is in this way that the word of God waters the virtues; for the word of God is the source and spring of noble conduct. The lawgiver intimates as much by the words: "A river goeth out of Eden to water the garden. From thence it is parted into four heads" (Gen. ii. 10). For there

- ii. 10). γενικαὶ μὲν γάρ εἰσιν ἀρεταὶ τέσσαρες, φρόνησις, ἀνδρεία, σωφροσύνη, δικαιοσύνη· τούτων δ' ἡγεμονὶς ἐκάστη καὶ βασιλὶς ἐστὶ, καὶ ὁ κτησάμενος αὐτὰς ἀρχῶν καὶ βασιλεὺς εὐθέως, καὶ 129 μηδεμιᾶς ὕλης εὐπορή. τὸ γὰρ "ἀφορίζεται εἰς τέσσαρας ἀρχὰς" οὐ τούτων διάστασιν, ἀλλ' ἀρετῶν ἡγεμονίαν ἐμφαίνει καὶ κράτος. αὐταὶ δὲ καθάπερ ἐκ μιᾶς ρίζης ἐκπεφύκασι τοῦ θείου λόγου, ὃν εἰκάζει ποταμῶ διὰ τὴν ἀένναον καὶ συνεχῆ φοράν ποτίμων λόγων καὶ δογμάτων, οἷς τὰς φιλοθέους τρέφει καὶ συναίξει ψυχὰς.
- 130 XXXVIII. Ποῖαι δ' αὐταὶ, κατ' ὀλίγον ἐπάγων ἐκδιδάσκει, ποιούμενος ἀπὸ τῶν φύσει τὴν ὑφήγησιν τεχνῶν. εἰσάγει γὰρ τὴν "Ἄγαρ πληροῦσαν ἄσκον ὕδατος καὶ τὸ παιδίον ποτίζουσαν—ἐστὶ <δ' ἡ> "Ἄγαρ θεραπευὶς Σάρρας, τῆς τελείας ἀρετῆς [καὶ] μέση παιδεία—φυσικώτατα· ἐπειδὴν οὖν ἄχρι τοῦ βάθους ἐλθοῦσα τῆς ἐπιστήμης, ἣν ὀνομάζει φρέαρ, ἀρύσσηται ὡσπερ εἰς ἄγγος τὴν ψυχὴν τὰ τε δόγματα καὶ θεωρήματα, ἃ μέτεισιν, οἷς τέθραπται, τούτοις τρέφειν τὸ παιδίον ἀξιῶ.
- 131 παιδίον δὲ καλεῖ τὴν ἄρτι διδασκαλίαν ὀρεγομένην ψυχὴν καὶ πρὸς τῷ μαθεῖν νυνὶ τρόπον τινὰ γεγενημένην, παρὸ καὶ ἀνδρωθεὶς ὁ παῖς γίνεται σοφιστῆς, ὃν προσαγορεύει τοξότην· ἐφ' ὃ γὰρ ἂν προθῆται κεφάλαιον ὡσπερ σκοπόν, εὐστόχως ἀποδείξεις ὡσπερ οἷστους ἀφίησι.

<sup>a</sup> For the inseparability of the virtues see S. V. F. iii. 295 ff.

<sup>b</sup> Philo frequently uses τέχναι of sciences in which philosophy finds scope. To show that he means here, not philosophic modes of thought or action, but those in which we do what everyday needs suggest, he inserts φύσει. We are four main virtues, wisdom, courage, temperance, justice. Each one of these is a sovereign wielding authority, and the man that has acquired them is by the mere fact of doing so a ruling monarch, even if he be destitute of material resources. For the phrase "is parted into four heads" is not meant to indicate a dividing asunder,<sup>a</sup> but a sway and sovereignty belonging to virtues. These have sprung from the Divine word as from a single root; and that word is likened to a river by reason of the unbroken flow of the constant stream of words and doctrines ever sweet and fresh, by which it brings nourishment and growth to souls that love God.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 128-131

XXXVIII. The quality of these souls he teaches very fully, leading us on by degrees, using the ordinary arts as the means of instruction.<sup>b</sup> For he shows us Hagar filling a water-skin and giving the child drink. Hagar represents imperfect training, being hand-maid of Sarah who represents perfect virtue. The picture shown is perfectly true to principles. For when incomplete education having come to the depths of knowledge, which is called a well, draws from it into the soul as into a vessel the doctrines and speculations of which it is in quest, and thinks fit to feed the child with that on which it has itself been fed. "Child" is the name he gives to the soul just beginning to crave after instruction, and now become to some extent engaged in learning. It is in accordance with this that the boy, when grown to manhood, becomes a sophist, for which Moses' name is "archer." For whatever points he sets forth as a target, at this he discharges proofs like arrows, with sure aim.

do such things unprompted by philosophy. See Dean Robinson's Note on Ephesians, ii. 3 (τέκνα φύσει ὀργῆς), p. 50.

- 132 XXXIX. 'Ρεβέκκα δ' οὐκέτι προκοπαῖς ἀλλὰ
 τελειότητι ποτίζουσα τὸν μαθητὴν εὐρίσκεται.
 πῶς δέ, αὐτὸς διδάξει ὁ νόμος. "ἡ γὰρ παρ-θένος" φησὶν "ἦν καλὴ τῇ ὄψει σφόδρα, παρθένος
 ἦν, ἀνὴρ οὐκ ἔγνω αὐτήν. καταβᾶσα δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν
 πηγὴν ἔπλησε τὴν ὑδρίαν καὶ ἀνέβη. προσέδραμε
 δὲ ὁ παῖς εἰς συνάντησιν αὐτῇ καὶ εἶπε· Πότισόν
 με δὴ μικρὸν ὕδωρ ἐκ τῆς ὑδρίας σου. ἡ δὲ εἶπε·
 πῖε, κύριε. καὶ σπεύσασα καθεῖλε τὴν ὑδρίαν ἐπὶ
 τὸν βραχίονα αὐτῆς καὶ ἐπότισεν αὐτόν, ἕως [251] ἐπαύσατο πίνων· καὶ εἶπε· καὶ ταῖς καμήλοισ σου ὑδρεύσομαι, ἕως ἂν πᾶσαι πίωσι. καὶ σπεύ-σασα ἐξεκένωσε τὴν ὑδρίαν εἰς τὸ ποτιστήριον,
 καὶ δραμοῦσα ἐπὶ τὸ φρέαρ ὑδρεύσατο ταῖς καμή-133 λοις" (Gen. xxiv. 16-20). τίς οὐκ ἂν θαυμάσειε
 τὴν περὶ πάντα ἀκρίβειαν τοῦ νομοθέτου; παρ-θένον εἶπε τὴν 'Ρεβέκκαν, καὶ πάνυ καλὴν παρ-θένον, ὅτι ἀμιγῆς καὶ ἄδολος καὶ ἀμίαντος ἡ ἄρετῆς φύσις καὶ μόνη τῶν ἐν γενέσει καλὴ τε
 καὶ ἀγαθὴ· ἀφ' ἧς καὶ τὸ στωικὸν ἐβλάστησε 134 δόγμα τὸ μόνον εἶναι τὸ καλὸν ἀγαθόν. XL. τῶν
 δ' ἀρετῶν αἱ <μέν> εἰσιν αἰεὶ παρθένοι, αἱ δὲ ἐκ
 γυναικῶν εἰς παρθένοὺς μετέβαλον, ὡσπερ ἡ Σάρρα· "ἐξέλιπε γὰρ γίνεσθαι τὰ γυναικεῖα"
 (Gen. xviii. 11), ὅποτε ἄρχεται τὸ εὐδαιμον
 γένος κυοφορεῖν, Ἰσαάκ. ἡ δ' αἰεὶ παρθένος ὑπὸ ἀνδρός, ἧ φησι, συνόλως οὐ γινώσκειται. θνητῶν
 γὰρ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν οὐδενὶ τὴν ἀδιάφθορον φύσιν μιαίνειν ἐφεῖται, ἀλλ' οὐδ' ἡτις ἐστὶν εἰλικρινῶς
 εἰδέναι· ἂν μέντοι καὶ γινῶναι δυνηθῇ, μισῶν καὶ 135 προβεβλημένος οὐ παύεται. διὸ καὶ Λεῖαν φυσικῶς
 εἰσάγει μισουμένην (Gen. xxix. 31)· οὓς γὰρ τὰ

XXXIX. Rebecca is discovered watering her pupil not with gradual progress, like Hagar, but with perfection. How, the Law itself shall show. "The damsel," it says, "was very fair to look upon: she was a virgin, no man had known her. And she went down to the spring and filled her pitcher and came up. And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Give me to drink, I pray thee, a little water out of thy pitcher. And she said, Drink, sir. And she hastened and let down her pitcher on to her arm, and gave him drink, until he ceased drinking. And she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they all have drunk. And she hastened and emptied her pitcher into the trough and ran to the well and drew water for the camels" (Gen. xxiv. 16-20). Who would not admire the lawgiver's accuracy in every detail? For he tells us that Rebecca was a virgin and a very beautiful virgin, because virtue is essentially free from alloy and false semblance and defilement, and alone among created things both beautiful and good. Indeed it was from virtue that the Stoic canon sprang that the morally beautiful alone is good. XL. But among the virtues some are ever virgin, some pass from womanhood to virginity, as Sarah did: for "it ceased to be with her after the manner of women" (Gen. xviii. 11), at the time when she first conceives Isaac, happiness personified. But the ever-virgin is, as he says, absolutely not known by a man. For in reality no mortal has been permitted to defile the incorruptible growth, nay not even to know clearly its nature; if he does gain power to know it, he never ceases to hate it and to be on his guard against it. For this reason, like a true philosopher, he represents Leah as hated (Gen. xxix. 31); for Leah, who is φίλτρα τῶν κατὰ Ῥαχήλ, τὴν αἴσθησιν, ἡδονῶν ἐπάγεται, τούτους οὐκ ἀνέχεται ἢ ἐκτὸς τῶν παθῶν Λεία, διόπερ σκορακιζόμενοι μισοῦσιν αὐτήν· τῇ δὲ ἢ πρὸς τὸ γενητὸν ἀλλοτριώσεις πρὸς θεὸν οἰκείωσιν· εἰργάσατο, παρ' οὗ τὰ φρονήσεως παραδεξαμένη σπέρματα ὠδίνει καὶ ἀποτίκτει καλὰς καὶ ἀξίας ἐννοίας τοῦ γεννήσαντος πατρός· ἐὰν οὖν καὶ σὺ μιμησαμένη Λείαν, ᾧ ψυχῇ, <τὰ> θνήτὰ ἀποστραφῆς, ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἐπιστρέψει πρὸς τὸν ἀφθαρτον, ὃς ὅλας ἐπομβρήσει σοὶ τὰς τοῦ καλοῦ πηγὰς.

- 136 XLI. Ἡ δὲ Ῥεβέκκα κατέβη, φησὶν, ἐπὶ τὴν πηγὴν πληῆσαι τὴν ὑδρίαν, καὶ ἀνέβη. πόθεν γὰρ τὴν φρονήσεως διψῶσαν διάνοιαν εἰκὸς ἐστὶ πληροῦσθαι πλην ἀπὸ σοφίας θεοῦ, τῆς ἀνελλιποῦς πηγῆς, εἰς ἣν κατιοῦσα ἀναβαίνει κατὰ τι συγγενὲς σπουδαίου μαθητοῦ; τοὺς γὰρ ἀπ' οἰήσεως χαύνου κατελθόντας ὁ ἀρετῆς ἐκδεξάμενος καὶ ὑπολαβὼν δι' εὐκλείας εἰς ὕψος αἶρει λόγος. οὗ ἕνεκά μοι δοκεῖ καὶ Μωυσῆ διαλέγεσθαι· “βάδιζε, κατὰβηθι, καὶ ἀνάβηθι” (Exod. xix. 24), ὡς [252] παντὸς τοῦ τὴν ἴδιον | ταπεινότητα μετροῦντος ἐπικυδестέρου παρὰ τοῖς ἀληθείας κριταῖς γινόμενου. παρατετηρημένως δὲ σφόδρα ἢ μὲν [γὰρ] 137 Ἄγαρ ἀσκὸν πρὸς τὴν ὑδρίαν, Ῥεβέκκα δὲ ὑδρίαν ἐπιφέρειται, ὅτι τῇ μὲν τοῖς παιδεύμασι τοῖς ἐγκυκλίους <ἐγ>χορευούση δεῖ καθάπερ τινῶν σωματικῶν τῆς αἰσθήσεως ἀγγείων, ὀφθαλμῶν, ὠτῶν, πρὸς τὴν τῶν θεωρημάτων ἀνάληψιν—ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ πολλὰ μὲν ἰδεῖν, πολλῶν δὲ ἐπακοῦσαι περιγίνεται τοῖς φιλομαθέσιν ἢ ἐξ ἐπιστήμης

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 135-137

above the passions, cannot tolerate those who are attracted by the spells of the pleasures that accord with Rachel, who is sense-perception; wherefore, finding themselves treated with contempt by her they hate her. But for Leah, estrangement on the human side brings about fellowship with God, and from Him she receives the seed of wisdom, and is in birth-throes, and brings forth beautiful ideas worthy of the Father Who begat them. Then if thou too, O soul, follow Leah's example and turn away from mortal things, thou wilt of necessity turn to the Incorruptible One, Who will cause all the springs of moral beauty to pour their streams upon thee.

XLI. Rebecca, it says, went down to the spring to fill her pitcher, and came up again. For whence is it likely that a mind thirsting for sound sense should be filled save from the wisdom of God, that never-failing spring, its descent to which is an ascent in accordance with some innate characteristic of a true learner? For the teaching of virtue awaits those who come down from empty self-conceit, and taking them in its arms carries them to the heights with fair fame. It is with a view to this, as it seems to me, that God says to Moses, "Go, get thee down, and come up" (Exod. xix. 24), implying that everyone who rightly gauges his own inferiority becomes more honourable in the estimation of those who can judge of reality. There is point in Hagar's bringing a skin to the place of drawing water, whereas Rebecca brings a pitcher. She who belongs to the band of devotees of school-learning needs, as it were, certain bodily vessels of sense-perception—eyes, ears—for the acquirement of the results of study; for by those who love to learn the benefit of knowledge is gained

- ὠφέλεια—τῇ δὲ ἀκράτου σοφίας πεπληρωμένη δερματίνου μὲν ὄγκου <τὸ> παράπαν οὐδενός—
 ἔμαθε γὰρ ἢ ἀσωμάτων ἐρώσα ὄλον ἀποδύεσθαι
 λογισμῶ τὸν ἀσκόν, τὸ σῶμα—ὑδρίας δὲ αὐτὸ
 μόνον, ἢ σύμβολόν ἐστιν ἀγγείου τὸ πολύχουν
 ὕδατος τρόπον ἡγεμονικὸν κεχωρηκότος· ὅπερ εἴτε
 μῆνιγγα εἴτε καρδίαν εἶναι συντέτευχεν, οἱ περὶ 138 ταῦτα δεινοὶ φιλοσοφείτωσαν. ὑδρευσαμένην οὖν ἀπὸ σοφίας, τῆς θείας πηγῆς, τὰς ἐπιστήμας ὁ φιλομαθῆς ἰδὼν ἐπιτρέχει καὶ ὑπαντιάσας ἰκέτης γίνεται, ὅπως τὴν τοῦ μαθεῖν δίψαν ἀκέσῃται. ἡ
 δὲ τὸ πρεσβύτατον τῶν παιδευμάτων διδαχθεῖσα,
 τὸ ἀβάσκανον καὶ φιλόδωρον, εὐθύς ὀρέγει τὸ
 σοφίας νᾶμα καὶ ἐμπιεῖν ἀθρόου παρακαλεῖ μετὰ
 τοῦ καὶ κύριον ὀνομάζειν τὸν οἰκέτην. τοῦτο δ'
 ἐστὶ τὸ δογματικώτατον, ὅτι ὁ σοφὸς μόνος
 ἐλεύθερός τε καὶ ἄρχων, κἂν μυρίους τοῦ σώματος
 139 ἔχη δεσπότας. XLII. ὀρθότατα μέντοι φαμένου “ πότισόν με μικρὸν ὕδωρ,” οὐκ ἀποκρίνεται τὸν ἀκόλουθον τρόπον· ποτιῶ, ἀλλὰ φησι· “ πῖε.”
 τοῦτο μὲν γὰρ ἐπιδεικνυμένης τὸν θεῖον ἦν πλοῦτον,
 ὃς ἅπασιν τοῖς ἀξίοις καὶ δυναμένοις χρῆσθαι
 προκέχυται, ἐκεῖνο δὲ ἐπαγγελλομένης διδάξειν·
 οὐδὲν δὲ τῶν ἐξ ἐπαγγέλματος οἰκεῖον ἀρετῆ.
- 140 Τεχνικώτατα μέντοι χαρακτηρίζει τὴν τῆς διδα-σκούσης καὶ ὠφελούσης ὑφήγησιν· “ σπεύσασα”
 γὰρ φησι “ καθεῖλε τὴν ὑδρίαν ἐπὶ τὸν βραχίονα

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 501.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 137-140

from seeing much and hearing much. She who is filled with unalloyed wisdom has absolutely no need of any bulky leathern vessel : she that is enamoured of spiritual objects has learned by use of reason to rid herself completely of the body, which the water-skin represents. All she needs is just a pitcher, which is a figure of a vessel containing the ruling faculty as it pours forth like water its copious streams. Whether this faculty be brain or heart, we will leave experts in these matters to discuss. The keen scholar on seeing that from wisdom, that Divine spring, she has drawn knowledge in its various forms, runs towards her, and, when he meets her, beseeches her to satisfy his thirst for instruction. She has been taught the chief of all lessons, ungrudging generosity, and at once holds out to him the water of wisdom, and bids him take a deep draught, calling the servant as she does this " Sir " or " Master." Here we have that highest of truths that only the wise man is free and a ruler,<sup>a</sup> albeit he may have ten thousand masters of his body. XLII. The man had said " Give me a little water to drink." She does not put her answer in a form corresponding to his request, and say " I will give thee to drink," but says " Drink." And she speaks quite correctly, For her saying " Drink " showed that she was making manifest the Divine abundance which has been poured forth for all to enjoy who are worthy and able to do so. To have said " I will give thee to drink " would have been to profess that she would teach him. And virtue eschews all that smacks of profession.<sup>a</sup>

He goes on to portray with great skill the method followed by the teacher who wants to do her pupils good. " She hastened," he says, " and let down the

αὐτῆς," διὰ μὲν τοῦ σπουδάσαι τῆς πρὸς τὸ εὐεργετεῖν ἐμφαινομένης ὀξύτητος, ἢ ἀπὸ γνώμης συνίσταται, ἧς ὑπερόριος ἐκτετόξευται φθόνος, διὰ δὲ τοῦ καθελεῖν ἐπὶ τὸν βραχίονα αὐτῆς <τῆς> πρὸς τὸν μανθάνοντα τοῦ διδάσκοντος ἐπικλινούσας 141 καὶ προσεχοῦς οἰκειώσεως. εὐήθεις γὰρ ὅσοι τῶν διδασκάλων μὴ πρὸς τὴν τῶν γνωρίμων δύναμιν,
 [253] ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὴν ἑαυτῶν ὑπερβάλλουσας | ἕξιν ἐπιχειροῦσι ποιεῖσθαι τὰς ὑφήγησεις, οὐκ εἰδότες ὡς διδασκαλίας ἐπίδειξις μακρῶ διενήνοχεν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἐπιδεικνύμενος τῇ τῆς παρουσίας ἕξεως εὐφορία καταχρώμενος ἀνεμποδίστως τὰ ἐν μακρῶ χρόνῳ πονηθέντα οἴκοι καθάπερ γραφῶν ἔργα ἢ πλαστῶν εἰς τοῦμφανές προφέρει τὸν παρὰ τῶν πολλῶν θηρώμενος ἔπαινον, ὁ δ' αὖ διδάσκειν ἐπιχειρῶν οἶα τις ἰατρὸς ἀγαθὸς οὐ πρὸς τὸ τῆς τέχνης μέγεθος ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὴν τοῦ θεραπευομένου δύναμιν ἀφορῶν οὐχ ὅσα ἐκ τῆς ἐπιστήμης πεπόρικε— ἀμύθητα γὰρ ταῦτά γε—ἀλλ' ὅσων τῷ κάμνοντι δεῖ στοχαζόμενος τοῦ μετρίου προφέρων ἐπιδίδωσιν.

142 XLIII. Διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς ἐν ἑτέροις φησί· “ δάνειον δανειεῖς τῷ χρήζοντι ὅσον δεῖται, καθ' ὃ δεῖται ” (Deut. xv. 8), διὰ μὲν τοῦ δευτέρου διδάσκων ὅτι οὐ πάντα πᾶσι χαριστέον, ἀλλὰ τὰ οἰκεία τῇ τῶν δεομένων χρεία· τὸ γὰρ ἄγκυραν ἢ πλάτην ἢ πηδάλιον γεωπόνῳ ἢ ἄροτρα καὶ σκαπάνην κυβερνήτῃ ἢ λύραν μὲν ἰατρῷ, μουσικῷ δὲ τὰ κατὰ τὴν χειρουργίαν δωρεῖσθαι ὄργανα

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 501.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 140-142

pitcher on to her arm." By the "hastening" her keenness to do a kindness is brought out, a keenness which comes of a disposition from which envy has been utterly expelled. By the "letting down" on to her arm we are shown how the teacher comes down to the learner and attentively studies him as one with whom he is intimately concerned. For teachers who when they set about giving their lessons keep in view their own great superiority and not the capacity of their pupils, are simpletons, who are not aware how vast is the difference between a lesson and a display. For the man who is giving a display uses to the full the rich yield of the mastery which he possesses, and without let or hindrance brings forward into the open the results of hours spent in labour by himself at home. Such are the works of artists and sculptors. In all this he is trying to gain the praise of the public. The man, on the other hand, who is setting out to teach, is like a good doctor, who with his eyes fixed not on the vastness of his science but on the strength of his patient, applies not all that he has ready<sup>a</sup> for use from the resources of his knowledge—for this is endless—but what the sick man needs, seeking to avoid both defect and excess.

XLIII. This is why Moses says elsewhere: "Thou shalt lend to him that needs (in quantity) as much as he needs (in kind) suitably to his need" (Deut. xv. 8), teaching by the latter clause that we must not grant everything to everybody, but what corresponds (in kind) to the need (or business) of those who want something. For it is absurd to give an anchor or an oar or a rudder to a farmer, or a plough and a hoe to a pilot, or a lyre to a physician, while giving surgical instruments to a musician. This is as ridiculous as καταγέλαστον, εἰ μὴ καὶ διψῶσι μὲν πολυτελεῆ

σιτία, πεινώσι δὲ πολὺν ἄκρατον ἐπιφέρειν δεῖ
πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν εὐπορίας τε ἅμα καὶ μισανθρωπίας,
χλεύην τὰς ἐτέρων τύχας τιθεμένους.

- Τὸ δὲ ποσὸν ἐν ταῖς χάρισιν αὐτῷ παρείληπται
διὰ συμμετρίαν, πρᾶγμα ὠφελιμώτατον· μὴ γὰρ
ὅσα δύνασαι χαρίζου, φησὶν ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος, ἀλλ' 143 ὅσα ἰκανὸς ὁ δεόμενός ἐστι δέξασθαι. ἢ οὐχ ὀρθῶς
ὅτι καὶ ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ἀναλογούντας τῷ μεγέθει τῆς
αὐτοῦ τελειότητος χρησμούς ἀναφθέγγεται, πρὸς
δὲ τὴν τῶν ὠφεληθησομένων αἰεὶ δύναμιν; ἐπεὶ
καὶ τίς ἂν ἐχώρησε θεοῦ λόγων ἰσχὺν τῶν ἀπάσης
κρειττόνων ἀκοῆς; ὁ ἀψευδέστατα δοκοῦσιν οἱ Μωυσῆ λέγοντες· “λάλησον σὺ ἡμῖν, καὶ μὴ
λαλείτω πρὸς ἡμᾶς ὁ θεός, μὴ ἀποθάνωμεν” (Exod. xx. 19)· ἔγνωσαν γὰρ ὅτι οὐδὲν ἔχουσι παρ' ἑαυτοῖς ἀξιόχρεων ὄργανον θεοῦ νομοθετοῦν-144 τος ἐκκλησίαν. οὐδὲ γὰρ εἰ τὸν πλοῦτον ἐπι-δείκνυσθαι βουληθεῖη τὸν ἑαυτοῦ, χωρήσαι ἂν
ἠπειρωθείσης καὶ θαλάττης ἢ σύμπασα γῆ· εἰ
μὴ νομίζομεν ὑετῶν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἐν κόσμῳ
φορὰν κατὰ τεταγμένας καιρῶν περιόδους, ἀλλὰ
μὴ συνεχῶς γίνεσθαι διὰ σπάνιν καὶ ἔνδειαν
αὐτῶν, ἀλλ' οὐχ ἔνεκα προμηθείας τῶν χρηζόντων,
οὓς ἢ συνεχῆς τῶν ὁμοίων δωρεῶν ἀπόλαυσις
[254] βλάβειν | μᾶλλον ἔμελλεν ἢ ὠφελήσειν.
145 Διὸ τὰς πρώτας αἰεὶ χάριτας, πρὶν κορεσθέντας
ἐξυβρίσαι τοὺς λαχόντας, ἐπισχῶν καὶ ταμειυσά-

<sup>a</sup> Supplying λέγειν from λέγοντες.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 142-145

it is to bring costly viands to those who are athirst, and gallons of undiluted wine to those who are hungry, with a view to making known at the same time our wealth and our hatred of our fellow-men, by making sport of others' mishaps.

With the kind of help to be given has been joined the amount to be given. This is introduced for the sake of maintaining due proportion, a thing which has great advantages. "Do not," says right principle, "give all you can, but as much as the man in want is capable of receiving." Or do you fail to notice that even God imparts divine communications not in a way corresponding to the greatness of His own perfection, but to the ever-varying capacity of those whom He would benefit? Who could possibly have borne the force of the oracles of God which are too great for any power of hearing? This seems to be most truly expressed<sup>a</sup> by those who say to Moses: "Speak thou to us, and let not God speak to us, lest we die" (Exod. xx. 19); for they felt that they have in themselves no organ of hearing fit to be employed when God is giving laws to His congregation. Were He to choose to display His own riches, even the entire earth with the sea turned into dry land would not contain them. One might as well suppose that the rainfall and the supply of Nature's other boons takes place at seasons recurring at fixed intervals, and not uninterruptedly, owing to some dearth and scarcity of them, and not out of forethought for those who need them, who would be harmed rather than benefited by the unbroken enjoyment of like gifts.

Wherefore God ever causes His earliest gifts to cease before their recipients are gluttoned and wax insolent; and storing them up for the future gives

- μενος εἰσαυθίς ἑτέρας ἀντ' ἐκείνων καὶ τρίτας ἀντὶ τῶν δευτέρων καὶ αἰεὶ νέας ἀντὶ παλαιότερων, τοτὲ μὲν διαφερούσας, τοτὲ δ' αὖ καὶ τὰς αὐτὰς ἐπιδίδωσι. τὸ γὰρ γενητὸν οὐδέποτε μὲν ἀμοιρεῖ τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ χαρίτων—ἐπεὶ πάντως ἂν διέφθαρτο—φέρειν δὲ τὴν πολλὴν καὶ ἄφθονον αὐτῶν ῥύμην ἀδυνατεῖ. διὸ βουλόμενος ὄνησιν ἡμᾶς ἔχειν ὧν ἐπιδίδωσι πρὸς τὴν τῶν λαμβανόντων ἰσχὺν τὰ
- 146 διδόμενα σταθμᾶται. XLIV. ἐπαινετέον οὖν καὶ Ῥεβέκκαν, ἣ τοῖς τοῦ πατρὸς ἐπομένη διατάγμασιν ἀφ' ὑψηλοτέρου χωρίου καθελούσα τὸ σοφίας ἀγγεῖον ἐπὶ τὸν βραχίονα, τὴν ὑδρίαν [δέ], ὀρέγει τῷ μαθητῇ ἃς ἱκανὸς ἐκείνός ἐστι δέξασθαι διδα-
- 147 σκαλίας. μετὰ δὲ τῶν ἄλλων καὶ τὸ ἄφθονον αὐτῆς καταπέπληγμαί. μικρὸν γὰρ αἰτηθεῖσα πόμα πολὺ δίδωσιν, ἕως ὅλην τὴν ψυχὴν τοῦ μανθάνοντος ποτίμων θεωρημάτων ἐπλήρωσεν. λέγει γάρ· “ ἐπότισεν αὐτὸν ἕως ἐπαύσατο πίνων,” πρὸς φιλανθρωπίαν δίδαγμα θαυμασιώτατον· ἐὰν γάρ τις πλειόνων μὲν τυγχάνῃ χρεῖος ὧν, ὀλίγα δὲ ὑπ' αἰδούς προσιῶν αἰτῇ, μὴ ταῦθ' ἄ φησι μόνον παρέχωμεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ ἡσυχαζόμενα ἐκείνα, ὧν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἐνδεής ἐστιν.
- 148 Ἄλλ' οὐκ ἀπόχρη μόνον πρὸς τελείαν ἀπόλαυσιν τῷ γνωρίμῳ καταλαμβάνειν ὅσα ἂν ὁ διδάσκων ὑφηγηῆται, εἰ μὴ προσγένοιτο καὶ μνήμη· διόπερ ἐπιδεικνυμένη τὸ φιλόδωρον, ὅτε αὐτὸν πληροῖ ποτίσασα, ὑπισχνεῖται καὶ ταῖς καμήλοις ὑδρεύσεσθαι, ἃς συμβολικῶς μνήμας εἶναί φασιν· μη-

others in their stead, and a third supply to replace the second, and ever new in place of earlier boons, sometimes different in kind, sometimes the same. For creation is never left destitute of the gifts of God—had it been so left it would assuredly have perished—but it has no power to bear their full and abundant torrent. And so in His desire that we should enjoy benefit from the gifts which He bestows, God proportions the things which He gives to the strength of those who receive them. XLIV. Rebecca is therefore to be commended for following the ordinances of the Father (of all) and letting down from a higher position the vessel which contains wisdom, called the pitcher, on to her arm, and for holding out to the learner the teaching which he is able to receive. Among the other traits before which I stand in amazement is her lavishness. Asked for a little to drink she gives much, until she has filled the whole soul of the learner with draughts of speculations. For we read, “She gave him to drink until he left off drinking,” a piece of teaching on kindness to our fellow-men well worthy of our admiration. For, if a man chance to be in want of many things, and come to us and owing to shame ask for few things, let us not supply him with the things which he mentioned only, but also with those about which he was silent, of which he is really in need.

But for perfect enjoyment on the pupil's part, it is not enough that he should simply take in all the instructions given by the teacher. He needs the further boon of memory. Accordingly Rebecca exhibits her generosity by promising, when she gives the servant all he can drink, to water the camels also. These we take to be figures of memory, for the

PHILO

- ρυκᾶται γὰρ τὸ ζῶον τὴν τροφήν ἐπιλεαῖνον, καὶ
 ὅταν ὀκλάσαν δέξῃται βαρύτατον φόρτον, μετὰ 149 πολλῆς ἄγαν εὐτονίας ἐγείρεται κούφως. οὕτως
 δὲ καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ τοῦ φιλομαθοῦς, ὅταν ἐπιφορηθῇ
 τὸ τῶν θεωρημάτων ἄχθος, ταπεινότερα μὲν
 οὐ γίνεται, διαναστᾶσα δὲ γέγηθεν· ἐκ δὲ τῆς ἐπαναπολήσεως καὶ ὥσπερ ἐπιλεάνσεως τῆς πρῶτον
 καταβληθείσης τροφῆς περιγίνεται μνήμη τῶν
 150 θεωρημάτων. ἰδοῦσα δὲ εὐπαράδεκτον ἀρετῆς <τὴν> τοῦ παιδὸς φύσιν ὅλην ἐξεκένωσε τὴν ὑδρίαν εἰς τὸ ποτιστήριον, τουτέστι τὴν τοῦ
 διδάσκοντος ἅπασαν ἐπιστήμην εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν
 τοῦ μανθάνοντος. σοφισταὶ μὲν γὰρ ὑπὸ μισθανίας ἅμα καὶ φθόνου τὰς τῶν γνωρίμων κολούον-τες φύσεις πολλὰ τῶν ἅ χρῆ λέγειν ἡσυχάζουσι
 ταμειυόμενοι τὸν ἀργυρισμὸν εἰσαῦθις ἑαυτοῖς·
 151 ἄφθονον δὲ καὶ δωρητικὸν ἀρετῆ πρᾶγμα, ὡς, τὸ
 [255] λεγόμενον, χειρὶ καὶ ποδὶ | καὶ πάσῃ δυνάμει μὴ
 ὀκνεῖν ὠφελεῖν. ὅσα οὖν ἠπίστατο, καθάπερ εἰς
 δεξαμενὴν τὴν τοῦ γνωρίμου προχέασα διάνοιαν
 ἔρχεται πάλιν ἐπὶ τὸ φρέαρ ἀντλήσαι, ἐπὶ τὴν ἀένναον τοῦ θεοῦ σοφίαν, ἵνα καὶ τὰ <παλαιὰ> παγίως ὀχυρώσῃται διὰ μνήμης καὶ ἄλλων καινο-τέρων ἐπιστήμαις ποτισθῇ· ἀπερίγραφος γὰρ ὁ σοφίας θεοῦ πλοῦτος καὶ νέα ἐπὶ παλαιοῖς ἐκφέρων βλαστήματα, ὡς ἀνηβῶν τε καὶ ἐπακμάζων 152 μηδέποτε λήγειν. διὸ καὶ πάνυ εὐήθεις ὅσοι πρὸς τὸ πέρας ἡστινοσοῦν ἐπιστήμης ἀφικέσθαι διανοήθησαν· τὸ γὰρ ἐγγὺς εἶναι δόξαν μακρὰν ἄγαν τοῦ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 501.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 148-152

camel is a ruminating animal softening its food by chewing the cud. Moreover, when it has knelt and had a heavy load laid on it, it nimbly raises itself with astonishing agility. In the same way the soul<sup>a</sup> of the keen learner also, when it has been laden with the mass of speculations, does not stoop indeed, but springs up rejoicing, and through repetition and (so to speak) rumination of the original deposit of (mental) food, gains power to remember the things contemplated. When she saw how readily receptive of virtue the servant's nature was, she emptied all the contents of her pitcher into the drinking-trough, that is to say, she poured all the teacher's knowledge into the soul of the learner. For, whereas sophists, impelled at once by mercenary motives and by a grudging spirit, stunt the natures of their pupils by withholding much that they ought to tell them, carefully reserving for themselves against another day the opportunity of making money; virtue is an ungrudging thing, fond of making gifts, never hesitating to do good, as the saying is, with hand and foot and all her might. Well, after pouring forth all that she knew into her pupil's understanding as into a receptacle, she comes again to the well to draw, to the ever-flowing wisdom of God, that her pupil may, by means of memory, fix firmly what he has learned, and drink in draughts of knowledge of yet other fresh subjects; for the wealth of the wisdom of God is unbounded and puts forth new shoots after the old ones, so as never to leave off renewing its youth and reaching its prime. For this reason all who imagine that they have arrived at the limit of any science whatever are perfect simpletons; for that which seemed to be near the end is very far away from it;

τέλους ἀφέστηκεν, ἐπεὶ τέλειος τῶν γεγονότων οὐδεὶς πρὸς οὐδὲν μάθημα, ἀλλὰ τοσοῦτον ἐνδεῖ, ὅσον κομιδῇ νήπιος παῖς ἄρτι τοῦ μαθάνειν ἀρχόμενος πρὸς πολλὸν ἤδη διὰ τὴν ἡλικίαν ἅμα καὶ τὴν τέχνην ὑφηγητήν.

- 153 XLV. Ἐρευνητέον δὲ τὴν αἰτίαν, δι' ἣν τὸν μὲν παῖδα ἀπὸ τῆς πηγῆς, τὰς δὲ καμήλους ἀπὸ τοῦ φρέατος ποτίζει. μήποτ' οὖν τὸ μὲν νᾶμα ταῦτόν, * * * ὃ τὰς ἐπιστήμας ἄρδων [ὃ] ἱερὸς λόγος, τὸ δὲ φρέαρ συγγενὲς μνήμης· ἃ γὰρ βύθια πέφηεν<sup>1</sup> ἤδη, ταῦθ' ὡσπερ ἐκ φρέατος δι' ὑπομνήσεως ἄγεται. τοὺς μὲν οὖν τοιοῦτους τῆς περὶ τὴν φύσιν εὐμοιρίας ἀποδεκτέον· εἰσὶ δέ τινες τῶν ἀσκητῶν, οἷς τὴν ἐπ' ἀρετὴν ἄγουσαν ὁδὸν τραχεῖαν καὶ δυσάντη καὶ χαλεπὴν νομισθεῖσαν τὸ πρῶτον λεωφόρον αὐθις ὃ τὰ πάντα εὐεργέτης ἀπέδειξε θεὸς εἰς γλυκύτητα τὸ πικρὸν τοῦ πόνου μεταβαλὼν. ὃν δὲ τρόπον μετέβαλε, σημανοῦμεν·
- 155 ὅτε ἡμᾶς ἐκ τῆς Αἰγύπτου, τῶν κατὰ τὸ σῶμα παθῶν, ἐξήγαγε, τὴν ἔρημον ἠδονῆς ἀτραπὸν ὁδεύοντες ἐν Μέρροις ἐστρατοπεδευόμεθα, χωρίῳ πότιμον μὲν οὐκ ἔχοντι νᾶμα, πικρὸν δὲ σύμπαν (Exod. xv. 23). ἔτι γὰρ αἱ δι' ὀφθαλμῶν καὶ ὠτων γαστρός τε αὐ καὶ τῶν μετὰ γαστέρα τέρψεις ἔναυλοί τε ἦσαν καὶ σφόδρα ἐκίλουν ὑπ-
- 156 ηχοῦσαι. ὁπότ' οὖν διαποζεύγνυσθαι κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς ἐθέλομεν, ἀνθείλκον ἐπαγόμεναι καὶ

<sup>1</sup> πέφηεν is a conjecture for ἀπέφηεν (Tr.); or perhaps for ἀπέφηεν ἤδη read ἀπέφηενε λήθη (ἀποφαίνειν = "to make, render").

<sup>a</sup> An attempt has been made in the translation to render the passage as though no words were missing. But it is open to the objection that πηγῇ would naturally be dealt for no one that has ever lived has been perfect in any subject of study, but falls as far short of perfection as a very young boy just beginning to learn compared with an instructor now grown grey, both as regards his age and his proficiency in his profession.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 152-156

XLV. Again we must search for the reason why she gives the servant to drink from the spring, but the camels from the well. We should probably explain it in this way: the water is the same in each case, the sacred word supplying streams of knowledge.<sup>a</sup> But the well is particularly associated with memory; for things which have appeared to be by this time in the depths and out of reach are drawn up as from a well by means of a reminder (from outside). Such men we must cordially approve for the excellent nature which has fallen to their lot. But there are some men of diligence and effort, who at first think the way leading to virtue rough and steep and difficult, but for whom later on the all-bountiful God renders it a highway, transforming the bitterness of their toil into sweetness. In what manner He transformed it we will point out. When He led us forth out of Egypt, that is out of our bodily passions, as we journeyed along the track barren of pleasure, we encamped in Marah, a spot having no water fit to drink, but water wholly bitter (Exod. xv. 23); for the delights that come by the way of eyes and ears and that of the appetite and sexual lusts bewitched us with their haunting music, ever ringing in our ears. And whenever we wished wholly to sever ourselves from them, they would pull against us, drawing us with first; and the still graver objection that it treats ἐπιστήμαι as watered, whereas in 138 they are the water.

We suggest that the text should be printed thus—τὸ μὲν ἄμα ταύτων <αἱ ἐπιστήμαι, ἣ δὲ πηγὴ> ὁ τὰς κτλ.

περιπλεκόμεναι καὶ λιπαρῶς καταγοητεύουσαι, ὥστε πρὸς τὰς συνεχεῖς τιθασείας αὐτῶν ἐνδόντες πόνῳ μὲν ἡλλοτριούμεθα ὡς πικρῷ πάνυ καὶ δυσκόλῳ, παλινδρομεῖν δὲ εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἐβουλευόμεθα, τὸν ἀσελοῦς καὶ ἀκολάστου βίου ὑπόδρομον, εἰ μὴ θάπτον ὁ σωτὴρ οἶκτον λαβὼν καθάπερ ἡδυσμα ξύλον γλυκαῖνον (cf. Exod. xv. 25) εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν ἐνέβαλε φιλοπονίαν ἀντὶ μισοπονίας ἐργασάμενος:

157 ἦδει γάρ, ἅτε δημιουργὸς ὢν, ὅτι τῶν ὄντων
[256] οὐδενός, εἰ μὴ προσγένοιτο σφοδρὸς | ἔρωσ, ἔνεστι
περιγενέσθαι. ὅσα οὖν ἐπιτηδεύουσιν ἄνθρωποι, δίχα μὲν οἰκειώσεως τῆς πρὸς αὐτὰ τὸ ἀρμόττον
τέλος οὐ λαμβάνει, προσγενομένης δὲ φιλίας καὶ τῆς πρὸς τὸ ποθούμενον συντήξεως ἄκρως κατορ-θοῦται.

158 XLVI. Αὕτη τροφή ψυχῆς ἀσκητικῆς, ἥδιστον
ἀντὶ πικροῦ τὸ πονεῖν ὑπολαβεῖν, ἧς οὐχ ἅπασι
κοινωνῆσαι θέμις, ἀλλ' οἷς ὁ χρυσοῦς μόσχος, τὸ Αἴγυπτίων ἀφίδρυμα, τὸ σῶμα, πυρωθὲν καὶ λεανθὲν σπεύρεται καθ' ὕδατος. λέγεται γὰρ ἐν
ἱεραῖς βίβλοις, ὅτι “ λαβὼν Μωυσῆς τὸν μόσχον κατέκαυσε πυρὶ καὶ κατήλεσε λεπτὸν καὶ ἔσπειρεν
ἐπὶ τὸ ὕδωρ, καὶ ἐπότισε τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ ”

159 (Exod. xxxii. 20). ὁ γὰρ φιλάρετος ὑπὸ τῆς
αὐγοειδοῦς τοῦ καλοῦ φαντασίας πυρωθεὶς κατα-φλέγει τὰς σωματικὰς ἡδονάς, εἶτα κατακόπτει
καὶ ἐπιλαίνει τῷ ἀπὸ διαιρέσεως λόγῳ χρώμενος,
καὶ διδάσκει τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον ὅτι τῶν σωματικῶν
ἀγαθῶν ἐστὶν ὑγίεια ἢ κάλλος ἢ ἡ τῶν αἰσθήσεων
ἀκρίβεια ἢ τὸ ὀλόκληρον μετὰ ἰσχύος καὶ ῥώμης

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 156-159

on and gripping us, and persistently casting their spells over us, so that, giving in to their unceasing efforts to subdue and tame us, we came to abhor labour as utterly bitter and repugnant, and we planned to retrace our course and return to Egypt, the refuge of a dissolute and licentious life; and, we might have done so had not the Saviour, anticipating us, taken pity on us and cast into our soul a sweetening tree like a syrup, producing love of labour instead of hatred of labour (cf. Exod. xv. 25); for being the Creator He knew that it is impossible for us to rise superior to anything whatever, unless a vehement love of such effort be implanted in us. No pursuit that men engage in, where affection does not draw them, gains its fitting end. For complete success a sense of liking must be added, and the heart must be absorbed in the object of its desire.

XLVI. This is the food of the soul of an earnest striver, to deem labour not bitter but most sweet. Not for all is it lawful to partake of this food. Those only may do so in whose case the golden calf, the idol of the Egyptians, which is the body, is strewn upon the water, after having been burnt and ground. For it is said in the sacred books that "Moses took the calf and burned it up with fire and ground it fine and sowed it upon the water, and gave the Children of Israel to drink of it" (Exod. xxxii. 20). For the lover of virtue, set on fire by the brilliant appearance of the beautiful, burns up the pleasures of the body, and then chops and grinds them up, employing the principle of classification, and by this means teaches that health, or beauty, or precision of the senses, or complete soundness, including strength and muscular force, are among the bodily "good things," and yet

PHILO

κρατερᾶς, ἃ γε πάντα καὶ τῶν ἐπαράτων καὶ
 ἐξαγίστων ἐστὶ κοινά, ὧν, εἴπερ ἦν ἀγαθὰ, φαῦλος 160 οὐδενὸς οὐδεὶς ἂν μετεῖχε. ἀλλ' οὗτοι μὲν, εἰ καὶ παντάπασι μοχθηροί, ἀλλ' ἄνθρωποι γε ὄντες καὶ τῆς αὐτῆς φύσεως τοῖς ἀστείοις κεκοινωνηκότες
 μετέχουσιν αὐτῶν. νυνὶ δὲ καὶ τῶν θηρίων τὰ ἀτιθασώτατα μᾶλλον τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς τούτοις, εἰ δὴ
 ἀγαθὰ πρὸς ἀλήθειάν ἐστιν, ἢ οἱ λογικοὶ κέχρη-161 ται. τίς γὰρ ἂν ἀθλητῆς πρὸς ταύρου δύναμιν ἢ ἐλέφαντος ἀλκὴν ἐξισωθείη; τίς δ' ἂν δρομεὺς
 πρὸς σκύλακος ἢ λαγωδαρίου ποδώκειαν; ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἀνθρώπων ὀξυδερκέστατος πρὸς ἱεράκων ἢ ἀετῶν ὄψιν ἀμβλυωπέστατος. ἀκοαῖς γε μὴν ἢ ὀσμαῖς πολλῶ τῶ περιόντι τὰ ἄλογα κεκράτηκεν, ὡς καὶ ὄνος μὲν, τὸ δοκοῦν ἐν ζώοις εἶναι νωθέ-στατον, κωφὴν ἂν ἀποδείξαι τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀκοὴν ἐλθὼν εἰς ἐπίκρισιν, κύων δὲ περιττὸν ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ μυκτῆρας μέρος δι' ὑπερβολὴν τοῦ περὶ
 τὰς ὀσμάς τάχους· ἐξικνουῦνται γὰρ ἐπὶ μήκιστον, 162 ὡς ὀφθαλμῶν ἀμιλλᾶσθαι φορᾶ. XLVII. καὶ τί δεῖ περὶ ἐκάστου διεξιόντα μακρηγορεῖν; ἤδη γὰρ
 τοῦτο παρὰ τοῖς δοκιμωτάτοις τῶν πάλαι λογίων
 ὠμολόγηται, οἱ τῶν μὲν ἀλόγων μητέρα τὴν
 [257] φύσιν, ἀνθρώπων δὲ μητριαν | ἔφασαν εἶναι, τὴν
 κατὰ σῶμα τῶν μὲν ἀσθένειαν, τῶν δὲ ὑπερβάλλουσιν ἐν ἅπασιν ἰσχὺν κατανοήσαντες. εἰκότως
 οὖν κατήλεσε τὸν μόσχον ὁ τεχνίτης, τουτέστιν
 εἰς μέρη διελὼν τὰ οἷς σῶμα πλεονεκτεῖ πάντα

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 159-162

all these are shared with others by men abominable and accursed ; whereas, had they been good things, no bad man would have had part in any of them. But these men, even if utterly worthless, still, being human beings and of the same nature, have their share of these things in partnership with good men. As it is, moreover, even the most savage of wild beasts enjoy the advantage of these " good things," if good things they really are, in greater measure than those who are endowed with reason. For what athlete would be a match for the power of a bull or the strength of an elephant ? What runner could equal the swiftness of a hound or a hare ? The man of keenest eyesight is very shortsighted in comparison with the power of vision possessed by hawks or eagles. In hearing and scent the irrational creatures are greatly superior to us, for even an ass, regarded as the dullest among living creatures, were he to be tested with us, would make our hearing appear deafness ; while a dog with his great rapidity of scent, reaching as it does to such an enormous distance as to rival the range of the eyes, would prove a nose to be a superfluous part of the human frame. XLVII. And what need is there to be diffuse and go into each instance ? For this was long ago agreed upon among the most approved of the learned men of former days, who said that nature is the mother of the irrational creatures, but the step-mother of men. They said this when they took note of the bodily weakness of the latter, and of the invariably surpassing bodily strength of the former. It was reasonable, then, that the expert master should grind down the calf, that is to say, should divide it into parts and make it evident that all the advantages pertaining to the

PHILO

- τοῦ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἐπέδειξεν ἀγαθοῦ μακρὰν
 διεστῶτα καὶ μηδὲν τῶν ἐφ' ὕδατος σπειρομένων 163 διαφέροντα. διὸ καὶ τὸν καταλεσθέντα μόσχον
 ἐπὶ τὸ ὕδωρ λόγος κατέχει σπαρῆναι, τοῦ μηδὲν
 γνήσιον ἀγαθοῦ φυτὸν ἐν ὑλῇ φθαρτῇ ποτε δύνασθαι βλαστάνειν σύμβολον. ὡς γὰρ εἰς ποταμοῦ ρεῦμα
 ἢ θαλάττης καταβληθὲν σπέρμα τὰς ἰδίουσ οὐκ
 ἂν ἐπιδείξαιτο δυνάμεις—ἀμήχανον γάρ, εἰ <μη> ρίζαις ὡσπερ ἀγκύραις ἐχυροῦ τινος γῆς μέρους ἀπριξ<sup>1</sup> λαβόμενον ἰδρυθείη, ἢ ἔρνος ἀναβλαστῆσαι, καὶ εἰ μὴ περιμηκέστατον, ἀλλὰ τοι χαμαίζηλον,
 ἢ καρποὺς καθ' ὥρας τὰς ἐτησίους ἐνεγκεῖν·
 φθάνει γὰρ τοὺς σπερματικοὺς ἅπαντας τόνους ἢ
 τοῦ ὕδατος πολλῇ καὶ βίαιος ἀποκλύσασα φορά—
 τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον ὅσα τοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀγγείου λέγεται τε καὶ ἄδεται πλεονεκτῆματα πρὶν ὑποστῆναι φθείρεται τῆς σωματικῆς οὐσίας αἰεὶ 164 ρεούσης. πῶς γὰρ νόσοι καὶ γῆρας καὶ παντελεῖς ἐπεγίνοντο φθοραί, εἰ μὴ συνεχῆς ἦν λόγῳ θεωρη-τῶν ρευμάτων ἀπάντλησις; τούτοις οὖν ποτίζειν
 ἐπαξιοῖ<sup>2</sup> <ὁ> ἱεροφάντης τὴν διάνοιαν ἡμῶν τῷ καταφλέξει τὰς ἡδονάς, τῷ τὸ σύστημα τῶν
 σωματικῶν ἀγαθῶν εἰς λεπτὸν καὶ ἀνωφέλη χοῦν
 καταλέσαντας ἀναλύσαι, τῷ ὑπολαβεῖν ὅτι ἐξ
 οὐδενὸς αὐτῶν ἐβλάστησέ ποτε καὶ ἦνθησε τὸ
 πρὸς ἀλήθειαν καλόν, ὡσπερ οὐδ' ἐκ σπερμάτων
 ἃ σπείρεται καθ' ὕδατος.
- 165 XLVIII. Ταῦροι δὲ καὶ κριοὶ καὶ τράγοι, οὓς Αἴγυπτος διὰ τιμῆς ἔχει, καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα φθαρτῆς
 ὑλῆς ἀφιδρύματα, ἀκοῇ μόνον νομίζονται θεοί,

<sup>1</sup> ἀπριξ by conjecture for ἀπαξ.

<sup>2</sup> ἐπαξιοῖ substituted by conjecture for ἀπαξιοῖ.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 162-165

body are far removed from that which is really good, and differ in no respect from what was sown upon the water. And this is why it has been placed on record that the calf when ground down was sown upon the water, as a sign that no genuine growth of good can ever sprout in perishable matter. A seed cast into the flow of a river or of the sea could never manifest its proper powers; for unless it were to use its roots as anchors and fasten firmly on to some fixed spot of ground, and so get settled there, it would be impossible for it either to put forth a shoot, even one hardly rising above the ground, to say nothing of a good tall one, or to bear fruits as the seasons came round; for the full and violent rush of the water washes it away and forestalls all the powers of expansion latent in the seed. Even so, before any of those advantages of the vessel of the soul, on which orators declaim and poets sing, can attain substantial shape, they are destroyed owing to the constant flow of bodily substance. For how did illnesses and old age and complete dissolution come upon men, if there was not a perpetual draining off of streams brought within our contemplation by reason? Thus, then, the sacred Guide would have us refresh our understanding, namely by burning up our pleasures, by grinding down and breaking up the complex of bodily goods into thin and useless dust, by making up our minds that from none of them did there ever shoot forth and bloom that which is truly beautiful, any more than from seeds sown upon the waters.

XLVIII. Bulls and rams and goats, which Egypt honours, and all other objects of worship of perishable material as well, are held to be gods on hearsay only,

πρὸς ἀλήθειαν οὐκ ὄντες, ψευδώνυμοι πάντες. ἀπαλαῖς γὰρ ἔτι ταῖς τῶν νέων ψυχαῖς οἱ τραγωδῖαν τὸν βίον τυφογερόντων<sup>1</sup> νομίζοντες κεκιβδηλευμένους χαρακτῆρας ἐναπομάττονται, διακόνοις ἀκοαῖς χρώμενοι, ὧν μυθικὸν λῆρον καταχέαντες καὶ μέχρι διανοίας αὐτῶν ἐντήξαντες θεοπλαστεῖν τοὺς τὰ φρονήματα ἄνδρας μὲν μηδέποτε γινόμενους αἰεὶ δὲ θηλυδρίας ὄντας ἠνάγκασαν.

- 166 Ὁ γοῦν μόσχος οὐκ ἐξ ἅπαντος τοῦ γυναικείου κόσμου κατασκευάζεται, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν ἐνωτίων |
 [258] αὐτὸ μόνον (Exod. xxxii. 2), διδάσκοντος ἡμᾶς τοῦ νομοθέτου ὅτι χειρόκμητος οὐδεὶς ἔστιν ὄψει καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν θεός, ἀλλ' ἀκοῆ καὶ τῷ νομίζεσθαι, καὶ ἀκοῆ μέντοι γυναικός, οὐκ ἀνδρός· ἐκνευρισμένης γὰρ ἔργον καὶ ἐκτεθηλυμμένης τῷ ὄντι ψυχῆς τοὺς τοιούτους ὕθλους παρα-
 167 δέχεσθαι. τὸ δὲ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ὄν οὐ δι' ὧτων μόνον, ἀλλὰ τοῖς διανοίας ὄμμασιν ἐκ τῶν κατὰ τὸν κόσμον δυνάμεων καὶ ἐκ τῆς συνεχοῦς καὶ ἀπαύστου τῶν ἀμυθῆτων ἔργων φορᾶς κατανοεῖσθαι τε καὶ γνωρίζεσθαι συμβέβηκε. διόπερ ἐν ὠδῇ μείζονι λέγεται ἐκ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ· “ἴδετε ἴδετε, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι” (Deut. xxxii. 39), τοῦ ὄντως ὄντος ἐναργεία μᾶλλον [ἀντι]καταλαμβανομένου ἢ λόγων ἀποδείξει συνισταμένου.
 168 τὸ δ' ὄρατὸν εἶναι τὸ ὄν οὐ κυριολογεῖται, κατὰ χρῆσιν δ' ἔστιν ἐφ' ἐκάστην αὐτοῦ τῶν δυνάμεων ἀναφερομένου. καὶ γὰρ νῦν οὐ φησιν· ἴδετε ἐμέ—ἀμήχανον γὰρ τὸν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι θεὸν ὑπὸ γενέσεως τὸ παράπαν κατανοηθῆναι—ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐγώ not being really such, all falsely so called. For those who deem life a show got up for foolish dotards make counterfeit impressions in the yet tender souls of the young, employing their ears as their ministers, and filling them with the nonsense of myths. They instil it into their very minds, and force those who never become men in lofty spirit but are always womanish to fashion gods for themselves.

<sup>1</sup> τυφογερόντων is Tischendorf's conjecture.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 165-168

The calf, you observe, is not made out of all the things with which women deck themselves, but only their ear-rings (Exod. xxxii. 2), for the lawgiver is teaching us that no manufactured god is a God for sight and in reality, but for the ear to hear of, and vogue and custom to proclaim, and that too a woman's ear, not a man's, for to entertain such trash is the work of an effeminate and sinew-less soul. But the Being that in reality is can be perceived and known, not only through the ears, but with the eyes of the understanding, from the powers that range the universe, and from the constant and ceaseless motion of His ineffable works. Wherefore in the great Song<sup>a</sup> there come these words as from the lips of God, "See, see that I AM" (Deut. xxxii. 39), showing that He that actually is is apprehended by clear intuition rather than demonstrated by arguments carried on in words. When we say that the Existing One is visible, we are not using words in their literal sense, but it is an irregular use of the word by which it is referred to each one of His powers. In the passage just quoted He does not say "See Me," for it is impossible that the God who is should be perceived at all by created beings. What he says is

<sup>a</sup> Deuteronomy xxxii. is called "The Greater Song" in distinction from that in Exod. xv. Cf. L.A. iii. 105.

- εἶμι ἴδετε, τουτέστι τὴν ἐμὴν ὑπαρξίν θεάσασθε. ἀνθρώπου γὰρ ἔξαρκεὶ λογισμῶ μέχρι τοῦ καταμαθεῖν ὅτι ἔστι τε καὶ ὑπάρχει τὸ τῶν ὄλων αἴτιον προελθεῖν· περαιτέρω δὲ σπουδάζειν τρέπεσθαι, ὡς περὶ οὐσίας ἢ ποιότητος ζητεῖν, ὡγύγιός τις
- 169 ἠλιθιότης. οὐδὲ γὰρ Μωυσῆ τῷ πανσόφῳ κατένευσεν ὁ θεὸς τοῦτό γε, καίτοι γε μυρίας ποιησαμένῳ δεήσεις, ἀλλὰ χρησμὸς ἐξέπεσεν αὐτῷ, ὅτι “ τὰ μὲν ὀπίσω θεάσῃ, τὸ δὲ πρόσωπον οὐκ ὄψει ” (Exod. xxiii. 23). τοῦτο δ’ ἦν· πάνθ’ ὅσα μετὰ τὸν θεὸν τῷ σπουδαίῳ καταληπτά, αὐτὸς δὲ μόνος ἀκατάληπτος· ἀκατάληπτός γε ἐκ τῆς ἀντικρὺς καὶ κατ’ εὐθυωρίαν προσβολῆς—διὰ γὰρ ταύτης οἶος ἦν ἐμηνύετ’ ἄν—ἐκ δὲ τῶν ἐπομένων καὶ ἀκολουθῶν δυνάμεων <καταληπτός>. αὗται γὰρ οὐ τὴν οὐσίαν, τὴν δ’ ὑπαρξίν ἐκ τῶν ἀποτελουμένων αὐτῷ παριστάσι.
- 170 XLIX. Γεννήσας τοίνυν ὁ νοῦς ἀρχὴν σπουδαίας διαθέσεως καὶ ἀρετῆς τινα πρῶτον τρόπον τὸν Σήθ, τὸν ποτισμόν, ἐπινεανιεύεται καλὴν καὶ ὀσίαν νεανειάν. φησὶ γάρ· “ ἐξανέστησέ μοι ὁ θεὸς σπέρμα ἕτερον ἀντὶ Ἄβελ, ὃν ἀπέκτεινε Κάιν ” (Gen. iv. 25). ἐξητασμένως γὰρ καὶ περιττῶς εἴρηται τὸ μηδὲν τῶν θείων σπερμάτων χαμαὶ πίπτειν, ἅπαντα δὲ εἰς τὸ ἄνω χωρεῖν ἀπὸ
- 171 τῶν περιγείων ἐξανιστάμενα. τὰ μὲν γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν θνητῶν καταβαλλόμενα σπέρματα πρὸς ζώων |
- [259] ἢ φυτῶν γένεσιν οὐ πάντα τελεσιουργεῖται, ἀγαπητὸν δ’ εἰ μὴ τὰ φθειρόμενα πλείω τῶν διαμενόντων ἐστί· σπείρει δ’ ὁ θεὸς ἐν ψυχαῖς ἀτελές

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 168-171

“ See that I AM,” that is “ Behold My subsistence.” For it is quite enough for a man’s reasoning faculty to advance as far as to learn that the Cause of the Universe is and subsists. To be anxious to continue his course yet further, and inquire about essence or quality in God, is a folly fit for the world’s childhood. Not even to Moses, the all-wise, did God accord this, albeit he had made countless requests, but a divine communication was issued to him, “ Thou shalt behold that which is behind Me, but My Face thou shalt not see ” (Exod. xxxiii. 23). This meant, that all that follows in the wake of God is within the good man’s apprehension, while He Himself alone is beyond it, beyond, that is, in the line of straight and direct approach, a mode of approach by which (had it been possible) His quality would have been made known ; but brought within ken by the powers that follow and attend Him ; for these make evident not His essence but His subsistence from the things which He accomplishes.

XLIX. Well then, the mind, when it begets a beginning of good disposition and a kind of first pattern of virtue in Seth, which means “ Watering,” is audacious with a fine and holy audacity. For it says, “ God raised up to me another seed in the place of Abel, whom Cain slew ” (Gen. iv. 25). The statement that none of God’s seeds fall to the ground, but all mount upwards rising from out of earthly surroundings, and leaving them behind, is a noticeable statement that can stand every test. For the seeds that mortals deposit for the production of living beings or plants do not all come to perfection ; and we are well content if those that come to nothing do not outnumber those that hold on. But God sows

- οὐδέν, ἀλλ' οὕτως καίρια καὶ τέλεια, ὡς εὐθύς ἐπιφέρεσθαι τὴν τῶν ἰδίων καρπῶν πληθὺν ἕκαστον.
- 172 L. Τὸν δὲ Σῆθ σπέρμα ἕτερον εἰπὼν ἀναβλα-
 στήσαι, ὁποτέρου ἕτερον οὐ δεδήλωκε. ἀρά γε
 τοῦ δολοφονηθέντος "Αβελ ἢ τοῦ κτείναντος Κάιν;
 ἀλλὰ μήποτε ἑκατέρου διαφέρει τὸ γέννημα, τοῦ
 μὲν Κάιν ὡς ἐχθρόν—δίψα γὰρ ἀρετῆς αὐτομολούσῃ κακία πολεμιώτατον—τοῦ δὲ "Αβελ ὡς
 φίλον καὶ συγγενές· ἕτερον γάρ, οὐ μὴν ἀλλότριον,
 τὸ ἄρτι ἀρχόμενον τοῦ τελείου καὶ τὸ πρὸς γένεσιν
- 173 τοῦ πρὸς τὸ ἀγέννητον. διὰ τοῦθ' ὁ μὲν "Αβελ τὸ
 θνητὸν ἀπολιπὼν πρὸς τὴν ἀμείνω φύσιν μετανα-στὰς οἴχεται, ὁ δὲ Σῆθ ἄτε σπέρμα ὢν ἀνθρωπίνης ἀρετῆς οὐδέποτε τὸ ἀνθρώπων ἀπολείψει
 γένος, ἀλλὰ πρώτην μὲν παραύξεισιν ἄχρι δεκάδος
 ἀριθμοῦ τελείου λήψεται, καθ' ἣν ὁ δίκαιος Νῶε
 συνίσταται, δευτέραν δὲ καὶ ἀμείνω τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ
 παιδὸς αὐτοῦ Σῆμ εἰς ἑτέραν δεκάδα τελευτῶσαν,
 ἥς Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πιστὸς ἐπώνυμος, τρίτην δὲ καὶ
 τελεωτέραν δεκάδος ἑβδομάδα ἀπὸ τούτου μέχρι Μωυσῆ τοῦ πάντα σοφοῦ παρήκουσαν· ἑβδομος
 γὰρ ἀπὸ Ἀβραὰμ οὗτός ἐστιν, οὐκέτι κατὰ τὸν
 ἔξω τῶν ἀγίων κύκλον οἶα μύστης εἰλούμενος,
 ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἱεροφάντης ἐν τοῖς ἀδύτοις ποιού-
- 174 μενος τὰς διατριβάς. LI. σκόπει δὲ τὰς τε πρὸς βελτίωσιν ἐπιδόσεις τῆς ἀπλήστου καὶ ἀκορέστου
 τῶν καλῶν ψυχῆς καὶ τὸν ἀπερίγραφον τοῦ θεοῦ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 501.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 171-174

in souls nothing futile, but seeds so successful and perfect in every case that each one immediately yields the full crop of the fruits appropriate to it.

L. When he says that Seth has sprung up as another seed, he does not indicate that in respect of which he is "another." Is it in respect of the murdered Abel, or of Cain who slew him? Probably the new offspring is different from each of them (in different ways); from Cain as one hostile to him, (since thirst for virtue is a thing utterly at war with wickedness that plays the part of a deserter); from Abel, as one that is friendly and akin to him; for it does not say "alien from him," but "different," as that which is but beginning differs from that which is full-grown, and that which is in communion with creation from that which is in communion with the uncreated. For this reason, while Abel has relinquished all that is mortal and removed and gone to the better existence, Seth, inasmuch as he is sprung from human virtue, will never relinquish the race of men, but will obtain enlargement. The first enlargement extends to the perfect number 10, when righteous Noah arises<sup>a</sup>; a second and yet better one from Shem, the son of Noah, up to a second "10," to which faithful Abraham gives his name; then a third, a "7" now more perfect than "10," reaching from Abraham to Moses, the man wise in all things. He, the seventh from Abraham, does not, like those before him, haunt the outer court of the Holy Place as one seeking initiation, but as a sacred Guide has his abode in the sanctuary. LI. Mark the advance to improvement made by the soul that has an insatiable desire to be filled with things that are beautiful, and the unlimited wealth of God, which has given as

- πλούτον, ὃς ἄλλοις ἀρχὰς τὰ ἐτέρων δεδώρηται τέλη. τὸ μὲν γὰρ πέρας τῆς κατὰ Σὴθ ἐπιστήμης ἀρχὴ τοῦ δικαίου γέγονε Νῶε, τὴν δὲ τούτου τελείωσιν Ἀβραὰμ ἀρχεται παιδεύεσθαι, ἣ δὲ ἀκροτάτη τοῦδε σοφία Μωυσέως ἐστὶν ἀσκη-
- 175 σις ἣ πρώτη. τοῦ δὲ ἀνωσμένου καὶ κλιθέντος ὑπὸ ψυχῆς ἀσθενείας Λὼτ αἱ δύο θυγατέρες, βουλή καὶ συγκατάθεσις, ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτῶν ἐθέλουσι παιδοποιεῖσθαι (Gen. xix. 32), μαχόμενοι τῷ λέγοντι· “ἐξανέστησέ μοι ὁ θεός.” ὁ γὰρ ἐκείνω τὸ ὄν, τοῦθ’ αὐταῖς φασὶ τὸν νοῦν περιποιεῖσθαι δύνασθαι, μεθυούσης καὶ παραφόρου ψυχῆς δόγμα εἰσηγούμεναι· νήφοντος μὲν γὰρ ἔργον λογισμοῦ καὶ <σώφρονος> τὸν θεὸν ὁμολογεῖν ποιητὴν καὶ πατέρα τοῦ παντός, πίπτοντος δ’ ὑπὸ μέθης καὶ παροινίας ἑαυτὸν ἐκάστου τῶν
- 176 ἀνθρωπέων πραγμάτων εἶναι δημιουργόν. πρότερον οὖν αἱ κακαὶ γνώμαι εἰς ὀμίλιαν οὐκ ἀφίξονται τῷ πατρί, πρὶν ἐμφορῆσαι<sup>1</sup> τὸν ἀφροσύνης πολὺν ἄκρατον καὶ εἴ τι συνετὸν ἦν ἐν αὐτῷ
- [260] κατακλύσαι. γέγραπται | γὰρ ὅτι “ἐπότισαν τὸν πατέρα οἶνον” (Gen. xix. 33). ὥσθ’ ὅποτε μὴ ποτίζουσιν, ὑπὸ νήφοντος οὐδέποτε δέξονται σπορὰν ἔννομον, ὅταν δ’ ὑποβεβρεγμένος κραιπαλᾶ, κυφορήσουσι καὶ ἐπιμέμπτοις μὲν ὠδίσιν, ἐπαράτοις δὲ ταῖς γοναῖς χρήσονται.
- 177 LII. Διὸ καὶ Μωυσῆς τὴν ἀσεβῆ καὶ ἀναγνον αὐτῶν σπορὰν συλλόγου θείου παντός ἀπεσχοίνισε· λέγει γάρ· “Ἀμμανῖται καὶ Μωαβῖται οὐκ εἰσ-

<sup>1</sup> ἐμφορῆσαι read by conjecture for ἐπιφορῆσαι.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 174-177

starting-points to others the goals reached by those before them. For the limit of the knowledge attained by Seth became the starting-point of righteous Noah ; while Abraham begins his education with the consummation of Noah's ; and the highest point of wisdom reached by Abraham is the initial course in Moses' training. Counsel and Consent, the two daughters of Lot, the man who, after having been impelled upwards, wavered and went downwards through weakness of soul, desire to have children by Mind their father (Gen. xix. 32), being at variance with him who says, " God hath raised up for me." For what He the Existent One did for him, they say that Mind can bring about for them, and so they advocate the doctrine of a drunken and frenzied soul ; for it is the act of a sober and well-ordered reason to acknowledge God as the Maker and Father of the universe, but the assertion that he himself is the author of everything that concerns the life of man is that of one who is being ruined by drunkenness and sottishness. The evil intentions will not attain to intercourse with their father, until they have completely drenched him with the strong drink of folly, and have drowned any sense he had. For it is written " they gave their father wine to drink " (Gen. xix. 33). It follows that when they do not give him to drink, he will be sober and they will never receive from him lawful seed, but when he has become fairly soaked, and is under the fumes of his debauch, they will become pregnant, and there will be guilt in their travailing, and a curse upon their offspring.

LII. For this reason Moses shut out their impious and impure progeny from every holy assembly. For he says " Ammonites and Moabites shall not enter into

- ελεύσονται εἰς ἐκκλησίαν κυρίου" (Deut. xxiii. 2). οὗτοι δ' εἰσὶν ἔγγονοὶ τῶν Λῶτ θυγατέρων, ὑπολαβόντες ἐξ αἰσθήσεως καὶ νοῦ, ἄρρενός τε καὶ θήλεος, ὡσπερ ὑπὸ πατρὸς καὶ μητρὸς πάντα γεννᾶσθαι, τοῦτο πρὸς ἀλήθειαν γενέσεως αἴτιον
- 178 ὑπειληφότες. ἡμεῖς μέντοι καὶ ἐὰν δεξώμεθά ποτε τὴν τροπὴν ταύτην, [καὶ] ὡσπερ ἐκ κλύδωνος ἀνανηξάμενοι λαβώμεθα μετανοίας, ἐχυροῦ καὶ σωτηρίου πράγματος, καὶ μὴ πρότερον μεθώμεθα ἢ κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς τὸ κυμαῖνον πέλαγος, τὴν
- 179 φορὰν τῆς τροπῆς, διεκδῦναι. καθὰ καὶ Ῥαχὴλ πρότερον αἰτήσαμένη τὸν νοῦν ὡς αἴτιον τοῦ ποιεῖν ἔκγονα καὶ ἀκούσασα· "μὴ ἀντὶ θεοῦ ἐγὼ εἶμι;" (Gen. xxx. 2) προσέσχε τε τῷ λεχθέντι καὶ μαθοῦσα παλινωδίαν ἱερωτάτην ἐποίησε· γέγραπται γὰρ Ῥαχὴλ παλινωδία, θεοφιλῆς εὐχή· "προσθέτω μοι ὁ θεὸς υἷὸν ἕτερον" (Gen. xxx. 24), ἣν οὐδενὶ τῶν ἀφρόνων ἔξεστι ποιήσασθαι τὴν ἴδιον ἡδονὴν αὐτὸ μόνον θηρωμένων, τὰ δ' ἄλλα πλατὺν γέλωτα καὶ χλεύην νομιζόντων.
- 180 LIII. Χορηγὸς δ' ἐστὶ τούτου τοῦ δόγματος ὁ τοῦ δερματίνου Ἡρ συγγενῆς Αὐνάν. "γνοὺς" γάρ φησιν "οὗτος ὅτι οὐκ αὐτῷ ἔσται τὸ σπέρμα, ὅταν εἰσῆλθε πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ, ἐξέχει τοῦτο ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν" (Gen. xxxviii. 9) φιλαυτίας καὶ φιληδονίας ὑπερβεβηκῶς τοὺς ὄρους.
- 181 οὐκοῦν, εἴπομι' ἂν αὐτῷ, εἰ τὸ ἴδιον πορίζεις λυσιτελές, πάνθ' ὅσα ἄριστα καταλύσεις; ἐὰν μηδὲν ἐξ αὐτῶν ὠφεληθῆς, τιμὰς γονέων, ἐπιμέλειαν γυναικός, παίδων ἀγωγὰς, χρήσεις ἀμέμ-

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 177-181

the congregation of the Lord" (Deut. xxiii. 2), and these are descendants of the daughters of Lot. They are people that suppose that sense-perception and mind, a male and a female, act as father and mother for the procreation of all things, and take this process to be in very truth the cause of creation. Let us, however, should we ever incur such a lapse, as men who have escaped by swimming out of a troubled sea, lay hold of repentance, a strong rock of safety, nor let us quit our hold of it till we have been completely delivered from the tossing sea, that is from the strong current of our lapse. It was so that Rachel, having before addressed her request to Mind, as though offspring came through its operation, and having received the reply "Am I in the place of God?" (Gen. xxx. 2), gave heed to what was said, and learned its lesson, and made a recantation breathing true holiness, for Rachel's recantation stands written in a prayer dear to God "Let God add to me another son" (Gen. xxx. 24), a prayer which none of those may make who in their folly pursue nothing whatever but their own pleasure, regarding all else as matter for loud laughter and ridicule.

LIII. The chief representative of this doctrine is Onan, kinsman of the leathern Er. For it says "this man knowing that the seed should not be for him, when he went in to his brother's wife, spilled it on the ground" (Gen. xxxviii. 9), going beyond all bounds in love of self and love of pleasure. I should therefore address him thus: "Will you not"—so I would say to him—"by providing only your individual profit, be doing away with all the best things in the world, unless you are to get some advantage from them, honour paid to parents, loving care of a wife, bringing

- πτους οἰκετῶν, ἐπιτροπήν οἰκίας, πόλεως προστασίαν, βεβαίωσιν νόμων, φυλακὴν ἔθων, τὴν
 πρὸς πρεσβυτέρους αἰδῶ, τὴν πρὸς τοὺς τετε-λευτηκότας εὐφημίαν, τὴν πρὸς τοὺς ζῶντας
 κοινωνίαν, τὴν πρὸς τὸ θεῖον ἐν λόγοις καὶ ἔργοις εὐσέβειαν; ἀνατρέπεις γὰρ καὶ ἐκχεῖς πάντα
 ταῦτα, σπείρων σεαυτῷ καὶ τιθηνούμενος τὴν |
 [261] γάστριν καὶ ἀκόλαστον καὶ ἀρχὴν κακῶν ἀπάντων
 182 ἡδονήν. LIV. ἀφ' ἧς ἐξαναστὰς ὁ ἱερεὺς καὶ θεραπευτῆς τοῦ μόνου καλοῦ Φινεές, ὁ τῶν
 σωματικῶν στομιῶν καὶ τρημάτων δίσιπος, ὡς
 μηδὲν αὐτῶν διαμαρτάνον ἐξυβρίζειν—ἐρμηνεύεται
 γὰρ στόματος φιμός—λαβὼν τὸν σειρομάστην, τουτέστι μαστεύσας καὶ ἀναζητήσας τὴν τῶν
 ὄντων φύσιν καὶ μηδὲν σεμνότερον ἀρετῆς
 ἀνευρῶν κατεκέντει καὶ ἀνήρει τῷ λόγῳ τὴν
 μισάρετον καὶ φιλήδονον γένεσιν καὶ τοὺς τόπους,
 ἐξ ὧν ἐβλάστησαν αἱ παράσημοι καὶ παράκοποι 183 χλιδαί τε καὶ θρύψεις. ὁ γὰρ νόμος <φησὶν> ὅτι διὰ τῆς μήτρας ἐξεκέντησε τὴν γυναῖκα (Num.
 xxv. 7, 8). οὕτως οὖν καταπαύσας μὲν τὴν ἐν
 αὐτῷ στάσιν καὶ τὴν ἴδιον ἀποστραφεῖς ἡδονήν,
 ζηλώσας τὸν θεοῦ τοῦ πρώτου καὶ μόνου ζῆλον,
 ἄθλων τοῖς μεγίστοις δυσὶ τετίμηται καὶ κατ-ἔστεπται, εἰρήνην καὶ ἱερωσύνην· τῇ μὲν ἱερωσύνη
 ὅτι ἀδελφόν ἐστιν εἰρήνην καὶ ὄνομα καὶ ἔργον.
 184 τὴν γὰρ ἱερωμένην διάνοιαν λειτουργῶν καὶ θερα-

<sup>a</sup> The word rendered "spear" is literally a "pit-searcher" or "probe" used by soldiers for testing ground in which the enemy might have dug pits.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 181-184

up of children, happy and blameless relations with domestic servants, management of a house, leadership in a city, maintaining of laws, guardianship of usages, reverence towards elders, respect for the memory of the departed, fellowship with the living, piety in words and actions towards the Deity? For you are overturning and wasting all these, by breeding and nursing for yourself pleasure, the glutton and libertine, in whom all evil things have their origin. LIV. It was in abhorrence of pleasure that there arose the priest and minister of Him Who alone is Beautiful, Phinehas the controller of the inlets and outlets of the body, who takes care that none of them act amiss and break out in insolence, his very name meaning "Mouth-muzzle." Seizing his spear,<sup>a</sup> that is exploring and inquiring into the nature of all existence, and discovering nothing more august than virtue, he thrust through and destroyed by reason the creature that hates virtue and loves pleasure, and the parts out of which grew those base counterfeits, softness and voluptuousness. For the Law says that he thrust the woman through, even through the womb (Numb. xxv. 7 f.). Having therefore on this wise put a stop to the revolt within himself and turned clean away from his own pleasure, having thus shown his zeal for God, the First and Only One, he was honoured and crowned with the two greatest rewards, peace and priesthood; with peace, because he put an end to the intestine war of lusts in the soul; with the priesthood, because in name <sup>b</sup> and in fact it is akin to peace. For the consecrated intelligence, being His minister and attendant, must needs do all

<sup>b</sup> The Greek words for "peace" and "priesthood" are somewhat alike in sound.

πευτρίδα οὔσαν αὐτοῦ πάνθ' οἷς ὁ δεσπότης χαίρει
 πράττειν ἀνάγκη· χαίρει δὲ εὐνομίας καὶ εὐ-σταθείας βεβαιώσει, πολέμων δὲ καὶ στάσεων ἀνατροπῇ, οὐχὶ τῶνδε μόνων οὐς αἱ πόλεις ποιοῦνται
 πρὸς ἀλλήλας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν κατὰ ψυχὴν· μείζονες
 δ' εἰσὶν οὗτοι καὶ χαλεπώτεροι, ἅτε καὶ τὸ θεϊότερον τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν λογισμὸν<sup>1</sup> αἰκίζόμενοι, τῶν
 ὀπλων ἄχρι τῆς σωμαίων καὶ χρημάτων ζημίας
 προερχομένων, ψυχὴν δὲ ὑγιαίνουσαν μηδέποτε 185 βλάβαι δυναμένων. διόπερ ὀρθῶς ἂν αἱ πόλεις ἐποίησαν, πρὶν ὄπλα καὶ μηχανήματα ἀντεπιφέρειν ἀλλήλαις ἐπ' ἀνδραποδισμῶ καὶ ἀναστάσει
 παντελεῖ, τῶν πολιτῶν ἕκαστον ἀναπέισασαι τὴν
 ἐν αὐτῷ μεγάλην καὶ πολλὴν καὶ συνεχῆ στάσιν καταλύσαι· αὕτη μὲν γὰρ πολέμων, εἰ δεῖ τ' ἀληθὲς
 εἰπεῖν, ἀπάντων ἀρχέτυπόν ἐστιν, ἧς ἀναιρεθείσης
 οὐδ' οἱ κατὰ μίμησιν ἔτι συνιστάμενοι γενήσονται, βαθείας δὲ εἰρήνης χρῆσιν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν σχήσει
 τὸ ἀνθρώπων γένος ὑπὸ νόμου φύσεως διδασκό-μενον, ἀρετῆς, θεὸν τιμᾶν καὶ τῆς λειτουργίας
 αὐτοῦ περιέχεσθαι· πηγὴ γὰρ εὐδαιμονίας καὶ
 βίου μακραίωνος ἦδε.

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN, 184-185

those things in which her Master delighteth : He delights in the maintenance of a well-ordered state under good laws, in the abolishing of wars and factions, not only those which occur between cities, but also of those that arise in the soul ; and these are greater and more serious than those, for they outrage reason, a more divine faculty than others within us. Weapons of war can go so far as to inflict bodily and monetary loss, but a healthy soul they can never harm. From this it appears that states would have done rightly if before bringing against one another arms and engines of war, with the enslavement and complete overthrow of the enemy in view, they had prevailed on their citizens one by one to put an end to the disorder which abounds within himself, and which is so great and unceasing. For, to be honest, this is the original of all wars. If this be abolished, neither will those occur which still break out in imitation of it, but the human race will attain to the experience and enjoyment of profound peace, taught by the law of nature, namely virtue, to honour God and to be occupied with His service, for this is the source of long life and happiness.

---

<sup>1</sup> Mangey felt that the text here can hardly be right. It fails to make distinct the antithesis between inward and outward, on which the next sentence dwells. He suggested τὸ θεϊώτατον, τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν λογισμόν. Other possible changes are τι θεϊώτερον, τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν λογισμόν, or τὸ θεϊώτατον τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν, λογισμόν.

ON THE GIANTS
(DE GIGANTIBUS)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

THIS short, but in many ways beautiful and more than usually Platonic treatise, is very closely connected, as the last words show, with the succeeding "Quod Deus," which will follow in Vol. III. of this translation. It is a dissertation on the words of Gen. vi. 1-4.

(a) And it came to pass when men began to become many upon the earth that daughters were born to them. (1)

(b) And the angels of God, seeing the daughters of men that they were fair, took to themselves wives from all, such as they chose. (2)

(c) And the Lord God said, "My spirit shall not abide in man for ever, because they are flesh; but their days shall be a hundred and twenty years. (3)

(d) And there were giants on earth in those days. (4)

(a) is dismissed shortly (1-5) with the remarks that the words "many" and "daughters" following on the mention of the birth of Noah, the just man, and his three sons (at the end of chap. v.) emphasize the truth that the unjust are many and the just few, and that the spiritual offspring of the latter are the masculine or higher qualities, while that of the former are the feminine or lower.

(b) The words are interpreted (6-18) in the sense that as angels, demons, and souls are really three names for the same thing, "the angels of God," while including God's spiritual messengers, here indicate the wicked souls which woo the "daughters of men," i.e. the merely sensual pleasures. In the course of these sections we have a remarkable passage (12-15), in which Philo, with many echoes of Plato, speaks of the human soul as having descended from some higher region to be incarnate in the body.

PHILO

The discussion of (c) (19-57) forms the bulk of the treatise. He first treats (19-27) of the nature of God's spirit, dwelling particularly on the thought that when it is given to men, it is not thereby diminished, and on the unworthiness of the fleshly life (28-31). This leads him on to a long digression on Lev. xviii. 6, "a man, a man shall not go near to any that is akin to his flesh, to uncover shame." This text, which of course is really a prohibition of incest, is worked by Philo into an elaborate allegory, in which every phrase is treated separately (32-47). The repetition of "a man, a man" indicates the "true man" (33). The words "go near" show us that while many earthly advantages, such as riches, though "akin to the flesh," must be accepted, if they come to us, and used for the best, we must not seek them (34-38). "Uncovering shame" means (39) that those who follow such things introduce a false and shameful philosophy. The final words, "I am the Lord," are an appeal to us to take our stand with God against pleasure (40-44), but the use of "Lord" rather than "God" emphasizes his attitude of sovereignty of which we are bidden to stand in awe (45-47). We now return to the thought of what is meant by God's spirit abiding. Such an abiding can only be the privilege of those who lead the tranquil and contemplative life, which with the support of various texts he ascribes to Moses (47-55). The words "their days shall be an hundred and twenty years" are then touched on for a few lines (56), but dismissed with a promise of subsequent treatment, which if ever given has not come down to us (57).

ON THE GIANTS

(d) After a protest against regarding the story as a myth (58-59), we have a meditation (60-67) on the three classes of souls, the earth-born (who of course are the giants, γίγας being connected with γηγενής), the heaven-born, and the God-born. Of these the heaven-born are those who cultivate our heavenly part, the mind, and follow secular learning (60), and the God-born are those whose thoughts are fixed on God alone (61). These two are illustrated by Abram (before his change of name) and Abraham respectively (62-64). The earth-born, of course, are those who are given up to the fleshly life, and are typified by Nimrod (who in the LXX is called a giant) whose name signifying "desertion" marks the earth-born "giants" as deserters from the good (65-67).

ΠΕΡΙ ΓΙΓΑΝΤΩΝ

- <sup>1</sup> [262] I. “Καὶ δὴ ἐγένετο, ἥνίκα ἤρξαντο οἱ ἄνθρωποι πολλοὶ γίνεσθαι ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ θυγατέρες ἐγεννήθησαν αὐτοῖς” (Gen. vi. 1). ἄξιον οἶμαι διαπορῆσαι, διὰ τί μετὰ τὴν Νῶε καὶ τῶν υἱῶν αὐτοῦ γένεσιν εἰς πολυανθρωπίαν ἐπιδίδωσιν ἡμῶν τὸ γένος. ἀλλ’ ἴσως οὐ χαλεπὸν ἀποδοῦναι τὴν αἰτίαν· αἰεὶ γὰρ ἐπειδὴν τὸ σπάνιον φανῆ, πάμπλου
- <sup>2</sup> τὸ ἐναντίον εὐρίσκεται. ἐνὸς οὖν εὐφυΐα τὴν περὶ μυρίους διαδείκνυσιν ἀφυΐαν, καὶ τὰ τεχνικὰ μέντοι καὶ ἐπιστημονικὰ καὶ ἀγαθὰ καὶ καλὰ ὄντα ὀλίγα τὴν τῶν ἀτέχνων καὶ ἀνεπιστημόνων καὶ ἀδίκων καὶ συνόλως φαύλων ἄπειρον ὄσσην<sup>1</sup> πληθὺν ἐ-
- <sup>3</sup> σκιασμένην ἀποφαίνει. οὐχ ὄρας ὅτι καὶ ἐν τῷ παντὶ ἥλιος εἰς ὧν τὸ μυρίον καὶ βαθὺ σκότος κατὰ γῆν καὶ κατὰ θάλατταν κεχυμένον ἐπιλάμψας ἀνασκίδνησιν; εἰκότως οὖν καὶ ἡ τοῦ δικαίου Νῶε γένεσις καὶ τῶν υἱῶν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ἀδίκους πολλοὺς διασυνίστησι· τῷ γὰρ ἐναντίῳ τὰ ἐναντία πέφυκέ
- <sup>4</sup> πως μάλιστα γνωρίζεσθαι. ἄδικος δὲ οὐδεὶς ἄρρενα γενεὰν ἐν ψυχῇ σπείρει τὸ παράπαν, ἀλλὰ θηλυγονοῦσιν ἐκ φύσεως ἄνδρῳ καὶ κατεαγότες καὶ θηλυδρῖαι τὰ φρονήματα, δένδρον οὐδὲν ἀρετῆς, οὗ καλοῦς καὶ γενναίου ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἔδει

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ὄσων.

ON THE GIANTS

I. "And it came to pass when men began to wax many on the earth and daughters were born unto them" (Gen. vi. 1). It is, I think, a problem worth full examination, why our race began to grow so numerous after the birth of Noah and his sons. Yet perhaps it is not difficult to render a reason. For when the rarity appears, its opposite always is found in abundance. And therefore the ability of the individual shows up the absence of ability in the crowd, and examples of skill in any of the arts and sciences, or of goodness and excellence through this rarity bring out of their obscurity into the light the vast multitude of the unskilled in the arts and sciences, and of the unjust and worthless in general. Mark that in the universe too the sun is but one, yet it scatters with its rays the manifold and profound darkness which wraps sea and land. And so it is only natural that the birth of just Noah and his sons should make evident the abundance of the unjust. That is the nature of opposites; it is through the existence of the one that we chiefly recognize the existence of the other. Again, the spiritual offspring of the unjust is never in any case male: the offspring of men whose thoughts are unmanly, nerveless and emasculate by nature are female. Such do not plant a tree of virtue whose fruit must needs

τοὺς καρποὺς γενέσθαι, πάντα δὲ κακίας καὶ παθῶν, ὧν γυναικῶδεις αἱ βλάσται, φυτεύσαντες·
 5 οὗ χάριν θυγατέρας οἱ ἄνθρωποι οὗτοι γεννηῆσαι λέγονται, υἱὸν δὲ οὐδεὶς αὐτῶν. ἐπεὶ γὰρ ὁ δίκαιος ἄρρενογονεῖ Νῶε τέλειον καὶ ὀρθὸν λόγον καὶ ἄρρενα ὄντως μετιῶν, θηλυτόκος ἢ κατὰ τοὺς
 [263] πολλοὺς ἀδικία πάντως | ἀναφαίνεται· ἀμήχανον γὰρ τὰ αὐτὰ πρὸς τῶν ἐναντίων, ἀλλὰ μὴ τὰ ἐναντία πάλιν γενέσθαι.

- 6 II. "Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ ἄγγελοι τοῦ θεοῦ τὰς θυγατέρας τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ὅτι καλαί εἰσιν, ἔλαβον ἑαυτοῖς γυναῖκας ἀπὸ πασῶν, ὧν ἐξελέξαντο" (Gen. vi. 2). οὗς ἄλλοι φιλόσοφοι δαίμονας, ἀγγέλους Μωυσῆς εἴωθεν ὀνομάζειν· ψυχὰι δ' εἰσὶ
 7 κατὰ τὸν ἀέρα πετόμεναι. καὶ μηδεὶς ὑπολάβῃ μῦθον εἶναι τὸ εἰρημένον· ἀνάγκη γὰρ ὄλον δι' ὄλων τὸν κόσμον ἐψυχῶσθαι, τῶν πρώτων καὶ στοιχειωδῶν μερῶν ἐκάστου τὰ οἰκεία καὶ πρόσφορα ζῶα περιέχοντος, γῆς μὲν τὰ χερσαῖα, θαλάττης δὲ καὶ ποταμῶν τὰ ἔνυδρα, πυρὸς δὲ τὰ πυρίγονα—λόγος δὲ ἔχει ταῦτα κατὰ Μακεδονίαν μάλιστα γίνεσθαι—οὐρανοῦ δὲ τοὺς ἀστέρας.
 8 καὶ γὰρ οὗτοι ψυχὰι ὄλαι δι' ὄλων ἀκήρατοί τε καὶ θεῖαι, παρὸ καὶ κύκλω κινουῦνται τὴν συγγενεστάτην νῶ κίνησιν· νοῦς γὰρ ἕκαστος αὐτῶν ἀκραιφνέστατος. ἔστιν οὖν ἀναγκαῖον καὶ τὸν ἀέρα ζῶων πεπληρῶσθαι· ταῦτα δὲ ἡμῖν ἔστιν ἀόρατα, ὅτι περ καὶ αὐτὸς οὐχ ὄρατὸς αἰσθήσει.
 9 ἀλλ' οὐ παρόσον ἀδύνατος ἢ ὄψις ψυχῶν φαν-

<sup>a</sup> i.e., mere " offshoots " not reaching the stage of fruits.

ON THE GIANTS, 4-9

be true-born and excellent, only trees of vice and passions, whose off-shoots<sup>a</sup> are feminine. This is why we are told that these men begat daughters, while none of them is said to have begotten a son. For since just Noah who follows the right, the perfect and truly masculine reason, begets males, the injustice of the multitude appears as the parent of females only. It cannot be that the same things should be born of opposite parents: the offspring must be opposite also.

II. "And when the angels of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair, they took to themselves wives from all, those whom they chose" (Gen. vi. 2). It is Moses' custom to give the name of angels to those whom other philosophers call demons (or spirits), souls that is which fly and hover in the air. And let no one suppose that what is here said is a myth. For the universe must needs be filled through and through with life, and each of its primary elementary divisions contains the forms of life which are akin and suited to it. The earth has the creatures of the land, the sea and the rivers those that live in water, fire the fire-born,<sup>b</sup> which are said to be found especially in Macedonia, and heaven has the stars. For the stars are souls divine<sup>b</sup> and without blemish throughout, and therefore as each of them is mind in its purest form, they move in the line most akin to mind—the circle.

And so the other element, the air, must needs be filled with living beings, though indeed they are invisible to us, since even the air itself is not visible to our senses. Yet the fact that our powers of vision are incapable of any perception of the forms of these

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 502.

- τασιωθῆναι τύπους, διὰ τοῦτ' οὐκ εἰσιν ἐν ἀέρι
 ψυχαί, καταλαμβάνεσθαι δ' αὐτὰς ἀναγκαῖον ὑπὸ
 νοῦ, ἵνα πρὸς τῶν ὁμοίων τὸ ὁμοιον θεωρῆται.
- 10 ἐπεὶ καὶ τί φήσομεν; πάνθ' ὅσα χερσαῖα καὶ
 ἔνυδρα οὐκ ἀέρι καὶ πνεύματι ζῆ; τί δέ; οὐκ ἀέρος κακωθέντος τὰ λοιμικὰ συνίστασθαι παθήματα φιλεῖ, ὡς ἂν αἰτίου τῆς ψυχώσεως ἐκάστοις;
 τί δέ; ὁπότε ἀπήμων καὶ ἀβλαβῆς εἶη, ὁποῖον ἐν
 ταῖς βορείοις μάλιστα αὔραις εἴωθε γίνεσθαι, οὐ
 καθαρωτέρου σπῶντα τοῦ πνεύματος πρὸς πλείονα
- 11 καὶ κραταιοτέραν διαμονὴν ἐπιδίδωσιν; ἄρ' οὖν
 εἰκὸς δι' οὗ τὰ ἄλλα, ἔνυδρά τε καὶ χερσαῖα, ἐψύχωνται, ἔρημον εἶναι ἢ ψυχῶν ἀμοιρεῖν; του-ναντίον μὲν οὖν, εἰ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα πάντα ζώων ἄγωνα
 ἦν, μόνος ἀὴρ ὤφειλε ζωοτοκῆσαι τὰ ψυχῆς κατ'
 ἐξάίρετον χάριν παρὰ τοῦ δημιουργοῦ σπέρματα λαβών.
- 12 III. Τῶν οὖν ψυχῶν αἱ μὲν πρὸς σώματα κατ-
 [264] ἔβησαν, αἱ δὲ | οὐδενὶ τῶν γῆς μορίων ἠξίωσάν
 ποτε συνενεχθῆναι. ταύταις ἀφιερωθείσαις καὶ τῆς
 τοῦ πατρὸς θεραπείας περιεχομέναις ὑπηρέτισι καὶ
 διακόνοις ὁ δημιουργὸς εἴωθε χρῆσθαι πρὸς τὴν
- 13 τῶν θνητῶν ἐπιστάσιαν.<sup>1</sup> ἐκεῖναι δ' ὥσπερ εἰς
 ποταμὸν τὸ σῶμα καταβᾶσαι ποτὲ μὲν ὑπὸ συρμοῦ
 δίνης βιαιοτάτης ἄρπασθεῖσαι κατεπόθησαν, ποτὲ
 δὲ πρὸς τὴν φορὰν ἀντισχεῖν δυνηθεῖσαι τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀνενήξαντο, εἶτα ὅθεν ὤρμησαν, ἐκεῖσε

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐπίστασιν.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 502.

ON THE GIANTS, 9-13

souls is no reason why we should doubt that there are souls in the air, but they must be apprehended by the mind, that like may be discerned by like. Here is a further consideration. Do not all creatures of land and water live by air and breath? And is it not true, that when the air is plague-stricken, disastrous pestilences often arise, suggesting that air is the animating principle to all and each, while on the other hand, when it is free from taint and mischief, a state which is most often found when the north wind blows, these same creatures, inhaling as they do a purer atmosphere, tend ever to enjoy a more abundant and stronger vitality? Is it then reasonable to suppose that this element which has been the source of life to the others, the denizens of land and water, should itself be desert and destitute of living souls? Nay, on the contrary, if all the other elements produced no animal life, it were still the proper function of the air to do what none other did and bring forth living beings, since to it the seeds of vitality have been committed through the special bounty of the Creator.

III. Now some of the souls have descended into bodies, but others have never deigned to be brought into union with any of the parts of earth. They are consecrated and devoted to the service of the Father and Creator whose wont it is to employ them as ministers and helpers, to have charge and care of mortal man. But the others descending into the body as though into a stream <sup>a</sup> have sometimes been caught in the swirl of its rushing torrent and swallowed up thereby, at other times have been able to stem the current, have risen to the surface and then soared upwards back to the place from whence they came.

PHILO

- 14 πάλιν ανέπτυσαν. αὐται μὲν οὖν εἰσι ψυχὰι τῶν ἀνόθως<sup>1</sup> φιλοσοφησάντων, ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἄχρι τέλους μελετῶσαι τὸν μετὰ σωμάτων ἀποθνήσκειν βίον, ἵνα τῆς ἀσωμάτου καὶ ἀφθάρτου παρὰ τῷ ἀγενήτῳ
- 15 καὶ ἀφθάρτῳ ζωῆς μεταλάχωσιν, αἱ δὲ καταποντωθεῖσαι τῶν ἄλλων ἀνθρώπων ὅσοι σοφίας ἠλόγησαν ἐκδόντες ἀστάτοις καὶ τυχηροῖς πράγμασιν ἑαυτούς, ὧν οὐδὲν εἰς τὸ κράτιστον τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν, ψυχὴν ἢ νοῦν, ἀναφέρεται, πάντα δὲ ἐπὶ τὸν συμφυᾶ νεκρὸν ἡμῶν, τὸ σῶμα, ἢ ἐπὶ τὰ ἀψυχότερα τούτου, δόξαν λέγω καὶ χρήματα καὶ ἀρχὰς καὶ τιμὰς καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα ὑπὸ τῶν μὴ τεθεαμένων τὰ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν καλὰ ἀπάτη ψευδοῦς δόξης ἀναπλάττεται ἢ ζωγραφεῖται.
- 16 IV. Ψυχὰς οὖν καὶ δαίμονας καὶ ἀγγέλους ὀνόματα μὲν διαφέροντα, ἐν δὲ καὶ ταῦτὸν ὑποκείμενον διανοηθεῖς ἄχθος βαρύτερον ἀποθήσῃ δεισιδαιμονίαν. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἀγαθοὺς δαίμονας καὶ κακοὺς λέγουσιν οἱ πολλοὶ καὶ ψυχὰς ὁμοίως, οὕτως καὶ ἀγγέλους τοὺς μὲν τῆς προσήσεως ἀξίους πρεσβευτὰς τινὰς ἀνθρώπων πρὸς θεὸν καὶ θεοῦ πρὸς ἀνθρώπους ἱερούς καὶ ἀσύλους διὰ τὴν ἀνυπαίτιον καὶ παγκάλην ταύτην ὑπηρεσίαν, τοὺς δ' ἔμπαλιν ἀνιέρους καὶ ἀναξίους τῆς προσήσεως καὶ αὐτὸς ὑπολαμβάνων οὐχ ἁμαρτήσῃ.
- 17 μαρτυρεῖ δέ μου τῷ λόγῳ τὸ παρὰ τῷ ὑμνογράφῳ εἰρημένον ἐν ἄσματι τοῦτο<sup>2</sup>. “ἐξαπέστειλεν εἰς αὐτοὺς ὄργην θυμοῦ αὐτοῦ, θυμὸν καὶ ὄργην καὶ

<sup>1</sup> mss. ἀνωθέν πως et alia.

<sup>2</sup> τοῦτο conj. Mangey : mss. and Wendland τούτῳ.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 502.

ON THE GIANTS, 14-17

These last, then, are the souls of those who have given themselves to genuine philosophy, who from first to last study to die to the life in the body,<sup>a</sup> that a higher existence immortal and incorporeal, in the presence of Him who is Himself immortal and uncreate, may be their portion. But the souls which have sunk beneath the stream, are the souls of the others who have held no count of wisdom. They have abandoned themselves to the unstable things of chance, none of which has aught to do with our noblest part, the soul or mind, but all are related to that dead thing which was our birth-fellow, the body, or to objects more lifeless still, glory, wealth, and offices, and honours, and all other illusions which like images or pictures are created through the deceit of false opinion by those who have never gazed upon true beauty.

IV. So if you realize that souls and demons and angels are but different names for the same one underlying object, you will cast from you that most grievous burden, the fear of demons or superstition. The common usage of men is to give the name of demon to bad and good demons alike, and the name of soul to good and bad souls. And so, too, you also will not go wrong if you reckon as angels, not only those who are worthy of the name, who are as ambassadors backwards and forwards<sup>a</sup> between men and God and are rendered sacred and inviolate by reason of that glorious and blameless ministry, but also those who are unholy and unworthy of the title.

I have as witness to my argument the words of the Psalmist, where in one of the psalms we read "He sent out upon them the anger of His wrath, wrath and anger and affliction, a mission by

PHILO

- θλίψιν, ἀποστολήν δι' ἀγγέλων πονηρῶν" (Psalm [265] lxxvii. 49). οὗτοί | εἰσιν οἱ πονηροὶ τὸ ἀγγέλων ὄνομα ὑποδύμενοι, τὰς μὲν ὀρθοῦ λόγου θυγατέρας, ἐπιστήμας καὶ ἀρετάς, οὐκ εἰδότες, τὰς δὲ τῶν ἀνθρώπων θνητὰς θνητῶν ἀπογόνους ἡδονὰς μετερχόμενοι γνήσιον μὲν οὐδὲν ἐπιφερομένας κάλλος, ὃ διανοία μόνῃ θεωρεῖται, νόθον δὲ εὐμορ-
 18 φίαν, δι' ἧς ἡ αἴσθησις ἀπατᾶται. λαμβάνουσι δὲ οὐ πάσας ἅπαντες τὰς θυγατέρας, ἀλλ' ἔνιοι ἐνίας ἐκ μυρίων ὄσων ἐπελέξαντο ἑαυτοῖς, οἱ μὲν τὰς δι' ὄψεως, ἕτεροι δὲ τὰς δι' ἀκοῆς, τὰς δ' αὖθις διὰ γεύσεως καὶ γαστρὸς ἄλλοι, τινὲς δὲ τὰς μετὰ γαστέρα, πολλοὶ δὲ καὶ τῶν πορρωτάτω διωκισμένων ἀντελάβοντο<sup>1</sup> μηκίστας τὰς ἐν ἑαυτοῖς τείνοντες ἐπιθυμίας· ποικίλαι γὰρ ἐξ ἀνάγκης αἱ ποικίλων ἡδονῶν αἰρέσεις, ἄλλων ὠκειωμένων ἄλλαις.
- 19 V. Ἐν δὴ τοῖς τοιούτοις ἀμήχανον τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ καταμεῖναι καὶ διαιωνίσαι πνεῦμα, ὡς δηλοῖ καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ νομοθέτης. "εἶπέ" γάρ φησι "κύριος ὁ θεός· οὐ καταμενεῖ τὸ πνεῦμά μου ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα διὰ τὸ εἶναι αὐτοὺς σάρκας"
- 20 (Gen. vi. 3). μένει μὲν γὰρ ἔστιν ὅτε, καταμένει δ' οὐκ εἰσάπαν παρὰ τοῖς πολλοῖς ἡμῖν. τίς γὰρ οὕτως ἄλογος ἢ ἀψυχός ἐστιν, ὡς μηδέποτε ἔννοϊαν τοῦ ἀρίστου μήθ' ἐκὼν μήτ' ἄκων λαβεῖν; ἀλλὰ γὰρ καὶ τοῖς ἐξαγίστοις ἐπιποτᾶται πολλάκις αἰφνίδιος ἢ τοῦ καλοῦ φαντασία, συλλαβεῖν δ' αὐτὴν καὶ φυλάξαι παρ' ἑαυτοῖς ἀδυνατοῦσιν.
- 21 οἴχεται γὰρ εὐθέως μεταναστᾶσα, τοὺς προσεληλυ-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀνελάβοντο.

ON THE GIANTS, 17-21

evil angels" (Ps. lxxvii. 49).<sup>a</sup> These are the evil ones who, cloaking themselves under the name of angels, know not the daughters of right reason, the sciences and virtues, but court the pleasures which are born of men, pleasures mortal as their parents—pleasures endowed not with the true beauty, which the mind alone can discern, but with the false comeliness, by which the senses are deceived. They do not all take all the daughters, but some choose these, some those, out of the vast multitude. Some take the pleasures of sight, others those of hearing, others again those of the palate and the belly, or of sex, while many, setting no bound to their inward desires, seize upon the pleasures which lie furthest beyond the common range. For as pleasures are manifold, the choices of pleasures must needs be manifold also. One here, another there, they each have their affinities.

V. Among such as these then it is impossible that the spirit of God should dwell and make for ever its habitation, as also the Lawgiver himself shows clearly. For (so it runs) "the Lord God said, My spirit shall not abide for ever among men, because they are flesh" (Gen. vi. 3). The spirit sometimes stays awhile, but it does not abide for ever among us, the mass of men. Who indeed is so lacking in reason or soul that he never either with or without his will receives a conception of the best? Nay, even over the reprobate hovers often of a sudden the vision of the excellent, but to grasp it and keep it for their own they have not the strength. In a moment it is gone and passed

<sup>a</sup> Ps. lxxviii. in A.V.

- θότας οικήτορας νόμον καὶ δίκην ἐκδεδιητημένους ἀποστραφείσα, πρὸς οὓς οὐδ' ἂν ποτε ἦκεν, εἰ μὴ τοῦ διελέγξαι χάριν τοὺς ἀντὶ καλῶν αἰσχροῦ
- 22 αἴρουμένους. λέγεται δὲ θεοῦ πνεῦμα καθ' ἓνα μὲν τρόπον ὁ ῥέων ἀπὸ γῆς, τρίτον στοιχείον ἐποχούμενον ὕδατι—παρό φησιν ἐν τῇ κοσμοποιίᾳ: “ πνεῦμα θεοῦ ἐπεφέρετο ἐπάνω τοῦ ὕδατος ” (Gen. i. 2), ἐπειδήπερ ἕξαιρόμενος ὁ ἀπὸ κούφου ὦν ἄνω φέρεται ὕδατι βάσει χρώμενος—καθ' ἕτερον δὲ τρόπον ἡ ἀκήρατος ἐπιστήμη, ἧς πᾶς ὁ
- 23 σοφὸς εἰκότως μετέχει. δηλοῖ δὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ τῶν ἀγίων ἔργων δημιουργοῦ καὶ τεχνίτου φάσκων, ὅτι “ ἀνεκάλεσεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν Βεσελεὴλ καὶ ἐπέπλησεν αὐτὸν πνεύματος θείου, σοφίας, συνέσεως, ἐπιστήμης, ἐπὶ παντὶ ἔργῳ διανοεῖσθαι ” (Exod. xxxi. 2, 3). ὥστε τὸ τί ἐστὶ πνεῦμα θεῖον ὀρικῶς διὰ τῶν λεχθέντων ὑπογράφεται.
- 24 VI. τοιοῦτόν ἐστι καὶ τὸ Μωυσέως πνεῦμα, ὃ ἐπιφοιτᾷ τοῖς ἑβδομήκοντα πρεσβυτέροις τοῦ
- [266] διενεγκεῖν ἑτέρων καὶ βελτιωθῆναι χάριν. | οἷς οὐδὲ πρεσβυτέροις πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἔνεστι γενέσθαι μὴ μεταλαβοῦσι τοῦ πανσόφου πνεύματος ἐκείνου. λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι “ ἀφελῶ ἀπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος τοῦ ἐπὶ σοὶ καὶ ἐπιθήσω ἐπὶ τοὺς ἑβδομήκοντα πρεσβυ-
- 25 τέρους ” (Num. xi. 17). ἀλλὰ μὴ νομίσης οὕτως ἀφαίρεσιν κατὰ ἀποκοπὴν καὶ διάζευξιν γίνεσθαι, ἀλλ' οἷα γένοιτ' ἂν ἀπὸ πυρός, ὃ, κὰν μυρίας δᾶδας ἐξάψη, μένει μῆδ' ὀτιοῦν ἐλαττωθὲν ἐν ὁμοίῳ. τοιαύτη τίς ἐστὶ καὶ τῆς ἐπιστήμης ἢ φύσεως τοῦς

<sup>a</sup> The word oikētopas is difficult. Possibly the idea is that such persons are as householders who invite the heavenly visitor to be their tenant.

ON THE GIANTS, 21-25

to some other place, and from the habitation<sup>a</sup> of those who have come into its presence after wandering from the life of law and justice it turns away its steps. Nay, never would it have come to them save to convict those who choose the base instead of the noble. Now the name of the "spirit of God" is used in one sense for the air which flows up from the land,<sup>b</sup> the third element which rides upon the water, and thus we find in the Creation-story "the spirit of God was moving above the water" (Gen. i. 2), since the air through its lightness is lifted and rises upwards, having the water for its base. In another sense it is the pure knowledge in which every wise man naturally shares. The prophet shows this in speaking of the craftsman and artificer of the sacred works. God called up Bezaleel, he says, and "filled him with the divine spirit, with wisdom, understanding, and knowledge to devise in every work" (Exod. xxxi. 2 f.). In these words we have suggested to us a definition of what the spirit of God is.

VI. Such a divine spirit, too, is that of Moses, which visits the seventy elders that they may excel others and be brought to something better—those seventy who cannot be in real truth even elders, if they have not received a portion of that spirit of perfect wisdom. For it is written, "I will take of the spirit that is on thee and lay it upon the seventy elders" (Numb. xi. 17). But think not that this taking of the spirit comes to pass as when men cut away a piece and sever it. Rather it is, as when they take fire from fire, for though the fire should kindle a thousand torches, it is still as it was and is diminished not a whit. Of such a sort also is the nature of knowledge.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 502.

PHILO

γὰρ φοιτητὰς καὶ γνωρίμους ἀποφήνασα ἐμπείρους
 πάντας κατ' οὐδὲν μέρος ἔλαττοῦται, πολλάκις δὲ
 καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄμεινον ἐπιδίδωσιν, ὥσπερ φασι τὰς
 ἀπαντλουμένας πηγὰς· καὶ γὰρ ἐκείνας λόγος ἔχει 26 τότε μᾶλλον γλυκαίνεσθαι. αἱ γὰρ συνεχεῖς πρὸς ἑτέρους ὁμιλίας μελέτην καὶ ἄσκησιν ἐμποιοῦσαι ὀλόκληρον τελειότητα ἐργάζονται. εἰ μὲν οὖν τὸ
 ἴδιον αὐτοῦ Μωυσέως πνεῦμα ἢ τινος ἄλλου γενητοῦ τοσοῦτω πλήθει γνωρίμων ἔμελλε διανέμεσθαι, κἂν κατακερματισθὲν εἰς μοίρας τοσαύ-27 τας ἐμειοῦτο. νῦν δὲ τὸ ἐπ' αὐτῷ πνεῦμά ἐστι τὸ
 σοφόν, τὸ θεῖον, τὸ ἄτμητον, τὸ ἀδιαίρετον, τὸ
 ἀστείον, τὸ πάντη δι' ὅλων ἐκπεπληρωμένον·
 ὅπερ ὠφελοῦν οὐ βλάπτεται οὐδὲ μεταδοθὲν
 ἑτέροις οὐδ' αὖ προστεθὲν<sup>1</sup> ἔλαττοῦται τὴν σύνεσιν 28 καὶ ἐπιστήμην καὶ σοφίαν.

VIII. διὸ

δὴ πνεῦμα θεῖον μένειν μὲν δυνατὸν ἐν ψυχῇ, διαμένειν δὲ ἀδύνατον, ὡς εἶπομεν. καὶ τί θαυμά-ζομεν; οὐδὲ γὰρ ἄλλου τὸ παράπαν οὐδενὸς
 ἐχυρὰ καὶ βέβαιος ἐγγίνεται κτήσις ἀντιρρεπόντων
 καὶ πρὸς ἑκάτερα ταλαντευόντων τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων
 πραγμάτων καὶ ἄλλοτε ἄλλοίαις ἐνδεχομένων 29 μεταβολάς. αἴτιον δὲ τῆς ἀνεπιστημοσύνης μέγι-στον ἢ σὰρξ καὶ ἢ πρὸς σάρκα οἰκείωσις· καὶ αὐτὸς δὲ ὁμολογεῖ φάσκων “ διὰ τὸ εἶναι αὐτοὺς σάρκας ”
 μὴ δύνασθαι τὸ θεῖον πνεῦμα καταμείναι. καίτοι
 καὶ γάμος καὶ παιδοτροφία καὶ πορισμὸς τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἀδοξία τε μετὰ ἀχρηματίας καὶ πραγ-

<sup>1</sup> Or perhaps with T, προστιθοῦν, i.e. “when it adds understanding . is not diminished.”

<sup>a</sup> Or filled up in all its parts, so as to have no interstices and thus be indivisible = ἀδιαίρετον.

ON THE GIANTS, 25-29

All those who resort to it and become its disciples, it makes into men of skill, yet no part of it is diminished. Nay, often knowledge improves thereby, just as springs (so they say) when we draw water from them. For when this is done, it is thought that the spring becomes sweeter. So the giving of instruction to others, constantly repeated, entails study and practice to the instructor and thus works the perfect consummation of knowledge. If, then, it were Moses' own spirit, or the spirit of some other created being, which was according to God's purpose to be distributed to that great number of disciples, it would indeed be shredded into so many pieces and thus lessened. But as it is, the spirit which is on him is the wise, the divine, the excellent spirit, susceptible of neither severance nor division, diffused in its fullness everywhere and through all things,<sup>a</sup> the spirit which helps, but suffers no hurt, which though it be shared with others or added to others suffers no diminution in understanding and knowledge and wisdom.

VII. And so though the divine spirit may stay awhile in the soul it cannot abide there, as we have said. And why wonder at this? For there is nothing else of which we have secure and firm possession, since human things swing to and fro, sway now up, now down, as in a scale, and are subject to vicissitudes from hour to hour. But the chief cause of ignorance is the flesh, and the tie which binds us so closely to the flesh. And Moses himself affirms this when he says that "because they are flesh" the divine spirit cannot abide. It is true that marriage, and the rearing of children, and provision of necessities, and disrepute following in the wake of poverty, and the business of private and

- ματεΐαι, ὧν αἱ μὲν ἴδιαι αἱ δὲ κοιναί, καὶ μυρία 30 ἄλλα, πρὶν σοφίαν ἀνθῆσαι, κατεμάραναν. ἀλλ’ οὐδὲν οὕτως ἐμπόδιον πρὸς αὐξήσιν αὐτῆς, ὡς ἡ σαρκῶν φύσις. αὕτη γὰρ καθάπερ τις θεμέλιος ἀγνοίας καὶ ἀμαθίας πρῶτος καὶ μέγιστος ὑπο-βέβληται, ᾧ τῶν εἰρημένων ἕκαστον ἐποικοδο-31 μείται. ψυχὰι μὲν γὰρ ἄσαρκοι καὶ ἀσώματοι ἐν
 τῷ τοῦ παντὸς θεάτρῳ διημερεύουσαι θεαμάτων
 [267] καὶ ἀκουσμάτων θείων, | ὧν ἄπληστος αὐτὰς
 εἰσελήλυθεν ἔρωσ, μηδενὸς κωλυσιεργούντος ἀπο-λαύουσιν. ὅσαι δὲ τὸν σαρκῶν φόρτον ἀχθοφοροῦσι, βαρυνόμεναι καὶ πιεζόμεναι ἄνω μὲν βλέπειν εἰς
 τὰς οὐρανίους περιόδους ἀδυνατοῦσι, κάτω δὲ ἐλκυσθεῖσαι τὸν αὐχένα βιαίως δίκην τετραπόδων
 γῆ προσερρίζωνται.
- 32 VIII. Παρὸ καὶ τὰς ἐκνόμους καὶ ἐκθέσμους ὁμιλίας τε καὶ μίξεις ἐγνωκῶς ὁ νομοθέτης ἀναιρεῖν προοιμιάζεται τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον· “ ἄν-θρωπος ἄνθρωπος πρὸς πάντα οἰκεῖον σαρκὸς
 αὐτοῦ οὐ προσελεύσεται ἀποκαλύψαι ἀσχημοσύνην·
 ἐγὼ κύριος ” (Lev. xviii. 6). πῶς ἂν τις προ-τρέψαιτο μᾶλλον σαρκὸς καὶ τῶν σαρκὸς οἰκείων 33 καταφρονεῖν ἢ τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον; καίτοι οὐκ ἀποτρέπει μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ παγίως ἀποφαίνεται, ὅτι ὁ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἄνθρωπος οὐ προσελεύσεται
 ποτε ἐκὼν ταῖς φίλαις καὶ συγγενέσι σώματος
 ἡδοναῖς, ἀλλοτρίωσιν δὲ τὴν πρὸς αὐτὰς αἰεὶ
 34 μελετήσῃ. τὸ μὲν οὖν μὴ ἅπαξ ἀλλὰ δις φάναι “ ἄνθρωπος ἄνθρωπος ” σημειῖόν ἐστι τοῦ μὴ τὸν ἐκ σώματος καὶ ψυχῆς ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀρετῇ κεχρη-μένον δηλοῦσθαι. ὄντως γὰρ ὁ ἀληθινὸς οὗτός

ON THE GIANTS, 29-34

public life, and a multitude of other things wither the flower of wisdom before it blooms. But nothing thwarts its growth so much as our fleshly nature. For on it ignorance and scorn of learning rest. It is ready laid for them as a first and main foundation; each one of the qualities named rises on it like a building. For souls that are free from flesh and body spend their days in the theatre of the universe and with a joy that none can hinder see and hear things divine, which they have desired with love insatiable. But those which bear the burden of the flesh, oppressed by the grievous load, cannot look up to the heavens as they revolve, but with necks bowed downwards are constrained to stand rooted to the ground like four-footed beasts.

VIII. For the same cause the lawgiver, when he is minded to do away with all lawless and disorderly intercourse and union, prefaces his command thus, "a man, a man shall not go near to any that is akin to his flesh to uncover their shame. I am the Lord" (Lev. xviii. 6). How could the command to spurn the flesh and what pertains to flesh be better given than in this form? And indeed he does not only forbid, but positively affirms that the man who is truly a man will not of his own free will go near to the pleasures which are the friends and kin of the body, but will always exercise himself in the lesson of estrangement from them. The repeated word, "a man, a man,"<sup>a</sup> instead of the single word, is a sign that he means not the man who is compounded of soul and body, but the man whose life is one of virtue. For he indeed is the true man, and it was

<sup>a</sup> No such repetition is in the Hebrew.

PHILO

ἐστίν, ὃν καὶ τῶν παλαιῶν λύχνον τις μεσημβρίας
 ἀψάμενος πρὸς τοὺς πυνθανομένους ἄνθρωπον ἔφη ζητεῖν. τὸ δὲ μὴ πρὸς πάντα οἰκεῖον προσἔρχεσθαι τῆς σαρκὸς ἔχει λόγον ἀναγκαῖον. ἔνια
 γὰρ προσετέον, οἷον αὐτὰ τὰ ἐπιτήδεια, οἷς
 χρώμενοι ζῆν ἀνόσως καὶ ὑγιεινῶς δυνησόμεθα,
 τὰ δὲ περιττὰ σκορακιστέον, ὑφ' ὧν ἐξαπτόμεναι
 αἱ ἐπιθυμίαι τὰ σπουδαῖα πάντα ῥύμη μιᾷ κατα-35 φλέγουσι. μὴ πρὸς πάντα οὖν τὰ τῆ σαρκὶ φίλα
 αἱ ὀρέξεις ἀνηρεθίσθωσαν· ἡδοναὶ γὰρ αἱ ἀτίθασοι
 πολλάκις, ὅταν κυνῶν τρόπον προσσαίνωσιν, ἐξ
 ὑποστροφῆς ἀνίατα ἔδακον. ὥστε τὴν ἀρετῆς φίλην ὀλιγοδείαν πρὸ τῶν σώματος οἰκεῖων ἀσπαζόμενοι τὸν πολὺν καὶ ἀνήνυτον ὄχλον ἀσπόνδων
 ἐχθρῶν καταλύωμεν. εἰ δὲ πού τις καιρὸς
 βιάζεται πλείω τῶν μετρίων καὶ ἱκανῶν λαμβάνειν, αὐτοὶ μὴ προσερχώμεθα· λέγει γάρ· “οὐ προσελεύσεται αὐτὸς ἀποκαλύψαι ἀσχημοσύνην.” 36 IX. τί δὲ τοῦτό ἐστίν, ἄξιον ἀναπτύξαι· πολλάκις οὐ γενόμενοί τινες πορισταὶ
 χρημάτων ἄφθονον ἔσχον περιουσίαν, ἕτεροι δὲ
 δόξαν οὐκ ἐπιτηδεύσαντες ἐπαίνων δημοσίᾳ καὶ
 τιμῶν ἠξιώθησαν, τοῖς δὲ οὐδὲ μικρὰν ἰσχὺν 37 ἐλπίσασιν μεγίστην προσεγένετο εὐτονία. μαθέτωσαν δὴ πάντες οὗτοι μηδενὶ προσέρχεσθαι γνώμη
 τῶν εἰρημένων, τοῦτο δὲ ἐστὶ μὴ θαυμάζειν αὐτὰ
 καὶ ἀποδέχεσθαι πλέον τοῦ μετρίου κρίνοντας

<sup>a</sup> i.e., Diogenes the Cynic, see Diog. Laert. vi. 41.

<sup>b</sup> The contrast is between προσέρχεσθαι (approach voluntarily) and προσετέον (admit passively) not between ἔνια and πάντα, which here as elsewhere in this meditation on Lev. xviii. 6 means “any” not “every.”

ON THE GIANTS, 34-37

of him that one of the ancients <sup>a</sup> spoke, when he lit a candle at midday and told them who asked his meaning that he was seeking a man. Again, there is a cogent reason for his saying that a man is not to go near to anyone pertaining to his flesh. For there are some things which we must admit, <sup>b</sup> as, for instance, the actual necessities of life, the use of which will enable us to live in health and free from sickness. But we must reject with scorn the superfluities which kindle the lusts that with a single flameburst consume every good thing. Let not our appetites, then, be whetted and incited towards anything that is dear to the flesh. The undisciplined pleasures are often as dogs; they fawn on us, then turn against us and their bite is fatal. Therefore let us embrace that spirit of frugal contentment which is the friend of virtue rather than the things which belong to the body, and thus let us subdue the vast and countless host of her deadly foes. But if some chance occasion force us to receive more than a moderate sufficiency, let us not of our own accord go near to it. For he says, "he shall not of himself go near to uncover shame."

IX.

The meaning of these words it would be well to explain. Men have often possessed an unlimited profusion of wealth, without engaging in lucrative trade, and others have not pursued glory and yet been held worthy to receive civic eulogies and honours. Others, again, who had no expectation of even a little bodily strength have found themselves most abundantly endowed with muscle and vigour. Let all such learn not to "go near" with deliberate purpose to any of these gifts, that is, not to regard them with admiration or undue satisfaction, judging

- [268] ἕκαστον αὐτῶν οὐ μόνον οὐκ | ἀγαθόν,<sup>1</sup> ἀλλὰ καὶ μέγιστον κακόν, τὰ χρήματα, τὴν δόξαν, τὴν σωματῶν δύναμιν. φιλαργύροις μὲν γὰρ ἢ πρὸς ἀργύριον, φιλοδόξοις δὲ ἢ πρὸς δόξαν, φιλάθλοισι δὲ καὶ φιλογυμνασταῖς ἢ πρὸς ἰσχὺν πρόσ-
 38 οδος οἰκεία· τὸ γὰρ ἄμεινον, ψυχῆν, τοῖς χείροσιν ἐκδεδώκασιν, ἀψύχοις. ὅσοι δὲ ἐντὸς ἑαυτῶν εἰσι, τὰς λαμπρὰς καὶ περιμαχήτους εὐπραγίας ὑπηκόους ἀποφαίνουσιν ὡς ἡγεμόνι τῷ νῶ, προσιούσας μὲν δεχόμενοι πρὸς ἐπανόρθωσιν, μακρὰν δὲ ἀφεστηκυῖαις οὐ προσερχόμενοι, ὡς
 39 καὶ δίχα αὐτῶν δυνηθέντες ἂν εὐδαιμονῆσαι. ὁ δὲ μετιῶν καὶ κατ' ἔχνος βαίνειν ἐθέλων αἰσχροῦς ἀναπίμπλησι δόξης φιλοσοφίαν· οὐ χάριν λέγεται “ ἀποκαλύψαι τὴν ἀσχημοσύνην.” πῶς γὰρ οὐκ ἐναργῆ καὶ πρόδηλα τὰ ὄνειδα τῶν λεγόντων μὲν εἶναι σοφῶν, πωλούντων δὲ σοφίαν καὶ ἐπειωνιζόντων, ὥσπερ φασὶ τοὺς ἐν ἀγορᾷ τὰ ὄνια προκηρύττοντας, τοτὲ μὲν μικροῦ λήμματος, τοτὲ δὲ ἡδέος καὶ εὐπαραγώγου λόγου, τοτὲ δὲ ἀβεβαίου ἐλπίδος ἀπὸ μηδενὸς ἡρτημένης ἐχυροῦ, ἔστι δ' ὅτε καὶ ὑποσχέσεων, αἱ διαφέρουσιν ὄνειράτων οὐδέν;
 40 X. Τὸ δὲ ἐπιφερόμενον “ ἐγὼ κύριος ” παγκάλως καὶ σφόδρα παιδευτικῶς εἴρηται. ἀντίθετος γάρ, φησὶν, ὧ γενναίῃ, τὸ σαρκὸς ἀγαθὸν τῷ τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ τῷ τοῦ παντὸς ἀγαθῷ· οὐκοῦν τὸ μὲν σαρκὸς ἐστὶν ἄλογος ἡδονή, τὸ δὲ ψυχῆς καὶ τοῦ
 41 παντὸς ὁ νοῦς τῶν ὄλων, ὁ θεός. ἐφάμιλλός γε<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Wendland: MSS. οὐκ ἀγαθὸν μόνον: Ed. οὐκ ἀγαθὸν [μόνον].

<sup>2</sup> MSS. τε.

ON THE GIANTS, 37-41

that each of them is not only no true blessing, but actually a grievous evil, whether it be money, or glory, or bodily strength. For it is the lovers of these things in each case who make the "approach," money-lovers to money, glory-lovers to glory, lovers of athletics and gymnastics to bodily strength. To these such "approach" is natural. They have abandoned the better to the worse, the soul to the soulless. The sane man brings the dazzling and coveted gifts of fortune in subjection to the mind as to a captain. If they come to him,<sup>a</sup> he accepts them to use them for improvement of life, but if they remain afar off, he does not go to them, judging that without them happiness might still be quite possible. He who makes them his quest and would follow in their track infects philosophy with the baseness of mere opinion and therefore is said to "uncover shame." For manifest surely and clear is the disgrace of those who say that they are wise, yet barter their wisdom for what they can get,<sup>b</sup> as men say is the way of the pedlars who hawk their goods in the market. And sometimes the price is just a trifling gain, sometimes a soft seductive speech, sometimes a hope ungrounded and ill secured, sometimes again promises idle as any dream.

X. The words that follow, "I (am) the Lord," are full of beauty and fraught with much instruction. Weigh, friend, he says, the good as the flesh sees it against the good as it exists in the soul and in the All. The first is irrational pleasure, the second is the mind of the universe, even God. The comparison

<sup>a</sup> See App. pp. 502, 503.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 486, note on ἐπειρωρίζω De Cher. 123.

- ἡ ἀσυγκρίτων<sup>1</sup> σύγκρισις, ὡς παρὰ τὴν ἐγγὺς ὁμοιότητα ἀπατηθῆναι· εἰ μὴ καὶ τὰ ἔμφυχα ἀψύχοις ἐρεῖ τις καὶ τὰ λογικὰ ἀλόγοις καὶ ἡρμοσμένα ἀναρμόστοις καὶ περιττοῖς ἄρτια καὶ φωτὶ σκότος καὶ ἡμέραν νυκτὶ καὶ πάντα τὰναντία
- 42 τοῖς ἐναντίοις τὰ αὐτὰ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν εἶναι. καίτοι καὶ εἰ ταῦτα τῷ γένεσιν ἐνδεδέχθαι κοινωνίαν τινὰ ἔχει καὶ συγγένειαν, ἀλλὰ γε ὁ θεὸς οὐδὲ τῷ ἀρίστῳ τῶν φύντων ὅμοιος, ὅτιπερ τὸ μὲν γέγονέ τε καὶ πείσεται, ὁ δ' ἐστὶν ἀγέννητός τε καὶ ποιῶν
- 43 αἰεί. καλὸν δὲ μὴ λιποτακτῆσαι μὲν τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ τάξεως, ἐν ἣ τούτους τεταγμένους πάντας ἀριστεύειν ἀνάγκη, αὐτομολῆσαι δὲ πρὸς τὴν ἀνανδρον καὶ κεκλασμένην ἡδονήν, ἣ βλάπτει μὲν τοὺς φίλους, ὠφελεῖ δὲ τοὺς ἐχθρούς. καινοτάτη γάρ τις αὐτῆς ἢ φύσις· οἷς μὲν ἂν ἐθελήσῃ τῶν ἰδίων ἀγαθῶν μεταδοῦναι, τούτους εὐθύς ἐζημίωσεν, οὓς δ' ἂν ἀφελέσθαι, τὰ μέγιστα ὤνησε. βλάπτει μὲν γὰρ ὅταν διδῶ, χαρίζεται δὲ ὅταν
- 44 ἀφαιρῆται. εἰάν οὖν, ὡς ψυχῆ, προσκαλῆται σέ τι τῶν ἡδονῆς φίλτρων, μετάκλινε σεαυτὴν καὶ ἀντιπεριάγουσα τὴν ὄψιν κάτιδε τὸ γνήσιον ἀρετῆς κάλλος καὶ ὀρώσα ἐπίμεινον, ἄχρισ ἂν ἡμερος ἐντακῆ σοι καὶ ὡς σιδηρῆτις λίθος ἐπισπάσῃται σε καὶ ἐγγὺς ἀγάγη καὶ ἐξαρτήσῃ τοῦ ποθουμένου.
- 45 XI. Τὸ δὲ “ ἐγὼ | κύριος ” ἀκουστέον οὐ μόνον [269] ἐν ἴσῳ τῷ “ ἐγὼ τὸ τέλειον καὶ ἀφθαρτον καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθόν,” οὐ περιεχόμενός τις τὸ ἀτελὲς καὶ φθαρτὸν καὶ σαρκῶν ἡρτημένον ἀπο-

<sup>1</sup> ἀσυγκρίτων conj. Wendland: mss. ἡ ἀσύγκριτος σύγκρισις (so also Ed.), et alia, see App. p. 503.

ON THE GIANTS, 41-45

of these two incomparables is so balanced a matter, you think, that their close resemblance may lead to deception! Well, in that case you must say that all opposites are really identical, living identical with lifeless, reasoning with unreasoning, ordered with disordered, odd with even, light with darkness, day with night. And indeed within these pairs, because they have been the subject of creation, we do find fellowship and kinship of each with its opposite, but God has no likeness even to what is noblest of things born. That was created in the past, it will be passive in the future, but God is uncreated and ever active.

Honour bids you not steal away from that rank in God's array where they that are so posted must all seek to be the bravest, nor desert to pleasure, the cowardly and invertebrate, pleasure who harms her friends and helps her enemies. Her nature is a paradox indeed. On those to whom she would fain impart of the boons which she has to give she inflicts loss in the very act. On those from whom she would take away, she bestows the greatest blessings. She harms when she gives, she benefits when she takes. Therefore, my soul, if any of the love-lures of pleasure invite thee, turn thyself aside, let thine eyes look else-whither. Look rather on the genuine beauty of virtue, gaze on her continually, till yearning sink into thy marrow, till like the magnet it draw thee on and bring thee nigh and bind thee fast to the object of thy desire.

XI. Again the words "I am the Lord" must not be understood merely as meaning "I am the perfect, the imperishable, the truly good existence," which whoso embraces will turn away from the imperfect, the perishable, the element which is dependent on

PHILO

στραφήσεται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀντὶ τοῦ “ ἐγὼ ὁ ἄρχων 46 καὶ [ὁ] βασιλεὺς καὶ δεσπότης.” οὔτε δὲ ὑπη-κόοις παρόντων ἡγεμόνων οὔτε δούλοις δεσποτῶν ἀδικεῖν ἀσφαλές· ἐγγὺς γὰρ ὅταν ὦσι οἱ κολασταί,
 φόβῳ σωφρονίζονται οἱ ἐξ ἑαυτῶν μὴ πεφυκότες 47 νουθετεῖσθαι. πάντα γὰρ<sup>α</sup> πεπληρωκῶς ὁ θεὸς ἐγγὺς ἐστίν, ὥστε ἐφορῶντος καὶ πλησίον ὄντος μάλιστα μὲν αἰδεσθέντες, εἰ δὲ μὴ τοῦτο, εὐλαβη-θέντες γοῦν τὸ ἀνίκητον τῆς ἀρχῆς αὐτοῦ κράτος
 καὶ τὸ φοβερὸν καὶ ἀπαραίτητον ἐν ταῖς τιμωρίαις,
 ὁπότε τῇ κολαστηρίῳ χρῆσθαι δυνάμει διανοηθεῖη,
 ἡρεμήσωμεν ἀδικοῦντες, ἵνα καὶ τὸ σοφίας πνεῦμα
 θεῖον μὴ ῥαδίως μεταναστὰν οἴχηται, πάμπολυν
 δὲ χρόνον καταμείνῃ παρ’ ἡμῖν, ἐπεὶ καὶ παρὰ 48 Μωυσεὶ τῷ σοφῷ<sup>β</sup> χρῆται γὰρ οὗτος ταῖς εἰρημικωτάταις σχέσεσιν ἢ ὡς ἐστὼς ἢ ὡς καθεζόμενος, ἡκιστα τρέπεσθαι καὶ μεταβολαῖς χρῆσθαι πε-φυκῶς· λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι “ Μωυσῆς καὶ ἡ κιβωτὸς
 οὐκ ἐκινήθησαν ” (Num. xiv. 44), ἦτοι παρόσον
 ὁ σοφὸς ἀχώριστος ἀρετῆς ἢ παρόσον οὔτε ἀρετὴ
 κινήτων οὔτε σπουδαῖος μεταβλητόν, ἀλλ’ ἐκάτερον
 ὀρθοῦ λόγου βεβαιότητι ἰδρυμένον· καὶ πάλιν ἐν 49 ἐτέροις· “ σὺ δὲ αὐτοῦ στήθι μετ’ ἐμοῦ ” (Deut.
 v. 31). λόγιόν ἐστι τοῦτο χρησθὲν τῷ προφήτῃ·
 στάσις τε καὶ ἡρεμία ἀκλινῆς ἢ παρὰ τὸν ἀκλινῶς
 ἐστῶτα αἰεὶ θεόν· ἀνάγκη γὰρ ὑγιεῖ κανόνι τὰ
 50 παρατιθέμενα εὐθύνεσθαι. διὰ τοῦτό μοι

<sup>a</sup> Or taking ἐξ ἑαυτῶν with νουθετεῖσθαι “ those whose nature is such that they do not reprove themselves.”

<sup>b</sup> i.e., Moses is the wise man, the ark virtue. Philo’s first interpretation lays stress on their remaining together, the second on the fact that neither of them moved.

ON THE GIANTS, 45-50

the flesh. They mean also "I am the sovereign and king and master." When the subject is in the presence of the ruler, or the slave of his master, wrongdoing is perilous. For when the ministers of punishment are near, those who of their own nature have no ears for reproof<sup>a</sup> are chastened and controlled by fear. God, since His fullness is everywhere, is near us, and since His eye beholds us, since He is close beside us, let us refrain from evil-doing. It were best that our motive should be reverence, but if not, let us at least tremble to think of the power of His sovereignty, how invincible it is, how terrible and inexorable in vengeance, when He is minded to use His power of chastisement. Thus may the divine spirit of wisdom not lightly shift His dwelling and be gone, but long, long abide with us, since He did thus abide with Moses the wise. For the posture and carriage of Moses whether he stand or sit is ever of the most tranquil and serene, and his nature averse to change and mutability. For we read "Moses and the ark were not moved" (Numb. xiv. 44). The reason may be either that the wise man cannot be parted from virtue, or that neither is virtue subject to movement nor the good man to change, but both are stayed on the firm foundation of right reason.<sup>b</sup> Again in another place we have "stand thou here with Me"<sup>c</sup> (Deut. v. 31). Here we have an oracle vouchsafed to the prophet; true stability and immutable tranquillity is that which we experience at the side of God, who Himself stands always immutable. For when the measuring-line is true all that is set beside must needs be made straight. This,

<sup>a</sup> Or "stand thou with Me Myself"; see on De Sacr. 8.

- δοκεῖ καὶ ὁ περισσὸς τῦφος, ἐπέκλησιν Ἰοθόρ, καταπλαγεῖς τὴν ἀρρεπὴ καὶ ἰσαιτάτην καὶ κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχουσιν προαίρεσιν τοῦ σοφοῦ σχετλιάζειν καὶ ἀναπυθάνεσθαι τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον. “διὰ τί σὺ κάθησαι μόνος;” (Exod. 51 xviii. 14) ἰδὼν γάρ τις τὸν ἐν εἰρήνῃ συνεχῆ πόλεμον ἀνθρώπων οὐ κατὰ ἔθνη καὶ χώρας καὶ πόλεις αὐτὸ μόνον συνιστάμενον, ἀλλὰ καὶ κατ’ οἰκίαν, μᾶλλον δὲ καὶ καθ’ ἓνα ἄνδρα ἕκαστον, καὶ τὸν ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἄλεκτον καὶ βαρὺν χειμῶνα, ὃς ὑπὸ βιαιοτάτης φορᾶς τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον πραγμάτων ἀναρριπίζεται, τεθαύμακεν εἰκότως, εἴ τις ἐν χειμῶνι εὐδίαν ἢ ἐν κλύδωνι κυμαινούσης θαλάττης
- 52 γαλήνην ἄγειν δύναται. ὁρᾶς ὅτι οὐδὲ ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς λόγος ἐνδιατρίβειν αἰεὶ καὶ ἐνσχολάζειν τοῖς ἀγίοις δόγμασι δυνάμενος ἄδειαν ἔσχηκεν
- [270] ἀνὰ πάντα καιρὸν πρὸς | αὐτὰ φοιτᾶν, ἀλλ’ ἅπαξ δι’ ἐνιαυτοῦ μόλις; (Lev. xvi. 2, 34) τὸ μὲν γὰρ μετὰ λόγου τοῦ κατὰ προφορὰν οὐ βέβαιον, ὅτι δυάς, τὸ δ’ ἄνευ φωνῆς μόνῃ ψυχῇ τὸ ὄν θεωρεῖν ἐχυρώτατον, ὅτι κατὰ τὴν ἀδιαίρετον ἴσταται μονάδα.
- 53 XII. “Ὡστε οὖν ἐν μὲν τοῖς πολλοῖς, τουτέστι τοῖς πολλὰ τοῦ βίου τέλη προτεθειμένοις, οὐ καταμένει τὸ θεῖον πνεῦμα, κὰν πρὸς ὀλίγον χρόνον ἀναστραφῆ, μόνῳ δὲ ἀνθρώπων εἶδει ἐνὶ παραγίνεται, ὃ πάντα ἀπαμφιασάμενον τὰ ἐν γενέσει καὶ τὸ ἐσωτάτω καταπέτασμα καὶ προκάλυμμα τῆς δόξης ἀνειμένη καὶ γυμνῇ τῇ διανοίᾳ πρὸς
- 54 θεὸν ἀφίξεται. οὕτως καὶ Μωυσῆς ἔξω τῆς

<sup>a</sup> See on De Sacr. 50, App. p. 490.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 503.

<sup>c</sup> A somewhat strange case of ἀνειμένη. Possibly read ἀνείμονι, a rare Homeric word (Od. iii. 348) which Philo uses

ON THE GIANTS, 50-54

I think, is why worldly-wise vanity<sup>a</sup> called Jethro, struck with amazement before the wise man's rule of life, which never swerves from its absolute consistency, never changes its tenor or its character, begins to scold and ply him with questions thus. "Why dost thou sit alone?" (Exod. xviii. 14). For indeed one who sees the perpetual war-in-peace of men, how it rages not only between nations and countries and cities, but also in the household and still more in each individual man—the fierce mysterious storm in the soul, whipped into fury by the wild blast of life and its cares—can well wonder that another should find fair weather in the storm, or calm amid the surges of the tempestuous sea.

Mark you that not even the high-priest Reason, though he has the power to dwell in unbroken leisure amid the sacred doctrines, has received free licence to resort to them at every season, but barely once a year (Lev. xvi. 2 and 34). For when we have reason (or thought) in the form of utterance<sup>b</sup> we have no constancy, because it is twofold. But when without speech and within the soul alone we contemplate the Existent, there is perfect stability, because such contemplation is based on the Indivisible Unity.

XII. Thus it is that in the many, those, that is, who have set before them many ends in life, the divine spirit does not abide, even though it sojourn there for a while. One sort of men only does it aid with its presence, even those who, having disrobed themselves of all created things and of the innermost veil and wrapping of mere opinion, with mind unhampered<sup>c</sup> and naked will come to God. So too in De Somn. i. 99, though in a different context from this. See also App. p. 503.

- παρεμβολῆς καὶ τοῦ σωματικοῦ παντὸς στρατοπέδου πῆξας τὴν ἑαυτοῦ σκηνήν (Exod. cxxiii. 7), τουτέστι τὴν γνώμην ἰδρυσάμενος ἀκλιῆ, προσκυνεῖν τὸν θεὸν ἄρχεται καὶ εἰς τὸν γνόφον, τὸν ἀειδῆ χώρον, εἰσελθὼν αὐτοῦ καταμένει τελούμενος τὰς ἱερωτάτας τελετάς. γίνεται δὲ οὐ
μόνον μύστης, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἱεροφάντης ὀργίων καὶ 55 ὑφηγησεται. τούτῳ μὲν οὖν τὸ θεῖον
ἀεὶ παρίσταται πνεῦμα πάσης ὀρθῆς ἀφηγούμενον
ὁδοῦ, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων, ὡς ἔφην, τάχιστα δια-ζεύγνυται, ὧν καὶ τὸν βίον ἐν εἴκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν
ἔτων ἀριθμῷ πεπλήρωκε· λέγει γάρ· “ ἔσονται αἱ
ἡμέραι αὐτῶν ἔτη ἑκατὸν εἴκοσι ” (Gen. vi. 3).
56 ἀλλὰ καὶ Μωυσῆς τῶν ἴσων γενόμενος ἔτων
τοῦ θνητοῦ βίου μετανίσταται (Deut. cxxiv. 7).
πῶς οὖν εἰκὸς ἰσοχρονίους εἶναι τοὺς ὑπαιτίους
τῷ πανσόφῳ καὶ προφήτῃ; εἰς μὲν οὖν τὸ παρὸν
ἀρκέσει τοῦτο εἰπεῖν, ὅτι τὰ ὁμώνυμα οὐ πάντως
ἔσθ’ ὅμοια, πολλάκις δὲ καὶ ὄλω γένει διεζευκται, καὶ ὅτι τὸ φαῦλον τῷ σπουδαίῳ δύναται μὲν καὶ
ἀριθμοὺς καὶ χρόνους ἔχειν τοὺς ἴσους, ἐπεὶ καὶ 57 ἀλλήλων διωκισμένας δυνάμεις. τὸν δὲ ἀκριβῆ
λόγον τῶν εἴκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν ἔτων ὑπερθησόμεθα
εἰς τὴν τοῦ προφητικοῦ βίου παντὸς ἐξέτασιν, ὅταν αὐτὸν ἱκανοὶ γενώμεθα μυεῖσθαι, νυνὶ δὲ τὰ
ἑξῆς λέγωμεν.
58 XIII. “ Οἱ δὲ γίγαντες ἦσαν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἐν

<sup>a</sup> Or “leading him in every right way.”

<sup>b</sup> See App. pp. 503, 504.

ON THE GIANTS, 54-58

Moses pitched his own tent outside the camp (Exod. xxxiii. 7) and the whole array of bodily things, that is, he set up his judgement where it should not be removed. Then only does he begin to worship God and entering the darkness, the invisible region, abides there while he learns the secrets of the most holy mysteries. There he becomes not only one of the congregation of the initiated, but also the hierophant and teacher of divine rites, which he will impart to those whose ears are purified.

He then has ever the divine spirit at his side, taking the lead in every journey of righteousness,<sup>a</sup> but from those others, as I have said, it quickly separates itself, from these to whose span of life he has also set a term of a hundred and twenty years, for he says "their days shall be a hundred and twenty years" (Gen. vi. 3). Yet Moses also departs from mortal life, just when he has reached that number of years (Deut. xxxiv. 7). How then can it be reasonable that the years of the guilty should match those of the sage and prophet? Well, for the present it will be enough to say that things which bear the same name are not in all cases alike, often indeed differ altogether in kind, and that the bad and the good, since they come before us knit in a twin existence,<sup>b</sup> may be equally matched in times and numbers, and yet their powers may be widely different and far apart from each other. But the closer discussion of this matter of a hundred and twenty years we will postpone till we inquire into the prophet's life as a whole, when we have become fit to learn its mystery. Now let us speak of the words which follow next.

XIII. "Now the giants were on the earth in

PHILO

- ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις" (Gen. vi. 4). ἴσως τις τὰ παρὰ τοῖς ποιηταῖς μεμυθευμένα περὶ τῶν γιγάντων οἶεται τὸν νομοθέτην αἰνίττεσθαι πλεῖστον ὅσον διεστηκότα τοῦ μυθοπλαστεῖν καὶ τοῖς
- 59 ἀληθείας ἔχουσιν αὐτῆς ἐπιβαίνειν ἀξιούντα. παρὸ καὶ εὐδοκίμους καὶ γλαφυρὰς τέχνας, ζωγραφίαν καὶ ἀνδριαντοποιίαν, ἐκ τῆς καθ' αὐτὸν πολιτείας
- [271] | ἐξήλασεν, ὅτι τὴν τοῦ ἀληθοῦς ψευδόμεναι φύσιν ἀπάτας καὶ σοφίσματα δι' ὀφθαλμῶν ψυχαῖς
- 60 εὐπαραγώγοις τεχνιτεύουσι. μῦθον μὲν οὖν οὐδένα περὶ γιγάντων εἰσηγείται τὸ παράπαν, βούλεται δὲ ἐκείνῳ σοὶ παραστήσαι, ὅτι οἱ μὲν γῆς, οἱ δὲ οὐρανοῦ, οἱ δὲ θεοῦ γεγόνασιν ἀνθρωπιγῆς μὲν οἱ θηρευτικοὶ τῶν σώματος ἡδονῶν ἀπολαυσίῃ τε καὶ χρήσιν ἐπιτηδεύοντες αὐτῶν καὶ πορισταὶ τῶν συντεινόντων εἰς ἐκάστην, οὐρανοῦ δὲ ὅσοι τεχνῖται καὶ ἐπιστήμονες καὶ φιλομαθεῖς— τὸ γὰρ οὐράνιον τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν ὁ νοῦς (νοῦς δὲ καὶ τῶν κατ' οὐρανὸν ἕκαστον) τὰ ἐγκύκλια καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἅπαξ ἀπάσας ἐπιτηδεύει τέχνας, παραθήγων καὶ ἀκονῶν ἔτι τε γυμνάζων καὶ συγκροτῶν ἐν
- 61 τοῖς νοητοῖς αὐτὸν—θεοῦ δὲ ἀνθρωποὶ ἱερεῖς καὶ προφῆται, οἷτινες οὐκ ἠξίωσαν πολιτείας τῆς παρὰ τῷ κόσμῳ τυχεῖν καὶ κοσμοπολίται γενέσθαι, τὸ δὲ αἰσθητὸν πᾶν ὑπερκύψαντες εἰς τὸν νοητὸν κόσμον μετανέστησαν κάκειθι ᾤκησαν ἐγγραφέντες ἀφθάρτων <καὶ> ἀσωμάτων ἰδεῶν πολιτεία.
- 62 XIV. Ὁ γοῦν Ἀβραάμ μέχρι μὲν διατρίβων

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 504.

ON THE GIANTS, 58-62

those days " (Gen. vi. 4). Some may think that the Lawgiver is alluding to the myths of the poets about the giants, but indeed myth-making is a thing most alien to him, and his mind is set on following in the steps of truth and nothing but truth. And therefore also he has banished from his own commonwealth " painting and sculpture, with all their high repute and charm of artistry, because their crafts belie the nature of truth and work deception and illusions through the eyes to souls that are ready to be seduced. So, then, it is no myth at all of giants that he sets before us; rather he wishes to show you that some men are earth-born, some heaven-born, and some God-born. The earth-born are those who take the pleasures of the body for their quarry, who make it their practice to indulge in them and enjoy them and provide the means by which each of them may be promoted. The heaven-born are the votaries of the arts and of knowledge, the lovers of learning. For the heavenly element in us is the mind, as the heavenly beings are each of them a mind. And it is the mind which pursues the learning of the schools and the other arts one and all, which sharpens and whets itself, aye and trains and drills itself solid in the contemplation of what is intelligible by mind. But the men of God are priests and prophets who have refused to accept membership in the commonwealth of the world and to become citizens therein, but have risen wholly above the sphere of sense-perception and have been translated into the world of the intelligible and dwell there registered as freemen of the commonwealth of Ideas, which are imperishable and incorporeal.

XIV. Thus Abraham, while he sojourned in the

PHILO

- ἦν ἐν τῇ Χαλδαίων γῇ τε καὶ δόξῃ, πρὶν μετονομασθῆναι, καλούμενος Ἀβράμ <ἦν> ἄνθρωπος οὐρανοῦ τὴν τε μετάρσιον καὶ τὴν αἰθέριον φύσιν ἐρευνῶν καὶ τὰ τε συμβαίνοντα καὶ τὰς αἰτίας καὶ εἴ τι ἄλλο ὁμοιότροπον φιλοσοφῶν—οὗ χάριν καὶ προσήσεως οἷς ἐπετήδευσεν ἔτυχεν οἰκείας· Ἀβράμ γὰρ ἐρμηνευθεὶς πατήρ ἐστι μετέωρος, ὄνομα τοῦ τὰ μετέωρα καὶ ἐπουράνια περισκοπομένου πάντα πάντῃ νοῦ πατρός, πατήρ δὲ τοῦ συγκρίματος ὁ νοῦς ἐστιν ὁ ἄχρισ αἰθέρος καὶ ἔτι
- 63 περαιτέρω μηκυνόμενος— ὅταν δὲ βελτιωθεὶς μέλλῃ μετονομάζεσθαι, γίνεται ἄνθρωπος θεοῦ κατὰ τὸ χρηστὸν αὐτῷ λόγιον “ ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ θεὸς σου· εὐαρέσκει ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ, καὶ γίνου ἄμεμπτος ”
- 64 (Gen. xvii. 1). εἰ δ’ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου θεὸς καὶ μόνος ὢν θεὸς καὶ αὐτοῦ κατὰ χάριν ἐξαιρετον ἰδίᾳ θεός, ἐξ ἀνάγκης δήπου καὶ αὐτὸς θεοῦ. καλεῖται γὰρ πατήρ ἐκλεκτὸς ἡχοῦς ἐρμηνευθεὶς Ἀβραάμ, ὁ τοῦ σπουδαίου λογισμός· ἐξειλεγμένος τε γὰρ καὶ κεκαθαρμένος καὶ πατήρ φωνῆς ἧ συνηχοῦμεν. ὁ δὲ τοιοῦτος τῷ ἐνὶ μόνῳ προσκεκλήρωται θεῷ, οὗ γινόμενος ὁπαδὸς εὐθύνει τὴν ἀτραπὸν τοῦ παντὸς βίου βασιλικῇ τῷ ὄντι χρώμενος ὁδῷ τῇ τοῦ μόνου βασιλέως καὶ παντοκράτορος, ἐπὶ μηδέτερα ἀποκλίνων καὶ ἐκτρεπόμενος.
- 65 XV. Οἱ δὲ γῆς παῖδες τὸν νοῦν ἐκβιβάσαντες

<sup>a</sup> Or “ with which we express our accord with reason.”

<sup>b</sup> Alluding to Num. xx. 17, cf. Quod Deus 159.

ON THE GIANTS, 62-65

land of the Chaldeans—sojourned, that is, in mere opinion—and with his name as yet unchanged from Abram, was a “man of heaven.” He searched into the nature of the supra-terrestrial and ethereal region, and his philosophy studied the events and changes which there occur, and their causes and the like. And therefore he received a name suitable to the studies which he pursued. For “Abram” being interpreted is the uplifted father, a name which signifies that mind which surveys on every side the whole compass of the upper world of heaven, called father-mind because this mind which reaches out to the ether and further still is the father of our compound being. But when he has risen to a better state and the time is at hand that his name should be changed, he becomes a man of God according to the oracle which was vouchsafed to him, “I am thy God: walk before Me according to My pleasure, and show thyself blameless” (Gen. xvii. 1). Now if the God of the Universe, the only God, is also his God in a special sense and by special grace, he surely must needs be himself a man of God. For he is called Abraham, by interpretation, “the elect father of sound,” that is, “the good man’s reasoning.” Good, because it is elect and purified; reasoning, because reason is the father of the voice, through which comes the sound of speech common to us all.<sup>a</sup> Such a reasoning has the one and only God for its owner; it becomes God’s companion and makes straight the path of its whole life, treading the true “King’s way,”<sup>b</sup> the way of the one sole almighty king, swerving and turning aside neither to the right nor to the left. XV. But the sons of earth have turned the steps of the mind out of the

[272] τοῦ λογίζεσθαι καὶ | μεταλλοιώσαντες<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὴν
 ἄψυχον καὶ ἀκίνητον σαρκῶν φύσιν — “ ἐγένοντο
 γὰρ οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν,” ἢ φησιν ὁ νομοθέτης
 (Gen. ii. 24) — τὸ ἄριστον ἐκιβδήλευσαν νόμισμα
 καὶ τὴν μὲν ἀμείνω καὶ οἰκείαν τάξιν ἔλιπον, πρὸς
 δὲ τὴν χεῖρω καὶ ἐναντίαν ἡυτομόλησαν ἄρξαντος
 66 τοῦ ἔργου Νεβρώδ· λέγει γὰρ ὁ νομοθέτης, ὅτι “ οὗτος ἤρξατο εἶναι γίγας ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ” (Gen.
 x. 8), ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ Νεβρώδ αὐτομόλησις· οὐ
 γὰρ ἐξήρκεσε τῇ παναθλία ψυχῇ μετὰ μηδετέρων
 στῆναι, ἀλλὰ προσχωρήσασα τοῖς ἐχθροῖς ὄπλα
 κατὰ τῶν φίλων ἤρατο καὶ φανερώς ἀνθεστῶσα
 αὐτοῖς ἐπολέμει. παρὸ καὶ ἀρχὴν τῷ Νεβρώδ τῆς
 βασιλείας ὑπογράφει Βαβυλῶνα, μετάθεσις δὲ καλεῖται Βαβυλῶν, συγγενὲς αὐτομολία καὶ ὄνομα ὀνόματι καὶ ἔργον ἔργω· παντὸς γὰρ αὐτομολούντος προοίμια γνώμης μεταβολὴ καὶ μετάθεσις.
 67 ἀκόλουθον <οὖν> ἂν εἴη λέγειν, ὅτι κατὰ τὸν
 ἱερώτατον Μωυσέα ὁ μὲν φαῦλος, ὡσπερ ἄοικος
 καὶ ἄπολις καὶ ἀνίδρυτος καὶ φυγὰς, οὕτως καὶ αὐτόμολος, ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος βεβαιότατος σύμμαχος
 τοσαῦτα εἰς γε τὸ παρὸν ἀρκούντως περὶ τῶν γιγάντων εἰρηκότες ἐπὶ τὰ ἀκόλουθα τοῦ λόγου
 τρεψώμεθα. ἔστι δὲ ταῦτα·

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μεταλλεύσαντες et alia.

ON THE GIANTS, 65-67

path of reason and transmuted it into the lifeless and inert nature of the flesh. For "the two became one flesh" as says the lawgiver (Gen. ii. 24). Thus they have debased the coin of truest metal and deserted from their post, left a place that was better for a worse, a place amid their own people for a place amid their foes. It was Nimrod who began this desertion. For the lawgiver says "he began to be a giant<sup>a</sup> on the earth" (Gen. x. 8), and his name means "desertion." To that most wretched of souls it was not enough to stand neutral, but he went over to the enemy, took up arms against his friends and withstood them in open war. And therefore to Nimrod Moses ascribes Babylon as the beginning of his kingdom. Now the name Babylon means alteration, a thought akin to desertion both in name and fact, for with every deserter change and alteration of purpose are the first steps. And so the conclusion would follow which Moses, holiest of men, lays down that, even as the wicked man is an exile without home or city or settlement, so also he is a deserter, while the good man is the staunchest of comrades. For the present sufficient has been said about the giants. Let us turn to the words which follow in the text.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> In R.V. "mighty."

<sup>b</sup> These words, i.e. Gen. vi. 4, are discussed in the next treatise Quod Deus; see Analytical Introduction.

APPENDIX TO ON THE CHERUBIM

§ 6. The stern and gloomy life, etc. Philo seems to interpret this first flight of Hagar as the tendency of youth to shrink from the stern discipline of the school, the Encyclia being for the moment treated as "the mind which is trained in them," as in De Cong. 180.

§ 8. ἐπιλάμψη . . . μεταδιώκων. The obvious way of taking this difficult and probably corrupt passage, namely to translate ἀποθανόντων τὰ πάθη χαρᾶς καὶ εὐφροσύνης by "died to the passions (or 'feelings') of joy and gladness," must be wrong, for as Isaac is regularly regarded as embodying these qualities (e.g. Leg. All. iii. 218), it is impossible that his parents should be thought of as discarding them at his birth. Two lines of correction seem possible, (a) as adopted in the translation, to bring χαρᾶς and εὐφροσύνης into co-ordination with εὐδαιμονίας, (b) to co-ordinate them with παιδιάς by reading χαρᾶς καὶ εὐφροσύνας. This in itself would still leave untouched the awkward gen. abs. ἐκλιπόντων and ἀποθανόντων, to say nothing of the difficulty involved in applying the phrase ἐκλιπεῖν τὰ γυναικεῖα (used of Sarah in Gen. xviii. 11) to Abraham also. These difficulties, however, might be removed by reading also ἐκλιπόν . . . ἀποθανόν (ἀπομαθόν?) . . . μεταδιώκων. (a) certainly as it stands leaves the sentence almost intolerable. Perhaps the least drastic correction would be to expel ὁ Ἰσαάκ as a gloss, put in its place καὶ τῶν and insert ὁ before καὶ παιδιάς. Thus the whole sentence will run, ἐπιλάμψη δὲ καὶ τὸ εὐδαιμονίας γένος καὶ τῶν ἐκλιπόντων τὰ γυναικεῖα καὶ ἀποθανόντων τὰ πάθη χαρᾶς καὶ εὐφροσύνης, ὁ καὶ παιδιάς, etc. The participial genitives in this case though still clumsy are less unnatural, and the difficulty of the application of ἐκλιπεῖν, etc., to Abraham is avoided

APPENDICES

as the phrase becomes a general statement. The obvious difficulty involved in (b) that it ascribes to Isaac what belongs to Sarah may be met by supposing that Philo equates Sarah's "ceasing from the manner of women" with the conception of Isaac (cf. De Post. 134).

[It would bring this passage into harmony with other passages, if what Philo wrote was ἐκλιπὸν . . . ἀποθανὸν . . . μεταδίδωκον (all in agreement with γένος), and χαρὰς καὶ εὐφροσύνας. It would seem not unlikely that a scribe, a little puzzled by the neuters ἐκλιπὸν and ἀποθανόν, and seeing ἐκλιπόντ- and ἀποθανόντ- before him, filled in the -ων in each word, producing ἐκλιπόντων and ἀποθανόντων. This led to the change of χαρὰς καὶ εὐφροσύνας into genitives singular. With ἐκλιπὸν and ἀποθανόν restored, the construction is the same as that in De Somniis, i. 68 ὃ τὸ αὐτομάθες γένος, Ἰσαάκ, ἐνδιδαιτᾶται, μηδέποτε . . . ἀφιστάμενον. Our passage is also illustrated by De Mut. Nom. 1 ἢ τὸ αὐτομάθες ἐπέλαμψε γένος, Ἰσαάκ, εὐπαθειῶν ἀρίστη, χαρὰ, and Quod Det. 46 τὸ μόνον ἀπαθὲς εἶδος ἐν γενέσει τὸν Ἰσαάκ, and De Mut. Nom. 261 τέξεται οὖν σοι ἡ ἀρετὴ υἱὸν γενναῖον ἄρρενα (Gen. xvii. 19) παντὸς ἀπηλλαγμένον θήλεος πάθους.

To Philo the fact that Isaac was sprung from one "as good as dead" and "the deadness of Sarah's womb" carried with it his deadness to passions and his complete immunity from all that was weak and womanish.—G. H. W.]

τὰς παίδων. We have perhaps here an allusion to Gen. xxi. 9, where according to the A.V. Sarah saw Ishmael 'mocking.' The R.V. margin, however, has 'playing,' and the LXX. παίζοντα. The fact that it was this "playing of children" which led to Ishmael's expulsion, would lend additional point to the words here.

§ 15. The idea of the lawfulness of falsehood under the circumstances here described is perhaps taken from Plato, Rep. iii. 389 b.

§ 25. The two hemispheres. Empedocles said εἶναι δύο ἡμισφαίρια, τὸ μὲν καθόλου πυρός, τὸ δὲ μικτὸν ἐξ ἀέρος καὶ ὀλίγου πυρός, ὅπερ οἴεται τὴν νύκτα εἶναι (see Ritter and Preller, 170). "Thus there arose two hemispheres which together form the concave sphere of heaven; the one is bright and consists entirely of fire; the other is dark and consists of air with isolated masses of fire sprinkled in it" (Zeller). Cf. Plato, Axiochus 376 A. A theory is mentioned that τοῦ πύλου ὄντος

ON THE CHERUBIM

σφαιροειδοῦς . . . , τὸ μὲν ἕτερον ἡμισφαίριον οἱ θεοὶ ἔλαχον οἱ οὐράνιοι, τὸ δὲ ἕτερον οἱ ὑπένερθεν.

§ 26. Named by men of old the standing-place. Cf. Philolaus (ap. Stob. Ecl. i. 21. 8) τὸ πρῶτον ἀρμωσθὲν τὸ ἐν ἐν τῷ μέσῳ τὰς σφαίρας ἐστία καλεῖται.

§ 28. Elsewhere, in Quaestiones in Gen. i. 58 (which only survives in the Armenian), Philo gives the same explanation of the Cherubim, but interprets the sword as "heaven."

§ 32. Neither fights nor keeps the ranks. Guilty, that is, of ἀστρατεία, shirking service, and λιποτάξιον, desertion in the field. Both these were punishable offences in Attic law.

§ 41. Leah. Leah (symbolizing virtue) is derived by Philo from the Hebrew words "lo" = not, and "lahah" = to be weary. The fool "says no" (ἀνανεύει) to her ἀσκησις which makes herself weary. Elsewhere (in De Mut. Nom. 254) the weariness is interpreted of the weariness which she causes, and again (De Migr. Abr. 145) of the weariness caused by the burden of wickedness which she has cast off. In ἀνανευομένη there is also a reference to Jacob's rejection of Leah in the actual story.

§ 42. Who have no other standards, etc. Cohn punctuates differently with a comma before τύφῳ and another after ἐθῶν, thus making ῥημάτων genitive after τύφῳ. But it seems unreasonable to break up the common collocation of ὀνόματα (nouns) with ῥήματα (verbs or phrases), the two together constantly standing for language as a whole.

τερθρελαὶ ἐθῶν, i.e. "mummeries of rituals." This is well illustrated by Dion. Hal. Ant. Rom. 19, where both the τύφος and the τερθρελα μυσική of the rites of Cybele are denounced.

§ 45. In her solitude. Apparently a fanciful deduction from the fact that Abraham's presence is not mentioned in Gen. xxi. 1. In the cases that follow there is the same deduction from the absence of any mention of the husband.

§ 49. His greater mysteries. Philo borrows from the Eleusinian mysteries this idea of "greater" and "less." Here Moses is the greater and the Prophets the less. For another application of the distinction see De Sacr. 62.

Husband.—The LXX. in Jer. iii. 4, which differs wholly from the Hebrew, has ἀρχηγόν. As ἀνδρα is necessary to Philo's argument he may be quoting some earlier rendering.

§§ 53-66. The argument of these sections seems to be as follows. Names do not ordinarily represent the thing named so absolutely that no further explanation is required. We should not know from the name Cain that he was first-born or male. But Moses' names are given on a different principle. To show what this is, in 57-64 Philo describes the primitive τρόπος (65) of the mind to think that it possesses all that it seems to have. Since the name "Possession" indicates this τρόπος clearly, Moses had no need to say anything more. Philo adopts partially the Stoic theory that names came originally φύσει, but restricts it to the names of the O.T.

APPENDICES

§ 69. Will-o'-the-wisps. The following passage suggests strongly that the reading adopted by the translator rather than that of Cohn is right. Chrysippus (on the distinction between φάντασμα, φανταστόν, φανταστικόν) says: φανταστικόν δέ ἐστι διάκενος ἔλκυσμός, πάθος ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ἀπ' οὐδενὸς φανταστοῦ γινόμενον, κάθ' ἅπερ ἐπὶ τοῦ σκιαμαχοῦντος καὶ κενοῖς ἐπιφέροντος τὰς χεῖρας . . . φάντασμα δέ ἐστιν ἐφ' ὃ ἐλκόμεθα κατὰ τὸν φανταστικὸν διάκενον ἔλκυσμόν. ταῦτα δὲ γίνεται ἐπὶ τῶν μελαγχολῶντων καὶ μεμνητότων (Arnim, Stoicorum Veterum Fragmenta, ii. 54. Cf. ibid. 64).

§ 79. Where there is reaction (ἀντιπεπονθός). Philo here utilizes a piece of Stoic grammar. Cf. Diog. Laert. vii. 64: ἀντιπεπονθότα δέ ἐστιν ἐν τοῖς ὑπταίσι, ἃ ὑπταία ὄντα ἐνεργήματα ἐστιν, ὅσον κείρεται· ἐμπεριέχει· (perhaps ἐμπαρέχει, see παρέχων ἑαυτόν, 79) γὰρ ἑαυτόν ὁ κειρόμενος, ἰ.ε. the ἀντιπεπονθότα are those among the passives which though passive (in form) represent actions, as κείρεται. The application of the term in these sections of Philo suggests that the grammatical meaning of the term was not so much that of the ordinary middle (I shave myself) as that of the causative middle "I get myself shaved." The term thus describes "having something done to us in response to something we have done ourselves."

A sheep or a fleece. δέρμα and κῶδιον might possibly be taken as accusatives, but the phraseology in the parallel passage, L.A. iii. 201 κείρεις ἐτέρως μὲν ἀνθρώπων ἐτέρως δὲ τὸ κῶδιον, suggests that they are nominatives. The translator is unable to make any suggestion as to the distinction between the two nouns, or why τὸ λεγόμενον is added.

§ 84. "All things," He says, "are mine." The phrase does not occur in the O.T. Perhaps print δλα "μου," φησίν, ἐστίν, and refer "He says" to the threefold "mine" in Numb. xxviii. 2. Cf. L.A. iii. 176.

ON THE CHERUBIM

§ 105. Grammar or literature. γραμματική always included the study of the poets and historians as well as what we call grammar, and in Philo's time this literary side was by far the most important.

By the means of fine music. The text implies that music is part of "geometry," a view which is very unusual, if not unprecedented, though the two, since geometry included arithmetic, were closely connected. The change of the nominatives γραμματική, etc., to -κῆ (datives), suggested by Cohn, would obviate this, but to represent knowledge as e.g. studying history by means of γραμματική is very harsh. Cohn confessed that his emendation did not satisfy him.

Rhetoric, etc. The allusion in this sentence is (a) to the regular division of rhetoric into (1) "invention" (εὑρεσις including τάξις), (2) style or expression (ἐρμηγεία), (3) delivery (ὑπόκρισις); and (b) to the expression of the gentler emotions (ἡθῆ) and that of the stronger emotions (πάθη).

§§ 109-112. For the sense of this and the preceding sections cf. Epictetus, Diss. i. 12. 16 διέταξε δὲ θέρος εἶναι καὶ χειμῶνα καὶ φορὰν καὶ ἀφορίαν καὶ ἀρετὴν καὶ κακίαν καὶ πάσας τὰς τοιαύτας ἐναντιότητας ὑπὲρ συμφωνίας τῶν ὄλων.

§ 114. The other gradations. Of the five gradations left untranslated ἡβῶν perhaps = age of puberty, while πρωτογένειος speaks for itself, and the other three fall of course between the limits thus indicated.

Rebirth. Cf. a passage in Quaest. in Ex. ii. 46, where, according to the Latin version of the Armenian, the calling of Moses to the Mount is said to typify the "secunda nativitas sive regeneratio priore melior." If we are to suppose that this "regeneration" is absorption in the Divine and occurs at death, the correction to ἀσύγκριτοι ἄποιοι, which is also wanted for the balance of the two clauses, seems necessary. But it is possible that Philo is following the Stoic doctrine, according to which the souls (of the good at any rate) survived the general conflagration (ἐκπύρωσις) which was to be followed by the "reconstruction" (παλιγγενεσία); see Arnim, l.c. ii. 802-822. In this case Cohn's reading might stand; for the soul through this interregnum, though ἀσώματος, would still be σύγκριτος (of fire and air) and ποῖος.

APPENDICES

§ 115. Philo adapts from the Attic orators the technical language used of a wife who formally claimed divorce or separation from her husband. If the husband did not agree, an ἀπολείψεως δίκη had to be brought before the Archon (πρὸς τὸν ἀρχοντα) (see Dict. of Ant., art. "Divortium"). Cf. Quod Det. 143, where also we have the phrase (apparently in general use: see Bekker, Anecd. 430. 30) χρηματίζειν ἀπόλειψιν.

§ 121. Licence of language. κατάχρησις (abusio) is the name used by the grammarians for the figure of speech involved in such a phrase as the "aedificare equum" of Virgil (aedificare being properly to build a house only).

The land shall not be sold at all. Philo is still quoting Lev. xxv. 23, which he cited correctly in 108. Here, however, he substitutes πράσει for εἰς βεβαίωσιν, probably from a reminiscence of Deut. xxi. 14, where the phrase πράσει οὐ παθήσεται is used. The alteration, though it makes a considerable difference in the meaning of the text, hardly affects the argument.

§ 123. Hawking his goods. Properly speaking the word ἐπειωνίζων means "selling cheap," and this shade of meaning makes good sense in De Gig. 32. On the other hand here and elsewhere there is no special point in the cheapness, and probably the word merely conveys some measure of contempt. If, however, the ἐαυτοῦ is to be pressed, the idea might be "pressing his own goods upon the purchaser and thus underselling his competitors."

§ 125. πρὸς γὰρ τὴν γένεσιν, etc. Philo's four causes are evidently based on Aristotle's four, (1) the οὐσία or τὸ τί ἦν εἶναι (formal cause), (2) the ὕλη or ἐξ οὗ (material cause), (3) the ἀρχὴ τῆς κινήσεως or τὸ ποιῶν (efficient cause), (4) τὸ οὐ ἕνεκα or ἀγαθόν (final cause). But for the "formal cause" he substitutes the "instrument," a view to which his theory of the λόγος naturally led. He repeats the first three of the causes in Quaest. in Gen. i. 58, and all four in De Providentia (also only extant in the Armenian). There, however, the "ad quid?" is answered by "ut sit argumentum," i.e. apparently, to give a proof of his goodness. Here there is an evident confusion of his treatment of the world as compared with his treatment of the house. The ἀγαθότης of God does not correspond with the σκέπη furnished by the house.

ON THE CHERUBIM

Philo is perhaps misled by Plato, Timæus 29 ε, where the question, "why did God make the world?" is answered in the first instance by ἀγαθὸς ἦν, but the true answer, namely that He wanted to make all things like Himself, follows directly.

APPENDIX TO THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN

§§ 5-7. In these sections we have a suggestion of the idea, to which Philo frequently recurs, of the "educational trinity," stated by Aristotle in the form παιδεία δεῖν τριῶν, φύσεως, διδασκαλίας, ἀσκήσεως. Philo takes as the typical examples of these three, Isaac, Abraham and Jacob, see particularly De Abr. 52 ff., where Isaac is ὁ αὐτοματοῦς ἐπιστήμης ἀξιωθεὶς, Abraham represents οἱ μαθήσει καὶ διδασκαλίᾳ προκόψαντες (in De Abr. he is called the σύμβολον διδασκαλικῆς ἀρετῆς), while Jacob as usual is the ἀσκητῆς.

§ 9. Ex. vii. 1. Philo's treatment of this text here is worth comparing with his other explanations. In Leg. All. i. 40 the mind is the god of the unreasoning element, cf. De Mut. Nom. 19. In De Migr. Abr. 84, the inspired mind is addressed as god, while in Quod Det. 161 the fact that the wise man is called the "god" of the fool is used as an illustration of the difference between reality and "opinion"; for even the wise man cannot be God in reality. To argue, therefore, as he does here, that an attribute which is inconsistent with God must also be inconsistent with Moses is to give the text a meaning which he shrinks from elsewhere.

§ 10. Such is the meaning, etc. The translation assumes that Philo here sums up the general result of the first ten sections which have been a homily on Gen. iv. 2. It would be possible, however, to take it in closer connexion with the immediately preceding sentences, "even so it is when God adds," etc.

§ 12. Ex. iv. 10. The LXX. has οὐκ ἰκανός (some mss. εὐλογός) εἰμι πρὸ τῆς χθῆς, οὐδὲ πρὸ τῆς τρίτης ἡμέρας, οὐδὲ ἀφ' οὗ ἤρξω λαλεῖν τῷ θεράποντι σου. Our R.V. has "neither heretofore nor since thou hast spoken," i.e. neither at the earlier nor the later date, and presumably this was the meaning of the  $\iota\kappa\kappa$ . Philo, however, by ignoring the second  $\sigma\delta\delta\epsilon$  takes it to convey the idea that Moses' contempt of τὸ εἶλογον only begins with his converse with God.

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN

His use of εἶλογος here and in other quotations of the text shows clearly that he actually had that reading.

§ 13. The fabulous inventions, etc. Lit. "the conjectural and insecure myth-making of eloquence (or 'the eloquent')", or, taking εὐλόγων εἰκαστικὴν together, "which guesses at probabilities" (ὁ ψευδῶν εἰκαστικός, De Cher. 116, is in favour of this). Philo often uses εἶλογος in the ordinary sense of "reasonably probable," but at other times, influenced perhaps by Ex. iv. 10, in the double sense of (a) fine language, (b) merely probable as opposed to certain. It is impossible in translation to reproduce this double sense. The best modern equivalent would be "rhetorical," were it not for the risk of confusion with the ancient technical use of "rhetoric" which is so common in Philo. There is a very similar phrasing in Quod Det. 38.

§§ 15-16. The thought of these sections is developed more fully in Quis Rer. Div. Her. 293-299, where four periods are indicated: (1) early childhood; (2) boyhood, the dangers of which are described in words very similar to our passage; (3) the stage in which the healing influences of philosophy are brought to bear upon the passions; (4) when the soul definitely turns away from sin to wisdom. He does not mean here that passion ordinarily ceases with youth, but that, in the case of the converted, conversion does not usually come till youth is past.

§ 17. Named after his folly. This is very far-fetched even for Philo. He interpreted the name of Esau from the Hebrew as (1) a thing made (ποίημα); (2) an oak or tree. In De Cong. 61 he says that the first signifies a fiction (πλάσμα) and the life of folly is of the nature of fiction, and that the second signifies a stubborn nature which takes folly for its counsellor.

§§ 21-33. On the reasons why these sections were omitted in earlier editions of the treatise see Anal. Introd. p. 93. This curious parable, which particularly in the list of nearly 150 vices goes far beyond anything else to be found in Philo, is obviously based on the famous fable of Xenophon, Mem. ii. 1, there ascribed to Prodicus, in which Vice and Virtue plead with Hercules when he stands at the crossways of life. There are several definite reminiscences of this. It is also no doubt directly aimed at the doctrines of Epicurus.

APPENDICES

§ 21. Her eyebrows are smothered in paint. Greek ladies sometimes painted their eyebrows with a preparation of soot (ἄσβολος) or of antimony (στίμιμι), see Dict. of Ant. s.v. "fucus."

[ἐγκεκαλυμμένη τὰς ὀφρῶς. Philo perhaps wrote ἐγκεκαλυμμένη. There is ground for the belief that ὀφρυκολάπτῃς may have been as familiar to Philo as δρυκολάπτῃς to Aristophanes (Birds 480, 979) or δρυκολάπτῃς to Aristotle. A pair of tweezers is the ordinary implement for "eyebrow-shaping" (as it is called in Bond Street), but a razor is sometimes used, at all events in Germany. 'Carve' or 'chisel' is the secondary meaning of κολάπτω, 'I peck.'—G. H. W.]

§§ 35-41. This eulogy of πόνος is based on the similar one put into the mouth of Virtue in the Prodician fable.

§ 37. Severe harmony. An adaptation of the Platonic idea of virtue as a harmony of the soul together with the Stoic view that moral evil is a relaxation of its τόνος (tension, muscular vigour).

Higher forms of art. The Stoics said (e.g. Stob. Ecl. ii. 6. 4) that virtue was a τέχνη περι ὄλον τὸν βίον and also (ibid.) that the chief virtues were both ἐπιστήμαι and τέχναι. To judge from De Cong. 142 Philo would hardly have admitted the latter statement.

§ 45. After hearing this. These words show that the literary device of making Virtue discourse has been maintained up to this point, though not very skilfully in the last three sections. To put these O.T. illustrations into the mouth of the woman described in 26 is hardly appropriate.

§ 50. Worldling. Lit. "man of superfluity." Philo explains the epithet in several places. Jethro is the vanity which deals with the varying customs, unsanctioned by nature, and thus serves to deceive the true life (De Agr. 43); or the seeming wise who perpetually changes according to the groundless opinions of men (De Ebr. 37); or jeers at things equal and necessary to life and glorifies the inequalities of superfluous wealth (De Mut. Nom. 103). "Worldling" seems to the translator to combine these ideas better than any other word.

§ 51. Earlier books. No such passage in the earlier books

THE SACRIFICES OF ABEL AND CAIN

survives. But in De Agr. 21 ff. a "tiller of the soil" is explained as one who lives to satisfy the wants of the body.

§ 57. Now the covenant, etc. The argument seems to be: The covenant means God's gifts, God's gifts are perfect; virtue is perfect; therefore virtue is God's gift, and not man's merit.

§ 62. Lesser mysteries. See on De Cher. 49. The Passover represents the first stage of initiation in which the soul is escaping from the Egypt of passion and entering upon its life of practice. This is a lower stage than the "mysteries" described in 59-60, where the soul gains a perception of God.

§ 63. She must grip . . . sandals. The idea perhaps is that as the soul and body are bound together, the former must keep a tight hold of the latter. It thus corresponds to a foot which fits tightly into the sandal and does not allow it to slip.

§ 68. Self-extension. For the Stoic conception of "tension" (τόνος) including both expansion and condensation see Zeller, Stoics (Eng. trans.), p. 140.

§ 80. It has the vigour. In εὐτόνωσ we have again an allusion to the favourite Stoic idea of "tension" (see on 37). Here, however, the πάθη are conceived of as having their own τόνος, which is relaxed or weakened by the τόνος of reason. The same idea is no doubt present in the ἐκλύεται of 81.

§ 82. Reason. To preserve the continuity of the argument, this word has been retained in this and the following sections. But clearly Philo drifts away from the faculty of reason to its expression in definite thoughts and words.

§ 120. Natural ability. Reuben is several times taken as the type of εὐφύια. But it is strange to find this quality, which is elsewhere associated with φύσις and τὸ αὐτομαθές (Isaac) rather than with ἀσκησις (Jacob), taken here as the source of labour and progress of Jacob, and contrasted with the "inspired contemplation" of Israel.

§ 122. The number sacred to education. Philo seems to associate the "perfect" number ten ( $1 + 2 + 3 + 4$ ) with education, partly at least because he found in Lev. xxvii. 32 that "every tenth which comes under the rod shall be holy" and he was convinced that the rod was παιδεία (De Cong. 94). Also he seems to have argued that the μέση παιδεία was the minimum which God would accept, and that therefore the "ten" of Gen. xviii. 32, must refer to that. This view is developed in De Mut. 226 ff.

APPENDICES

§ 123. Due to the physician's neglect. This translation involves giving a very unnatural meaning to παρά with the acc. So far as the use of παρά goes, it would be better to take it "through the indifference (of the relatives) caused by them" (i.e. the physicians whose non-attendance leads the relatives to think that things are going well). But this rendering is very harsh and unnatural. The Papyrus has for παρ' αὐτοῦς the unintelligible ἀνη ουτως which may perhaps conceal some illegible phrase = "apparent," which the mss. tried to patch up.

§ 136. The brain or the heart. The Stoics for the most part decided on the heart. For Chrysippus's arguments see Arnim, Stoic. Vet. Frag. ii. 885 ff.; Zeller, Stoics (Eng. Trans.), p. 214. The opponents could appeal to Plato, who located τὸ λογιστικόν in the head.

Also in the lawgiver's words. Philo could find plenty of examples of "heart" e.g. Deut. v 29. For "brain" or "head" he may have relied on Gen. iii. 15 LXX.

§ 137. Nothing save the excrement and hide. Philo's memory has played him false. There is no such exception ordered with regard to the ὀλοκαύτωμα. He is perhaps thinking of the directions about the "sin offering" in Lev. iv. 11, where, however, the hide and excrement are only mentioned with the head, legs, etc., to show that the whole animal must be burnt.

APPENDIX TO THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER

§ 1. And Cain said . . . plain. These words are not in the Hebrew text.

§ 7. The three kinds of good things. This classification is frequently used both by Aristotle (e.g. Eth. Nic. i. 1098 b) and by the Stoics (S.V.F. iii. 136). The doctrine of the necessity of all three is found in Aristotle, though not with the implication here made that they are equally important; e.g. "It will not be denied that, as there are three classes, external goods, goods of the body, and goods of the soul, the happy man must possess all these" (Politics 1323 f., Welldon's translation).

§ 9. Nothing is a good thing, etc. For the Stoic doctrine that τὸ καλόν ("the morally beautiful," honestum in Cicero) is the only good see Index to S.V.F. No Greek passage, however, seems to reproduce the dogma exactly in this form. Cf. De Post. 133, where it is definitely called Stoic.

§ 16. δι' ἀγωγῆς νομίμου ἢ καὶ παιδείσεως ὀρθῆς. In the former clause both noun and adjective suggest practical obedience. For ἀγωγή is a leading along a path, and νόμιμος is one ἀκολουθητικός τῷ νόμῳ καὶ πρακτικός τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ προσταττομένων (S.V.F. iii. 613). In the second clause the word παιδείσις takes us into the school-room, the domain of the νομικός, who is ἐξηγητικός τοῦ νόμου (ibid.). Philo implies that practical training is the more effective way of instilling "healthy principles." He can hardly have used the words without thinking of God's leading of His people by the hand of Moses.

§ 34. Training for dying. This use of the Platonic phrase should be compared with that in De Gig. 14. Here in the mouth of the worldly it connotes the wretchedness of the philosopher's life. There he is training to die to the life of the body in order to gain the higher life. Philo is probably thinking here of Phaedo 64 A, where, when Socrates uses the equivalent phrase ἐπιτηδεύει ἀποθνήσκειν, Simmias laughs and says "that is exactly what my unphilosophical countrymen would say of the philosophers." It is a good example of Philo's intimate knowledge of Plato.

APPENDICES

§ 39. All the qualities. ιδέαι is a technical word in rhetoric for the various qualities of ἔρμηνεῖα (= "style" or "expression"). Hermogenes Περὶ ἰδεῶν enumerates and treats of seven of these, the three chief of which are clearness, greatness, beauty.

§ 46. The days of my father's mourning. Philo to suit his allegorical interpretation takes this to mean "the days when my father will mourn."

§ 49. Separate . . . not separate. The Stoics classified material things (σώματα) as (a) διεστῶτα, e.g. an army, (b) συννημμένα, e.g. a house or ship, (c) ἡνωμένα, e.g. animals (S. V. F. ii. 366 f.).

§ 50. Judgements, or "opinions." In De Post. 79 and 112 the two wives are more or less identified respectively with Epicureanism and the Aristotelian (?) belief in the value of bodily and external things.

§ 57. Inquiry . . . question. πίσμα or πεύσις is a question requiring an explanatory answer as "Where is Abel?" ἐρώτημα requires only "yes" or "no."

§ 64. The number 50 is perfect. Why so? In De Vita Cont. 65 it is said to be the holiest and most "natural" (φυσικώτατος) of numbers because it is formed from the hypotenuse (δύναμις) of the right-angled triangle, which is the beginning of the generation of all things. This reason seems to us absurd. We can dimly see that it applies to 5 (see De Op. 97), but we do not see on what principle it is extended to 50.

§§ 84 f. Whose roots He caused, etc. The thought and much of the diction of the sections is from Timaeus 90 A ff. : "As to the supreme form of soul that is within us, God has given it to each of us as a guiding genius, even that . . . which dwells in the summit of our body, and raises us from earth towards our celestial affinity, seeing that we are of no earthly, but of heavenly growth (οὐράνιον φυτόν), since to heaven, whence in the beginning was the birth of our soul,

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER

the diviner part attaches the head or root (τὴν κεφαλὴν καὶ ῥίζαν ἡμῶν ἀνακρεμαννόν) and makes our whole body upright" (Archer-Hind's translation). He adds as a note to κεφαλὴν καὶ ῥίζαν "i.e. as a plant draws its sustenance through its roots from its native earth, so does the soul draw her spiritual sustenance from her native heavens."

§ 91. The point seems to be that physical suffering makes a direct appeal to God. Blood is the principle of our physical life. The physical sufferings of Israel in Egypt cried out to God. In neither case was the complaint conveyed by articulate speech, but in the one case by the blood spilt, in the other by groans. By each of these a meaning (νοῦς) was conveyed, and speech is, after all, only conveyance of a meaning. Why does Philo say that the appeal is sometimes voluntary, sometimes involuntary? Is the stress here on the latter? Does he mean that what we feel reaches God when we are not consciously praying?

§ 118. Two cakes. The idea is obtained by a combination of the descriptions of the Manna in Exod. xvi. 31 and Numb. xi. 8. In the first "its taste was as an ἔγκρις in honey": in the second "its pleasure was as an ἔγκρις from oil." The ἔγκρις is defined elsewhere as a sweetmeat made from honey and oil. Philo passes with bewildering rapidity through the different suggestions of oil, (a) as rushing in a stream, (b) as giving light, (c) as an element in food.

§ 120. Corresponding states of blessedness. εὐπάθειαι is used here not exactly in the Stoic sense. With them the three εὐπάθειαι are not the opposites of the πάθη, but reasonable forms of them. Thus χαρά "corresponds" not to λύπη as here, but to ἡδονή (as in L.A. iii. 107), while the εὐπάθεια corresponding to φόβος is not as here ἐλπίς (which is not one of the εὐπάθειαι) but εὐλάβεια ("caution"). So too the εὐπάθεια corresponding to ἐπιθυμία is βούλησις ("wishing"), while λύπη has no corresponding εὐπάθεια.

§ 124. The poetry which God makes. The transition to poetry, which sounds strange in English, is easy enough in Greek, where ποιητής is both "maker" and "poet."

§ 134. Well governed city. Philo means Sparta. See Plutarch's Moralia 41 v and 801 v.

§ 135. While the translators have not ventured to correct the text according to their suggestion of πολιτικοῦ (or πολιτικώτερου) ἕτερον for πολιτικώτερον, they believe it to be very probable, taking it in the sense of another lesson beside the above-mentioned which belongs rather to the civil sphere. The functions of the πολιτικός, though perfectly legitimate and often imperative for the Wise Man, both to Philo and the Stoics, stand to him on a somewhat lower plane than pure philosophy. Compare the contrast of πρὸς πολιτείαν and πρὸς ἀλήθειαν φιλοσοφῶν in § 7. The lesson that only the good man's advice can benefit the State is essentially "political," and this which follows is as clearly of the other type.

APPENDICES

§ 141. And of course rulers, etc. Or "laws count as rulers." This would be an odd use of γράφονται (? ἐγγράφονται), but such a translation is naturally suggested by De Vita Mosis ii. 4, where we are told that "the King is a living law, and the Law a just King." The thought may have been suggested by Plato, Symposium 196 c οἱ πόλεως βασιλῆς νόμοι; cf. Gorgias 484 v, Aristot. Rhet. iii. 3.

§ 145. Apprentices . . . masters . . . craft. Or "pupils . . . schoolmasters . . . arts," i.e. the Encyclia, particularly "grammar" and "rhetoric," regularly called "arts." The discipline of the "pedagogue," the school-teacher, and the parent or guardian, form three natural stages in the experience of the growing boy.

Appoints. Perhaps an allusion to the Attic law by which it was the duty of the Archon to appoint guardians, where the father's will left no instructions. (See Dictionary of Antiquities, s.v. Epitropus.) Philo's clear allusion to Attic law in 143 makes this the more probable.

§ 154. The Creator had left nothing, etc. Almost a quotation from Timaeus 32 c, where God is said to have used up the whole of the four elements in making the Universe, ἵνα τέλειον ἐκ τέλειων τῶν μερῶν εἴη.

§ 157. For the good things that are. The words here put into Cain's mouth are intended to represent the teaching of the Epicureans, whose view that bodily pleasure was a necessary element in happiness easily lent itself to misrepresentation. See the words of Epicurus given by Diogenes Laertius (x. 6): "I know not how to conceive the good apart from the pleasures of taste, sexual pleasures, the pleasures of sound and the pleasures of beautiful form" (Hicks's translation). So too in the concluding words of the section we have a hit at the doctrine that we choose the virtues on account of pleasure and not for their own sake, as we use the physician's art for the sake of health (Diog. Laert. x. 138).

THE WORSE ATTACKS THE BETTER

§ 160. ἀναγκαίως. In Timaeus 69 D ἀναγκαίως is used of the way in which the inferior agents in the Creation performed their somewhat baffling tasks. It has been rendered there "as best they might" (L. & S. 1927). Moses is faced with a task more baffling even than theirs. It is to express in human speech the Name of God. He does it "as best he may."

§ 178. Scylla. The allusion is to Odyssey xii. 118 ἡ δὲ τοι οὐ θνητή, ἀλλ' ἀθάνατον κακὸν ἔστι.

APPENDIX TO THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN

§ 1. Epicurus. Philo as usual treats Epicureanism rather superficially. The Epicurean in Cicero, De Natura Deorum (i. 48), says, "hominis esse specie deos confitendum est," but continues, "nec tamen ea species corpus est, sed quasi corpus." For the whole subject see Zeller, Epicureans, Engl. Trans. pp. 440 f.

§ 5. The loan which was lent, etc. Cf. Timaeus 42 ε, where the "young gods" in making the human body take from the four elements δανειζόμενοι μόρια ὡς ἀποδοθησόμενα πάλι.

§ 16. τὸ μέγιστον (see crit. note) may be defended by Thucydides' use in iv. 70 fin., ii. 65. 1, iii. 63. 2, viii. 76. 6 and 92. 6, iv. 108. 4. But the defence is shaky.

§ 57. θησαυρίζονται. This word is suggested by the "store-cities" of Exod. i. 11, and also perhaps by βουνός = a pile, from which the LXX. coined the verb βουνίζω = "I pile up," "accumulate." (See Ruth ii. 14, 16.)

Heliopolis. It is not certain whether this was the On, Rameses, or Beth Schemesch of the Hebrew Scriptures, for it has claims to be regarded as any one of them (Dict. of Geography). When Philo was born its ruins had nearly vanished (ibid.).

§ 59. By τὸν βουνὸν τοῦτον Philo means the mind or conscience. The scene of the covenant between Jacob and Laban was Mount Gilead, which signifies in Hebrew "Heap of Witness."

Some words seem to have dropped out before πρὸ τούτων τῶν πόλεων, such as ὁ δὲ βουνὸς οὗτος or ἡ δὲ πόλις τῆς μαρτυρίας. In 62 some such title is claimed for Hebron by the words μνήμας ἐπιστήμης <καὶ> σοφίας θησαυροφυλακοῦσα. To understand the argument we must note (1) that Zoan carries with it all the cities of Egypt, 62; (2) that Hebron

THE POSTERITY AND EXILE OF CAIN

as interpreted in 62 is equated to the βουβός of 59, and therefore a text which states that Hebron was built before Zoan is equivalent to "the city of the good mind is built before (i.e. ranks above) all the cities of the body or foolish mind."

§ 62. Command of evacuation. For ἀπόκρισις = "discharge" (from the body) see L.A. i. 13. κακία is a thing to be expelled from the social system.

§ 70. He shall set him alive, etc. The allegory is worked out as follows. The ἀλογος βίος is evil tendencies still alive (which they are not in the case of those whose age or circumstances put them outside temptation). We must atone for them by fighting against them, and finally banish them.

§ 79. Ada. That Ada, the "witness," stands here for, or at least is exemplified by, the Epicurean school is proved beyond doubt by the use of Epicurean terms. λελα κινήσις comes from the Epicurean definition of pleasure (Usener, Epicurea, pp. 279, 280). ἐπιβολή, translated by Lucretius animi iniectus, is a very leading term for "the act of apprehension which the mind or senses must direct to the ἐνάρρημα ('the clear or close view of phenomena') which may result in the ἐπιμαρτύρησις ('confirmation') or ἀντιμαρτύρησις ('refutation') of the δοξαζόμενα ('opinion formed by the mind on the data of sense-perception')" (C. Bailey). Philo gives an ethical twist to what properly belongs to the Epicurean theory of cognition.

§ 81. Treating as alike things widely different. Or "treating as things indifferent (in the Stoic sense) things which the wise man holds 'superior' and worthy of pursuit."

§§ 95 ff. The ordinance is this. The meaning of these difficult sections is perhaps as follows. Toil is unnecessary, when you have reached perfection; yet if you still continue to toil, you will have both the toil and the perfection and thus attain absolute holiness. Either without the other is not "absolutely holy," for that is stated in the text to have three necessary elements: (1) number, i.e. the first stage of virtue that can be "counted" as anything; (2) the rod, or discipline, which is toil; (3) the number 10 or perfection. That "exchanging" toil for perfection really means that you have both is not unintelligible; the effort is lost in success, but may be said to remain with us. The words rendered "While what is beautiful is a perfect good, toil is an imperfect boon," may perhaps be paraphrased "The morally beautiful is a good thing to which it is essential to have attained its end; toil is a beneficial thing, whether it reach the goal or no." They are "of equal value" as being equally essential to the truest holiness.

APPENDICES

§ 97. Marshaled. τάξαντι = "set us in a rank" corresponds with ἀριθμός above, as παιδεύσαντι corresponds with the "rod," and τελεσφορήσαντι with the "tenth."

§ 104. So too with the ear. Wendland in Philologus 57, p. 267, calls attention to the resemblance of this description of the ear's structure to that placed by Cicero in De Nat. Deor. ii. 159 in the mouth of a Stoic.

§ 108. Speech . . . admits of endless variations. Philo here and in the following sections adopts the rhetorical idea of the περιστάσεις (circumstantiae) which determined the nature of the speech required on each occasion. These, though sometimes made more numerous, were often reduced as here to six, persons, matters or subjects, causes, manners, times, places. In Latin and mediaeval rhetoric the six often appear as quis, quid, cur, quomodo, quando, ubi. As boys were regularly drilled in this classification in their early exercises (progymnasmata) it was very familiar to the general reader. See Ernesti's Lexicon Rhetoricum, s.v. περίστασις.

§ 109. οὐδὲ τὰς τυχοῦσας. Wendland would prefer, instead of this correction for the οὐδὲ τύχης of the mss., to read οὐδὲ <τὰς τυχοῦσας> τύχης, on the ground that "fortune" is included in the circumstantiae personarum by the rhetoricians with "nature," "age," and others.

§ 113. Easy stages. The thought of this sentence evidently comes from Plato, Cratylus 211 c, where the process by which we arrive at first principles is described as using ἐπαναβασμολί. Its application here, however, is obscure. But it is worth noting that in 2 Kings xx. 9 ff. σκιά and ἀναβασμολί (= "steps on the sundial") are four times repeated in close conjunction. Philo in the preceding section has dwelt on the word σκιά. Does he perchance mean that, as the shadows on the sundial are due to the sun, so all the shadowy goods of life are meant to lift our thoughts to what is substantial? Is Hezekiah's vainglorious display of his treasures to the envoys of the king of Babylon the link between the sundial of Ahaz and the inscriptions at Delphi?

Delphi. Perhaps Philo is thinking of the inscription set

PHILO

IN TEN VOLUMES (AND TWO SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUMES)

III

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY

F. H. COLSON, M.A.

LATE FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE

* AND

THE REV. G. H. WHITAKER, M.A.

LATE FELLOW OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD

MCMLXXXVIII

American
ISBN 0-674-99272-5

British
ISBN 0 434 99247 X

First printed 1930
Reprinted 1954, 1960, 1968, 1988

Printed in Great Britain by
Thomson Litho Ltd, East Kilbride, Scotland

CONTENTS OF VOLUME III

	PAGE
PREFACE . . . . .	vii
LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS . . . . .	ix
ON THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD (QUOD DEUS IMMUTABILIS SIT)—
Introduction . . . . .	3
Text and Translation . . . . .	10
ON HUSBANDRY (DE AGRICULTURA)—
Introduction . . . . .	104
Text and Translation . . . . .	108
CONCERNING NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER (DE PLANTATIONE)—
Introduction . . . . .	207
Text and Translation . . . . .	212
ON DRUNKENNESS (DE EBRIETATE)—
Introduction . . . . .	308
Text and Translation . . . . .	318
ON THE PRAYERS AND CURSES UTTERED BY NOAH WHEN HE BECAME SOBER (DE SOBRIETATE)—
Introduction . . . . .	438
Text and Translation . . . . .	442

CONTENTS

APPENDICES—	PAGE
I. To Quod Deus immutabilis sit . . . . .	483
II. To De Agricultura . . . . .	490
III. To De Plantatione . . . . .	494
IV. To De Ebrietate . . . . .	500
V. To De Sobrietate . . . . .	510

PREFACE TO VOLUME III

THE death of Mr. Whitaker in May does not prevent his name from appearing as joint translator in this volume. Both the treatises for which he was primarily responsible, viz. De Agricultura and De Plantatione, were in print at the time, and had been examined and criticized by myself, as the other three, which fell to my share, had been by him. It has remained for me to carry out the final revision, and to draw up the Appendix and most of the footnotes.<sup>a</sup> It should be added that his name will not disappear from Vols. IV. and V. The whole of Vol. IV., both his share and mine, was in typescript at the date of his death, and had been the subject of a certain amount of correspondence between us. His share of Vol. V. is in ms., though it has not been in any way revised.

The translators have to acknowledge, as in Vols. I. and II., the assistance they have received from the German translation still in progress. But Mr. Whitaker, like myself, felt that a special tribute was due to the admirable work of Dr. M. Adler on the treatises De Ebrietate and De Sobrietate, and his corrections of Wendland's text. If our text of these treatises is, as we both have hoped, superior in places to that of Wendland, it is mainly due to him.

<sup>a</sup> In a few cases, where I felt doubtful whether Mr. Whitaker would have accepted them, I have appended my initials.

PREFACE

The second and larger volume of Leisegang's index to Philo, which had previously only reached to Zeta, appeared almost simultaneously with Mr. Whitaker's death. Though neither volume deals with more than a selection of Philo's words, the first volume was much valued by both translators, and the complete work, which has already been of considerable use to the survivor in his final revision, should greatly promote the accuracy of the translation.

F. H. C.

Oct. 1930.

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

SHOWING THEIR DIVISION INTO VOLUMES IN THIS EDITION

VOLUME

- I. On the Creation (De Opificio Mundi)
Allegorical Interpretation (Legum Allegoriae)
- II. On the Cherubim (De Cherubim)
On the Sacrifices of Abel and Cain (De Sacrificiis Abelis et Caini)
The Worse attacks the Better (Quod Deterius Potiori insidiari solet)
On the Posterity and Exile of Cain (De Posteritate Caini)
- III. On the Unchangeableness of God (Quod Deus im-mutabilis sit)
On Husbandry (De Agricultura)
On Noah's Work as a Planter (De Plantatione)
On Drunkenness (De Ebrietate)
On Sobriety (De Sobrietate)
- IV. On the Confusion of Tongues (De Confusione Lin-guarum)
On the Migration of Abraham (De Migratione Abrahami)
Who is the Heir (Quis Rerum Divinarum Heres)
On the Preliminary Studies (De Congressu quaerendae Eruditionis gratia)
- V. On Flight and Finding (De Fuga et Inventione)
On the Change of Names (De Mutatione Nominum)
On Dreams (De Somniis)
- VI. On Abraham (De Abrahamo)
On Joseph (De Iosepho)
Moses (De Vita Mosis)

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

VOLUME

- VII. On the Decalogue (De Decalogo)
On the Special Laws Books I-III (De Specialibus Legibus)
- VIII. On the Special Laws Book IV (De Specialibus Legibus)
On the Virtues (De Virtutibus)
On Rewards and Punishments (De Praemiis et Poenis)
- IX. Every Good Man is Free (Quod Omnis Probus Liber sit)
On the Contemplative Life (De Vita Contemplativa)
On the Eternity of the World (De Aeternitate Mundi)
Flaccus (In Flaccum)
Hypothetica <sup>1</sup> (Apologia pro Iudaeis)
On Providence <sup>1</sup> (De Providentia)
- X. On the Embassy to Gaius (De Legatione ad Gaium)
GENERAL INDEX TO VOLUMES I-X

SUPPLEMENT

- I. Questions and Answers on Genesis <sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin)
- II. Questions and Answers on Exodus <sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum)
- GENERAL INDEX TO SUPPLEMENTS I-II

<sup>1</sup> Only two fragments extant.

<sup>2</sup> Extant only in an Armenian version.

ON THE UNCHANGEABLENESS
OF GOD
(QUOD DEUS IMMUTABILIS SIT)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

THIS treatise,<sup>a</sup> which is really a continuation of the De Gigantibus, discusses the following verses, Gen. vi. 4-12.

I. (1-19) And after this when the angels of God went in unto the daughters of men, and begat for themselves . . . (v. 4).

II. (20-73) But the Lord God seeing that the wickednesses of men were multiplied upon the earth and that every man is purposing in his heart carefully evil things every day, God had it in His mind that He had made man upon the earth and He bethought Him. And God said, I will blot out man whom I have made from the face of the earth . . . because I was wroth that <sup>b</sup> I had made him (vv. 5-7).

III. (74-121) But Noah found grace before God. Now these are the generations of Noah. Noah was a just man, being perfect in his generation, and Noah was well pleasing to God (vv. 8-9).

IV. (122-139) And the earth was "corrupted" (or destroyed) before God, and the earth was filled with iniquity (v. 11).

V. (140-end) And the Lord God saw the earth, and it was corrupted, because all flesh destroyed His way upon the earth (v. 12).

<sup>a</sup> The title is not very appropriate and applies only to §§ 20-32.

<sup>b</sup> Or "in that."

PHILO

I. Having suggested (1-3) that "after this" means "after the Spirit of God had departed," Philo goes on to discuss what is meant by saying that these "angels," which in the previous treatise he had taken to mean "evil angels" or "evil souls," beget "for themselves." This is shewn, first by contrast with Abraham (4) and (5-6) with Hannah, who gave her child as a thank-offering to God. This leads to a short meditation on the purifying power of thankfulness, and our need of such purification (7-9), and this is followed by a digression on the words of Hannah's psalm: "The barren hath borne seven, but she that had many children has languished," which are treated as contrasting the sacred number "seven" with selfish plurality (10-15). This brings back the thought of "begetting for themselves," as mere selfishness which, as in the case of Onan, brings destruction (16-19).

II. The idea that the words "God had it in His mind," etc. suggest that God had repented of making man is rejected as impious (20-22). God is unchangeable. Even among men the sage may live a life of constancy and harmony (23-25), and while most of us are the victims of fickleness and inconstancy, partly because we are unable to gauge the future, it is not so with God, for time is His creation and His life is eternity (27-32).

What then is the meaning of "God had in His mind that He had made man"? To explain this, Philo reproduces the Stoic theory of the four classes of things which we find in nature. First there is ἔξις (coherence), i.e. inorganic objects such as stones and dead wood. This ἔξις is conceived of as a "breath" (πνεῦμα) continually passing up and down, and thus binding them together (33-36). Secondly there is φύσις (growth), as seen in plants, and here Philo takes the opportunity to dilate on the wonders of the annual resurrection (37-40). Third comes animal life (ψυχῆ) with its threefold phenomena (again Stoic) of "sense," "presentation" and "impulse" (41-44). All these have been mentioned to lead up to the fourth stage, that of the rational mind of man, which alone has free-will and is therefore alone liable to praise or blame, and it was this misused freedom of man which God "had in mind" (45-50).

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD

We have still to do with the concluding words, "I was wroth that I made man." Here Philo, who evidently had the variant ἐθυμώθη for ἐνεθυμήθη, is in great difficulty. He cannot allow anger to God and he repeats the explanation of such anthropomorphic phrases (which he gave in De Sac. 94 f.), namely that they are accommodated to our weaker natures, which require the discipline of fear (51-69). But this alone does not satisfy him. His further explanation is hardly intelligible, but seems to mean that as it is anger and similar passions which produce human wickedness, God's judgement on the wicked may be spoken of as caused by God's anger (70-73).

III. But we must observe that this phrase, "I was wroth," etc., is followed at once by the words, "Noah found grace," and this contrast brings us to the thought that God in His dealings mingles mercy with judgement, as our weak nature requires (74-76). This "mingling" in fact is a necessary condition before we can understand the divine at all (77-81), and the contrast of the mixed and the unmingled, which is the same as that of the One and the Many, is illustrated by the words " God spake once and these two things have I heard " (for God's speech is single, while our hearing is produced by different factors) (82-84), and also by the way in which Moses shews us the one just man side by side with the many unjust (85).

PHILO

We can now consider more fully the phrase " Noah found grace with the Lord God." The word " found " leads to reflections first on the differences between finding (εὑρεσις) and " refinding " or " recovering " (ἀνεύρεσις) (86), and this difference is illustrated by an allegorical interpretation of the rules laid down for the " Great Vow " in Num. vi. (86-90), and then by the way in which the gifted by nature absorb knowledge without difficulty, while the efforts of the inapt come to disaster (91-93). This distinction extends to questions of conduct also, for those who with no good motive force themselves to right actions, against which their nature rebels, merely cause misery to themselves (94-103). Again the phrase " found grace " (χάρις) may be best interpreted as meaning that the just man " finds " that what we have is God's free gift (also χάρις) (104-108). Yet Philo seems at once to ignore this forced interpretation and to identify the meaning of the words " found grace " with the subsequent " was well pleasing " (εὐαρεστέηται) and after pointing out, as usual, that the double phrase " Lord God " represents God's two aspects of " sovereignty " and " goodness " (109-110), proceeds to contrast Noah with Joseph, " who found grace with the ruler of the prison " into which he was thrown. This story of Joseph teaches us the lesson that if we are the prisoners of passion, we should at least avoid the friendship of our gaoler and not become his satellites (111-116). This contrast between Noah and Joseph brings us to the consideration of the words "these are the generations (γενέσεις) of Noah." Philo takes γένεσις to mean "becoming" or "development," and explains it in this case by the words that follow, "just," "perfect" "well pleasing to God" (117-118), and illustrates it from the text, "Joseph was keeping sheep with his brothers, being young, with the sons of Bilhah and Zilpah," where the γένεσις is from the higher nature of Jacob to that of the "young" Joseph and the bastard sons (119-121).

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD

IV. Philo now turns to the words "the whole earth was corrupted or destroyed <sup>a</sup>" (122). The first view put forward is that Goodness (i.e. Noah) necessarily works the destruction of the Bad (123). But this passes at once into a really different thought <sup>a</sup> that Goodness shews up the Bad in its true light. This is illustrated from three points or rules in the law of leprosy; first, that the appearance of "healthy colour" makes the leper unclean (123-126); secondly, that complete leprosy is clean, while the partial is unclean, shewing that the completely and therefore involuntarily immoral condition is innocence compared with the partial enlightenment, by which the soul knows that it is sinful but does not amend (127-130); thirdly, that the infected house is pronounced unclean by the priest who visits it, shewing again that the entrance of divine reason will reveal the impurity of the soul (131-135). The same moral is found in the words of the widow of Zarephath to <sup>a</sup> On the first interpretation ἐφθάρη means "was destroyed"; on the second "was corrupted," i.e. made to appear in its real badness.

PHILO

Elijah, " O man of God, thou hast entered to remind me of my sin " (136-139).

V. The important point here is that " destroyed his way " means " destroyed God's way " (140-143), and this reminds us of the passage in which Israel asked for leave to pass through Edom's territory, and said " we will go by the king's way " (144) But Philo cannot endure to be confined to these two words, but deals with the whole content of Num. xx. 17-20 in a way which, perverse as it is, shews much richness of thought as well as ingenuity. (a) When Israel says " I will pass through thy land " we have the resolve of the Wise both to test the life of the pleasure-lover, so as to reject it through experience and not mere ignorance, and also not to stay in it (145-153). (β) On the other hand, " we will not go through the fields and vineyards " means " we will abide in the fields of heavenly fruits and the vineyards of virtue and true joy " (154). (γ) " We will not drink of thy well " means that " we on whom God rains his mercies have no need of the scanty water of the wells of earthly pleasures " (155-158). (δ) " We will go by the king's way " is " we will tread the road of wisdom " (159-161). (ε) " We will turn neither to the right nor to the left " shews that this way of wisdom is in the mean, as e.g. courage is the mean between rashness on the right and cowardice on the left (162-165). (ζ) When in reply to Edom's refusal and threat of war Israel replies, " we will pass along the mountain," Philo by a strange play on ὄρος (the mountain) and ὄρος (definition) extracts the idea that the wise man's course is on lofty thoughts based on scientific analysis (166-167). (η) " If I drink of thy water, I will give thee its value "

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD

(τιμῆ) is turned into "If I truckle to you, I shall be giving to the worthless an honour which will lead the weak to honour it also" (167-171). (θ) The words "the matter is nothing" (see note on 145) are taken to mean the vanity of earthly things. And this leads to a meditation on the witness of history to the instability of national prosperity and indeed of all human aims (172-180). Thus we arrive at the conclusion that while Edom would bar the king's way, the divine reason will bar that of Edom and its associates (180).

This last word leads to some concluding thoughts about Balaam as one of these "associates." The sections (181-end), which otherwise have little connexion with the preceding matter, go back to the thought of 122-139, and describe Balaam as the type of those who reject the warning of divine reason as the inward judge and thus are past all cure.

ΟΤΙ ΑΤΡΕΠΤΟΝ ΤΟ ΘΕΙΟΝ

- 1 I. “Καὶ μετ’ ἐκείνο” φησὶν “ὡς ἂν εἰσπορεύοντο οἱ ἄγγελοι τοῦ θεοῦ πρὸς τὰς θυγατέρας τῶν ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἐγέννων αὐτοῖς.<sup>1</sup>” οὐκοῦν ἄξιον σκέψασθαι, τίνα ἔχει λόγον τὸ “μετ’ ἐκείνο.” ἔστι τοίνυν ἀναφορὰ δεικνύουσα τι τῶν προ-
- 2 εἰρημένων ἐναργέστερον. προεῖρηται δὲ περὶ θείου πνεύματος, ὃ καταμεῖναι μέχρι τοῦ παντὸς αἰῶνος ἐν πολυσχιδεῖ καὶ πολυμόρφῳ ψυχῇ σαρκῶν ὄχλον βαρύντατον ἄχθος ἀνημμένη δυσεργότατον εἶπεν
- [273] εἶναι. μετ’ ἐκείνο δὴ | τὸ πνεῦμα οἱ ἄγγελοι πρὸς
- 3 τὰς θυγατέρας τῶν ἀνθρώπων εἰσίασιν. ἕως μὲν γὰρ ἐλλάμπουσι τῇ ψυχῇ καθαραὶ φρονήσεως αὐγαί, δι’ ὧν τὸν θεὸν καὶ τὰς αὐτοῦ δυνάμεις ὄρα ὁ σοφός, οὐδεὶς τῶν ψευδαγγελούντων ἐπεισέρχεται τῷ λογισμῷ, ἀλλ’ ἔξω περιρραντηρίων ἀπαντες εἴργονται. ὅταν δὲ ἀμυδρωθὲν ἐπισκιασθῇ τὸ διανοίας φῶς, οἱ τοῦ σκότους ἑταῖροι παρενημερήσαντες πάθει τοῖς κατεαγῶσι καὶ τεθηλυμμένοις, ἃς θυγατέρας εἴρηκεν ἀνθρώπων, συν-

<sup>1</sup> Most mss. αὐτοῖς, but Philo’s argument shows that in accordance with the generally received text of the LXX he wrote ἐαυτοῖς or αὐτοῖς.

<sup>a</sup> E.V. “and they bare children to them.”

<sup>b</sup> or “horde.” ὄχλος carries with it the idea both of a

ON THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD

I. "And after that," says Moses, "when the angels 1
of God went in unto the daughters of men and begat for themselves" <sup>a</sup> (Gen. vi. 4). It is worth our while to consider what is meant by the word "after that."
The answer is that it is a reference back, bringing out more clearly something of what has been already stated. That something is his words about the divine 2 spirit, that nothing is harder than that it should abide for ever in the soul with its manifold forms and divisions—the soul which has fastened on it the grievous burden of this fleshly coil.<sup>b</sup> It is after that spirit <sup>c</sup> that the angels or messengers go in to the daughters of men. For while the soul is illumined 3 by the bright and pure rays of wisdom, through which the sage sees God and His potencies, none of the messengers of falsehood has access to the reason, but all are barred from passing the bounds which the lustral water has consecrated.<sup>d</sup> But when the light of the understanding is dimmed and clouded, they
who are of the fellowship of darkness win the day,
and mating with the nerveless and emasculated
passions, which he has called the daughters of men, mob and the trouble and confusion caused by it. The flesh (plural) is here and elsewhere conceived of as manifold.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. after the spirit has gone.

<sup>d</sup> See App. p. 483.

PHILO

4 ἔρχονται καὶ γεννώσιν ἑαυτοῖς, οὐ τῷ θεῷ. τὰ μὲν γὰρ οἰκεία τοῦ θεοῦ γεννήματα αἱ δλόκληροι ἀρεταί, τὰ δὲ συγγενῆ φαύλων αἱ ἀνάρμοστοι κακίαι. μάθε δ', εἰ θέλεις, ὦ διάνοια,

τὸ μὴ ἑαυτῇ γεννᾶν οἶόν ἐστι παρὰ Ἀβραάμ τοῦ τελείου, ὃς τὸ ἀγαπητὸν καὶ μόνον τῆς ψυχῆς ἔγγονον γνήσιον, τῆς αὐτομαθοῦς σοφίας εἰκόνα ἐναργεστάτην, ἐπὶ κλησιν Ἰσαάκ, ἀνάγει θεῷ καὶ ἀποδίδωσι μετὰ πάσης εὐθυμίας ἀναγκαῖον καὶ ἀρμόττον χαριστήριον συμποδίσας, ὡς φησιν ὁ νόμος, τὸ καινουργηθὲν ἱερεῖον, ἧτοι παρόσον ἐπ' οὐδενὸς θνητοῦ βαίνειν ἅπαξ ἐπιθειάσας ἡξίου, ἢ παρόσον ἀνίδρυτον καὶ ἄστατον κατείδε τὴν γένεσιν, ὅτε τὴν περὶ τὸ ὄν ἀνευδοίαστον ἔγνω βεβαιότητα, ἣ λέγεται πεπιστευκέαι.

5 Π. τούτου γίνεται μαθητρὶς καὶ διάδοχος Ἄννα, τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ δώρημα σοφίας· ἐρμηνεύεται γὰρ χάρις αὐτῆς. ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἐγκύμων ἐγένετο παραδεξαμένη θείας γονὰς καὶ τελεσφόροις ἐχρήσατο ὠδίσι, τὸν τεταγμένον ἐν τῇ τοῦ θεοῦ τάξει τρόπον ἀποκνήσασα, ὃν <ἐπ>εφήμισε Σαμουήλ—καλεῖται δ' ἐρμηνευθεὶς τεταγμένος θεῷ—, λαβοῦσα ἀνταποδίδωσι τῷ δόντι μηδὲν ἴδιον ἑαυτῆς κρίνουσα ἀγαθόν,

6 ὃ μὴ χάρις ἐστὶ θεία. λέγει γὰρ ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ τῶν βασιλειῶν αὕτη τὸν τρόπον τούτον· “δίδωμί σοι αὐτὸν δοτόν,” ἐν ἴσῳ τῷ δοτόν ὄντα, ὥστ' εἶναι “τὸν δεδομένον δίδωμι.” κατὰ τὸ ἱερώτα-

* See App. p. 483.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 4-6

beget offspring† for themselves and not for God. For the offspring of God's parentage are the perfect 4 virtues, but the family of evil are the vices, whose note is discord.

If thou wilt know, my mind, what it is to beget not for thyself, learn the lesson from the perfect Abraham. He brings to God the dearly loved, the only trueborn offspring of the soul, that clearest image of self-learned wisdom, named Isaac, and without a murmur renders, as in duty bound, this fitting thank-offering. But first he bound, as the law tells us, the feet of the new strange victim (Gen. xxii. 9), either because having once received God's inspiration he judged it right to tread no more on aught that was mortal, or it may be that he was taught to see how changeable and inconstant was creation, through his knowledge of the unwavering stedfastness that belongs to the Existent; for in this we are told he had put his trust (Gen. xv. 6).

II. He finds a disciple and 5 successor in Hannah, the gift of the wisdom of God, for the name Hannah interpreted is "her grace." She received the divine seed and became pregnant. And when she had reached the consummation of her travail, and had brought forth the type of character which has its appointed place in God's order, which she named Samuel, a name which being interpreted means "appointed to God," she took him and rendered him in due payment to the Giver, judging that no good thing was her own peculiar property, nothing, which was not a grace and bounty from God. For she speaks in the first book of Kings in this wise, 6 "I give to Thee him, a gift<sup>a</sup>" (1 Sam. i. 28), that is "who is a gift," and so "I give him who has been given."

This agrees with the most sacred

PHILO

τον Μωυσέως γράμμα τουτο· “ τὰ δῶρά μου, δόματά μου, καρπώματά μου διατηρήσετε προσ-
 7 φέρειν ἐμοί.” τίνι γὰρ εὐχαριστητέον ἄλλῳ πλὴν θεῷ; διὰ τίνων δὲ ὅτι μὴ διὰ τῶν ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ δοθέντων; οὐδὲ γὰρ ἄλλων εὐπορήσαι δυνατόν. χρείος δ’ οὐδενὸς ὢν κελεύει προσφέρειν αὐτῷ τὰ ἑαυτοῦ δι’ ὑπερβολὴν τῆς πρὸς τὸ γένος ἡμῶν εὐεργεσίας· μελετήσαντες γὰρ εὐχαριστητικῶς ἔχειν καὶ τιμητικῶς αὐτοῦ καθαρῆσομεν ἀδικημάτων ἐκνυψάμενοι τὰ καταρρυπαίνοντα τὸν βίον ἐν τε λόγοις καὶ νοήσεσι<sup>1</sup> καὶ
 [274] 8 ἔργοις. καὶ γὰρ εὐήθες εἰς μὲν τὰ ἱερά | μὴ ἐξείναι βαδίζειν, ὅς ἂν μὴ πρότερον λουσάμενος φαιδρύνηται τὸ σῶμα, εὐχσθαι δὲ καὶ θύειν ἐπιχειρεῖν ἔτι κεκληιδωμένη καὶ πεφυρμένη διανοία· καίτοι τὰ μὲν ἱερά λίθων καὶ ξύλων ἀψύχου τῆς ὕλης πεποιήται, καθ’ αὐτὸ δὲ καὶ τὸ σῶμα ἀψύχον· ἀλλ’ ὅμως ὃν ἀψύχον ἀψύχων οὐ προσάψεται μὴ περιρραντηρίοις καὶ καθαρσίοις ἀγνευτικοῖς χρησάμενον, ὑπομενεῖ δέ τις τῷ θεῷ προσελθεῖν ἀκάθαρτος ὢν ψυχὴν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ τῷ καθαρωτάτῳ, καὶ
 9 ταῦτα μὴ μέλλων μετανοήσῃ; ὁ μὲν γὰρ πρὸς τῷ μηδὲν ἐπεξεργάσασθαι κακὸν καὶ τὰ παλαιὰ ἐκνύψασθαι δικαίως γεγεθῶς προσίτω, ὁ δ’ ἄνευ τούτων δυσκάθαρτος ὢν ἀφιστάσθω· λήσεται γὰρ οὐδέποτε τὸν τὰ ἐν μυχοῖς τῆς διανοίας ὀρῶντα καὶ τοῖς ἀδύτοις αὐτῆς ἐμπεριπατοῦντα.
 10 III. τῆς μέντοι θεοφιλοῦς ψυχῆς δείγμα ἐναργέστατόν ἐστι καὶ τὸ ἄσμα, ἐν ᾧ περιέχεται τὸ “ στείρα ἔτεκεν ἑπτά, ἣ δὲ πολλὴ ἐν τέκνοις
 11 ἡσθένησε.” καίτοι γε ἑνὸς ἐστι μήτηρ τοῦ

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Cohn for MS. ὀνειδεσι or εἶδεσι: Wend. ἐνομοίαις.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 6-11

ordinance of Moses, " My gifts, My offerings, My fruits ye shall observe to bring to Me " (Num. xxviii. 2). For to whom should we make thank-offering save to 7 God ? and wherewithal save by what He has given us ? for there is nothing else whereof we can have sufficiency. God needs nothing, yet in the exceeding greatness of His beneficence to our race He bids us bring what is His own. For if we cultivate the spirit of rendering thanks and honour to Him, we shall be pure from wrongdoing and wash away the filthiness which defiles our lives in thought and word and deed. For it is absurd that a man should be forbidden to 8 enter the temples save after bathing and cleansing his body, and yet should attempt to pray and sacrifice with a heart still soiled and spotted. The temples are made of stones and timber, that is of soulless matter, and soulless too is the body in itself. And can it be that while it is forbidden to this soulless body to touch the soulless stones, except it have first been subjected to lustral and purificatory consecration, a man will not shrink from approaching with his soul impure the absolute purity of God and that too when there is no thought of repentance in his heart ? He who is resolved not only to commit 9 no further sin, but also to wash away the past, may approach with gladness : let him who lacks this resolve keep far away, since hardly shall he be purified. For he shall never escape the eye of Him who sees into the recesses of the mind and treads its inmost shrine.

III. Indeed of the nature of the soul 10 beloved of God no clearer evidence can we have than that psalm of Hannah which contains the words " the barren hath borne seven, but she that had many children hath languished " (1 Sam. ii. 5). And yet it 11

PHILO

- Σαμουήλ ἢ λέγουσα. πῶς οὖν ἑπτὰ τετοκέσαι φησίν, εἰ μὴ τι μονάδα ἑβδομάδι τὴν αὐτὴν φυσικώτατα νομίζει, οὐ μόνον ἐν ἀριθμοῖς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τῇ τοῦ παντὸς ἀρμονίᾳ καὶ ἐν τοῖς τῆς ἐναρέτου λόγοις ψυχῆς; ὁ γὰρ τεταγμένος μόνῳ θεῷ Σαμουήλ, ἄλλῳ δὲ τὸ παράπαν συνιῶν μηδενί, κατὰ τὸ ἐν καὶ τὴν μονάδα, τὸ ὄντως ὄν, κεκό-
- 12 σμηται. αὕτη δ' ἢ κατάστασις ἐστὶν ἑβδομάδος, ἀναπαυομένης ἐν θεῷ ψυχῆς καὶ περὶ μηδὲν τῶν θνητῶν ἔργων ἔτι πονουμένης, κατὰ ἀπόλειψιν ἑξάδος, ἣν ἀπένειμε τοῖς τὰ πρωτεία λαβεῖν μὴ δυναθεῖσι, δευτερείων δ' ἕξ ἀνάγκης μεταποιου-
- 13 μένοις. τὴν μὲν οὖν στεῖραν, οὐ τὴν ἄγονον, ἀλλὰ τὴν στερρὰν καὶ ἔτι σφριγῶσαν, τοὺς διὰ καρτερίας καὶ ἀνδρείας καὶ ὑπομονῆς ἐπὶ κτήσει τοῦ ἀρίστου διαθλοῦσαν ἄθλους, ἑβδομάδι τὴν ἰσότιμον μονάδα τίκτειν εἰκὸς ἦν· εὐτοκος γὰρ καὶ εὐπαις ἡ φύσις.
- 14 τὴν δὲ πολλὴν ἀσθενεῖν ἐν τέκνοις εἶπεν ἀψευδῶς καὶ σφόδρα ἐναργῶς· ὅταν γὰρ μία οὔσα ψυχὴ πολλὰ ὠδίνῃ τοῦ ἐνὸς ἀποστᾶσα, μυρία κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς γίνεται, κάπειτα πλήθει τέκνων ἐξηρητημένων βαρυνομένη καὶ πιεζομένη—ἔστι δὲ ἡλιτόμηνα καὶ
- 15 ἀμβλωθρίδια τὰ πλείστα αὐτῶν—ἕξασθενεῖ. τίκτει μὲν γὰρ τὰς πρὸς σχήματα καὶ χρώματα δι' ὀφθαλμῶν ἐπιθυμίας, τίκτει δὲ τὰς πρὸς φωνὰς δι'

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Post. 64.

<sup>b</sup> Or "since his soul rests."

<sup>c</sup> For Philo's ideas about Six and Seven cf. Leg. All. i. 2-16.

<sup>d</sup> In identifying στεῖραν, "barren," with στερρὰν, "firm," Philo is not so far out as in most of his philological vagaries. The two words may be the same in origin, "hard ground" being "barren ground."

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 11-15

is the mother of one child—Samuel—who is speaking. How then can she say that she has borne seven? It can only be that in full accordance with the truth of things, she holds the One to be the same as the Seven,<sup>a</sup> not only in the lore of numbers, but also in the harmony of the universe and in the thoughts of the virtuous soul. For Samuel who is appointed to God alone and holds no company with any other has his being ordered in accordance with the One and the Monad, the truly existent. But this condition <sup>12</sup> of his implies the Seven, that is a soul which rests <sup>b</sup> in God and toils no more at any mortal task, and has thus left behind the Six, which God has assigned to those who could not win the first place, but must needs limit their claims to the second.<sup>c</sup> We might well <sup>13</sup> expect, then, that the barren woman, not meaning the childless, but the “firm” or solid <sup>d</sup> who still abounds in power, who with endurance and courage perseveres to the finish in the contest, where the prize is the acquisition of the Best, should bring forth the Monad which is of equal value with the Seven; for her nature is that of a happy and goodly motherhood. And when she says that she who had many children <sup>14</sup> languishes, her words are as clear as they are true. For when the soul that is one departs from the one and is in travail with many, she naturally is multiplied a thousand-fold,<sup>e</sup> and then weighed down and sore pressed by the multitude of children that cling to her—most of them abortions born out of due time—she languishes utterly. She brings forth the desires <sup>15</sup> of which the eyes and the ears are the channels, these for shapes and colours, those for sounds; she <sup>e</sup> Or “vast is the number of children born to her.” See App. p. 483.

PHILO

- ᾧτων, ἐγκύμων δ' ἐστὶ καὶ τῶν γαστρὸς καὶ τῶν ὑπ' αὐτήν, ὥστε πολλῶν ἐκκρεμαμένων ἐγγόνων βαρύτατον ἄχθος φέρουσα παρίεται καὶ χεῖρας ὑπ' ἀσθενείας καθείσα ἀπολέγεται. τοῦτον μὲν δὴ τὸν τρόπον ἠττήσθαι συμβαίνει πᾶσιν, ὅσοι φθαρτοῖς
- [275] ἑαυτοῖς φθαρτὰ γεννώσιν.
- 16 IV. Ἐνιοὶ δ' | οὐχ ἠτταν μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ θάνατον ὑπὸ φιλαυτίας ἀνεδέξαντο. ὁ γοῦν Ἀνάν, "αἰσθόμενος ὅτι οὐκ αὐτῷ ἔσται τὸ σπέρμα," οὐ πρότερον ἐπαύσατο τὸ λογικόν, ὅπερ ἄριστον τῶν ὄντων γένος ἐστὶ, διαφθείρων ἢ καὶ αὐτὸς ἀνεδέξατο φθορὰν παντελῆ, σφόδρα ὀρθῶς καὶ προσηκόντως·
- 17 εἰ γὰρ ἅπαντα πράξουσὶ τινες αὐτῶν ἔνεκα, μὴ γονέων τιμῆς, μὴ παιδῶν εὐκοσμίας, μὴ σωτηρίας πατρίδος, μὴ νόμων φυλακῆς, μὴ ἐθῶν βεβαιότητος, μὴ ἰδίων μὴ κοινῶν ἐπανορθώσεως, μὴ ἱερῶν ἀγιστείας, μὴ τῆς πρὸς θεὸν εὐσεβείας ἐπιστρεφόμενοι,
- 18 κακοδαιμονήσουσιν. ἐνὸς γὰρ ὧν εἶπον χάριν ἀντικαταλλάξασθαι καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ ζῆν εὐκλεές, οἱ δ' ἄρα καὶ ἀθρόων τῶν οὕτω περιμαχῆτων φασίν, εἰ μὴ τινα ἡδονὴν μέλλοι περιποιεῖν, κατολιγωρήσειν. τοιγάρτοι πονηρὰν εἰσήγησιν ὁ ἀδέκαστος θεὸς ἐκφύλου δόγματος, ἐπὶ κλησιν Ἀνάν, ἐκποδῶν ἀν-
- 19 ελεῖ. παραιτητέοι δὴ πάντες οἱ γεννῶντες αὐτοῖς, τὸ δ' ἐστὶν ὅσοι τὸ ἴδιον λυσιτελές μόνον θηρώμενοι τῶν ἄλλων ὑπερορῶσιν, ὥσπερ αὐτοῖς μόνοις φύντες, οὐχὶ δὲ μυρίοις ἄλλοις, πατρί,

<sup>a</sup> Or "gives up the fight."

<sup>b</sup> The sections 16-19 largely repeat De Post. 180, 181.

<sup>c</sup> See App. p. 483.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 15-19

is pregnant with the lusts of the belly and those which have their seat below it, and thus, under the crushing load of the many children that hang upon her, she grows faint and dropping her hands in weakness sinks in prostration.<sup>a</sup> This manner of defeat is the lot of all who engender things corruptible for their corruptible selves.

IV. Some <sup>b</sup> there are who through self-love have 16 brought upon themselves not only defeat but death. Thus Onan “perceiving that the seed will not be his” (Gen. xxxviii. 9), ceased not to destroy the reasoning principle, which in kind is the best of all existing things, till he himself underwent utter destruction. And right just and fitting was his fate. For if there 17 shall be any whose every deed is self-seeking, who have no regard for the honouring of their parents, for the ordering of their children aright, for the safety of their country, for the maintenance of the laws, for the security of good customs, for the better conduct of things private and public, for the sanctity of temples, for piety towards God, miserable shall be their fate. To sacrifice life itself for any single one 18 of these that I have named is honour and glory. But these self-lovers—they say that if these blessings, desirable as they are, were all put together, they would utterly despise them, if they should not procure them some future pleasure.<sup>c</sup> And therefore God in His impartial justice will cast out to destruction that evil suggestion of an unnatural creed, called Onan. We must indeed reject all those 19 who “beget for themselves,” that is all those who pursue only their own profit and think not of others. For they think themselves born for themselves only and not for the innumerable others, for father, for μητρί, γυναικί, τέκνοις, πατρίδι, ἀνθρώπων γένει, εἰ δὲ δεῖ προελθόντας τι περαιτέρω φάναι, οὐρανῶ, γῆ, τῶ παντὶ κόσμῳ, ἐπιστήμας, ἀρεταῖς, τῶ πατρὶ καὶ ἡγεμονί τῶν συμπάντων· ὧν ἐκάστῳ κατὰ δύναμιν ἀπονεμητέον τὸ ἀρμόττον μὴ τὰ πάντα προσθήκην ἑαυτοῦ, ἑαυτὸν δὲ τῶν πάντων νομίζοντα.

PHILO

20 V. Τούτων μὲν δὴ ἄλλης, τὰ δ' ἀκόλουθα τῶ λόγῳ συνυφήνωμεν. “ιδῶν” οὖν φησι “κύριος ὁ θεὸς ὅτι ἐπληθύνθησαν αἱ κακίαι τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ πᾶς τις διανοεῖται ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ ἐπιμελῶς τὰ πονηρὰ πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας, ἐνεθυμήθη ὁ θεός, ὅτι ἐποίησε τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ διενόηθη. καὶ εἶπεν ὁ θεός· ἀπαλείψω τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃν ἐποίησα ἀπὸ προσώπου τῆς γῆς.”

21 ἴσως τινὲς τῶν ἀνεξετάστων ὑποτοπήσουσι τὸν νομοθέτην αἰνίττεσθαι, ὅτι ἐπὶ τῇ γενέσει τῶν ἀνθρώπων ὁ δημιουργὸς μετέγνω κατιδὼν τὴν ἀσέβειαν αὐτῶν, ἧς χάριν αἰτίας ἐβουλήθη σύμπαν διαφθεῖραι τὸ γένος. ἀλλ' ἴστωσαν ὅτι ταῦτα δοξάζοντες ἐπελαφρίζουσι καὶ ἐπικουφίζουσι τὰ τῶν παλαιῶν ἐκείνων ἀμαρτήματα

22 δι' ὑπερβολὴν τῆς περὶ αὐτοὺς ἀθεότητος. τί γὰρ ἂν ἀσέβημα μείζον γένοιτο τοῦ ὑπολαμβάνειν τὸν [276] ἄτρεπτον τρέπεσθαι; καίτοι | τινῶν ἀξιούντων μηδὲ πάντας ἀνθρώπους ταῖς γνώμας ἐπαμφοτερίζειν· τοὺς γὰρ ἀδόλως καὶ καθαρῶς φιλοσοφήσαντας μέγιστον ἐκ τῆς ἐπιστήμης ἀγαθὸν εὔρασθαι τὸ μὴ τοῖς πράγμασι συμμεταβάλλειν, ἀλλὰ μετὰ στερρότητος ἀκλινοῦς καὶ παγίου βεβαιότητος ἅπασι
23 τοῖς ἀρμόττουσιν ἐγχειρεῖν. VI. ἀρέσκει

<sup>a</sup> Lit. “unexamined,” i.e. by themselves.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 483.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 19-23

mother, for wife, for children, for country, for the human race, and if we must extend the list, for heaven, for earth, for the universe, for knowledge, for virtues, for the Father and Captain of all; to each of whom we are bound according to our powers to render what is due, not holding all things to be an adjunct of ourselves, but rather ourselves an adjunct of all.

V. Enough on this point. Let us extend our discussion to embrace the words that follow. "The Lord God," says Moses, "seeing that the wickednesses of men were multiplied upon the earth and that every man intended evil in his heart diligently all his days, God had it in His mind that He had made man upon the earth, and He bethought Him. And God said, I will blot out man, whom I made, from the face of the earth" (Gen. vi. 5-7).

Perhaps some of those who are careless inquirers<sup>a</sup> will suppose that the Lawgiver is hinting that the Creator repented of the creation of men when He beheld their impiety, and that this was the reason why He wished to destroy the whole race. Those who think thus may be sure that they make the sins of these men of old time seem light and trivial through the vastness of their own godlessness. For what greater impiety could there be than to suppose that the Unchangeable changes? Indeed some maintain<sup>b</sup> that even among men vacillation of mind and judgement is not universal; for those who study philosophy in guilelessness and purity, it is held, gain from their knowledge this as their chief reward, that they do not change with changing circumstances, but with unbending steadfastness and firm constancy take in hand all that it behoves them to do.

VI. It is a tenet of the lawgiver also that the perfect man seeks for

PHILO

- δὲ καὶ τῷ νομοθέτῃ τὸν τέλειον ἡρεμίας ἐφίεσθαι·
 τὸ γὰρ εἰρημένον τῷ σοφῷ ἐκ προσώπου τοῦ
 θεοῦ “ σὺ δὲ αὐτοῦ στήθι μετ’ ἐμοῦ ” τὸ
 ἀκλινὲς καὶ ἀρρεπὲς τῆς γνώμης καὶ ἰδρυμένον 24 πάντα σαφέστατα παρίστησι. τῷ γὰρ ὄντι θανμάσιον, ὡσπερ τινὰ λύραν τὴν ψυχὴν μουσικῶς
 ἀρμολογούμενον οὐκ ὀξέσει καὶ βαρέσει τοῖς φθόγγοις, ἀλλ’ ἐπιστήμη μὲν τῶν ἐναντίων,<sup>1</sup> χρῆσει δὲ τῶν
 ἀμεινόνων, μήτε ἐπιτείνειν προσυπερβάλλοντα μήτε
 ἀνεῖναι μαλθάξαντα τὴν ἀρετῶν καὶ τῶν φύσει
 καλῶν ἀρμονίαν, δι’ ἴσου δ’ αὐτὴν φυλάξαντα 25 κροτεῖν καὶ ἐπιψάλλειν ἐμμελῶς. ὄργανον γὰρ τελεώτατον ὑπὸ φύσεως δημιουργηθὲν ἀρχέτυπον
 τῶν χειροκμητῶν τοῦτό γε· ὅπερ εἰ καλῶς ἀρμοσθείη, τὴν πασῶν ἀρίστην συμφωνίαν ἀπεργάσεται,
 ἥτις οὐκ ἐν κλάσει καὶ τόνοις ἐμμελοῦς φωνῆς,
 ἀλλ’ ἐν ὁμολογίᾳ τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον πράξεων ἔχει 26 τὸ τέλος. ὅπου γοῦν ἀνθρώπων ψυχὴ τὸν πολὺν
 κλύδωνα καὶ σάλον, ὃν καταρραγὲν σφοδρὸν πνεῦμα
 τὸ κακίας αἰφνίδιον ἡγειρεν, ἐπιστήμης καὶ σοφίας αὔραις ἀποτίθεται καὶ τὸ κυμαῖνον καὶ παρωδηκὸς ὑφέισα νημέμω εὐδία χρωμένη γαληνιάζει, εἰτ’
 ἐνδοιάζει, ὅτι ὁ ἄφθαρτος καὶ μακάριος καὶ τῶν ἀρετῶν καὶ αὐτῆς τελειότητος καὶ εὐδαιμονίας
 ἀνημμένος τὸ κράτος οὐ χρῆται γνώμης μεταβολῇ,
 μένει δὲ ἐφ’ ὧν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐβουλεύσατο οὐδὲν αὐτῶν 27 μετατιθεῖς; ἀνθρώποις μὲν οὖν τὸ εὐμετάβολον ἢ διὰ τὴν ἐν αὐτοῖς ἢ διὰ τὴν ἐκτὸς
 ἀβεβαιότητα συμβαίνειν ἀνάγκη· οἷον οὕτως φίλους
 ἐλόμενοι πολλάκις καὶ βραχύν τινα αὐτοῖς συν-

<sup>1</sup> Wend. approves of Mangey's τῶν <ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν> ἐναντίων (cf. 49). But see App. p. 483.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 23-27

quietude. For the words addressed to the Sage with God as the speaker, "stand thou here with Me" (Deut. v. 31), shew most plainly how unbending, unwavering and broad-based is his will. Wonderful indeed is the soul of the Sage, how he sets it, like a lyre,<sup>a</sup> to harmony not with a scale of notes low and high, but with the knowledge of moral opposites, and the practice of such of them as are better; how he does not strain it to excessive heights, nor yet relax it and weaken the concord of virtues and things naturally beautiful, but keeps it ever at an equal tension and plays it with hand or bow in melody. Such a soul is the most perfect instrument fashioned by nature, the pattern of those which are the work of our hands. And if it be well adjusted, it will produce a symphony the most beautiful in the world, one which has its consummation not in the cadences and tones of melodious sound, but in the consistencies of our life's actions. Oh! if the soul of man, when it feels the soft breeze of wisdom and knowledge, can dismiss the stormy surge which the fierce burst of the gale of wickedness has suddenly stirred, and levelling the billowy swell can rest in unruffled calm under a bright clear sky, can you doubt that He, the Imperishable Blessed One, who has taken as His own the sovereignty of the virtues, of perfection itself and beatitude, knows no change of will, but ever holds fast to what He purposed from the first without any alteration? With men then it must needs be that they are ready to change, through instability whether it be in themselves or outside them. So for example <sup>b</sup> often when we have chosen our friends and been familiar with them for

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 483.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 484.

PHILO

διατρίψαντες χρόνον, οὐδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν ἔχοντες ἀπεστράφημεν, ὡς εἰς ἐχθρῶν ἢ ἀγνοουμένων γοῦν
 28 τάξιν ἐμβιβάσαι. τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον κούφην εὐχέριαν ἡμῶν αὐτῶν ἐλέγχει τὰς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὑποθέσεις ἀδυνατούντων κραταιῶς διαφυλάττειν· ὁ δὲ θεὸς οὐχ ἀψίκορος. καὶ μὴν ἔστιν ὅτε διανοοῦμεθα μὲν ἐπιμένειν κριτηρίοις τοῖς αὐτοῖς, οἱ δὲ προσελθόντες οὐκ ἔμειναν ἐν ὁμοίῳ, ὥστ' ἐξ ἀνάγκης καὶ αἱ
 29 ἡμέτεροι γινώμην συμμετέβαλον. προιδέσθαι γὰρ ἢ μελλόντων πραγμάτων συντυχίας ἢ γνώμας ἐτέρων ἄνθρωπον ὄντα ἀμήχανον, τῷ δὲ θεῷ ὡς ἐν αὐγῇ καθαρᾷ πάντα ἀρίδηλα. καὶ γὰρ ἄχρι
 [277] τῶν ψυχῆς μυχῶν | φθάσας, ἃ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἐστὶν ἀόρατα τηλαυγῶς πέφυκε καθορᾶν, καὶ προμηθεῖα καὶ προνοία χρώμενος, οἰκείαις ἀρεταῖς, οὐδὲν ἀπελευθεριάζειν καὶ ἔξω τῆς ἑαυτοῦ καταλήψεως βαίνειν ἔα· ἐπειδήπερ οὐδ' ἡ τῶν μελλόντων ἀδηλότῃς αὐτῷ συμβατή· οὔτε γὰρ ἄδηλον οὔτε
 30 μέλλον οὐδὲν θεῷ. δῆλον μὲν οὖν, ὅτι καὶ τῶν γεννηθέντων τὸν φυτεύσαντα καὶ τῶν δημιουργηθέντων τὸν τεχνίτην καὶ τὸν ἐπίτροπον τῶν ἐπιτροπευομένων ἐπιστήμονα [ἀναγκαῖον] εἶναι δεῖ. ὁ δὲ θεὸς πατὴρ καὶ τεχνίτης καὶ ἐπίτροπος τῶν ἐν οὐρανῷ τε καὶ κόσμῳ πρὸς ἀλήθειάν ἐστι. καὶ μὴν τά γε μέλλοντα συσκιάζεται ὑπὸ τοῦ αὐθις χρόνου, τοτὲ μὲν βραχεῖ, τοτὲ δὲ μακρῷ δια-
 31 στήματι. δημιουργὸς δὲ καὶ χρόνου θεός· καὶ γὰρ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ πατὴρ—πατὴρ δὲ χρόνου κόσμος—τὴν κίνησιν αὐτοῦ γένεσιν ἀποφίνας ἐκείνου· ὥστε υἱωνοῦ τάξιν ἔχει πρὸς θεὸν τὸν χρόνον. ὁ μὲν γὰρ κόσμος οὗτος νεώτερος

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 484.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 27-31

a short time, we turn from them, though we have no charge to bring against them, and count them amongst our enemies, or at best as strangers. Such 28 action proves the facile levity of ourselves, how little capacity we have for stoutly holding to our original judgements. But God has no such fickleness. Or again, sometimes we are minded to hold to the standards we have taken but we find ourselves with others who have not remained constant, and thus our judgements perforce change with theirs. For a 29 mere man cannot foresee the course of future events, or the judgements of others, but to God as in pure sunlight all things are manifest. For already He has pierced into the recesses of our soul, and what is invisible to others is clear as daylight to His eyes. He employs the forethought and foreknowledge which are virtues peculiarly His own, and suffers nothing to escape His control or pass outside His comprehension. For not even about the future can uncertainty be found with Him, since nothing is un- 30 certain or future to God. No one doubts that the parent must have knowledge of his offspring, the craftsman of his handiwork, the steward of things entrusted to his stewardship. But God is in very truth the father and craftsman and steward of the heaven and the universe and all that is therein. Future events lie shrouded in the darkness of the time that is yet to be at different distances, some near, some far. But God is the maker of 31 time <sup>a</sup> also, for He is the father of time's father, that is of the universe, and has caused the movements of the one to be the source of the generation of the other. Thus time stands to God in the relation of a grandson. For this universe, since we perceive it by our senses,

PHILO

- υἱὸς θεοῦ, ἅτε αἰσθητὸς ὢν· τὸν γὰρ πρεσβύτερον
 [οὐδένα εἶπε]<sup>1</sup>—νοητὸς δ' ἐκεῖνος—πρεσβείων ἀξιώ-
 32 σας παρ' ἑαυτῷ καταμένειν διανοήθη. οὗτος οὖν
 ὁ νεώτερος υἱὸς ὁ αἰσθητὸς κινηθεὶς τὴν χρόνου
 φύσιν ἀναλάμβαι καὶ ἀνασχεῖν ἐποίησεν. ὥστε
 οὐδὲν παρὰ θεῷ μέλλον τῷ καὶ τὰ τῶν χρόνων
 ὑπηγμένῳ πέρατα· καὶ γὰρ οὐ χρόνος, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀρχέτυπον τοῦ χρόνου καὶ παράδειγμα αἰῶν<sup>2</sup> ὁ βίος ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup>. ἐν αἰῶνι δὲ οὔτε παρελήλυθεν οὐδὲν οὔτε μέλλει, ἀλλὰ μόνον ὑφέστηκεν.
 33 VII. Ἰκανῶς οὖν διειλεγμένοι περὶ τοῦ μὴ χρῆσθαι μετανοία τὸ ὄν ἀκολουθῶς ἀποδώσομεν,
 τί ἐστὶ τὸ “ ἐνεθυμήθη ὁ θεὸς ὅτι ἐποίησε τὸν 34 ἄνθρωπον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ διανοήθη.” ἔννοιαν
 καὶ διανόησιν, τὴν μὲν ἐναποκειμένην οὖσαν
 νόησιν, τὴν δὲ νοήσεως διεξοδον, βεβαιοτάτας
 δυνάμεις ὁ ποιητὴς τῶν ὄλων κληρωσάμενος καὶ
 χρώμενος αἰεὶ ταύταις τὰ ἔργα ἑαυτοῦ καταθεᾶται.
 τὰ μὲν δὴ μὴ λείποντα τὴν τάξιν τῆς πειθαρχίας
 ἔνεκα ἐπαινεί, τὰ δὲ μεθιστάμενα τῇ κατὰ λιπο-τακτῶν ὠρισμένη μετέρχεται δίκη.
 35 τῶν γὰρ σωμάτων τὰ μὲν ἐνεδήσατο ἕξει, τὰ δὲ
 φύσει, τὰ δὲ ψυχῇ, τὰ δὲ λογικῇ ψυχῇ. λίθων μὲν
 οὖν καὶ ξύλων, ἃ δὴ τῆς συμφυΐας ἀπέσπασται,
 [278] δεσμὸν κραταιότατον ἕξιν | εἰργάζετο· ἡ δὲ ἐστὶ
 πνεῦμα ἀναστρέφον ἐφ' ἑαυτό· ἄρχεται μὲν γὰρ

<sup>1</sup> Wend. regards οὐδένα εἶπε as a Christian interpolation. The Translator suggests οὖν γὰρ πρεσβύτερον τοῦδ' ἕνα εἶχε, which with the transference of τ and the substitution of χ for π is the same as the ms.      <sup>2</sup> MSS. δι' ὧν.      <sup>3</sup> MSS. αὐτῶν.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 484.

<sup>b</sup> The fourfold classification which follows has been already given shortly in Leg. All. ii. 22-23.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 31-35

is the younger son of God. To the elder son, I mean the intelligible universe, He assigned the place of firstborn, and purposed that it should remain in His own keeping. So this younger son, the world of our senses, when set in motion, brought that entity we call time to the brightness of its rising. And thus with God there is no future, since He has made the boundaries of the ages subject to Himself. For God's life is not a time, but eternity, which is the archetype and pattern of time <sup>a</sup>; and in eternity there is no past nor future, but only present existence.

VII. Having now discoursed sufficiently on the theme that the Existent does not experience repentance, we will explain in due sequence the words "God had it in His mind that He had made men upon the earth and He bethought Him" (Gen. vi. 6). "Having in one's mind" and "bethinking," the former being the thought quiescent in the mind,<sup>a</sup> the latter the thought brought to an issue, are two most constant powers, which the Maker of all things has taken as His own and ever employs them when He contemplates His own works. Those of His creatures who do not leave their appointed places, He praises for their obedience. Those who depart from it He visits with the punishment which is the doom of deserters.

This is explained by consideration of the different conditions, which He has made inseparable from the various bodies.<sup>b</sup> These are in some cases cohesion, in others growth, in others life, in others a reasoning soul. Thus, in stones and bits of wood which have been severed from their organism, He wrought cohesion, which acts as the most rigid of bonds. Cohesion <sup>c</sup> is a breath or current ever re-<sup>a</sup> See note in App. on Leg. All. ii. 22.

PHILO

- ἀπὸ τῶν μέσων ἐπὶ τὰ πέρατα τείνεσθαι, ψαῦσαν δὲ ἄκρας ἐπιφανείας ἀνακάμπει πάλιν, ἄχρις ἂν ἐπὶ τὸν αὐτὸν ἀφίκηται τόπον, ἀφ' οὗ τὸ πρῶτον
- 36 ὠρμήθη· ἕξewis ὁ συνεχῆς οὗτος διάυλος ἀφθαρτος, ὃν οἱ δρομεῖς ἀπομιμούμενοι ταῖς τριετηρίσιν ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώπων ἀπάντων κοινοῖς θεάτροις ὡς μέγα δὴ καὶ λαμπρὸν καὶ περιμάχητον ἔργον ἐπιδείκνυνται.
- 37 VIII. Τὴν δὲ φύσιν ἀπένειμε τοῖς φυτοῖς κερασάμενος αὐτὴν ἐκ πλείστων δυνάμεων, θρεπτικῆς τε καὶ μεταβλητικῆς καὶ αὐξητικῆς. καὶ γὰρ τρέφεται τροφῆς ὄντα χρεῖα, τεκμήριον δέ· τὰ μὴ ἀρδόμενα φθίνει καὶ ἀφαναίνεται, ὥσπερ αὖ τὰ ποτιζόμενα ἐμφανῶς αὖξεται· τὰ γὰρ τέως διὰ βραχύτητα χαμαίζηλα ἐξαίφνης ἀναδραμόντα ἔρηνη γίνεται περιμηκέστατα. τί χρῆ λέγειν περὶ μετα-
- 38 βολῆς αὐτῶν; ταῖς μὲν γὰρ χειμεριναῖς τροπαῖς τὰ πέταλα μαρανθέντα εἰς τοῦδαφος χεῖται, οἳ τε ἐν ταῖς κληματίσι λεγόμενοι πρὸς τῶν γεωπόνων ὀφθαλμοὶ καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς ζώοις καταμύουσι, τά τε πρὸς τὰς ἐκφύσεις στόμια πάντα ἔσφιγκται τῆς φύσεως εἴσω τότε συνειλημμένης καὶ ἡσυχάζουσας, ἵνα διαπνεύσασα οἰά τις ἀθλητῆς προηγωνισμένος καὶ συλλεξαμένη τὴν ἰδίαν ἰσχὺν πρὸς τοὺς ἐθάδας ἄθλους ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς ἀπαντᾷ. γίνεται δὲ τοῦτο ταῖς
- 39 ἄριναῖς καὶ κατὰ θέρος ὥραις· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐκ βαθέος ὕπνου περιαναστᾶσα τοὺς τε ὀφθαλμοὺς διοίγνυσι τά τε μεμυκῶτα τῶν στομίων ἀναστείλασα εὐρύνει, ὧν δ' ἐστὶν ἐγκύμων πάντα ἀποτίκτει, πέταλα καὶ κληματίδας, ἔλικας, οἴναρα,<sup>1</sup> καρπὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσιν· εἰθ' ὅταν τελεσθῆ, παρέχεται τὰς τροφὰς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. οἶον ἄρα.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 35-39

turning to itself. It begins to extend itself from the centre of the body in question to its extremes, and when it has reached the outermost surface it reverses its course, till it arrives at the place from which it first set out. This regular double course of cohesion 36 is indestructible ; and it is this which the runners imitate at the triennial festivals in the places of spectacle universal among men, and exhibit as a great and splendid feat, well worthy of their efforts.

VIII. Growth God assigned to plants. It is a com- 37 pound of many capacities, that of taking nourishment, that of undergoing change and that of increasing. Nourishment plants receive as they need it, as the following proof shews. When they are not watered they decay and wither, just as their increase when watered is plain to see, for sprouts heretofore too tiny to rise above the ground suddenly shoot up and become quite tall. It is hardly necessary to speak of their function of change. When the winter solstice arrives, 38 the leaves wither and shed themselves to the ground, and the " eyes," as the husbandmen call them, on the twigs close like eyes in animals, and all the outlets which serve to put forth life are bound tight, for Nature <sup>a</sup> within them compresses herself and hibernates, to get a breathing-space, like an athlete after his first contest, and thus having regained her fund of strength, comes forth to resume the familiar conflict. And this comes to pass in the spring and summer seasons. For she arises as though from a 39 deep sleep and unseals the eyes, opens wide the closed outlets, and brings forth all that is in her womb, shoots, twigs, tendrils, leaves and, to crown all, fruit. Then when the fruit is fully formed, she

<sup>a</sup> Or "power of growth."

PHILO

- οἷα μήτηρ τῷ γενομένῳ διά τινων ἀφανῶν πόρων, οἱ τοῖς ἐν γυναιξὶ μαστοῖς ἀναλογουῖσι, καὶ οὐ πρότερον παύεται τρέφουσα ἢ τὸν καρπὸν τελεσφορηθῆναι· τελεσφορεῖται δὲ ὁ πεπανθεὶς ἄκρως, ἡνίκα, κὰν μηδεὶς δρέπηται, τῆς συμφυΐας αὐτὸς ἐπείγεται διαζεύγνυσθαι ἅτε μηκέτι τροφῶν τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς τεκούσης δεόμενος, ἱκανὸς δ' ὢν, εἰ χώρας ἀγαθῆς ἐπιλάχοι, σπείρειν καὶ γεννᾶν ὅμοια τοῖς φυτεύουσι.
- 41 IX. Ψυχὴν δὲ φύσεως τρισὶ διαλλάττουσαν ὁ ποιῶν ἐποίει, αἰσθήσει, φαντασίᾳ, ὄρμηϊ· τὰ μὲν γὰρ φυτὰ ἀόρμητα, ἀφάνταστα, αἰσθήσεως ἀμέτοχα, τῶν δὲ ζώων ἕκαστον ἀθρώων μετέχει τῶν εἰρη-
 42 μένων. αἰσθησις μὲν οὖν, ὡς αὐτὸ που δηλοῖ τοῦνομα, εἴσθεσις τις οὕσα τὰ φανέντα ἐπεισφέρει τῷ νῷ· τούτῳ γάρ, ἐπειδὴ μέγιστόν ἐστι ταμείον καὶ πανδεχές, πάνθ' ὅσα δι' ὀράσεως καὶ ἀκοῆς καὶ τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθητικῶν ὀργάνων ἐντίθεται καὶ
 43 ἐναποθησαυρίζεται. φαντασία δὲ ἐστι τύπωσις |
 [279] ἐν ψυχῇ· ὧν<sup>1</sup> γὰρ εἰσήγαγεν ἐκάστη τῶν αἰσθήσεων, ὥσπερ δακτύλιός τις ἢ σφραγὶς ἐναπεμάξατο τὸν οἰκεῖον χαρακτῆρα· κηρῷ δὲ εἰκῶς ὁ νοῦς τὸ ἐκμαγεῖον δεξάμενος ἄκρως παρ' ἑαυτῷ φυλάττει, μέχρις ἂν ἡ ἀντίπαλος μνήμη τὸν τύπον λεάνασα
 44 λήθῃ ἀμυδρὸν ἐργάσθαι ἢ παντελῶς ἀφανίσῃ. τὸ δὲ φανὲν καὶ τυπῶσαν τοτὲ μὲν οἰκείως τοτὲ δὲ ὡς ἑτέρως διέθηκε τὴν ψυχὴν. τοῦτο δὲ αὐτῆς τὸ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἢν or ε' or α.

<sup>a</sup> "The word φαντασία, 'appearance' or 'appearing,' is a technical term in Stoic logic for which no one English equivalent is as yet unanimously adopted. It denotes the immediate datum of consciousness or experience, whether presented to the sense or in certain cases to the mind. Hence provides nourishment, like the mother to the infant, through some hidden channels, which correspond to the breasts in women, and she ceases not to minister this nourishment till the fruit is brought to its consummation. That consummation comes to the fully 40 ripened fruit, when, if none pluck it, it automatically seeks to disengage itself from its organism, since it needs no longer the nurture which its parent supplies, and is capable, if it chance to drop on good soil, of sowing and producing other plants similar to those which gave it its existence.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 39-44

IX. Life was made by its creator different from 41 growth in three ways. It has sensation, "presentation,"<sup>a</sup> impulse. For plants have no impulse, no "presentation," no gift of sense-perception, while each living creature participates in all three combined. Sensation or sense, as the name itself shews, 42 is "a putting in," and introduces what has appeared to it to the mind. For mind is a vast and receptive storehouse in which all that comes through sight or hearing and the other organs of sense is placed and treasured.

"Presentation" is an imprint 43 made on the soul. For, like a ring or seal, it stamps<sup>b</sup> on the soul the image corresponding to everything which each of the senses has introduced. And the mind like wax receives the impress and retains it vividly, until forgetfulness the opponent of memory levels out the imprint, and makes it indistinct, or entirely effaces it. But the object which has pre- 44 sented itself and made the impression has an effect upon the soul sometimes of an appropriate kind,<sup>b</sup> sometimes the reverse. And this condition or state 'presentation' is nearer than 'perception' or 'impression' (Hicks on Diog. Laert. vii. 43; Loeb translation, vol. ii. p. 152).

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 484.

PHILO

πάθος ὀρμή καλεῖται, ἣν ὀριζόμενοι πρώτην ἔφασαν εἶναι ψυχῆς κίνησιν.

- 45 Τοσοῦτοις μὲν δὴ ζῶα προὔχει φυτῶν· ἴδωμεν δὲ τίνι τῶν ἄλλων ζώων ὑπερβέβληκεν ἄνθρωπος. Χ. ἐξαιρέτον οὗτος τοίνυν γέρας ἔλαχε διάνοιαν, ἣ τὰς ἀπάντων φύσεις σωμάτων τε ὁμοῦ καὶ πραγμάτων εἴωθε καταλαμβάνειν. καθάπερ γὰρ ἐν μὲν τῷ σώματι τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν ὄψις ἐστίν, ἐν δὲ τῷ παντὶ ἢ τοῦ φωτὸς φύσις, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον
- 46 καὶ τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν τὸ κρατιστεῦον ὁ νοῦς· ψυχῆς γὰρ ὄψις οὗτος οἰκειαῖς περιλαμπόμενος ἀνγαῖς, δι' ὧν ὁ πολὺς καὶ βαθὺς ζόφος, ὃν κατέχεεν ἄγνοια τῶν πραγμάτων, ἀνασκιδνᾶται. τοῦτο τῆς ψυχῆς τὸ εἶδος οὐκ ἐκ τῶν αὐτῶν στοιχείων, ἐξ ὧν τὰ ἄλλα ἀπετελεῖτο, διεπλάσθη, καθαρωτέρας δὲ καὶ ἀμείνονος ἔλαχε τῆς οὐσίας, ἐξ ἧς αἱ θεῖαι φύσεις ἐδημιουργοῦντο· παρὸ καὶ μόνον τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν εἰ-
- 47 κότες ἀφθαρτον ἔδοξεν εἶναι διάνοια. μόνην γὰρ αὐτὴν ὁ γεννήσας πατὴρ ἐλευθερίας ἠξίωσε, καὶ τὰ τῆς ἀνάγκης ἀνεῖς δεσμὰ ἀφετον εἴασε, δωρησάμενος αὐτῇ τοῦ πρεπωδεστάτου καὶ οἰκείου κτήματος αὐτῷ, τοῦ ἔκουσιου, μοῖραν, ἣν ἡδύνατο δέξασθαι· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλα ζῶα, ὧν ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς τὸ ἐξαιρούμενον εἰς ἐλευθερίαν, νοῦς, οὐκ ἔστι, καταζευχθέντα καὶ ἐγχαλινωθέντα πρὸς ὑπηρεσίαν ἀνθρώποις παραδέδοται ὥσπερ οἰκέται δεσπόταις, ὁ δὲ ἄνθρωπος ἐθελουργοῦ καὶ αὐτοκελεύστου γνώμης λαχὼν καὶ προαιρετικαῖς χρώμενος τὰ πολλὰ ταῖς ἐνεργείαις εἰκότως ψόγον μὲν ἔσχεν ἐφ' οἷς ἐκ προνοίας ἀδικεῖ, ἔπαινον δὲ ἐφ' οἷς ἐκὼν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 484.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 485.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the stars, cf. De Gig. 7. See App. Vol. II. p. 502.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 44-47

of the soul is called impulse or appetite, which has been defined as the first movement of the soul.<sup>a</sup>

In all these ways living creatures excel plants. 45
Let us now see where man has been made superior to other animals. X. We find that the special prerogative he has received is mind, habituated to apprehend the natures both of all material objects and of things in general. For as sight holds the leading place in the body, and the quality of light holds the leading place in the universe, so too in us the dominant element is the mind. For mind is the sight of the 46 soul,<sup>a</sup> illuminated by rays peculiar to itself, whereby the vast and profound darkness, poured upon it by ignorance of things, is dispersed. This branch of the soul was not formed of the same elements, out of which the other branches were brought to completion, but it was allotted something better and purer,<sup>b</sup> the substance in fact out of which<sup>c</sup> divine natures were wrought. And therefore it is reasonably held that the mind alone in all that makes us what we are is indestructible. For it is mind alone which the 47
Father who begat it judged worthy of freedom, and loosening the fetters of necessity, suffered it to range as it listed, and of that free-will which is His most peculiar possession and most worthy of His majesty gave it such portion as it was capable of receiving. For the other living creatures in whose souls the mind, the element set apart for liberty, has no place, have been committed under yoke and bridle to the service of men, as slaves to a master. But man, possessed of a spontaneous and self-determined will, whose activities for the most part rest on deliberate choice, is with reason blamed for what he does wrong with intent, praised when he acts rightly of

PHILO

- 48 κατορθοῖ. τῶν μὲν γὰρ ἄλλων φυτῶν τε καὶ ζώων οὔτε αἱ εὐφορίαι ἐπαινεταὶ οὔθ' αἱ κακοπραγίαι ψεκταὶ—τὰς γὰρ ἐφ' ἐκάτερα κινήσεις καὶ μεταβολὰς ἀπροαιρέτους καὶ ἀκουσίους ἔλαβον—, μόνη δὲ ἡ ἀνθρώπου ψυχὴ δεξαμένη παρὰ θεοῦ τὴν ἐκούσιον κίνησιν καὶ κατὰ τοῦτο μάλιστα ὁμοιωθεῖσα αὐτῷ, χαλεπῆς καὶ ἀργαλεωτάτης δεσποίνης, [280] τῆς ἀνάγκης, ὡς οἶόν τε ἦν ἐλευθερωθεῖσα | κατηγορίας ἂν δεόντως τυγχάνοι, ὅτι τὸν ἐλευθερώσαντα οὐ περιέπει· τοιγάρτοι τὴν κατ' ἀπελευθέρων ἀχαρίστων ἀπαραίτητον δίκην ὀρθότατα τίσει.
- 49 “Ὡστε “ ἐνεθυμήθη καὶ διενόηθη ὁ θεὸς ” οὐχὶ νῦν πρῶτον, ἀλλ' ἐξέτι πάλαι παγίως καὶ βεβαίως, “ ὅτι ἐποίησε τὸν ἄνθρωπον,” τουτέστιν ὁποῖον αὐτὸν εἰργάσατο· εἰργάσατο γὰρ αὐτὸν ἄφετον καὶ ἐλεύθερον, ἐκουσίους καὶ προαιρετικαῖς χρῆσόμενον ταῖς ἐνεργείαις πρὸς τήνδε τὴν χρείαν, ἵνα ἐπιστάμενος ἀγαθὰ τε αὐτῷ καὶ κακὰ καὶ καλῶν καὶ αἰσχυρῶν λαμβάνων ἔνοιαν καὶ δικαίοις καὶ ἀδίκους καὶ ὅλως τοῖς ἀπ' ἀρετῆς καὶ κακίας καθαρῶς ἐπιβάλλων αἰρέσει μὲν τῶν ἀμεινόνων, φυγῇ δὲ τῶν
- 50 ἐναντίων χρῆται. παρὸ καὶ λόγιόν ἐστι τοιοῦτον ἀναγεγραμμένον ἐν Δευτερονομίῳ· “ ἰδοὺ δέδωκα πρὸ προσώπου σου τὴν ζωὴν καὶ τὸν θάνατον, τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ τὸ κακόν, ἔκλεξαι τὴν ζωὴν.” οὐκοῦν ἀμφότερα διὰ τούτου παρίσταται, ὅτι καὶ ἐπιστήμονες τῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν ἐναντίων γεγόνασιν ἄνθρωποι καὶ ὀφείλουσι πρὸ τῶν χειρόνων αἰρεῖσθαι τὰ κρείττω λογισμὸν ἔχοντες ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ὥσπερ τινὰ δικαστὴν ἀδωροδόκητον, οἷς ἂν

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 48-50

his own will. In the others, the plants and animals, 48 no praise is due if they bear well, nor blame if they fare ill : for their movements and changes in either direction come to them from no deliberate choice or volition of their own. But the soul of man alone has received from God the faculty of voluntary movement, and in this way especially is made like to Him, and thus being liberated, as far as might be, from that hard and ruthless mistress, necessity, may justly be charged with guilt, in that it does not honour its Liberator. And therefore it will rightly pay the in-exorable penalty which is meted to ungrateful freedmen.

Thus God " had it in His mind and bethought 49 Him " not now for the first time, but ever from of old—a thought that was fixed and stedfast—" that He had made man," that is He thought of what nature He had made him. He had made him free and unfettered, to employ his powers of action with voluntary and deliberate choice for this purpose,
that, knowing good and ill and receiving the conception of the noble and the base, and setting himself in sincerity to apprehend just and unjust and in general what belongs to virtue and what to vice, he might practise to choose the better and eschew the opposite.

And therefore we have an 50
oracle of this kind recorded in Deuteronomy. " Behold, I have set before thy face life and death, good and evil ; choose life " (Deut. xxx. 15, 19). So then in this way He puts before us both truths ; first that men have been made with a knowledge both of good and evil, its opposite ; secondly, that it is their duty to choose the better rather than the worse, because they have, as it were, within them an incorruptible

PHILO

ὁ ὀρθὸς ὑποβάλλη λόγος πεισθησόμενον, οἷς δ' ἂν ὁ ἐναντίος ἀπειθήσονται.

- 51 XI. Δεδηλωκότες οὖν ἀποχρώντως περὶ τούτων τὰ ἐξῆς ἴδωμεν. ἔστι δὲ ταῦτα· “ἀπαλείψω τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃν ἐποίησα ἀπὸ προσώπου τῆς γῆς, ἀπὸ ἀνθρώπου ἕως κτήνους, ἀπὸ ἐρπετῶν ἕως πετεινῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ὅτι ἐθυμώθη, ὅτι ἐποίησα αὐτόν.”
- 52 πάλιν τινὲς τῶν εἰρημένων ἀκούσαντες ὑπολαμβάνουσι θυμοῖς καὶ ὀργαῖς χρῆσθαι τὸ ὄν. ἔστι δ' οὐδενὶ ληπτὸν πάθει τὸ παράπαν· ἀσθενείας γὰρ ἀνθρωπίνης τὸ κηραίνειν ἴδιον, θεῶ δὲ οὔτε τὰ ψυχῆς ἄλογα πάθη οὔτε τὰ σώματος μέρη καὶ μέλη συνόλως ἔστιν οἰκεία. λέγεται δὲ οὐδὲν ἦττον παρὰ τῷ νομοθέτῃ μέχρι τινὸς εἰσαγωγῆς τὰ τοιαῦτα, τοῦ νουθετῆσαι χάριν τοὺς
- 53 ἐτέρως μὴ δυναμένους σωφρονίζεσθαι. τῶν γὰρ ἐν ταῖς προστάξεσι καὶ ἀπαγορεύσει νόμων, οἳ δὴ κυρίως εἰσὶ νόμοι, δύο τὰ ἀνωτάτω πρόκειται κεφάλαια περὶ τοῦ αἰτίου, ἐν μὲν ὅτι “οὐχ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ θεός,” ἕτερον δὲ ὅτι ὡς ἄνθρωπος.
- 54 ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν πρότερον ἀληθείᾳ βεβαιωτάτη πεπίστωται, τὸ δ' ὕστερον πρὸς τὴν τῶν πολλῶν διδασκαλίαν εἰσάγεται· παρὸ καὶ | λέγεται ἐπ' αὐτοῦ· “ὡς ἄνθρωπος παιδεύσει τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ”· ὥστε παιδείας ἕνεκα καὶ νουθεσίας, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τῷ πεφυκέναι τοι-
- 55 οὔτον εἶναι λέλεκται. τῶν γὰρ ἀνθρώπων οἳ μὲν ψυχῆς, οἳ δὲ σώματος γεγόνασι φίλοι· οἳ μὲν οὖν ψυχῆς ἐταῖροι νοηταῖς καὶ ἀσωμάτοις φύσεσιν ἐνομιλεῖν δυνάμενοι οὐδεμιᾷ τῶν γεγονότων ἰδέα παραβάλλουσι τὸ ὄν, ἀλλ' ἐκβιβάσαντες αὐτὸ πάσης

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 485.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 50-55

judge in the reasoning faculty, which will accept all that right reason suggests and reject the promptings of its opposite.

XI. Having made this point sufficiently clear let us consider the next words, which are as follows, "I will blot out man whom I made from the face of the earth, from man to beast, from creeping things to fowls of heaven, because I was wroth in that I made him" (Gen. vi. 7). Again, some on hearing these words suppose that the Existent feels wrath and anger, whereas He is not susceptible to any passion at all. For disquiet is peculiar to human weakness, but neither the unreasoning passions of the soul, nor the parts and members of the body in general, have any relation to God.

All the same the Law-giver uses such expressions, just so far as they serve for a kind of elementary lesson, to admonish those who could not otherwise be brought to their senses. Thus, in the laws which deal with commands and prohibitions (laws, that is, in the proper sense of the word),<sup>a</sup> there stand forth above others two leading statements<sup>a</sup> about the Cause, one that "God is not as a man" (Num. xxiii. 19); the other that He is as a man. But while the former is warranted by grounds of surest truth, the latter is introduced for the instruction of the many. And therefore also it is said of Him "like a man He shall train His son" (Deut. viii. 5). And thus it is for training and admonition, not because God's nature is such, that these words are used. Among men some are soul lovers, some body lovers. The comrades of the soul, who can hold converse with intelligible incorporeal natures, do not compare the Existent to any form of created things. They have dissociated Him from every cate-

PHILO

ποιότητος—ἐν γάρ τι τῶν εἰς τὴν μακαριότητα αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν ἄκραν εὐδαιμονίαν ἦν τὸ ψιλὴν ἄνευ χιρακτῆρος τὴν ὑπαρξίν καταλαμβάνεσθαι—τὴν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι φαντασίαν μόνην ἐνεδέξαντο μὴ μορ-
 56 φώσαντες αὐτό. οἱ δὲ συμβάσεις καὶ σπονδὰς πρὸς σῶμα θέμενοι, ἀδυνατοῦντες ἀπαμφιάσασθαι τὸ σαρκῶν περίβλημα καὶ μόνην καὶ καθ' ἑαυτὴν ἀπροσδεᾶ καὶ ἀπλὴν φύσιν ἰδεῖν ἀμιγῆ καὶ ἀσύγκριτον, οἷα περὶ ἑαυτῶν τοιαῦτα καὶ περὶ τοῦ πάντων αἰτίου διανοήθησαν, οὐ λογισάμενοι ὅτι τῷ μὲν ἐκ πλειόνων συνόδου δυνάμεων γενομένῳ πλειόνων ἔδει μερῶν πρὸς τὴν τῶν καθ' ἕκαστον χρεῖων ὑπηρεσίαν, XII. ὁ δὲ θεὸς ἅτε ἀγένητος ὢν καὶ τὰ ἄλλα ἀγαγὼν εἰς γένεσιν οὐδενὸς ἐδεήθη
 57 τῶν τοῖς γεννήμασι προσόντων· ἐπεὶ καὶ τί φῶμεν; εἰ κέχρηται τοῖς ὀργανικοῖς μέρεσι, βάσεις μὲν ἔχει τοῦ προέρχεσθαι χάριν—βαδιεῖται δὲ ποῖ πεπληρωκῶς τὰ πάντα; καὶ πρὸς τίνα μηδενὸς ὄντος ἰσοτίμου; καὶ ἔνεκα τοῦ; οὐ γὰρ ὑγείας φροντίζων ὥσπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς—καὶ χεῖρας μέντοι πρὸς τὸ λαβεῖν τε καὶ δοῦναι· λαμβάνει μὲν δὴ παρ' οὐδενὸς οὐδέν—πρὸς γὰρ τῷ ἀνεπιδεεῖ καὶ τὰ σύμπαντα ἔχει κτήματα—, δίδωσι δὲ λόγῳ χρώμενος ὑπηρέτη δωρεῶν, ᾧ καὶ τὸν κόσμον
 58 εἰργάζετο. ὀφθαλμῶν γε μὴν οὐκ ἐδεῖτο, οἷς ἄνευ φωτὸς αἰσθητοῦ κατάληψις οὐ γίνεται· τὸ δὲ αἰσθητὸν φῶς γενητόν, ἑώρα δὲ ὁ θεὸς καὶ πρὸ γενέ-
 59 σεως φωτὶ χρώμενος ἑαυτῷ. τί δὲ δεῖ λέγειν περὶ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 485.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 55-59

gory or quality, for it is one of the facts which go to make His blessedness and supreme felicity that His being is apprehended as simple being, without other definite characteristic ; and thus they do not picture it with form, but admit to their minds the conception of existence only. But those who have 56 made a compact and a truce with the body are unable to cast off from them the garment of flesh, and to descry existence needing nothing in its unique solitariness, and free from all admixture and composition in its absolute simplicity. And therefore they think of the Cause of all in the same terms as of themselves, and do not reflect that while a being which is formed through the union of several faculties needs several parts to minister to the need of each, XII. God being uncreated and the Author of the creation of the others needs none of the properties which belong to the creatures which He has brought into being.

For consider, if He uses our 57 bodily parts or organs He has feet to move from one place to another. But whither will He go or walk since His presence fills everything ? To whom will He go, when none is His equal ? And for what purpose will He walk ? For it cannot be out of care for health as it is with us.<sup>a</sup> Hands He must have to receive and give. Yet He receives nothing from anyone, for, besides that He has no needs, all things are His possessions, and when He gives, He employs as minister of His gifts the Reason wherewith also He made the world. Nor did He need eyes, which 58 have no power of perception without the light which meets our sense. But that light is created, whereas God saw before creation, being Himself His own light. Why need we speak of the organs of nourish- 59

PHILO

τῶν τῆς τροφῆς ὀργάνων; εἰ γὰρ ταῦτ' ἔχει, καὶ τρέφεται καὶ πληρωθεὶς μὲν ἀποπαύεται,<sup>1</sup> παυσάμενος δὲ δεῖται πάλιν, καὶ τὰλλα ὅσα τούτοις ἀκόλουθα οὐκ ἂν εἴποιμι· ἀσεβῶν αὐται μυθοποιαὶ λόγῳ μὲν ἀνθρωπόμορφον ἔργῳ δὲ ἀνθρωποπαθῆς

- 60 εἰσαγόντων τὸ θεῖον. XIII. τίνος οὖν
 [232] ἔνεκα Μωυσῆς βάσεις, χεῖρας, εἰσόδους, | ἐξόδους φησὶν εἶναι περὶ τὸ ἀγένητον, τίνος δὲ χάριν ὄπλισιν τὴν πρὸς ἐχθρῶν ἄμυναν; ξιφηφοροῦντα γὰρ <εἰσάγει> καὶ βέλεσι χρώμενον καὶ πνεύμασι καὶ φθοροποιῶ πυρί—καταιγίδα καὶ κεραυνὸν ἐτέροις ὀνόμασι ταῦτα ποιηταὶ προσαγορεύοντες ὄπλα τοῦ αἰτίου φασὶν εἶναι—, πρὸς δὲ ἔτι ζῆλον, θυμόν, ὀργάς, ὅσα τούτοις ὅμοια ἀνθρωπολογῶν διεξέρχεται; ἀλλὰ τοῖς πυνθανομένοις ἀποκρίνεται·
 61 ὦ οὔτοι, τῷ ἄριστα νομοθετήσοντι τέλος ἐν δεῖ προκείσθαι, πάντας ὠφελῆσαι τοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας. οἱ μὲν οὖν εὐμοίρου φύσεως λαχόντες καὶ ἀγωγῆς ἐν πᾶσιν ἀνυπαιτίου, τὴν μετὰ ταῦθ' ὁδὸν τοῦ βίου λεωφόρον καὶ εὐθείαν εὐρίσκοντες, ἀληθείᾳ συνοδοιπόρῳ χρῶνται, παρ' ἧς μνηθέντες τὰ περὶ τοῦ ὄντος ἀψευδῆ μυστήρια τῶν γενέσεως οὐδὲν προσ-
 62 αναπλάττουσιν αὐτῷ. τούτοις οἰκειότατον πρόκειται κεφάλαιον ἐν τοῖς ἱεροφαντηθεῖσι χρησιμοῖς, ὅτι “ οὐχ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ θεός,” ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὡς οὐρανὸς οὐδ' ὡς κόσμος· ποιά γὰρ εἶδη ταῦτά γε καὶ εἰς αἴσθησιν ἐρχόμενα, ὁ δ' ἄρα οὐδὲ τῷ νῶ καταληπτὸς ὅτι μὴ κατὰ τὸ εἶναι μόνον· ὑπαρξίς

<sup>1</sup> Wend. with some mss. ἀποπατεῖ, but see App. p. 485.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 485.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 59-62

ment? If He has them, He eats and is filled, rests awhile and after the rest has need again, and the accompaniments of this I will not dwell upon. These are the mythical fictions of the impious, who, professing to represent the deity as of human form, in reality represent Him as having human passions.

XIII. Why then does Moses speak of feet and hands, 60 goings in and goings out in connexion with the Uncreated, or of His arming to defend Himself against His enemies? For he describes Him as bearing a sword, and using as His weapons winds and death-dealing fire (thunderbolt and storm blast the poets call them, using different words, and say they are the weapons of the Cause). Why again does he speak of His jealousy, His wrath, His moods of anger, and the other emotions similar to them, which he describes in terms of human nature? But to those who ask these questions Moses answers thus: "Sirs, 61 the lawgiver who aims at the best must have one end only before him—to benefit all whom his work reaches. Those to whose lot has fallen a generously gifted nature and a training blameless throughout, and who thus find that their later course through life lies in a straight and even highway, have truth for their fellow-traveller, and being admitted by her into the infallible mysteries of the Existent do not overlay the conception of God with any of the attributes of created being. These find 62 a moral most pertinent in the oracles of revelation, that "God is not as a man" nor yet is He as the heaven or the universe.<sup>a</sup> These last are forms of a particular kind which present themselves to our senses. But He is not apprehensible even by the mind, save in the fact that He is. For it is His

PHILO

- γὰρ ἔσθ' ἦν καταλαμβάνομεν αὐτοῦ, τῶν δέ γε
 63 χωρὶς ὑπάρξεως οὐδέν. XIV. οἱ δέ γε νωθεστέρα μὲν καὶ ἀμβλεία κεκρημένοι τῇ φύσει, περὶ δὲ τὰς ἐν παισὶ τροφὰς πλημμεληθέντες, ὄξυ
 καθορᾶν ἀδυνατοῦντες ἰατρῶν δέονται νουθετη-τῶν,<sup>1</sup> οἱ πρὸς τὸ παρὸν πάθος τὴν οἰκείαν ἐπι-64 νοήσουσι θεραπείαν· ἐπεὶ καὶ ἀναγώγοις καὶ
 ἄφροσιν οἰκέταις φοβερὸς δεσπότης ὠφέλιμος, τὰς
 γὰρ ἐπανατάσεις καὶ ἀπειλὰς αὐτοῦ δεδιότες
 ἄκοντες φόβῳ νουθετοῦνται. μανθανέτωσαν οὖν πάντες οἱ τοιοῦτοι τὰ ψευδῆ, δι' ὧν ὠφελήθησονται, εἰ μὴ δύνανται δι' ἀληθείας σωφρονίζεσθαι.
 65 καὶ γὰρ τοῖς τὰ σώματα κάμνουσιν
 ἐπισφαλῶς οἱ δοκιμώτατοι<sup>2</sup> τῶν ἰατρῶν τάληθῆ λαλεῖν οὐχ ὑπομένουσιν εἰδότες ἀθυμοτέρους μὲν
 ἐκ τούτου γενησομένους καὶ οὐ ῥωσθησομένην<sup>3</sup>
 τὴν νόσον, ἐκ δὲ τῆς τῶν ἐναντίων παρηγορίας
 πραότερον τὰ ἐν χερσὶν οἴσοντας καὶ τὸ ἀρρώστημα 66 λωφῆσον. τίς γὰρ ἂν τῶν εὖ φρονούντων εἴποι
 τῷ θεραπευομένῳ ὧ οὗτος, τετμήση, κεκαύση, ἀκρωτηριασθήση, κἂν εἰ μέλλοι ταῦτ' ἐξ ἀνάγκης
 ὑπομένειν; οὐδεὶς ἐρεῖ. προαναπεσὼν γὰρ τὴν γνώμην ἐκείνος καὶ νόσον ἑτέραν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀρ-γαλεωτέραν τῆς προϋπούσης τοῦ σώματος προσ-
 [283] λαβὼν ἀπερεῖ πρὸς τὴν θεραπείαν, ἄσμενος | δὲ
 ἐκ<sup>4</sup> τοῦ τὰ ἐναντία ἀπάτη τοῦ θεραπεύοντος προσ-δοκῆσαι τλητικῶς πάνθ' ὑποστήσεται, κἂν ἀλ-67 γεινότατα ἦ τὰ σώζοντα. γενόμενος οὖν τῶν τῆς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. νομοθετῶν, which Adler would retain.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. νομιμώτατοι.

<sup>3</sup> Perhaps, as Cohn suggests, omit οὐ—"the disease will gain strength."

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 62-67

existence which we apprehend, and of what lies outside that existence nothing. XIV. But 63 they whose natural wit is more dense and dull, or whose early training has been mishandled, since they have no power of clear vision, need physicians in the shape of admonishers, who will devise the treatment proper to their present condition. Thus ill-disciplined 64 and foolish slaves receive profit from a master who frightens them, for they fear his threats and menaces and thus involuntarily are schooled by fear. All such may well learn the untruth, which will benefit them, if they cannot be brought to wisdom by truth.

Thus too in dealing with dangerous 65 sicknesses of the body,<sup>a</sup> the most approved physicians do not allow themselves to tell the truth to their patients, since they know that this will but increase their disheartenment, and bring no recovery from the malady, whereas under the encouragement, which the opposite course of treatment gives, they will bear more contentedly their present trouble, and at the same time the disease will be relieved.

For what sensible physician would say to his patient, 66 "Sir, you will be subjected to the knife, the cautery or amputation" even if it will be necessary that he should submit to such operations. No one. For the patient will lose heart beforehand, and add to the existing malady of the body a still more painful malady of the soul and break down when faced with the treatment. Whereas if through the physician's deceit he expects the opposite, he will gladly endure<sup>b</sup> everything with patience, however painful the methods of saving him may be. So then the lawgiver, 67

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 485.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 486.

---

<sup>4</sup> Conj. Tr. : mss. ἀσμενος ἐκ δὲ. See App. p. 486.

PHILO

- ψυχῆς παθῶν καὶ νοσημάτων ἄριστος ἰατρὸς ὁ νομοθέτης ἐν ἔργον καὶ τέλος προϋθετο, αὐταῖς
 ρίζαις τὰς τῆς διανοίας νόσους ἐκτεμεῖν, ἵνα μὴ τις ὑπολειφθεῖσα βλάβστην ἀρρωστήματος ἐνέγκῃ δυσ-68 ἰάτου. τοῦτον δὴ τὸν τρόπον ἤλπισεν ἐκκόψαι
 δυνήσεσθαι, εἰ χρώμενον ἀπειλαῖς καὶ ἀγανακτήσῃσι
 καὶ ἀπαραιτήτοις ὀργαῖς, ἔτι δὲ ἀμυντηρίοις ὄπλοις
 πρὸς τὰς κατὰ τῶν ἀδικούντων ἐπεξόδους εἰσαγάγοι
 τὸ αἴτιον· μόνως γὰρ οὕτως ὁ ἄφρων νουθετεῖται.
 69 παρὸ μοι δοκεῖ τοῖς προειρημένοις δυσὶ κεφαλαίοις,
 τῷ τε “ὡς ἄνθρωπος” καὶ τῷ “οὐχ ὡς ἄνθρωπος
 ὁ θεὸς” ἕτερα δύο συννηθῆναι ἀκόλουθα καὶ συγγενῆ, φόβον τε καὶ ἀγάπην· τὰς γὰρ διὰ τῶν νόμων εἰς εὐσέβειαν ὀρῶ παρακελεύσεις ἀπάσας ἀναφερομένας
 ἢ πρὸς τὸ ἀγαπᾶν ἢ πρὸς τὸ φοβεῖσθαι τὸν ὄντα.
 τοῖς μὲν οὖν μῆτε μέρος μῆτε πάθος ἀνθρώπου
 περὶ τὸ ὄν νομίζουσιν, ἀλλὰ θεοπρεπῶς αὐτὸ δι’
 αὐτὸ μόνον τιμῶσι τὸ ἀγαπᾶν οἰκειότατον, φοβεῖσθαι
 δὲ τοῖς ἑτέροις.
 70 XV. Ἄ μὲν οὖν προκαταστήσασθαι τῆς ζητή-σεως ἀρμόττον ἦν, τοιαῦτά ἐστιν. ἐπανιτέον δὲ
 ἐπὶ τὴν ἐξ ἀρχῆς σκέψιν, καθ’ ἣν ἠποροῦμεν,
 τίνα ὑπογράφει νοῦν τὸ “ἐθυμώθη ὅτι ἐποίησα αὐτούς.” ἴσως οὖν τοιοῦτόν τι βούλεται παραστήσαι, ὅτι οἱ μὲν φαῦλοι θυμῷ γεγόνασι θεοῦ, οἱ
 δ’ ἀγαθοὶ χάριτι. καὶ γὰρ ἐξῆς φησι· “Νῶε δὲ 71 εὖρε χάριν.” τὸ δὲ κυριολογούμενον ἐπ’ ἀνθρώπων
 πάθος ὁ θυμὸς εὐθυβόλως<sup>1</sup> εἴρηται τροπικώτερον

<sup>1</sup> εὐθυβόλως is omitted in some mss. It may be merely an addition to explain κυριολογούμενον.

* See App. p. 486.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 67-71

thereby being now approved as the best of physicians for the distempers and maladies of the soul, set before himself one task and purpose, to make a radical excision of the diseases of the mind and leave no root to sprout again into sickness which defies cure. In this way he hoped to be able to eradicate the 68 evil, namely by representing the supreme Cause as dealing in threats and oftentimes shewing indignation and implacable anger, or again as using weapons of war for His onslaughts on the unrighteous. For this is the only way in which the fool can be admonished. And therefore it seems to me that with the two aforesaid maxims, " God is as a man," and " God is not as a man," he has linked two other principles closely connected and consequent on them, namely fear and love. For I observe that all the exhortations to piety in the law refer either to our loving or our fearing the Existent. And thus to love Him is the most suitable for those into whose conception of the Existent no thought of human parts or passions enters, who pay Him the honour meet for God for His own sake only. To fear is most suitable to the others.

XV. Such are the points which needed to be 70 established as preliminaries to our inquiry. We must return to the original question which caused us difficulty, namely, what thought is suggested by the words " I was wroth in that I made them." <sup>a</sup> Perhaps then he wishes to shew us that the bad have become what they are through the wrath of God and the good through His grace. For the next words are " but Noah found grace with Him " (Gen. vi. 8). Now the passion of wrath, which is properly speaking 71 an attribute of men, is here used in a more meta-ἐπὶ τοῦ ὄντος εἰς τὴν ἀναγκαιοτάτου<sup>1</sup> πράγματος δῆλωσιν, ὅτι πάνθ' ὅσα δι' ὀργὴν ἢ φόβον ἢ λύπην ἢ ἡδονὴν ἢ τι τῶν ἄλλων παθῶν πράττομεν, ὑπαίτια καὶ ἐπίληπτα ὁμολογουμένως ἐστίν, ὅσα δὲ μετ' ὀρθότητος λόγου καὶ ἐπιστήμης, ἐπαινετά.

PHILO

72 ὄρα<sup>ς</sup> ὅση καὶ περὶ τὴν προφορὰν κέχρηται προφυλακῆ, ὅτι “ ἐθυμώθην, ὅτι ἐποίησα αὐτούς ” εἰπὼν, ἀλλ' οὐ κατ' ἀναστροφὴν· διότι ἐποίησα αὐτούς, ἐθυμώθην. τοῦτο μὲν γὰρ μετανοοῦντος ἦν, ὅπερ ἢ τὰ πάντα προμηθουμένη θεοῦ φύσις οὐκ ἀνέχεται, ἐκεῖνο δὲ δόγμα συνεκτικώτατον εἰσηγουμένου, ὅτι πηγὴ μὲν ἀμαρτημάτων θυμός,

73 λογισμὸς δὲ κατορθωμάτων. μεμνημένος δὲ τῆς περὶ πάντα τελείας ἀγαθότητος ἑαυτοῦ ὁ θεός, κὰν τὸ σύμπαν ἀνθρώπων πλῆθος ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ δι' ὑπερβολὰς ἀμαρτημάτων περιπίπτῃ,<sup>2</sup> τὴν δεξιὰν καὶ

[284] σωτήριον χεῖρα ὀρέγων ὑπολαμβάνει | καὶ ἐξανίστησιν οὐκ ἔων εἰσάπαν φθαρῆναι καὶ ἀφανισθῆναι

74 τὸ γένος. XVI. διὸ νῦν φησι τὸν Νῶε χάριν εὔρεῖν παρ' αὐτῷ, ὅτε οἱ ἄλλοι φανέντες ἀχάριστοι τίνειν μέλλουσι δίκας, ἵνα τὸν σωτήριον ἔλεον ἀνακεράσῃται τῇ κατὰ ἀμαρτανόντων κρίσει· καθάπερ καὶ ὁ ὑμνωδὸς εἶπέ που· “ ἔλεον καὶ

75 κρίσιν ἄσομαί σοι ”· εἰ γὰρ βουληθείῃ ὁ θεὸς δικάσαι τῷ θνητῷ γένει χωρὶς ἐλέου, τὴν καταδικάζουσαν ψῆφον οἶσει μηδενὸς ἀνθρώπων τὸν ἀπὸ γενέσεως ἄχρι τελευτῆς βίον ἄπταιστον ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ δραμόντος, ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν ἔκουσίους, τὸ δὲ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀναγκαιοτάτην τοῦ.

<sup>2</sup> περιπίπτῃ suspectum: fortasse πίπτῃ (Wend.), but cf. Thuc. ii. 65 αὐτοὶ ἐν σφίσι . . . περιπεσόντες ἐσφάλησαν.

<sup>a</sup> Or “ (I will destroy him) because I was wroth in that I

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 71-75

phorical sense, yet still correctly, of the Existent, to bring out a vital truth, that all our actions by general consent are worthy of blame and censure, if done through fear or anger, or grief or pleasure, or any other passion, but worthy of praise if done with rectitude of reason and knowledge. Mark what 72 caution he shows in his form of statement. He says "I was wroth in that I made them,"<sup>a</sup> not in the reverse order, "because I made them, I was wroth." The latter would show change of mind or repentance, a thing impossible to the all-foreseeing nature of God. In the former he brings before us a doctrine of great importance that wrath is the source of misdeeds, but the reasoning faculty of right actions. But God, 73 remembering His perfect and universal goodness, even though the whole vast body of mankind should through its exceeding sinfulness accomplish its own ruin, stretches forth the right hand of salvation, takes them under His protection and raises them up, and suffers not the race to be brought to utter destruction and annihilation.

XVI. And therefore 74 it now says that when the others who had proved ungrateful were doomed to pay the penalty, Noah found grace with Him, that so He might mingle His saving mercy with the judgement pronounced on sinners. And so the Psalmist said somewhere (Ps. c. [ci.] 1), "I will sing to thee of mercy and judgement." For if God should will to judge the 75 race of mortals without mercy, His sentence will be one of condemnation, since there is no man who self-sustained has run the course of life from birth to death without stumbling, but in every case his foot-made him," i.e. the first ὅτι may (1) introduce the quotation, or (2) be part of the quotation.

PHILO

ἀκουσίοις χρησαμένου τοῖς ἐν ποσὶν ὀλισθήμασιν.
 76 Ἴν' οὖν ὑπάρχη τὸ γένος, κἂν πολλὰ τῶν εἰδικῶν
 βύθια χωρῆ, τὸν ἔλεον ἀνακίρησιν, ᾧ πρὸς εὐεργασίας καὶ τῶν ἀναξίων χρήται, καὶ οὐ μόνον δικάσας ἐλεεῖ, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐλεήσας δικάζει· πρεσβύ-τερος γὰρ δίκης ὁ ἔλεος παρ' αὐτῷ ἐστὶν ἅτε
 τὸν κολάσεως ἄξιον οὐ μετὰ τὴν δίκην, ἀλλὰ πρὸ 77 δίκης εἰδότι. XVII. διὰ τοῦτο ἐν ἐτέροις εἴρηται· “ ποτήριον ἐν χειρὶ κυρίου, οἴνου ἀκράτου πλήρες κεράσματος”· καίτοι τό γε κεκραμένον οὐκ ἄκρατον· ἀλλ' ἔχει λόγον ταῦτα φυσι-κώτατον καὶ τοῖς προειρημένοις ἀκόλουθον· ὁ γὰρ
 θεὸς ταῖς δυνάμεσι πρὸς μὲν ἑαυτὸν ἀκράτοις χρήται, κεκραμέναις δὲ πρὸς γένεσιν· τὰς γὰρ
 ἀμιγεῖς θνητὴν ἀμήχανον φύσιν χωρῆσαι. ἢ νομί-78 ζεις ἄκρατον μὲν τὴν ἡλίου φλόγα μὴ δύνασθαι θεαθῆναι—σβεσθήσεται γὰρ πρότερον ἢ ὄψις μαρμαρυγαῖς τῶν ἀκτίνων ἀμυδρωθεῖσα ἢ προσβάλλουσα καταλήψεται· καίτοι καὶ ἡλῖος ἐν ἡν ἔργον
 θεοῦ, μοῖρα οὐρανοῦ, πῖλημα αἰθέριον—, τὰς δὲ ἀγενήτους ἄρα δυνάμεις ἐκείνας, αἱ περὶ αὐτὸν
 οὐσαι λαμπρότατον φῶς ἀπαστράπτουσιν, ἀκράτους 79 περινοῆσαι δύνασθαι; ὥσπερ οὖν τὰς ἡλιακὰς ἀκτῖνας ἔτεινε μὲν ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ μέχρι τερμάτων
 γῆς τὸ σφοδρὸν τῆς ἐν αὐταῖς θερμότητος ἀνεῖς
 καὶ χαλάσας ἀέρι ψυχρῷ—τοῦτο γὰρ αὐταῖς ἀνεκεράσατο, ὅπως τὸ αὐγοειδὲς ἀπὸ τοῦ φλογώδους πυρὸς ἀνασταλέν, τὴν μὲν τοῦ καίειν μεθ-

* See App. p. 486.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 75-79

steps have slipped through errors, some voluntary, some involuntary. So then that the race may sub- 76
sist, though many of those which go to form it are swallowed up by the deep, He tempers His judgement with the mercy which He shews in doing kindness even to the unworthy. And not only does this mercy follow His judgement but it also precedes it. For mercy with Him is older than justice, since He knows who is worthy of punishment, not only after judgement is given, but before it. XVII. And 77

therefore it is said in another place, "there is a cup in the hand of the Lord of unmixed wine, full of mixture" (Ps. lxxiv. [lxxv.] 8). But surely the mixed is not unmixed, and yet there is a meaning in these words most true to nature, and in agreement with what I have said before. For the powers which God employs are unmixed in respect of Himself, but mixed to created beings. For it cannot be that mortal nature should have room for the unmixed. We cannot look even upon the sun's flame un- 78 tempered, or unmixed, for our sight will be quenched and blasted by the bright flashing of its rays, ere it reach and apprehend them, though the sun is but one of God's works in the past, a portion of heaven, a condensed mass of ether.<sup>a</sup> And can you think it possible that your understanding should be able to grasp in their unmixed purity those uncreated potencies, which stand around Him and flash forth light of surpassing splendour? When God extended the 79 sun's rays from heaven to the boundaries of earth, He mitigated and abated with cool air the fierceness of their heat. He tempered them in this way, that the radiance drawn off from the blazing flame, surrendering its power of burning but retaining that

PHILO

ειμένον δύναμιν, τὴν δὲ τοῦ φωτίζειν περιέχον τῷ ταμιευομένῳ ἐν ταῖς ὄψεσι συγγενεῖ αὐτοῦ καὶ φίλῳ ὑπαντιάσαν ἀσπάσῃται· ἡ γὰρ τούτων ἐξ ἐναντίας εἰς ταὐτὸ σύνοδος τε καὶ δεξιῶσις τὴν δι' ὀράσεως ἀντίληψιν ἐργάζεται—, οὕτως ἐπιστήμην θεοῦ καὶ σοφίαν καὶ φρόνησιν καὶ δικαιοσύνην καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἐκάστην ἀρετῶν τίς ἂν ἀκραιφνῆ δέξασθαι δύναίτο θνητὸς ὢν; ἀλλ' οὐδ' ὁ σύμπας οὐρανὸς τε καὶ κόσμος. εἰδὼς τοίνυν ὁ δημιουργὸς τὰς περὶ αὐτὸν ἐν ἅπασιν τοῖς ἀρίστοις ὑπερβολὰς καὶ τὴν τῶν γεγονότων, εἰ καὶ σφόδρα μεγα-

[285] αυχοῖεν, φυσικὴν ἀσθένειαν οὔτε | εὐεργετεῖν οὔτε κολάζειν ὡς δύναται βούλεται, ἀλλ' ὡς ἔχοντας

81 ὀρᾶ δύναμει τοὺς ἐκατέρου μεθέξοντας. εἰ δὴ τοῦ ἀνειμένου καὶ μεσότητος ἔχοντος τῶν δυνάμεων αὐτοῦ κράματος ἐμπιεῖν καὶ ἀπολαῦσαι δυναθῆναι, ἀποχρῶσαν ἂν εὐφροσύνην καρπωσαίμεθα, ἥς τελειότεραν μὴ ζητείτω λαβεῖν τὸ ἀνθρώπων γένος· ἐδείχθησαν γὰρ αἱ ἀμιγεῖς καὶ ἄκρατοι καὶ τῷ ὄντι ἀκρότητες περὶ τὸ ὄν μόνον ὑπάρχουσαι.

82 XVIII. τοῖς δ' εἰρημένοις ὁμοίον ἐστὶ καὶ τὸ ἐτέρωθι λεχθὲν “ ἅπαξ κύριος ἐλάλησε, δύο ταῦτα ἤκουσα.” τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἅπαξ ἔοικε τῷ ἀκράτῳ —καὶ γὰρ τὸ ἄκρατον μόνος καὶ ἡ μόνος ἄκρατον—, τὸ δὲ δις τῷ κεκραμένῳ· τὸ γὰρ κεκραμένον<sup>1</sup> οὐχ ἀπλοῦν ἄτε καὶ σύγκρισιν καὶ διάκρισιν ἐπιδεχόμε-

83 νον. μονάδας μὲν οὖν ἀκράτους ὁ θεὸς λαλεῖ· οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος αὐτῷ γεγωνὸς<sup>2</sup> ἀέρος πληξίς ἀναμιγνύμενος ἄλλῳ τὸ παράπαν οὐδενί, ἀλλὰ ἀσώματός

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐκάτερον γὰρ.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. γεγωνός.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 486.

<sup>b</sup> E.V. “ God hath spoken once, twice have I heard this,”

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 79-83

of giving light, might meet and hail its friend and kinsman,<sup>a</sup> the light which is stored in the treasury of our eyes ; for it is when these converge to meet and greet each other that the apprehension through vision is produced. Just in the same way if God's knowledge and wisdom and prudence and justice and each of His other excellences were not tempered, no mortal could receive them, nay not even the whole heaven and universe. The Creator then, <sup>80</sup> knowing His own surpassing excellence in all that is best and the natural weakness of His creatures, however loud they boast, will not to dispense benefit or punishment according to His power, but according to the measure of capacity which He sees in those who are to participate in either of those dispensations. If indeed we could drink and enjoy this diluted <sup>81</sup> draught, wherein is a moderate measure of His powers, we should reap sufficient gladness, and let not the human race seek a more perfect joy. For we have shewn that these powers at their full height unmixed and untempered subsist only in the Existent.

XVIII. We have something similar to <sup>82</sup> the above-mentioned words in another passage, " The Lord spake once, I have heard these two things " <sup>b</sup> (Ps. lxi. [lxii.] 11). For " once " is like the unmixed, for the unmixed is a monad and the monad is unmixed, whereas twice is like the mixed, for the mixed is not single, since it admits both combination and separation. God then speaks in unmixed <sup>83</sup> monads or unities. For His word is not a sonant impact of voice upon air, or mixed with anything else at all, but it is unbodied and unclothed and in where " once, twice " = repeatedly. The LXX probably meant the same.

PHILO

- τε καὶ γυμνός, ἀδιαφορῶν μονάδος. ἀκούομεν δ' 84 ἡμεῖς δυάδι· τὸ γὰρ ἀφ' ἡγεμονικοῦ πνεύμα διαὰ τρα-χείας ἀναπεμπόμενον ἀρτηρίας τυποῦται μὲν ἐν στό-ματι ὡσπερ ὑπὸ δημιουργοῦ τινος γλώττης, φερό-μενον δ' ἔξω καὶ ἀναμιχθὲν ἀέρι συγγενεῖ καὶ πλήξαν
 αὐτὸν τὴν δυάδος κρᾶσιν ἀρμονίως ἀποτελεῖ· τὸ γὰρ
 συνηχοῦν ἐκ φθόγγων διαφερόντων δυάδι μεριστῆ τὸ
 πρῶτον ἀρμόζεται ὁξὺν καὶ βαρὺν τόνον ἐχούση.
- 85 παγκάλως οὖν τῷ πλήθει τῶν ἀδίκων
 λογισμῶν ἀντέθηκεν ἓνα τὸν δίκαιον, ἀριθμῶ μὲν ἐλάττονα δυνάμει δὲ πλείονα, ἵνα μὴ ταλαντεῦσαν
 ὡσπερ ἐπὶ πλάστιγγος βρίση τὸ χειρὸν, ἀλλὰ κράτει
 τῆς ἐναντίας πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον ῥοπῆς ἀνακουφισθὲν ἀσθενήση.
- 86 XIX. Τί δὲ ἐστὶ τὸ “ Νῶε εὔρε χάριν ἐναντίον κυρίου τοῦ θεοῦ,” συνεπισκεψώμεθα· τῶν εὐρι-σκόντων οἱ μὲν ἂ πρότερον ἔχοντες ἀπέβαλον
 αὐθις εὐρίσκουσιν, οἱ δὲ ἂ μὴ πάλαι νῦν δὲ πρῶτον
 περιεποιήσαντο. τουτὶ μὲν οὖν τὸ ἔργον εὔρεσιν,
 ἐκεῖνο δὲ ἀνεύρεσιν οἱ ζητητικοὶ τῶν κυρίων
- 87 ὀνομάτων καλεῖν εἰώθασιν. τοῦ μὲν οὖν
 προτέρου παράδειγμα ἐναργέστατον τὰ περὶ τῆς μεγάλης εὐχῆς διατεταγμένα. ἔστι δὲ εὐχὴ μὲν αἴτησις ἀγαθῶν παρὰ θεοῦ, μεγάλη δὲ εὐχὴ
 τὸν θεὸν αἴτιον ἀγαθῶν αὐτὸν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ
 νομίζειν μηδεὶος ἑτέρου [τῶν] εἰς τὸ δοκεῖν
 ὠφελεῖν συνεργούντος, μὴ γῆς ὡς καρποτόκου, μὴ
 ὑετῶν ὡς σπέρματα καὶ φυτὰ συναυξόντων, μὴ

* See App. p. 487.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 83-87

no way different from unity. But our hearing is the product of two factors, of a dyad. For the breath 84 from the seat of the master-principle driven up through the windpipe is shaped in the mouth by the workmanship, as it were, of the tongue, and rushing out it mixes with its congener the air, and impinging on it produces in a harmonious union the mixture which constitutes the dyad.<sup>a</sup> For the consonance <sup>a</sup> caused by different sounds is harmonized in a dyad originally divided which contains a high and a low pitch.

Right well then did the lawgiver 85 act when he opposed to the multitude of unjust thoughts the just man as one—numerically less, but greater in value. His purpose is that the worse should not prove the weightier when tested as in the scales, but by the victorious force of the opposite tendency to the better cause should kick the beam and prove powerless.

XIX. Now let us consider what is meant by “Noah 86 found grace before the Lord God” (Gen. vi. 8). Finders sometimes find again what they possessed and have lost, sometimes what they did not own in the past and now gain for the first time. People who seek exactitude in the use of words are wont to call the process in the second case “finding” or “discovery” and in the first “refinding” or “recovery.”

We have a very clear example 87 of the former in the commandment of the Great Vow (Num. vi. 2). Now a vow is a request for good things from God, while a “great vow” is to hold that God Himself and by Himself is the cause of good things, that though the earth may seem to be the mother of fruits, rain to give increase to seeds and plants, air to have the power of fostering them,

PHILO

ἀέρος ὡς τρέφειν ἱκανοῦ, μὴ γεωργίας ὡς φορᾶς
 αἰτίας, μὴ ἱατρικῆς ὡς ὑγείας, μὴ γάμου ὡς γε-88 νέσεως παιδῶν. πάντα γὰρ ταῦτα δυνάμει θεοῦ
 [286] μεταβολᾶς | δέχεται καὶ τροπᾶς, ὡς τὰναντία πολ-
 λάκις τοῖς ἐξ ἔθους ἀποτελεῖν. τοῦτον οὖν φησι Μωυσῆς “ ἅγιον ” εἶναι, “ τρέφοντα κόμην τρίχα κεφαλῆς,” ὅπερ ἦν τὰς ἐν τῷ ἡγεμονικῷ τῶν ἀρετῆς
 δογμάτων κεφαλαιώδεις ἀνατολὰς συναύξοντα καὶ 89 τρόπον τινὰ κομῶντα καὶ σεμνυνόμενον ἐπ’ αὐ-ταῖς. ἀλλ’ ἔστιν ὅτε ἀπέβαλεν αὐτὰς αἰφνίδιον κατασκήψαντος οἰά τινος τυφῶνος εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν
 καὶ τὰ καλὰ πάντα αὐτῆς ἐξαρπάσαντος· ὁ δὲ
 τυφῶν οὗτος τροπὴ τίς ἐστιν ἀκούσιος παραχρήμα 90 τὸν νοῦν μαίνουσα, ἣν καλεῖ θάνατον. ἀλλ’ ὅμως ἀποβαλὼν αὐθις καὶ καθαρθεὶς ἀναλαμβάνει καὶ ἀνα-μμνήσκειται ὧν τέως ἐπελέληστο, καὶ ἅπερ ἀπέβαλεν εὐρίσκει, ὡς τὰς προτέρας τῆς τροπῆς ἡμέρας ἀλόγους ἐξετάζεσθαι, ἢ διότι παράλογον ἢ τροπὴ πρᾶγμα, ἀπᾶδον ὀρθοῦ λόγου καὶ φρονήσεως ἀμέτοχον, ἢ παρόσον οὐκ ἔστιν ἀξία καταριθμεί-σθαι· “ τῶν γὰρ τοιούτων ” ἔφη τις “ οὐ λόγος οὐδ’ 91 ἀριθμός.”

XX. πολλάκις δὲ ἐνετύχομεν

<sup>a</sup> The translation follows Mangey in omitting τῶν before εἰς τὸ δοκεῖν ὠφελεῖν. This, however, is not quite satisfactory, as εἰς τὸ δοκεῖν would naturally mean “ as regards semblance.”
 Perhaps retain τῶν and for ὠφελεῖν substitute ὠφελίμων.

<sup>b</sup> Literally “ fostering the head’s hair ” becomes the “ growths of truths,” which are of the nature of heads or leading principles, and since κομᾶν, “ to wear long hair,” also means “ to be proud,” κόμη is interpreted as the pride which we should feel in virtue. For further elucidation see App. p. 487.

<sup>c</sup> In the original no doubt this means that as contact with

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 87-91

husbandry to be the cause of the harvest, medicine the cause of health, marriage of childbirth, yet nothing else is His fellow-worker that we may think of them as bringing us benefit.<sup>a</sup> For all these things, 83 through the power of God, admit of change and transition, so as often to produce effects quite the reverse of the ordinary. He who makes this vow then, says Moses, must be "holy, suffering the hair of his head to grow<sup>b</sup>" (Num. vi. 5). This means that he must foster the young growths of virtue's truths in the mind which rules his being; these growths must be to him as it were heads, and he must take pride in them as in the glory of the hair. But sometimes he 89 loses these early growths, when as it were a whirlwind swoops suddenly down upon the soul and tears from it all that was beautiful in it. This whirlwind is a kind of involuntary defection straightway defiling the soul, and this he calls death (Num. vi. 9). He 90 has lost, yet in time, when purified, he makes good the loss, remembers what he had forgotten for a while, and finds what he has lost, so that the "former days," the days of defection, are regarded as not to be counted<sup>c</sup> (Num. vi. 12), either because defection is a thing beyond all calculation, discordant with right reason and having no partnership with prudence, or because they are not worthy to be counted. For of such as these there is, as has been said,<sup>d</sup> no count or number.

XX. On the other hand, it 91

the corpse cancels the vow, the days before the defilement must not be reckoned as part of the necessary period, and indeed Philo's Greek might be translated as "the days before the defection"; but the argument requires that the words should be taken as in the translation.

<sup>a</sup> A proverbial expression. Cf. Theocritus, Id. xiv. 48
ἀμμες δ' οὐτε λόγω τινος ἀξιοι οὐτ' ἀριθματοί.

PHILO

- τούτοις, ἃ μηδ' ὄναρ πρότερον εἶδομεν· ὥσπερ γεωπόνον φασί τινες ὑπὲρ τοῦ τι τῶν ἡμέρων δένδρων φυτεῦσαι σκάπτοντα χωρίον θησαυρῶ
- 92 περιτυχεῖν ἀνελπίστω χρησάμενον εὐτυχία. ὁ γοῦν ἀσκητῆς πυθομένου τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ τῆς ἐπιστήμης τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον· “ τί τοῦτο ὁ ταχὺ εὗρες, τέκνον; ” ἀποκρίνεται καὶ φησιν· “ ὁ παρέδωκε κύριος ὁ θεὸς ἐναντίον μου.” ὅταν γὰρ ὁ θεὸς παραδιδῶ τὰ τῆς αἰδίου<sup>1</sup> σοφίας θεωρήματα καμάτου χωρὶς καὶ πόνου, ταῦτα ἐξαίφνης οὐ προσδοκῆσαντες θησαυρὸν εὐδαιμονίας τελείας εὐρίσκομεν.
- 93 συμβαίνει δὲ πολλάκις τοῖς μὲν ἐπιπόνως ζητοῦσιν ἀποτυγχάνειν τοῦ ζητουμένου, τοῖς δ' ἄνευ φροντίδος ῥᾶστα καὶ ἃ μὴ διενεόθησαν εὐρίσκειν· οἱ μὲν γὰρ νωθέστεροι καὶ βραδεῖς τὰς ψυχὰς ὥσπερ οἱ τὰ ὄμματα πεπηρωμένοι τὸν εἰς τὸ θεωρῆσαι τι τῶν κατ' ἐπιστήμην πόνον ἴσχουσιν ἀτελεῖ, οἱ δὲ φύσεως εὐμοιρία δίχα ζητήσεως μυρίοις ἐνέτυχον εὐθυβόλῳ καὶ εὐθίκτῳ χρησάμενοι προσβολῇ, ὡς δοκεῖν αὐτοὺς μὲν μὴ σπουδάσαι τοῖς πράγμασιν ἐντυχεῖν, ἐκεῖνα δὲ μεθ' ὀρμῆς προαπαντήσαντα εἰς ὄψιν ἔλθειν ἐπειχθῆναι καὶ τὴν ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀκριβεστάτην ἐμποιῆσαι κατάληψιν.
- 94 XXI. τούτοις ὁ νομοθέτης φησὶ δίδοσθαι “ πόλεις μεγάλας καὶ καλὰς, ἃς οὐκ ὠκοδόμησαν, οἰκίας πλήρεις τῶν ἀγαθῶν, ἃς [287] οὐκ ἐνέπλησαν, λάκκους λελατομημένους, | οὓς οὐκ ἐξελατόμησαν, ἀμπελώνας καὶ ἐλαιώνας, οὓς οὐκ 95 ἐφύτευσαν.” πόλεις μὲν οὖν καὶ οἰκίας συμβολικῶς τὰς τε γενικὰς καὶ τὰς εἰδικὰς ἀρετὰς ὑπογράφει·

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἰδίου.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 91-95

is a common experience that things befall us of which we have not even dreamt, like the story of the husbandman who, digging his orchard to plant some fruit-trees, lighted on a treasure, and thus met with prosperity beyond his hopes. Thus the Practiser, 92 when his father asked him in this manner of the source of his knowledge,<sup>a</sup> "What is this that thou hast found so quickly, my son?" answered and said, "It is what the Lord God delivered before me" (Gen. xxvii. 20). For when God delivers to us the lore of His eternal wisdom without our toil or labour we find in it suddenly and unexpectedly a treasure of perfect happiness. It often happens that those 93 who seek with toil fail to find the object of their search, while others without thought and with the utmost ease find what had never crossed their minds. The slow-souled dullards, like men who have lost their eyesight, labour fruitlessly in the study of any branch of knowledge, while to others richly blessed by nature it comes unsought in myriad forms; theirs is a ready and unflinching grasp; it seems as though they trouble not to come in contact with the objects of their study, rather that these are impelled to take the lead and hurry to present themselves before the student's vision, and create in him the unerring apprehension which they have to give.

XXI. It is to these men that are given, in the law- 94 giver's words, "cities great and beautiful which they built not, houses full of good things which they did not fill, pits hewn out which they did not hew, vineyards and olive-gardens which they did not plant" (Deut. vi. 10, 11). Under the symbol of cities and 95 houses he speaks of the generic and specific virtues.

<sup>a</sup> Or "the father of his knowledge." See App. p. 487.

PHILO

- πόλει μὲν γὰρ ἔοικε τὸ γένος, ὅτι κὰν μείζουσιν ἐξετάζεται περιγραφαῖς καὶ πλειόνων κοινόν ἐστιν, εἶδος δὲ οἰκία τῷ συνῆχθαι τε μᾶλλον καὶ πεφευγέναι τὴν
- 96 κοινότητα. προητοιμασμένοι δὲ λάκκοι τὰ χωρὶς<sup>1</sup> τῶν πόνων τούτοις πρόχειρα ἄθλα, οὐρανίων καὶ ποτίμων δεξαμεναὶ ναμάτων, πρὸς φυλακὴν τῶν προειρημένων ἀρετῶν εὐτρεπεῖς θησαυροί, ἐξ ὧν εὐφροσύνη περιγίνεται ψυχῇ τελεία φῶς τὸ ἀληθείας ἀπαστράπτουσα. τοὺς μὲν οὖν ἀμπελώνας εὐφροσύνης, τοὺς δ' ἔλαιώνας φωτὸς πεποιήται σύμβολον.
- 97 εὐδαίμονες μὲν οὖν οὗτοι, παραπλήσιόν τι πάσχοντες τοῖς ἐκ βαθέος ὕπνου διανισταμένοις καὶ τὸν κόσμον ἐξαίφνης ἀπόνως καὶ χωρὶς πραγματείας ὀρώσιν, ἄθλιοι δὲ οἷς πρὸς ἅ μὴ πεφύκασιν ἀντιφιλονεικεῖν συμβαίνει, ἔριδι, ἀργαλεωτάτη νόσω,
- 98 ἐπαιρόμενοι. πρὸς γὰρ τῷ τοῦ τέλους ἀποτυγχάνειν ἔτι μετ' οὐ μικρᾶς βλάβης μεγάλην αἰσχύνην ὑπομένουσιν, ὥσπερ αἱ πρὸς ἐναντία πνεύματα νῆες ἐνθαλαττεύουσαι· πρὸς γὰρ τῷ μὴ τυγχάνειν ὑποδρόμων ἐφ' οὓς ἐπείγονται, πολλάκις αὐτοῖς πλωτῆρσι καὶ φορτίοις ἀνατραπέισαι λύπην μὲν φίλοις, ἡδονὴν δὲ ἐχθροῖς ἐμπαρέσχον.
- 99 XXII. λέγει οὖν ὁ νόμος, ὅτι “ παραβιασάμενοί τινες ἀνέβησαν ἐπὶ τὸ ὄρος, καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ Ἄμορραῖος ὁ κατοικῶν ἐν τῷ ὄρει ἐκείνῳ, καὶ ἐτίτρωσκεν αὐτούς, ὡς ἂν ποιήσειαν αἱ μέλισσαι, καὶ
- 100 ἐδίωξεν αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ Σηεῖρ ἕως Ἐρμᾶ,” ἀνάγκη γὰρ καὶ τοὺς ἀφυῶς ἔχοντας πρὸς τὰς τῶν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐτέροις.

<sup>a</sup> For the symbolism of oil = light cf. Quod Det. 118.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 487.

<sup>c</sup> E.V. “were presumptuous.” The LXX may have in-

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 95-100

For the genus resembles the city, because its limits are marked out by wider circuits and it embraces a larger number. The species on the other hand resembles the house, because it is more concentrated and avoids the idea of community. The pits which 96 they find provided are the prizes ready to be won without toil, cisterns of waters heavenly and sweet to drink, treasure-cells fitly prepared to guard the afore-mentioned virtues, from which is secured to the soul perfect gladness shedding with its beams the light of truth. And for that gladness and light he gives us a symbol in the vineyards for the former, in 97 the olive-gardens <sup>a</sup> for the latter. Happy then are these, and their case is as the state of those who waken from deep sleep, and suddenly without toil or active effort open their eyes upon the world. Miserable are those <sup>b</sup> whose lot it is to compete earnestly for ends for which they were not born, urged on by the grievous poison of contentiousness. 98 Not only do they fail to gain their end, but they incur great shame and no small damage to boot. They are like ships ploughing the seas in the face of contrary winds; for not only do they fail to reach the roadsteads to which they press, but often they capsize, vessel, crew and cargo, and are a source of grief to their friends and joy to their foes. 99

XXII. So the law says that "some went up with violence <sup>c</sup> into the mountain, and the Amorite who dwelt in that mountain came out and wounded them, as bees might do, and chased them from Seir to Hormah" (Deut. i. 43, 44). For it must needs be that 100 if those, who have no aptness for the acquisition of tended the same by παρα-. But Philo's argument turns entirely on "force" or "violence."

PHILO

τεχνῶν ἀναλήψεις, εἴ τι βιαζόμενοι ποιοῦντο περὶ
 αὐτάς, μὴ μόνον σφάλλῃσθαι τοῦ τέλους, ἀλλὰ καὶ αἰσχύνῃν ὀφλεῖν, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλο τι τῶν δεόντων ἀσυγκαταθέτω γνώμῃ πράττοντας <μὴ> ἐθελουσίως βιαζομένους δὲ τὸ παρ' αὐτοῖς ἐκούσιον μὴ κατορθοῦν, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τοῦ συνειδότης τιτρώσκεσθαι 101 τε καὶ διώκεσθαι. καὶ τοὺς τὰς ὀλιγοχρημάτους παρακαταθήκας ἀποδιδόντας ἐπὶ θήρᾳ στερήσεως
 μειζόνων εἴποις ἂν πίστει διαφέρειν <τῶν><sup>1</sup> οἱ
 καὶ ὅτε ἀπέδοσαν πολλὰ τὴν ἔμφυτον ἀπιστίαν
 ἐβίασαντο, ὑφ' ἧς μήποτε παύσαιντο<sup>2</sup> κατακεν-102 τούμενοι; θεραπείαν δὲ ὅσοι τοῦ μόνου σοφοῦ
 νόθον ἐπετήδευσαν, ὥσπερ ἐπὶ σκηνηῆς ἱεροπρεπεστάτην<sup>3</sup> ἄχρι τοῦ μόνον ἐπιδείξασθαι τοῖς συνελθλυθόσι θεαταῖς προαίρεσιν ἐνδύντες βίου,
 βωμολοχίαν πρὸ εὐσεβείας ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ φέροντες,
 οὐχ αὐτοὺς ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τροχοῦ κατατείνουσι καὶ
 [288] βασανίζουσιν | ἀναγκάζοντες ἐπιμορφάζειν ψευδῶς,
 103 ἃ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν <μὴ> πεπόνθησι; τοιγάρτοι βραχὺν χρόνον ἐπισκιασθέντες διὰ τῶν δεισιδαιμονίας συμβόλων, ἧ κώλυσις<sup>4</sup> μὲν ἐστὶν ὀσιότητος, μεγάλη δὲ καὶ τοῖς ἔχουσι καὶ τοῖς συνιοῦσι ζημία,
 εἴτ' αὖθις ἀπαμφιασάμενοι τὰ περιήπτα γυμνῆν
 ἐπιδείκνυνται τὴν ὑπόκρισιν καὶ τότε ὥσπερ οἱ
 ξενίας ἀλόντες νοθεύονται τῇ μεγίστῃ πόλεων ἀρετῇ μηδὲν προσήκοντας ἑαυτοὺς παρεγγράψαντες.

<sup>1</sup> τῶν ins. Tr. See App. p. 488.

<sup>2</sup> Some mss. παύσονται. The opt. in either tense may be explained as oratio obliqua dependent on εἴποις. But παύσονται which Wend. conjectures would be more usual.

<sup>3</sup> So Mangey: mss. and Wend. ἱεροπρεπεστάτης.

<sup>4</sup> mss. κόλασις: conj. Cohn and Wend. κόλουσις, i.e. mutilation.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 100-103

the arts, use force or compel themselves to labour at them, they not only fail in their purpose, but also incur disgrace. Those, too, who perform any other right action without the assent of their judgement or will, but by doing violence to their inclination, do not achieve righteousness,<sup>a</sup> but are wounded and chased by their inward feelings. Would you say 101 there was any difference in the matter of honesty between those who repay an insignificant deposit in the hope of securing an opportunity to defraud on a larger scale, and those who actually make a large repayment but in doing so have to do violence to their natural inclination to dishonesty, which never ceases to prick them with the stings of regret? What of those who render an insincere worship to 102 the only wise God, those who as on a stage assume a highly sanctified creed and profession of life, which does no more than make an exhibition to the assembled spectators? Are not these men, whose souls are filled with ribaldry rather than piety, racking and torturing themselves as on the wheel, compelling themselves to counterfeit what they have never felt? And therefore, though for a short time 103 they are disguised by the insignia of superstition, which is a hindrance to holiness, and a source of much harm both to those who are under its sway and those who find themselves in such company, yet in course of time the wrappings are cast aside and their hypocrisy is seen in its nakedness. And then, like convicted aliens, they are marked as bastard citizens, having falsely inscribed their names in the burgess-roll of that greatest of commonwealths, virtue, to which they had no claim. For

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 487.

PHILO

- τὸ γὰρ βίαιον ὀλιγοχρόνιον, ὡς καὶ αὐτό που δηλοῖ τοῦνομα παρὰ τὸ βαιὸν εἰρημένον· βαιὸν δὲ τὸ ὀλιγοχρόνιον ἐκάλουσιν οἱ παλαιοί.
- 104 XXIII. Τί δέ ἐστι τὸ “Νῶε εὗρε χάριν παρὰ κυρίῳ τῷ θεῷ,” διαπορητέον. ἄρ’ οὖν τοιοῦτόν ἐστι τὸ δηλούμενον, ὅτι χάριτος ἔτυχεν, ἢ ὅτι χάριτος ἄξιος ἐνομίσθη; ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν πρότερον οὐκ εἰκὸς ὑπονοεῖν· τί γὰρ αὐτῷ πλέον δεδώρηται πάντων, ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, ὅσα οὐ συγκέκριται μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ στοιχειώδεις ἀπλαῖ φύσεις εἰσὶ, χάριτος
- 105 ἠξιωμένων θείας; τὸ δ’ ὕστερον ἔχει μὲν τινα οὐκ ἀνάρμοστον λόγον, κρίνοντος τοῦ αἰτίου δωρεῶν ἀξίους τοὺς τὸ θεῖον ἐν ἑαυτοῖς νόμισμα, τὸν ἱερώτατον νοῦν, αἰσχροῖς ἐπιτηδεύμασι μὴ διαφθείροντας, ἴσως δὲ οὐκ ἀληθῆ.
- 106 πηλίκον γάρ τινα εἰκὸς γενέσθαι τὸν ἄξιον χάριτος κριθησόμενον παρὰ θεῷ; ἐγὼ μὲν γὰρ ἠγοῦμαι μόλις ἂν καὶ σύμπαντα τὸν κόσμον τούτου λαχεῖν· καίτοι τό γε πρῶτον καὶ μέγιστον καὶ τελεώτατον
- 107 τῶν θείων ἔργων ἐστὶν οὗτος. μήποτ’ οὖν ἄμεινον ἂν εἶη ἐκδέχεσθαι τοῦτο, ὅτι ζητητικὸς καὶ πολυμαθὴς γενόμενος ὁ ἀστείος ἐν οἷς ἅπασιν ἐζήτησε τοῦθ’ εὗρεν ἀληθέστατον, χάριν ὄντα θεοῦ τὰ πάντα, γῆν, ὕδωρ, ἀέρα, πῦρ, ἥλιον, ἀστέρας, οὐρανόν, ζῶα καὶ φυτὰ σύμπαντα. κεχαρίσται δὲ ὁ θεὸς αὐτῷ μὲν οὐδέν—οὐδὲ γὰρ δεῖται—, κόσμον δὲ κόσμῳ καὶ τὰ μέρη ἑαυτοῖς τε καὶ
- 108 ἀλλήλοις, ἔτι δὲ τῷ παντί. οὐδὲν δὲ κρίνας ἄξιον χάριτος ἄφθονα καὶ τῷ ὅλῳ καὶ τοῖς μέρεσι δεδώρηται τὰ ἀγαθὰ, ἀλλ’ ἀπιδὼν εἰς τὴν αἰδίον

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 103-108

violence is short-lived, as the very name (βραιον) seems to shew, since it is derived from βραίος; for that was the word used in old times for short-lived.

XXIII. But we must deal fully with the difficulty 104 in the words "Noah found grace with the Lord God." Is the meaning that he obtained grace or that he was thought worthy of grace? The former is not a reasonable supposition. For in that case what more was given to him than to practically all creatures, not only those who are compounded of body and soul, but also simple elementary natures, all accepted as recipients of divine grace?

The second explanation is founded on a not unreason- 105 able idea, that the Cause judges those worthy of His gifts, who do not deface with base practices the coin within them which bears the stamp of God, even the sacred mind. And yet perhaps that explanation is not the true one. For how great must we suppose 106 him to be, who shall be judged worthy of grace with God? Hardly, I think, could the whole world attain to this, and yet the world is the first and the greatest and the most perfect of God's works.

Perhaps then it would be better to accept this ex- 107 planation, that the man of worth, being zealous in inquiring and eager to learn, in all his inquiries found this to be the highest truth, that all things are the grace or gift of God—earth, water, air, fire, sun, stars, heaven, all plants and animals. But God has bestowed no gift of grace on Himself, for He does not need it, but He has given the world to the world, and its parts to themselves and to each other, aye and to the All. But He has given His good things 108 in abundance to the All and its parts, not because He judged anything worthy of grace, but looking to

PHILO

- ἀγαθότητα καὶ νομίσας ἐπιβάλλον τῇ μακαρία καὶ εὐδαίμονι φύσει ἑαυτοῦ τὸ εὐεργετεῖν. ὥστε εἴ τις μ' ἔροιτο, τίς αἰτία γενέσεως κόσμου, μαθὼν παρὰ Μωυσέως ἀποκρινοῦμαι, ὅτι ἡ τοῦ ὄντος
- [289] ἀγαθότης, ἣτις ἐστὶ | πρεσβυτάτη τῶν * * * χαρί-
 109 των οὐσα ἑαυτῇ.<sup>1</sup> XXIV. παρατηρητέον δ' ὅτι τὸν μὲν Νῶε φησιν εὐαρεστήσαι ταῖς τοῦ ὄντος δυνάμεσι, κυρίῳ τε καὶ θεῷ, Μωυσῆν δὲ τῷ δορυφορομένῳ πρὸς τῶν δυνάμεων καὶ δίχα αὐτῶν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι μόνον νοουμένῳ· λέγεται γὰρ ἐκ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ ὅτι “εὗρηκας χάριν παρ' ἐμοί,” δεικνύντος<sup>2</sup> ἑαυτὸν τὸν ἄνευ παντὸς ἑτέρου.
- 110 οὕτως ἄρα τὴν μὲν κατὰ Μωυσῆν ἄκραν σοφίαν ἀξιοῖ χάριτος ὃ ὢν αὐτὸς δι' ἑαυτοῦ μόνου, τὴν δὲ ἀπεικονισθεῖσαν ἐκ ταύτης δευτέραν καὶ εἰδικωτέραν οὖσαν διὰ τῶν ὑπηκόων δυνάμεων, καθ' ἃς καὶ κύριος καὶ θεός, ἄρχων τε καὶ εὐεργέτης
- 111 ἐστίν. ἕτερος δὲ τις φιλοσώματος καὶ φιλοπαθῆς νοῦς πραθεῖς τῇ ἀρχιμαγείρῳ τοῦ συγκρίματος ἡμῶν ἡδονῇ καὶ ἐξευνουχισθεῖς τὰ ἄρρενα καὶ γεννητικὰ τῆς ψυχῆς μέρη πάντα, σπάνει κεχρημένος καλῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων, ἀκοὴν παραδέξασθαι θείαν ἀδυνατῶν, ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἱερᾶς ἀπεσχοιτισμένος ἐν ἧ [σύλλογοι καὶ]<sup>3</sup> λόγοι περι ἀρετῆς αἰεὶ μελετῶνται, εἰς μὲν τὸ δεσμωτήριον τῶν

<sup>1</sup> Wend. suggests for the correction of this passage πρεσβυτάτη τῶν <θεοῦ δυναμένων, τῶν> χαρίτων οὐσα πηγῆ. The translator suggests and has rendered πρεσβυτάτη τῶν <χαρίτων, πηγῆ> χαρίτων οὐσα αὐτή. See App. p. 488.

<sup>2</sup> mss. δεικνύς, which Cohn would retain, and correct λέγεται to λέγει and ἑαυτὸν to αὐτὸν.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 108-111

His eternal goodness, and thinking that to be beneficent was incumbent on His blessed and happy nature. So that if anyone should ask me what was the motive for the creation of the world, I will answer what Moses has taught, that it was the goodness of the Existent, that goodness which is the oldest of His bounties and itself the source of others.

XXIV. But we must observe that he says that Noah 109 was well pleasing to the Potencies of the Existent, to the Lord and to God (Gen. vi. 8), but Moses to Him who is attended by the Potencies, and without them is only conceived of as pure being. For it is said with God as speaker, "thou hast found grace with Me" (Exod. xxxiii. 17), in which words He shews Himself as Him who has none other with Him. Thus, then, through His own agency alone does He 110 who IS judge the supreme wisdom shewn in Moses to be worthy of grace, but the wisdom which was but a copy of that, the wisdom which is secondary and of the nature of species, He judges as worthy through His subject Potencies, which present Him to us as Lord and God, Ruler and Benefactor.

But there is a different mind <sup>a</sup> which loves the body 111 and the passions and has been sold in slavery to that chief cateress (Gen. xxxix. 1) of our compound nature, Pleasure. Eunuch-like it has been deprived of all the male and productive organs of the soul, and lives in indigence of noble practices, unable to receive the divine message, debarred from the holy congregation (Deut. xxiii. 1) in which the talk and study is always of virtue. When this mind is cast

---

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 488.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 488.

PHILO

- παθῶν εισάγεται, χάριν δὲ εὐρίσκει τὴν ἀτιμίας 112 ἀδοξοτέραν παρὰ τῷ ἀρχιδεσμοφύλακι. δεσμῶται
 μὲν γὰρ κυρίως εἰσὶν οὐχ οὓς ἐν δικαστηρίῳ καταδικασθέντας ὑπὸ κλήρῳ ἀρχόντων ἢ καὶ χειρο-τοιηθέντων δικαστῶν ἀπάγουσὶ τινες εἰς ἀποδεδειγμένον χῶρον κακούργων, ἀλλ' ὧν ἡ φύσις κατεδίκασε ψυχῆς τρόπων, οἷτινες ἀφροσύνης <καὶ>
 ἀκολασίας καὶ δειλίας καὶ ἀδικίας καὶ ἀσεβείας 113 καὶ ἄλλων ἀμυθήτων κηρῶν γέμουσιν. ὁ δὲ ἐπί-τροπος καὶ φύλαξ καὶ ταμίας τούτων, ὁ ἡγεμὼν
 τοῦ δεσμωτηρίου, σύστημα καὶ συμφόρημα κακιῶν
 ἀθρόων καὶ ποικίλων εἰς ἓν εἶδος συνυφασμένων
 ἐστίν, ᾧ τὸ εὐαρεστῆσαι μεγίστη ζημία· ἦν οὐχ ὄρωντες ἔνιοι, ἀπατώμενοι δὲ περὶ τὸ βλάπτον ὡς
 ὠφελούν, προσίασὶ τε αὐτῷ μάλα γεγηθότες καὶ δορυφοροῦσιν, ἢ ὑπαρχοὶ καὶ διάδοχοι φυλακῆς
 ἀμαρτημάτων ἀκουσίων τε καὶ ἔκουσίων πιστοὶ 114 κριθέντες γένωνται. ἀλλὰ σύ γε, ὦ ψυχῆ, τὴν δεσποτείαν καὶ ἡγεμονίαν ταύτην ἀργαλεωτέραν
 τῆς ἐπαχθοῦς δουλείας νομίσασα, μάλιστα μὲν
 ἀδέσμῳ καὶ λελυμένη καὶ ἐλευθέρᾳ χρῆσαι προ-115 αιρέσει τοῦ βίου· ἂν δ' ἄρα ἀγκιστρευθῆς ὑπὸ πάθους, δεσμῶτις μᾶλλον ἢ εἰρκτοφύλαξ ὑπόμεινον γενέσθαι· κακωθεῖσα μὲν γὰρ καὶ στενάξασα
 [290] ἔλεον εὐρήσεις, | σπουδαρχίαις δὲ καὶ λιμοδοξίαις
 ὑποβαλοῦσα σαυτὴν ἠδὲ κακὸν τὸ εἰρκτοφυλακεῖν
 καὶ μέγιστον ἀναδέξῃ, ὑφ' οὗ γενήσῃ πάντα 116 ἀγώγιμος τὸν αἰῶνα XXV. τὰς μὲν οὖν παρὰ

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 111-116

into the prison of the passions, it finds in the eyes of the chief jailer a favour and grace, which is more inglorious than dishonour. For, in the true sense of 112 the word, prisoners are not those who after condemnation by magistrates chosen by lot, or it may be elected jurymen, are haled to the appointed place of malefactors, but those whose character of soul is condemned by nature, as full to the brim of folly and incontinence and cowardice, and injustice and impiety and other innumerable plagues. Now the overseer and warder and manager of them, the governor 113 of the prison, is the concentration and congeries of all vices multitudinous and manifold, woven together into a single form, and to be pleasing to him is to suffer the greatest of penalties. But some do not see the nature of this penalty, but, being deluded into counting the harmful as beneficial, become right joyfully his courtiers and satellites, in the hope that having judged them to be faithful he may make them his subalterns and lieutenants to keep guard over the sins which are committed with the will or without it. My soul, hold such a mastery and cap- 114 taincy to be a lot more cruel than that slavery, heavy though it be. Follow indeed, if thou canst, a life-purpose which is unchained and liberated and free. But, if it be that thou art snared by the hook 115 of passion, endure rather to become a prisoner than a prison-keeper. For through suffering and groaning thou shalt find mercy ; but if thou put thyself in subjection to the craving for office or the greed of glory, thou shalt receive the charge of the prison, a pleasant task indeed, but an ill one and the greatest of ills, and its thralldom shall be over thee for ever. XXV. Put away then with all thy might what may 116

PHILO

τοῖς ἀρχιδεσμοφύλαξιν εὐαρεστήσεις ἀνὰ κράτος ἀπόθου, τῶν δὲ παρὰ τῷ αἰτίῳ διαφερόντως μετὰ σπουδῆς τῆς ἀπάσης ἐφίεσο. ἐὰν δ' ἄρα ἀδυνατῆς —ὑπερβάλλον γὰρ τὸ τοῦ ἀξιώματος μέγεθος—, ἴθι ἀμεταστρεπτί πρὸς τὰς δυνάμεις αὐτοῦ καὶ τούτων ἰκέτις γενοῦ, μέχρις ἂν ἀποδεξάμεναι τὸ συνεχὲς καὶ γνήσιον τῆς θεραπείας ἐν τῇ τῶν εὐαρεστησάντων αὐταῖς κατατάξωσι χώρα, καθάπερ καὶ τὸν Νῶε, οὗ τῶν ἐγγόνων θαυμαστότατον καὶ καινότατον πεποιῆται τὸν κατάλογον·

- 117 φησὶ γάρ· “ αὐται αἱ γενέσεις Νῶε· Νῶε ἄνθρωπος δίκαιος, τέλειος ὢν ἐν τῇ γενεᾷ αὐτοῦ· τῷ θεῷ εὐηρέστησε Νῶε.” τὰ μὲν γὰρ τοῦ συγκρίματος γεννήματα πέφυκεν εἶναι καὶ αὐτὰ συγκρίματα· ἵπποι γὰρ ἵππους καὶ λέοντες λέοντας καὶ βόες ταύρους, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ἄνθρωποι ἀνθρώπους
- 118 ἐξ ἀνάγκης γεννώσι· διανοίας δὲ ἀγαθῆς οὐ τὰ τοιαῦτα οἰκεία ἔγγονα, ἀλλ' αἱ προειρημέναι ἀρεταί, τὸ ἄνθρωπον εἶναι, τὸ δίκαιον εἶναι, τὸ τέλειον εἶναι, τὸ θεῷ εὐαρεστήσαι· ὅπερ ἐπειδὴ καὶ τελεώτατον ἦν καὶ ὄρος τῆς ἄκρας εὐδαιμονίας,
- 119 ἐφ' ἅπασιν εἴρηται. γένεσις δὲ ἡ μὲν ἀγωγή καὶ ὁδός τις ἐστὶν ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος εἰς τὸ εἶναι—ταύτη φυτὰ τε καὶ ζῶα ἐξ ἀνάγκης αἰεὶ χρῆσθαι πέφυκεν—ἐτέρα δ' ἐστὶν ἡ ἐκ βελτίονος γένους εἰς ἕλαττον εἶδος μεταβολή, ἧς μέμνηται ὅταν φῆ· “ αὐται δὲ αἱ γενέσεις Ἰακώβ· Ἰωσήφ δέκα ἐπτὰ ἐτῶν ἦν ποιμαίνων μετὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν τὰ πρόβατα, ὢν νέος, μετὰ τῶν υἱῶν Βαλλᾶς καὶ

---

<sup>a</sup> Or (1) the honour which you seek ; (2) such a purpose or ambition.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 116-119

make thee well pleasing to the rulers of the prison, but desire exceedingly and with all zeal what may make thee pleasing to the Cause. But if so be that this is beyond thy powers—so vast is the greatness of His dignity <sup>a</sup>—set thy face and betake thee to His Potencies and make thyself their suppliant, till they accept the constancy and fidelity of thy service, and appoint thee to take thy place amongst those in whom they are well pleased, even as they appointed Noah; of whose descendants Moses has given a genealogy of a truly strange and novel sort.

For he says, “these are the generations of Noah. 117 Noah was a just man, perfect in his generation, Noah was well pleasing to God” (Gen. vi. 9). The offspring indeed of creatures compounded of soul and body, must also themselves be compound; horses necessarily beget horses, lions beget lions, bulls beget bulls, and so too with men. Not such are the offspring 118 proper to a good mind; but they are the virtues mentioned in the text, the fact that he was a man, that he was just, that he was perfect, that he was well pleasing to God. And this last as being the consummation of these virtues, and the definition of supreme happiness, is put at the end of them all.

Now one form of generation is the pro- 119 cess by which things are drawn and journey so to speak from non-existence to existence, and this process is that which is always necessarily followed by plants and animals. But there is also another which consists in the change from the higher genus to the lower species, and this it is which Moses had in mind when he says, “But these are the generations of Jacob. Joseph was seventeen years old, keeping sheep with his brethren, being still young, with the

PHILO

- μετὰ τῶν υἱῶν Ζελφᾶς τῶν γυναικῶν πατρός 120 αὐτοῦ·” ὅταν γὰρ ὁ
 ἀσκητικὸς καὶ φιλομαθὴς οὗτος λόγος ἀπὸ τῶν
 θειοτέρων ἐννοημάτων εἰς ἀνθρωπίνας καὶ θνητὰς
 δόξας καταβιβασθῆ, ὁ τοῦ σώματος καὶ τῶν περὶ
 αὐτὸ χορευτῆς Ἰωσήφ εὐθὺς ἀπογεννᾶται, νέος
 ὢν ἔτι, κἂν μήκει χρόνου πολὺς γένηται, πρεσβυτέρας οὔτε γνώμης οὔτε ἀκοῆς εἰσάπαν ἐπησημένος, ἦν οἱ Μωυσέως θιασῶται κατασταθέντες
 κτῆμα καὶ ἀπόλαυσμα ὠφελιμώτατον ἑαυτοῖς τε 121 καὶ τοῖς ἐντυγχάνουσιν εὖραντο. διὰ τοῦτό μοι δοκεῖ τὸν τύπον αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν ἀκριβεστάτην τοῦ χαρακτῆρος ἰδεῖν βουλόμενος ἐκδηλοτέραν ἐγγράφαι
 ποιμαίνοντα εἰσάγειν μετὰ γνησίου μὲν οὐδενός, μετὰ δὲ τῶν νόθων ἀδελφῶν, οἱ παλλακίδων ὄντες
 ἀπὸ τοῦ χείρονος γένους, τοῦ πρὸς γυναικῶν, ἀλλ’
 οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ κρείττονος, τοῦ πρὸς ἀνδρῶν, χρη-ματίζουσιν· υἱοὶ γὰρ τῶν γυναικῶν Βαλλᾶς καὶ Ζελφᾶς, ἀλλ’ οὐκ Ἰσραὴλ τοῦ πατρὸς νυνὶ καλοῦν-122 ται.
 [291] XXVI. Ζητήσαι δ’ ἂν τις προσηκόντως, τίνας
 ἕνεκα μετὰ τὴν ἐν ταῖς ἀρεταῖς τοῦ Νῶε τελείωσιν
 εὐθὺς εἴρηται, ὅτι “ἐφθάρη ἡ γῆ ἐναντίον τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ἐπλήσθη ἀδικίας.” ἀλλ’ ἴσως οὐ χαλε-
 πὸν λύσεως εὐπορήσαι τῷ μὴ σφόδρα παιδείας 123 ἀπείρω. λεκτέον οὖν ὅτι, ἐπειδὴν ἐν ψυχῇ τὸ ἄφθαρτον εἶδος ἀνατείλη, τὸ θνητὸν εὐθέως φθείρεται· γένεσις γὰρ τῶν καλῶν θάνατος αἰσχυρῶν
 ἐπιτηδευμάτων ἐστίν, ἐπεὶ καὶ φωτὸς ἐπιλάμψαντος

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 119-123

sons of Bilhah and with the sons of Zelpah, his father's wives" (Gen. xxxvii. 2). For when this 120 reason, once so diligent of practice and filled with love of learning, is brought down from diviner concepts to human and mortal opinions, then at once Joseph is born, Joseph who follows in the train of the body and bodily things. He is still young, even though length of years may have made him grey-headed; for never have there come to his knowledge the thoughts or lessons of riper age, which those who are ranked as members of the company of Moses have learnt, and found in them a treasure and a joy most profitable to themselves and to those who hold converse with them. It is for this reason, I think, 121 because he wished to portray Joseph's image and the exact form of his character in a clearer way, that Moses represents him as keeping sheep, not with any true-born brother, but with the base-born, the sons of the concubines, who are designated by the lower parentage, which is traced to the women, and not by the higher, which is traced to the men. For they are in this instance called the sons of the women Bilhah and Zilpah but not the sons of their father Israel.

XXVI. We may properly ask, why directly after 122 the recital of Noah's perfection in virtues, we are told that "the earth was corrupt before the Lord and filled with iniquity" (Gen. vi. 11). And yet perhaps save for one who is especially uninstructed it is not difficult to obtain a solution. We should 123 say then that when the incorruptible element takes its rise in the soul, the mortal is forthwith corrupted. For the birth of noble practices is the death of the base, for when the light shines, the darkness dis-

PHILO

- ἀφανίζεται τὸ σκότος. διὰ τοῦτο
 ἐν τῷ νόμῳ τῆς λέπρας ἀκριβέστατα διείρηται,
 ὅτι “ἐὰν ἀνατείλῃ χρῶς ζῶν ἐν τῷ λεπρῷ, μιαν-124 θήσεται.” καὶ προσεπισφίγγων αὐτὸ τοῦτο καὶ ὡσπερ ἐναποσημαινόμενος ἐπιφέρει “καὶ μιανεῖ
 ὁ χρῶς ὁ ὑγιής,” ἀντιταπτόμενος τῷ εἰκότι καὶ
 συνήθει· πάντες γὰρ οἱ ἄνθρωποι τὰ νοσοῦντα φθορὰς τῶν ὑγιαίνοντων καὶ τὰ νεκρὰ τῶν
 ζῶντων, οὐκ ἔμπαλιν τὰ ὑγιαίνοντα καὶ ζῶντα 125 τῶν ἐναντίων, ἀλλὰ σωτήρια νομίζουσι. καινότatos δ’ ἐν ἅσασι τὴν σοφίαν ὁ νομοθέτης ὦν καὶ τοῦτο ἴδιον εἰσηγήσατο, διδάσκων ὅτι τὰ ὑγιάνοντα καὶ ζῶντα τοῦ μὴ καθαρεύειν μiasμάτων
 αἴτια γίνεται· τὸ γὰρ ὑγιαῖνον καὶ ζῶν ἐν ψυχῇ
 χρῶμα ὡς ἀληθῶς φαινόμενον ἐπ’ αὐτῆς ἔλεγχός 126 ἐστίν. οὗτος ὅταν ἀνάσχη, κατάλογον ποιεῖται τῶν ἁμαρτημάτων αὐτῆς ἀπάντων, καὶ ὄνειδίζων
 καὶ δυσωπῶν καὶ ἐπιπλήττων μόλις παύεται· ἡ
 δ’ ἐλεγκομένη γνωρίζει τὰ καθ’ ἕκαστα, ὧν παρὰ
 τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον ἐπετήδευε, καὶ τότε ἄφρονα καὶ
 ἀκόλαστον καὶ ἄδικον καὶ πλήρη μiasμάτων ἑαυτὴν 127 καταλαμβάνει. XXVII. διὸ καὶ παραδοξότατον νόμον ἀναγράφει, ἐν ᾧ τὸν μὲν ἐκ μέρους ὄντα λεπρὸν ἀκάθαρτον, τὸν δὲ ὅλον δι’
 ὄλων ἀπὸ ἄκρων ποδῶν ἄχρι κεφαλῆς ἐσχάτης
 κατεσχημένον τῇ λέπρᾳ καθαρὸν φησιν εἶναι,

<sup>a</sup> E.V. “raw flesh”; chrōs can mean either “flesh” or “colour.” The LXX no doubt meant the former. Philo, who in § 125 equates it with chrōma, took it as the latter.

<sup>b</sup> Variouslly translated as “Convictor,” “Testing Power,” “Challenger.” It is almost equivalent to “Conscience”; compare the description in Quod Det. 23. Compare also appears. And therefore in the law of leprosy it is most carefully laid down, that if a living colour <sup>a</sup> arise in the leper, he shall be defiled (Lev. xiii. 14, 15). And by way of clinching this and so to <sup>124</sup> speak setting a seal upon it, he adds "and the healthy colour will defile him." This is quite opposed to the natural and ordinary view. For all men hold that things healthy are corrupted by things diseased, and living things by dead things, but they do not hold the converse, that the healthy and living corrupt their opposites, but rather that they save and preserve them. But the lawgiver, original as ever in his <sup>125</sup> wisdom, has here laid down something distinctly his own. He teaches us that it is the healthy and living which produce the condition which is tainted with pollution. For the healthy and living colour in the soul, when it makes a genuine appearance upon it, is Conviction.<sup>b</sup> When this Conviction comes to the <sup>126</sup> surface it makes a record of all the soul's transgressions, and rebukes and reproaches and calls shame upon it almost without ceasing. And the soul thus convicted sees in their true light its practices each and all, which were contrary to right reason, and then perceives that it is foolish and intemperate and unjust and infected with pollution.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 123-127

XXVII. For the same reason Moses enacts a law, <sup>127</sup> which is indeed a paradox, whereby he declares that the leper who is partially a leper is unclean, but that when the leprosy has taken hold of him throughout, from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head, he is clean (Lev. xiii. 11-13). One would the functions of the Paraclete in John xvi. 8, where the R.V. gives for ἐλέγχει "convict," in the place of the "reprove" of the A.V.

PHILO

- τάχα ἂν τις τὸ ἐναντίον, ὅπερ εὐλογον ἦν ὑπολαβεῖν, εἰκάσαντος, τὴν μὲν ἐσταλμένην καὶ περὶ τι βραχὺ τοῦ σώματος λέπραν ἤττον ἀκάθαρτον, τὴν δὲ κεχυμένην, ὡς ἅπαν περιλαβεῖν αὐτό, μᾶλλον.
- 128 δηλοῖ δ', ὡς ἔμοιγε φαίνεται, διὰ συμβόλων τούτων ἀληθέστατον ἐκεῖνο, ὅτι τὰ μὲν ἀκούσια τῶν ἀδικημάτων κἂν ἐπιμήκιστα ὄντα ἀνυπαίτια καὶ καθαρὰ, τὸ συνειδὸς βαρὺν κατήγορον οὐκ ἔχοντα, τὰ δὲ ἐκούσια, κἂν μὴ ἐπὶ πλείστον ἀναχέηται πρὸς τοῦ κατὰ ψυχὴν ἐλεγχόμενα δικαστοῦ, ἀνίερα
- [292] καὶ μιὰ καὶ ἀκάθαρτα | δοκιμάζεται.
- 129 ἡ μὲν οὖν διφυῆς καὶ δύο ἐξανθοῦσα χρώματα λέπρα τὴν ἐκούσιον ἐμφαίνει κακίαν· ἔχουσα γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ τὸν ὑγιαίνοντα καὶ ζωτικὸν καὶ ὀρθὸν ἐν ἑαυτῇ λόγον τῷ μὲν οὐ χρῆται ὡς κυβερνήτῃ πρὸς τὴν τῶν καλῶν σωτηρίαν, ἐκδοῦσα δ' αὐτὴν τοῖς ναυτιλίας ἀπίροις ὅλον τὸ τοῦ βίου δὴ σκάφος ἐν εὐδία καὶ γαλήνῃ δυνάμενον σώζεσθαι περιέτρεψεν.
- 130 ἡ δ' εἰς ἓν εἶδος λευκὸν μεταβαλοῦσα τὴν ἀκούσιον διασυνίστησι τροπὴν, ἐπειδὴν τὸ λογιζέσθαι ὁ νοῦς ἐκτμηθεὶς ὅλον δι' ὅλων, μηδενὸς τῶν εἰς τὸ συνιέναι σπέρματος ὑπολειφθέντος, ὥσπερ οἱ ἐν ἀγλῦ καὶ σκότῳ βαθεῖ μηδὲν ὄρα τῶν πρακτέων, ἀλλ' οἷα τυφλὸς ἀπροοράτως πᾶσιν ἐπίπτων συνεχεῖς ὀλισθούς καὶ πτώματα ἐπάλληλα καὶ
- 131 ἀκούσια ὑπομένη. XXVIII. τούτῳ
 <δ> ὁμοίον ἐστὶ καὶ τὸ περὶ τῆς οἰκίας διάταγμα, ἐν ἣ γίνεσθαι συμβαίνει λέπραν πολλάκις· φησὶ γὰρ ὅτι " εἰ γένηται ἀφή λέπρας ἐν οἰκίᾳ, ἀφίξεται ὁ κεκτημένος καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ τῷ ἱερεῖ λέγων· ὡσ-

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 489.

<sup>b</sup> Or "symptom."

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 127-131

probably have conjectured the opposite, as indeed it would be reasonable to suppose that leprosy, if limited and confined to a small part of the body, is less unclean, but if diffused, so as to embrace all the body, is more unclean. But he is shewing, I think, 128 through these symbols (and a very true lesson it is), that such wrongdoings as are involuntary, however wide their extent, are pure and devoid of guilt, for they have no stern accuser in conscience, but voluntary sins, even though the space they cover be not large, are convicted by the judge within the soul and thus are proved to be unholy and foul and impure.

Thus then the leprosy, which is 129 twy-natured and flowers into two colours, shews voluntary wickedness. For the soul has within it the healthy, lively upright reason, and yet it does not use it as its pilot<sup>a</sup> to guide it to the safety which things noble give, but abandons itself to those who have no skill of seamanship, and thus swamps utterly the bark of life which might have reached its bourn safely in calm and fair weather. But the leprosy 130 which changes into a single white appearance, represents involuntary error, when the mind is throughout reft of reasoning power, and not a germ is left of what might grow into understanding, and thus, as men in a mist and profound darkness, it sees nothing of what it should do, but, like a blind man tripping over every obstacle since he cannot see before him, it is subject to constant slips and repeated falls in which the will has no part.

XXVIII. Similar 131 again is the enactment about the house in which leprosy is a frequent occurrence. For the law says that "if there is an infection<sup>b</sup> of leprosy in a house, the owner shall come and report it to the priest

PHILO

- περ ἀφή λέπρας ἐώραταί μοι ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ”· εἶτα ἐπιφέρει· “καὶ προστάξει ὁ ἱερεὺς ἀποσκευάσαι τὴν οἰκίαν πρὸ τοῦ εἰσελθόντα τὸν ἱερέα εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν ἰδεῖν, καὶ οὐ γενήσεται ἀκάθαρτα ὅσα ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ. καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα εἰσελεύσεται ὁ ἱερεὺς
- 132 καταμαθεῖν.” οὐκοῦν πρὶν μὲν εἰσελθεῖν τὸν ἱερέα, καθαρὰ τὰ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ, ἀφ’ οὗ δ’ ἂν εἰσέλθῃ, πάντα ἀκάθαρτα· καίτοι τὸναντίον εἰκὸς ἦν, ἀνδρὸς κεκαθαρμένον καὶ τελείου, ὃς τὰς ὑπὲρ ἀπάντων εὐχὰς ἀγιστείας ἱερουργίας εἴωθε ποιῆσθαι, παρελθόντος εἴσω βελτιοῦσθαι τὰ ἔνδον<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐξ ἀκαθάρτων καθαρὰ γίνεσθαι· νυνὶ δὲ οὐδὲ ἐπὶ τῆς αὐτῆς μένει χώρας, τρέπεται δὲ πρὸς μερίδα τὴν χεῖρω κατὰ τὴν εἴσοδον τὴν τοῦ ἱερέως.
- 133 ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν εἰ συνάδει τῇ ῥητῇ καὶ προχείρῳ διατάξει, σκέψονται οἷς ἔθος καὶ φίλον· ἡμῖν δὲ ἀντικρυς λεκτέον, ὅτι συνωδὸν οὕτως οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἄλλω, ὡς τὸ εἰσελθόντος τοῦ ἱερέως τὰ κατὰ
- 134 τὴν οἰκίαν μαινεσθαι. ἕως μὲν γὰρ ὁ θεῖος λόγος εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν καθάπερ τινὰ ἐστίαν οὐκ ἀφίκται, πάντα αὐτῆς τὰ ἔργα ἀνυπαίτια· ὁ γὰρ ἐπίτροπος ἢ πατὴρ ἢ διδάσκαλος ἢ ὅ τι ποτὲ χρή καλεῖν τὸν ἱερέα, ὑφ’ οὗ νουθητηθῆναι καὶ σωφρο-νισθῆναι μόνου δυνατὸν, μακρὰν ἀφέστηκε. συγ-γνώμη δὲ τοῖς δι’ ἀμαθίαν ἀπειρία τῶν πρακτέων ἀμαρτάνουσιν· οὐδὲ γὰρ ὡς ἀμαρτημάτων αὐτῶν ποιοῦνται κατάληψιν, ἔστι δ’ ὅτε κατορθοῦν ἐν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἔντα.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 131-134

with the words ' what seems an infection of leprosy has appeared in my house, ' " and then it adds " and the priest shall command that they empty the house, before the priest enters the house and sees it, and whatsoever is in the house shall not become unclean, and after that the priest shall go in to observe it " (Lev. xiv. 34-36). So then before the priest goes in, 132 the things in the house are clean, but after he has gone in they are all unclean. And yet we should have expected just the opposite, that when a man who has been purified and fully consecrated, who is wont to offer prayers and litanies and sacrifices for all men, has come within the house, its contents should thereby be bettered and pass from impurity into purity. But here we find that they do not even remain in the same position as before, but actually shift into the inferior region at the entrance of the priest. Now whether in the plain and 133 literal sense of the ordinance these things are consistent with each other is a matter for those who are used to such questions and find pleasure in them. But we must say positively that no two things can be more consistent with each other than that, when the priest has entered, the belongings of the house are defiled. For so long as the divine reason has not 134 come into our soul, as to some dwelling-place, all its works are free from guilt, since the priest who is its guardian or father or teacher—or whatever name is fitting for him—the priest, who alone can admonish and bring it to wisdom, is far away. There is pardon for those whose sin is due to ignorance, because they have no experience to tell them what they should do. For they do not even conceive of their deeds as sins, nay often they think that their most grievous

PHILO

- 135 οἷς πταίουσι μεγάλα νομίζουσιν. ὅταν δὲ εἰσέλθῃ
 ὁ ἱερεὺς ὄντως ἔλεγχος εἰς ἡμᾶς ὡσπερ φωτὸς
 [293] τις αὐγὴ | καθαρωτάτη, τηνικαῦτα γνωρίζομεν τὰ
 ἐναποκείμενα ἡμῶν οὐκ εὐαγὴ τῇ ψυχῇ βουλευματα
 καὶ τὰς ἐπιλήπτους καὶ ὑπαιτίους πράξεις, αἷς ἀγνοία τῶν συμφερόντων ἐνεχειροῦμεν. ταῦτ' οὖν ἅπαντα ὁ ἱερωμένος ἔλεγχος μιάνας, ἀποσκευα-σθῆναι καὶ ἀποσυληθῆναι κελεύει, ὅπως αὐτὴν
 καθαρὰν ἴδῃ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς οἰκίαν καί, εἴ τινες
 ἐν αὐτῇ νόσοι γεγόνασιν, ἰάσῃται.
- 136 XXIX. μεμίμηται δὲ τοῦτο καὶ ἡ ἐν ταῖς βασι-λείαις ἐντυγχάνουσα τῷ προφῆτῃ γυνὴ <χήρα>
 χήρα δ' ἐστίν, οὐχ ἦν φάμεν ἡμεῖς, ὅταν
 ἀνδρὸς ἐρήμη γένηται, ἀλλὰ τῷ χηρεύειν τῶν
 φθειρόντων καὶ λυμαινομένων παθῶν τὴν διάνοιαν, 137 ὡσπερ καὶ ἡ παρὰ Μωυσῆ Θάμαρ· καὶ γὰρ ταύτη
 προστέτακται χηρευούσῃ καθέζεσθαι ἐν τῷ τοῦ
 μόνου καὶ σωτήρος οἴκῳ πατρός, δι' ὃν <εἰς>
 αἰὲ καταλιπούσα τὰς τῶν θνητῶν συνουσίας καὶ
 ὀμιλίας ἠρήμωται μὲν καὶ κεχήρευκεν ἀνθρωπίνων
 ἡδονῶν, παραδέχεται δὲ θείαν γονὴν καὶ πληρουμένη τῶν ἀρετῆς σπερμάτων κυοφορεῖ καὶ ὠδίνει καλὰς πράξεις· ὡς ὅταν ἀποτέκη, τὰ κατὰ τῶν ἀντι-πάλων αἴρεται βραβεῖα καὶ νικηφόρος ἀναγράφεται σύμβολον ἐπιφερομένη φοῖνικα τῆς νίκης· Θάμαρ
 γὰρ ἐρμηνεύεται φοῖνιξ.
- 138 λέγει δὲ πρὸς τὸν προφῆτην πᾶσα διάνοια χήρα
 καὶ ἐρήμη κακῶν μέλλουσα γίνεσθαι· “ ἀνθρωπε
 τοῦ θεοῦ, εἰσηλθες πρὸς με ἀναμνησαί το ἀδίκημά
 μου καὶ τὸ ἀμάρτημά μου.” εἰσελθὼν γὰρ εἰς τὴν
 ψυχὴν ὁ ἔνθους οὗτος καὶ κατεσχημένος ἐξ ἔρωτος

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 489.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 135-138

stumbings are righteous actions. But when the true priest, Conviction, enters us, like a pure ray of light, we see in their real value the unholy thoughts that were stored within our soul, and the guilty and blameworthy actions to which we laid our hands in ignorance of our true interests. So Conviction, discharging his priest-like task, defiles all these <sup>a</sup> and bids them all be cleared out and carried away, that he may see the soul's house in its natural bare condition, and heal whatever sicknesses have arisen in it.

XXIX. We have a parallel to this in the widow in the Book of Kings who discourses with the prophet (1 Kings xvii. 10). She is a widow, not in our sense of the word, when the wife has lost her husband, but because she is widowed of the passions which corrupt and maltreat the mind, like Tamar in the books of Moses. Tamar was bidden to remain a widow in the house of her father, her one and only saviour (Gen. xxxviii. 11), for whose sake she has left for ever the intercourse and society of mortals, and remained desolate and widowed of human pleasures. Thus she receives the divine impregnation, and, being filled with the seeds of virtue, bears them in her womb and is in travail with noble actions. And when she has brought them to the birth, she wins the meed of conquest over her adversaries, and is enrolled as victor with the palm as the symbol of her victory. For Tamar is by interpretation a palm.

To return to the Book of Kings. Every mind that is on the way to be widowed and empty of evil says to the prophet, "O man of God, thou hast come in to remind me of my iniquity and my sin" (1 Kings xvii. 18). For when he, the God-inspired, has entered the soul—he who is mastered

PHILO

- ὄλυμπίου καὶ διηρεθισμένος τοῖς τῆς θεοφορήτου
 μανίας ἀκατασχέτοις οἴστροις μνήμην ἀδικημάτων
 καὶ ἀμαρτημάτων ἀρχαίων ἐργάζεται, οὐχ ἵνα πάλιν αὐτοῖς χρήσεται, ἀλλ' ἵνα μέγα στενάξασα καὶ μέγα
 κλαύσασα τὴν παλαιὰν τροπὴν τὰ μὲν ἐκείνης ἔγγονα μισήσασα ἀποστραφῆ, οἷς δ' ὑψηγείται ὁ ἔρμηνεύς τοῦ θεοῦ λόγος καὶ προφήτης ἔπηται·
- 139 τοὺς γὰρ προφήτας ἐκάλουν οἱ πρότερον τοτὲ μὲν
 ἀνθρώπους θεοῦ, τοτὲ δὲ ὀρώντας, κύρια ὀνόματα
 καὶ ἐμπρεπῆ τῶ ἐπιθειασμῶ καὶ τῇ περιαθρήσει τῶν
 πραγμάτων ἧ ἐκέχρητο τιθέμενοι.
- 140 XXX. Προσηκόντως οὖν ὁ ἱερώτατος Μωυσῆς
 τότε φθείρεσθαι τὴν γῆν εἶπεν, ὅτε αἱ τοῦ δικαίου Νῶε ἀρεταὶ διεφάνησαν· “ἦν δὲ” φησί “κατεφθαρμένη, ὅτι κατέφθειρε πᾶσα σὰρξ τὴν ὁδὸν αὐτοῦ
- 141 ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς.” δόξει μὲν τισιν ἡ λέξις ἡμαρτηθῆσαι
 καὶ τὸ ἀκόλουθον τοῦ λόγου καὶ τὸ ἄπταιστον
 οὕτως ἔχει· ὅτι κατέφθειρε πᾶσα σὰρξ τὴν |
- [294] ὁδὸν αὐτῆς· ἀνοίκειον γάρ ἐστι θηλυκῶ ὀνόματι,
 τῇ σαρκί, ἀρρενικὴν ἐπιφέρεσθαι πῶσις, τὴν
- 142 αὐτοῦ. μήποτε δὲ οὐ περὶ μόνης σαρκός ἐστιν ὁ
 λόγος τὴν αὐτῆς φθειρούσης ὁδὸν, ἵνα εἰκότως ἡμαρτηθῆσαι τὰ περὶ τὴν λέξιν δοκῆ, ἀλλὰ περὶ
 δυεῖν, σαρκός τε τῆς φθειρομένης καὶ ἑτέρου, οὗ
 τὴν ὁδὸν λυμαίνεσθαι τε καὶ φθείρειν ἐπιχειρεῖ.
 ὥσθ' οὕτως ἀποδοτέον· κατέφθειρε πᾶσα σὰρξ τὴν
- 143 θεὸν ἄγουσαν. ταύτην ἴσθι σοφίαν· διὰ γὰρ ταύτης
 ὁ νοῦς ποδηγετούμενος εὐθείας καὶ λεωφόρου

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 138-143

by celestial yearning, stirred to his very depth by the irresistible goads of god-sent frenzy, he creates a memory of past iniquities and sins, and this not to the end that the soul should return to them, but that, with deep groaning and many tears for its old error, it should turn therefrom with loathing for all that it has engendered, and follow instead the guidance of that reason which is the interpreter and prophet of God. For the men of old days called the prophets sometimes "men of God" and sometimes "seers" (1 Sam. ix. 9). And the names they gave were names of literal truth and well suited, the former to their inspiration, the latter to the wide vision of reality which they possessed. 139

XXX. Thus apt indeed are these words of Moses, 140 the holiest of men, when he tells us that the earth was being corrupted at the time when the virtues of just Noah shone forth. But he goes on, "it was destroyed because all flesh destroyed his way upon the earth" (Gen. vi. 12). Some will think that we 141 have here a mistake in diction and that the correct phrase in grammatical sequence is as follows, "all flesh destroyed its way." For a masculine form like "his" ( $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\upsilon\hat{\nu}$ ) cannot be properly used with reference to the feminine noun "flesh" ( $\sigma\acute{\alpha}\rho\acute{\xi}$ ). But perhaps 142 the writer is not speaking merely of the flesh which corrupts its own way, thus giving reasonable grounds for the idea of a grammatical error, but of two things, the flesh which is being corrupted, and Another, whose way that flesh seeks to mar and corrupt. And so the passage must be explained thus, "all flesh destroyed the perfect way of the Eternal and Indestructible, the way which leads to God." This way, 143 you must know, is wisdom. For wisdom is a straight

PHILO

ὑπαρχούσης ἄχρι τῶν τερμάτων ἀφικνεῖται· τὸ δὲ
 τέρμα τῆς ὁδοῦ γινώσις ἐστι καὶ ἐπιστήμη θεοῦ.
 ταύτην τὴν ἀτραπὸν μισεῖ καὶ προβέβληται καὶ
 φθείρειν ἐπιχειρεῖ πᾶς ὁ σαρκῶν ἑταῖρος· οὐδενὶ
 γὰρ οὕτως οὐδὲν ἀντίπαλον ὡς ἐπιστήμη σαρκὸς 144 ἠδονῆ.<sup>1</sup> βουλομένοις γοῦν ταύτην πορεύεσθαι τὴν
 ὁδὸν βασιλικὴν οὖσαν τοῖς τοῦ ὄρατικοῦ γένους μετέχουσιν, ὅπερ Ἰσραὴλ κέκληται, διαμάχεται ὁ γῆινος Ἐδῶμ—τοῦτο γὰρ διερμηνευθεὶς ὀνομάζεται
 —μετὰ σπουδῆς καὶ παρασκευῆς τῆς πάσης εἴρξειν
 ἀπειλῶν τῆς ὁδοῦ καὶ ἀτριβῆ καὶ ἀπόρευτον 145 αὐτὴν κατασκευάσειν εἰσάπαν. XXXI.
 οἱ μὲν οὖν πεμφθέντες πρέσβεις λέγουσι ταῦτα· “ παρελευσόμεθα διὰ τῆς γῆς σου· οὐ διελευσόμεθα
 δι’ ἀγρῶν, οὐ δι’ ἀμπελώνων, οὐ πίομεθα ὕδωρ
 λάκκου σου. ὁδῶ βασιλικῆ πορευσόμεθα· οὐκ ἐκκλινοῦμεν δεξιὰ οὐδὲ εὐώνυμα, ἕως ἂν παρέλθω-μέν σου τὰ ὄρια.” ὁ δὲ Ἐδῶμ ἀποκρίνεται φάσκων· “ οὐ διελεύση<sup>2</sup> δι’ ἐμοῦ· εἰ δὲ μή, ἐν πολέμῳ ἐξελεύσομαί σοι εἰς συνάντησιν.” καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῶ οἱ υἱοὶ Ἰσραὴλ· “ παρὰ τὸ ὄρος παρελευσόμεθα.<sup>3</sup> εἰάν
 δὲ τοῦ ὕδατός σου πῖω ἐγώ τε καὶ τὰ κτήνη, δώσω
 σοι τιμὴν· ἀλλὰ τὸ πρᾶγμα οὐδὲν ἐστι, παρὰ τὸ
 ὄρος παρελευσόμεθα.” ὁ δὲ εἶπεν· “ οὐ διελεύση δι’ 146 ἐμοῦ.” τῶν παλαιῶν τινα λόγος ἔχει
 θεασάμενον ἐσταλμένην πολυτελῆ πομπὴν πρὸς

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Mangey: mss. and Wend. ἐπιστήμη . . . ἠδονῆ.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. παρελεύση.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. διελευσόμεθα.

<sup>a</sup> E.V. “ Let me, without doing anything else, pass through

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 143-146

high road, and it is when the mind's course is guided along that road that it reaches the goal which is the recognition and knowledge of God. Every comrade of the flesh hates and rejects this path and seeks to corrupt it. For there are no two things so utterly opposed as knowledge and pleasure of the flesh. Thus those who are members of that race endowed 144 with vision, which is called Israel, when they wish to journey along that royal road, find their way contested by Edom the earthly one—for such is the interpretation of his name—who, all alert and prepared at every point, threatens to bar them from the road and to render it such that none at all shall tread or travel on it.

XXXI. The envoys 145 then who are dispatched to him speak thus, "We will pass by through thy land. We will not go through the cornfields nor through the vineyards. We will not drink water of any well of thine. We will journey by the king's way. We will not turn aside to the right or the left, till we have passed thy boundaries." But Edom answers, saying, "Thou shalt not pass through me, else I will come out in war to meet thee." And the sons of Israel say to him, "We will pass along the mountain country. But if I and my cattle drink of thy water, I will give thee value. But the matter is nothing, we will pass along the mountain country" (Num. xx. 17-20).<sup>a</sup> But he said, "Thou shalt not go through me." There is 146

a story that one <sup>b</sup> of the ancients beholding a gaily decked and costly pageant turned to some of his on my feet." The LXX presumably meant "the thing which I ask is a trifle." Philo's interpretation of the words is given in § 171.

<sup>b</sup> Socrates. The story is told with some variations by Cic. Tusc. v. 91, and Diog. Laert. ii. 25.

PHILO

τινας τῶν γνωρίμων ἀπιδόντα εἶπειν· “ὦ ἐταῖροι, ἴδετε ὅσων χρεῖαν οὐκ ἔχω,” διὰ βραχείας φωνῆς
 μέγιστον καὶ οὐράνιον ὡς ἀληθῶς ἐπάγγελμα αὐχῆ-147 σαντα. τί λέγεις; τὸν Ὀλυμπιακὸν ἀγῶνα κατὰ
 τοῦ πλούτου παντὸς ἐστεφάνωσαι καὶ τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ κεκράτηκας οὕτως, ὡς μηδὲν εἰς ἀπόλαυσίν τε καὶ
 χρῆσιν τῶν ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ παραδέχεσθαι; θαυμάσιος μὲν
 ὁ λόγος, πολὺ δ’ ἡ γνώμη θαυμασιωτέρα τοσοῦτον 148 σθαι νικᾶν ἀνὰ κράτος. XXXII. ἀλλ’ οὐχ ἐνὶ ἀνδρὶ ἔξεστι μόνον αὐχῆσαι παρὰ Μωυσῆ τὰ προ-
 [295] τέλεια τῆς σοφίας ἀναδίδαχθέντι, ἀλλὰ | καὶ ὄλω
 ἔθνει πολυανθρωποτάτῳ. τεκμήριον δέ· τεθάρρηκε
 καὶ ἐπιτετόλμηκεν ἡ ἐκάστου ψυχῇ τῶν γνωρίμων
 αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν βασιλέα τῶν φαινομένων ἀπάντων ἀγαθῶν τὸν γήινον Ἐδῶμ—ὄντως γὰρ τὰ τῷ δοκεῖν
 ἀγαθὰ πάντα γήινα—λέγειν· “ἦδη παρελεύσομαι διὰ 149 τῆς γῆς σου.” ὦ ὑπερφυστάτης καὶ μεγαλοπρεποῦς ὑποσχέσεως. πάντα, εἴπατέ μοι, ὑπερβῆναι παρελθεῖν παραδραμεῖν τὰ φαινόμενα καὶ νομιζόμενα
 γῆς [ὄντα] ἀγαθὰ δυνήσεσθε; καὶ οὐδὲν ἄρα τὴν
 εἰς τὸ πρόσω ὑμῶν ὄρμηγν ἀντιβιασάμενον ἐφέξει 150 καὶ στήσει; ἀλλὰ τοὺς μὲν τοῦ πλούτου θησαυροὺς ἅπαντας ἐξῆς πλήρεις ἰδόντες ἀποστραφήσεσθε καὶ ἀποκλινεῖτε τὰς ὄψεις, τὰ δὲ τῶν προγόνων ἀξιώματα τῶν πρὸς πατρός καὶ μητρός καὶ τὰς ἀδομένας
 παρὰ τοῖς πολλοῖς εὐγενείας ὑπερκύψετε; δόξαν
 δέ, ἧς ἀντικαταλλάττονται πάντα ἄνθρωποι, κατ-ὅπῳ ὥσπερ τι τῶν ἀτιμοτάτων ἀπολείψετε; τί

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 146-150

disciples and said to them, " My friends, observe how many things there are I do not need." And the vaunt conveyed in this short utterance is a great and truly heaven-sent profession. " What is it you say ? " we ask him. " Have you won the Olympic crown 147 of victory over all wealth, and so risen superior to all that wealth involves, that you accept nothing of what it brings for your use and enjoyment ? " A wonderful saying ! And yet far more wonderful is the resolution which has grown so strong, that now it need exert no effort to win its complete victory. XXXII. But in the school of Moses it is not one 148 man only who may boast that he has learnt the first elements of wisdom, but a whole nation, a mighty people. And we have a proof thereof in these words of the envoys. The soul of every one of his disciples has taken heart and courage to say to the king of all that is good in outward appearance, the earthly Edom (for indeed all things whose goodness lies in mere seeming are of earth), " I will now pass by through thy land " (or " earth "). What a stupendous, 149 what a magnificent promise ! Will you indeed be able, tell me, to step, to travel, to speed past and over those things of earth which appear and are reckoned good ? And will nothing, then, that opposes your onward march stay or arrest its course ? Will 150 you see all the treasuries of wealth, one after the other, full to the brim, yet turn aside from them and avert your eyes ? Will you take no heed of the honours of high ancestry on either side, or the pride of noble birth, which the multitude so extol ? Will you leave glory behind you, glory, for which men barter their all, and treat it as though it were a worthless trifle ? Will you pass unregarded the

PHILO

- δέ; ὑγίαν σώματος καὶ αἰσθήσεων ἀκρίβειαν καὶ κάλλος περιμάχητον καὶ ῥώμην ἀνανταγώνιστον καὶ τᾶλλα ὅσοις ὁ τῆς ψυχῆς οἶκος ἢ τύμβος ἢ ὀτιοῦν χρῆ καλεῖν κεκόσμηται παραδραμείσθε, ὡς μηδὲν αὐτῶν κατατάξαι ἐν τῇ τῶν ἀγαθῶν μερίδι;
- 151 Ὀλυμπίου καὶ οὐρανοῦ ταῦτα ψυχῆς τὰ μεγάλα τολμήματα τὸν μὲν περίγειον χῶρον ἀπολελοιπιύας, ἀνειλκυσμένης δὲ καὶ μετὰ τῶν θείων φύσεων διαιτωμένης· θέας γὰρ ἐμπιπλαμένη τῶν γνησίων καὶ ἀφθάρτων ἀγαθῶν εἰκότως τοῖς ἐφημέροις καὶ
- 152 νόθοις ἀποτάττεται. XXXIII. τί οὖν ὄφελος παρελθεῖν πάντα τὰ θνητῶν θνητὰ ἀγαθὰ, παρελθεῖν δὲ μὴ σὺν ὀρθῷ λόγῳ, ἀλλ' ὡς ἔνιοι δι' ὄκνον ἢ ῥαθυμίαν ἢ ἀπειρίαν ἐκείνων; οὐ γὰρ πανταχοῦ πάντα, ἀλλὰ δὲ παρ' ἄλλοις τετίμηται.
- 153 τούτου χάριν βουλόμενος τὸ μετ' ὀρθότητος λόγου καταφρονητικοὺς τῶν εἰρημένων γενέσθαι παραστήσαι τῷ “ παρελεύσομαι ” προστίθησι τὸ “ διὰ τῆς γῆς σου ”· τοῦτο γὰρ τὸ ἀναγκασιότατον ἦν, γενομένου ἐν ἀφθόνοις τῶν φαινομένων ἀγαθῶν ὕλαις ἀπάσαις ὑπὸ μηδενὸς τῶν προβληθέντων ὑφ' ἐκάστης δικτύων ἀλῶναι, πυρὸς μέντοι τὸν τρόπον ἰσχύσαι ῥύμη μιᾶ τὰς ἐπαλλήλους καὶ
- 154 συνεχεῖς φορὰς διακλάσαι. διὰ μὲν δὴ τούτων φασὶ “ παρελεύσεσθαι,” διὰ δὲ “ ἀγρῶν καὶ ἀμπελώνων ” οὐκέτι· τὰ γὰρ ἡμερα ἐν ψυχῇ φυτὰ ἡμέρους ἀποτίκτοντα καρπούς, ἀστείους μὲν

---

<sup>a</sup> i.e. they use διελευσόμεθα, which Philo takes to mean “to travel through” (at leisure) in contrast to παρελευσόμεθα “to pass through” (without stopping).

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 150-154

health of the body, the keenness of the senses, the coveted gift of beauty, the strength which defies opponents, and whatever else serves to adorn our soul's house, or tomb, or what other name it may be given, and rank none of them as belonging to the province of the good? Great ventures such as these betoken a celestial and heavenly soul, which has left the region of the earth, has been drawn upwards, and dwells with divine natures. For when it takes its fill of the vision of good incorruptible and genuine, it bids farewell to the good which is transient and spurious. XXXIII. Now what can it profit us to pass by all the good things which are mortal as their possessors are mortal, if we pass them by not under the guidance of right reason, but as some do through faint-heartedness or indolence or inexperience of them? For they are not all held in honour everywhere, but some value these, others those. And therefore to bring home to us that it is under the guidance of right reason that we should grow to despise these things which I have named, he adds to the words "I will pass by" these others "through thy land." For this he knew was the most vital thing of all, that we should see ourselves surrounded by a rich abundance of all that goes to provide these seeming forms of good, and yet be caught by none of the snares which each flings before us, but be nerved to break like fire with a single rush through their successive and ceaseless onslaughts. Through these then, they say, they will pass by. But they do not use the phrase "pass by" <sup>a</sup> of the fields and vineyards. For it would be monstrous folly to pass by the plants within the soul, whose fruit is kindly as themselves,

PHILO

λόγους, ἐπαινετὰς δὲ πράξεις, ὠγύγιος<sup>1</sup> εὐήθεια παρέρχεσθαι· μένειν γὰρ ἔδει καὶ δρέπεσθαι καὶ
ἀπλήστως ἐμφορεῖσθαι· κάλλιστον γὰρ ἢ ἐν
ἀρεταῖς τελείαις ἀκόρεστος εὐφροσύνη, ἧς οἱ
λεχθέντες ἀμπελώνες σύμβολα.

- 155 | Οἷς δ' ὁ θεὸς ἐπινίφει καὶ ἐπομβρεῖ τὰς ἀγαθῶν
[296] πηγὰς ἄνωθεν, ἐκ λάκκου πίνομεν καὶ βραχείας [καὶ] κατὰ γῆς λιβάδας ἀναζητοῦμεν, ὕψους ἡμῖν
ἀνεπισχέτως οὐρανοῦ τὴν νέκταρος καὶ ἀμβροσίας 156 τῶν μεμυθευμένων ἀμείνω τροφήν; XXXIV.
ἔτι δὲ ποτὸν τεθησαυρισμένον ἐξ ἐπιτεχνήσεως
ἀνθρώπων ἐξανιμῶντες ὑπόδρομον καὶ καταφυγὴν δυσελπιστίας ἔργον προσιέμεθα, οἷς τὸν ὀλύμπιον
θησαυρὸν εἰς χρῆσιν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν ὁ σωτὴρ τοῦ
παντὸς ἤνοιξεν; εὐχεται γὰρ Μωυσῆς ὁ ἱερο-φάντης, ἵνα “ ἀνοίξῃ κύριος ἡμῖν τὸν θησαυρὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν ἀγαθόν, τὸν οὐρανόν, δοῦναι ὑετόν.” 157 ἐπήκοοι δὲ αἱ τοῦ θεοφιλοῦς εὐχαί. τί δ'; ὁ μηδ' οὐρανὸν ἢ ὑετόν ἢ λάκκον<sup>2</sup> ἢ συνόλως τι τῶν ἐν γενέσει νομίσας ἱκανὸν εἶναι τρέφειν ἑαυτόν, ὑπερβὰς δὲ ταῦτα πάντα καὶ ὁ ἔπαθεν εἰπὼν “ ὁ θεὸς ὁ τρέφων με ἐκ νεότητος ” ἄρα οὐ δοκεῖ σοι
πάντα ὅσα κατὰ γῆς ὕδατος συστήματα μηδ' ἂν 158 ἀξιῶσαι προσιδεῖν; οὐκ ἂν οὖν ἐκ λάκκου πίοι,
ᾧ δίδωσιν ὁ θεὸς τὰς ἀκράτους μεθύσματος πόσεις,
τοτὲ μὲν διὰ τινος ὑπηρετοῦντος τῶν ἀγγέλων, ὃν
οἰνοχοεῖν ἤξιώσε, τοτὲ δὲ καὶ δι' ἑαυτοῦ, μηδένα
τοῦ διδόντος καὶ τοῦ λαμβάνοντος μεταξύ τιθείς.

<sup>1</sup> The transference of the meaning of ὠγύγιος from “primal” or “venerable” to “vast” (also found in De Post. 168) is difficult. Mangey suggested in both διωλύγιος, cf. διωλύγιος φλυαρία, Plato, Theaet. 161 D.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. λόγον.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 154-158

even worthy sayings and laudable actions. Rather it were well to stay and pluck them and feast upon them with the hunger that is never filled. For truly beautiful is that insatiable joy which the perfect virtues give, and of this the vineyards here mentioned are symbolic.

Again, shall we on whom God pours as in snow or rain-shower the fountains of His blessings from above, 155 drink of a well and seek for the scanty springs that lie beneath the earth, when heaven rains upon us ceaselessly the nourishment which is better than the nectar and ambrosia of the myths? XXXIV. Or shall we draw up with ropes the drink which has 156 been stored by the devices of men and accept as our haven and refuge a task which argues our lack of true hope; we to whom the Saviour of all has opened His celestial treasure for our use and enjoyment? <sup>a</sup> For Moses the revealer prays that the Lord may open to us His good treasure, the heaven, to give us rain (Deut. xxviii. 12), and the prayers of him whom God loves are always heard. Or again, what of that Israel who thought that neither heaven 157 nor rainfall or well, or any created thing at all, was able to nourish him, but passed over all these and told his experience in the words "God who doth nourish me from my youth up"? (Gen. xlviii. 15). Think you that all the waters which are gathered beneath the earth would seem to him worthy even of a glance? Nay, he will not drink of a well on whom God bestows the undiluted rapture-giving draughts, 158 sometimes through the ministry of some angel whom He has held worthy to act as cupbearer, sometimes by His own agency, setting none to intervene between Him who gives and him who takes.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 489.

PHILO

- 159 Ἄνυπερθέτως οὖν τῇ βασιλικῇ πειρώμεθα βαδί-ζειν ὁδῶ, οἱ τὰ γήινα παρέρχεσθαι δικαιοῦντες·
 βασιλικὴ δ' ἐστὶν ὁδός, ἧς δεσπότης ἰδιώτης μὲν
 οὐδὲ εἷς, μόνος δὲ ὁ καὶ μόνος βασιλεὺς ἀληθεία.
- 160 αὕτη δ' ἐστὶ, καθὰ καὶ μικρῶ πρότερον εἶπον,
 σοφία, δι' ἧς μόνῃς ἰκέτισι ψυχαῖς ἢ ἐπὶ τὸν
 ἀγένητον καταφυγὴ γίνεται· εἰκὸς γὰρ τὸν δι'
 ὁδοῦ τῆς βασιλικῆς ἀκωλύτως ἰόντα μὴ πρότερον
- 161 καμεῖν ἢ ἐντυχεῖν τῷ βασιλεῖ. τότε δὲ τὴν τε
 ἐκείνου μακαριότητα καὶ τὴν ἰδίαν εὐτέλειαν
 γνωρίζουσιν οἱ προσελθόντες· καὶ γὰρ Ἀβραὰμ
 ἐγγίσας τῷ θεῷ ἑαυτὸν εὐθὺς ἔγνω γῆν καὶ τέφραν
- 162 ὄντα. μῆτε δὲ ἐπὶ δεξιὰ μῆτε ἐπὶ
 θάτερα τῆς βασιλικῆς ἀποκλινέτωσαν ὁδοῦ, ἀλλ'
 αὐτῇ τῇ μέσῃ προῖτωσαν. αἱ γὰρ ἐφ' ἑκάτερα
 ἐκτροπαὶ τῇ μὲν ὑπερβολὰς εἰς ἐπίτασιν τῇ δὲ ἐλλείψεις πρὸς ἄνεσιν ἔχουσαι ὑπαίτιοι· οὐ γὰρ
 ἦττον τοῦ εὐωνύμου τὸ δεξιὸν ψεκτὸν ἐνταῦθα·
- 163 παρὰ μὲν γε τοῖς προπετώσ ζῶσι τὸ μὲν θράσος
 δεξιόν, ἀριστερὸν δὲ ἡ δειλία, παρὰ δὲ τοῖς ἀν-
 [297] ελευθέροις περὶ χρημάτων | διοίκησιν δεξιὸν μὲν
 ἢ φειδωλία, εὐώνυμον δὲ αἱ ἀνειμέναι δαπάναι· καὶ
 ὅσοι μέντοι ἐν τῷ λογιζέσθαι περιττοί, κρίνουσι
 τὸ μὲν πανοῦργον αἰρετόν, τὸ δὲ εὐηθικὸν φευκτόν·
 καὶ δεισιδαιμονίαν μὲν ὡς δεξιὸν ἄλλοι μεταδιώκουσιν, ἀποδιδράσκουσι δ' ὡς φευκτὸν ἀσέβειαν.
- 164 XXXV. ἵνα οὖν μὴ ταῖς μαχομέναις κακίαις
 ἀναγκασθῶμεν ἐκτρεπόμενοι χρῆσθαι, τὴν μέσῃν
 ὁδὸν εὐθύνειν βουλώμεθά τε καὶ εὐχώμεθα· μέσῃ
 δὲ θράσους μὲν καὶ δειλίας ἀνδρεία, ῥαθυμίας δὲ

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 489.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 159-164

So then brooking no delay should we essay to 159
march by the king's high road, we who hold it our duty to pass by earthly things. And that is the king's road of which the lordship rests with no common citizen, but with Him alone who alone is king in real truth. This road is, as I said but now, wisdom, by 160 which alone suppliant souls can make their escape to the Uncreated. For we may well believe that he who walks unimpeded along the king's way will never flag or faint, till he comes into the presence of the king. And then they that have come to Him 161 recognize His blessedness and their own meanness ;
for Abraham when he drew nigh to God straightway
knew himself to be earth and ashes (Gen. xviii. 27).

And let them not turn aside to the 162
right or to the left of the king's way, but advance along the midmost line. For deviations in either direction whether of excess or of deficiency, whether they tend to strain or to laxity, are in fault, for in this matter the right is no less blameworthy than the left. In the case of those who lead a reckless 163 life, rashness is the right and cowardice the left. To those who are churlish in money matters, parsimony is the right and extravagance the left. And all who are oversharpe and calculating in business count the knave's qualities worthy of their choice, but the simpleton's of their avoidance. And others pursue superstition as their right-hand path, but flee from impiety as a thing to be shunned. XXXV. There- 164 fore, that we may not be forced to turn aside and have dealings with the vices that war against us, let us wish and pray that we may walk straightly along the middle path or mean.<sup>a</sup> Courage is the mean between rashness and cowardice, economy between

PHILO

- ἐκκεχυμένης καὶ φειδωλίας ἀνελευθέρου σωφροσύνης, πανουργίας τε αὐτῆς καὶ μωρίας φρόνησις, καὶ μὴν
- 165 δεισιδαιμονίας καὶ ἀσεβείας εὐσέβεια. αὐτὰι μέσαι τῶν παρ' ἐκάτερα ἐκτροπῶν εἰσι, βάσιμοι καὶ λεωφόροι ὁδοὶ πᾶσαι, αἷς οὐ θέμις ὄργανοις σωματικοῖς ἀλλὰ ψυχῆς κινήσειν ἐφιεμένης τοῦ ἀρίστου συνεχῶς ἐμπεριπατεῖν.
- 166 Ἐπὶ τούτῳ μάλιστα δυσχεράνας ὁ γήινος Ἐδῶμ —δέδιδε γὰρ περὶ τῆς τῶν ἑαυτοῦ δογμάτων ἀνατροπῆς τε καὶ συγχύσεως—ἀπειλήσει πόλεμον ἀκήρυκτον, εἰ βιαζοίμεθα διέρχεσθαι τέμνοντες καὶ κείροντες αἰετὸν τὸν τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ καρπὸν, ὃν ἐπ' ὀλέθρῳ φρονήσεως σπείρας οὐκ ἐθέρισε· φησὶ γάρ· “οὐ διελεύση δι' ἐμοῦ· εἰ δὲ μή γε, ἐν πολέμῳ
- 167 ἐξελεύσομαί σοι εἰς ἀπάντησιν.” ἀλλὰ μηδὲν αὐτοῦ τῶν ἐπανατάσεων φροντίσαντες ἀποκρινώμεθα, ὅτι “παρὰ τὸ ὄρος πορευσόμεθα,” τουτέστιν ὑψηλαῖς καὶ μετεώροις ἔθος ἔχοντες ἐνομιλεῖν δυνάμεσι καὶ ὀρικῶς ἕκαστα σκοπεῖν, τὸν παντὸς οὐτιμοσοῦν λόγον ἐρευνῶντες, δι' οὗ τὸ τί ἦν εἶναι γνωρίζεται, καταφρονητικῶς ἔχομεν πάντων ὅσα ἐκτός τε καὶ περὶ σῶμα· ταπεινὰ γὰρ ταῦτά γε καὶ λίαν χαμαίζηλα, σοὶ μὲν φίλα, ἐχθρὰ δὲ ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς, οὗ χάριν οὐδενὸς αὐτῶν προσαιφόμεθα.
- 168 εἰ γὰρ ἄκρω δακτύλῳ τὸ τοῦ λόγου δὴ τοῦτο μόνον ψαύσομεν, γέρας καὶ τιμὴν σοι παρέξομεν· φρυαπτόμενος γὰρ αὐχῆσεις, ὡς καὶ ἡμῶν τῶν φιλαρέτων δελείσιν ἡδονῆς ὑπαχθέντων.
- 169 XXXVI. “ἐὰν γὰρ τοῦ ὕδατος σου” φησὶ “πίω

<sup>a</sup> We should expect θέμις οὐκ. Perhaps, however, θέμις is reduced in meaning, “in which we may walk with soul though not with body.”

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 164-169

careless extravagance and illiberal parsimony, prudence between knavery and folly, and finally piety between superstition and impiety. These lie in the middle between the deviations to either side, all of them high roads meet for the traveller's use, wherein we are bound in duty<sup>a</sup> to walk continually, not with the mechanism of the body, but with the motions of the soul which seeks the best. 165

Angered greatly at this, Edom, the earthly one, 166 since he fears lest the principles of his creed be confounded and overthrown, will threaten to wage war to the bitter end, if we should force our way through his land, tearing and ravaging ever, as we go, the fruits of his soul which he has sown for the destruction of wisdom, though he has not reaped them. For he says, "Thou shalt not go through me, else I will come out in war to meet thee." But let us take no heed of his menaces, but make answer, 167 "We will go along the mountain country." That is, "It is our wont to hold converse with powers that are lofty and sublime, and to examine each point by analysis and definition, and to search out in everything whatsoever its rationale, by which its essential nature<sup>b</sup> is known. Thus we feel contempt for all that is external or of the body; for these are low-lying and grovelling exceedingly. You love them, but we hate them, and therefore we will handle none of them. For if we do but touch them 168 with our finger-tips, as the saying is, we shall provide honour and 'value' to you. You will plume yourself and boast that we too, the virtue-lovers, have yielded to the snares of pleasure." XXXVI. "For 169 if I or my cattle drink of your water," it runs, "I

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 489.

PHILO

- ἐγὼ τε καὶ τὰ κτήνη μου, δώσω τιμὴν σοι," οὐ τὸν λεγόμενον ὄνον παρὰ ποιηταῖς, ἀργύριον ἢ χρυσίον ἢ ἄλλα ὅσα πρὸς τοὺς πιπράσκοντας ἔθος τοῖς ὠνούμενοις ἀντικαταλλάττεσθαι, ἀλλὰ τιμὴν τὸ
- 170 γέρας νυνὶ παραλαμβάνει. τῷ γὰρ ὄντι πᾶς ἀκόλαστος ἢ ἄδικος ἢ δειλός, ὅταν ἴδῃ τινὰ τῶν αὐστηροτέρων ἢ πόνον φεύγοντα ἢ λήμματος ἠττώμενον ἢ πρὸς τι τῶν ἡδονῆς φίλτρων ἐκνενευ-
- [298] κότα, χαίρει καὶ γέγηθε καὶ τετιμηῆσθαι | δοκεῖ, καὶ πρὸς τοὺς πολλοὺς ἐπινεανιεύομενος<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐπιχειρονομῶν ἄρχεται περὶ τῶν ἰδίων κακῶν ὡς σφόδρα ἀναγκαίων καὶ χρησίμων φιλοσοφεῖν, οὐκ ἄ', εἰ μὴ τοιαῦτα ἦν, φάσκων ὑπομεῖναι ἂν τὸν
- 171 δῶνα εὐδόκιμον ἄνδρα χρῆσθαι. λέγωμεν οὖν πιντὶ μοχθηρῷ· εἰάν τοῦ ὕδατός σου πίνωμεν, εἰάν τ νός σου τῶν κατὰ τὴν ἄκριτον φορὰν ψαύσωμεν, τ μὴν καὶ ἀποδοχὴν ἀντὶ δυσκλείας καὶ ἀτιμίας—τούτων γὰρ ἄξιος ὢν τυγχάνεις—παρεξόμεθα·
- 172 καὶ γὰρ ἀμέλει τὸ πρᾶγμα περὶ ὃ ἐσπούδακας συνόλως οὐδέν ἐστιν. ἢ νομίζεις τι τῶν θνητῶν πραγμάτων ὄντως πρὸς ἀλήθειαν εἶναι καὶ ὑφεστάναι, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὥσπερ ἐπ' αἰώρας τινὸς ψευδοῦς καὶ ἀβεβαίου δόξης φορεῖσθαι κατὰ κενοῦ βαίνοντα, μηδὲν ψευδῶν ὀνειράτων διαφέροντα;
- 173 εἰ δὲ μὴ θέλεις τὰς τῶν κατὰ μέρος ἀνθρώπων ἐξετάζειν τύχας, τὰς χωρῶν ὄλων καὶ ἔθνῶν πρὸς τε τὸ εὖ καὶ τὸ χεῖρον μεταβολάς· ἦκμασέ ποτε ἢ Ἑλλάς, ἀλλὰ Μακεδόνες αὐτῆς τὴν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἔτι νεανιεύομενος.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the ambiguous word τιμὴ is here used in the sense

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 169-173

shall give you value." The writer does not mean the pelf, to use the poet's word, silver or gold or aught else which the purchaser is wont to give in exchange to the vendor, but by "value" he here means honour.<sup>a</sup> For in very truth everyone that is 170 profligate or cowardly or unjust, when he sees any of the stricter folk shrinking from toil or mastered by gain or swerving aside to any of the love-lures of pleasure, rejoices and is glad and thinks that he has received honour. And then with swaggering airs and gestures of pride he begins to hold forth sagely to the multitude about his own vices, how necessary and profitable they are, "for," says he, "were they not so, would So-and-so, that much respected gentleman, be willing to indulge in them?" Let us say, 171 then, to everyone of this sorry sort, "If we drink of thy water, if we touch aught that thy confused and turbid current carries, we shall provide thee with honour and acceptance, instead of the ill-repute and dishonour that are thy true deserts."

For in very truth "the matter" which has so en- 172 gaged thy zeal is absolutely "nothing." Or dost thou think that aught of mortal matters has real being or subsistence, and that they do not rather swing suspended as it were on fallacious and unstable opinion, treading the void and differing not a whit from false dreams? If thou carest 173

not to test the fortunes of individual men, scan the vicissitudes, for better and worse, of whole regions and nations. Greece was once at its zenith, but the of an honour conferred (γέρας). The position of the τό, however, in the predicate is strange. Perhaps read τὸ "τιμὴν" γέρας. A scribe failing to understand this use of τό before a quoted word or phrase might easily transfer it to before the neuter noun γέρας.

PHILO

- ἰσχὺν ἀφείλοντο. Μακεδονία πάλιν ἤνθησεν, ἀλλὰ
 διαιρευθεῖσα κατὰ μοίρας ἡσθένησεν, ἕως εἰς τὸ 174 παντελὲς ἀπεσβέσθη. πρὸ Μακεδόνων τὰ Περσῶν
 ἐν εὐτυχίᾳ ἦν, ἀλλὰ μία ἡμέρα τὴν πολλὴν καὶ μεγάλην βασιλείαν αὐτῶν καθεῖλε, καὶ νῦν Παρ-θυηνοὶ Περσῶν τῶν πρὸ μικροῦ ἡγεμόνων ἐπικρατοῦσιν οἱ τότε ὑπήκοοι. ἔπνευσέ ποτε λαμπρὸν
 καὶ ἐπὶ μήκιστον Αἴγυπτος, ἀλλ' ὡς νέφος αὐτῆς
 ἡ μεγάλη παρήλθεν εὐπραγία. τί δὲ Αἰθίοπες, τί
 δὲ καὶ Καρχηδῶν καὶ τὰ πρὸς Λιβύην; τί δ' οἱ 175 Πόντου βασιλεῖς; τί δ' Εὐρώπῃ καὶ Ἀσία καὶ
 συνελόντι φράσαι πᾶσα ἡ οἰκουμένη; οὐκ ἄνω
 καὶ κάτω κλονουμένη καὶ τινασσομένη ὥσπερ ναῦς θαλαττεύουσα τοτὲ μὲν δεξιοῖς τοτὲ δὲ καὶ ἐναν-176 τίοις πνεύμασι χρῆται; χορεύει γὰρ ἐν
 κύκλῳ λόγος ὁ θεῖος, ὃν οἱ πολλοὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων
 ὀνομάζουσι τύχην· εἶτα αἰεὶ ῥέων κατὰ πόλεις καὶ
 ἔθνη καὶ χώρας τὰ ἄλλων ἄλλοις καὶ πᾶσι τὰ πάντων ἐπιπέμει, χρόνοις αὐτὸ μόνον ἀλλάττων τὰ
 παρ' ἐκάστοις, ἵνα ὡς μία πόλις ἡ οἰκουμένη πᾶσα
 τὴν ἀρίστην πολιτειῶν ἄγῃ δημοκρατίαν.
- 177 XXXVII. Οὐδὲν οὖν ἔστι τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων σπουδασμάτων ἔργον καὶ πρᾶγμα οὐδὲν, ἀλλὰ σκιά τις
 ἢ αὖρα πρὶν ὑποστῆναι παρατρέχουσα. ἔρχεται γὰρ
 καὶ πάλιν ἄπεισιν ὥσπερ ἐν ταῖς παλιρροίαις· τὰ
 γὰρ ἀμπωτίζοντα πελάγη ποτὲ μὲν μετὰ συρμοῦ
 καὶ πατάγου βία φέρεται καὶ ἀναχεόμενα λιμ-νάζει τὴν τέως χέρσον, ποτὲ δὲ ἐξαναχωροῦντα 178 πολλὴν τῆς θαλάττης μοῖραν ἡπειροῦ· οὕτως

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 173-178

Macedonians took away its power. Macedonia flourished in its turn, but when it was divided into portions it weakened till it was utterly extinguished. Before the Macedonians fortune smiled on the 174 Persians, but a single day destroyed their vast and mighty empire, and now Parthians rule over Persians, the former subjects over their masters of yesterday. The breath that blew from Egypt of old was clear and strong for many a long year, yet like a cloud its great prosperity passed away. What of the Ethiopians, what of Carthage, and the parts towards Libya? What of the kings of Pontus? 175 What of Europe and Asia, and in a word the whole civilized world? Is it not tossed up and down and kept in turmoil like ships at sea, subject now to prosperous, now to adverse winds? For 176 circlewise moves the revolution of that divine plan which most call fortune. Presently in its ceaseless flux it makes distribution city by city, nation by nation, country by country. What these had once, those have now. What all had, all have. Only from time to time is the ownership changed by its agency, to the end that the whole of our world should be as a single state, enjoying that best of constitutions, democracy.<sup>a</sup>

XXXVII. So then in all wherewith men concern 177 themselves there is no solid work, no "matter," only a shadow or a breath which flits past, before it has real existence. It comes and goes as in the ebb and flow of the sea. For the tides sometimes race violently, roaring as they sweep along, and in their wide-spread rush make a lake of what till now was dry land, and then again they retreat and turn into land what was a great tract of sea. Even so the good 178

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 489.

PHILO

- [299] οὖν ἔστιν ὅτε | μέγα καὶ πολυάνθρωπον ἔθνος ἐπι-
κλύσασα εὐπραγία ἐτέρωσε τὴν φορὰν τοῦ ρεύματος παρατρέψασα οὐδὲ βραχείαν εἶασε λιβάδα,
ἵνα μηδ' ἔχνος ὑπολειφθῆ πύοτης ἀρχαίας.
- 179 τούτων δ' οὐχ ἅπαντες ἀρτίους καὶ
πλήρεις λαμβάνουσι λογισμούς, ἀλλ' οἷς ἔθος συνομαρτεῖν ὀρθῶ καὶ πεπηγῶτι ὄρω καὶ λόγῳ. οἱ
γὰρ αὐτοὶ ἄμφω ταῦτα λέγουσι, καὶ τὸ γενέσεως
πράγμα ὅλον οὐδὲν ἐστι, καὶ παρὰ τὸ ὄρος πορευ-180 σόμεθα· ἀδύνατον γὰρ τὸν μὴ ταῖς ὑψηλαῖς καὶ
ὀρικαῖς χρώμενον ὁδοῖς ἀπογνῶναι μὲν τὰ θνητά,
μετακλίναι δὲ καὶ μεταναστῆναι πρὸς τὰ ἄφθαρτα.
Ὁ μὲν οὖν γήινος Ἐδῶμ τὴν οὐράνιον καὶ βα-σιλικὴν ἀρετῆς ὁδὸν ἐπιφράττειν ἀξιοῖ, ὁ δὲ θεῖος
λόγος ἔμπαλιν<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἐκείνου καὶ τῶν ὁμοζήλων·
- 181 ὦν ἓνα καὶ τὸν Βαλαάμ ἀναγραπτέον·
γῆς γὰρ θρέμμα καὶ οὗτος, οὐκ οὐρανοῦ βλάστημα.
τεκμήριον δέ· οἰωνοῖς καὶ ψευδέσι μαντεῖαις ἐπό-μενος οὐδ' ὅτε τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς μεμυκὸς ὄμμα ἀναβλέ-ψαν<sup>2</sup> “ εἶδε τὸν ἄγγελον τοῦ θεοῦ ἀνθεστῶτα,” μετα-τραπόμενος ἐπέσχε τὸ ἀδικεῖν, ἀλλὰ πολλῶ τῷ
τῆς ἀφροσύνης χρησάμενος ρεύματι ἐπικλυσθεῖς
- 182 κατεπόθη. τότε γὰρ ὡς ἀληθῶς οὐ δυσθεράπευτα
μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ παντελῶς ἀνίατα γίνεται τὰ τῆς
ψυχῆς ἀρρωστήματα, ὅταν ἐπιστάντος ἐλέγχου—
λόγος δ' ἐστὶ θεῖος, ἄγγελος ποδηγετῶν καὶ τὰ ἐν
ποσὶν ἀναστέλλων, ἵνα ἄπταιστοὶ διὰ λεωφόρου

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐν πᾶσι.

<sup>2</sup> So Mangey and old editions: mss. and Wend. ἀνα-βλέψας, presumably taking ὄμμα as acc. of respect. If so, it is of a type unusual in prose.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 178-182

fortune which has flooded a great and populous nation sometimes turns the stream of its current elsewhere and leaves not even a tiny trickle behind it, that no trace of the old richness may remain.

But it is not all who can estimate these 179 truths justly and fully. Only they can do so who are wont to follow the rule of definition and reason which is straight and constant. The two sayings, "the matter of creation is all of it nothing" and "we will journey along the mountain country," come from the mouths of the same speakers. For it cannot be 180 that he who does not walk in the upland paths of definition should renounce mortal things and turn aside therefrom and make his new home with things indestructible.

So then the earthly Edom purposes to bar the heavenly and royal road of virtue, but the divine reason on the other hand would bar the road of Edom and his associates. In the list of 181 these associates we must write the name of Balaam. For he too is no heavenly growth, but a creature of earth. And here we have the proof. He followed omens and false soothsayings, and not even when the closed eye of his soul received its sight and "beheld the angel of God standing in his way" (Num. xxii. 31) did he turn aside and refrain from evil-doing, but let the stream of his folly run full course and was overwhelmed by it and swallowed up. For it is then that the ailments of the soul become 182 not only hard to tend, but even utterly beyond healing, when though Conviction fronts us, Conviction, the divine reason, the angel who guides our feet and removes the obstacles before them, that we may walk without stumbling along the high road

PHILO

βαίνωμεν τῆς ὁδοῦ—τὰς ἀκρίτους ἑαυτῶν γνώμας
πρὸ τῶν ὑφηγήσεων τάττωμεν τῶν ἐκείνου, 183 ἄς ἐπὶ νουθεσία καὶ σωφρονισμῶ καὶ τῇ τοῦ παντὸς
ἐπανορθώσει βίου συνεχῶς εἴωθε ποιεῖσθαι. διὰ
τοῦθ' ὁ μὴ πεισθείς, μὴ μετατρεπόμενος τῷ ἀντι-βαίνοντι ἐλέγχῳ φθορὰν τὴν “μετὰ τῶν τραυματιῶν” αὐθις ἐνδέξεται, οὓς κατεκέντησε καὶ κατέτρωσε τὰ πάθη. γενήσεται δ' ἡ τούτου συμφορὰ
τοῖς μὴ τελέως δυσκαθάρτοις δίδαγμα ἀνταρκέστα-τον τοῦ πειρᾶσθαι τὸν ἔνδον δικαστὴν ἔχειν εὐμενῆ· σχήσουσι δέ, εἰ μηδὲν τῶν ὀρθῶς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ
γνωσθέντων ἀναδικάζοιεν.

THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD, 182-183

(Psalm xc. [xci.] 11, 12), we yet set our ill-judged purposes before those counsels of his which he is wont to give without ceasing for our admonishing and chastening and the reformation of our whole life. Therefore he who listens not, who is not turned from 183 his course by the Conviction which stands in his path, will in time receive destruction "with the wounded" (Num. xxxi. 8) whom their passions stabbed and wounded with a fatal stroke. His fate will be to those who are not hopelessly impure a lesson which heeds no confirmation, that they should seek to have the favour of the inward judge. And have it they shall, if they do not remove or repeal aught of the righteous judgements which he has given.

ON HUSBANDRY
(DE AGRICULTURA)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

GEN. ix. 20 f. quoted at the beginning of De Agricultura is the text of this and the two following treatises. The part of it dealt with in the one before us is the words, "And Noah began to be a husbandman" or "gardener."

Having pointed out that this connotes scientific gardening, Philo describes scientific gardening in the literal sense (1-7), and then goes on to soul-gardening. This ministers to the Mind. Its aim is the fruit of virtue, and it is only for the sake of this that it occupies itself first with rudimentary subjects. What is harmful it prunes away. What is not fruit-bearing it uses for fencing. It deals in this way with mere theorizing, forensic speech, dialectics, and geometry, which all sharpen the intellect without improving the character (8-16). Soul-gardening sets out its programme (17 ff.). As such a soul-gardener righteous Noah is contrasted with Cain, who is a mere "worker of the earth" in the service of Pleasure (21-25).

There must surely be other pairs of opposites similar to this of the scientific tiller and the mere worker of the soil. Yes; there is the shepherd and the rearer of cattle. The organs of the body are the cattle of each one of us. A careless Mind is unfit to guard them; it will not check excess, or exercise needful discipline. These things a shepherd will do. So honourable is his calling that poets call kings "shepherds," and Moses gives this title to the wise, the real kings. Jacob was a shepherd. So was Moses ; and he prays God not to leave Israel un-shepherded, i.e. to save it from mob-rule, despotism and licence. Well may each of us make his prayer our own on behalf of our inner flock. God, the Shepherd and King of the Universe, with His Word and Firstborn Son as viceroy, is extolled in the Psalm "The Lord shepherds me." Only by the One Shepherd can the flock be kept together. This is our sure hope, and our sole need. So all who were taught by God made the shepherd's science their study, and their pride ; like Joseph's brethren who, though bidden by him to tell Pharaoh that they were "rearsers of cattle," answered that they were "shepherds," shepherding, i.e. the faculties of the soul ; for Pharaoh, with royal and Egyptian arrogance, would have looked down on keepers of literal goats and sheep. The fatherland of these soul-shepherds is Heaven, and (as they told the King) they were but "sojourners" in Egypt, the land of the body and the passions (26-66).

ON HUSBANDRY

We find in the Law a third pair of opposites. A sharp distinction is to be drawn between a "horseman" and a "rider." The mere "rider" is at the horse's mercy ; the horseman is in control like the man at the helm. The horses of the soul are high spirit and desire, and their rider the Mind that hates virtue and loves the passions. Israel's "Song by the Sea" celebrates the disaster that befalls the "four-footed throng of passions and vices." It is clear that Moses' words about horses are symbolic, for so great a soldier as he must have known the value of cavalry. Again, though literal racehorse breeding is a poor business, those who ply it have the excuse that the spectators of a race catch the fine spirit of the horses ; whereas the figurative trainer, who sets an unqualified jockey on the back of vice and passion, is without excuse (67-92).

PHILO

A glance at the prayer of Moses in Gen. xlix. 17 f. will shew how different the "horseman" is from the "rider." To understand that prayer we must note that "Dan" means "judgement," and that the "dragon," which he is or has, is Moses' serpent of brass. (Of course neither Moses' serpent nor Eve's can be literal. Serpents do not talk, tempt, or heal.) So Moses prays that Dan (or his serpent) may be on the road ready to assail Pleasure, and "bite the horse's heel," i.e. attack and overturn the supports which hold up Passion (94-106).

Here we come upon a piece of interpretation very characteristic of Philo. The biting of Passion's heel brings about the horseman's fall. So far from being daunted by this, our author positively revels in it. It is a fall which implies victory, not defeat. For, should Mind ever find itself mounted on Passion, the only course is to jump or fall off. Yes, if you cannot escape from fighting in a bad cause, court defeat. Nay, do not stop there. Press forward to crown the victor. The crown at which you are aiming is not won in contests of pitiless savagery, or for fleetness of foot, in which puny animals surpass men, but in the holy contest, the only true "Olympic" games, the entrants for which, though weaker in body, are strongest in soul (108-119).

Having noted the difference between the members of each of these three pairs of opposites, suggested to him by the word γεωργός in his text, Philo turns to the word ἤρξατο, "began" (124).

ON HUSBANDRY

“Beginning is half the whole.” Yes, if we go on to the end. But good beginnings are often marred by failure to make proper distinctions. For instance, one says that “God is the Author of all things,” whereas he should say “of good things only.” Again, we are very scrupulous about rejecting priests or victims on the ground of physical blemish. We ought to be equally scrupulous to separate the profane from the sacred in our thoughts of God. And again Memory, of which the ruminating camel is a figure, is a fine thing, but the camel’s undivided hoof makes him unclean, and that reminds us that Memory must reject the bad and retain the good; for practical purposes, not for sophistical hair-splitting. Sophists are swine; they divide ad nauseam, but for perfection we must con over and take in (125-146).

Sections 147 to 156 shew that the conditions of exemption from military service laid down in Deut. xx. 5 and 7 cannot be literally meant. In 157 ff. the acquired possessions which exempt a man are interpreted as faculties which must be enjoyed and fully realized, before he who has acquired them is trained and fit for the warfare with the sophists.

Right ending must crown good beginning. We miss perfection unless we own that that to which we have attained is due to the loving wisdom of God. And wilful refusal to acknowledge God as the Giver of success is far worse than involuntary failure.

“All this about start and goal has been suggested,” Philo tells us, “by the statement that Noah began to be a husbandman or gardener.”

ΠΕΡΙ ΓΕΩΡΓΙΑΣ

1 I. “Καὶ ἤρξατο Νῶε ἄνθρωπος γεωργὸς γῆς
[300] εἶναι, καὶ ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα, καὶ ἔπιε | τοῦ
οἴνου, καὶ ἐμεθύσθη ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ.”

Οἱ μὲν πολλοὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὰς φύσεις τῶν
πραγμάτων οὐκ εἰδότες καὶ περὶ τὴν τῶν ὀνομάτων
θέσιν ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἀμαρτάνουσι· τοῖς μὲν γὰρ ὥσπερ
ἐξ ἀνατομῆς περινοηθεῖσι κύριαι προσρήσεις
ἔπονται, τοῖς δ' ὑποσυγκεχυμένοις οὐ σφόδρα
2 ἠκριβωμένοι. Μωυσῆς δὲ κατὰ πολλὴν περιουσίαν τῆς ἐν τοῖς πράγμασι ἐπιστήμης ὀνόμασι εὐθυ-βολωτάτοις καὶ ἐμφαντικωτάτοις εἴωθε χρῆσθαι.
πολλαχοῦ μὲν οὖν τῆς νομοθεσίας τὴν ὑπόσχεσιν
ἐπαληθεύουσαν εὐρήσομεν, οὐχ ἦκιστα δὲ καὶ τῷ
προτεθέντι κεφαλαίῳ, καθ' ὃ γεωργὸς ὁ δίκαιος
3 Νῶε εἰσάγεται. τίνι γὰρ τῶν προχειροτέρων οὐκ
ἂν δόξειε τὰ αὐτὰ εἶναι γεωργία τε καὶ γῆς ἐργασία,
καίτοι πρὸς ἀλήθειαν οὐ μόνον οὐκ ὄντα τὰ αὐτά,
ἀλλὰ καὶ λίαν ἀπηρητημένα, ὡς ἀντιστατεῖν καὶ
4 διαμάχεσθαι; δύναται μὲν γὰρ τις καὶ ἄνευ ἐπιστήμης περὶ τὴν γῆς ἐπιμέλειαν πονεῖσθαι, γεωργὸς
δὲ τὸ μὴ ἰδιώτης ἀλλ' ἔμπειρος εἶναι καὶ τῷ ὀνόματι
πεπίστωται, ὅπερ ἐκ τῆς γεωργικῆς τέχνης, ἧς
5 φερώνυμός ἐστιν, εὐρηται. πρὸς δὲ τούτῳ κακείνο

<sup>a</sup> The LXX has ἐμεθύσθη καὶ ἐγυμνώθη ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ.

ON HUSBANDRY

I. " And Noah began to be a husbandman, and he <sup>1</sup> planted a vineyard, and drank of the wine, and became drunken within his house <sup>a</sup> " (Gen. ix. 20 f.).

Most men, not knowing the nature of things, necessarily go wrong also in giving them names. For things which are well considered and subjected as it were to dissection have appropriate designations attached to them in consequence; while others having been presented in a confused state receive names that are not thoroughly accurate. Moses, being abundantly <sup>2</sup> equipped with the knowledge that has to do with things, is in the habit of using names that are perfectly apt and expressive. We shall find the assurance just given made good in many parts of the Lawgiving, and not least in the section before us in which the righteous Noah is introduced as a husbandman. Would not anyone who answers questions off- <sup>3</sup> hand think that husbandry and working on the soil were the same things, although in reality they not only are not the same things, but are ideas utterly at variance with each other and mutually repugnant? For a man is able even without knowledge to labour <sup>4</sup> at the care of the soil, but a husbandman is guaranteed to be no unprofessional, but a skilled worker by his very name, which he has gained from the science of husbandry, the science whose title he bears. In <sup>5</sup>

PHILO

[301] λογιστέον, ὅτι ὁ μὲν γῆς | ἐργάτης πρὸς ἓν τέλος, τὸν μισθόν, ἀφορῶν—ἔμμισθος γὰρ ὦ: ἐπίπαν οὗτος—οὐδεμίαν ἔχει φροντίδα τοῦ καλῶς ἐργάσασθαι, ὁ μέντοι γεωργὸς πολλὰ ἂν ἐθελήσῃ καὶ τῶν ἰδίων εἰσφέρειν καὶ προσαναλίσκειν οἴκοθέν τι ὑπὲρ<sup>1</sup> τοῦ καὶ τὸ χωρίον ὀνήσαι καὶ πρὸς μηδενὸς τῶν ἰδόντων μεμφθῆναι· βούλεται γὰρ οὐχ ἑτέρωθέν ποθεν, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν γεωργηθέντων εὐτοκία χρωμένων ἀνὰ πᾶν
 6 ἔτος τοὺς καρποὺς ἀναλαμβάνειν. οὗτος τὰ μὲν ἄγρια τῶν δένδρων ἡμεροῦν, τὰ δ' ἡμέρα ἐπιμελείαις συναύξειν, τὰ δ' ὑπὸ πλεοναζούσης τροφῆς κεχυμένα τομαῖς στέλλειν, τὰ δ' ἑσταλμένα καὶ πεπιλημένα ἐπιφύσεων ἐκτάσει μηκύνειν, καὶ ὅσα μὲν εὐγενῆ πολυκληματοῦντα κατὰ γῆς τείνειν ἐν οὐ πάνυ βαθείαις τάφροις, ὅσα δὲ μὴ εὐκαρπα ἑτέρων εἰς τὸν πρὸς ταῖς ρίζαις κορμὸν ἐνθέσει καὶ συμφυεστάτῃ ἐνώσει βελτιοῦν ἐθελήσει—καὶ γὰρ ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων τυγχάνει ταῦτόν, ὡς τοὺς θετοὺς παῖδας γένεσιν ἄλλοτρίοις διὰ τὰς σφετέρας οἰκειου-
 7 μένους ἀρετὰς παγίως ἐναρμόζεσθαι—· μυρία τοίνυν καὶ αὐτόπρεμνα ρίζαις αὐταῖς ἀνασπάσας κατέβαλε τὰς εἰς εὐκαρπίαν <ἐκ>φύσεις<sup>2</sup> ἐστερωμένα καὶ τοῖς φέρουσι μεγάλην ζημίαν ἐκ τοῦ παραπεφυτεῦσθαι πλησίον ἐνεγκόντα. τοιαύτη μὲν τίς ἐστίν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. περί.

<sup>2</sup> Cf. Quod Deus 38.

ON HUSBANDRY, 5-7

addition to this there is the further point to be considered, that the worker on the soil is as a rule a wage-earner, and as such has but one end in view, his wages, and cares nothing at all about doing his work well ; whereas the husbandman would be willing not only to put into the undertaking much of his private property, but to spend a further amount drawn from his domestic budget, to do the farm good and to escape being blamed by those who have seen it. For, regardless of gain from any other source, he desires only to see the crops which he has grown yielding plentifully year by year and to take up their produce. Such a man will be anxious to bring under 6 cultivation the trees that were before wild, to improve by careful treatment those already under cultivation, to check by pruning those that are over-luxuriant owing to excess of nourishment, to give more scope to those which have been curtailed and kept back, splicing on new growths to stem or branch ; when trees of good kinds throw out abundant tendrils, he will like to train them under ground in shallow trenches ; and to improve such as yield poor crops by inserting grafts into the stem near the roots and joining them with it so that they grow together as one. The same thing happens, I may remark, in the case of men, when adopted sons become by reason of their native good qualities congenial to those who by birth are aliens from them, and so become firmly fitted into the family. To return to our subject. The 7 husbandman will pull up by the roots and throw away quantities of trees on which the shoots that should bear fruit have lost their fertility, and so, because they have been planted near them, have done great harm to those that are bearing fruit. The science,

PHILO

- ἡ περὶ τὰ βλαστώνοντα ἐκ γῆς φυτὰ τέχνη, τὴν δὲ ψυχῆς γεωργικὴν ἐν μέρει πάλιν ἐπισκεψόμεθα.
- 8 II. Πρῶτον μὲν τοίνυν σπείρειν ἢ φυτεῦν ἄγονον οὐδὲν ἐπιτηδεύει, πάντα δ' ἡμέρα καὶ καρποτόκα φόρους ἐτησίους οἴσοντα τῷ ἡγεμόνι ἀνθρώπων· τοῦτον γὰρ ἄρχοντα ἢ φύσις δένδρων τε καὶ ζώων τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα θνητὰ ἅπαξ ἀπάντων ἀνέδειξεν.
- 9 ἄνθρωπος δὲ ὁ ἐν ἐκάστῳ ἡμῶν τίς ἂν εἶη πλὴν ὁ νοῦς, ὃς τὰς ἀπὸ τῶν σπαρέντων καὶ φυτευθέντων ὠφελείας εἶωθε καρποῦσθαι; ἐπεὶ δὲ νηπίοις μὲν ἐστὶ γάλα τροφή, τελείοις δὲ τὰ ἐκ πυρῶν πέμματα, καὶ ψυχῆς γαλακτώδεις μὲν ἂν εἶεν τροφαὶ κατὰ τὴν παιδικὴν ἡλικίαν τὰ τῆς ἐγκυκλίου μουσικῆς προπαιδεύματα, τέλειαι δὲ καὶ ἀνδράσιν ἐμπρεπεῖς αἱ διὰ φρονήσεως καὶ σωφροσύνης καὶ ἀπάσης ἀρετῆς ὑψηγήσεις· ταῦτα γὰρ σπαρέντα καὶ φυτευθέντα ἐν διανοίᾳ καρποῦς ὠφελιμωτάτους οἴσει,
- 10 καλὰς καὶ ἐπαινετὰς πράξεις. διὰ ταύτης τῆς γεωργικῆς καὶ ὅσα παθῶν ἢ κακιῶν δένδρα ἀναβλαστόντα εἰς ὕψος ἐξήρθη φθοροποιούς φέροντα
- [302] καρπούς, ὑποτεμνόμενα καθαίρεται, | ὡς μηδὲ βραχὺ τι λείψανον ἐάθῃναι, ἀφ' οὗ νέαι βλάσται
- 11 πάλιν ἀμαρτημάτων ἀναδραμοῦνται. κἂν εἴ τινα μέντοι δένδρα εἶη μήτ' ὠφελίμων μήτ' αὐτῶν βλαβερῶν καρπῶν οἰστικά, ταῦτα ἐκκόψει μὲν, οὐ μὴν ἐάσει γε ἀφανισθῆναι, κατατάξει δ' αὐτὰ εἰς ἐναρμόνιον χρῆσιν ἢ βαλλομένη χάρακας καὶ σταυροὺς ἐν κύκλῳ στρατοπέδου ἢ φραγμὸν πόλεως, ἵνα ἀντὶ
- 12 τείχους ἦ. III. λέγει γάρ· “πᾶν ὁ οὐ καρπόβρωτόν ἐστιν, ἐκκόψεις καὶ ποιήσεις χαράκωσιν

ON HUSBANDRY, 7-12

then, that has to do with growths that spring out of the earth is of the kind I have described. Let us consider in its turn soul-husbandry.

II. First, then, it makes it its aim to sow or plant 8 nothing that has no produce, but all that is fitted for cultivation and fruit-bearing, and likely to yield yearly tributes to man, its prince; for him did nature appoint to be ruler of all trees as well as of the living creatures besides himself that are mortal. But who else could the man that is in each of us be 9 save the mind, whose place it is to reap the benefits derived from all that has been sown or planted? But seeing that for babes milk is food, but for grown men wheaten bread, there must also be soul-nourishment, such as is milk-like suited to the time of childhood, in the shape of the preliminary stages of school-learning, and such as is adapted to grown men in the shape of instructions leading the way through wisdom and temperance and all virtue. For these when sown and planted in the mind will produce most beneficial fruits, namely fair and praiseworthy conduct. By means of this husbandry whatever trees 10 of passions or vices have sprung up and grown tall, bearing mischief-dealing fruits, are cut down and cleared away, no minute portion even being allowed to survive, as the germ of new growths of sins to spring up later on. And should there be any trees 11 capable of bearing neither wholesome nor harmful fruits, these it will cut down indeed, but not allow them to be made away with, but assign them to a use for which they are suited, setting them as pales and stakes to surround an encampment or to fence in a city in place of a wall. III. For he says, "Every 12 tree whose fruit is not edible thou shalt cut down and

PHILO

- ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν, ἣτις ποιήσει πρὸς σέ τὸν πόλεμον.” ταῦτα δ’ εἰκάζεται τὰ δένδρα ταῖς περὶ λόγους
- 13 δυνάμεσι θεωρίαν ψιλὴν ἐχούσαις· ἐν αἷς θετέον ἰατρολογία ἀπεξευγμένη ἔργων, δι’ ὧν τοὺς κάμνοντας εἰκός ἐστι σῶζεσθαι, καὶ ῥητορικῆς τὸ συνηγορικὸν καὶ ἔμμισθον εἶδος οὐ περὶ τὴν εὔρεσιν τοῦ δικαίου πραγματευόμενον, ἀλλὰ περὶ τὴν δι’ ἀπάτης πειθῶ τῶν ἀκούοντων, ἔτι μέντοι καὶ διαλεκτικῆς καὶ γεωμετρίας ὅσα εἰς μὲν ἐπανόρθωσιν ἤθους οὐδὲν συνεργεῖ, παραθήγει δὲ τὸν νοῦν οὐκ ἔωντα ἀμβλεία χρῆσθαι τῇ πρὸς ἕκαστα τῶν ἀπορουμένων προσβολῇ, τομαῖς δὲ αἰεὶ καὶ διαστολαῖς χρῆσθαι, ὡς τὴν ἐκάστου πράγματος
- 14 ἰδιότητα κοινῶν διαζεγγύναι ποιότητων. τὸν γοῦν κατὰ φιλοσοφίαν λόγον τρίδυμον ὄντα τοὺς παλαιούς ἀγρῶ φασι ἀπεικάσαι, τὸ μὲν φυσικὸν αὐτοῦ δένδροις καὶ φυτοῖς παραβάλλοντας, τὸ δ’ ἠθικὸν καρποῖς, ὧν ἕνεκα καὶ τὰ φυτά, τὸ δ’ αὖ λογικὸν
- 15 φραγμῶ καὶ περιβόλῳ· καθάπερ γὰρ τὸ περικείμενον τείχος ὀπώρας καὶ φυτῶν τῶν κατὰ τὸν ἀγρόν ἐστι φυλακτήριον τοὺς ἐπὶ τῷ σίνεσθαι παρεισφθείρεσθαι βουλομένους ἀνεῖργον, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον τὸ λογικὸν μέρος φιλοσοφίας φρουρά τις ἐστὶν ὀχυρωτάτη τῶν δυεῖν ἐκείνων, ἠθικοῦ τε καὶ
- 16 φυσικοῦ· τὰς γὰρ διπλᾶς καὶ ἀμφιβόλους ὅταν ἐξαπλοῖ λέξεις καὶ τὰς διὰ τῶν σοφισμάτων πιθανότηας ἐπιλύη καὶ τὴν εὐπαράγωγον ἀπάτην, <sup>a</sup> “The modes . . . processes,” lit. “dialectic and geometry” (or “logic and mathematics”).

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 490.

ON HUSBANDRY, 12-16

shalt make into a palisade to resist the city, which shall make war against thee " (Deut. xx. 20). The Scripture uses these trees to represent the purely intellectual activities which deal with theory alone. Among these we must place medical science dissociated from practical measures such as lead to the recovery of the sick ; the kind of oratory practised by the hired advocate, that is concerned not to find out the rights of the case, but to influence the hearers by falsehood ; and over and above these we must include all the modes of reaching conclusions by argumentative and rigidly deductive processes,<sup>a</sup> that contribute nothing to the improvement of character,<sup>b</sup> but whet the mind, compelling it to pay keen attention to each problem as it presents itself ; and enabling it to draw clear distinctions, and to make the special character of the matter in hand stand out in bold relief against the background of the features which it has in common with others. Accordingly, they tell us that the men of old likened philosophic discussion with its threefold division<sup>b</sup> to a field, comparing that part which deals with nature to trees and plants ; that which deals with morality to fruits and crops, for the sake of which the plants exist ; that part which has to do with logic to a fence enclosing it. For even as the wall built round it serves to protect the fruit and the plants that grow in the field, keeping off those who would like mischievously to make their way in with a view to plunder ; in the same way the logical part of philosophy is, so to speak, a strong barrier guarding those other two parts, the ethical and the physical. For when it disentangles ambiguous expressions capable of two meanings, and exposes the fallacies created by tricks of argument, and using μέγιστον ψυχῆς δέλεαρ καὶ ἐπιζήμιον, ἀναιρῆ διὰ λόγων ἐμφαντικωτάτων καὶ ἀποδείξεων ἀνενδοιάστων, ὥσπερ κηρὸν λελειασμένον τὸν νοῦν ἀπεργάζεται ἔτοιμον δέχεσθαι τοὺς τε φυσιολογίας καὶ τοὺς ἠθοποιίας ἀσινεῖς καὶ πάνυ δοκίμους χαρακτήρας.

PHILO

17. IV. Ταῦτ' οὖν ἡ ψυχῆς ἐπαγγελλομένη γεωργικὴ προκηρύττει· τὰ ἀφροσύνης δένδρα καὶ ἀκολασίας ἀδικίας τε καὶ δειλίας πάντ' ἐκκόψω, ἐκτεμῶ καὶ τὰ ἡδονῆς καὶ ἐπιθυμίας ὀργῆς τε καὶ θυμοῦ καὶ τῶν παραπλησίων παθῶν, κἂν ἄχρισ οὐρανοῦ μηκύνηται,<sup>1</sup> τὰ φυτὰ, ἐπικαύσω καὶ τὰς ρίζας αὐτῶν ἐφιεῖσ' ἄχρι τῶν ὑστάτων τῆς γῆς φλογὸς ριπήν, [303] ὡς μηδὲν | μέρος ἀλλὰ μηδ' ἴχνος ἢ σκιὰν ὑπολει-
- 18 φθῆναι τὸ παράπαν. ἀνελῶ μὲν δὴ ταῦτα, φυτεύσω δὲ ταῖς μὲν ἐν ἡλικίᾳ παιδικῇ ψυχαῖς μοσχεύματα, ὧν ὁ καρπὸς αὐτὰς τιθηθήσεται—ἔστι δὲ ταῦτα ἡ τοῦ γράφειν καὶ ἀναγινώσκειν εὐτρόχως ἐπιτήδευσις, ἡ τῶν παρὰ σοφοῖς ποιηταῖς ἀκριβῆς ἔρευνα, γεωμετρία καὶ ἡ περὶ τοὺς ῥητορικοὺς λόγους μελέτη καὶ ἡ σύμπασα τῆς ἐγκυκλίου παιδείας μουσική—, ταῖς δὲ νεανιευομέναις καὶ ἀνδρουμέναις ἤδη τὰ ἀμείνω καὶ τελεώτερα, τὸ φρονήσεως φυτόν, τὸ ἀνδρείας, τὸ σωφροσύνης, τὸ δικαιοσύνης, τὸ
- 19 ἀρετῆς ἀπάσης. ἂν μέντοι τι καὶ τῶν τῆς ἀγρίας λεγομένης ὕλης<sup>2</sup> ἐδώδιμον μὲν μὴ φέρη καρπὸν, δύνηται δὲ ἐδώδιμος φραγμὸς εἶναι καὶ φυλακτήριον, καὶ τοῦτο ταμιεύσομαι, οὐ δι' ἑαυτό, ἀλλ' ὅτι ὑπηρετεῖν ἀναγκαίω καὶ χρησίμω σφόδρα πέφυκε.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μηκύνη.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. μούσης.

ON HUSBANDRY, 16-19

perfectly clear and unmistakable language and adducing proofs which admit of no doubt destroys plausible falsehood, that greatest snare and pest of the soul, it makes the mind like smoothed wax ready to receive the impressions made by the science that explores existence and that which aims at building character, impressions free from flaw and aught that is not genuine.

IV. These, then, are the offers held out by soul- 17
husbandry in its inaugural proclamation : " The trees
of folly and licentiousness, of injustice and cowardice
I will wholly cut down ; I will moreover extirpate
the plants of pleasure and desire, of anger and wrath
and of like passions, even though they be grown up to heaven ; I will burn up their very roots, letting the rush of fire pursue them even to the depths of the earth, that no part or trace or shadow of them whatever be left behind. These I will destroy, but 18
I will plant for souls in their childhood suckers whose fruit shall feed them. These suckers are the learning to write easily and read fluently ; the diligent search of what wise poets have written ; geometry and the practice of rhetorical composition ; and the whole of the education embraced in school-learning. For souls at the stage of youths and of those now growing into men I will provide the better and more perfect thing suited to their age, the plant of sound sense,
that of courage, that of temperance, that of justice,
that of all virtue. If, again, some tree among those 19 that belong to what is called wild wood does not bear edible fruit, but can be a fence and protection of such fruit, this tree also will I keep in store, not for its own sake, but because it is adapted to do service
to another that is indispensable and most useful."

PHILO

- 20 V. Διὰ τοῦτο ὁ πάνσοφος Μωυσῆς τῷ μὲν δικαίῳ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς γεωργικὴν ὡς ἑναρμόνιον καὶ ἐπιβάλλουσαν τέχνην ἀνατίθεισι λέγων “ ἤρξατο Νῶε ἄνθρωπος εἶναι γεωργός,” τῷ δὲ ἀδίκῳ τὴν ἄνευ ἐπιστήμης φέρουσαν ἄχθη βαρύτατα γῆς ἐργασίαν·
- 21 “ Κάιν ” γάρ φησιν “ ἦν ἐργαζόμενος τὴν γῆν,” καὶ μικρὸν ὕστερον, ἠνίκα τὸ ἐπὶ τῇ ἀδελφοκτονίᾳ ἄγος ἐργασάμενος καταφωράται, λέγεται· “ ἐπικατάρατος σὺ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, ἣ ἔχανε τὸ στόμα αὐτῆς δέξασθαι τὸ αἷμα τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου ἐκ τῆς χειρός σου, ἣ ἐργᾷ τὴν γῆν, καὶ οὐ προσθήσει τὴν ἰσχὺν
- 22 αὐτῆς δοῦναί σοι.” πῶς οὖν ἂν τις περιφανέστερον ἐπιδείξει δύναιτο, ὅτι γῆς ἐργάτην ἀλλ’ οὐ γεωργὸν ὁ νομοθέτης νομίζει τὸν φαῦλον, ἢ τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον; οὐ μὴν ὑποληπτέον ἢ περὶ ἀνθρώπου χερσὶ καὶ ποσὶ καὶ τῇ ἄλλῃ δυνάμει τοῦ σώματος ἐνεργεῖν ἱκανοῦ ἢ περὶ γῆς ὀρεινῆς καὶ πεδιάδος εἶναι τὸν λόγον, ἀλλὰ περὶ τῶν καθ’ ἕκαστον ἡμῶν δυνάμεων· τὴν γὰρ τοῦ φαύλου ψυχὴν περὶ οὐδὲν ἄλλο πραγματεύεσθαι συμβέβηκεν ἢ τὸ γήινον
- 23 σῶμα καὶ τὰς τοῦ σώματος ἀπάσας ἡδονάς. ὁ γοῦν πολὺς ὄμιλος ἀνθρώπων τὰ γῆς ἐπιῶν κλίματα καὶ ἄχρι τῶν περάτων φθάνων αὐτῆς καὶ τὰ πελάγη περαιούμενος καὶ τὰ ἐν μυχοῖς θαλάττης ἀναζητῶν καὶ μηδὲν μέρος ἔων τοῦ παντός ἀδιερεύνητον αἰεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ πορίζει ταῦτα, δι’ ὧν ἡδονὴν συναυ-
- 24 ξήσει· καθάπερ γὰρ οἱ ἀλιευόμενοι δίκτυα καθιᾶσιν ἔστιν ὅτε μήκιστα πολλὴν ἐν κύκλῳ περιβαλλόμενοι

---

<sup>a</sup> Or “earned from his working.” Philo plays with ἐργάζομαι which can mean either “to work” (till) or “gain by work.” So, too, ἄγος (pollution) carries with it the idea of a curse and explains the ἐπικατάρατος of the text.

ON HUSBANDRY, 20-24

V. It is for this reason that Moses, the all-wise, 20 ascribes to the righteous man soul-husbandry as a science in keeping with him and rightly pertaining to him, saying "Noah began to be a husbandman," whereas to the unrighteous man he ascribes that working of the ground which is without scientific knowledge and carries very heavy loads. For he 21 says, "Cain was one working the ground" (Gen. iv. 2), and, a little later, when he is discovered to have incurred<sup>a</sup> the pollution of fratricide, it is said: "Cursed art thou from the ground, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand, with which thou shalt work the ground, and it shall not yield<sup>b</sup> its strength to give it thee" (Gen. iv. 12 f.). How, I ask, could anyone shew more clearly 22 than in this manner that the lawgiver considers the bad man a worker of the soil and not an husbandman? We must not, however, suppose that what is here spoken of is either a man able to work with hands and feet and the other powers of the body, or that it is soil on hill or plain. No, the subject dealt with is the faculties of each one of us; for the soul of the bad man has no other interest than his earthy body, and all the body's pleasures. At all events 23 the majority of mankind traversing all the quarters of the earth and finding their way to its utmost bounds, and crossing its oceans, and seeking what is hidden in far-reaching creeks of the sea, and leaving no part of the whole world unexplored, are always and everywhere procuring the means of increasing pleasure. For even as fishermen let down nets, 24 sometimes very long, taking in a large extent of sea, <sup>a</sup> Or "add." Cf. Quod Det. 112.

PHILO

- θάλατταν, ἔν' ὡς πλείστους ἐντὸς ληφθέντας ἀρκύων
οἶα τειχίρεις γεγονότας ἰχθύας συλλάβωσι, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον ἢ πλείστη μοῖρα ἀνθρώπων οὐκ ἐπὶ
[304] μέρος θαλάττης μόνον, | ἀλλ' ἐφ' ἅπασαν τὴν
ὔδατος καὶ γῆς καὶ ἀέρος φύσιν τὰ πάντα, ὡς
οἱ ποιηταὶ πού φασι, λῖνα τεύνασ' ἅπαντα πανταχόθεν δι' ἡδονῆς ἀπόλαυσίν τε καὶ χρῆσιν ἀγκι-25 στρεύεται· καὶ γὰρ γῆν μεταλλεύουσι καὶ τὰ πελάγη διαβαίνουσι καὶ τᾶλλα πάντα ὅσα εἰρήνης καὶ πολέμου ἔργα δρῶσιν, ὕλας ἀφθόνοους ὡς βασιλίδι ἡδονῆ ὑπορίζοντες, οἱ γεωργίας μὲν ἀμύητοι ψυ-χικῆς, ἣ σπειρούσα καὶ φυτεύουσα τὰς ἀρετὰς
καρπὸν δρέπεται τὸν εὐδαίμονα βίον ἀπ' αὐτῶν, ἐργασάμενοι δὲ καὶ μεθοδεύοντες τὰ φίλα τῇ
σαρκὶ καὶ τὸν σύνθετον χοῦν, τὸν πεπλασμένον
ἀνδριάντα, τὸν ψυχῆς ἔγγιστα οἶκον,<sup>1</sup> ὃν ἀπὸ
γενέσεως ἄχρι τελευτῆς, ἄχθος τοσοῦτον, οὐκ ἀποτίθεται νεκροφοροῦσα, μετὰ σπουδῆς τῆς πάσης οἰκειούμενοι.
- 26 VI. Ὡς μὲν οὖν γεωργίας ἐργασία γῆς καὶ
γεωργοῦ γῆς ἐργάτης διαφέρουσιν, εἴρηται. σκε-πτέον δέ, μὴ καὶ ἄλλαι τινές εἰσιν ἰδέαι συγγενεῖς
τῶν εἰρημένων, διὰ τὴν ἐν τοῖς ὀνόμασι κοινωνίαν ἐπικρύπτουσαι τὰς ἐν τοῖς πράγμασι διαφοράς·
εἰσι δέ γε ἄς ἀναζητοῦντες εὐρομεν διτταί, περι-27 ῶν τὰ προσήκοντα, εἴαν οἷόν τε ἦ, λέξομεν. αὐτίκα
τοῖν ὡς γεωργὸν καὶ γῆς ἐργάτην δόξαντας
ἀδιαφορεῖν ἀλλήλων εὐρομεν ἐν τοῖς κατὰ διάνοιαν

<sup>1</sup> Mangey ὄγκον, which perhaps may be right. For οἶκον
cf. Quod Deus 150.

ON HUSBANDRY, 24-27

in order that they may enclose within the toils as many fish as possible imprisoned as though by a wall: in just the same fashion the larger part of mankind stretching what the poets call, I think, "all-capturing nets," not only over every part of the sea but over the whole realm of water, earth and air, ensnares from all quarters things of all sorts to satisfy and indulge Pleasure. They dig into the ground and 25 cross the seas and do all works incidental to war or peace to provide lavish materials for Pleasure as for a queen. These people have not learned the secrets of soul-husbandry, which sows and plants the virtues and reaps as their fruit a happy life. They have made the objects dear to the flesh their business,<sup>a</sup> and these they pursue methodically. With all earnestness they seek to make their own that composition of clay, that moulded statue, that house so close to the soul, which it never lays aside but carries as a corpse from birth to death, ah! how sore a burden!

VI. We have stated how working of the soil differs 26 from husbandry and a worker of the soil from an husbandman. But we must consider whether there are not other cases like those which have been mentioned, in which the difference between the things signified is obscured by their passing under the same name. There are two such instances which we have found by careful search, and concerning which we will say, if we can, what ought to be said. For example, then, as in the case of "husbandman" 27 and "soil-worker," by resorting to allegory we found a wide difference in meaning to underly apparent <sup>a</sup> Or "their work," still continuing the thought of  $\gamma\eta\varsigma$  ἐργασία.

PHILO

ἀλληγοροῦντες μακρῶ διεστηκότας, οὕτως ποιμένα καὶ κτηνοτρόφον· μέμνηται γὰρ ποτὲ μὲν κτηνο-28 τροφίας ποτὲ δ' αὖ ποιμενικῆς ὁ νομοθέτης. καὶ οἷ γε μὴ λίαν ἠκριβωμένοι τάχα που τῆς αὐτῆς ἐπι-τηδεύσεως συνωνυμούσας ὑπολήφονται προσήσεις
εἶναι, εἰσὶ δέ γε πραγμάτων διαφερόντων ἐν ταῖς 29 δι' ὑπονοιῶν ἀποδόσεσι· καὶ γὰρ εἰ τοῖς θρεμμάτων προεστηκόσιν ἀκρότερα ἐπιφημίζειν ἔθος κτηνο-τρόφων καὶ ποιμένων ὀνόματα, ἀλλ' οὐ γε τῷ τὴν
ψυχῆς ἀγέλην ἐπιτετραμμένῳ λογισμῷ· φαῦλος
μὲν γὰρ ὢν ὁ ἀγελάρχης οὗτος καλεῖται κτηνοτρόφος, ἀγαθὸς δὲ καὶ σπουδαῖος ὀνομάζεται 30 ποιμῆν. ὃν δὲ τρόπον, ἐπιδείξομεν αὐτίκα· VII. ἡ
φύσις ἡμῶν ἐκάστῳ κτήνῃ συγγεγέννηκε, τῆς
ψυχῆς ὡσπερ ἀπὸ μιᾶς ῥίζης ἔρρη διττὰ ἀναβλαστούσης, ὧν τὸ μὲν ἄτμητον ὅλον δι' ὅλων
ἔαθ' ἐπεφημίσθη νοῦς, τὸ δ' ἑξαχῆ σχισθὲν εἰς
ἐπτὰ φύσεις πέντε τῶν αἰσθήσεων καὶ δυεῖν ἄλλων 31 ὀργάνων, φωνητηρίου τε καὶ γονίμου. αὕτη δὲ πᾶσα ἡ πληθὺς ἄλογος οὔσα κτήνεσιν ἀπεικάζεται, πληθύει δὲ νόμῳ φύσεως ἡγεμόνος ἐξ ἀνάγκης δεῖ.<sup>1</sup>
[305] ἐπειδὴν μὲν οὖν ἄπειρος ἀρχῆς ἅμα καὶ | πλούσιος
ἐξαναστὰς ἄρχοντα ἑαυτὸν ἀποφήνη, μυρίων αἴτιος 32 κακῶν γίνεται τοῖς θρέμμασιν· αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ
ἄφθονα παρέχει τὰ ἐπιτήδεια, τὰ δὲ ἀμέτρως ἐμφορούμενα ὑπὸ πλεοναζούσης τροφῆς ἐξυβρίζει
—κόρου γὰρ ὕβρις ἔγγονον γνήσιον—, ἐξυβρίζοντα

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀεί et alia.

* Cf. De Op. 117 and note.

ON HUSBANDRY, 27-32

identity, so shall we find it to be with "shepherd" and "cattle-rearer." For the lawgiver speaks in some places of "cattle-rearing," in others of "shepherding," and people who have not acquired real 28 accuracy will perhaps suppose that these are synonymous descriptions of the same pursuit, whereas they denote different things when words are rendered in the light of their deeper meaning. For though it is 29 customary to apply to those who have charge of animals both names, calling them "cattle-rearers" and "shepherds" indiscriminately, yet we may not do so when we are speaking of the reasoning faculty to which the flock of the soul has been entrusted: for this ruler of a flock is called a "cattle-rearer" when he is a bad ruler, but, when a good and sterling one, he receives the name of "shepherd." How this is, we will at once shew. VII. Nature has produced 30 each one of us with "cattle" as part of our being. The living soul puts forth, as it were, from one root two shoots, one of which has been left whole and undivided and is called "Mind," while the other by a sixfold division is made into seven growths, five those of the senses and (two) of two other organs, that of utterance and that of generation.<sup>a</sup> All this 31 herd being irrational is compared to cattle, and by nature's law a herd cannot do without a governor. Now when a man at once without experience in ruling and possessed of wealth rises up and constitutes himself a ruler, he becomes the author of a multitude of evils to his charges. For he on his 32 part supplies provender lavishly, and the animals gorging themselves beyond measure wax wanton from abundance of food, wantonness being the true offspring of excess, and in their wantonness they

PHILO

μέντοι σκιρτᾶ καὶ ἀφηνιάζει καὶ κατὰ μέρος
 σκιδνάμενα διαλύει τὸ τῆς ἀγέλης συντεταγμένον 33 στίφος. ὁ δὲ τέως ἡγεμὼν καταλειφθεὶς ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχομένων ιδιώτης ἀνεφάνη, καὶ ἐπιτρέχει μὲν σπουδάζων, εἴ τι δύναιτο συλλαβεῖν ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς
 καὶ ὑπαγαγέσθαι· ὅταν δὲ ἀδυνατῇ, στένει καὶ
 κλαίει τὴν ἰδίαν κακίζων εὐχέριαν καὶ ἑαυτὸν τῶν 34 συμβεβηκότων αἰτιώμενος. τοῦτον δὴ τὸν τρό-πον καὶ τὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων θρέμματα, ἐπειδὴν ὁ νοῦς ὑπτίως καὶ ραθύμως ἔχη, τῆς τῶν αἰσθητῶν
 ἀπλήστως ἐμφορούμενα ἀφθονίας ἀπαυχενίζει τε
 καὶ σκιρτᾶ καὶ πλημμελῶς ὄπη τύχοι φέρεται, καὶ
 ὀφθαλμοὶ πρὸς πάντα ἀναπεπταμένοι τὰ ὄρατά,
 καὶ ἂ μὴ θέμις ὄραν, ἐξώκειλαν, καὶ ἀκοαὶ πάσας
 φωνὰς παραδεχόμεναι καὶ μηδέποτε πληρούμεναι, διψῶσαι δὲ αἰεὶ περιεργίας καὶ φιλοπραγμοσύνης,
 ἔστι δὲ ὅπου καὶ ἀνελευθέρου χλεύης ἐκπεφοιτή-35 κασιν. VIII. ἐπεὶ πόθεν ἄλλοθεν τὰ πανταχοῦ τῆς οἰκουμένης θέατρα νομίζομεν ἀμυθήτων μυ-ριάδων ἀνὰ πᾶσαν ἡμέραν πληροῦσθαι; οἱ γὰρ
 ἀκουσμάτων καὶ θεαμάτων ἤττους καὶ ὦτα καὶ
 ὀφθαλμοὺς χωρὶς ἡνιῶν ἐάσαντες φέρεσθαι καὶ κιθαριστὰς καὶ κιθαρῳδοὺς καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν κεκλασμένην καὶ ἀνανδρον μουσικὴν περιέποντες, ἔτι δὲ
 ὄρχηστὰς καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους μίμους ἀποδεχόμενοι, ὅτι
 σχέσεις καὶ κινήσεις ἐκτεθλυμμένας ἴσχονται καὶ κινοῦνται, τὸν ἐπὶ σκηνῆς αἰεὶ πόλεμον συγκρο-τοῦσι μήτε τῆς τῶν ἰδίων μήτε τῆς τῶν κοινῶν

---

* Or "actively promoting the warfare of the stage," i.e.
 encouraging by their partisanship the rivalries and intrigues
 of the actors. Mangey "factiones theatricas instaurant."

ON HUSBANDRY, 32-35

become frolicsome and refuse to be controlled, and getting separated in scattered groups they break up the compact array of the flock. The erstwhile 33 ruler, forsaken by his subjects, is shewn to be a raw hand, and runs after them anxious if possible to get hold of some animal and bring it under control again. Finding that he cannot do this, he weeps and groans, cursing his own rashness, and blaming himself for what has happened. Precisely in this way does that 34 other herd, our senses, act; whenever the mind gets lazy and careless, they gorge themselves insatiably with the lavish food brought in by the objects of sense, shake off restraint, and get unruly, going at random where they have no business to go. The eyes wide open to all things visible, even those which it is not right to look upon, meet with disaster. The ears welcome all sounds and are never satisfied; they are athirst all the time for particulars about other people's business, in some cases for topics for vulgar jesting, and go far and wide on these errands. VIII. From 35 what other quarter can we suppose that the theatres all over the world are filled every day with countless myriads? Those whom spectacles and musical performances have made their slaves, allowing ears and eyes to wander about unbridled; taken up with flute-players and harpers and the whole range of unmanly and effeminate music; delighting in dancers and other actors, because they put themselves into indelicate positions and make indelicate movements; ever organizing a warfare as mimic as that on the stage <sup>a</sup> without a thought for their own betterment or

Philo frequently uses συγκροτέω with πόλεμον in the sense of "organize" or "wage"; otherwise it might be taken as = "applaud."

PHILO

- ἐπανορθώσεως πεφροντικότες, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἑαυτῶν οἱ
 δυστυχεῖς διὰ τε ὀφθαλμῶν καὶ ὠτων ἀνατρέποντες 36 βίον. ἄλλοι δὲ εἰσιν οἱ τούτων ἀθλιώτεροι καὶ
 κακοδαιμονέστεροι, οἱ τὴν γεῦσιν ὥσπερ ἐκ δεσμῶν
 ἔλυσαν· ἡ δὲ πρὸς πᾶσαν σιτίων τε καὶ ποτῶν <ἀπόλαυσιν> ἄφετος εὐθύς ὀρμήσασα τά τε ἤδη εὐτρεπισθέντα ἐπιλέγεται καὶ πείναν ἀληκτον καὶ
 ἄπληστον ἴσχει τῶν ἀπόντων, ὡς, κἂν αἱ τῆς
 γαστρὸς ἀποπληρωθῶσι δεξαμεναί, σπαργῶσαν ἔτι καὶ μαιμῶσαν τὴν αἰεὶ κενὴν ἐπιθυμίαν περιβλέπεσθαι καὶ περιφοιτᾶν, μή τί που παροραθὲν
 λείψανον ἀφεῖται, ἵνα καὶ τοῦτο παμφάγου πυρὸς 37 δίκην ἐπιλιχμήσῃται. γαστριμαργία τοίνυν ἡ ὀπα-δὸς ἐκ φύσεως ἀκολουθεῖ συνουσίας ἡδονῆς μανίαν
 ἔκτοπον καὶ οἶστρον ἀνεπίσχετον καὶ λύτταν
 ἀργαλεωτάτην ἐπιφέρουσα· ὅταν γὰρ ὑπὸ ὀψο-
 [306] φαγίας καὶ ἀκράτου καὶ πολλῆς | μέθης ἄνθρωποι
 πιεσθῶσιν, οὐκέτι κρατεῖν ἑαυτῶν δύνανται, πρὸς
 δὲ τὰς ἐρωτικὰς μίξεις ἐπειγόμενοι κωμάζουσι καὶ θυραυλοῦσι, μέχρις ἂν τὸν πολὺν τοῦ πάθους ἀπ-38 οχετευσάμενοι βρασμὸν ἡρεμῆσαι δυνηθῶσιν. οὐ
 χάριν καὶ ἡ φύσις ὡς ἔοικεν ὑπογάστρια τὰ συνουσίας ὄργανα ἐδημιούργησε, προλαβοῦσα ὅτι
 λιμῶ μὲν οὐ χαίρει, πλησμονῇ δὲ ἔπεται καὶ πρὸς τὰς ἰδίας ἐνεργείας ὑπανίσταται.
- 39 IX. Τοὺς οὖν τοῖς θρέμμασι τούτοις ἐπιτρέποντας ἀθρόων ὦν ὀρέγονται πάντων ἐμφορεῖσθαι κτηνοτρόφους λεκτέον, ποιμένας δ' ἔμπαλιν ὅσοι τά τε ἀναγκαῖα καὶ αὐτὰ μόνα τὰ ἐπιτήδεια παρἔχουσι περιτεμνόμενοι καὶ ἀποκόπτοντες τὴν περιτ-

ON HUSBANDRY, 35-39

for that of the commonweal, but overthrowing (the poor wretches!), by means of eyes and ears their own life itself. Others there are more miserable 36 and ill-starred than these, who have let loose their appetite like an animal which had been tied up. Thus left at large it at once makes for all kinds of enjoyment of eatables and drinkables, takes its pick of what has already been served up, and develops a ceaseless and insatiable craving for what is not on the table. So, even if the receptacles of the belly have been completely filled, taste still empty and still swelling and panting goes about looking everywhere to see whether haply there are any leavings that have been overlooked and let pass, that like an all-devouring fire it may pick up this as well. Glut- 37 tony is naturally followed by her attendant, sexual indulgence, bringing on extraordinary madness, fierce desire and most grievous frenzy. For when men have been loaded up with overeating and strong drink and heavy intoxication, they are no longer able to control themselves, but in haste to indulge their lusts they carry on their revels and beset doors until they have drained off the great vehemence of their passion and find it possible to be still. This is 38 apparently the reason why Nature placed the organs of sexual lust where she did, assuming that they do not like hunger, but are roused to their special activities when fulness of food leads the way.

IX. So we must give the name of cattle-rearers to 39 those who permit these creatures to gorge themselves wholesale with all that they crave after. The title of shepherds we must give on the other hand to such as supply them with the necessaries of life only and nothing more, pruning and cutting off all excessive

PHILO

- τὴν καὶ ἀλυσιτελῆ πᾶσαν ἀφθονίαν, ἣτις ἀπορίας καὶ ἐνδείας οὐχ ἤκιστα βλάπτει, πρόνοιάν τε πολλὴν ἔχουσι τοῦ μὴ ἐξ ἀμελείας καὶ ῥαθυμίας νοσῆσαι τὴν ἀγέλην εὐχόμενοι μηδὲ τὰς ἕξωθεν
- 40 εἰωθυίας κατασκήπτειν νόσους ἐπιγενέσθαι. στοχάζονται δὲ οὐδὲν ἦττον καὶ τοῦ μὴ διασπασθεῖσαν αὐτὴν σποράδην διασκεδασθῆναι, φόβον ἐπανατεινόμενοι τὸν σωφρονιστὴν τῶν λόγῳ μηδέποτε πειθομένων καὶ κολάσει χρώμενοι συνεχεῖ, μετρία μὲν κατὰ τῶν ἰάσιμα νεωτεριζόντων, ἀφορήτῳ δὲ κατὰ τῶν ἀνίατα· τὸ γὰρ εἶναι δοκοῦν ἀπευκτὸν μέγιστον ἀγαθὸν ἀφραίνουσιν, ἢ κόλασις, ὥσπερ τοῖς
- 41 τὰ σώματα κάμνουσιν αἱ ἰατρικαὶ ὕλαι. X. ταῦτα τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα ποιμένων ἐστίν, οἳ τῶν σὺν ἡδονῇ βλαβερῶν τὰ μετὰ ἀηδίας προτιμῶσιν ὠφέλιμα. οὕτως γοῦν σεμνὸν καὶ λυσιτελὲς νενόμισται τὸ ποιμαίνειν, ὥστε τὸ μὲν ποιητικὸν γένος τοὺς βασιλέας ποιμένας λαῶν εἴθε καλεῖν, ὁ δὲ νομοθέτης τοὺς σοφοὺς, οἳ μόνοι πρὸς ἀλήθειαν βασιλεῖς εἰσιν· ἄρχοντας γὰρ αὐτοὺς ὡς ἂν ποιμνῆς εἰσάγει τῆς ἀνθρώπων ἀπάντων ἀλόγου φορᾶς.
- 42 Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ τῷ τελειωθέντι ἐξ ἀσκήσεως Ἰακώβ τὴν ποιμενικὴν ἐπιστήμην περιῆψε· ποιμαίνει γὰρ οὗτος τὰ πρόβατα Λάβαν, τῆς τοῦ ἄφρονος ψυχῆς τὰ αἰσθητὰ μόνα καὶ φαινόμενα νομιζούσης ἀγαθὰ, χρώμασι καὶ σκιαῖς ἠπατημένης καὶ δεδουλωμένης· λευκασμὸς γὰρ ἐρμηνεύε-
- 43 ται Λάβαν. καὶ Μωυσεῖ τῷ πανσόφῳ τὴν αὐτὴν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

ON HUSBANDRY, 39-43

and hurtful luxuriance, a thing which does no less harm than straitness and dearth. "Shepherds" too are those who exercise much forethought that the flock may not contract disease as the result of negligence and laziness, praying too that there may be no occurrence of such plagues as are wont to come as a visitation which cannot be guarded against. No less 40 do they make it their aim that the flock may not be broken up and scattered about. Fear is the corrector of those who never obey reason. This they hold over them, and have recourse to constant punishment, a mild form in the case of those whose rebellion is capable of being cured, but very severe in the case of those whose wrongdoings defy curative treatment. For that which is apparently much to be deprecated is a very great boon to people who act senselessly, just as physic is to people in bad bodily health. X. These are the practices and ways of shepherds, 41 who prefer what is distasteful but beneficial to what is pleasant but hurtful. So full of dignity and benefit has the shepherd's task been held to be, that poets are wont to give to kings the title of "shepherds of peoples," a title which the lawgiver bestows on the wise. They are the only real kings,<sup>a</sup> and he shews them to us ruling, as a shepherd does his flock, over the irrational tendency common to all mankind.

This is why he ascribed to Jacob, who was perfected 42 as the result of discipline, the shepherd's lore. For Jacob tends the sheep of Laban (Gen. xxx. 36), that is to say, of the soul of the foolish one which considers nothing good but sensible objects that meet the eye, and which is deceived and enslaved by colours and shadows; for the meaning of "Laban" is "whitening." He ascribes the same profession to Moses, the 43

PHILO

τέχνην ἀνατίθῃσι· καὶ γὰρ οὗτος ποιμὴν ἀπο-δείκνυται διανοίας τῦφον πρὸ ἀληθείας ἀσπαζο-
 [307] μένης καὶ πρὸ τοῦ εἶναι τὸ δοκεῖν | ἀποδεχομένης·
 περισσὸς γὰρ Ἰοθὼρ ἐρμηνεύεται, περιττὸν δὲ καὶ ἐπεισηγμένον ἀπλανεῖ βίῳ πρὸς ἀπάτην τῦφος, ᾧ καὶ τὰ κατὰ πόλεις ἕτερα παρ' ἑτέροις, οὐ τὰ αὐτὰ
 δίκαια παρὰ πᾶσιν, ἔθος εἰσηγεῖσθαι τὰ κοινὰ τῆς
 φύσεως καὶ ἀκίνητα νόμιμα οὐδ' ὄναρ ἰδόντι·
 λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι “ Μωυσῆς ἦν ποιμαίνων τὰ προ-44 βата Ἰοθὼρ τοῦ ἱερέως Μαδιάμ.” ὁ δ' αὐτὸς οὗτος
 εὔχεται, μὴ ὡς ἀνεπιτρόπευτον ποιμῆνην τὸν ὄχλον
 καὶ λεῶν<sup>1</sup> ἅπαντα τῆς ψυχῆς ἀφεθῆναι, τυχεῖν δὲ ἀγαθοῦ ποιμένος ἐξάγοντος μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν ἀφροσύνης καὶ ἀδικίας καὶ πάσης κακίας δικτύων, εἰσάγοντος
 δὲ εἰς τὰ παιδείας καὶ τῆς ἄλλης ἀρετῆς δόγματα· “ ἐπισκεψάσθω ” γὰρ φησι “ κύριος ὁ θεὸς τῶν
 πνευμάτων καὶ πάσης σαρκὸς ἄνθρωπον ἐπὶ τῆς συναγωγῆς ταύτης.” εἶτα ὀλίγα προσειπὼν ἐπιφέρει· “ καὶ οὐκ ἔσται ἡ συναγωγή κυρίου ὡσεὶ 45 πρόβατα, οἷς οὐκ ἔστι ποιμῆν.” XI. ἀλλ' οὐκ ἄξιον εὔχεσθαι μὴ χωρὶς ἐπιστάτου καὶ ἡγεμόνος
 ἐαθῆναι τὸ συγγενὲς καὶ συμφυρὲς ἡμῶν ἐκάστω ποιμνιον, ὡς μὴ τῆς φαυλοτάτης τῶν κακο-πολιτειῶν ὀχλοκρατίας, ἣ παράκομμα τῆς ἀρίστης δημοκρατίας ἐστίν, ἀναπλησθέντες θορύβοις καὶ
 ταραχαῖς καὶ ἐμφυλίοις στάσεσιν αἰεὶ χρώμενοι 46 διατελωμέν; οὐ μὴν ἀναρχία μόνον ὀχλοκρατίαν
 τίκτουσα δεινόν, ἀλλ' ἡ καὶ παρανόμου καὶ βιαίου

<sup>1</sup> MSS. κλαίων et alia.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

ON HUSBANDRY, 43-46

all-wise ; for he also is appointed shepherd of a mind that welcomes conceit in preference to truth, and approves seeming in preference to being. For "Jethro" or "Iothor" means "uneven,"<sup>a</sup> and self-conceit is an uneven and adventitious thing that comes in to beguile a fixed and steady life. It is a quality whose way is to introduce principles of right varying city by city ; of one kind in this city, of another kind in that ; not the same rule of right in all. The ordinances of nature that apply to all alike and are immovable it has never seen even in a dream. What we are told is that "Moses was shepherding the sheep of Jethro the priest of Midian" (Exod. iii. 1). This same Moses prays that the whole multi- 44 tude of the soul-folk may not be left as an untended flock, but may be given a good shepherd, leading them forth away from the snares of folly and injustice and all wickedness, and leading them in to imbibe all that discipline and virtue in its other forms would teach them. For he says, "Let the Lord, the God of the spirits and of all flesh, appoint a man over this congregation ;" then, after adding a few words, he continues, "And the congregation of the Lord shall not be as sheep that have no shepherd" (Numb. xxvii. 16 f.). XI. Is it not well to pray that the flock linked 45 to each one of us by a common birth and a common growth may not be left without a ruler and guide ? So might mob-rule, the very worst of bad constitutions, the counterfeit of democracy, which is the best of them, infect us, while we spend our days in ceaseless experience of disorders, tumults and intestine broils. Anarchy, however, the mother of mob-rule, is not our 46 only danger. We have to dread also the uprising of some aspirant to sovereign power, forcibly setting law

PHILO

- τινὸς ἐφ' ἡγεμονίαν ἐπανάστασις· τύραννος γὰρ ἐκ φύσεως ἐχθρὸς, πόλεων μὲν ἄνθρωπος, σώματος δὲ καὶ ψυχῆς καὶ τῶν καθ' ἐκάτερον πραγμάτων ὁ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν ἐπιτετειχικῶς ἐκάστω θηριωδέ-
- 47 στατος νοῦς. ἀλυσιτελεῖς δὲ οὐχ αὐταὶ μόνον αἱ δεσποτεῖαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν λίαν ἐπιεικῶν ἀρχαί τε καὶ προστασίαι· χρηστότης γὰρ πρᾶγμα εὐκαταφρόνητον καὶ ἐκατέρους, ἄρχουσί τε καὶ ὑπηκόους, βλαβερόν, τοῖς μὲν ἐκ τῆς τῶν ὑποτεταγμένων εἰς αὐτοὺς ὀλιγωρίας μηδὲν μῆτε ἴδιον μῆτε κοινὸν ἐπανορθώσασθαι δυναμένοις. ἔστι δ' ὅτε καὶ τὰς ἡγεμονίας ἀναγκαζομένοις ἀποτίθεσθαι, τοῖς δὲ ἐκ συνεχοῦς τῆς πρὸς τοὺς ἄρχοντας ὀλιγωρίας πειθοῦς ἡμεληκόσι καὶ ἀδεῶς<sup>1</sup> ἐπὶ μεγάλου κακοῦ κτήσει
- 48 περιποιησαμένοις αὐθάδειαν. τούτους μὲν <οὖν> θρεμμάτων, ἐκείνους δὲ κτηνοτρόφων οὐδὲν νομιστέον διαφέρειν· οἱ μὲν γὰρ τρυφᾶν ἐν ἀφθόνοις ὕλαις ἀναπειθουσιν, οἱ δὲ τὸν κόρον ἀδυνατοῦντες φέρειν ἐξυβρίζουσι. χρῆ δὲ ὥσπερ αἰπόλον ἢ βουκόλον ἢ ποιμένα ἢ κοινῶς νομέα τὸν ἡμέτερον
- [308] ἄρχειν νοῦν τὸ | συμφέρον πρὸ τοῦ ἡδέος ἑαυτῷ τε καὶ τοῖς θρέμμασιν αἰρούμενον.
- 49 XII. Ἡ δὲ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐπίσκεψις πρῶτον σχεδὸν καὶ μόνον αἷτιον τοῦ τὰ μέρη τῆς ψυχῆς μὴ ἀνεπιτρόπευτα ἀφεθῆναι, τυχεῖν δὲ ἀνυπαίτιου καὶ πάντα ἀγαθοῦ ποιμένος· οὐ κατασταθέντος ἀμή-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. καταδεῆς ἢ κατὰ δέος.

at naught. For a tyrant is a natural enemy. In cities this enemy is man ; to body and soul and all the interests of each of these, it is an utterly savage mind, that has turned our inner citadel into a fortress from which to assail us. Nor is it only from these 47 tyrannies that we derive no benefit. We gain nothing from the rule and governance of men who are too good and gentle. For kindness is a quality open to contempt, and injurious to both sides, both rulers and subjects. The former, owing to the slight esteem in which they are held by those placed under their authority, are powerless to set right anything that is wrong either with individual citizens or with the commonwealth. In some instances they are actually compelled to abdicate. Their subjects, as the result of habitual contempt for their rulers, have come to disregard their moral suasion, and undeterred by fear, have, at the cost of incurring a great evil, made the acquisition of stubbornness. These, therefore, we 48 must regard as differing in no respect from cattle, nor their rulers from cattle-rearers. The latter induce them to luxuriate in abundance of material comforts ; the former, powerless to bear the overfeeding, wax wanton. But our mind ought to rule as a goat-herd, or a cow-herd, or a shepherd, or, to use a general term, as a herdsman, as one who chooses both for himself and the creatures he tends what is advantageous in preference to what is agreeable.

XII. That which brings it about that the different 49 parts of the soul are not left to drift with no one to watch over them, is, we may say, mainly, nay solely, God's care and oversight. It secures for the soul the benefit of a blameless and perfectly good shepherd. When He has been set over it there is no possibility χανον τὴν σύνοδον τῆς διανοίας γενέσθαι σποράδα. ὑπὸ γὰρ μίαν καὶ τὴν αὐτὴν σύνταξιν ἐξ ἀνάγκης φανείται πρὸς τὴν ἐνὸς ἐπιστάσιαν ἀφορῶσα, ἐπεὶ τό γε πολλαῖς ὑπακούειν ἀρχαῖς ἀναγκάζεσθαι βαρύτερον ἄχθος.

PHILO

- 50 Οὕτως μέντοι τὸ ποιμαίνειν ἐστὶν ἀγαθόν, ὥστε οὐ βασιλευσι μόνον καὶ σοφοῖς ἀνδράσι καὶ ψυχαῖς τέλεια κεκαθαρμέναις ἀλλὰ καὶ θεῶ τῷ πανηγεμόνι δικαίως ἀνατίθεται. τούτου δὲ ἐγγυητῆς οὐχ ὁ τυχὼν ἀλλὰ προφήτης ἐστίν, ᾧ καλὸν πιστεύειν, ὁ τὰς ὑμνωδίας ἀναγράφας· λέγει γὰρ ὧδε· “ κύριος
- 51 ποιμαίνει με, καὶ οὐδέν με ὑστερήσει.” τοῦτο μέντοι τὸ ἄσμα παντὶ φιλοθέῳ μελετῶν ἐμπρεπές, τῷ δὲ δὴ κόσμῳ καὶ διαφερόντως· καθάπερ γὰρ τινα ποίμνην γῆν καὶ ὕδωρ καὶ ἀέρα καὶ πῦρ καὶ ὅσα ἐν τούτοις φυτὰ τε αὐ καὶ ζῶα, τὰ μὲν θνητὰ τὰ δὲ θεῖα, ἔτι δὲ οὐρανοῦ φύσιν καὶ ἡλίου καὶ σελήνης περιόδους καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀστέρων τροπὰς τε αὐ καὶ χορείας ἐναρμονίους ὁ ποιμὴν καὶ βασιλεὺς θεὸς ἄγει κατὰ δίκην καὶ νόμον, προσησάμενος τὸν ὀρθὸν αὐτοῦ λόγον καὶ πρωτόγονον υἱόν, ὃς τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν τῆς ἱερᾶς ταύτης ἀγέλης οἶά τις μεγάλου βασιλέως ὑπαρχος διαδέξεται· καὶ γὰρ εἴρηταί που· “ Ἴδου ἐγὼ εἶμι, ἀποστέλλω ἄγγελόν μου εἰς πρόσωπόν σου τοῦ φυλάξαι σε ἐν τῇ
- 52 ὀδῷ.” λεγέτω τοίνυν καὶ ὁ κόσμος ἅπας, ἡ μεγίστη καὶ τελεωτάτη τοῦ ὄντος θεοῦ ποίμνη· “ κύριος ποιμαίνει με, καὶ οὐδέν με ὑστερήσει.”
- 53 λεγέτω καὶ ἕκαστος τῶν ἐν μέρει τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο μὴ τῇ διὰ γλώττης καὶ στόματος ρεοῦση φωνῇ πρὸς βραχεῖαν ἀέρος ἐξικνουμένη μοῖραν, ἀλλὰ τῇ τῆς διανοίας εὐρνομένη καὶ τῶν τοῦ παντός

ON HUSBANDRY, 49-53

of the union of the mind's parts being dissolved. For, having been brought under one and the same direction, it will evidently have to look only to the guidance of a single chief. For to be compelled to give heed to many authorities is a very heavy burden.

Indeed, so good a thing is shepherding that it is 50 justly ascribed not to kings only and wise men and perfectly cleansed souls but also to God the All-Sovereign. The authority for this ascription is not any ordinary one but a prophet, whom we do well to trust. This is the way in which the Psalmist speaks : " The Lord shepherds me and nothing shall be lacking to me " (Ps. xxiii. 1). It well befits every lover of 51 God to rehearse this Psalm. But for the Universe it is a still more fitting theme. For land and water and air and fire, and all plants and animals which are in these, whether mortal or divine, yea and the sky, and the circuits of sun and moon, and the revolutions and rhythmic movements of the other heavenly bodies, are like some flock under the hand of God its King and Shepherd. This hallowed flock He leads in accordance with right and law, setting over it His true Word and Firstborn Son Who shall take upon Him its government like some viceroy of a great king ; for it is said in a certain place : " Behold I AM, I send My Angel before thy face to guard thee in the way " (Exod. xxiii. 20). Let therefore even the whole 52 universe, that greatest and most perfect flock of the God who IS, say, " The Lord shepherds me, and nothing shall fail me." Let each individual person 53 too utter this same cry, not with the voice that glides forth over tongue and lips, not reaching beyond a short space of air, but with the voice of the understanding that has wide scope and lays hold on the

PHILO

- [309] ἀπτομένη περάτων· | ἀμήχανον γὰρ τῶν ἐπι-
 βαλλόντων ἔνδειαν εἶναί τινος ἐπιστατοῦντος θεοῦ
 πλήρη καὶ τέλεια τὰγαθὰ τοῖς οὖσιν ἅπασιν 54 εἰωθότος χαρίζεσθαι. XIII. παγκάλῃ δὲ εἰς ὁσιότητα παραίνεσις ἢ διὰ τοῦ λεχθέντος ἄσματος· τῷ
 γὰρ ὄντι ὁ μὲν πάντα τὰ ἄλλα δοκῶν ἔχειν, τῇ δὲ
 ἐνὸς προστασίᾳ δυσχεραίνων, ἀτελής καὶ πένης·
 ἥτις δὲ ὑπὸ θεοῦ ποιμαίνεται ψυχὴ τὸ ἐν καὶ μόνον
 ἔχουσα, οὐ τὰ πάντα ἐκκρέμαται, ἀπροσδεῆς εἰκότως ἐστὶν ἄλλων, οὐ τυφλὸν πλοῦτον, βλέποντα δὲ καὶ σφόδρα ὀξυδορκοῦντα θαυμάζουσα.
- 55 Τούτου πάντες οἱ μαθηταὶ εἰς σύντονον καὶ δυσαπάλλακτον ἔρωτα ἦλθον, διὸ κτηνοτροφίαν γελάσαντες ἐξεπόνησαν ποιμενικὴν ἐπιστήμην.
- 56 τεκμήριον δέ· ὁ τὴν περὶ σῶμα καὶ τὰς κενὰς
 δόξας ὑπόθεσιν αἰεὶ μελετῶν Ἰωσήφ, ἄρχειν μὲν
 καὶ ἐπιστατεῖν ἀλόγου φύσεως οὐκ ἐπιστάμενος—πρεσβύταις γὰρ ἔθος ἐπὶ τὰς ἀνυπευθύνους<sup>1</sup> ἀρχὰς καλεῖσθαι, νέος δὲ ἐστὶν οὗτος αἰεὶ, κἂν τὸ χρόνου
 μήκει γῆρας ἐπιγινόμενον ἐνέγκηται—, τρέφειν
 δὲ εἰωθὼς καὶ συναυξέειν ὑπολαμβάνει καὶ τοὺς
 φιλαρέτους πείσαι δυνήσεσθαι μεταβάλλειν ὡς
 αὐτόν, ἵνα τῶν ἀλόγων καὶ ἀψύχων περιεχόμενοι
 μηκέτ' ἐνευκαιρεῖν δύνωνται τοῖς λογικῆς ψυχῆς
- 57 ἐπιτηδεύμασι· φησὶ γάρ· ἂν ὁ βασιλεὺς νοῦς τῆς
 σωματικῆς χώρας πυνθάνηται, τί τὸ ἔργον ὑμῶν, ἀποκρίνεσθε· ἄνδρες κτηνοτρόφοι ἐσμέν. τοῦτο

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀνυπαιτίους.

ON HUSBANDRY, 53-57

ends of the universe. For it cannot be that there should be any lack of a fitting portion, when God rules, whose wont it is to bestow good in fullness and perfection on all that is.. XIII. Magnificent is the 54 call to holiness sounded by the psalm just quoted ; for the man is poor and incomplete in very deed, who, while seeming to have all things else, chafes at the sovereignty of One ; whereas the soul that is shepherded of God, having the one and only thing on which all depend, is naturally exempt from want of other things, for it worships no blind wealth, but a wealth that sees and that with vision surpassingly keen.

An intense and unquenchable love for this wealth 55 was entertained by all who belonged to its school, and this made them laugh cattle-rearing to scorn and spend labour on the lore of shepherding. The history of Joseph affords proof of this. Joseph, always having 56 as the object of his thought and aim the rule of life based on the body and on the surmises of vain imagination, does not know how to govern and direct irrational natures. To offices such as this which are subject to no higher control older men are generally called ; but he is always a young man, even if he have attained the old age that comes on us by mere lapse of time. Being accustomed to feed and fatten irrational natures instead of ruling them, he imagines that he will be able to win the lovers of virtue also to change over to his side in order that, devoting themselves to irrational and soulless creatures, they may no longer be able to find time for the pursuits of a rational soul. For he says, " If that Mind, whose realm is the body, 57 inquire what your work is, tell him in reply, We are cattle-rearers " (Gen. xlvi. 33 f.). On hearing this ἀκούσαντες κατὰ τὸ εἰκὸς δυσχεραίνουσι, εἰ

PHILO

 ἡγεμόνες ὄντες ὑπηκόων τάξιν ἔχειν ὁμολογή-58 σουσι· οἱ μὲν γὰρ τροφὰς ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι διὰ τῆς
 τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀφθονίας εὐτρεπιζόμενοι δούλοι
 γίνονται τῶν τρεφομένων καθάπερ δεσποίναις
 οἰκέται φόρον τελούντες καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν
 ἀναγκαῖον, ἄρχοντες δὲ οἱ τούτων ἐπιστατοῦντες 59 ἐπιστομίζοντες. τὸ μὲν οὖν πρῶτον καίτοι τοῦ λεχθέντος οὐ καθ' ἡδονὴν ἀκούσαντες ἐχεμυθήσουσι
 περιττὸν ἡγούμενοι τὸ μὴ μαθησομένοις διαφορὰν κτηνοτροφίας καὶ ποιμενικῆς ὑφηγεῖσθαι, αὐθις δὲ
 ὅταν ὁ περὶ τούτων ἀγὼν ἐνστή, διαγωνιοῦνται
 πάσῃ δυνάμει καί, πρὶν ἀνὰ κράτος εἰλεῖν, οὐκ ἀνήσουσι τὸ τῆς φύσεως ἐλεύθερόν τε καὶ εὐγενές καὶ ἡγεμονικὸν τῷ ὄντι ἐπιδειξάμενοι· πυνθανομένου γοῦν τοῦ βασιλέως “ τί τὸ ἔργον ὑμῶν; ”
 ἀποκρίνονται· “ ποιμένες ἐσμέν, καὶ οἱ πατέρες 60 ἡμῶν.” XIV. εἶτ' οὐκ ἂν δόξαιεν ἐπὶ ποιμενικῇ τοσοῦτον αὐχεῖν, ὅσον οὐδὲ ἐπὶ τῷ τοσοῦτῳ κράτει
 τῆς ἀρχῆς ὁ προσομιλῶν αὐτοῖς βασιλεύς; οἷ γε
 οὐχ αὐτοῖς μόνοις τὴν προαίρεσιν τοῦ βίου τούτου 61 μαρτυροῦσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς πατράσιν αὐτῶν, ὡς
 [310] σπουδῆς καὶ ἐπιμελείας ἀπάσης | ἀξίου· καίτοι γε, εἰ μὲν ἦν περὶ αἰγῶν ἢ προβάτων ἐπιμελείας ὁ
 λόγος, κἂν ἴσως ἠδέσθησαν ὁμολογεῖν ἀτιμίαν
 φυγόντες· ἄδοξα γὰρ καὶ ταπεινὰ τὰ τοιαῦτα παρὰ
 τοῖς ὄγκον μὲν εὐτυχίας τὸν ἄνευ φρονήσεως περιβεβλημένοι καὶ μάλιστα βασιλεῦσι νενόμισται·

ON HUSBANDRY, 57-61

they are vexed, as we might expect, that, being rulers, they are to admit that they occupy the position of subjects ; for those, who prepare food for the senses 58 by means of the lavish abundance of sensible objects, become slaves of those whom they feed, compelled day by day, like household servants to mistresses, to render the appointed due ; whereas the place of rulers is held by those who exercise authority over the senses, and check their excessive impulse to greed. At first his brethren, though far from pleased at 59 hearing what was said to them, will hold their peace, deeming it superfluous trouble to set forth to those who will not learn the difference between cattle-feeding and shepherding ; but afterwards when the contest regarding these matters is upon them, they will engage in it with all their might, and, until they have carried the day, they will never relax their efforts to make manifest the free and noble and truly princely character that pertains to their nature. When the king asks them " What is your work ? " they answer " We are shepherds, as were our fathers " (Gen. xlvii. 3). XIV. Aye indeed ! Does it not seem 60 as though they were more proud of being shepherds than is the king, who is talking to them, of all his sovereign power ? They proclaim that not they only but their fathers also deliberately chose this course of life as worthy of entire and enthusiastic devotion. And yet, if the care of literal goats or sheep was what 61 was meant, they would perhaps, in their shrinking from disgrace, have been actually ashamed to own what they were ; for such pursuits are held mean and inglorious in the eyes of those who have compassed that importance, wholly devoid of wisdom, that comes with prosperity, and most of all in the eyes of mon-

PHILO

- 62 τὸ δὲ Αἰγυπτιακὸν ἐκ φύσεως καὶ διαφερόντως
 ἐστὶν ὑπέραυχον, ὅποτε μικρά τις αὐτὸ μόνον αὔρα καταπνεύσειεν εὐπραγίας, ὡς χλεύην καὶ πλατὺν
 γέλωτα ἡγεῖσθαι τὰς τῶν δημοτικωτέρων ἀνθρώπων
- 63 περὶ βίον σπουδᾶς τε καὶ φιλοτιμίας. ἐπειδὴ δὲ
 περὶ τῶν ἐν ψυχῇ δυνάμεων λογικῶν τε αὖ καὶ
 ἀλόγων πρόκειται σκοπεῖν, εἰκότως αὐχῆσουσιν οἱ
 πεπεισμένοι ὅτι δύνανται κρατεῖν τῶν ἀλόγων
- 64 συμμάχοις χρώμενοι ταῖς λογικαῖς. ἐὰν μέντοι τις
 βάσκανος καὶ φιλεγκλήμων αἰτιώμενος φάσκη·
 πῶς οὖν ποιμενικὴν τέχνην διαπονοῦντες καὶ τῆς
 συμφυοῦς ποιμνης ἐπιμέλειαν ἔχειν καὶ προστασίαν ἐπαγγελλόμενοι προσορμίσασθαι τῇ σώματος καὶ
 παθῶν χώρα διενσήθητε, Αἰγύπτω, ἀλλ' οὐχ
 ἐτέρωσε τὸν πλοῦν ἐποιήσασθε; μετὰ παρρησίας
 αὐτῷ λεκτέον, ὅτι “ παροικεῖν, οὐ κατοικεῖν
- 65 ἤλθομεν.” τῷ γὰρ ὄντι πᾶσα ψυχὴ σοφοῦ πατρίδα
 μὲν οὐρανόν, ξένην δὲ γῆν ἔλαχε, καὶ νομίζει τὸν
 μὲν σοφίας οἶκον ἴδιον, τὸν δὲ σώματος ὀθνείον,
- 66 ᾧ καὶ παρεπιδημεῖν οἶεται. οὐκοῦν ἐπειδὴν ὁ
 ἀγελάρχης νοῦς παραλαβὼν τὴν ψυχῆς ἀγέλην
 νόμῳ φύσεως διδασκάλῳ χρώμενος εὐτόνως ἀφ-ηγηῆται, δόκιμον αὐτὴν καὶ σφόδρα ἐπαινετὴν ἀπεργάζεται, ὅταν δὲ παρανομία ραθύμως καὶ ἀνειμένως
 προσφερόμενος, ψεκτὴν. εἰκότως τοίνυν ὁ μὲν βασιλέως ὄνομα ὑποδύσεται ποιμὴν προσαγο-ρευθεὶς, ὁ δ' ὄψαρτυτοῦ τινος ἢ σιτοπόνου κτηνο-

ON HUSBANDRY, 62-66

archs. The spirit of the Egyptians too is by nature 62 arrogant even beyond that of other men, whenever a feeble breath only of good fortune has blown over it, and this arrogance makes them treat the aims in life and the ambitions of more common people as matter for rude jesting and loud ridicule. But seeing 63 that the subject propounded for consideration is that of the rational and irrational faculties in the soul,
those will have ground for boasting who are convinced that they are able by employing the rational faculties
as their allies to get the better of those which are irrational. If, however, some malignant and con- 64 tentious person find fault with them and say, "How is it, then, that, devoting your labour to the science of shepherding, and professing to bestow the care of leaders on the flock that lives and grows with your life and growth, you conceived the idea of coming to anchor in Egypt, the land of the body and the passions, instead of voyaging to some different port?"
—we may confidently say to him "We came to sojourn (Gen. xlvii. 4)—not to settle there"; for in 65 reality a wise man's soul ever finds heaven to be his fatherland and earth a foreign country, and regards as his own the dwelling-place of wisdom, and that of the body as outlandish, and looks on himself as a stranger and sojourner in it. Accordingly when 66 Mind, the ruler of the flock, taking the flock of the soul in hand with the law of Nature as his instructor shews it the way with vigorous leadership, he renders it well worthy of praise and approval, even as he subjects it to blame if he disregard Nature's law and behave slackly and carelessly. With good reason, then, will the one take on him the name of king and
be hailed "shepherd," but the other that of a sort

PHILO

τρόφος ἐπιφημισθεῖς, εὐωχίαν καὶ θοίνην ἀδηφαγεῖν
θρέμμασιν εἰωθόσιν εὐτρεπιζόμενος.

- 67 XV. "Ὀν δὴ τρόπον γεωργὸς μὲν ἐργάτου γῆς,
ποιμὴν δὲ κτηνοτρόφου διενήνοχεν, οὐκ ἀμελῶς ἐπιδέδειχα. καὶ τρίτον δ' ἐστὶ συγγενεῖάν τινα ἔχον
πρὸς τὰ λεχθέντα, περὶ οὗ νῦν ἐροῦμεν· ἵππέα τε
γὰρ καὶ ἀναβάτην οὐ μόνον ἄνθρωπον ἐποχούμενον
ἐποχουμένου χρεμετιστικῶ ζῶω μακρῶ διαφέρειν 68 ἡγείται, ἀλλὰ καὶ λογισμὸν λογισμοῦ. ὁ μὲν τοῖνυν ἄνευ τέχνης ἵππικῆς ἐπιβεβηκῶς λέγεται
μὲν εἰκότως ἀναβάτης, ἐκδέδωκε δὲ ἑαυτὸν ἀλόγῳ
καὶ σκιρτητικῶ θρέμματι, ὡσθ' ὅπη ἂν ἐκείνο
[311] χωρῆ | κείσε πάντως ἀναγκαῖον φέρεσθαι καὶ μὴ
προϊδόμενον χάσμα γῆς ἢ βαθύν τινα βόθρον ὑπὸ
τῆς ἐν τῷ δρόμῳ ῥύμης κατακρημνισθῆναι [συν-69 ηνέχθη] καὶ συγκαταποθῆναι τὸν φερόμενον. ὁ
δ' ἵππεὺς πάλιν, ὅταν ἀνέρχεται μέλλη, χαλιὸν
ἐντίθῃσι κᾶπειτ' ἐφαλλόμενος τῆς περιουχενίου
χαίτης ἐνείληπται καὶ φέρεσθαι δοκῶν αὐτός, εἰ
δεῖ τάληθές εἰπεῖν, ἄγει τὸ κομίζον τρόπον κυβερνήτου· καὶ γὰρ ἐκείνος ἄγεσθαι δοκῶν ὑπὸ
νεὼς τῆς κυβερνωμένης ἄγει πρὸς ἀλήθειαν αὐτὴν 70 καὶ ἐφ' οὓς ἐπείγεται παραπέμπει λιμένας. ὅταν μὲν οὖν εὐηνίως προέρχεται, καταψήχει ὁ ἵππεὺς
ὡς ἂν ἐπαινῶν τὸν ἵππον, ὅταν δὲ σὺν πλείονι
ὀρμῇ πέραν ἐκφέρηται τοῦ μετρίου, μετὰ βίας εὐτόνως ἀναχαιτίζει, ὡς ὑπανεῖναι τοῦ τάχους·
ἐὰν δὲ ἀπειθῶν ἐπιμένῃ, λαβὼν τοῦ χαλινοῦ ὄλον
ἀντέσπασε καὶ ἀντιπεριήγαγεν αὐτοῦ τὸν αὐχένα,

<sup>a</sup> Or "mounted man."

<sup>b</sup> Or "the man mounted on him."

ON HUSBANDRY, 66-70

of cook or baker and be entitled "cattle-feeder," serving up rich fare as a feast for beasts who make a habit of gluttony.

XV. I have taken some pains to shew in what way 67
a husbandman differs from a worker on the soil, and a shepherd from a feeder of cattle. There is a third head akin to those that have been dealt with, and of it we will now speak. For the lawgiver holds that a horseman differs greatly from a rider, not only when each is a man seated on a neighing animal but when each is a process of reasoning. Well then, he who being without skill in horsemanship is on a horse's back is naturally called a rider.<sup>a</sup> He has given him- 68 self over to an irrational and capricious beast, the consequence being that, wherever the creature goes, thither he must of absolute necessity be carried, and that the animal, not having caught sight in time of an opening in the ground or of some deep trench, is hurled headlong owing to the violence of his pace, and his rider <sup>b</sup> is borne to destruction with him. The 69 horseman, on the other hand, when he is about to mount, puts the bit in the horse's mouth and then as he leaps on its back, seizes hold of its mane, and,
though seeming to be borne along, himself in actual fact leads, as a pilot does, the creature that is carrying
him. For the pilot also, while seeming to be led by the ship which he is steering, in reality leads it, and convoys it to the ports which he is anxious to reach.
When the horse goes ahead in obedience to the rein, 70
the horseman strokes him as though he were praising him, but when he gets too impetuous and exceeds the suitable pace, he uses force and pulls back his head strongly, so as to lessen his speed. If he goes on being refractory, he grips the bit and pulls his whole

PHILO

71 ὡς ἐξ ἀνάγκης στήναι· καὶ πρὸς σκιρτήσεις μὲν καὶ τοὺς συνεχεῖς ἀφηγιασμούς εἰσι μάστιγες καὶ μύωπες εὐτρεπεῖς καὶ τᾶλλ' ὅσα πωλοδάμναις ἵππων κατεσκευάσται κολαστήρια. καὶ θαυμαστὸν οὐδέν· ἀνιόντος γὰρ τοῦ ἱππέως καὶ ἱππικὴ τέχνη συνανέρχεται,<sup>1</sup> ὥστε δύο ὄντες καὶ ἐποχούμενοι καὶ ἐπιστήμονες εἰκότως ἑνὸς καὶ ὑποβεβλημένου καὶ ἀπαραδέκτου τέχνης ζώου περιέσσονται.

72 XVI. Μεταβάς τοίνυν ἀπὸ τῶν χρεμετιζόντων καὶ τῶν ἐποχουμένων αὐτοῖς τὴν σαυτοῦ ψυχὴν εἰ θέλεις ἐρεῦνησον· εὐρήσεις γὰρ ἐν τοῖς μέρεσιν αὐτῆς καὶ ἵππους καὶ ἡνίοχον καὶ ἀναβάτην, ὅσαπερ

73 καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἐκτός. ἵπποι μὲν οὖν ἐπιθυμία καὶ θυμὸς εἰσιν, ὁ μὲν ἄρρην, ἡ δὲ θήλεια. διὰ τοῦθ' ὁ μὲν γαυριῶν ἄφετος εἶναι βούλεται καὶ ἐλεύθερος καὶ ἔστιν ὑψαύχην ὡς ἂν ἄρρην, ἡ δ' ἀνελεύθερος καὶ δουλοπρεπῆς καὶ πανουργία χαιρουσα οἰκόσιτος, οἰκοφθόρος· θήλεια γάρ. ἀναβάτης δὲ καὶ ἡνίοχος εἰς ὁ νοῦς· ἀλλ' ἡνίκα μὲν μετὰ φρονήσεως ἄνεισιν, ἡνίοχος, ὁπότε δὲ μετ' ἀφροσύνης, ἀναβάτης.

74 ἄφρων μὲν οὖν ὑπὸ ἀμαθίας κρατεῖν ἀδυνατεῖ τῶν ἡνιῶν, αἱ δὲ τῶν χειρῶν ἀπορρνεῖσαι χαμαὶ πίπτουσι, τὰ δὲ ζῶα εὐθύς ἀφηνιάσαντα πλημ-

75 μελῆ καὶ ἄτακτον ποιεῖται τὸν δρόμον. ὁ δ' ἐπιβεβηκὼς οὐδενὸς ἐνελημμένος, ὑφ' οὗ στηριχθήσεται, πίπτει, περιδρυπτόμενος δὲ γόνυ καὶ χεῖρας καὶ πρόσωπα μεγάλα κλαίει τὴν ἰδίαν κακοπραγίαν ὁ δειλαιοσ, πολλάκις δὲ καὶ τὰς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. συνέρχεται.

<sup>a</sup> The figure is based on Phaedrus 246 ff. Cf. note to Leg. All. 70, Vol. I. p. 478.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. "eats you out of house and home." See App. p. 490.

ON HUSBANDRY, 70-75

neck round the other way, so that he is forced to stop. To counter rearings and constant unruliness there are 71 whips and spurs ready at hand and all the other contrivances with which breakers-in of colts are provided for punishing them. There is nothing to wonder at in all this, for when the horseman gets on the horse's back, skill in horsemanship gets up with him, so that there are really two, a seated man on the horse and an expert, and they will naturally get the better of a single animal who is not only underneath them but is incapable of acquiring skill.

XVI. Passing then from the neighing animals and 72 those that ride upon them, search, if you please, your own soul; for you will find among its constituent parts both horses and one who wields the reins and one who is mounted, all just as in the outside world. Desire and high spirit are horses, the one male, the 73 other female.<sup>a</sup> For this reason the one prances and wants to be free and at large and has a high neck, as you might expect of a male. The other is mean and slavish, up to sly tricks, keeps her nose in the manger and empties it in no time,<sup>b</sup> for she is a female. The Mind is alike mounted man and wielder of the reins; a wielder of the reins, when he mounts accompanied by good sense, a mere mounted man when folly is his companion. The foolish man, since he has never learnt, 74 cannot keep hold of the reins. They slip from his hand and drop on the ground; and straightway the animals are out of control, and their course becomes erratic and disorderly. The fool behind them does 75 not take hold of anything to steady him, but tumbles out barking knee and hands and face, and loudly bewails, poor miserable fellow, his own misfortune. Many a time his feet catch in the board, and he hangs

PHILO

- βάσεις πρὸς τὸν δίφρον ἐξημμένους ἀνατραπείς
 [312 ὑπτιος ἐπὶ νῶτα | ἀπηώρηται καὶ ἐν ἄρματοτροχιαῖς
 αὐταῖς κεφαλὴν τε καὶ αὐχένα καὶ ὦμους ἀμφοτέρους περιθραύεται κατασυρόμενος, εἴθ' ὧδε
 κἀκεῖσε φορούμενος καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν ποσὶ προσ-76 αραττόμενος οἰκτρότατον ὑπομένει θάνατον. τῷ
 μὲν δὴ τοιοῦτον ἀποβαίνει τὸ τέλος, τὸ δὲ ὄχημα ἀνακουφιζόμενον καὶ ἐξαλλόμενον μετὰ βίας, ὅταν
 ἐπὶ γῆν παλίσσυστον ἐνεχθῆ, ῥᾶστα κατάγνυται, ὡς μηκέτ' αὐθις ἀρμοσθῆναι καὶ παγῆναι δύνασθαι·
 τὰ δὲ ζῶα πάντων τῶν συνεχόντων ἀφειμένα
 παρακινεῖται καὶ οἰστρᾶ καὶ οὐ παύεται φερόμενα,
 πρὶν ὑποσκελισθέντα πεσεῖν ἢ κατὰ τινος ἐνεχθέντα
 77 κρημνοῦ βαθέος παραπολέσθαι. XVII. τοῦτον οὖν ἔοικε τὸν τρόπον αὐτοῖς ἐπιβάταις τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς
 ὄχημα σύμπαν διαφθειρεσθαι πλημμελήσαν τὴν ἡνιόχησιν. τοὺς δὴ τοιούτους ἵππους καὶ τοὺς ἐποχουμένους ἄνευ τέχνης αὐτοῖς λυσιτελὲς καθ-αιρεῖσθαι, ἵνα τὰ ἀρετῆς ἐγείρηται· πιπτούσης
 γὰρ ἀφροσύνης ἀνάγκη φρόνησιν ὑπανίστασθαι.
 78 Διὰ τοῦτ' ἐν προτρεπτικοῖς Μωυσῆς φησιν· “ἐὰν
 ἐξέλθης εἰς πόλεμον ἐπ' ἐχθρούς σου καὶ ἴδης ἵππον
 καὶ ἀναβάτην καὶ λαὸν πλείονα, οὐ φοβηθήσῃ, ὅτι κύριος ὁ θεὸς μετὰ σοῦ.” θυμοῦ γὰρ καὶ ἐπι-θυμίας καὶ συνόλως ἀπάντων παθῶν, καὶ τῶν
 ὄλων ἐποχουμένων ὡσπερ ἵπποις ἐκάστοις λογισμῶν, κἂν ἀμάχῳ ῥώμῃ κεχρῆσθαι νομισθῶσιν, ἀλογητέον τοὺς ἔχοντας τὴν τοῦ μεγάλου βασιλέως
 θεοῦ δύναμιν ὑπερασπίζουσαν καὶ προαγωνιζομένην 79 αἰεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ. στρατὸς δὲ θεῖος αἰ ἀρεταὶ
 φιλοθέων ὑπέρμαχοι ψυχῶν, αἷς, ἐπειδὴν ἴδωσι τὸν

<sup>a</sup> One of Philo's names for Deuteronomy; cf. § 172.

ON HUSBANDRY, 75-79

suspended turned over back-downwards, and as he is dragged along in the very wheel tracks he gets head and neck and both shoulders battered and crushed, and in the end, tossed after this fashion in every direction and knocking up against everything that comes in his way, he undergoes a most pitiable death. For 76 him such is the end that results, but the vehicle lifting itself up and making violent springs, when it reaches the ground in its rebound, too easily becomes a wreck, so that it is quite beyond being mended and made strong again. The horses, released from all that kept them in, become distracted and maddened and never stop tearing along until they trip and fall, or are swept down some steep precipice and perish. XVII. It is to be expected that the entire vehicle of 77 the soul with all who are on it should come to ruin in this manner, if it has gone wrong in the matter of the driving. It is a gain that such horses and those who drive them without skill should be destroyed, that the products of virtue may be exalted ; for when folly has a fall, wisdom is bound to rise up.

This is why Moses in his "hortatory discourse" <sup>a</sup> 78 says: "If thou shalt go out to war against thine enemies and see horse and rider and much people, thou shalt not be afraid, because the Lord thy God is with thee" (Deut. xx. 1). For high spirit and craving lust and all passions generally, and the whole array of reasoning faculties seated upon each of them as upon horses, even though they be held to have at their disposal resistless might, may be disregarded by those who have the power of the Great King acting always and everywhere as their shield and champion. There 79 is a divine army consisting of the virtues who fight on behalf of souls that love God, whom it befits

PHILO

ἀντίπαλον ἡττημένον, ἀρμόττει πάγκαλον καὶ πρεπωδέστατον ὕμνον ᾄδειν τῷ νικηφόρῳ καὶ καλλι-νίκῳ θεῷ. δύο δὲ χοροί, ὁ μὲν τῆς ἀνδρωνίτιδος,
 ὁ δὲ τῆς γυναικωνίτιδος ἐστίας, στάντες ἀντηχον 80 καὶ ἀντίφωνον ἀναμέλψουσιν ἀρμονίαν. χρήσεται
 δ' ὁ μὲν τῶν ἀνδρῶν χορὸς ἡγεμόνι Μωυσεῖ, νῶ
 τελείῳ, ὁ δὲ τῶν γυναικῶν Μαριάμ, αἰσθήσει κεκαθαρμένη· δίκαιον γὰρ καὶ νοητῶς καὶ αἰσθητῶς
 τοὺς εἰς τὸ θεῖον ὕμνους καὶ εὐδαιμονισμοὺς
 ἀνυπερθέτως ποιεῖσθαι καὶ τῶν ὀργάνων ἔμμελῶς
 κρούειν ἐκάτερον, τό τε νοῦ καὶ αἰσθήσεως, ἐπὶ 81 τῇ τοῦ μόνου σωτῆρος εὐχαριστία καὶ τιμῇ. τὴν
 γοῦν παράλιον ᾠδὴν ᾄδουσι μὲν πάντες ἄνδρες,
 οὐ μὴν τυφλῇ διανοίᾳ, ἀλλ' ὁξὺ καθορῶντες Μωυ-σέως ἐξάρχοντος, ᾄδουσι δὲ καὶ γυναῖκες αἰ
 πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἄρισται, τῷ τῆς ἀρετῆς ἐγγεγραμμέναι πολιτεύματι, Μαριάμ ἀφηγουμένης αὐταῖς.
 82 XVIII. ὕμνος δὲ ὁ αὐτὸς ἀμφοτέροις ᾄδεται τοῖς
 χοροῖς ἐπωδὸν ἔχων θαυμασιώτατον, ὃν ἐφυμνεῖσθαι καλόν· ἔστι δὲ τοιόσδε· “ ἄσωμεν τῷ
 [313] κυρίῳ, ἐνδόξως γὰρ | δεδόξασται· ἵππον καὶ
 83 ἀναβάτην ἔρριψεν εἰς θάλασσαν.” ἀμείνονα γὰρ καὶ τελειότεραν οὐκ ἂν τις εὔροι σκοπῶν νίκην ἢ καθ' ἣν τὸ τετράπουν καὶ σκιρτητικὸν καὶ ὑπέραυχον ἡττηται παθῶν τε καὶ κακιῶν ἀλκιμώτατον
 στίφος—καὶ γὰρ κακίαι τῷ γένει τέτταρες καὶ
 πάθη ταύταις ἰσάριθμα—, πρὸς δὲ καὶ ὁ ἐπιβάτης
 αὐτῶν μισάρετος καὶ φιλοπαθῆς νοῦς καταπεσῶν

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 490.

<sup>b</sup> The four vices are folly, cowardice, intemperance, injustice (corresponding to the four virtues). Diog. Laert. vii.
 92. For the four passions, grief, fear, desire, pleasure, see
S.V.F. iii. 381 ff.

ON HUSBANDRY, 79-83

when they see the adversary vanquished, to sing to God, gloriously triumphant and giver of victory, a hymn of beauty and wholly befitting Him. And two choirs, one from the quarters of the men, one from those of the women, with answering note and voice shall raise harmonious chant. The choir of the 80 men shall have Moses for its leader, that is Mind in its perfection, that of the women shall be led by Miriam, that is sense-perception made pure and clean<sup>a</sup> (Exod. xv. 1, 20). For it is right with both mind and sense to render hymns and sing blessings to the Godhead without delay, and tunefully to strike each of our instruments, that of mind and that of sense perception, in thanksgiving and honour paid to the only Saviour. So we find<sup>a</sup> the Song by the seashore 81 sung by all that are men, with no blind understanding but with keenest vision, with Moses as their leader; it is sung also by the women who in the true sense are the best, having been enrolled as members of Virtue's commonwealth, with Miriam to start their song. XVIII. The same hymn is sung by both 82 choirs, and it has a most noteworthy refrain, the recurrence of which is strikingly beautiful. It is this: "Let us sing unto the Lord, for gloriously hath He been glorified; horse and rider He threw into the sea" (Exod. xv. 1, 21). No one who looks 83 into the matter could find a more perfect victory than one in which that most doughty array of passions and vices, four-footed, restless, boastful beyond measure, has been defeated. So it is, for vices are four in kind and passions equal to these in number.<sup>b</sup> It is a victory, moreover, in which their rider has been thrown and dispatched, even virtue-hating and οἴχεται, ὃς ἡδοναῖς καὶ ἐπιθυμίαις, ἀδικίαις τε καὶ πανουργίαις, ἔτι δὲ ἀρπαγαῖς καὶ πλεονεξίαις καὶ τοῖς παραπλησίοις θρέμμασιν ἐγεγήθει.

PHILO

84 Παγκάλως οὖν ὁ νομοθέτης ἐν ταῖς παραινέσεσιν ἐκδιδάσκει μὴδ' ἄρχοντα χειροτονεῖν ἵπποτρόφον, ἀνεπιτήδειον οἰόμενος εἶναι πρὸς ἡγεμονίαν πάνθ' ὃς ἂν περὶ ἡδονᾶς καὶ ἐπιθυμίας καὶ ἔρωτας ἀκαθέκτους μεμνηνὼς οἶα ἀχαλίνωτος καὶ ἀφηγιαστής ἵππος οἰστρᾷ· λέγει γὰρ ὧδε· “ οὐ δυνήσῃ καταστήσαι ἐπὶ σεαυτὸν<sup>1</sup> ἄνθρωπον ἀλλότριον, ὅτι οὐκ ἀδελφός σου ἐστι· διότι οὐ πληθυνεῖ ἑαυτῷ ἵππον, οὐδὲ μὴ ἀποστρέψῃ τὸν λαὸν εἰς Αἴγυπτον.”

85 οὐκοῦν τῶν ἵπποτρόφων πρὸς ἀρχὴν πέφυκεν οὐδεὶς κατὰ τὸν ἱερώτατον Μωυσῆν· καίτοι φαίη τις ἂν ἴσως, ὅτι μεγάλη χεὶρ ἐστὶ βασιλέως ἵππικῆ δύναμις οὔτε πεζῆς οὔτε ναυτικῆς ἀποδέουσα, πολλαχοῦ δὲ καὶ λυσιτελεστέρα καὶ μάλιστα ἐν οἷς ἀνυπερθέτου καὶ συντόνου τάχους<sup>2</sup> τῆς ἐπεξόδου δεῖ τῶν καιρῶν μέλλειν οὐκ ἐπιτρεπόντων, ἀλλ' ἐπ' αὐτῆς ἰσταμένων ἀκμῆς, ὡς μὴ ἀναβάλλεσθαι τοὺς ὑστερηκότας μᾶλλον ἢ ἀποτυχεῖν ἂν εἰκότως εἰσάπαν νομισθῆναι, φθάντων παρελθεῖν ὥσπερ

86 νέφους ἐκεῖνων. XIX. εἵπομεν δ' ἂν αὐτοῖς· οὐδεμίαν, ὧ γενναῖοι, φρουρὰν ἄρχοντος ὁ νομοθέτης ὑποτέμνεται οὐδὲ τὸ συλλεχθὲν αὐτῷ στρατευμα ἀκρωτηριάζει τῆς δυνάμεως τὸ ἀνυσιμώτερον, τὴν ἵππικὴν δύναμιν, ἀποκόπτων, ἀλλ' ὡς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐπ' αὐτὸν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἀνυπερθέτω καὶ συντόμῳ τάχει.

---

<sup>a</sup> Another of Philo's names for Deuteronomy.

passion-loving mind, whose delight was in pleasures and cravings, acts of injustice and rascality, as well as in exploits of plundering and overreaching and all that stable.

Right well therefore does the lawgiver in his 84 Charges<sup>a</sup> give directions not to appoint a horse-rearer to be a ruler, regarding as unsuited for such high authority any man who resembles an unbridled and unruly horse, and, in his wild excitement over pleasures, lusts and amours, knows no restraint. These are the lawgiver's words, "Thou mayest not appoint over thyself a foreigner, because he is not thy brother ; for the reason that he shall not multiply to himself horses, nor turn the people back into Egypt" (Deut. xvii. 15 f.). According, therefore, to 85 Moses, that most holy man, a rearer of horses is by nature unfit to hold rule ; and yet it might be urged that strength in cavalry is a great asset to a king, and not a whit less important than infantry and the naval force ; nay, in many cases of greater service than these. These arms are especially important when it is requisite that the offensive should be instantaneous and vigorously pressed ; when the state of affairs does not admit of delay, but is in the highest degree critical ; so that those who are behind-hand would fairly be considered not so much to have been slow to gain the advantage as to have failed for good and all, since the other side has been too quick for them, and gone by them like a cloud. XIX. We would say in answer to these criticisms, 86 "My good sirs, the lawgiver is not curtailing any ruler's garrison, nor is he incapacitating the army which he has collected by cutting off the more effective part of the force, the cavalry. He is trying

PHILO

οἶόν τε πειράται συναύξειν, ἴν' εἷς τε ἰσχὺν καὶ
 πλήθος ἐπιδόντες οἱ σύμμαχοι ῥᾶστα τοὺς ἐναντίους 87 καθαιρῶσι. τίνι γὰρ οὕτω λοχίσαι στράτευμα καὶ τάξαι καὶ κατὰ φάλαγγας διανείμαι καὶ λοχαγοὺς
 καὶ ταξιάρχους καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους πλείονων ἢ ἐλατ-τόνων ἡγεμόνας καταστήσαι ἢ ὅσα τακτικὰ καὶ στρατηγικὰ εὐρηται [καὶ] τοῖς ὀρθῶς χρησομένοις
 ὑφήγησασθαι κατὰ πολλὴν τῆς ἐν τούτοις ἐ...
 88 στήμης περιουσίαν ἐξεγένετο; ἀλλὰ γὰρ οὐκ ἔστι
 νῦν ὁ λόγος αὐτῷ περὶ δυνάμεως ἰππικῆς, ἣν συγκροτεῖσθαι πρὸς ἄρχοντας ἐπ' ἀναιρέσει δυσμενῶν καὶ σωτηρία φίλων ἀναγκαῖον, ἀλλὰ περὶ
 τῆς κατὰ ψυχὴν ἀλόγου καὶ ἀμέτρου καὶ ἀπειθοῦς
 φορᾶς, ἣν ἐπιστομίζειν λυσιτελές, μὴ ποτε τὸν λαὸν αὐτῆς ἅπαντα εἰς Αἴγυπτον, τὴν τοῦ σώματος
 χώραν, ἀποστρέψῃ καὶ φιλήδονον καὶ φιλοπαθῆ
 μᾶλλον ἢ φιλάρετον καὶ φιλόθεον ἀνὰ κράτος |
 [314] ἐργάσθαι, ἐπειδὴ τὸν πλήθος ἵππων παρ' ἐαυτῷ
 89 κτώμενον ἀνάγκη τὴν εἰς Αἴγυπτον, ὡς αὐτὸς
 ἔφη, βαδίζειν ὁδόν. ὅταν γὰρ καθ' ἑκάτερον
 τοῖχον τῆς ψυχῆς νεῶς τρόπον, τὸν τε νοῦ καὶ αἰσθήσεως, ὑπὸ βίας τῶν καταπνεόντων εἰς αὐτὴν
 παθῶν τε καὶ ἀδικημάτων ἀντιρρεπούσης καὶ κλινομένης ἐξαίρομενον ἐπιβαίνει τὸ κῦμα, τόθ' ὡς εἰκὸς ὑπέραντλος ὁ νοῦς γινόμενος καταποντοῦται·
 βυθὸς δέ ἐστιν, εἰς ὃν καταποντοῦται καὶ καταδύεται, σῶμα αὐτὸ τὸ ἀπειακασθὲν Αἰγύπτῳ.
 90 XX. μὴ ποτ' οὖν περὶ τοῦτο σπουδᾶσθαι τῆς
 ἵπποτροφίας τὸ εἶδος. οἱ μὲν γὰρ θάτερον μετιόντες ψεκτοὶ μὲν καὶ αὐτοί· πῶς γὰρ οὐ; παρ'
 οἷς ἄλογα ζῶα μᾶλλον τετίμηται, ὧν ἐκ τῆς οἰ-

ON HUSBANDRY, 86-90

his best to improve it, that by an increase, both in strength and numbers, those who are fighting side by side may most easily overcome their enemies. For who was so capable as he, in virtue of abundant 87 acquaintance with these matters, to marshal an army by phalanxes and draw it up in order of battle and to appoint captains and corps-commanders and the other leaders of larger or smaller bodies of men, or to impart to those who would make a right use of it all that has been found out in the way of tactics and strategy? But the fact is that he is not talking 88 in this passage about a cavalry force, which a sovereign has to organize for the overthrow of an unfriendly power and for the safety of his friends. He is speaking about that irrational and unmeasured and unruly movement in the soul to check which is in her interest, lest some day it turn back all her people to Egypt, the country of the body, and forcibly render it a lover of pleasure and passion rather than of God and virtue. For he who acquires a multitude of horses cannot fail, as the lawgiver himself said, to take the road to Egypt. For when the 89 soul is swaying and tossing like a vessel, now to the side of the mind now to that of body, owing to the violence of the passions and misdeeds that rage against her, and the billows rising mountains high sweep over her, then in all likelihood the mind becomes waterlogged and sinks; and the bottom to which it sinks is nothing else than the body, of which Egypt is the figure. XX. Never then give 90 your mind to this kind of horse-rearing. Blameworthy indeed are those also who make a business of it in its literal form. To be sure they are so. With them irrational beasts are of greater value than human

PHILO

- κίας ἵππων μὲν ἀγέλαι κατευωχημένων αἰὲ προ-ἔρχονται, ἀνθρώπων δὲ ἐπομένων οὐδὲ εἰς ἔρανον
 εἰς ἐπανόρθωσιν ἐνδείας, οὐ δωρεὰν εἰς περιουσίαν 91 εὕρισκόμενος. ἀλλ' ὅμως κουφότερα ἀδικοῦσιν·
 ἀθλητὰς γὰρ ἵππους ἀνατρέφοντες τοὺς τε ἱεροὺς
 ἀγῶνας καὶ τὰς πανταχῇ πανηγύρεις ἀγομένας φασὶ
 κοσμεῖν καὶ οὐχ ἡδονῆς μόνον [ἀλλὰ] καὶ τῆς περὶ
 τὴν θεάν τέρψεως αἴτιοι γίνεσθαι τοῖς ὀρώσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῆς τῶν καλῶν<sup>1</sup> ἀσκήσεώς τε καὶ μελέτης· οἱ γὰρ τὸν τοῦ νικηφορῆσαι πόθον ἐνιδόντες<sup>2</sup> θηρίοις, διὰ τιμῆς ἔρωτα καὶ ζῆλον ἀρετῆς ἀλέκτω τινὶ
 προτροπῇ καὶ προθυμίᾳ χρησάμενοι, πόνους ἡδέεις
 ὑποστάντες τῶν οἰκείων καὶ ἐπιβαλλόντων οὐκ ἀφ-92 ἔξονται, πρὶν ἢ ἐπὶ τέλος ἐλθεῖν αὐτῶν. ἀλλ' οὗτοι
 μὲν εὐρεσιλογοῦσιν ἀδικοῦντες, οἱ δ' ἄνευ ἀπολογίας
 διαμαρτάνοντές εἰσιν οἱ τὸν ἀναβάτην νοῦν ἔποχον
 ἀποφαίνοντες ἄπειρον ἵππικῆς ἐπιστήμης κακία 93 καὶ πάθει τετράποδι. ἐὰν μέντοι τέχνην τὴν ἡνιοχικὴν ἀναδιδαχθεῖς ἐπὶ πλέον ἐνομιλήσης καὶ ἐνδιατρίψῃς αὐτῇ καὶ ἤδη νομίσης ἱκανὸς εἶναι δύνασθαι κρατεῖν ἵππων, ἀναβάς ἔχου τῶν ἡνιῶν·
 οὕτως γὰρ οὔτε ἀνασκιρτώντων αὐτὸς ἀποπίπτων
 μετὰ τραυμάτων δυσιάτων γέλωτα παρ' ἐπιχαιρε-κακοῦσιν ὀφλήσεις θεαταῖς οὐτ' ἐξ ἐναντίας ἢ κατόπιν ἐπιτρεχόντων ἐχθρῶν ἀλώση, τοὺς μὲν
 τάχει φθάνων τῷ προεκδραμεῖν διώκοντας, τῶν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. κακῶν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἐνιδιδόντες.

---

<sup>a</sup> Whether ἡδέεις is taken as nom. or acc., it is doubtful Greek in this sense. Mangey's ἡδέως is more natural.

ON HUSBANDRY, 90-93

beings. From their mansions there continually come troops of well-fed horses leading the way, while of the human beings that come behind these not one can get out of them a contribution to supply his need, or a gift to provide him with some spare cash. Nevertheless the wrong done by these people is less 91 heinous. For they contend that by training race-horses they both add lustre to the sacred race-meetings, and to the national festivals which are held universally ; that they not only give the spectators pleasure and provide them with the enjoyment of the sight, but promote the cultivation and study of noble aims ; for men (they say) who behold in animals the desire to carry off the victory, find themselves filled, by reason of their love of honour and enthusiasm for excellence, with an urgency and readiness beyond words, and so readily<sup>a</sup> submit to exertions in such contests as properly belong to them, and will not desist till they achieve their object. While these people find arguments in favour of their 92 ill-doing, those who sin without excuse are those who take Mind, that rider who is a tyro in the science of horsemanship, and put him on the back of four-footed vice and passion. If, however, you have 93 been taught the art of driving, and having become fairly familiar with it by persistent practice, have come to the conclusion that you can now manage horses, mount and hold on to the reins. By this means you will escape two disasters. If the horses rear you will not fall off, get badly hurt, and incur the ridicule of malicious spectators ; nor, if enemies make a rush at you from in front or from behind, will you be caught ; you will be too quick for those who come from behind and outstrip their pursuit ; and you will δὲ προσιόντων ἀλογῶν διὰ τὴν τοῦ δύνασθαι ἐξαναχωρεῖν ἀσφαλῶς ἐπιστήμην.

PHILO

- 94 XXI. Οὐκ εἰκότως οὖν Μωυσῆς ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν
ἀναβατῶν ἄδων ἀπωλείᾳ τοῖς ἵππευσιν εὐχεται σωτηρίαν παντελεῆ; δύνανται γὰρ οὗτοι χαλινὸν ταῖς ἀλόγοις δυνάμεσιν ἐμβαλόντες αὐτῶν ἐπι-στομίξειν τῆς πλεοναζούσης τὴν φορὰν ὀρμῆς.
τίς οὖν ἢ εὐχή, λεκτέον· “ γενέσθω ” φησί “ Δὰν
ὄφεις ἐφ’ ὁδοῦ, ἐγκαθήμενος ἐπὶ τρίβου, δάκνων
πτέρναν ἵππου, καὶ πεσεῖται ὁ ἵππεὺς εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, 95 τὴν σωτηρίαν περιμένων κυρίου.” ὁ δ’ αἰνίττεται
διὰ τῆς εὐχῆς, μηνυτέον· ἐρμηνεύεται Δὰν κρίσις.
[315] τὴν | οὖν ἐξετάζουσαν καὶ ἀκριβοῦσαν καὶ διακρίνουσαν καὶ τρόπον τινὰ δικάζουσαν ἕκαστα τῆς
ψυχῆς δύναμιν ὁμοίωσε δράκοντι—ζῶον δ’ ἐστὶ
καὶ τὴν κίνησιν ποικίλον καὶ συνετὸν ἐν τοῖς
μάλιστα καὶ πρὸς ἀλκὴν ἔτοιμον καὶ τοὺς χειρῶν
ἄρχοντας ἀδίκων ἀμύνασθαι δυνατώτατον—, οὐ
μὴν τῷ φίλῳ καὶ συμβούλῳ ζωῆς—Εὐὰν πατρίῳ
γλώττῃ καλεῖν αὐτὴν ἔθος—, ἀλλὰ τῷ πρὸς Μωυσέως ἐξ ὕλης χαλκοῦ δημιουργηθέντι, ὃν οἱ
δηχθέντες ὑπὸ τῶν ἰοβόλων ὄφειν καίτοι μέλλοντες
τελευτήσειν ὅποτε κατίδοιεν ἐπιβιοῦν καὶ μηδέποτε 96 ἀποθνήσκειν λέγονται. XXII. ταῦτα δ’ οὕτως μὲν λεγόμενα φάσμασιν ἕοικε καὶ τέρασι, δράκων
ἀνθρώπου προἰέμενος φωνὴν καὶ ἐνσοφιστεύων ἀκακωτάτοις ἤθεσι καὶ πιθανότησιν εὐπαραγώγοις
γυναῖκα ἀπατῶν, καὶ ἕτερος αἴτιος σωτηρίας γενό-97 μενος παντελοῦς τοῖς θεασαμένοις. ἐν δὲ ταῖς δι’

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 491.

<sup>b</sup> Or “ playing the sophist with innocent ways.”

ON HUSBANDRY, 93-97

make light of the frontal attack owing to your knowing the trick of backing without risk.

XXI. Does not Moses, then, when celebrating the 94 destruction of the riders, naturally pray for complete salvation for the horsemen? For these are able<sup>a</sup> by applying bit and bridle to the irrational faculties to curb the excessive violence of their movement. We must say, then, what his prayer is: "Let Dan," he says, "be a serpent on the road, seated upon the track, biting the heel of the horse; and the horseman shall fall backwards, waiting for the salvation of the Lord" (Gen. xlix. 17 f.). What he intimates by the 95 prayer, we must point out. "Dan<sup>a</sup>" means "judgement" or "sifting." The faculty, then, which tests and investigates and determines and, in a manner, judges all the soul's concerns, he likened to a serpent. This is a creature tortuous in its movements, of great intelligence, ready to shew fight, and most capable of defending itself against wrongful aggression. He did not liken the faculty to the serpent that played the friend and gave advice to "Life"—whom in our own language we call "Eve"—but to the serpent made by Moses out of material brass. When those who had been bitten by the venomous serpents looked upon this one, though at the point of death, they are said to have lived on and in no case to have died (Numb. xxi. 8). XXII. Told in this way, these 96 things are like prodigies and marvels, one serpent emitting a human voice and using quibbling arguments to an utterly guileless character,<sup>b</sup> and cheating a woman with seductive plausibilities; and another proving the author of complete deliverance to those who beheld it. But when we interpret words by the 97

PHILO

ὑπονοιῶν ἀποδόσει τὸ μὲν μυθῶδες ἐκποδῶν
 οἴχεται, τὸ δ' ἀληθὲς ἀρίδηλον εὐρίσκεται· τὸν μὲν
 οὖν τῆς γυναικὸς ὄφιν, αἰσθήσεως καὶ σαρκῶν ἐκκρεμαμένης ζωῆς, ἡδονὴν εἶναι φαμεν, ἰλυσπωμένην καὶ πολυπλοκωτάτην, ἀνεγερθῆναι μὴ δυνα-μένην, αἰεὶ καταβεβλημένην, ἐπὶ μόνα τὰ γῆς
 ἔρπουσαν ἀγαθὰ, καταδύσεις τὰς ἐν τῷ σώματι
 ζητοῦσαν, ὥσπερ ὀρύγμασιν ἢ χάσμασιν ἐκάστη
 τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἐμφωλεύουσιν, σύμβουλον ἀνθρώπου, φονῶσαν κατὰ τοῦ κρείττονος, ἰοβόλοις
 καὶ ἀνωδύνοις γλιχομένην δῆγμασιν ἀποκτείνει·
 τὸν δὲ Μωυσέως ὄφιν τὴν ἡδονῆς ἐναντίαν διάθεσιν,
 καρτερίαν, παρὸ καὶ τῆς χαλκοῦ κραταιοτάτης 98 ὕλης κατεσκευασμένος εἰσάγεται. τὸν οὖν ἄκρως καταθεασάμενον τὸ καρτερίας εἶδος, κἂν εἰ δεδηγμένος πρότερον ὑπὸ τῶν φίλτρων ἡδονῆς τυγχάνοι,
 ζῆν ἀναγκαῖον· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἐπανατείνεται ψυχῇ
 θάνατον ἀπαραίτητον, ἐγκράτεια δ' ὑγίαν καὶ
 σωτηρίαν προτείνει βίου. ἀντιπαθὲς δ' ἀκολασίας
 99 φάρμακον ἢ ἀλεξίκακος σωφροσύνη. παντὶ δὲ
 [316] σοφῷ τὸ καλὸν φίλον, ὃ καὶ πάντως ἐστὶ | σωτήριον. ὥσθ' ὅταν εὐχῆται Μωυσῆς γενέσθαι τῷ Δάν ἢ αὐτὸν ἐκεῖνον ὄφιν—ἐκατέρως γὰρ ἔστιν ἐκδέξασθαι—, παραπλήσιον τῷ ὑπ' αὐτοῦ κατασκευασθέντι, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὅμοιον τῷ τῆς Εὐσας εὐχεται·
 τὴν γὰρ εὐχὴν ἀγαθῶν αἴτησιν εἶναι συμβέβηκε.
 100 τὸ μὲν οὖν τῆς καρτερίας γένος ἀγαθὸν καὶ οἰστικὸν
 ἀφθαρσίας, ἀγαθοῦ τελείου, τὸ δὲ τῆς ἡδονῆς κακὸν

<sup>a</sup> Cf. the LXX in Gen. iii. 20 καὶ ἐκάλεσεν Ἀδὰμ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτοῦ, Ζωή.

<sup>b</sup> This seems strange here, notwithstanding "friend and counsellor" above, § 95. Mangey proposed ἐπίβουλον, Wend. <κακὸν> σύμβουλον.

ON HUSBANDRY, 97-100

meanings that lie beneath the surface, all that is mythical is removed out of our way, and the real sense becomes as clear as daylight. Well then, we say that the woman is Life <sup>a</sup> depending on the senses and material substance of our bodies ; that her serpent is pleasure, a crawling thing with many a twist, powerless to raise itself upright, always prone, creeping after the good things of earth alone, making for the hiding-places afforded to it by the body, making its lair in each of the senses as in cavities or dug-outs, giving advice to a human being, <sup>b</sup> athirst for the blood of anything better than itself, delighting to cause death by poisonous and painless bites. We say that the serpent of Moses is the disposition quite contrary to pleasure, even stedfast endurance, which explains why it is represented as being made of very strong material like brass. He, then, who has looked with <sup>98</sup> fixed gaze on the form of patient endurance, even though he should perchance have been previously bitten by the wiles of pleasure, cannot but live ; for, whereas pleasure menaces the soul with inevitable death, self-control holds out to it health and safety for life ; and self-mastery, that averter of ills, is an antidote to licentiousness. And the thing that is <sup>99</sup> beautiful and noble, which assuredly brings health and salvation, is dear to every wise man. So when Moses prays, either that there may be for Dan, or that Dan himself may be, a serpent (for the words may be taken either way), he prays for a serpent corresponding to the one made by him, but not like Eve's ; for prayer is an asking for good things. And <sup>100</sup> we know that endurance is of a good kind that brings immortality, a perfect good, while pleasure is

PHILO

- τὴν μεγίστην τιμωρίαν ἐπιφέρων, θάνατον. διὸ λέγει· “ γενέσθω Δὴν ὄφεις ” οὐχ ἐτέρωθι μᾶλλον ἢ
- 101 “ ἐφ’ ὁδοῦ ”· τὰ μὲν γὰρ τῆς ἀκρασίας καὶ λαιμαργίας καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα αἱ ἀμέτρητοι καὶ ἀπληστοί, πληρούμεναι πρὸς τῆς τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀφθονίας, ὠδίνουσι καὶ τίκτουσιν ἡδοναί, κατὰ λεωφόρου καὶ εὐθυτενοῦς βαίνειν οὐκ ἐπιτρέπει ψυχὴν, φάραγξι δὲ καὶ βαράθροις ἐμπίπτειν ἄχρι τοῦ καὶ διαφθεῖραι παντελῶς αὐτὴν ἀναγκάζει· τὰ δὲ καρτερίας καὶ σωφροσύνης καὶ τῆς ἄλλης ἀρετῆς * * * ἐχόμενα μόνα,<sup>1</sup> μηδενοῦς ὄντος ἐν ποσὶν ὀλισθηροῦ, ᾧ προσπταίσασα κλιθήσεται. προσφύεστατα οὖν ἔχεσθαι τῆς ὀρθῆς ὁδοῦ σωφροσύνην εἶπε, διότι καὶ τὴν ἐναντίαν ἕξιν ἀκολασίαν ἀνοδία χρῆσθαι συμ-
- 102 βέβηκε. XXIII. τὸ δὲ “ καθήμενος ἐπὶ τρίβου ” τοιοῦτον ὑποβάλλει νοῦν, ὡς γε ἐμαυτὸν πείθω· τρίβος ἐστὶν ἡ τετριμμένη πρὸς τε ἀνθρώπων καὶ ὑποζυγίων ἵππήλατος καὶ ἄμαξήλατος
- 103 ὁδός. ταύτῃ φασὶν ἡδονὴν ἐμφερεστάτην εἶναι· σχεδὸν γὰρ ἀπὸ γενέσεως ἄχρι τοῦ μακροῦ γήρως ἐπιβαίνουσι καὶ ἐμπεριπατοῦσι καὶ μετὰ σχολῆς καὶ ῥαστώνης ἐνδιατρίβουσι τῇ ὁδῷ ταύτῃ, οὐκ ἄνθρωποι <μόνον>, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσαι ἄλλαι ἰδέαι τῶν ζώων εἰσὶν· ἐν γὰρ οὐδέν ἐστιν ὃ μὴ πρὸς ἡδονῆς δελεασθὲν εἴλκυται καὶ ἐμφέρεται τοῖς πολυπλοκωτάτοις δικτύοις αὐτῆς, ἃ πολὺς διεκδύναί πόνος.
- 104 αἱ δὲ φρονήσεως καὶ σωφροσύνης καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀρετῶν ὁδοί, καὶ εἰ μὴ ἄβατοι, ἀλλά τοι πάντως

<sup>1</sup> The passage is evidently corrupt. Wendland's conjecture that there is a lacuna after ἀρετῆς which he supplies with <εὐοδίαν ψυχῇ παρέχεται μόνα has been followed in the

of an evil kind that inflicts the greatest penalty, even death. Wherefore it says, "Let Dan become a serpent" not elsewhere than "on the road." For 101 lack of self-control, and gluttony, and all else that issues from the womb of those immoderate and insatiate pleasures that ever conceive by the abundance of external comforts, never allow the soul to go along the straight course by the highway, but compel it to fall into pits and clefts, until they have utterly destroyed it. But only the practice of endurance and temperance and other virtue secures for the soul a safe journey where there is no slippery object under foot upon which the soul must stumble and be laid low. Most fitly therefore did he say that temperance keeps to the right road, since the opposite condition, that of licentiousness, finds no road at all.

XXIII. The sense suggested by the words "sitting on 102 the track" is, I am convinced, something of this kind. By "track" is meant the road for horses and carriages trodden both by men and by beasts of burden. They say that pleasure is very like this road; for 103 almost from birth to late old age this road is traversed and used as a promenade and a place of recreation in which to spend leisure hours not by men only but by every other kind of living creatures. For there is no single thing that does not yield to the enticement of pleasure, and get caught and dragged along in her entangling nets, through which it is difficult to slip and make your escape. But the roads of sound-sense 104 and self-mastery and of the other virtues, if not untrodden, are at all events unworn; for scanty is the translation, but it is a mere guess; and the ἐχέσθαι τῆς ὁδοῦ in the next sentence rather suggests that ἐχόμενα should be kept.

---

PHILO

ἄτριπτοι· ὀλίγος γὰρ ἀριθμὸς ἐστὶ τῶν αὐτὰς βαδιζόντων, οἱ πεφιλοσοφήκασιν ἀνόθως καὶ πρὸς
 μόνον τὸ καλὸν ἑταιρίαν ἔθεντο, τῶν ἄλλων 105 ἀπάντων ἅπαξ ἀλογήσαντες. “ ἐγκάθηται ” οὖν, καὶ οὐχ ἅπαξ, ὅτῳ ζῆλος καὶ φροντὶς εἰσέρχεται
 καρτερίας, ἢ ἐξ ἐνέδρας ἐπιθέμενος τὴν ἐθάδα
 ἡδονὴν, πηγὴν ἀενάων κακῶν, ἐπιφράξῃ καὶ ἐκ 106 τοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀνέλη χωρίου. τότε, ὡς φησιν
 ἀκολουθία χρώμενος, ἀναγκαίως “ δῆξεται πτέρναν ἵππου ”· καρτερίας γὰρ καὶ σωφροσύνης ἴδιον τὰς
 τῆς ὑψαυχενούσης κακίας καὶ τοῦ παρατεθηγμένου
 107 καὶ ὀξυκινήτου καὶ σκιρτητικοῦ πάθους ἐπιβάθρας
 [317] διασεῖσαι | καὶ ἀνατρέψαι. XXIV. τὸν μὲν οὖν τῆς Εὐσας ὄφιν εἰσάγει κατ’ ἀνθρώπου φονῶντα—
 λέγει γὰρ ἐν ταῖς ἀραῖς· “ αὐτὸς σου τηρήσει κεφαλὴν, καὶ σὺ τηρήσεις αὐτοῦ πτέρναν ”—, τὸν
 δὲ τοῦ Δάν, περὶ οὗ νῦν ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος, ἵππου 108 πτέρναν, ἀλλ’ οὐκ ἀνθρώπου δάκνοντα· ὁ μὲν γὰρ τῆς Εὐσας ἡδονῆς ὢν σύμβολον, ὡς ἐδείχθη πρότερον, ἀνθρώπῳ τῷ καθ’ ἕκαστον ἡμῶν ἐπιτίθεται
 λογισμῶ—φθορὰ γὰρ διανοίας πλεοναζούσης ἡδονῆς 109 ἀπόλαυσις τε καὶ χρῆσις—· ὁ δὲ τοῦ Δάν, εἰκῶν
 τις ὢν ἐρρωμενεστάτης ἀρετῆς καρτερίας, ἵππον, τὸ πάθους καὶ κακίας σύμβολον, δῆξεται, διότι
 σωφροσύνη τὴν τούτων καθαίρεσίν τε καὶ φθορὰν
 μελετᾷ. δηχθέντων μέντοι καὶ ὀκλασάντων “ ὁ 110 ἵππεὺς ” φησὶ “ πεσεῖται.” ὁ δ’ αἰνίττεται, τοιοῦτόν ἐστι· καλὸν καὶ περιμάχητον εἶναι

<sup>a</sup> i.e. “and remains there.”

<sup>b</sup> Or “according to the natural sequence of the thought” (perhaps, as Mangey, read ἀναγκαίᾳ).

ON HUSBANDRY, 104-110

number of those that tread them, that have genuinely devoted themselves to the pursuit of wisdom, and entered into no other association than that with the beautiful and noble, and have renounced everything else whatever. To continue. There "lies in am- 105 bush," and that not once only,<sup>a</sup> everyone into whom a zeal and care for endurance enters, in order that making his onslaught from his lurking-place he may block the way of familiar pleasure, the fountain of ever-flowing ills, and rid the domain of the soul of her. Then, as he goes straight on to say,<sup>b</sup> he will as 106 a matter of course "bite the horse's heel"; for it is characteristic of endurance and self-mastery to disturb and upset the means by which vaunting vice and passion, keen and swift and unruly, make their approach. XXIV. Eve's serpent is represented by 107 the lawgiver as thirsting for man's blood, for he says in the curses pronounced on it, "He shall lie in wait for thy head, and thou shalt lie in wait for his heel" (Gen. iii. 15); whereas Dan's serpent, of which we are now speaking, is represented as biting, not a man's, but a horse's heel. For Eve's serpent, being, 108 as was shewn before, a symbol of pleasure, attacks a man, namely, the reasoning faculty in each of us; for the delightful experience of abounding pleasure is the ruin of the understanding; whereas the serpent 109 of Dan, being a figure of endurance, a most sturdy virtue, will be found to bite a horse, the symbol of passion and wickedness, inasmuch as temperance makes the overthrow and destruction of these its aim. When these have been bitten and brought to their knees, "the horseman," he says, "shall fall."

What he conveys by a figure is this. 110
He regards it as no worthy object of ambition for

PHILO

- νομίζει<sup>1</sup> μηδενὶ τῶν ἐκ πάθους ἢ κακίας τὸν ἡμέτερον ἐποχεῖσθαι νοῦν, ἀλλ' ὅπότ' ἐπιβῆναί τινα αὐτῶν βιασθεῖη, σπουδάζειν καθάλλεσθαι καὶ ἀποπίπτειν· τὰ γὰρ τοιαῦτα πτώματα φέρει τὰς εὐκλεεστάτας νίκας. διὸ καὶ τῶν πάλαι τις προκληθεὶς ἐπὶ λουδορίας ἄμιλλαν οὐκ ἂν εἰς τοιοῦτον ἀγῶνα ἔφη ποτὲ παρελθεῖν, ἐν ᾧ χείρων ὁ νικῶν ἐστι τοῦ
- 111 ἡττωμένου. XXV. καὶ σὺ τοίνυν, ὦ οὔτος, μηδέποτ' εἰς κακῶν παρέλθης ἄμιλλαν μηδὲ περὶ πρωτείων τῶν ἐν τούτοις διαγωνίση, ἀλλὰ μάλιστα μὲν, ἐὰν οἶόν τε ἦ, σπούδασον ἀποδρᾶναι· ἐὰν δέ που πρὸς ἔρρωμενεστέρας δυνάμεως βιασθεὶς ἀναγκασθῆς διαγωνίσασθαι, μὴ μελλήσης ἡττᾶσθαι·
- 112 τότε γὰρ εὖ μὲν ἔση νενικηκῶς ὁ ἡττώμενος, ἡττώμενοι δ' οἱ νενικηκότες. καὶ μὴ ἐπιτρέψης μηδὲ κήρυκι κηρυῖξαι μηδὲ βραβευτῇ στεφανῶσαι τὸν ἐχθρόν, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς παρελθὼν τὰ βραβεῖα καὶ τὸν φοίνικα ἀνάδος καὶ στεφάνωσον, εἰ θέλει, καὶ ταῖς ταινίαις ἀνάδησον καὶ κήρυξον αὐτὸς μεγάλη καὶ ἀρρήκτω φωνῇ κήρυγμα τοιοῦτον· τὸν ἐπιθυμίας καὶ θυμοῦ καὶ ἀκολασίας ἀφροσύνης τε αὐ καὶ ἀδικίας προτεθέντα ἀγῶνα, ᾧ θεαταὶ καὶ ἀθλοθέται, ἡττημαὶ μὲν ἐγώ, νενίκηκε δ' οὔτοςί,<sup>2</sup> καὶ οὕτως ἐκ πολλοῦ τοῦ περιόντος νενίκηκεν, ὥστε καὶ παρὰ τοῖς ἀνταγωνισταῖς ἡμῖν, οὓς
- 113 εἰκὸς<sup>3</sup> ἦν βασκαίνειν, μὴ φθονεῖσθαι. τὰ μὲν οὖν τῶν ἀνιέρων τούτων ἀγῶνων ἀθλα παραχώρησον ἄλλοις, τὰ δὲ τῶν ἱερῶν ὄντως αὐτὸς ἀνάδησαι· ἱεροὺς δὲ μὴ νομίσης ἀγῶνας, οὓς αἱ πόλεις ἐν ταῖς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. νομίζειν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. οὔτος εἰ.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ὡς νίκος.

<sup>a</sup> Demosthenes; see Stobaeus, Flor. xix. 4.

ON HUSBANDRY, 110-113

our mind to ride on any of the progeny of passion or wickedness, but, should it ever be forced to mount one of them, he considers that it is best for it to make haste to jump down and tumble off; for such falls bring the noblest victories. This explains what was meant by one of the ancients<sup>a</sup> when challenged to a reviling match. He said that he would never come forward for such a contest, for in it the victor is worse than the vanquished. XXV. Do you then 111 also, my friend, never come forward for a rivalry in badness, nor contend for the first place in this, but, best of all, if possible make haste to run away, but if in any case, under the pressure of strength greater than your own, you are compelled to engage in the contest, do not hesitate to be defeated; for then 112 you, the defeated combatant, will have won a grand victory, and those who have won will be suffering defeat. And do not allow either the herald to announce or the judge to crown the enemy as victor, but come forward yourself and present the prizes and the palm, and crown him ("by your leave, sir"), and bind the headband round his head, and do you yourself make with loud and strong voice this announcement: "In the contest that was proposed in lust and anger and licentiousness, in folly also and injustice, O ye spectators and stewards of the sports, I have been vanquished, and this man is the victor, and has proved himself so vastly superior, that even we, his antagonists, who might have been expected to grudge him his victory, feel no envy." Yield, 113 then, to others the prizes in these unholy contests, but bind upon your own head the wreaths won in the holy ones. And count not those to be holy contests which the states hold in their triennial Festivals,

PHILO

- τριετηρίσιν ἄγουσι θέατρα ἀναδειμάμεναι πολλὰς
 [318] ἀνθρώπων δεξόμενα<sup>1</sup> μυριάδας· ἐν | γὰρ τούτοις ἢ
 ὁ καταπαλαίσας τινὰ καὶ ὑπτιον ἢ πρηγῆ τείνας ἐπὶ γῆν ἢ ὁ πυκτεύει<sup>2</sup> καὶ παγκρατιάζειν δυνά-μενος καὶ μηδεμιᾶς μήτε ὑβρεως μήτε ἀδικίας ἀπ-114 εχόμενος φέρεται τὰ πρωτεία· XXVI. εἰσὶ δ' οἱ σφόδρα καὶ κραταιότατα σιδηροῦν τροπὸν<sup>3</sup> ἀκονησάμενοι καὶ στομώσαντες ἑκατέραν τῶν χειρῶν περιάψαντες κεφαλὰς καὶ πρόσωπα τῶν ἀντιπάλων ἀποσκάπτουσι καὶ τᾶλλα, ἐπὰν τύχῃσι τὰς πληγὰς ἐνεγκόντες, ἀποθραύουσιν, εἴτα βραβείων καὶ στε-φάνων τῆς ἀηλεοῦς ὠμότητος ἕνεκα μεταποιούν-115 ται. τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλα ἀγωνίσματα δρομέων ἢ πεντάθλων τίς οὐκ ἂν γελάσαι τῶν εὖ φρονούντων, ἐπιτετηδευκότων μήκιστα ἐξάλλεσθαι καὶ μετρουμένων τὰ διαστήματα καὶ περὶ ποδῶν ὠκύτητος ἀμιλλωμένων; οὓς οὐ μόνον τῶν ἀδροτέρων ζώων
 δορκὰς ἢ ἔλαφος ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν βραχυτάτων
 σκυλάκιον ἢ λαγωδάριον μὴ σφόδρα ἐπειγόμενον 116 ρύμη καὶ ἀπνευστὶ θέοντα παραδραμεῖται. τούτων
 μὲν δὴ τῶν ἀγώνων πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἱερός οὐδεὶς,
 καὶ πάντες ἀνθρώποι μαρτυρῶσιν, οὓς ἀνάγκη
 πρὸς ἑαυτῶν ψευδομαρτυριῶν ἀλίσκεσθαι· οἱ γὰρ
 ταῦτα θαυμάζοντες τοὺς νόμους τοὺς καθ' ὑβριστῶν
 καὶ τιμωρίας τὰς ἐπὶ ταῖς αἰκίαις ἔθεσαν καὶ
 δικαστὰς τοὺς περὶ ἐκάστων διαγνωσομένους ἀπ-117 εκλήρωσαν. πῶς οὖν εἰκός ἐστι τοὺς αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ μὲν τοῖς ἰδία τινὰς αἰκισαμένοις ἀγανακτεῖν καὶ
 δίκας κατ' αὐτῶν ἀπαραιτήτους ὠρικένοι, ἐπὶ δὲ
 τοῖς δημοσίᾳ καὶ ἐν πανηγύρεσι καὶ θεάτροις

<sup>1</sup> MSS. δεξάμεναι (-α).

<sup>2</sup> MSS. παλαίειν.

<sup>3</sup> Conj. Tr.: MSS. and Wend. σιδήρον τρόπον.

ON HUSBANDRY, 113-117

and have built for them theatres to hold many myriads of men ; for in these prizes are carried away either by the man who has out-wrestled someone and laid him on his back or on his face upon the ground, or by the man who can box or combine boxing with wrestling, and who stops short at no act of outrage or unfairness. XXVI. Some give a sharp, strong 114 edge to an iron-bound thong,<sup>a</sup> and fasten it round both hands and lacerate the heads and faces of their opponents, and, when they succeed in planting their blows, batter the rest of their bodies, and then claim prizes and garlands for their pitiless savagery. As 115 for the other contests, of sprinters or of those who enter for the five exercises, what sensible person would not laugh at them, at their having practised to jump as far as possible, and getting the several distances measured, and making swiftness of foot a matter of rivalry ? And yet not only one of the larger animals, a gazelle or a stag, but a dog or hare, among the smaller ones, will, without hurrying much, outstrip them when running full pelt and without taking breath. Of these contests, in sober truth, 116 none is sacred, and even if all men testify to that effect, they cannot escape being convicted of false witness by themselves. For it was the admirers of these things who passed the laws against overbearing persons, and fixed the punishments to be awarded to acts of outrage, and allotted judges to investigate the several cases. How, then, are these two things compatible ? How can the very same persons be 117 indignant at outrages committed in private and have affixed to them inexorable penalties, and at the same time have by law awarded garlands and public

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 491.

PHILO

- στεφάνους καὶ κηρύγματα καὶ ἄλλα τινὰ νομο-118 θετῆσαι; δυεῖν γὰρ ἐναντίων καθ' ἑνὸς εἶτε σώματος εἶτε πράγματος ὀρισθέντων ἢ εὖ ἢ κακῶς ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἂν ἔχοι θάτερον· ἄμφω γὰρ ἀμήχανον. πότερον οὖν ἐπαινοῖτ'<sup>1</sup> ἂν δεόντως;
 ἂρ' οὐ τὸ τοὺς χειρῶν ἄρχοντας ἀδίκων κολάζεσθαι; ψέγοιτ' ἂν οὖν εἰκότως τὸ ἐναντίον, τὸ
 τιμᾶσθαι· ψεκτὸν δ' οὐδὲν τῶν ἱερῶν, ἀλλὰ πάντως 119 εὐκλεές. XXVII. ὁ τοίνυν Ὀλυμπιακὸς ἀγὼν μόνος ἂν λέγοιτο ἐνδίκως ἱερός, οὐχ ὃν τιθέασιν
 οἱ τὴν Ἥλιον οἰκοῦντες, ἀλλ' ὁ περὶ κτήσεως τῶν
 θείων καὶ ὀλυμπίων ὡς ἀληθῶς ἀρετῶν. εἰς
 τοῦτον τὸν ἀγῶνα οἱ ἀσθενέστατοι τὰ σώματα
 ἐρρωμενέστατοι δὲ τὰς ψυχὰς ἐγγράφονται πάντες, εἶτα ἀποδυσάμενοι καὶ κονισάμενοι πάνθ' ὅσα καὶ
 τέχνης καὶ δυνάμεως ἔργα δρῶσι, παραλιπόντες 120 οὐδὲν ὑπὲρ τοῦ νικηφορῆσαι. τῶν μὲν οὖν ἀντι-πάλων οἱ ἀθληταὶ περίεισιν οὗτοι, πρὸς ἀλλήλους δὲ πάλιν περὶ πρωτείων διαφέρονται<sup>2</sup>. οὐ γὰρ ὁ αὐτὸς τῆς νίκης τρόπος ἅπασιν, ἀλλὰ πάντες ἄξιοι
 τιμῆς ἀργαλεωτάτους καὶ βαρεῖς ἀνατρέψαντες 121 καὶ καταβαλόντες ἐχθρούς. θαυμασιώτατος δὲ καὶ
 τούτων ὁ διενεγκών, ᾧ καὶ τὰ πρῶτα τῶν ἀθλων<sup>3</sup> |
 [319] οὐ φθονητέον λαμβάνοντι. οἱ δὲ κἂν δευτερείων
 ἢ τρίτων ἀξιοθῶσι, μὴ κατηφείτωσαν· καὶ γὰρ
 ταῦτα ἐπ' ἀρετῆς κτήσει προτίθεται, τοῖς δὲ μὴ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. πότερον συνεπαινοῖτ' ἂν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. διαλέγονται.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἀθλητῶν.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 491.

<sup>b</sup> Or "as a reward for."

ON HUSBANDRY, 117-121

announcements and other honours to those who have done so publicly and at State festivals and in theatres? For if two things, contrary the one to the other, have been determined against one person or one action, one or other must of necessity be right and the other wrong; for it is out of the question that they should both be right or both wrong. Which then, rightly, would you praise? Would you not approve the punishment of those who are guilty of unprovoked violence and wrong? In that case you would censure, as a matter of course, the opposite treatment of them, the shewing honour to them. XXVII. And, since nothing sacred is censurable, but wholly of good report, it follows that the Olympic contest<sup>a</sup> is the only one that can rightly be called sacred; not the one which the inhabitants of Elis hold, but the contest for the winning of the virtues which are divine and really Olympian. For this contest those who are very weaklings in their bodies but stalwarts in their souls all enter, and proceed to strip and rub dust over them and do everything that skill and strength enables them to do, omitting nothing that can help them to victory. So these athletes prevail over their opponents, but they are also competing among themselves for the highest place. For they do not all win the victory in the same way, though all deserve honour for overthrowing and bringing down most troublesome and doughty opponents. Most worthy of admiration is the one who excels among these, and, as he receives the first prizes, no one can grudge them to him. Nor let those be down-cast who have been held worthy of the second or third prize. For these, like the first, are prizes offered with a view to<sup>b</sup> the acquisition of virtue, and those

PHILO

τῶν ἄκρων ἐφικέσθαι δυναμένοις ἢ τῶν μέσων κτήσις ὠφέλιμος, λέγεται δὲ ὅτι καὶ βεβαιοτέρα τὸν ἐμφυόμενον αἰεὶ τοῖς ὑπερέχουσιν ἐκφεύγουσα 122 φθόνον. παιδευτικώτατα οὖν εἴρηται τὸ “ πεσεῖται ὁ ἱππεύς,” ἢ εἴ τις ἀποπίπτει [μὲν] κακῶν, ἐγείρηται [δὲ] ἀγαθοῖς ἐπηρειδόμενος καὶ συν-
 ορθιασθῆ. διδασκαλικώτατον δὲ κακείνο, μὴ πρόσω φάναι, κατόπιν δὲ πίπτειν, ἐπειδὴ κακίας καὶ 123 πάθους ὑστερίζειν αἰεὶ λυσιτελέστατον· φθάνειν μὲν γὰρ τὰ καλὰ δρῶντα δεῖ, τὰ δὲ αἰσχρὰ μέλλειν [καὶ] ἔμπαλιν, κακείοις μὲν προσέρχεσθαι, τούτων δὲ ὑστερίζειν καὶ μακρὸν ὅσον ἀπολείπεσθαι· ᾧ
 <γὰρ> τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων ἐγγίνεται <καὶ> παθῶν ὑστερίζειν, ἄνοσος διατελεῖ. τὴν γοῦν “ παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ σωτηρίαν περιμένειν ” φησὶν αὐτόν, ἵνα ἐφ’ ὅσον ἀπελείφθη τοῦ ἀδικεῖν, ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον τῷ δικαιοπραγεῖν ἐπιδράμη.

124 XXVIII. Περὶ μὲν οὖν ἱππέως καὶ ἀναβάτου, κτηνοτρόφου τε καὶ ποιμένου, ἔτι δὲ γῆν ἐργαζομένου καὶ γεωργοῦ τὰ προσήκοντα εἴρηται, καὶ αἱ καθ’ ἐκάστην συζυγίαν ὡς οἶόν τε ἦν ἠκρίβωνται
 125 διαφοραί. πρὸς δὲ τὰ ἀκόλουθα καιρὸς ἤδη τρέπεσθαι. τὸν οὖν ἐφιέμενον ἀρετῆς οὐ παντελῆ κεκτημένον τὴν γεωργικὴν<sup>1</sup> ψυχῆς ἐπιστήμην εἰσάγει, ἀλλ’ αὐτὸ μόνον περὶ τὰς ἀρχὰς αὐτῆς πεπονημένον· λέγει γάρ· “ ἦρξατο Νῶε ἄνθρωπος εἶναι

<sup>1</sup> mss. γεωργικῆς; cf. ἡ γεωργικὴ ψυχῆς τέχνη Quod Det. 111.

<sup>a</sup> Or “ meaning that he should be as eager for right-doing as he was backward for wrong-doing,” the ἵνα expressing the purpose of the prophet’s words, rather than that of the horseman, as in § 122.

ON HUSBANDRY, 121-125

who cannot reach the topmost virtues are gainers by the acquisition of the less lofty ones, and theirs is actually, as is often said, a more secure gain since it escapes the envy which ever attaches itself to pre-eminence. There is, then, a very instructive purpose 122 in the words, "the horseman shall fall," namely, that if a man fall off from evil things, he may get up supporting himself upon good things and be set upright. Another point full of teaching is his speaking of falling not forwards, but backwards, since to be behindhand in vice and passion is always most to our advantage ; for we ought to be beforehand when 123 doing noble deeds, but on the contrary to be tardy about doing base deeds : we should go to meet the former, but be late for the latter, and fall short of them by the greatest possible distance ; for he, whose happiness it is to be late for sinful deeds and passion's promptings, abides in freedom from soul-sickness. You see, it says that he is "waiting for the salvation that comes from God." He looks out for it, to the end that he may run as far to meet right-doing, as he was late for wrongdoing.<sup>a</sup>

XXVIII. All that is pertinent to horseman and 124 rider, cattle-rearer and shepherd, as well as to soil-worker and husbandman, has now been said, and the differences between the members of each pair have been stated with such minuteness as was possible. It is time to turn to what comes afterwards. Well, 125 the lawgiver represents the aspirant to virtue as not possessing in its completeness the science of soul-husbandry, but as having done no more than spend some labour on the elements of that science ; for he says, "Noah began to be an husbandman." Now

PHILO

- γεωργός." ἀρχὴ δ', ὁ τῶν παλαιῶν λόγος, ἡμῖσι
 τοῦ παντὸς ὡς ἂν ἡμίσει πρὸς τὸ τέλος ἀφεστηκυῖα,<sup>1</sup> οὐ μὴ προσγενομένου καὶ τὸ ἄρξασθαι 126 πολλάκις μεγάλα πολλοὺς ἔβλαψεν. ἤδη γοῦν τινες
 καὶ τῶν οὐκ εὐαγῶν τῆς διανοίας κατὰ τὰς συνεχεῖς
 μεταβολὰς στροβουμένης ἔννοιαν χρηστοῦ τινος ἔλαβον, ἀλλ' οὐδὲν ὠνηντο· ἔστι γὰρ μὴ πρὸς τὸ τέλος ἠξάντων φορὰν ἀθρόον τῶν ἐναντίων καταρ-ραγεῖσαν ἐπικλύσαι καὶ τὸ χρηστὸν ἐκείνο δια-127 φθαρῆναι νόημα. XXIX. οὐ διὰ τοῦτο μέντοι δόξαντι θυσίας ἀμέμπτους ἀναγαγεῖν τῷ Κάιν λόγιον ἐξέπεσε μὴ θαρρεῖν ὡς κεκαλλιερηκότη; μὴ γὰρ ἐφ' ἱεροῖς καὶ τελείοις βουθυτῆσαι·
 τὸ δὲ λόγιόν ἐστι τοιόνδε· "οὐκ ἔαν ὀρθῶς προσ-128 ἐνέγκης, ὀρθῶς δὲ μὴ διέλῃς." ὀρθὸν μὲν οὖν ἡ τοῦ θεοῦ τιμὴ, τὸ δὲ ἀδιαίρετον οὐκ ὀρθόν. ὃν
 δ' ἔχει καὶ τοῦτο λόγον, ἴδωμεν· εἰσὶ τινες οἱ τὸ
 εὐσεβὲς ἐν τῷ πάντα φάσκειν ὑπὸ θεοῦ γενέσθαι, 129 τὰ τε καλὰ καὶ τὰ ἐναντία, περιγράφοντες· πρὸς
 [320] οὓς ἂν λέγοιμεν, ὅτι τὸ μὲν ὑμῶν | ἐπαινετόν ἐστι
 τῆς δόξης, τὸ δ' ἔμπαλιν ψεκτόν, ἐπαινετόν μὲν,
 ὅτι τὸ μόνον θαυμάζετε τίμιον, ψεκτόν δὲ αὖ,
 παρόσον ἄνευ τομῆς καὶ διαιρέσεως· ἔδει γὰρ μὴ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ὅς ἂν . . . ἀφέστηκεν.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Quod Det. 64.

<sup>b</sup> The main links of the thought from here to § 168 may be given as follows: Good ideas are often spoilt for want of proper analysis or "distinguishing," but (§ 134) distinguishing by itself is useless, without remembering and meditating on what has been learnt (cf. De Sac. 82 ff.). In connexion with this we have the tirade against futile and exaggerated distinguishing (cf. §§ 136-141). The two together will give perfection, but till this is gained the beginner must not attempt

“ a beginning is half of the whole,” or “ begun is half done,”<sup>a</sup> as was said by the men of old, as being half-way towards the end, whereas if the end be not added as well, the very making of a beginning has many a time done many people much harm.<sup>b</sup> It has, 126 as we all know, happened before now that even people far from guiltless, as their mind kept turning about in perpetual change, have hit upon an idea of something wholesome, but have got no good from it ; for it is possible that ere they have come to the end, a strong current of contrary tendencies has swept over them like a flood, and that wholesome idea has come to nothing.

XXIX. Was it not owing to 127 this, that, when Cain imagined that he had presented faultless sacrifices, a divine intimation was made to him not to be confident that his offering had met with God’s favour ; for that the conditions of his sacrifice had not been holy and perfect ? The divine message is this : “ <All is> not <well>, if thou offerest rightly, but dost not rightly distinguish ”<sup>c</sup> (Gen. iv. 7). So 128 the honour paid to God is a right act, but the failure to divide is not right. What this means, let us see. There are some whose definition of reverence is that it consists in saying that all things were made by God, both beautiful things and their opposites. We 129 would say to these, one part of your opinion is praiseworthy, the other part on the contrary is faulty. It is praiseworthy that you regard with wonder and reverence that which is alone worthy of honour ; on the other hand, you are to blame for doing so without clear-cut distinctions. You ought never to have things beyond his capacity (§§ 146-165), or he will find himself supplanted by others (§§ 166-168).

<sup>c</sup> For Philo’s way of taking this text see note on De Sobr. 50.

PHILO

- φῦραι καὶ συγχέαι πάντων ἀθρώως ἀποφήναντας
 αἴτιον, ἀλλὰ μετὰ διαστολῆς μόνων ὁμολογήσαι 130 τῶν ἀγαθῶν. ἄτοπον γὰρ ἱερέων μὲν πρόνοιαν
 ἔχειν, ὡς ὀλόκληροι τὰ σώματα καὶ παντελεῖς
 ἔσονται, τῶν τε καταθνομένων ζώων, ὡς οὐδὲν
 οὐδεμίᾳ τὸ παράπαν ἀλλ' οὐδὲ τῇ βραχυτάτῃ χρήσεται λώβῃ, καὶ τινὰς διόπους<sup>1</sup> ἐπ' αὐτὸ τοῦτο χειροτονεῖν τὸ ἔργον, οὓς ἔνιοι μωμοσκοπούς
 ὀνομάζουσιν, ἵνα ἄμωμα καὶ ἀσινῆ προσάγηται τῷ βωμῷ τὰ ἱερέια, τὰς δὲ περὶ θεοῦ δόξας ἐν ταῖς
 ἐκάστων ψυχαῖς ὑποσυγκεχύσθαι<sup>2</sup> καὶ μὴ κανόνι 131 ὀρθοῦ λόγου διακεκρίσθαι. XXX. τὸν κάμηλον οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι ἀκάθαρτον εἶναι φησι ζῶον
 ὁ νόμος, ἐπειδὴ μηρυκᾶται μὲν, οὐ διχληεῖ δέ;
 καίτοι γε πρὸς τὴν ῥητὴν ἐπίσκεψιν οὐκ οἶδ' ὄν
 ἔχει λόγον ἢ προσαποδοθεῖσα <αἰτία>, πρὸς δὲ τὴν 132 δι' ὑπονοιῶν ἀναγκαιότατον· ὥσπερ γὰρ τὸ μηρυκώμενον τὴν προκαταβληθεῖσαν ὑπαναπλέουσαν αὐθις ἐπιλεαίνει τροφήν, οὕτως ἡ ψυχὴ τοῦ φιλομαθοῦς, ἐπειδάν τινα δι' ἀκοῆς δέξεται θεωρήματα, λήθη
 μὲν αὐτὰ οὐ παραδίδωσιν, ἡρεμήσασα δὲ καθ'
 ἑαυτὴν ἕκαστα μεθ' ἡσυχίας τῆς πάσης ἀναπολεῖ 133 καὶ εἰς ἀνάμνησιν τῶν πάντων ἔρχεται. μνήμη δ'
 οὐ πᾶσα ἀγαθόν, ἀλλ' ἡ ἐπὶ μόνοις τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς, ἐπεὶ τό γε ἄλγιστα εἶναι τὰ κακὰ βλαβερώτατον·
 οὐ ἔνεκα πρὸς τελειότητα χρεία τοῦ διχληεῖν, ἵνα

<sup>1</sup> MSS. δεῖ ὄσους.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἐπισυγκεχύσθαι.

* See App. p. 491.

ON HUSBANDRY, 129-133

mixed and confused the matter by representing Him as Author of all things indiscriminately, but to have drawn a sharp line and owned Him Author of the good things only.<sup>a</sup> It is a senseless thing to be 130 scrupulous about priests being free from bodily defect or deformity and about animals for sacrifice being exempt from the very slightest blemish, and to appoint inspectors (called by some "flaw-spiers") on purpose to provide that the victims may be brought to the altar free from flaw or imperfections; and at the same time to suffer the ideas about God in their several souls to be in confusion, with no distinctions made between true and false by the application to them of the rule and standard of right principles.

XXX. Do you not see that the Law 131 says that the camel is an unclean animal, because, though it chews the cud, it does not part the hoof (Lev. xi. 4)? And yet, if we fix our eyes on the literal way of regarding the matter, I do not know what principle there is in the reason given for the camel's uncleanness; but, if we look to the way suggested by latent meanings there is a most vital principle. For as the animal that chews the cud 132 renders digestible the food taken in before as it rises again to the surface,<sup>a</sup> so the soul of the keen learner, when it has by listening taken in this and that proposition, does not hand them over to forgetfulness, but in stillness all alone goes over them one by one quite quietly, and so succeeds in recalling them all to memory. Not all memory, however, is a good thing, 133 but that which is brought to bear upon good things only, for it would be a thing most noxious that evil should be unforgettable. That is why, if perfection is to be attained, it is necessary to divide the hoof,

PHILO

- τοῦ μνημονικοῦ δίχα τμηθέντος ὁ λόγος διὰ στόματος, οὐ πάρα<sup>1</sup> ἢ φύσις διττὰ εἰργάσατο χεῖλη, ῥέων διαστείλῃ τό τε ὠφέλιμον καὶ τὸ ἐπιζήμιον 134 μνήμης γένους εἶδος. ἀλλ' οὐδὲ τὸ διχηλεῖν ἄνευ τοῦ μηρυκᾶσθαι καθ' ἑαυτὸ φαίνεταιί τινα ἔχειν ὄνησιν ἐξ αὐτοῦ. τί γὰρ ὄφελος τὰς φύσεις τῶν πραγμάτων τέμνειν ἄνωθεν ἀρξάμενον μέχρι τῶν λεπτοτάτων, εἰς τοῦσχατον <δέ> αὐτὸ μηκέτι γίνεσθαι μηδὲ ἔχειν διαιρετὰ<sup>2</sup> τὰ μέρη, ἅπερ ἄτομα καὶ ἀμερῆ πρὸς ἐνίων εὐθυβόλως ὀνομάζεται;
 135 ταῦτα γὰρ συνέσεως μὲν καὶ περιττῆς ἀκριβείας ἠκονημένης εἰς ὀξυτάτην ἀγκύνοιαν ἐναργῆ δείγματ' ἐστίν, ὄνησιν δὲ οὐδεμίαν πρὸς καλοκάγαθίαν καὶ
 [321] | ἀνεπιλήπτου βίου διεξοδὸν ἔχει.
 136 XXXI. καθ' ἐκάστην γοῦν ἡμέραν ὁ πανταχοῦ τῶν σοφιστῶν ὄμιλος ἀποκναίει τὰ ὦτα τῶν παρατυχανόντων ἀκριβολογούμενος καὶ τὰς διπλᾶς καὶ ἀμφιβόλους λέξεις ἀναπτύσσει καὶ τῶν πραγμάτων ὅσα δοκεῖ μεμνήσθαι—πέπηγε δὲ καὶ πλειόνων—διακρίνων. ἢ οὐχ οἱ μὲν τὰ στοιχεῖα τῆς ἐγγραμμάτου φωνῆς εἰς τε ἄφωνα καὶ φωνήεντα τέμνουσιν; ἔνιοι δὲ τὸν λόγον εἰς τὰ ἀνωτάτω τρία, ὄνομα,
 137 ῥῆμα, σύνδεσμον; μουσικοὶ δὲ τὴν ἰδίαν ἐπιστήμην εἰς ῥυθμόν, εἰς μέτρον,<sup>3</sup> εἰς μέλος, καὶ τὸ μέλος εἰς τε τὸ χρωματικὸν καὶ ἐναρμόνιον καὶ διατονικὸν εἶδος καὶ διὰ τεσσάρων καὶ διὰ πέντε

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ὥσπερ ἄττα.

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps read ἀδιαιρετά, i.e. "never finding that the parts we come to are incapable of division." See App. p. 492.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. μέρος.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "no longer to reach," i.e. "to fail to do what we do in other undertakings," a common extension of meaning in οὐκέτι or μηκέτι.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 491.

ON HUSBANDRY, 133-137

in order that, the faculty of memory being cut in twain, language as it flows through the mouth, for which Nature wrought lips as twin boundaries, may separate the beneficial and the injurious forms of memory. But neither does dividing the hoof by 134 itself apart from chewing the cud appear to have anything advantageous on its own account. For what use is there in dissecting the natures of things, beginning from the beginning and going on to the minutest particles, and yet failing to reach<sup>a</sup> the absolute end, and finding before you defying division those parts which are happily named by some "atoms" or "partless"?<sup>b</sup> For such a course is clear proof of 135 sagacity and nicety of precision whetted to keenest edge of shrewdness; but it is of no advantage towards promoting nobility of character and a blameless passage through life.

XXXI. See 136 how true this is. Day after day the swarm of sophists to be found everywhere wears out the ears of any audience they happen to have with disquisitions on minutiae, unravelling phrases that are ambiguous and can bear two meanings and distinguishing among circumstances such as it is well to bear in mind—and they are set on bearing in mind a vast number.<sup>c</sup> Do not some of them divide the letters of written speech into consonants and vowels? And do not some of them break up language into its three ultimate<sup>d</sup> parts, noun, verb, conjunction? Do not musicians divide 137 their own science into rhythm, metre, tune; and the tune or melody into the chromatic, harmonic and diatonic form, and into intervals of a fourth, a fifth

<sup>a</sup> Or "such as they think well . . . and even more" (i.e. than they themselves think worth remembering).

<sup>d</sup> Or "main parts," as γενικώτατα § 138.

PHILO

- καὶ διὰ πασῶν, συνημμένων τε καὶ διεξευγμένων 138 μελωδίας; γεωμέτραι δὲ εἰς τὰς γενικωτάτας δύο γραμμὰς εὐθειάν τε καὶ περιφέρειαν; καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι τεχνῖται εἰς τὰς καθ' ἐκάστην ἐπιστήμην ἰδέας τὰς 139 ἀπὸ τῶν πρώτων ἄχρι τῶν ὑστάτων; ᾧ συνεπι-ηχείτω μέντοι καὶ τῶν φιλοσοφούντων χορὸς ἅπας
 τὰ εἰωθότα διεξιὼν, ὅτι τῶν ὄντων τὰ μὲν ἐστὶ σώματα, τὰ δ' ἀσώματα· καὶ τὰ μὲν ἄψυχα, τὰ δὲ ψυχῆν ἔχοντα· καὶ τὰ μὲν λογικά, τὰ δ' ἄλογα·
 καὶ τὰ μὲν θνητά, τὰ δὲ θεία· καὶ τῶν θνητῶν τὸ 140 μὲν ἄρρεν, τὸ δὲ θῆλυ, τὰ ἀνθρώπου τμήματα· καὶ πάλιν τῶν ἀσωμάτων τὰ μὲν τέλεια, τὰ δὲ ἀτελῆ·
 καὶ τῶν τελείων τὰ μὲν ἐρωτήματα καὶ πύσματα ἀρατικά<sup>1</sup> τε αὖ καὶ ὄρκικὰ καὶ ὅσαι ἄλλαι τῶν
 κατ' εἶδος ἐν ταῖς περὶ τούτων στοιχειώσεσιν ἀναγράφονται διαφοραί, τὰ δὲ πάλιν ἃ διαλεκτικοῖς 141 ἔθος ὀνομάζειν ἀξιώματα· καὶ τούτων τὰ μὲν ἀπλᾶ, τὰ δ' οὐχ ἀπλᾶ· καὶ τῶν οὐχ ἀπλῶν τὰ μὲν συνημμένα, τὰ δὲ παρασυνημμένα τὸ μᾶλλον ἢ ἦττον,<sup>2</sup> καὶ προσέτι δὲ διεξευγμένα καὶ ἄλλα τοιουτότροπα,
 ἔτι δ' ἀληθῆ τε καὶ ψευδῆ καὶ ἄδηλα, δυνατά τε
 καὶ ἀδύνατα [καὶ τὰ μὲν φθαρτὰ καὶ ἀφθαρτα]
 καὶ ἀναγκαῖα καὶ οὐκ ἀναγκαῖα, καὶ εὐπορά τε
 καὶ ἄπορα καὶ ὅσα συγγενῆ τούτοις· πάλιν δὲ τῶν
 ἀτελῶν αἰ εἰς τὰ λεγόμενα κατηγορήματα καὶ

<sup>1</sup> mss. ἐρωτικά.

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps (as in Diog. Laert. vii. 69) <τὰ διασαφούντα> (or some equivalent participle) τὸ μᾶλλον καὶ ἦττον.

<sup>a</sup> Or "from the primary (divisions) to the ultimate."

<sup>b</sup> The Stoics admitted four kinds of "incorporeal" things, viz. time, place, void, and λεκτόν or σημαίνόμενον, i.e. the meaning conveyed by speech as opposed to the actual sound or an octave, and into melodies with united or disjoined tetrachords? Do not geometers put all 138 lines under two main heads, the straight line and the curve? Do not other experts place everything in the principal categories that their several sciences suggest, categories that start with the elements of the science and go on until they have dealt with their last and highest achievements<sup>a</sup>? With their com- 139

 pany let the whole choir of philosophers chime in,
 harping on their wonted themes, how that of existences some are bodies, some incorporeal<sup>b</sup>; and of bodies, some lifeless, some having life; some rational,
 some irrational, some mortal, some divine; and of mortal beings, some male, some female; a distinction which applies to man; and of things incorporeal 140 again, some complete, some incomplete<sup>c</sup>; and of those that are complete, some questions and inquiries, imprecations and adjurations, not to mention all the other particular differences, all of which are set forth in the elementary handbooks which deal with them.
 Again, there are what dialecticians are accustomed to call propositions. Of these, some are simple, some 141 not so; and of the non-simple, some hypothetical,
 some inferential, some <indicating> more or less,
 some moreover disjunctive; and suchlike distinctions.
 They distinguish further things true, false, and doubtful; possible and impossible; conclusive and inconclusive;<sup>d</sup> soluble and insoluble; and all kindred antitheses. Again, applying to incorporeal things which are incomplete there are the subdivisions into which was corporeal. See S.V.F. ii. 331. Philo ignores the first three and deals with the subdivisions of λεκτόν.

<sup>c</sup> For the explanation of these and the following terms
 see App. p. 492.

<sup>d</sup> Or "necessarily and not necessarily true."

PHILO

- ουμβεβηκότα και ὅσα τούτων ἐλάττω διαιρέσεις 142 προσεχέις. XXXII. κἄν ἔτι παρα-θήξας ὁ νοῦς εἰς τὸ λεπτότερον ἑαυτόν, καθάπερ
 ἰατρός τὰ σώματα, τὰς τῶν πραγμάτων φύσεις ἀνατέμνει, πλέον οὐδὲν πρὸς ἀρετῆς κτήσιν ἐργάσεται, ἀλλὰ διχληθήσει μὲν διαστέλλειν και δια-κρίνειν ἕκαστα δυνάμενος, οὐ μηρυκηθήσεται δέ,
 ὡς ὠφελίμω χρησθαι τροφῇ κατὰ τὰς ὑπομνήσεις
 τὴν ἐξ ἁμαρτημάτων ἐπιγεγεννημένην τραχύτητα
 [322] ψυχῇ λεαινούσῃ και | προσηνῇ και λείαν τῷ ὄντι
 143 κίνησιν ἀπεργαζομένη. μυριοὶ οὖν τῶν λεγομένων σοφιστῶν θαυμασθέντες κατὰ πόλεις και τὴν οἰκουμένην σχεδὸν ἅπασαν ἐπὶ τιμὴν ἐπιστρέψαντες
 ἔνεκα ἀκριβολογίας και τῆς περὶ τὰς εὐρέσεις δεινότητος ἀνὰ κράτος τοῖς πάθεσι ἐγκατεγήρασαν και ἐγκατέτριψαν<sup>1</sup> τὸν βίον οὐδὲν ἰδιωτῶν ἡμελη-μένων και φαυλοτάτων διενεγκόντες ἀνθρώπων.
 144 διὸ και παγκάλως τοὺς οὕτω βιοῦντας τῶν σοφιστῶν ὁ νομοθέτης τῷ συνῶν παραβάλλει γένει διαυγεί μὲν οὐδενὶ και καθαρῷ θολερῷ δέ και βορβορώδει<sup>2</sup> βίῳ και τοῖς αἰσχίστοις ἐμφερομένους.<sup>3</sup> 145 τὸν γὰρ συν ἀκάθαρτον εἶναι φησιν, ὅτι διχληεὶ
 μὲν, οὐ μηρυκᾶται δέ, ὡς τὸν κάμηλον διὰ τὴν ἐναντίαν πρόφασιν, ὅτι μηρυκῶμενος οὐ διχληεὶ.
 ὅσα μὲν <τοι> τῶν ζῴων ἀμφοτέρων μετέχει,
 καθαρὰ εἰκότως ἀναγράφεται, ὅτι τὴν περὶ ἑκάτερον<sup>4</sup> τῶν λεχθέντων ἀτοπίαν ἐκπέφευγε. και γὰρ διαίρεσις ἄνευ μνήμης και μελέτης και διεξόδου

<sup>1</sup> mss. κατεγήρασαν και κατέτριψαν, which perhaps might be retained and a participle like χρῶμενοι inserted to govern πάθεσι.

<sup>2</sup> mss. βαραθρώδει.

<sup>3</sup> So mss. : perhaps ἐμφερομένων.

<sup>4</sup> mss. θατέραν (-α).

“predicates” and “complements” and still more minute refinements. XXXII. And if the mind putting a still finer edge upon itself dissect the natures of things, as a surgeon does men’s bodies, he will effect nothing that is of advantage for the acquiring of virtue. It is true that, by reason of his power to distinguish and discriminate in each case, he will “divide the hoof,” but he will not “chew the cud” so as to have at his service beneficial nourishment with its wholesome reminders, smoothing out the roughness that had accrued to the soul as the result of errors, and producing an easy and truly smooth movement.* And so multitudes of those who are called sophists, after winning the admiration of city after city, and after drawing wellnigh the whole world to honour them for their hair-splitting and their clever inventiveness, have with all their might worn their life out, and brought it to premature old age, by the indulgence of their passions, differing not at all from neglected nobodies and the most worthless of mankind. Excellently, therefore, does the law-giver compare the race of sophists who live in this way to swine. Such men are at home in a mode of life not bright and luminous but thick and muddy and in all that is most ugly. For he says that the pig is unclean, because, though it divide the hoof, it does not chew the cud (Lev. xi. 7). He pronounces the camel unclean for the opposite reason, because though chewing the cud he does not divide the hoof. But such animals as do both are, as we might expect, set down as clean, since they have escaped the unnatural development in each of the directions named. For indeed distinguishing without memory and with-

* See App. p. 493.

PHILO

τῶν ἀρίστων * * *<sup>1</sup> ἀγαθὸν ἀτελές, ἡ δ' ἀμφοῖν εἰς ταῦτὸ σύννοδος τε καὶ κοινωνία τελειότατον.

- 146 XXXIII. Τελειότητα δὲ καὶ οἱ δυσμενεῖς τῆς ψυχῆς καταπήσσουσιν, ὧν μηκέτι ἐπανίστασθαι δυναμένων ἢ ἀψευδῆς εἰρήνη κρατεῖ. ἡμίεργου δ' ὅσοι σοφίας ἢ πάλιν ἡμιπαγοῦς ἔλαχον, ἀσθενέστεροι ἢ ὥστε ἀμαρτημάτων ἐκ πολλοῦ συγκεκροτημένων καὶ πρὸς ἀλκὴν ἐπιδεδωκότων ἐναντιοῦσθαι
- 147 στίφεσι. διὰ τοῦθ' ὅταν ἐν τῷ τοῦ πολέμου καιρῷ ποιῆται τῆς στρατιᾶς κατάλογον, οὐχ ἅπασαν καλεῖ τὴν νεότητα, κἂν μετὰ προθυμίας τῆς πάσης αὐτοκελεύστῳ χρῆται πρὸς ἐχθρῶν ἄμυναν ἐτοιμότητι, προστάττει δὲ ἀπίοντας οἴκοι καταμείναι, ὡς ἂν ἐκ συνεχοῦς μελέτης τὴν τοῦ ποτε δύνασθαι νικᾶν ἀνὰ κράτος ἰσχύν τε καὶ ἐμπειρίαν εὖρωνται
- 148 κραταιοτάτην. ἡ δὲ πρόσταξις διὰ τῶν τῆς στρατιᾶς γραμματέων γίνεται, ὅταν ὁ πόλεμος ἐγγὺς καὶ ἐπὶ θύραις ὧν ἤδη τυγχάνῃ· ταυτὶ δὲ φήσουσι· “ τίς ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὁ οἰκοδομήσας οἰκίαν καινὴν καὶ οὐκ ἐνεκαίνισεν αὐτήν; πορευέσθω καὶ ἀποστραφήτω εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ, μὴ ἀποθάνῃ ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ καὶ ἄνθρωπος ἕτερος ἐγκαινιεῖ αὐτήν. καὶ τίς ὃς ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα καὶ οὐκ εὐφράνθη ἐξ αὐτοῦ; πορευέσθω καὶ ἀποστραφήτω εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ, μὴ ἀποθάνῃ ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ καὶ ἄνθρωπος ἕτερος εὐφρανθήσεται ἐξ αὐτοῦ. καὶ τίς ἐμνηστεύσατο γυναῖκα καὶ οὐκ ἔλαβεν αὐτήν; πορευέσθω καὶ ἀποστραφήτω εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ, μὴ ἀποθάνῃ ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ καὶ ἄνθρωπος ἕτερος

<sup>1</sup> The translation follows Wend., who supplies after ἀρίστων some such words as καὶ μνήμη χωρὶς διαιρέσεως τῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν ἐναντίων; but see App. 493.

out conning and going over of the things that are best is an incomplete good (as is memory without distinguishing between good things and their opposites), but the meeting and partnership of both in combination is a good most complete and perfect.

XXXIII. Now even men of ill will cower before 146 perfection of soul, and, when they can no longer resist it, genuine peace prevails. But men that have attained to a wisdom half-wrought or, to change the figure, half-baked, are too feeble to stand up against massed bodies of sins that have been long in training and have become increasingly formidable. This is 147
 why, when in time of war the lawgiver is mustering
 the army, he does not summon all the youth, even though it be filled with the utmost zeal and shew readiness that requires no spurring to repel the enemy, but bids them depart and stay at home,
 that as the result of constant practice they may acquire overpowering strength and skill, such as shall enable them one day to win a decisive victory.
 The command is given through the marshals or 148 secretaries<sup>a</sup> of the army, when war is near and already at the very doors. What they are to say is this:
 "Who is the man that has built a new house and has not hanselled it? Let him go and turn back to his house, lest he be killed in the war and another man hansel it. And who is there that has planted
 a vineyard and not been made joyous by its fruits?
 Let him go his way and turn back to his house, lest he die in the war and another have joy from it. And to whom has a wife been promised, whom he has not taken? Let him go his way and turn back to his house, lest he die in the war and another take her "

<sup>a</sup> E.V. "officers."

PHILO

149 | λήψεται αὐτήν.” XXXIV. διὰ τί γάρ, εἴπομι
 [323] ἄν, ὧ θαυμασιώτατε, οὐχὶ τούτους μᾶλλον ἐτέρων
 εἰς τὸν ἀγῶνα τοῦ πολέμου κατατάττειν ἀξιοῖς, οἱ
 γύναια καὶ οἰκίας καὶ ἀμπελώνας καὶ τὴν ἄλλην
 κτήσιν ἀφθονωτάτην περιπεποιήνται; τοὺς γὰρ
 περὶ τῆς τούτων ἀσφαλείας κινδύνους, καὶ εἰ πάντως εἴεν βαρύτατοι, κουφότατα οἴσουσιν· ἐπεὶ
 οἷς γε τῶν λεχθέντων οὐδὲν πρόσεστιν, ἅτε μηδὲν
 ἔχοντες ἀναγκαῖον ἐνέχυρον ὄκνω καὶ ῥαθυμίᾳ τὰ 150 πολλὰ χρήσονται. ἢ παρόσον οὐδενὸς τῶν κτηθέντων ἀπολελεύκασιν, εἶτα μηδ’ ὕστερον δυνηθῶσιν
 ἀπολαῦσαι; τοῖς γὰρ κρατηθείσι τῷ πολέμῳ τίς
 ἀπολείπεται τῶν κτηθέντων ὄνησις; ἀλλ’ οὐχ ἀλώσονται.<sup>1</sup> εὐθύς μὲν οὖν τό γε ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀστρατεύτοις πείσονται· οἴκοι γὰρ καθεζομένων καὶ τρυ-φώντων ἀνάγκη τοὺς τὰ τοῦ πολέμου συντόνως
 δρῶντας ἐχθροὺς οὐκ ἀναιμωτὶ μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ 151 ἀκονιτὶ κρατεῖν. ἀλλὰ τὸ τῶν ἄλλων συμμάχων
 πλῆθος καὶ τὸν ὑπὲρ τούτων ἀγῶνα προθύμως ἀναδέξεται. πρῶτον μὲν ἄτοπον ἐπὶ ταῖς ἐτέρων
 σπουδαῖς ἢ τύχαις ὀρμεῖν, καὶ μάλιστα ὅτε περὶ
 ἀναστάσεως καὶ ἀνδραποδισμοῦ καὶ πορθησεως
 ἰδιός τε καὶ κοινὸς ἐπικρέμαται κίνδυνος, δυναμένους συνδιαφέρεσθαι τὰ τοῦ πολέμου καὶ μῆθ’
 ὑπὸ νόσου μῆθ’ ὑπὸ γήρωσ μῆθ’ ὑπ’ ἄλλης κακοπραγίας μηδεμιᾶς κωλυομένους. ἀρπάσαντας γὰρ
 δεῖ τὰ ὄπλα ἐν ταῖς πρώταις φάλαγξι τούτους καὶ

<sup>1</sup> Wend. prints a mark of interrogation here and in §151 after ἀναδέξεται. The translators have substituted full stops, regarding the sentences in both cases as objections raised by the other side.

<sup>a</sup> The elaborate argument which follows to show that Moses must have intended an intellectual or spiritual warfare
 184

(Deut. xx. 5-7).<sup>a</sup> XXXIV. "For what reason," I 149
 should be inclined to say, "my good friend, do you not think fit to assign these more than others to the conflict of the war, who have secured for themselves
 wives and houses and vineyards and other possessions in lavish abundance? They will bear very lightly, be they ever so heavy, the dangers incurred to keep them safe; while those who have none of the ties mentioned, having nothing vital at stake, will for the most part be sluggish and slack. Or, again, is the fact that they 150 have derived no enjoyment from any of their acquisitions a good reason for depriving them of the possibility of doing so in the future? For what advantage from their possessions remains to the vanquished?"

"Nay but," I think you urge, "they will not be prisoners."

On the contrary, they will at once incur the fate of non-combatants. For enemies vigorously carrying on operations of war are quite sure to become masters of men sitting at home at their ease, not merely without bloodshed but without a struggle.

"Nay," you urge again, "the large forces on their 151 side will gladly undertake to fight for these as well."

In the first place, I reply, it is monstrous to rely on the efforts or good fortune of others, especially when there is the menace hanging over both individual citizens and the city itself of spoliation and deportation and enslavement, and that when they are able to do their part in bearing the burdens of war and are hindered from doing so neither by illness nor by old age nor by any other misfortune.
 It behoves these people to snatch up their weapons takes the form of a dialogue with the γραμματεῖς in which they raise objections in §§ 150, 151, and 155.

PHILO

- ὑπερέχειν τῶν συμμάχων τὰς ἀσπίδας ἐκθύμως
καὶ φιλοκινδύνως μαχομένους. XXXV.
- 152 ἔπειτ' οὐ προδοσίας μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πολλῆς ἀναληθσίας ἐξενηνοχότες ἂν εἶεν δείγματα, εἰ οἱ μὲν
ἄλλοι προπολεμήσουσιν, αὐτοὶ δὲ πρὸς τοῖς οἰκείους
πράγμασιν ἔσονται, καὶ οἱ μὲν τοὺς ὑπὲρ τῆς
ἐκείνων σωτηρίας ἀγῶνας ἀναρρίπτειν θελήσουσιν, οἱ δὲ οὐδὲ τοὺς ὑπὲρ ἑαυτῶν ἀναδέξονται, καὶ οἱ
μὲν ἀσιτίας καὶ χαμευνίας καὶ τὰς ἄλλας σώματός
τε καὶ ψυχῆς κακώσεις ἄσμενοι διὰ τὸν τοῦ νικῆσαι
πόθον καρτερήσουσιν, οἱ δὲ κονιάματα καὶ λήρους, κόσμον ἄψυχον, οἰκίαις περιτιθέντες ἢ τὴν κατ'
ἀγροὺς ὀπώραν δρεπόμενοι καὶ τὰ πιλῆνι' ἄγοντες
ἢ ταῖς ὁμολογηθείσαις ἔκπαλαι παρθένους νῦν πρῶ-τον εἰς ὀμιλίαν ἐρχόμενοι καὶ συνευναζόμενοι ὡς
ἐν ἐπιτηδειοτάτῳ τοῦ γαμεῖν καιρῷ διατελοῦσι;
- 153 καλὸν γε τοίχων ἐπιμελεῖσθαι, προσόδους ἐκλέγειν,
ἐστιᾶσθαι, μεθύειν, θαλαμεύεσθαι, νυμφοστολεῖσθαι
τὰς γεγηρακυίας καὶ σαπράς, τὸ λεγόμενον, ἀλλ'
εἰρήνης ἔργα, ἐν δ' ἔτι ἡβῶντός τε καὶ ἀνθούντος
- 154 ἀκμῇ πολέμου ἄτοπα<sup>1</sup> δρᾶν. ἢ τούτων οὐχ ὁ
πατήρ, οὐκ ἀδελφός, οὐ τῶν ἀφ' αἵματος οὐδεῖς,
οὐ γένους ἐστράτευται, ἀλλὰ πανοίκιος αὐτοῖς ἐμ-
[324] πεφώλευκεν | ἢ δειλία; ἀλλὰ πάντως εἰσὶ μυριοί
τῶν συγγενῶν ἀγωνιζόμενοι. τούτων οὖν τὸν ὑπὲρ
τῆς ψυχῆς κίνδυνον αἰρομένων οἱ χλιδῶντες
καὶ ἀβροδιαίτως ζῶντες τίνας οὐκ ἂν ἀπιθάσους
θῆρας δι' ὑπερβολὴν ὠμότητος παραδράμοιεν;
- 155 ἀλλὰ χαλεπὸν τὸ ἐτέρους ἀπονητὶ τῶν ἡμετέρων

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Tr.: mss. πάντα: Cohn suggested ταῦτα δρᾶν ἀσχιστον. Perhaps πολέμου <πολέμου> πάντα, i.e. in time of war and taking their place in the front ranks to hold their shields over their comrades fighting with a courage that courts danger.

ON HUSBANDRY, 151-155

XXXV. In the next 152 place, they would have given proof not only of treachery but of utter insensibility, if, while the others are to be fighting in their defence, they are to be about their private business ; and while the others are to be willing to stand the hazard of the conflict for their safety, they are not to take the trouble to fight for their own ; and, while the others in their desire for victory are gladly to put up with short rations and sleeping in the field and the other hardships of body and soul, they spend their time in decking their houses with stuccoes and trumperies, poor soulless display ; or getting in the fruit of their orchards and celebrating the vintage festival ; or now for the first time consummating their marriage with the maidens betrothed to them long before, as though this were an ideal season for weddings. 'Tis good to 153 look after walls, to collect rents, to attend banquets, to get tipsy, to indulge in sexual intercourse, for the aged and as the saying is, decayed dames, to be escorted to the bridal chamber, but they are works of peace, and monstrous things to do when war is in full course. Has not a father, has not a brother, has no blood- 154 relation, no member of the clan of these men enlisted ? Has cowardice made their whole family its lair ? Nay, there surely are a host of their kinsfolk at the front. Would not, then, those, who live in ease and luxury while these are imperilling their lives, far surpass in cruelty any savage beasts you can name ?

“ It is hard,” you are thinking, “ that other 155

it is well that all that is done should be things of war. Possibly πολέμου <σα πολέμου>, cf. § 25 above.

PHILO

- ἀπολαῦσαι πόνων. καὶ πότερον χαλεπώτερον ἐχθροὺς ἔτι ζώντων ἢ φίλους καὶ συγγενεῖς τετελευτηκότων ἐπὶ τὸν κλῆρον ἔλθειν; ἢ καὶ τὸ συγκρίνειν τὰ οὕτως μακρὰν ἀφεστῶτα εὔηθες;
- 156 καὶ μὴν εὐλογον μὴ μόνον ὅσα τοῖς ἀστρατεύτοις πρόσσεστιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτοὺς ἐκείνους ἐχθρῶν κεκρατηκότων γενέσθαι κτήματα· τοῖς δέ γε ἀποθνήσκουσιν ὑπὲρ τῆς κοινῆς σωτηρίας, καὶ εἰ μηδενὸς ἀπώναντο<sup>1</sup> πρότερον τῶν κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν, ἡδίστη τελευτὴ γίνεται λογιζομένοις ὅτι πρὸς οὓς ἠὔξαντο διαδόχους τὴν οὐσίαν ἔλθειν ἔρχεται.
- 157 XXXVI. Τὸ μὲν οὖν τοῦ νόμου ῥητὸν τοσαύτας καὶ ἔτι πλείους ἐπισκέψεις ἴσως ἔχει. ὡς δὲ μηδεὶς εὐρεσιλογῶν θρασύνηται τῶν κακοτεχνούντων, ἀλληγοροῦντες φήσομεν ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν οὐ μόνον οἶεται δεῖν ὁ νόμος περὶ τὴν τῶν ἀγαθῶν πονεῖσθαί τινα κτῆσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τὴν τῶν κτηθέντων ἀπόλαυσιν, καὶ τό γε εὐδαιμονεῖν ἀρετῆς χρήσει τελείας περιγενέσθαι νομίζει σῶον καὶ παντελεῆ περιποιούσης βίον· ἔπειθ' ὅτι οὐ περὶ οἰκίας ἢ ἀμπελῶνος ἢ τῆς καθ' ὁμολογίας ἐγγυηθείσης γυναικός ἐστιν ὁ λόγος αὐτῷ, ὅπως τὴν μὲν ὡς μνηστῆρ ἀγάγηται, τοῦ δ' ἀμπελῶνος τὸν καρπὸν ὁ φυτουργὸς ἀποδρεψάμενος καὶ ἀποθλίψας, εἴτ' ἐμπίων μεθύσματος ἀκράτου γανώθῃ, τὴν δ' οἰκίαν ὁ ἀναδειμάμενος οἰκῆσῃ, ἀλλὰ περὶ τῶν people without doing any work should get the benefit of our labours."

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀφ' ὧν ἂν τὸ, which was formerly patched up by reading εἰ μηδενὸς ἀπέλασαν ἀφ' ὧν ἂν τὸ πρότερον εἶχον.

ON HUSBANDRY, 155-157

Pray, which is harder, that enemies should come into the property while we are still alive, or that friends and kinsfolk should do so when we are dead? Nay, 'tis silly even to compare things so wide apart. Again, it is probable not only that all that belongs 156 to those who did not join up should become the property of the victorious enemy, but that they themselves should so become; while to those who are dying for the common salvation, even supposing that they had in former days derived no benefit from the family property, a happy ending comes as they reflect that the property is falling to the heirs to whom it was their prayer that it should fall.

XXXVI. The letter of the Law perhaps suggests 157 all these considerations and more than these. But that no malicious critic may too daringly give rein to his inventive talent, we will leave the letter, and make one or two remarks about the inner meaning of the Law. Firstly, it considers that a man ought to concern himself not only with the acquisition of good things, but with the enjoyment of what he has acquired, and that happiness results from the practice of perfect excellence seeing that such excellence secures a life sound and complete in every way. Secondly, what the Law means is that a man's main consideration is not house or vineyard or the wife already betrothed to him; how he is to take to wife her whom he has wooed and won; how the planter of the vineyard is to cull and crush its fruit, and then drink large draughts of the intoxicating beverage and make his heart glad; or how the man that has built the house is to occupy it; but that the faculties of a

PHILO

κατὰ ψυχὴν δυνάμεων, δι' ὧν συμβέβηκεν ἀρχὰς
 τε λαμβάνειν καὶ προκοπὰς καὶ τελειότητας ἐν 158 πράξεσιν ἐπαινεταῖς· αἱ μὲν τοίνυν ἀρχαὶ περὶ μνηστῆρα φιλοῦσι γίνεσθαι—καθάπερ γὰρ ὁ μνώμενος γυναῖκα μέλλει ἔτι ἀνὴρ<sup>1</sup> οὐ γεγονώς ἤδη, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον ὁ εὐφυῆς εὐγενῆ μὲν καὶ καθαρὰν
 ἄξεσθαι παρθένον, παιδείαν, ἐλπίζει, μνάται δ' αὐτίκα—, αἱ δὲ προκοπαὶ περὶ γεωργόν—ὡς γὰρ
 ἐπιμελὲς τῷ φυτουργῶ τὰ δένδρα αὔξεσθαι, καὶ
 τῷ φιλομαθεῖ τὰ φρονήσεως θεωρήματα ποιῆσαι
 μηκίστην λαβεῖν ἐπίδοσιν—, αἱ δὲ τελειότητες περὶ 159 πῆξιν λαβούσης. XXXVII. ἀρμόττει δὴ πᾶσι τούτοις, ἀρχομένοις, προκόπτοισι, τετελειωμένοις, βιοῦν ἀφιλονείκως καὶ μὴ τῷ τῶν σοφιστῶν ἐπαποδύεσθαι πολέμῳ δύσεριν ταραχὴν ἐπὶ νοθείᾳ
 [325] τάληθοῦς αἰὲ μελετώντων· ἐπειδὴ τάληθές εἰρήνην
 160 φίλον, | ἢ δυσμενῆς αὐτοῖς. εἰ γὰρ εἰς τοῦτον
 ἀφίξονται τὸν ἀγῶνα πρὸς ἐμπειροπολέμους ἰδιῶται, παντελῶς ἀλώσονται· ὁ μὲν ἀρχόμενος, <ὅτι> ἄπειρος, ὁ δὲ προκόπτων, ὅτι ἀτελής, ὁ δὲ τέλειος, ὅτι οὐπω ἄτριβος<sup>2</sup> ἀρετῆς· δεῖ δ' ὡσπερ τὰ κονιά-
 ματα στηριχθῆναι βεβαίως καὶ λαβεῖν πῆξιν, οὕτως

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Tr.: mss. μέλλων ἐπὶ ἀνὴρ. Adler proposes μέλλων ἐπὶ ἀνδρῶσθαι or ἐπὶ ἀνδρὸς εἶναι. Wendland suggested μέλλει γενέσθαι ἀνὴρ.

<sup>2</sup> Sic mss. Emendations proposed are οὐπω ἐντριβῆς or ἔτι ἀτριβῆς (? πω ἀτριβῆς, the usage being perhaps defensible with the implied negative in ἀτριβῆς).

---

<sup>a</sup> Or the passage may be taken as follows: "The lawgiver is not speaking of house or vineyard. . . . He does not wish that he should take to wife . . . But he is speaking of the man's soul are a man's main consideration.<sup>a</sup> Through these he can make a beginning, make progress, and reach perfection in praiseworthy doings. Beginnings 158 are seen in a wooer, for, just as he who is wooing a woman has wedlock still in futurity not being already a husband, in the same way the well-constituted man looks forward to one day marrying Discipline, a high-born and pure maiden, but for the present he is her wooer. Progress is seen in the work of the husbandman, for, as it is the planter's care that the trees should grow, so is it the earnest student's care to bring it about that the principles of sound sense shall receive the utmost development. Perfection is to be seen in the building of a house, which is receiving its finishing touches, but has not yet become quite compact and firmly settled. XXXVII. It 159 befits all these, the beginners, those making progress, and those who have reached perfection, to live without contention, refusing to engage in the war waged by the sophists, with their unceasing practice of quarrelsomeness and disturbance to the adulteration of the truth: for the truth is dear to peace, and peace has no liking for them. If our friends do come 160 into this conflict, mere unprofessionals engaging trained and seasoned fighters, they will undoubtedly get the worst of it; the beginner because he lacks experience, the man who is progressing, because he is incomplete, the man who has reached completeness, because he is still unpractised in virtue. It is requisite, just as it is that plaster should become firm and fixed and acquire solidity,<sup>b</sup> so too that the faculties of a man's soul;” cf. for this use of ὁ λόγος αὐτῶ, “he is not speaking about,” § 88 above.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 493.

PHILO

- τὰς τῶν τελειωθέντων ψυχὰς κραταιωθείσας παγιώ-
 τερον ἰδρυθῆναι μελέτῃ συνεχεῖ καὶ γυμνάσμασιν 161 ἐπαλλήλοις. οἱ δὲ μὴ τούτων τυγχάνοντες παρὰ
 τοῖς φιλοσόφοις διαλεληθότες εἶναι λέγονται σοφοί· τοὺς γὰρ ἄχρι σοφίας ἄκρας ἐληλακότας καὶ τῶν
 ὄρων αὐτῆς ἄρτι πρῶτον ἀψαμένους ἀμήχανον
 εἰδέναί φασὶ τὴν ἑαυτῶν τελείωσιν· μὴ γὰρ κατὰ
 τὸν αὐτὸν χρόνον ἄμφω συνίστασθαι, τὴν τε πρὸς
 τὸ πέρας ἄφιξιν καὶ τὴν τῆς ἀφίξεως κατάληψιν, ἀλλ' εἶναι μεθόριον ἄγνοιαν, οὐ τὴν μακρὰν ἀπεληλαμένην ἐπιστήμης, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἐγγὺς καὶ ἀγχι-162 θυρον αὐτῇ. τοῦ μὲν οὖν καταλαμβάνοντος καὶ συνιέντος καὶ τὰς ἑαυτοῦ δυνάμεις ἐπισταμένου
 ἄκρως γένοιτ' ἂν ἔργον πολεμῆσαι τῷ φιλέριδι
 καὶ σοφιστικῶ στίφει· νικήσειν γὰρ τὸν τοιοῦτον
 ἐλπίς. ᾧ δὲ ἔτι τὸ ἀγνοίας ἐπιπροσθεῖ σκότος,
 μήπω τοῦ τῆς ἐπιστήμης ἀναλάμψαι φέγγους
 ἰσχυκῦτος, ἀσφαλὲς οἴκοι καταμεῖναι, τουτέστιν
 εἰς τὴν περὶ ὧν ἄκρως οὐ κατείληφε μὴ παρελθεῖν 163 ἄμιλλαν, ἀλλ' ἠρεμησαί τε καὶ ἡσυχάσαι. ὁ δ'
 ὑπ' αὐθαδείας ἐξενεχθεὶς, τὰ παλαίσματα τῶν ἀντιπάλων οὐκ εἰδὼς πρὶν δρᾶσαι παθεῖν φθί-σεται καὶ τὸν ἐπιστήμης θάνατον ἐνδέξεται, ὅς
 ἐστὶν ἀργαλεώτερος τοῦ ψυχῆν καὶ σῶμα διακρίνον-164 τος. ὀφείλει δὲ τοῦτο συμβαίνειν τοῖς πρὸς τῶν σοφισμάτων ἀπατωμένοις· ὅταν γὰρ τὰς λύσεις
 αὐτῶν εὐρεῖν μὴ δυνηθῶσιν, ὡς ἀληθέσι τοῖς

* See App. p. 493.

ON HUSBANDRY, 160-164

souls of those that have been perfected should become more firmly settled, strengthened by constant practice and continual exercise. Those who do not enjoy these advantages have the name among the philosophers of wise men unconscious of their wisdom.<sup>a</sup> For they say that it is out of the question that those who have sped as far as the edge of wisdom and have just come for the first time into contact with its borders should be conscious of their own perfecting, that both things cannot come about at the same time, the arrival at the goal and the apprehension of the arrival, but that ignorance must form a border-land between the two, not that ignorance which is far removed from knowledge, but that which is close at hand and hard by her door. It will, then, be the business of him who fully apprehends and understands the subject and thoroughly knows his own powers, to go to war with the strife-loving band of sophists ; for there is ground for expecting that such an one will be the conqueror. But for him whose eyes are still covered by the darkness of ignorance, the light of knowledge not being strong enough as yet to shine out, it is safe to stay at home, that is, not to come forward for the contest about matters which he has not fully apprehended, but to keep still and be quiet. But he who has been carried away by presumption, not knowing his opponents' grips and throws, before he can be an agent will quickly be a victim and experience the death of knowledge, which is a far more woeful death than that which severs soul and body. This is bound to befall those who are cheated by sophistries ; for they fail to find the way to refute these, and owing to their having regarded false statements as true and given κατεψευσμένοις πεπιστευκότες ἀποθνήσκουσι βίον

PHILO

 τὸν τῆς ἐπιστήμης ταύτων πεπονθότες τοῖς ὑπὸ
 κολάκων φενακιζομένοις· καὶ γὰρ τούτων ἢ τῆς
 ψυχῆς ὑγιαίνουσα καὶ ἀληθῆς ὑπὸ τῆς φύσει νοσερᾶς 165 ἐξωθεῖται καὶ ἀνατρέπεται φιλίας. XXXVIII.
 συμβουλευτέον οὖν εἰς τοὺς τοιούτους ἀγῶνας μὴ
 παρέρχεσθαι τοῖς τε ἀρχομένοις τοῦ μαθάνειν—
 ἀνεπιστήμονες γάρ—καὶ τοῖς προκόπτουσι, διότι οὐ
 τέλειοι, καὶ τοῖς πρῶτον τελειωθείσι, διότι λέληθεν 166 αὐτοὺς ἄχρι πῆ τελειότης. τῶν δὲ ἀπειθησάντων
 ἄλλος, φησί, ἄνθρωπος τὴν μὲν οἰκίαν οἰκῆσει, τὸν δ' ἀμπελῶνα κτήσεται, τὴν δὲ γυναικα ἄξεται·
 τὸ δ' ἐστὶν ἴσον τῷ αἰ λεχθεῖσαι δυνάμεις σπουδῆς,
 [326] βελτιώσεως, τελειώσεως | ἐπιλείψουσι μὲν οὐδέ-
 ποτε, ἄλλοτε δὲ ἄλλοις ἐνομιλήσουσιν ἀνθρώποις
 ἐπιφοιτῶσαι καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς οὐ τὰς αὐτὰς * * *<sup>1</sup> 167 ἀμείβουσαι, σφραγίσιν<sup>2</sup> ὁμοιούμεναι. καὶ γὰρ αὐται τὸν κηρὸν ἐπειδὴν τυπώσωσι, παθοῦσαι μηδὲν ἀπ'
 αὐτῶν εἶδος ἐγχαράξασαι μένουσιν ἐν ὁμοίῳ· κἄν
 ὁ τυπωθεὶς συγχυθῆ κηρὸς καὶ ἀφανισθῆ, πάλιν
 ἕτερος ὑποβληθήσεται. ὥστε, ὦ γενναῖοι, μὴ
 νομίσητε φθειρομένοις συμφθειρεσθαι τὰς δυνάμεις
 ὑμῖν· ἀθάνατοι γὰρ οὖσαι μυρίους ἄλλους πρὸ ὑμῶν ἀσπάζονται τῆς ἀπ' αὐτῶν εὐκλείας,<sup>3</sup> οὓς ἂν αἰσθωνται μὴ ὥσπερ ὑμᾶς διὰ τὸ ριψοκίνδυνον
 ἀποδεδρακότας τὴν ὁμιλίαν αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ προσ-

<sup>1</sup> The translation follows Wend., who suggests οὐ τὰς αὐτὰς <ἀεὶ κατοικοῦσαι, ἀλλ' ἐξ ἄλλων ἄλλας> ἀμείβουσαι. An alternative is to limit the corruption to ἀμείβουσαι. Mangey ἀπομάττουσαι.

<sup>2</sup> mss. σφόδρα γ' εἰσιν.

<sup>3</sup> The genitive is hardly defensible. Wend. proposes ἀσπάζονται <μεταδιδούσαι>, Cohn τῆ . . . εὐκλείᾳ.

ON HUSBANDRY, 164-167

them credence, they die so far as the life of knowledge is concerned. Their experience is the same as that of those who are taken in by flatterers : for in their case, too, the true and healthy friendship of the soul is thrust out and overturned by the friendship that is essentially unwholesome. XXXVIII. 165 We must therefore advise those, who are beginning to learn, to decline such contests, owing to their lack of knowledge ; those who are making progress, owing to their not being perfect ; and those who have just attained perfection, because they are to some extent unconscious of their perfectness. As 166 for those who disregard this bidding, it says of each of them, another man shall live in his house, shall become owner of his vineyard, shall marry his betrothed. This is equivalent to saying, " the faculties <sup>a</sup> mentioned of keenness to learn, of improvement, of becoming perfect, shall indeed never fail, but they associate with one man at one time, with another man at another time, going about and not tenanting the same souls always and changing from soul to soul. In this the faculties resemble 167 seals ; for these too, when they have stamped the wax, unaffected by the impressions they have made, after engraving an image on it remain as they were, and if the impression on the wax gets blurred and effaced, other wax will be substituted for it. So do not imagine, good sirs, that the faculties decay when you do. They are immortal, and ready to welcome ten thousand others in preference to you to the fame gained from them. These are all whom they perceive not to have shunned their converse as you did, owing to your foolhardiness, but to draw

<sup>a</sup> Or " talents."

PHILO

- 168 ίόντας καὶ θεραπευτικῶς ἀσφαλείας ἔχοντας. εἰ δέ τις ἀρετῆς φίλος, εὐχέσθω τὰ καλὰ πάντα ἐμφυτευθῆναί τε αὐτῷ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ ψυχῆς φανῆναι καθάπερ ἐν ἀνδριάντι καὶ γραφῇ τελεία τὰς εἰς εὐμορφίαν συμμετρίας, λογιζόμενος ὅτι εἰσὶν ἔφεδροι μυρίοι, οἷς ἢ φύσις ἀντ' αὐτοῦ δωρήσεται ταῦτα πάντα, εὐμαθείας, προκοπὰς, τελειότητος. ἄμεινον δὲ πρὸ ἐκείνων αὐτὸν ἐκλάμψαι ταμιευόμενον τὰς ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ δοθείσας ἀσφαλῶς χάριτας καὶ μὴ προενεγκόντα πόρθησιν ἔχθροῖς ἀφειδοῦσιν ἐτοιμοτάτην λείαν παρασχεῖν.
- 169 XXXIX. Οὐκοῦν βραχὺ ὄφελος ἀρχῆς, ἣν τέλος αἴσιον οὐκ ἐσφράγισται. πολλάκις μέντοι καὶ τελειωθέντες τινὲς ἀτελεῖς ἐνομίσθησαν τῷ παρὰ τὴν ἰδίαν προθυμίαν, ἀλλὰ μὴ κατ' ἐπιφροσύνην θεοῦ βελτιωθῆναι δόξαι, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο μέντοι <τὸ> δόξαι μετεωρισθέντες<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐξαρθέντες ἐπὶ μῆκιστον ἀφ' ὑψηλοτέρων χωρίων εἰς ἔσχατον κατενεχ-
- 170 θέντες βυθὸν ἠφανίσθησαν. "ἔαν" γάρ φησιν "οἰκοδομήσης οἰκίαν καινὴν, καὶ ποιήσεις στεφάνην τῷ δώματί σου, καὶ οὐ ποιήσεις φόνον ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ σου, ἔαν πέσῃ ὁ πεσὼν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ."
- 171 πτωμάτων γὰρ ἀργαλεώτατον θεοῦ τιμῆς ἀποπεσεῖν ὀλισθόντα, στεφανώσαντα πρὸ ἐκείνου ἑαυτὸν καὶ φόνον ἐμφύλιον ἐργασάμενον· κτείνει γὰρ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ψυχὴν ὃ μὴ τὸ ὄν τιμῶν, ὡς ἀνόνητον αὐτῷ γενέσθαι παιδείας τὸ οἰκοδόμημα.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. νεωτερισθέντες.

---

<sup>a</sup> So the LXX, which Philo takes to mean "for fear you yourself fall." The E.V. "that thou bring not blood upon thy house, if any man fall from thence" gives the real sense better.

near and pay great heed to safety. If any man be 168
 a lover of virtue, let him pray that all fair things may not only be implanted in him, but may shew themselves upon the surface of his soul, as do the exquisite proportions of beauty in a statue and a perfect portrait. Let him consider that there are myriads waiting to follow him, on whom in his stead Nature will bestow all the boons of which we have been thinking, the gift of quickness to learn, that of making progress, that of attaining perfection. Is it not better that, instead of leaving it to them, he should himself shine out and be a retentive steward of God's gracious gifts, and that he should not, by gratuitously offering an opportunity for plunder, supply
 ruthless foes with booty lying ready to their hand?

XXXIX. Little advantage, therefore, is there in a 169
 beginning to which a right ending has not set its seal.
 Quite frequently persons who had attained perfection
 have been accounted imperfect owing to their fancying that their improvement was due to their own zeal and not to the directing care of God. Owing to this fancy they were lifted up and greatly exalted, and so came to be borne down from lofty regions into the lowest abyss and so lost to sight: for we read,
 "If thou shalt build a new house, then shalt thou 170
 also make a parapet round thy roof, and so thou shalt not cause death in thy house, if the faller from it falls"<sup>a</sup> (Deut. xxii. 8). For there is no fall so 171 grievous as to slip and fall away from rendering honour to God, through ascribing the victory to oneself instead of to Him, and so being the perpetrator of the murder of one's kin. For he that fails to honour That which IS slays his own soul, so that the edifice of instruction ceases to be of use to him. In-

PHILO

- παιδεία δὲ φύσιν ἔλαχε τὴν ἀγήρω, διόπερ καινὴν
 εἶπε τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτῆς· τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλα χρόνῳ φθείρεται, ἢ δ' ἐφ' ὅσον πρόεισιν, ἐπὶ μῆκιστον
 ἦβᾶ καὶ ἐπακμάζει τὸ ἀειθαλὲς εἶδος φαιδρυνομένη 172 καὶ ταῖς συνεχέσις ἐπιμελείαις καινουμένη. κὰν
 [327] τοῖς | προτρεπτικοῖς μέντοι παραινεῖ τοὺς κτήσιον
 ἀγαθῶν λαχόντας πλείστην μὴ ἑαυτοὺς ἀναγράψαι
 τῆς κτήσεως αἰτίους, ἀλλὰ “μνησθῆναι θεοῦ τοῦ 173 διδόντος ἰσχὺν ποιῆσαι δύναμιν.” τοῦτο μὲν οὖν τὸ εὐπραγίας ἦν πέρας, ἀρχαὶ δ' ἐκείναι· ὥστε
 τοὺς ἐκλανθανομένους τοῦ τέλους μηδὲ τῆς τῶν κτηθέντων ἀρχῆς εὖ ἂν ἔτ' ἀπόνασθαι.<sup>1</sup> τούτοις μὲν οὖν ἐκούσια γίνεται διὰ φιλαυτίαν τὰ
 σφάλματα οὐχ ὑπομένουσι τὸν φιλόδωρον<sup>2</sup> καὶ τελεσφόρον θεὸν αἴτιον ἀποφῆναι τῶν ἀγαθῶν.
 174 XL. εἰσὶ δ' οἱ πάντα κάλων εὐσεβείας ἀνασεισαντες ἐνορμίσασθαι τοῖς λιμέσιον αὐτῆς ταχυναυτοῦντες
 ἐσπούδασαν, κᾶπειτ' οὐ μακρὰν ἀφεστηκότων,
 ἀλλ' ἤδη μελλόντων προσέχειν, αἰφνίδιον ἐξ ἐναντίας καταρραγὲν πνεῦμα πλησίον<sup>3</sup> εὐθυδρομοῦν
 τὸ σκάφος ἀνέωσεν, ὡς<sup>4</sup> ὑποκεῖραι πολλὰ τῶν πρὸς 175 εὐπλοῖαν συνεργούντων. τούτους οὐκ ἂν τις ἔτι θαλαττεύοντας αἰτιάσαιτο· ἀκούσιος γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἐπειγομένοις<sup>5</sup> γέγονεν ἡ βραδυτής· τίς οὖν ἀπεικά-
 ζεται τούτοις ἢ ὁ τὴν μεγάλην λεγομένην εὐξάμενος

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐπαπόνασθαι.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. θεόφιλον.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. πλησίον.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. ἀνώσεως or ἀνέσεως.

<sup>5</sup> MSS. ἐπιγιγνόμενος, -η.

---

<sup>a</sup> The vow of the Nazarite is called (as in Leg. All. i. 17) “the great vow” from Numb. vi. 2 ὅς ἐστιν μεγάλην εὐξῆται εὐχὴν (R.V. “a special vow”). For Philo’s interpretation cf. Quod Deus 89, 90, where also the contact with the corpse is treated as an “involuntary” error.

ON HUSBANDRY, 171-175

struction has obtained the nature that never grows old, and for this reason her house is called "new." For whereas other things decay by lapse of time, she, however far she advances, retains the bloom of youth and is in her prime all along, radiant with unfailling loveliness, and renewing her freshness by her unceasing diligence. Moreover in his Exhortations the lawgiver charges those who have obtained large possession of good things not to inscribe themselves in their hearts as authors of their wealth, but "to remember God Who giveth strength to acquire power" (Deut. viii. 18). This remembrance, then, was in his eyes the goal of prosperity, the putting forth of power the beginning: the consequence of this being that those who forget the end of their acquisitions cannot any longer derive real benefit from their beginning. The disasters which befall these men are self-chosen, the outcome of selfishness. They cannot bear to acknowledge as the Author of the good things which they enjoy the God Who brings to perfection the gifts which He loves to bestow. XL. But there are others who, with every stitch of piety's canvas spread, have used every effort to make a quick voyage, and to come to anchor in her harbours, and then, when they were no distance away, but on the very point of coming to land, a violent head-wind has suddenly burst upon them, and driven the vessel straight back, stripping her of much of the gear on which her seaworthiness depended. No one would find fault with these men for being still at sea; for the delay was contrary to their wish and befell them when they were making all speed. Who, then, resembles these men? Who but he who vowed what is called the great Vow<sup>a</sup>? For he says:

PHILO

- εὐχὴν; “ εἰ γὰρ τις ” φησὶν “ ἀποθάνῃ ἐπ’ αὐτῷ αἰφνίδιον, παραχρῆμα μιανθήσεται ἢ κεφαλὴ εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ξυρήσεται.” εἶτα ὀλίγα προσειπὼν ἐπιφέρει· “ αἱ δ’ ἡμέραι αἱ πρότεροι ἄλογοι ἔσονται,
- 176 ὅτι ἐμιάνθη κεφαλὴ εὐχῆς αὐτοῦ.” δι’ ἀμφοτέρων τοίνυν, τοῦ τε “ αἰφνίδιον ” καὶ τοῦ “ παραχρῆμα ” εἰπεῖν, ἢ ἀκούσιος παρίσταται τῆς ψυχῆς τροπῆ· πρὸς μὲν <γὰρ> τὰ ἐκούσια τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων εἰς τὸ βουλευσασθαι ποῦ καὶ πότε καὶ πῶς πρακτέον χρόνου δεῖ, τὰ δὲ ἀκούσια ἐξαίφνης, ἀπερισκέπτως καί, εἰ οἶόν τε τοῦτ’ εἰπεῖν, ἀχρόνως
- 177 κατασκήπτει. χαλεπὸν γὰρ ὡσπερ τοὺς δρομεῖς ἀρξαμένους ὁδοῦ τῆς πρὸς εὐσέβειαν ἀπταιστώσως καὶ ἀπνευστὶ διευθῆναι τὸν δρόμον, ἐπειδὴ μυρία
- 178 ἐμποδῶν παντὶ τῷ γενομένῳ. πρότερον μὲν <οὖν>, ὃ ἔν καὶ μόνον εὐεργεσία, μηδενὸς τῶν κατὰ γνώμην ἀδικημάτων ἐφάψασθαι πᾶσάν τε τὴν ἀμῆχανον τῶν ἐκουσίων<sup>1</sup> πληθὺν ἰσχυῖσαι διώσασθαι· δεύτερον δὲ τὸ μήτε πολλοῖς τῶν ἀκουσίων μήτ’ ἐπὶ μήκιστον χρόνον ἐνδιατρῆψαι.
- 179 Παγκάλως δὲ τὰς τῆς ἀκουσίου τροπῆς ἡμέρας εἶπεν ἀλόγους, οὐ μόνον ἐπειδὴ τὸ ἀμαρτάνειν ἄλογον, ἀλλ’ ὅτι καὶ τῶν ἀκουσίων λόγον οὐκ ἔστιν ἀποδοῦναι. παρὸ καὶ πυνθανομένων πολλάκις τὰς τῶν |
- [328] πραγμάτων αἰτίας φαμέν μήτ’ εἰδέναι μήτ’ εἰπεῖν δύνασθαι· μήτε γὰρ γιγνομένων συμπαραληφθῆναι,

<sup>1</sup> So MSS. Wend. ἀκουσίων, i.e. the ideal course is to avoid both kinds of offence, the next best to avoid the “voluntary” and to minimize the “involuntary.” But since the “occasions of the involuntary are infinite” (§ 179), the ideal can rarely be reached (§ 180).

<sup>a</sup> In Quod Deus 90 they are not worth counting.

ON HUSBANDRY, 175-179

“ If someone die suddenly beside him, the head of his vow shall forthwith be defiled, and he shall shave it.” Then, after a few more words, he adds, “ The former days shall be void, because the head of his vow was defiled ” (Numb. vi. 9, 12). The involuntary nature 176 of the soul’s failure is evidenced by both of the words which he uses, “ sudden ” and “ forthwith,” for whereas in the case of deliberate sins time is required for planning where and when and how the thing is to be done, unintentional sins swoop upon us suddenly, without thought, and if we may so say, in no time. For it is difficult for the runners, as we may call them, 177 after starting on the way to piety, to finish the whole course without stumbling, and without stopping to draw breath ; for every man born meets ten thousand obstacles. The first need then, which is the one 178 and only thing that is “ well-doing,” is never to put hand to any deliberate wrong-doing, and to have strength to thrust from us the countless host of voluntary offences ; the second not to fall into many involuntary offences, nor to continue long in the practice of them.

Right well did he say that the days of the involun- 179 tary failure were void (ἀλόγους) not only because to sin is void of reason (ἄλογον) but also because it is impossible to render an account (λόγον) of involuntary sins.<sup>a</sup> Accordingly, when people inquire after the motives for things that have been done,<sup>b</sup> we often say that we neither know nor are able to tell them : for that when they were being done we were not taken <sup>b</sup> Apparently meaning “ our motives for what we have done.” Philo seems to be expressing in a curiously strong way the feeling that our “ involuntary ” errors are something quite independent of us. They treat us as strangers and we are taken aback when we find that they have happened.

PHILO

- 180 ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν ἄφιξιν αὐτῶν ἀγνοῆσαι. σπάνιον οὖν εἶ τω δωρήσεται ὁ θεὸς ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἄχρι τέλους σταδιεῦσαι τὸν βίον μὴτ' ὀκλάσαντι μὴτ' ὀλισθόντι, ἀλλ' ἑκατέραν φύσιν ἀδικημάτων, ἐκουσίων τε καὶ ἀκουσίων, ῥύμη καὶ φορᾶ τάχους ὠκυδρομωτάτου ὑπερπτήναι.
- 181 Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἀρχῆς τε πέρι καὶ τέλους εἴρηται διὰ Νῶε τὸν δίκαιον, ὃς τὰ πρῶτα καὶ στοιχειώδη τῆς γεωργικῆς κτησάμενος τέχνης ἄχρι τῶν περάτων αὐτῆς ἐλθεῖν ἠσθένησε· λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι “ἤρξατο γῆς εἶναι γεωργός,” οὐ τῶν ὄρων τῶν ἄκρας ἐπιστήμης ἐλάβετο. τὰ δὲ περὶ τῆς φυτουργίας εἰρημένα αὐτοῦ λέγωμεν αὖθις.

ON HUSBANDRY, 179-181

into confidence, nay, that they arrived without our knowing it. 'Tis a rare event then if God shall vouch- 180 safe to a man to run life's course from beginning to end without slackening or slipping, and to avoid each kind of transgressions, voluntary and involuntary, by flying past them, in the vehement rush of matchless speed.

These remarks on beginning and end have been 181
made apropos of Noah the righteous man who, after making himself master of the elements of the science of husbandry, had not the strength to reach its final stages, for it is said that " he began to be a husbandman," not that he reached the furthest limits of full knowledge. What is said about his work as a planter let us tell at another time.

CONCERNING NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER
(DE PLANTATIONE)

ANALYTICAL INTRODUCTION

THE first part of this treatise, extending to the end of § 139, treats firstly of God's planting and then of man learning to copy His work. The second part (§ 140 onwards) should be entitled Περὶ μέθης, for it deals with the vine only with respect to its fruit. The title of the treatise is, therefore, inappropriate.

A. 1-139

(a) 1-72. The first Planter and His plant.

(a) 1-27. The universe and its component parts planted.

(β) 28-31. Trees planted in man, the microcosm.

(γ) 32-46. The names of the two trees in Eden point to an allegorical interpretation. "Eden" is "delight" in the Lord. "Eastward" is "in the light." "The tree of Life" is the man of Gen. i. 27 in the image of God. The earthly man of Gen. ii. is placed in Paradise to be tested amid the virtues, the plants of a rational soul.

(δ) 47 ff. That Israel, God's special inheritance, may be planted in Eden is Moses' prayer.

(ε) 62-72. God the Portion of Inheritance of Levi and of those who have the Levite mind.

PHILO

(b) Lessons learned from the First Planter, and copies of His planting (73-139).

(a) 74-93. Abraham's planting (Gen. xxi. 33). The tree the "hide" of 10,000 cubits; the place the well, which is without water (Gen. xxvi. 32 LXX), and so symbolic of the fruitless search for knowledge, and of the discovery of our own ignorance; the fruit the invocation of the Name "Eternal God," which connotes "Benefactor," whereas "Lord" connotes "Master."

(β) 94-139. Our planting (Lev. xix. 23-25). Ere we can plant fruit trees we must migrate to the God-given land, i.e. the mind must find the way of Wisdom. The beginner bidden to prune, i.e. cut out all hurtful things, e.g. the harlot and the toady from Friendship, superstition from Religion. Jacob's peeled rods and the leper's flesh, both white all over, serve as a pattern. Philo attempts to explain the command to prune the fruit itself.

The fourth year, in which the fruit is "holy for praise to the Lord" leads to a discourse on the number 4, on praise as the fruit of education, on thanksgiving as creation's chief duty, illustrated by the story of the birth of Mnemosyne. As the fifth year is ours for food, after the fourth year of thanksgiving, so "Issachar" or "Reward" was born next after "Judah" or "Praise."

B. 140-177

We now pass on to the vine-culture of Noah. As the vine is the means of Drunkenness (and the just man made himself drunk with it), we have to consider the subject of drunkenness. Moses' views will be given later (in De Ebrietate). Let us now examine 208

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER

what the philosophical schools say about it.<sup>a</sup> They put the question thus, "Will the wise man get drunk?" (139-141). But before stating the arguments on either side, we note that the term "get drunk" (μεθύειν) may be used for hard drinking (οἰνοῦσθαι) simply,<sup>b</sup> or for drinking carried to the point of foolish behaviour (ληρῆϊν). All condemn the latter, but one school holds that if μεθύειν is used in the less offensive sense, the wise man may freely indulge in it; another,<sup>c</sup> "that he cannot safely do so, and will therefore avoid all carousals, unless social duties necessitate his participation in them."

<sup>a</sup> Various opinions have been held as to the provenance of the disquisition which follows. It of course definitely disclaims originality, though as a matter of fact parts of it (e.g. §§ 168 f.) are evidently comments interpolated by Philo himself. Pearson in Journal of Philology 1907 regarded it as Peripatetic. Arnim, who discussed it very fully in his Quellen-Studien zu Philo, believes that Philo is here representing the views of a contemporary Stoic, but a Stoic of a free-thinking type, who had taken over a good deal of Peripateticism. Some of his reasons for this will be found in the Notes to §§ 171 f. The translators are rather inclined to agree with Heinemann that the discourse, at least from § 149 onwards, is rather of the rhetorical and epideictic type. We would suggest that the writer or speaker whom Philo is quoting or adapting, though conversant with philosophical terms, is not propounding a definite philosophical opinion, but merely endeavouring by a series of ingenious quibbles to show that the Stoic maxim the wise man will drink freely (οἰνωθήσεται), but will not get drunk (μεθυσθήσεται), will not hold water.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. St. John ii. 10 ὅταν μεθυσθῶσι, where the A.V. translated "when men have well drunk," the R. V. "have drunk freely."

<sup>c</sup> Arnim holds that three schools of thought are mentioned. See note on § 145.

PHILO

The arguments of the thesis : " The wise man will get drunk " are now stated.<sup>a</sup>

(1) As μέθυ and οἶνος are admittedly synonyms, their derivatives μεθύειν and οἰνοῦσθαι must be synonyms also. (This is preceded by a disquisition on " homonyms " and " synonyms. ") (§§ 149-155.)

(2) μεθύειν is properly μετὰ τὸ θύειν, (" after sacrificing "), and the ancient and right use of wine was orderly and religious in marked contrast to present custom. If μεθύειν is used in this sense, it is suitable to the wise man (§§ 156-164).

(3) Another derivation of μεθύειν is from μέθεσις (relaxation), and the blessings of relaxation and cheerfulness are pointed out.

(4) A dialectical argument, that, as soberness is found in the fool as well as in the wise man, its opposite, drunkenness, is common to both (§ 172).

(5) An argument from the use of the term μέθη in various writers, showing that they identified μεθύειν with οἰνοῦσθαι, and did not associate it with λῆρος (§§ 173 f.).

At this point the disputant professes to meet the arguments of the other side. The first of these is <sup>a</sup> It will be observed (a) that of these arguments 1, 2, 3, and 5 merely attempt to show that μεθύειν may be used in the milder sense: (β) that no attempt is made to defend λῆρος, which is definitely disclaimed in (5). The disputant, in fact, though professing to argue for the " wise man will get drunk," is really arguing for the first half of the Stoic maxim " the wise man will drink freely, but will not get drunk." Note further that little or no attempt is made to meet the view of the more rigid school described in § 143, which held that hard drinking, though not wrong in itself, might lead to evil.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER

the argument of Zeno, that, since no man could trust the drunken man with a secret, drunkenness is unsuitable to the wise man. This is refuted (§§ 175-177). The rest of the disquisition is lost.<sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> It seems to be generally assumed that, after one or more further arguments had been disposed of, the debate ended ; in other words, that Philo only quotes one speech (or treatise) which, though it professed to meet the arguments of opponents, was throughout in support of the thesis : " that the wise man will get drunk." It seems to the translators more likely that not only the end of the supporter's speech, but also the whole of the opponent's answer has been lost. It is a favourite device of rhetoricians to choose out the weakest arguments on the opposite side and demolish them beforehand. It is noteworthy that the argument refuted in §§ 176 ff. is one which, though put forward by Zeno, was rejected by the later Stoics (see note on § 176).

ΠΕΡΙ ΦΥΤΟΥΡΓΙΑΣ ΝΩΕ ΤΟ ΔΕΥΤΕΡΟΝ

- <sup>1</sup>
 [329] I. | Ἐν μὲν τῷ προτέρῳ βιβλίῳ τὰ περὶ γεωργικῆς τέχνης γενικῆς, ὅσα καιρὸς ἦν, εἶπομεν, ἐν δὲ τούτῳ περὶ τῆς κατ' εἶδος ἀμπελουργικῆς, ὡς ἂν οἶόν τε ἦ, ἀποδώσομεν. τὸν γὰρ δίκαιον οὐ γεωργὸν μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἰδίως ἀμπελουργὸν εἰσάγει φάσκων· “ ἤρξατο Νῶε ἄνθρωπος εἶναι γεωργὸς γῆς καὶ ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα.”
- <sup>2</sup> προσήκει δὲ τὸν μέλλοντα περὶ τῶν κατὰ μέρος φυτουργιῶν<sup>1</sup> τε καὶ γεωργιῶν διεξιέναι κατανοῆσαι πρῶτον τὰ τελειότατα τοῦ παντὸς φυτὰ καὶ τὸν μέγαν φυτουργὸν καὶ ἐπιστάτην αὐτῶν. ὁ μὲν τοίνυν τῶν φυτουργῶν μέγιστος καὶ τὴν τέχνην τελειότατος ὁ τῶν ὄλων ἡγεμῶν ἐστι, φυτὸν δὲ αὐ<sup>2</sup> περιέχον ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὰ ἐν μέρει φυτὰ ἅμα<sup>3</sup> παμμυρία καθάπερ κληματίδας ἐκ μιᾶς ἀνα-
<sup>3</sup> βλαστάνοντα ρίζης ὅδε ὁ κόσμος. ἐπειδὴ γὰρ τὴν οὐσίαν ἄτακτον καὶ συγκεχυμένην οὖσαν ἐξ αὐτῆς εἰς τάξιν ἐξ ἀταξίας καὶ ἐκ συγχύσεως εἰς διακρίσιν ἄγων ὁ κοσμοπλάστης μορφοῦν ἤρξατο,
 [330] γῆν μὲν καὶ ὕδωρ ἐπὶ τὸ μέσον ἐρρίζου, τὰ | δὲ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. φυτῶν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. οὐ.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἀλλά.

CONCERNING NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER

BOOK II

I. We have said in the former book all that the 1
occasion called for regarding the husbandman's art in general. In this book we shall give such an account as we can of the art of a vine-dresser in particular.
For Moses introduces the righteous man not as a husbandman only, but specially as a vine-dresser ;
his words are : " Noah began to be a husbandman
tilling the ground, and he planted a vineyard "
(Gen. ix. 20).

It is incumbent on one, 2
who is going to discourse on the work of planters
and husbandmen as carried on in this or that place,
to begin by marking well the plants set in the universe,
those most perfect of all plants, and their great Planter and Overseer. It is the Lord of all things that is the greatest of planters and most perfect Master of His art. It is this World that is a plant containing in itself the particular plants all at once in their myriads, like shoots springing from a single root. For, when the Framer of the World, finding 3
all that existed confused and disordered of itself,
began to give it form, by bringing it out of disorder
into order, out of confusion into distinction of parts,
He caused earth and water to occupy the position of

PHILO

αἲρος καὶ πυρὸς δένδρα πρὸς τὴν μετάρσιον
 ἀνεῖλκεν ἀπὸ τοῦ μέσου χώραν, τὸν δὲ αἰθέριον
 ἐν κύκλῳ τόπον ὠχυροῦτο τῶν ἐντὸς ὄρον
 τε καὶ φυλακτῆριον αὐτὸν τιθείς, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ
 οὐρανὸς ὠνομάσθαι δοκεῖ. <καὶ> ὀχεῖσθαι μὲν γῆν ὕδατι ξηρὰν οὖσαν, ἣν δέος ἦν ὕδατι δια-λύεσθαι, πυρὶ δὲ αἲρα θερμῶ φύσει τὸν ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ
 ψυχρότατον, θαῦμα ἔκτοπον, ὃ θαυματοποιὸς
 4 εἰργάζετο. πῶς γὰρ οὐ τεράστιον ὑπὸ μὲν τοῦ λυομένου συνέχεσθαι τὸ λύον, πρὸς γῆς ὕδωρ, ἐπὶ
 δὲ τῷ ψυχροτάτῳ τὸ θερμότερον ἄσβεστον ἰδρῦσθαι, πῦρ ἐπὶ αἲρι; καὶ ταῦτα μὲν τὰ τέλεια τοῦ παντὸς ἦν μοσχεύματα, τὸ δὲ παμ-μέγεθες καὶ παμφορώτατον ἔρνος ὁ κόσμος οὗτος, 5 οὐ παραφυάδες οἱ εἰρημένοι βλαστοί. II. "Οπου ποτ' οὖν ἄρα τὰς ρίζας καθῆκε καὶ τίς ἐστὶν αὐτῷ
 βάσις, ἐφ' ἧς ὥσπερ ἀνδριάς ἐρήρεισται, σκεπτέον.
 σῶμα μὲν οὖν οὐδὲν ἀπολειφθὲν εἰκὸς ἕξω πλανᾶ-
 σθαι πᾶσαν τὴν δι' ὅλων ὕλην ἐργασαμένου καὶ
 6 διακοσμήσαντος θεοῦ· τελειότατον γὰρ ἤρμοττε
 τὸ μέγιστον τῶν ἔργων τῷ μεγίστῳ δημιουργῷ διαπλάσασθαι, τελειότατον δὲ οὐκ ἂν ἦν, εἰ μὴ
 τελείοις συνεπληροῦτο μέρεσιν· ὥστε ἐκ γῆς
 ἀπάσης καὶ παντὸς ὕδατος καὶ αἲρος καὶ πυρὸς,
 μηδενὸς ἕξω μηδὲ τοῦ βραχυτάτου καταλειφθέντος,
 7 συνέστη ὅδε ὁ κόσμος. ἀνάγκη τοίνυν ἐκτὸς ἢ
 κενὸν ἢ μηδὲν εἶναι. εἰ μὲν δὴ κενόν, πῶς τὸ

* Or from both. Cornutus i. 1 gives ὠρέειν ὃ ἐστὶ φυλάσσειν, as well as ὄρος for the originals from which οὐρανὸς is derived.

† See App. p. 494.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 3-7

roots at its centre ; the trees, that are air and fire, He drew up from the centre to the space on high ; the encircling region of ether He firmly established, and set it to be at once a boundary and guard of all that is within. (Apparently its name " Heaven " is derived from the former word.<sup>a</sup>) And (surpassing wonder !) this Doer of wondrous works caused earth, a dry substance in danger of being dissolved by water, to be held by <sup>b</sup> water, and air, of itself coldest of all things, to be held by fire whose very nature is heat. How can it be other than a prodigy that the <sup>4</sup> dissolving element should be held together by that which it dissolves, water by earth ; and that on the coldest element the hottest should be seated unquenched, fire upon air ?

The elements of which we have spoken are the perfect branches of the whole, but the stock, far greater and more productive than all of them, is this world, of which the growths that have been mentioned are offshoots. II. We must consider, therefore, where He caused its <sup>5</sup> roots to strike, and on what it rests as a statue on its pedestal. It is unlikely that any material body has been left over and was moving about at random outside, seeing that God had wrought up and placed in orderly position all matter wherever found. For it <sup>6</sup> became the greatest artificer to fashion to full perfection the greatest of constructions, and it would have come short of full perfection, had it not had a complement of perfect parts.<sup>b</sup> Accordingly this world of ours was formed out of all that there is of earth, and all that there is of water, and air and fire, not even the smallest particle being left outside. It <sup>7</sup> follows that outside there is either empty space or nothing at all. If there is empty space, how comes πλήρες καὶ ναστὸν καὶ τῶν ὄντων βαρύτατον οὐ βρίθει ταλαντεῦον στερεοῦ μηδενὸς ἀπερείδοντος<sup>1</sup>;

PHILO

 ἐξ οὗ φάσματι ἂν εἰκέναι δόξαι, ζητούσης αἰεὶ
 τῆς διανοίας βάσιν σωματικὴν, <ἦν> πᾶν ἔχειν εἰκός, εἰάν τι κενὸν μόνον<sup>2</sup> τυγχάνη, τὸν δὲ δὴ κόσμον καὶ διαφερόντως, ὅτι τὸ μέγιστον σωμάτων
 ἐστὶ καὶ πλήθος ἄλλων σωμάτων ὡς οἰκεία ἐγ-8 κεκόλπισται μέρη. τὰς δυσωπίας οὖν εἴ τις ἀπο-διδράσκειν βούλοιο τὰς ἐν τοῖς διαπορηθείσι, λεγέτω μετὰ παρρησίας, ὅτι οὐδὲν τῶν ἐν ὕλαις
 κραταῖον οὕτως, ὡς τὸν κόσμον ἀχθοφορεῖν
 ἰσχύσαι, λόγος δὲ ὁ αἰδῖος θεοῦ τοῦ αἰωνίου τὸ
 [331] ὀχυρώτατον καὶ | βεβαιότατον ἔρεισμα τῶν ὄλων
 9 ἐστίν. οὗτος ἀπὸ τῶν μέσων ἐπὶ τὰ
 πέρατα καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἄκρων ἐπὶ τὰ μέσα ταθεῖς
 δολιχεύει τὸν τῆς φύσεως δρόμον ἀήττητον συνάγων
 τὰ μέρη πάντα καὶ σφίγγων· δεσμὸν γὰρ αὐτὸν
 ἄρρηκτον τοῦ παντὸς ὁ γεννήσας ἐποίει πατήρ.
 10 εἰκότως οὖν οὐδὲ γῆ πᾶσα διαλυθήσεται πρὸς
 παντὸς ὕδατος, ὅπερ αὐτῆς οἱ κόλποι κεχωρήκασιν,
 οὐδ' ὑπὸ ἀέρος σβεσθήσεται πῦρ, οὐδ' ἔμπαλιν ὑπὸ πυρὸς ἄῃ ἀναφλεχθήσεται, τοῦ θείου λόγου μεθ-ὀριον τάττοντος αὐτὸν καθάπερ φωνῆν στοιχείων
 ἀφώνων, ἵνα τὸ ὄλον ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τῆς ἐγγραμμάτου μουσικῆς<sup>3</sup> συνηγήση, τὰς τῶν ἐναντίων ἀπειλὰς πειθοῖ τῇ συνόδῳ<sup>4</sup> μεσιτεύοντός τε καὶ διαιτῶντος.

<sup>1</sup> ἀπερείδοντος conj. Tr. for ἐπερείδοντος mss.

<sup>2</sup> mss. εἰάν τε κινούμενον: Wend. εἰάν τι κινούμενον. Perhaps εἰάν τε <ἰσχύμενον, εἰάν τε> κινούμενον.

<sup>3</sup> Mangey and Wend. φωνῆς, which is elsewhere coupled with ἐγγραμμάτου, e.g. De Agr. 136. But the μούσης of the mss. is reproduced in a quotation of the passage by Eusebius as μουσικῆς.

<sup>4</sup> mss. and Eusebius συνόδω (sic): Wend. συναγωγῆ.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 7-10

it that a thing that is full and dense and heaviest of all existences does not sink down by sheer weight, having nothing solid external to it to hold it up? This would seem to be of the nature of a phantom, since our understanding ever looks for a material basis, which it expects everything to have, even if it be but an empty thing, but above all the world, since it is the largest of material bodies, and holds in its bosom as parts of itself a mass of other material bodies. Let anyone then, who would fain escape the confusion 8 of face, which we all feel when we have to leave problems unsolved, say plainly that no material thing is so strong as to be able to bear the burden of the world; and that the everlasting Word of the eternal God is the very sure and staunch prop of the Whole. He it is, who extending Himself 9 from the midst to its utmost bounds and from its extremities to the midst again, keeps up through all its length Nature's unvanquished course, combining and compacting all its parts. For the Father Who begat Him constituted His Word such a Bond of the Universe as nothing can break. Good reason, then, 10 have we to be sure that all the earth shall not be dissolved by all the water which has gathered within its hollows; nor fire be quenched by air; nor, on the other hand, air be ignited by fire. The Divine Word stations Himself to keep these elements apart, like a Vocal between voiceless elements of speech, that the universe may send forth a harmony like that of a masterpiece of literature.<sup>a</sup> He mediates between the opponents amid their threatenings, and reconciles them by winning ways to peace and con-

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 494.

PHILO

- 11 III. Οὕτως μὲν δὴ τὸ παμφορώτατον
φυτὸν ἐρριζοῦτο καὶ ῥιζωθὲν ἐκρατεῖτο· τῶν δὲ ἐν
μέρει καὶ βραχυτέρων φυτῶν τὰ μὲν μεταβατικῶς
κινήτά, τὰ δὲ ἄνευ μεταβάσεως ὡς ἂν ἐστῶτα
- 12 κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν τόπον ἐδημιουργεῖτο. τὰ μὲν
οὖν μεταβατικῇ κινήσει χρώμενα, ἃ δὴ φαμεν
ἡμεῖς ζῶα εἶναι, ταῖς τοῦ παντὸς ὀλοσχερεστέραις προσεγένετο μοίραις, γῆ μὲν τὰ χερσαῖα, πλωτὰ
δὲ ὕδατι, τὰ δὲ πτηνὰ ἀέρι καὶ τὰ πυρίγονα πυρί, ὧν τὴν γένεσιν ἀριδηλοτέραν κατὰ Μακεδονίαν
λόγος ἔχει προφαίνεσθαι, καὶ οἱ ἀστέρες<sup>1</sup> οὐρανῶ
—ζῶα γὰρ καὶ τούτους νοερὰ δι' ὄλων φασὶν οἱ
φιλοσοφήσαντες—, <ὧν> οἱ μὲν πλάνητες ἐξ
ἐαυτῶν, οἱ δ' ἀπλανεῖς τῇ τοῦ παντὸς συμπεριαγόμενοι φορᾷ τόπους ἐναλλάττειν δοκοῦσι.
- 13 τὰ δὲ ἀφαντάστῳ φύσει διοικούμενα, ἅπερ ἰδίως
λέγεται φυτά, μεταβατικῆς κινήσεως ἀμέτοχα.
- 14 IV. διττὰ δὲ ἐν τε γῆ καὶ ἀέρι γένη ὁ
ποιῶν ἐποίει. ἀέρι μὲν τὰ πτηνὰ καὶ αἰσθητὰ καὶ δυνάμεις ἄλλας αἰσθήσει οὐδαμῇ οὐδαμῶς καταλαμβανομένας— ψυχῶν ὁ θίασος οὗτος ἀσωμάτων
ἐστὶ διακεκοσμημένων οὐ ταῖς αὐταῖς ἐν τάξεσι·
τὰς μὲν γὰρ εἰσκρίνεσθαι λόγος ἔχει σώμασι
θητοῖς καὶ κατὰ τινὰς ὠρισμένας περιόδους
ἀπαλλάττεσθαι πάλιν, τὰς δὲ θειοτέρας κατασκευῆς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. τοὺς ἀστέρας ἐν.

<sup>a</sup> For the whole of this section cf. De Gig. 7 f.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 11-14

cord. III. On this wise was the tree 11 planted which yields all fruit that grows. On this wise when planted was it held fast. Among lesser plants, that did not partake of its universal character, some were created with a capacity of moving from one place to another, others, meant to be stationary, lacked such capacity for change of place. Our name 12
for those which have the power of locomotion is animals. These took to (i.e. were so made as naturally to belong to) the several main divisions of our universe, land animals to earth, to water those that swim, the winged creatures to air, and to fire the fire-born. It is said that the production of these last is more patent to observation in Macedonia than elsewhere. The stars found their place in heaven.
Those who have made philosophy their study tell us that these too are living creatures, but of a kind composed entirely of Mind. Of these some, the planets, appear to change their position by a power inherent in themselves, others to do so as they are swept along in the rush of our universe, and these we call fixed stars.<sup>a</sup> The creations en- 13
dowed with a nature incapable of taking in impressions, to which the name of "plants" is specially given, do not share the power of locomotion.

IV. Of twofold kind were the beings which the great 14 Maker made as well in the earth as in the air. In the air He made the winged creatures perceived by our senses, and other mighty beings besides which are wholly beyond apprehension by sense. This is the host of the bodiless souls. Their array is made up of companies that differ in kind. We are told that some enter into mortal bodies, and quit them again
at certain fixed periods, while others, endowed with

PHILO

- λαχούσας ἅπαντος ἀλογεῖν τοῦ γῆς χωρίου, ἀνω-
 [332] τάτω δ' εἶναι πρὸς αὐτῷ τῷ | αἰθέρι τὰς καθαρωτάτας, ἃς οἱ μὲν παρ' Ἑλλησι φιλοσοφήσαντες
 ἤρωας καλοῦσι, Μωυσῆς δὲ ὀνόματι εὐθυβόλω
 χρώμενος ἀγγέλους προσαγορεύει, πρεσβευομένας
 καὶ διαγγελλούσας τὰ τε παρὰ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος τοῖς ὑπηκόοις ἀγαθὰ καὶ τῷ βασιλεῖ ὧν εἰσιν οἱ
 ὑπήκοοι χρεῖοι. γῆ δὲ ζῳά τε χερσαῖα
 καὶ φυτά, δύο πάλιν, προσέειμε, τὴν αὐτὴν μητέρα 15 τε βουλευθεῖς εἶναι καὶ τροφόν· καθάπερ γὰρ γυναικὶ καὶ παντὶ τῷ θήλει πηγαὶ πρὸς τῷ μέλλειν ἀποκυῖσκειν ἀναχέονται<sup>1</sup> γάλακτος, ἵνα τοῖς γεννω-μένοις ἄρδωσι τὰς ἀναγκαίας καὶ ἀρμοττούσας τροφάς, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ τῇ χερσαίων ζῳῶν
 μητρὶ γῆ πᾶσας φυτῶν προσέειμεν ἰδέας, ἵνα
 συγγενέσι καὶ μὴ ὀθνείοις τροφαῖς τὰ γεννώμενα 16 χρήσῃται. καὶ μὴν τὰ μὲν φυτὰ κατωκάρᾳ ἀπειργάζετο τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν ἐν τοῖς βαθυγειοτάτοις γῆς μέρεσι πῆξας, ζῳῶν δὲ τῶν ἀλόγων
 τὰς κεφαλὰς ἀνεκκύσας ἀπὸ γῆς ἐπὶ προμήκους
 αὐχένος ἄκρας ἡρμόζετο τῷ αὐχένι ὥσπερ ἐπίβασιν 17 τοὺς ἐμπροσθίους πόδας θεῖς. ἐξαιρέτου δὲ τῆς κατασκευῆς ἔλαχεν ἄνθρωπος· τῶν μὲν γὰρ ἄλλων
 τὰς ὄψεις περιήγαγε κάτω κάμψας, διὸ νένευκε
 πρὸς χέρσον, ἀνθρώπου δὲ ἔμπαλιν ἀνώρθωσεν,
 ἵνα τὸν οὐρανὸν καταθεᾶται, φυτὸν οὐκ ἐπίγειον
 ἀλλ' οὐράνιον, ὡς ὁ παλαιὸς λόγος, ὑπάρχων. V.
 18 ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι τῆς αἰθερίου φύσεως τὸν ἡμέτερον

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀποχέονται.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 14-18

a diviner constitution, have no regard for any earthly quarter, but exist on high nigh to the ethereal region itself. These are the purest spirits of all, whom Greek philosophers call heroes, but whom Moses, employing a well-chosen name, entitles "angels," for they go on embassies bearing tidings from the great Ruler to His subjects of the boons which He sends them, and reporting to the Monarch what His subjects are in need of. Two kinds again did He assign to earth, land animals and plants. For He willed her to be at once both mother and nurse. For, even as in woman and all female 15 kind there well up springs of milk when the time of delivery draws near, that they may furnish necessary drink of a suitable kind to their offspring; even so in like manner did the Creator bestow on earth, the mother of land animals, plants of all sorts, to the end that the new-born might have the benefit of nourishment not foreign but akin to them. Furthermore, 16 while He fashioned the plants head downwards, fixing their heads in the portions of the earth where the soil lay deepest, He raised from the earth the heads of the animals that are without reason and set them on the top of a long neck, placing the fore feet as a support for the neck. But the build allotted to man 17 was distinguished above that of other living creatures. For by turning the eyes of the others downwards He made them incline to the earth beneath them. The eyes of man, on the contrary, He set high up, that he might gaze on heaven, for man, as the old saying is, is a plant not earthly but heavenly.<sup>a</sup> V. Now while 18 others, by asserting that our human mind is a particle <sup>a</sup> Timaeus 90 A; cf. for the preceding section ib. 91 E. See note on Quod Det. 84.

PHILO

- νοῦν μοῖραν εἰπόντες εἶναι συγγένειαν ἀνθρώπῳ πρὸς αἰθέρα συνῆψαν. ὁ δὲ μέγας Μωυσῆς οὐδενὶ τῶν γεγονότων τῆς λογικῆς ψυχῆς τὸ εἶδος ὠμοίωσεν, ἀλλ' εἶπεν αὐτὴν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ἀοράτου πνεύματος ἐκείνου δόκιμον εἶναι νόμισμα σημειωθὲν καὶ τυπωθὲν σφραγίδι θεοῦ, ἧς ὁ χαρακτήρ ἐστιν
- 19 ὁ αἰδιος λόγος· “ ἐνέπνευσε ” γάρ φησιν “ ὁ θεὸς εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοὴν ζωῆς, ” ὥστε ἀνάγκη πρὸς τὸν ἐκπέμποντα τὸν δεχόμενον ἀπεικονίσθαι· διὸ καὶ λέγεται κατ' εἰκόνα θεοῦ τὸν ἄνθρωπον γεγενῆσθαι, οὐ μὴν κατ' εἰκόνα
- 20 τινὸς τῶν γεγονότων. ἀκόλουθον οὖν ἦν τῆς ἀνθρώπου ψυχῆς κατὰ τὸν ἀρχέτυπον τοῦ αἰτίου λόγον ἀπεικονισθείσης καὶ τὸ σῶμα ἀνεγερθὲν πρὸς τὴν καθαρωτάτην τοῦ παντὸς μοῖραν, οὐρανόν, τὰς ὄψεις ἀνατείνειν, ἵνα τῷ φανερωῖ τὸ ἀφανὲς
- 21 ἐκδήλως καταλαμβάνηται. ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν τὴν πρὸς τὸ ὄν διανοίας ὀλκὴν ἀμήχανον ἦν ἰδεῖν ὅτι μὴ τοὺς ἀχθέντας πρὸς αὐτοῦ μόνους—ὁ γὰρ πέπονθεν ἕκαστος, αὐτὸς ἐξαιρέτως οἶδεν—, εἰδῶλον ἐναργὲς
- [383] | αἰδοῦς ὄμματος τὰ τοῦ σώματος ποιεῖ δυνάμενα
- 22 πρὸς αἰθέρα ἀπονεύειν. ὅποτε γὰρ οἱ ἐκ φθαρτῆς παγέντες ὕλης ὀφθαλμοὶ τοσοῦτον ἐπέβησαν, ὡς ἀπὸ τοῦ τῆς γῆς χωρίου πρὸς τὸν μακρὰν οὕτως ἀφεστῶτα ἀνατρέχειν οὐρανὸν καὶ ψαύειν τῶν περάτων αὐτοῦ, πόσον τινὰ χρὴ νομίσαι τὸν πάντη δρόμον τῶν ψυχῆς ὀμμάτων; ἅπερ ὑπὸ πολλοῦ τοῦ τὸ ὄν κατιδεῖν τηλανγῶς ἡμέρου πτερωθέντα οὐ μόνον πρὸς τὸν ἔσχατον αἰθέρα τείνεται, παρα-
- 222

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 18-22

of the ethereal substance, have claimed for man a kinship with the upper air ; our great Moses likened the fashion of the reasonable soul to no created thing, but averred it to be a genuine coinage of that dread Spirit, the Divine and Invisible One, signed and impressed by the seal of God, the stamp of which is the Eternal Word. His words are " God in-breathed 19 into his face a breath of Life " (Gen. ii. 7) ; so that it cannot but be that he that receives is made in the likeness of Him Who sends forth the breath. Accordingly we also read that man has been made after the Image of God (Gen. i. 27), not however after the image of anything created. It followed then, as a 20 natural consequence of man's soul having been made after the image of the Archetype, the Word of the First Cause, that his body also was made erect, and could lift up its eyes to heaven, the purest portion of our universe, that by means of that which he could see man might clearly apprehend that which he could not see. Since, then, it was impossible for 21 any to discern how the understanding tends towards the Existent One, save those only who had been drawn by Him—for each one of us knows what he has himself experienced as no other can know it—He endows the bodily eyes with the power of taking the direction of the upper air, and so makes them a distinct representation of the invisible eye. For, 22 seeing that the eyes formed out of perishable matter obtained so great reach as to travel from the earthly region to heaven, that is so far away, and to touch its bounds, how vast must we deem the flight in all directions of the eyes of the soul ? The strong yearning to perceive the Existent One gives them wings to attain not only to the furthest region of the upper

PHILO

μεψάμενα δὲ καὶ παντὸς τοῦ κόσμου τοὺς ὄρους 23 ἐπέιγεται πρὸς τὸν ἀγένητον. VI. διὰ τοῦτο ἐν τοῖς χρησιμοῖς οἱ σοφίας καὶ ἐπιστήμης ἄπληστοι διατελοῦντες ἀνακεκλήσθαι λέγονται·
πρὸς γὰρ τὸ θεῖον ἄνω καλεῖσθαι θέμις τοὺς ὑπ’ 24 αὐτοῦ καταπνευσθέντας. δεινὸν γάρ, εἰ τυφῶσι
μὲν καὶ ἀρπυαῖαις αὐτόπρεμνα δένδρα πρὸς ἄερα
ἀνασπᾶται καὶ μυριάγωγα σκάφη βρίθοντα φόρτω
καθάπερ τινὰ τῶν κουφοτάτων ἐκ μέσων τῶν
πελαγῶν ἀναρπάζεται καὶ λίμναι καὶ ποταμοὶ μετάρσιοι φέρονται, τοὺς γῆς κόλπους ἐκλιπόντος
τοῦ ρεύματος, ὅπερ ἀνιμήσαντο αἱ τῶν ἀνέμων κραταιόταται καὶ πολυπλοκώταται δῖναι, τῇ δὲ
τοῦ θεοῦ πνεύματος καὶ πάντα δυνατοῦ καὶ τὰ
κάτω νικῶντος φύσει κοῦφον ὁ νοῦς ὧν οὐκ ἐπελαφρίζεται καὶ πρὸς μήκιστον ὕψος ἐξάιρεται, καὶ 25 μάλιστα ὁ τοῦ φιλοσοφῆσαντος ἀνόθως. οὗτος
γὰρ κάτω μὲν οὐ βρίθει πρὸς τὰ σώματος καὶ γῆς
φίλα ταλαντεύων, ὧν διάζευξιν καὶ ἀλλοτριώσιν
αἰεὶ διεπόνησεν, ἄνω δὲ φέρεται τῶν μεταρσίων
καὶ ἱεροπρεπεστάτων καὶ εὐδαιμόνων φύσεων 26 ἀκορόστως ἐρασθεῖς. τοιγαροῦν Μωυσῆς ὁ ταμίας καὶ φύλαξ τῶν τοῦ ὄντος ὀργίων ἀνακεκλήσεται·
λέγεται γὰρ ἐν Λευιτικῇ βίβλῳ· “ἀνεκάλεσε Μωυσῆν.” ἀνακεκλήσεται δὲ καὶ ὁ τῶν δευτερείων
ἀξιωθεῖς Βεσελεήλ· καὶ γὰρ τοῦτον ἀνακαλεῖ ὁ
θεὸς πρὸς τὴν τῶν ἱερῶν κατασκευὴν τε καὶ
27 ἐπιμέλειαν ἔργων. ἀλλ’ ὁ μὲν τὰ δευτερεῖα τῆς
224

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 22-27

air, but to overpass the very bounds of the entire universe and speed away toward the Uncreate.

VI. This is why those who crave for 23 wisdom and knowledge with insatiable persistence are said in the Sacred Oracles to have been called upwards ; for it accords with God's ways that those who have received His down-breathing should be called up to Him. For when trees are whirled up, 24 roots and all, into the air by hurricanes and tornadoes, and heavily laden ships of large tonnage are snatched up out of mid-ocean, as though objects of very little weight, and lakes and rivers are borne aloft, and earth's hollows are left empty by the water as it is drawn up by a tangle of violently eddying winds, it is strange if a light substance like the mind is not rendered buoyant and raised to the utmost height by the native force of the Divine spirit, overcoming as it does in its boundless might all powers that are here below. Above all is it strange if this is not so with the mind of the genuine philosopher. Such an one suffers from no weight of downward 25 pressure towards the objects dear to the body and to earth. From these he has ever made an earnest effort to sever and estrange himself. So he is borne upward insatiably enamoured of all holy happy natures that dwell on high. Accordingly Moses, 26 the keeper and guardian of the mysteries of the Existent One, will be one called above ; for it is said in the Book of Leviticus, " He called Moses up above" (Lev. i. 1). One called up above will Bezeleel also be, held worthy of a place in the second rank. For him also does God call up above for the construction and overseeing of the sacred works (Exod. xxxi. 2 ff.). But while Bezeleel shall carry off the lower honours 27

PHILO

ἀνακλήσεως, Μωυσῆς δὲ ὁ πάνσοφος οἴσεται τὰ πρωτεία· ἐκείνος μὲν γὰρ τὰς σκιάς πλάττει καθάπερ οἱ ζωγραφοῦντες οἷς οὐ θέμις οὐδὲν ἔμφυχον δημιουργῆσαι—Βεσελεὴλ γὰρ ἐν σκιαῖς ποιῶν ἐρμηνεύεται—, Μωυσῆς δὲ οὐ σκιάς ἀλλὰ τὰς ἀρχετύπους φύσεις αὐτὰς τῶν πραγμάτων ἔλαχεν ἀνατυποῦν. ἄλλως τε καὶ τὸ αἷτιον οἷς μὲν τηλαυγέστερον καὶ ἀριδηλότερον ὡς ἂν ἐν ἡλίῳ καθαρῶ, οἷς δὲ ἀμυδρότερον ὡς ἂν ἐν σκιά τὰ οἰκεία εἶωθεν ἐπιδείκνυσθαι.

- 28 VII. | Διεξελθυθότες οὖν περὶ τῶν ὀλοσχερε-
 [334] στέρων ἐν κόσμῳ φυτῶν ἴδωμεν ὃν τρόπον καὶ τὰ ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, τῷ βραχεῖ κόσμῳ, δένδρα ὁ πάνσοφος ἐδημιούργει θεός. αὐτίκα τοίνυν ὡσπερβαθύγειον χωρίον σῶμα τὸ ἡμέτερον λαβὼν
 29 δεξαμενὰς αὐτῷ τὰς αἰσθήσεις ἀπειργάζετο· κἄπειθ' οἷα φυτὸν ἡμερον καὶ ὠφελιμώτατον <εἷς><sup>1</sup> ἐκάστην αὐτῶν ἐνετίθει, ἀκοὴν μὲν εἰς οὖς, ὄψιν δ' εἰς ὄμματα καὶ εἰς μυκτῆρας ὄσφρησιν καὶ τὰς ἄλλας εἰς τὰ οἰκεία καὶ συγγενῆ χωρία. μαρτυρεῖ δέ μου τῷ λόγῳ ὁ θεσπέσιος ἀνὴρ ἐν ὕμνοις λέγων ὦδε·
 “ὁ φυτεύων οὖς οὐκ ἀκούει; ὁ πλάσσων ὀφθαλ-
 30 μους οὐκ ἐπιβλέπει;” καὶ τὰς διηκούσας μέντοι μέχρι σκελῶν τε καὶ χειρῶν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων τοῦ σώματος μερῶν, ὅσα ἐντός τε καὶ ἐκτός, δυνάμεις
 31 ἀπάσας εὐγενῆ μοσχεύματα εἶναι συμβέβηκε. τὰ δὲ ἀμείνω καὶ τελειότερα τῷ μεσαιτάτῳ καὶ καρποφορεῖν δυναμένῳ διαφερόντως ἡγεμονικῶ

<sup>1</sup> εἷς may easily have dropped out before ἐκ. Heinemann translates as if it had. See App. p. 494.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 27-31

conferred by the call above, Moses the all-wise shall bear away the primary honours. For the former fashions the shadows, just as painters do, to whom Heaven has not granted power to create aught that has life. "Bezeleel," we must remember, means "making in shadows." Moses on the other hand obtained the office of producing not shadows but the actual archetype of the several objects. Nor need we wonder at such distinctions. It is the wont of the Supreme Cause to exhibit the objects proper to each, to some in a clearer, more radiant vision, as though in unclouded sunshine, to others more dimly, as though in the shade.

VII. As we have now brought to a close our dis- 28
cussion of those objects on a larger scale which are set to grow in the field of the universe, let us note the way in which God the all-wise fashioned the trees that are in man, the microcosm. To begin with, then, He took our body, as though He were taking some deep-soiled plot of ground and made the organs of sense as tree-beds for it. Having done this He 29 set a sense in each of them, as a plant highly valuable for cultivation, hearing in the ear, sight in the eyes, in the nostrils scent, and the rest in their appropriate and congenial positions. I may cite as a witness to what I say the sacred poet, where he says "He that planteth the ear, doth He not hear? He that fashioneth the eyes, shall He not behold?" (Psalm xciv. 9). And all the other faculties of the body 30 including legs and hands and every part, whether inner or outer, are nothing else than noble shoots and growths. The better and more perfect growths He 31 planted in the dominant faculty, which holds the central position, and possesses in a pre-eminent

PHILO

προσερρίζου· ταῦτα δέ εἰσι νόησις, κατάληψις, εὐστοχία, μελέται, μνήμαι, ἕξεις, διαθέσεις, τεχνῶν ιδεαὶ πολύτροποι, βεβαιότης ἐπιστημῶν, τῶν ἀρετῆς ἀπάσης θεωρημάτων ἄληστος ἀνάληψις. τούτων οὐδὲν οὐδεὶς θνητὸς ἰκανὸς φυτουργῆσαι, πάντων δὲ ἀθρώων εἰς ὃ ἀγένητος τεχνίτης, οὐ πεποιηκὼς μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ποιῶν ἀεὶ καθ' ἕκαστον τῶν γεννωμένων τὰ φυτὰ ταῦτα.

- 32 VIII. Τοῖς εἰρημένοις ἐστὶν ἀκόλουθος καὶ ἡ τοῦ παραδείσου φυτουργία· λέγεται γάρ· “ἐφύτευσεν ὁ θεὸς παράδεισον ἐν Ἐδέμ κατὰ ἀνατολάς, καὶ ἔθετο ἐκεῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃν ἔπλασεν.” τὸ μὲν οὖν ἀμπέλους καὶ ἐλαιῶν ἢ μηλεῶν ἢ ροιῶν ἢ τῶν παραπλησίων δένδρα οἶεσθαι<sup>1</sup> πολλή
- 33 καὶ δυσθεράπευτος εὐήθεια. τίνας γὰρ ἔνεκα, εἴποι τις ἄν; ἵνα ἐνδιαιτήσεις εὐαγώγους ἔχη; ὁ γὰρ κόσμος ἅπας αὐταρκέστατον ἐνδιαίτημα ἂν νομισθεῖη θεῷ τῷ πανηγεμόνι; ἢ οὐχὶ μυρίων καὶ ἄλλων δόξαι ἂν ὑστερίζειν, ὡς πρὸς ὑποδοχὴν τοῦ μεγάλου βσιλέως ἀξιόχρεων ὑποληφθῆναι χωρίον; χωρὶς τοῦ<sup>2</sup> μηδὲ εὐαγές εἶναι οἶεσθαι τὸ αἴτιον ἐν τῷ αἰτιατῷ περιέχεσθαι [τῷ] μηδὲ τὰ
- 34 δένδρα τοὺς ἐτησίους δήπου φέρειν καρπούς. πρὸς τὴν τίνας οὖν ἀπόλαυσίν τε καὶ χρῆσιν καρποφορήσει ὁ παράδεισος; ἀνθρώπου μὲν οὐδενός· οὐδεὶς γὰρ εἰσάγεται τὸ παράπαν τὸν παράδεισον οἰκῶν, ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸν πρῶτον διαπλασθέντα ἐκ γῆς
- 35 μεταναστῆναί φησιν ἐνθένδε, ὄνομα Ἀδάμ. καὶ

<sup>1</sup> No lacuna (as Wend.) An infinitive can be understood after οἶομαι, e.g. Homer, Odyssey xxiv. 401.

<sup>2</sup> mss. χωρίον τοῦ: Wend. χωρὶς τοῦ.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. note on De Cher. 62.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. L.A. i. 43.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 31-34

degree the capacity for yielding fruit. These growths are insight, apprehension, accurate judgement, constant practice, powers of memory, varying conditions, chronic dispositions,<sup>a</sup> scientific capacity taking many forms and directions, certainty of knowledge, ability to take in and retain the principles and implications of virtue in every shape. Not one of these is any mortal man whatever capable of growing. The One Grower of them all is the Uncreate Artificer, Who not only has made these plants once for all, but is ever making them in the case of each man who is from time to time begotten.

VIII. In agreement with what I have said is the <sup>32</sup> planting of the garden ; for we read, " God planted a garden in Eden facing the sun-rising, and placed there the man whom He had moulded " (Gen. ii. 8). To imagine that he planted vines and olive and apple and pomegranate trees or the like, would be serious folly, difficult to eradicate. One would <sup>33</sup> naturally ask What for ? To provide Himself with convenient places to live in ?<sup>b</sup> Would the whole world be considered a sufficient dwelling for God the Lord of all ? Would it not evidently fall short in countless other ways<sup>c</sup> of being deemed meet to receive the Great King ? To say nothing of the irreverence of supposing that the Cause of all things is contained in that which He has caused, and to say nothing of the fact that the trees of His planting do not yield annual fruits as ours do.<sup>d</sup> For whose use <sup>34</sup> and enjoyment, then, will the Garden yield its fruits ? Not for that of any man ; for no one whatever is mentioned as dwelling in the garden, for we are told that Adam, the man first moulded out of the earth, <sup>c</sup> i.e. than being without a garden.      <sup>d</sup> See App. p. 494.

PHILO

- μὴν ὃ γε θεὸς ὡσπερ τῶν ἄλλων καὶ τροφῆς ἀνεπιδεῆς ἐστίν· ἀνάγκη γὰρ τὸν τροφῆ ἠρώμενον δεῖσθαι μὲν τὸ πρῶτον, ἔπειτα δὲ ὄργανα εὐ-
 τρεπίσθαι, δι' ὧν καὶ τὴν εἰσιούσαν παραδέξεται
 [335] καὶ τὴν ἐκμασηθεῖσαν θύραζε ἀποπέμψει. | ταῦτα
 δὲ μακαριότητος καὶ εὐδαιμονίας τῆς περὶ τὸ
 αἴτιον ἀπάδει, τῶν ἀνθρωπόμορφον, ἔτι δὲ καὶ ἀνθρωποπαθεῖς αὐτὸ εἰσαγόντων ἐπ' εὐσεβείας καὶ
 ὁσιότητος καθαιρέσει, μεγάλων ἀρετῶν, ἐκθεσμό-36 τατα ὄντα εὐρήματα. IX. ἰτέον οὖν ἐπ' ἀλληγορίαν τὴν ὁρατικοῖς φίλην ἀνδράσι· καὶ
 γὰρ οἱ χρησιμοὶ τὰς εἰς αὐτὴν ἡμῖν ἀφορμὰς ἐναργέστατα προτείνουσι· λέγουσι γὰρ ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ
 φυτὰ εἶναι μηδὲν εἰκότα τοῖς παρ' ἡμῖν, ἀλλὰ
 ζωῆς, ἀθανασίας, εἰδήσεως, καταλήψεως, συνέσεως, 37 καλοῦ καὶ πονηροῦ φαντασίας. ταῦτα δὲ χέρσου
 μὲν οὐκ ἂν εἶη, λογικῆς δὲ ψυχῆς ἀναγκαίως
 φυτὰ, ἡ μὲν<sup>1</sup> πρὸς ἀρετὴν ὁδὸς αὐτῆς ζωὴν καὶ
 ἀθανασίαν ἔχουσα τὸ τέλος, ἡ δὲ πρὸς κακίαν
 φυγὴν τε τούτων καὶ θάνατον. τὸν οὖν φιλόδωρον
 θεὸν ὑποληπτέον ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ καθάπερ παράδεισον
 ἀρετῶν καὶ τῶν κατ' αὐτὰς πράξεων ἐμφυτεύειν
 πρὸς τελείαν εὐδαιμονίαν αὐτὴν ἄγοντα.
- 38 Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ τόπον οἰκειότατον προσέειμε
 τῷ παραδείσῳ καλούμενον Ἐδέμ—ἐρμηνεύεται δὲ
 τρυφή—, σύμβολον ψυχῆς τῆς ἄρτια βλεπούσης, ἀρεταῖς ἐγχορευούσης καὶ ὑπὸ πλήθους καὶ μεγέ-
 θους χαρᾶς ἀνασκιρτώσης, ἀπόλαυσμα ἐν ἀντὶ

<sup>1</sup> Or, with Wend., <ῆς> ἡ μὲν, "to which belongs the path" etc.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 35-38

migrated thence. As for God, He stands in no need of 35 food any more than of aught else. For one who uses food must in the first place experience need, and in the next place be equipped with organs by means of which to take the food that comes in, and to discharge that from which he has drawn its goodness. These things are not in harmony with the blessedness and happiness of the First Cause. They are utterly monstrous inventions of men who would overthrow great virtues like piety and reverence by representing Him as having the form and passions of mankind.

IX. So we must turn to allegory, the method dear 36 to men with their eyes opened. Indeed the sacred oracles most evidently afford us the clues for the use of this method. For they say that in the garden
there are trees in no way resembling those with which we are familiar, but trees of Life, of Immortality, of Knowledge, of Apprehension, of Understanding, of the conception of good and evil. And 37 these can be no growths of earthly soil, but must be
those of the reasonable soul, namely its path according to virtue with life and immortality as its end,
and its path according to evil ending in the shunning
of these and in death. We must conceive therefore that the bountiful God plants in the soul as it were a garden of virtues and of the modes of conduct corresponding to each of them, a garden that brings the soul to perfect happiness.

Because of this He assigned to the garden a site 38
most suitable, bearing the name of "Eden," which means "luxuriance," symbol of a soul whose eyesight is perfect, disporting itself in virtues, leaping and skipping by reason of abundance of great joy, having set before it, as an enjoyment outweighing thousands

PHILO

- μυρίων τῶν παρὰ ἀνθρώποις ἡδίστων προτεθει-39 μένης τὴν τοῦ μόνου θεραπείαν σοφοῦ. τούτου
 τοῦ γανώματος ἀκράτου τις σπάσας, ὁ τοῦ Μωυσέως δὴ θιασώτης, ὃς οὐχὶ τῶν ἡμελημένων
 ἦν, ἐν ὑμνωδίαις ἀνεφθέγγετο πρὸς τὸν ἴδιον νοῦν φάσκων “κατατρύφησον τοῦ κυρίου,” παρακекιμημένος πρὸς τὸν οὐράνιον καὶ θεῖον ἔρωτα
 τῇ φωνῇ, τὰς μὲν <ἐν> τοῖς λεγομένοις καὶ
 φαινομένοις ἀνθρωπίνοις ἀγαθοῖς χλιδὰς καὶ
 θρύψεις ἀλήκτους<sup>1</sup> δυσχεράνας, ὅλον δὲ τὸν νοῦν
 ὑπὸ θείας κατοχῆς συναρπασθεὶς οἴστρω καὶ 40 ἐνευφραϊνόμενος μόνῳ θεῷ. X. καὶ τὸ πρὸς ἀνατολαῖς μέντοι τὸν παράδεισον εἶναι
 δεῖγμα τοῦ λεχθέντος ἐστί· σκοταῖον μὲν γὰρ καὶ δυόμενον καὶ νυκτιφόρον ἀφροσύνη, λαμπρό-τατον δὲ καὶ περιαιυγέστατον καὶ ἀνατέλλον ὡς
 ἀληθῶς φρόνησις. καὶ καθάπερ ἀνίσχων ἥλιος
 ὅλον τὸν οὐρανοῦ κύκλον φέγγους ἀναπληροῖ, τὸν
 αὐτὸν τρόπον αἱ ἀρετῆς ἀκτῖνες ἀναλάμψασαι τὸ
 διανοίας χωρίον ὅλον μεστὸν αὐγῆς καθαρᾶς ἀπεργάζονται.
- 41 Τὰ μὲν οὖν ἀνθρώπου κτήματα φρουροὺς ἔχει
 καὶ φύλακας ἀγριωτάτους θήρας εἰς τὴν τῶν
 ἐπιόντων καὶ κατατρεχόντων ἄμυναν, τὰ δὲ τοῦ
 θεοῦ κτήματα λογικὰς φύσεις· “ἔθετο” γὰρ
 φησιν “ἐκεῖ τὸν ἀνθρωπον ὃν ἔπλασεν,” ὃ ἐστίν,
 λογικῶν μόνον τῶν ἀρετῶν αἱ ἀσκήσεις τε καὶ 42 χρήσεις. ἐξαιρετον γέρας παρὰ τὰς τῶν ἀλόγων<sup>2</sup>
 ψυχὰς τουτὶ παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ ἔλαβον· διὸ καὶ
 ἐμφαντικώτατα εἶρηται, ὅτι τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν πρὸς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀλέκτως et alia.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 38-42

of those that men deem sweetest, the worship and service of the Only Wise. One, after taking a sheer draught of this bright joy, a member indeed of Moses' fellowship, not found among the indifferent, spake aloud in hymns of praise, and addressing his own mind cried, "Delight in the Lord" (Psalm xxxvi. 4), moved by the utterance to an ecstasy of the love that is heavenly and Divine, filled with loathing for those interminable bouts of softness and debauchery amid the seeming and so-called good things of mankind, while his whole mind is snatched up in holy frenzy by a Divine possession, and he finds his gladness in God alone.

X. A proof of what I have said is the nearness of the garden to the sun-rising (Gen. ii. 8); for, while folly is a thing sinking, dark, night-bringing, wisdom is verily a thing of sunrise, all radiancy and brightness. And even as the sun, when it comes up, fills all the circle of heaven with light, even so do the rays of virtue, when they have shone out, cause the whole region of the understanding to be flooded with pure brilliancy.

Now, whereas man's possessions have animals of great ferocity to watch and guard them against being attacked and overrun, the possessions of God are guarded by rational beings: for it says, "He stationed there the man whom He had fashioned," that is to say, the trainings in and exercises of the virtues belong to rational beings only. This they received at the hands of God, as a pre-eminent privilege above the lives of the irrational creatures. And that is why it is stated in the most vivid manner

---

<sup>3</sup> MSS. δ ἐπὶ λογικῶν μόνον τῶν ἀρετῶν ἐστὶν αἱ οὖν ἀσκήσεις κτλ. See App. p. 495.

PHILO

- [336] ἀλήθειαν ἄνθρωπον, | τουτέστι τὸν νοῦν, ἔθηκεν ἐν ἱερωτάτοις καλοκάγαθίας βλαστήμασι καὶ φυτοῖς, ἐπεὶ [δὲ]<sup>1</sup> τῶν διανοίας ἀμετόχων ἰκανὸν οὐδὲν ἀρετὰς γεωργῆσαι,<sup>2</sup> ὧν τὸ παράπαν λαμβάνειν οὐ πέφυκε κατάληψιν. XI. οὐκ ἔστι δ' οὖν ἀπορητέον, τί δήποτε εἰς μὲν τὴν κιβωτόν, ἣν ἐν τῷ μεγίστῳ κατακλυσμῷ κατασκευασθῆναι συνέβη, πᾶσαι τῶν θηρίων αἱ ἰδέαι εἰσάγονται, εἰς δὲ τὸν παράδεισον οὐδεμία· ἡ μὲν γὰρ κιβωτὸς σύμβολον ἦν σώματος, ὅπερ ἐξ ἀνάγκης κεχώρηκε τὰς παθῶν καὶ κακιῶν ἀτιθάσους κἀξηγηριωμένας κῆρας, ὁ δὲ παράδεισος ἀρετῶν· ἀρεταὶ δὲ οὐδὲν ἀνήμερον ἢ συνόλως
- 43 ἀλογον παραδέχονται. παρατετηρημένως δὲ οὐ τὸν κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα τυπωθέντα ἄνθρωπον, ἀλλὰ τὸν πεπλασμένον εἰσαχθῆναι φησιν εἰς τὸν παράδεισον· ὁ μὲν γὰρ τῷ κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα θεοῦ χαραχθεὶς πνεύματι οὐδὲν διαφέρει τοῦ τὴν ἀθάνατον ζωὴν καρποφοροῦντος, ὡς ἔμοιγε φαίνεται, δένδρου—ἄμφω γὰρ ἄφθαρτα καὶ μοίρας τῆς μεσαιάτης καὶ ἡγεμονικωτάτης ἠξίωται· λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι τὸ ξύλον τῆς ζωῆς ἔστιν ἐν μέσῳ τοῦ παραδείσου—, ὁ δὲ τοῦ πολυμιγοῦς καὶ γεωδεστέρου σώματος, ἀπλάστου καὶ ἀπλῆς φύσεως ἀμέτοχος, ἧς ὁ ἀσκητῆς ἐπίσταται τὸν οἶκον καὶ τὰς αὐτὰς [τοῦ κυρίου] οἰκεῖν μόνος— Ἰακώβ γὰρ “ἄπλαστος οἰκῶν οἰκίαν” εἰσάγεται—, πολυτρόπῳ δὲ καὶ ἐκ παντοίων συνηρημένη καὶ πεπλασμένη διαθέσει χρώμενος.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐπὶ δὲ.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἀρετῆς (or ἄρα τις) ἐγεωργῆσεν.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. “unfashioned.”

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 42-45

possible that He set the mind, which is the real man in us, amid holiest shoots and growths of noble character, since among beings void of understanding there is not one capable of tilling virtues, for they are by nature utterly incompetent to apprehend these.

XI. We need, then, be at no loss <sup>43</sup> to know why there are brought in into the ark, which was built at the time of the great Flood, all the kinds of wild beasts, but into the Garden no kind at all. For the ark was a figure of the body, which has been obliged to make room for the savage and untamed pests of passions and vices, whereas the garden was a figure of the virtues ; and virtues entertain nothing wild, nothing (we may say outright) that is irrational.

It is with deliberate care that the law- <sup>44</sup> giver says not of the man made after God's image, but of the man fashioned out of earth, that he was introduced into the garden. For the man stamped with the spirit which is after the image of God differs not a whit, as it appears to me, from the tree that bears the fruit of immortal life : for both are imperishable and have been accounted worthy of the most central and most princely portion : for we are told that the tree of Life is in the midst of the Garden (Gen. ii. 9). Nor is there any difference between the man fashioned out of the earth and the earthly composite body. He has no part in a nature simple and uncompounded, whose house and courts only the self-trainer knows how to occupy, even Jacob who is put before us as " a plain <sup>a</sup> man dwelling in a house " (Gen. xxv. 27). The earthy man has a disposition of versatile subtlety, fashioned and concocted of elements of all sorts It was to be expected, <sup>45</sup>

PHILO

- 45 τιθέναι οὖν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, τῷ παντὶ κόσμῳ, ρίζωθέντα εἰκὸς ἦν τὸν μέσον νοῦν, ὀλκοῖς πρὸς τὰναντία κεχρημένον δυνάμεσιν ἐπὶ τὴν διάκρισίν τε αὐτῶν ἀνακληθέντα,<sup>1</sup> ἵνα πρὸς αἴρεσιν καὶ φυγὴν ὀρμήσας, εἰ μὲν τὰ ἀμείνω δεξιῶσαιτο, ἀθανασίας καὶ εὐκλείας ἀπόνοιτο, εἰ δ' αὖ τὰ χεῖρω, ψεκτὸν θάνατον εὕρηται.
- 46 XII. Τοιαῦτα μὲν δὴ δένδρα ὁ μόνος σοφὸς ἐν ψυχαῖς λογικαῖς ἐρρίζου. Μωυσῆς δὲ οἰκτιζόμενος τοὺς μετανάστας ἐκ τοῦ τῶν ἀρετῶν παραδείσου γεγονότας καὶ τὸ ἀντεξούσιον τοῦ θεοῦ κράτος καὶ τὰς ἰλεως καὶ ἡμέρους αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> δυνάμεις εὔχεται, ὅθεν ὁ γήινος νοῦς Ἀδὰμ πεφυγάδευται, κείθι τοὺς ὀρατικούς ἐμφυτευθῆναι· λέγει γάρ·
- 47 “ εἰσαγαγὼν καταφύτευσον αὐτοὺς εἰς ὄρος κληρονομίας<sup>3</sup> σου, εἰς ἔτοιμον κατοικητήριόν σου ὃ κατειργάσω, κύριε, ἀγίασμα, κύριε, ὃ ἠτοίμασαν αἱ χεῖρές σου· κύριος βασιλεύων τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ
- 48 ἐπ' αἰῶνα καὶ ἔτι.” | οὐκοῦν σαφέστατα εἰ καὶ
 [337] τις ἄλλος ἔμαθεν, ὅτι τὰ σπέρματα καὶ τὰς ρίζας ἀπάντων καθεὶς ὁ θεὸς αἰτιὸς ἔστι τοῦ τὸ μέγιστον ἀναβλαστῆσαι φυτόν, τόνδε τὸν κόσμον, ὃν καὶ νῦν ἔοικεν αἰνίττεσθαι δι' αὐτοῦ τοῦ λεχθέντος ἄσματος “ ὄρος ” αὐτὸν “ κληρονομίας ” εἰπῶν· ἐπειδὴ τοῦ πεποιηκότος οἰκειότατον τὸ
- 49 γενόμενον κτῆμα καὶ κλῆρος. εὔχεται οὖν ἡμᾶς ἐν τούτῳ φυτευθῆναι, οὐχ ἵνα ἄλογοι καὶ ἀφηνιασταὶ γενώμεθα τὰς φύσεις, ἀλλ' ἵνα ἐπόμενοι τῇ τοῦ τελειοτάτου διοικήσει τὴν κατὰ τὰ

<sup>1</sup> So Wend. : mss. μετα κλη(κλι, βλη)θῆναι.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῦ is transposed with Cohn. <sup>3</sup> mss. κληροδοσίας.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 45-49

then, that God should plant and set in the garden, or the whole universe, the middle or neutral mind, played upon by forces drawing it in opposite directions and given the high calling to decide between them, that it might be moved to choose and to shun, to win fame and immortality should it welcome the better, and incur a dishonourable death should it choose the worse.

XII. Such, then, were the trees which He Who 46 alone is wise planted in rational souls. Moses, lamenting over those who had become exiles from the garden of the virtues, implores alike God's absolute sovereignty and His gracious and gentle powers, that the people endowed with sight may be planted in on the spot whence the earthly mind, called Adam, has been banished. This is what he says : " Bring them in, plant them in the mountain 47 of Thine inheritance, in the place, O Lord, which is ready, which Thou wroughtest for Thee to dwell in, the sanctuary, O Lord, which Thy hands have made ready : the Lord is sovereign for ever and ever " (Exod. xv. 17 f.). So Moses, beyond all others, had 48 most accurately learned that God, by setting the seeds and roots of all things, is the Cause of the greatest of all plants springing up, even this universe. It is at this evidently that he points in the present instance by the words of the Song itself just quoted, by calling the world " the mountain of Thine inheritance," since that which has been brought into being is, in a peculiar degree, the possession and portion of him who has made it. So he prays that in this 49 we may be planted. He would not have us become irrational and unruly in our natures. Nay, he would have us comply with the ordering of the All-perfect,

PHILO

αὐτὰ καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχουσιν αὐτοῦ διέξοδον ἀπομιμούμενοι σὺφρονι καὶ ἀπταιστώ βίῳ χρώ-
 μεθα· τὸ γὰρ ἀκολουθία φύσεως ἰσχύσαι ζῆν 50 εὐδαιμονίας τέλος εἶπον οἱ πρῶτοι. καὶ
 μὴν τὰ γε αὖθις λεγόμενα συνάδει τῷ προτεθέντι, τὸ<sup>1</sup> τὸν κόσμον εὐτρεπῆ καὶ ἔτοιμον αἰσθητὸν
 οἶκον εἶναι θεοῦ, τὸ κατειργάσθαι καὶ μὴ ἀγένητον
 εἶναι, ὡς ᾠήθησάν τινες, τὸ “ἀγίασμα,” οἶον ἀγίων ἀπαύγασμα, μίμημα ἀρχετύπου, ἐπεὶ τὰ
 αἰσθήσει καλὰ τῶν νοήσει καλῶν εἰκόνες, τὸ
 ἡτοιμάσθαι ὑπὸ χειρῶν θεοῦ, τῶν κοσμοποιῶν 51 αὐτοῦ δυνάμεων. ἀλλ’ ὅπως μηδεὶς ὑπολάβοι τὸν ποιητὴν χρεῖον εἶναί τινος τῶν γεγονότων, τὸ ἀναγκαιότατον ἐπιφωνήσει· “βασιλεύων τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ ἐπ’ αἰῶνα καὶ ἔτι.” βασιλέα<sup>2</sup> δὲ οὐδενὸς δεῖσθαι, 52 τὰ δὲ ὑπήκοα βασιλέως θέμις πάντα. τινὲς δὲ
 ἔφασαν κλῆρον εἶναι καὶ λέγεσθαι θεοῦ τὸ ἀγαθόν,
 οὐ τὴν χρῆσιν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν εὐχεσθαι νυνὶ Μωυσῆν προσγενέσθαι· εἰσαγαγών, γὰρ φησιν, ἡμᾶς οἷα παῖδας ἄρτι μανθάνειν ἀρχομένους διὰ
 τῶν σοφίας δογμάτων καὶ θεωρημάτων καὶ μὴ
 ἀστοιχειώτους ἑάσας ἐν ὑψηλῷ καὶ οὐρανίῳ λόγῳ 53 καταφύτευσον. κλῆρος γὰρ οὗτος ἔτοιμότητος καὶ προχειρότατος οἶκος, ἐπιτηδειότατον ἐνδιαί-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. τῷ.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. βασιλεῖ, βασιλεὺς.

---

<sup>a</sup> The argument seems to be that to be planted in the Cosmos is to be planted in nature. Thus the text can be harmonized with the Stoic doctrine of “living according to nature.”

<sup>b</sup> Lit. “bring in,” “introduce,” almost “apprentice.”

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 49-53

and faithfully copying His constant and undeviating course, pursue without stumbling a life of self-mastery : for to attain the power to live as nature bids has been pronounced by the men of old supreme happiness.<sup>a</sup> And mark how well the 50 epithets that follow harmonize with that which was put first. The world, we read, is God's house in the realm of sense-perception, prepared and ready for Him. It is a thing wrought, not, as some have fancied, uncreate. It is a "sanctuary," an outshining of sanctity, so to speak, a copy of the original ; since the objects that are beautiful to the eye of sense are images of those in which the understanding recognizes beauty. Lastly, it has been prepared by the "hands" of God, his world-creating powers. And to the end that none may suppose that the 51 Maker is in need of those whom He has made, Moses will crown his utterance with the point that is vital beyond all others : "reigning for ever and ever." It is an established principle that a sovereign is dependent on no one, while subjects are in all respects dependent on the sovereign. Some have 52 maintained that that which is God's portion, and is spoken of here as such, is that which is good, and that Moses' prayer in this instance is for the obtaining of the experience and enjoyment thereof. For his prayer runs thus : "Initiate<sup>b</sup> us, the children just beginning to learn, by means of the pronouncements and principles of wisdom, and leave us not ungrounded, but plant us in a high and heavenly doctrine.<sup>c</sup>" For this is a "portion" best prepared, 53 a "house" most ready, an abode most fitting, which

<sup>a</sup> Or "Reason," here identified with "the Good"; "high" is added to bring in the "mountain."

PHILO

- τημα, ὃ “κατειργάσω ἅγιον”. ἀγαθῶν γὰρ καὶ
 ἀγίων, ὧ δέσποτα, ποιητῆς ὧν τυγχάνεις, ὡς
 ἔμπαλιν κακῶν καὶ βεβήλων γένεσις ἢ φθαρτή.
 βασίλευε δὴ τὸν ἄπειρον αἰῶνα ψυχῆς τῆς ἰκέτιδος
 μηδὲ ἀκαρὲς ἔων αὐτὴν ἀνηγεμόνευτον· ἢ γὰρ
 ἀδιάστατος παρὰ σοὶ δουλεία τῆς μεγίστης ἀρχῆς, 54 οὐκ ἐλευθερίας μόνον ἀμείνων. XIII. πολλοῖς δὲ ἂν τάχα που ζήτησιν παράσχοι, τίνα ἔχει λόγον
 τὸ “εἰς ὄρος κληρονομίας σου”. κληροδοτεῖν μὲν
 θεὸν ἀναγκαῖον, κληρονομεῖν δὲ ἴσως οὐκ εὐλογον 55 πάντων αὐτοῦ κτημάτων ὄντων. ἀλλὰ μήποτε τοῦτο λέγεται ἐπὶ τῶν κατὰ τὸν ἐξαιρέτον οἰκειώσεως λόγον δεσποζομένων πρὸς αὐτοῦ, καθάπερ
 οἱ βασιλεῖς ἀπάντων μὲν ἄρχουσι τῶν ὑπηκόων,
 [338] διαφερόντως δὲ τῶν οἰκετῶν, οἷς πρὸς | τὴν τοῦ
 σώματος ἐπιμέλειαν καὶ τὴν ἄλλην δίαιταν ὑπηρε-56 ταις εἰώθασι χρῆσθαι. οἱ δὲ αὐτοὶ καὶ
 τῶν κατὰ τὴν χώραν ἀπάντων ὄντες κτημάτων
 δεσπότηται καὶ ὄσων ἐπικρατεῖν οἱ ἰδιῶται δοκοῦσι, μόνα ταῦτα ἔχειν νομίζονται, ἅπερ ἐπιτρόποις καὶ
 ἐπιμεληταῖς ἐγχειρίσαιεν, ἀφ’ ὧν καὶ τὰς ἐτησίους
 προσόδους ἐκλέγουσιν· εἰς ἃ πολλάκις ἀνέσεως καὶ εὐθυμίας ἔνεκα προσέρχονται τὸ βαρύτερον τῶν ἐν πολιτείᾳ καὶ βασιλείᾳ φροντῖδων ἄχθος ἀπο-τιθέμενοι· καὶ καλεῖται μέντοι ταῦτα τὰ κτήματα 57 αὐτοῖς βασιλικά. καὶ μὴν ἄργυρός τε καὶ χρυσὸς
 καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα κειμήλια παρὰ τοῖς ἀρχομένοις
 θησαυροφυλακεῖται τῶν ἡγουμένων μᾶλλον ἢ τῶν ἐχόντων ἐστίν, ἀλλ’ ὁμως ἴδιοι τῶν βασιλέων

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 53-57

“Thou hast wrought as a Holy Place”; for of things good and holy, O Master, Thou art Maker, as from the corruptible creation come things evil and profane. Reign through the age that has no limit over the soul that implores Thee, never leaving it for one moment without a sovereign Ruler : for never-ceasing slavery under Thee surpasses not freedom only but the highest sovereignty. XIII. It is 54 possible that the words “Into the mountain of Thine inheritance” may suggest to many an inquiry as to how to account for them : for that God gives portions is a necessary truth, but it may appear a contradiction that He should obtain a portion, since all things belong to Him. This expression would seem 55 to apply to those who are on a special footing of more intimate relationship with Him as their Master. So kings are rulers of all their subjects, but in an eminent degree of their household servants, of whose ministry they are accustomed to avail themselves for the care of their persons and their other requirements. Again these same rulers, though 56 they are masters of all properties throughout the land, including those over which private citizens have apparent control, are reckoned to have those only which they place in the hands of bailiffs and agents, from which also they collect the yearly income. To these they frequently resort for holiday and enjoyment, laying aside the serious burden of the anxieties incident to government and sovereignty, and these estates of theirs go by the name of royal demesnes. Again, silver and gold, and other precious 57 things which are kept in the treasuries of subjects, belong to the rulers rather than to those who have them. But in spite of this we speak of sovereigns’

PHILO

θησαυροὶ λέγονται, ἐν οἷς οἱ ταχθέντες τῶν φόρων ἐκλογεῖς<sup>1</sup> <τὰς> ἀπὸ τῆς χώρας προσόδους κατα-58 τίθενται. μηδὲν οὖν θαυμάσης, εἰ καὶ τοῦ πανηγεμόνος θεοῦ τὸ ἐφ' ἅπασιν κράτος εἰληχότος ἐξαιρέτος κληῖρος εἶναι λέγεται ψυχῶν σοφῶν ὁ θίασος, ὃ<sup>2</sup> ὀξύωπέστατα ὄρων, ἀμέμπτω καὶ ἀκραιφνεῖ κεχρημένος τῷ διανοίας ὄμματι, μύσαντι
 μὲν οὐδέποτε, ἀεὶ δὲ ἀναπεπταμένω καὶ εὐθυτενῶς 59 βλέποντι. XIV. οὐ διὰ τοῦτο μέντοι καὶ ἐν ᾧδῃ τῇ μείζονι λέγεται· “ἐπερώτησον τὸν πατέρα
 σου καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ σοι, τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους σου καὶ ἐρουσί σοι· ὅτε διεμέριζεν ὁ ὕψιστος ἔθνη, ὡς διέσπειρεν υἱοὺς Ἀδάμ, ἔστησεν ὄρια ἐθνῶν κατὰ
 ἀριθμὸν ἀγγέλων θεοῦ· καὶ ἐγένετο μερὶς κυρίου 60 λαὸς αὐτοῦ Ἰσραήλ”; ἰδοὺ γὰρ πάλιν μερίδα
 καὶ κληῖρον εἶρηκε θεοῦ τὸν ὄρατικὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ
 γνήσιον θεραπευτὴν τρόπον, τοὺς δὲ γῆς παῖδας, οὓς Ἀδὰμ ὠνόμασεν υἱοὺς, ἐσπάρθαι καὶ ἀνα-σκεδασθῆναι καὶ μηκέτι συναχθῆναι,<sup>3</sup> στίφος δὲ γενέσθαι<sup>4</sup> ἡγεμόνι χρήσασθαι ὀρθῶ λόγῳ μὴ δυναμένους. τῷ γὰρ ὄντι ἀρμονίας μὲν καὶ ἐνώσεως
 αἴτιον ἀρετῆ, διαλύσεως δὲ καὶ διαρτήσεως ἢ 61 ἐναντία διάθεσις. δεῖγμα μέντοι τῶν
 εἰρημένων ἐστὶ τὸ γινόμενον ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος ἡμέρα
 τῇ λεγομένῃ τοῦ ἰλασμοῦ· τότε γὰρ διείρηται “δύο τράγους διακληροῦν, τὸν μὲν τῷ κυρίῳ,
 [339] τὸν δὲ τῷ ἀποπομπαίῳ,” | διττὸν λόγον, ὃν μὲν

<sup>1</sup> ἐκλογεῖς is read for ἐκλογισταὶ with Cohn in Addenda.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. δς οτ ὄς.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. καὶ ἐπισυνε(α)χθῆναι.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. ἐγγενέσθαι.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 57-61

private coffers in which the appointed collectors of dues deposit the revenues from the country. Marvel 58 not at all, then, if the title of special portion of God the universal Ruler, to whom sovereignty over all pertains, is bestowed upon the company of wise souls, whose vision is supremely keen, the eye of whose understanding is clear and flawless, closing never, ever open in a gaze direct and piercing. XIV. Is 59 not this the explanation of that utterance in the Greater Song: "Ask thy father, and he will proclaim it to thee, thy elders, and they will tell it thee; when the Most High distributed the nations, when He dispersed the sons of Adam, He set up boundaries of the nations corresponding to the number of the angels of God, and His people Israel became the portion of the Lord" (Deut. xxxii. 7-9)? Mark 60 how he has again given the name of "portion" and "lot" of God to the character that has eyes to see Him and accords Him genuine devotion, while he says that the children of earth, whom he entitles sons of Adam, have been dispersed and broken up and no more gathered together but are become a mob incapable of following the guidance of right reason. For virtue is in very deed the cause of harmony and unity, whereas the contrary disposition brings about dissolution and dismemberment. An 61 illustration of what has been said is afforded by that which is done year by year on the day called the "Day of Atonement." It is enjoined on that day "to assign by lot two goats, one for the Lord, and one for separation"<sup>a</sup> (Lev. xvi. 8), a twofold description,<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 495.

<sup>b</sup> Or "two ways of thinking," the goats representing two different attitudes of mind.

PHILO

θεῶ, ὃν δὲ γενέσει· ὁ ἀποσεμνύνων μὲν οὖν τὸ αἴτιον [τιμὴν] αὐτῷ προσκληρώσεται, ὁ δὲ γένεσιν<sup>1</sup> φυγαδευθήσεται, τῶν μὲν ἱερωτάτων ἐλαυνόμενος χωρίων, εἰς δὲ ἄβατα καὶ βέβηλα καὶ βάραθρώδη<sup>2</sup> ἐμπίπτων.

- 62 XV. Τοσαύτη μέντοι τῇ <τοῦ> θεοφιλοῦς περιουσία χρήται Μωυσῆς, ὥστε αὐτῷ τούτῳ μάλιστα πεπιστευκῶς θερμότεροις καὶ μείζοσιν ἢ κατὰ τὰς ἀσθενεστέρων<sup>3</sup> ἡμῶν ἀκοὰς λόγοις τε καὶ δόγμασιν εἴωθε χρήσθαι· οὐ γὰρ μόνον ἀξιοὶ κληρονομεῖν θεόν, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτόν, τὸ παραδοξότατον, κλῆρον
- 63 ἐτέρων εἶναι. φυλὴν γὰρ ὅλην πρόσφυγα καὶ ἰκέτιν αὐτοῦ λῆξιν μὲν τῆς χώρας, καθάπερ τὰς ἄλλας ἔνδεκα, οὐκ ἠξίωσε νείμασθαι, γέρας δὲ ἐξαίρετον λαβεῖν ἱερωσύνην, οὐκ ἐπίγειον, ἀλλ' ὀλύμπιον κτῆμα· “οὐ γὰρ ἔσται” φησί “τῇ φυλῇ Λευὶ μερὶς οὐδὲ κλῆρος ἐν υἱοῖς Ἰσραήλ, ὅτι κύριος αὐτὸς κλῆρος αὐτῶν.” καὶ ἐκ προσώπου μέντοι τοῦ θεοῦ διὰ τῶν χρησμῶν ἄδεται τὸν τρόπον τοῦτον· “ἐγὼ μερὶς σου καὶ κληρο-
- 64 δοσία.” τῷ γὰρ ὄντι ὁ τελείως ἐκκεκαθαρμένος νοῦς καὶ πάντα τὰ γενέσεως ἀπογινώσκων ἐν μόνον οἶδε καὶ γνωρίζει τὸ ἀγένητον, ᾧ προσελήλυθεν, ὑφ' οὗ καὶ προσείληπται. τίνι γὰρ ἔξεστιν εἰπεῖν “αὐτὸς μοι μόνος ἐστὶν ὁ θεός” ἢ τῷ μηδὲν τῶν μετ' αὐτὸν ἀσπαζομένῳ; οὗτος δ' ἐστὶν ὁ Λευίτης τρόπος· ἐρμηνεύεται γὰρ “αὐτὸς μοι” διὰ τὸ ἄλλα ἄλλοις τετιμῆσθαι,

<sup>1</sup> MSS. γενέσει.

<sup>2</sup> βαραθρώδη is Mangey's conj. for βάραθρα.

<sup>3</sup> ἀσθενεστέρων is Mangey's conj. for ἐτέρων.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 61-64

one for God and one for created things. That which exalts the First Cause shall be allotted to Him, while that which exalts creation shall be banished, driven from the most holy places, to find itself amid rocky chasms in trackless and unhallowed regions.

XV. So fully does Moses take advantage of the 62 prerogative of one beloved of God, that, inspired with confidence by this very fact, he is wont to use language and utter teachings larger and more daring than suit the ears of us feeble folk. For not only does he think it in accordance with God's dignity to obtain a portion, but, what is strangest of all, Himself to be the portion of others. For he deemed it meet and 63 right that a whole tribe, which had taken refuge at God's footstool, should be allotted no part of the country, like the other eleven tribes, but should receive the pre-eminent privilege of the priesthood, a possession not earthly but heavenly. "The tribe of Levi," he says, "shall have no lot or portion among the children of Israel, for the Lord is their portion" (Deut. x. 9); and there is an utterance rung out on this wise by the holy oracles in the name of God, "I am thy portion and inheritance" (Numb. xviii. 20): for in reality the mind, which has been perfectly 64 cleansed and purified, and which renounces all things pertaining to creation, is acquainted with One alone, and knows but One, even the Uncreate, to Whom it has drawn nigh, by Whom also it has been taken to Himself. For who is at liberty to say "God Himself is alone (and all) to me," save one who has no welcome for aught that comes after Him? And this is the Levite attitude of mind, for the word means "He (is precious) to me," the thought conveyed being that while different things have been held precious by

PHILO

μόνῳ δὲ αὐτῷ τὸ ἀνωτάτω καὶ πάντων ἄριστον 65 αἴτιον. XVI. ἤδη τινὰ τῶν παλαιῶν φασὶ καθάπερ ἐκπρεπεστάτης γυναικὸς τῷ σοφίας ἐπιμανέντα κάλλει πολυτελεστάτης πομπῆς θεα-σάμενον παρασκευὴν ἄφθονον, ἀπιδόντα πρὸς τινὰς
 τῶν συνήθων εἰπεῖν “ἴδετε, ὦ ἑταῖροι, ὅσων χρεῖαν οὐκ ἔχω,” καίτοι γε ἔξω τῶν ἀναγκαίων οὐδὲν ἀπλῶς περιβεβλημένον, ὡς μηδὲ ὑποφυσηθέντα πλούτου μεγέθει, ὃ μυρίους συνέβη, δόξαι 66 τῷ λόγῳ καταλαζονεύεσθαι. τοῦθ<sup>1</sup> ὁ νομοθέτης ἐκδιδάσκει φρονεῖν δεῖν τοὺς μηδὲν χρῆμα τῶν ἐν γενέσει πορίζοντας,<sup>2</sup> ἀπογινώσκοντας δὲ ὅσα γενητὰ διὰ τὴν πρὸς τὸν ἀγένητον οἰκειότητα, ὃν μόνον
 πλοῦτον καὶ εὐδαιμονίας ὄρον τελεωτάτης ἐνόμισαν.
 67 μηκέτι νῦν οἱ τὰς βασιλείας καὶ
 ἡγεμονίας ἀναψάμενοι μεγαλαυχείτωσαν, οἱ μὲν
 ὅτι μίαν πόλιν ἢ χώραν ἢ ἔθνος ἐν ὑπηγάγοντο,
 οἱ δὲ ὅτι πάντα μὲν γῆς κλίματα μέχρι τῶν
 περάτων αὐτῆς, πάντα δὲ Ἑλληνικὰ καὶ βαρβαρικὰ
 ἔθνη, πάντας δὲ ποταμοὺς καὶ τὰ ἄπειρα πλήθει<sup>3</sup> 68 καὶ μεγέθει πελάγη προσεκτήσαντο. καὶ γὰρ εἰ
 μετὰ τούτων τῆς μεταρσίου φύσεως, ὃ μηδὲ εἰπεῖν εὐαγές, ἦν μόνην ἐκ πάντων ἀδούλωτον καὶ
 ἐλεύθερον ὁ ποιητῆς εἰργάσατο, ἐπεκράτησαν,
 [340] ἰδιῶται νομισθεῖεν ἂν κατὰ σύγκρισιν | μεγάλων
 βασιλέων, οἱ τὸν θεὸν κλῆρον ἔλαχον· ὅσῳ γὰρ ὁ

<sup>1</sup> mss. and Wend. καταλαζονεύεσθαι τοῦ θεοῦ δ: Heinemann's punctuation and reading (τοῦθ' for τοῦ θ) are adopted.

<sup>2</sup> mss. πορίζοντας: Wend. γνωρίζοντας.

<sup>3</sup> mss. πλήθη.

<sup>a</sup> μόνον would make better sense.

<sup>b</sup> Or “highest.”

<sup>c</sup> See note on Quod Deus 146.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 64-68

different people, he is alone <sup>a</sup> in holding precious the original <sup>b</sup> and worthiest Cause of all things. XVI. They say <sup>c</sup> that in olden time one who was en- 65 raptured by the beauty of wisdom, as by that of some distinguished lady, after watching the array of a procession pass by on which vast sums had been lavished, fastened his eyes on a group of his associates and said, "See, my friends, of how many things I have no need." And yet he was wearing absolutely nothing beyond necessary clothing, so that he cannot be supposed to have been puffed up by his great riches, as countless thousands have been, and to have uttered the words as a boast. This is the mind 66 which, as the lawgiver insists, should be that of those who provide themselves with no property that has its place among things created, but renounce all these on the ground of that intimate association with the Uncreate, to possess Whom, they are convinced, is the only wealth, the only gauge of consummate happiness. In face of this let those cease 67 their proud boastings who have acquired royal and imperial sway, some by bringing under their authority a single city or country or nation, some by having, over and above these, made themselves masters of all earth's regions to its fullest bounds, all nations, Greek and barbarian alike, all rivers, and seas unlimited in number and extent. For even had they, 68 besides controlling these, extended their empire, an idea which it were impious to utter, to the realm of the upper air, alone of all things made by the Creator to enjoy a freedom untouched by bondage—even then, they would be reckoned ordinary citizens when compared with great kings who received God as their portion; for the kingship of these as far sur-

κτησάμενος τὸ κτήμα τοῦ κτήματος ἀμείνων καὶ
 τὸ πεποιηκὸς τοῦ γεγονότος, τοσοῦτω βασιλικῶ-69 τεροι ἐκείνοι. XVII. τοὺς μὲν οὖν πάντα τοῦ σπουδαίου φάσκοντας εἶναι παραδοξολογεῖν ᾤθησαν τινες ἀφορῶντες εἰς τὴν
 ἐκτὸς ἔνδειάν τε καὶ περιουσίαν καὶ μηδένα τῶν
 ἀχρημάτων ἢ ἀκτημόνων πλούσιον νομίζοντες.
 Μωυσῆς δὲ οὕτως περιβλεπτον καὶ περιμάχητον
 ἡγεῖται σοφίαν, ὥστε οὐ μόνον τὸν σύμπαντα
 κόσμον ἀξιοχρεω κληρον αὐτῆς ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν τῶν 70 ὅλων ἡγεμόνα νομίζειν. τὰ δὲ δόγματα οὐκ
 ἐπαμφοτεριζόντων ταῦτ<sup>1</sup> ἐστίν, ἀλλὰ βεβαία πίστει κατεσχημένων· ἐπεὶ καὶ νῦν εἰσὶ τινες τῶν ἐπιμορφαζόντων εὐσέβειαν, οἵ τὸ πρόχειρον τοῦ
 λόγου παρασυκοφαντοῦσι φάσκοντες οὐθ' ὄσιον
 οὐτ' ἀσφαλὲς εἶναι λέγειν ἀνθρώπου θεὸν κληρον.
 71 οὐ γὰρ ἀπὸ γνησίου τοῦ πάθους, ἀλλ'
 ὑποβολιμαίου καὶ νόθου, πρὸς τὴν θεωρίαν τῶν πραγμάτων, εἴπομ' ἂν αὐτοῖς, ἤκετε· ἐν ἴσῳ γὰρ
 ᾤθητε τὰ ἀμπέλων ἢ ἐλαιῶν ἢ τῶν ὁμοιοτρόπων κτήματα τῶν<sup>2</sup> ἔχόντων καὶ σοφῶν τὸν θεὸν κληρον λέγεσθαι, καὶ οὐκ ἐνενοήσατε ὅτι καὶ ζωγράφοις ζωγραφία καὶ συνόλως τέχνη τῷ τεχνίτη λέγεται
 κλήρος, οὐχ ὡς γήινον κτήμα, ἀλλ' ὡς ὀλύμπιον 72 ἀγώνισμα. δεσπάζεται γὰρ τῶν τοιούτων οὐδέν, ἀλλ' ὠφελεῖ τοὺς ἔχοντας· ὥστε καὶ τὸ ὄν κληρον
 μὴ ὡς κτήμα τούτοις ἐμφερὲς ἀκούετε τοῖς λεχ-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρων ταῦτόν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. κτημάτων οὐ κτήματα (om. τῶν).

* Or "press unduly."

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 68-72

passes theirs as he that has gained possession is better than the possession, and he that has made than that which he has made. XVII.

Some, paying regard to outward want and outward 69
superfluity, and reckoning no one rich if found among those without money or possessions, have looked on the assertion that all things belong to the wise man as a paradox. But Moses considers wisdom an object of such admiration and emulation, that he thinks its worthy portion to be not merely the whole world, but the very Lord of all. These are not, we must 70
remember, opinions held by men who halt between two opinions, but by men possessed by steadfast faith ; for even now there are in the ranks of those who wear a semblance of piety, men who in a petty spirit find fault with<sup>a</sup> the literal sense of the word, urging that it is irreligious and dangerous to speak of God as the portion of man. What I 71

would say to them is this : " The frame of mind in which you approached the consideration of the subject was not a genuine one, but spurious and illegitimate. You imagined that there is no difference between the way in which God is said to be the portion of the wise, and the way in which plantations of vines or olive trees or the like are said to be the possessions of their owners. You failed to notice that portrait-painting is spoken of as a lot or portion for portrait-painters, and generally any such pursuit for him who pursues it, not as an earthly possession to be owned, but as a heavenly prize to be striven for. For things 72 such as these bring benefit to those who have them, without being under them as masters. Pray, then, you petty fault-finders, when you hear the Existing One spoken of as Portion, do not take it to mean a

PHILO

- θεισιν, ὧ συκοφάνται, ἀλλ' ὡς ὠφελιμώτατον καὶ
 μεγίστων<sup>1</sup> τοῖς θεραπεύειν ἀξιούσιν ἀγαθῶν αἴτιον.
- 73 XVIII. Εἰρηκότες οὖν περὶ τοῦ πρώτου φυ-τουργοῦ καὶ φυτοῦ τὰ ἀρμόζοντα μέτιμεν ἐξῆς
 ἐπὶ τὰς τῶν μαθημάτων ἅμα καὶ μιμημάτων
 ἐπιμελείας. εὐθέως τοίνυν ὁ σοφὸς Ἀβραὰμ
 λέγεται “φυτεῦσαι ἄρουραν ἐπὶ τῷ φρέατι τοῦ
 ὄρκου καὶ ἐπικαλέσαι τὸ ὄνομα κυρίου θεοῦ
 αἰωνίου<sup>2</sup>”· καὶ οὐ δεδήλωται τῶν φυτῶν ἢ ἰδιότης, 74 ἀλλ' αὐτὸ μόνον τοῦ χωρίου τὸ μέγεθος. φασὶ
 δὲ οἷς ἔθος ἐρευνᾶν τὰ τοιαῦτα, πάνθ'<sup>3</sup> ὅσα ἐν κτήμασιν ἠκριβῶσθαι διαφερόντως, καὶ τὸ δένδρον
 καὶ τὸ χωρίον καὶ τὸν τοῦ δένδρου καρπὸν· τὸ
 μὲν οὖν δένδρον αὐτὴν εἶναι τὴν ἄρουραν, ἀλλ'
 οὐχ ὅμοιον<sup>4</sup> τοῖς βλαστάνουσιν ἀπὸ γῆς, ἀλλὰ
 κατὰ τὴν τοῦ θεοφιλοῦς ρίζωθὲν διάνοιαν, τὸ
 δὲ χωρίον τὸ φρέαρ τοῦ ὄρκου, τὸν δὲ καρπὸν
 τὴν τοῦ κυρίου ὀνόματος μετάληψιν εἰς θεὸν 75 αἰώνιον. τὸν δὲ περὶ ἐκάστου τῶν προταθέντων
 εἰκότα λόγον ἀναγκαῖον προσαποδοῦναι· ἢ μὲν
 [341] τοίνυν ἄρουρα μήκει πηχῶν | οὐσα ἑκατὸν καὶ
 πλάτει τῶν ἴσων κατὰ τὴν τοῦ τετραγώνου φύσιν
 πολυπλασιασθέντων εἰς μυρίων ἀριθμὸν ἐπιπέδων 76 συντίθεται πηχῶν. ἔστι δὲ ὄρος οὗτος τῶν ἀπὸ μονάδος παραυξηθέντων ὁ μέγιστος καὶ τελειότατος, ὥστε ἀρχὴν μὲν ἀριθμῶν εἶναι μονάδα, τέλος δὲ ἐν τοῖς κατὰ τὴν πρώτην σύνθεσιν μυριάδα.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μέγιστον.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. θεοῦ αἰωνίου: Wend. θεὸς αἰώνιος.

<sup>3</sup> πάνθ' is read with Heinemann for πάντα θεοῦ in MSS.

<sup>4</sup> ὅμοιον and ρίζωθὲν are Heinemann's conjj. for ὁμοίαν and ριζωθεῖσαν.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 72-76

possession similar to those which have been mentioned, but to mean One bringing vast benefits and the Cause of exceeding great good to those who regard His service as their fit employment."

XVIII. Having said, then, what was called for about 73 the first Planter and that which He planted, we will pass on next to the industry of those who have learnt from the former and copied the latter. We come at once to the record<sup>a</sup> of Abraham the wise "planting a hide of land at the well of the oath, and invoking upon it the Name of the Lord as God eternal" (Gen. xxi. 33). No particulars are given as to the kind of plants meant, but simply the size of the plot of ground. Yet those whose habit it is to look closely 74 into such matters assure us that we have all the points of an estate laid down with extraordinary precision, the tree, the ground, and the fruit of the tree; the hide itself being the tree; not a tree like those which spring up from the earth, but one planted in the understanding of him that is beloved of God; the well of the oath, the plot of ground; and the change of the Name of the Lord into "God eternal," the Fruit. Each of these points requires further treat- 75 ment in the shape of such a reasoned account of them as may commend itself. Well, the hide, being 100 cubits long and as many broad, comes, by the rule of square measure, to 10,000 superficial cubits. This is the highest completest term in the series 76 which increases from unity: that is to say, while 1 is the starting-point of numbers, a myriad or 10,000 is the end,<sup>a</sup> if we adhere to the line of progress on which we set out.<sup>b</sup> Accordingly that comparison is

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 495.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 496.

PHILO

παρὸ καὶ τινες οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ βαλβίδι μὲν μονάδα, καμπτήρι δὲ εἵκασαν μυριάδα, τοὺς δὲ μεθορίους πάντας ἀριθμοὺς τοῖς δρόμον ἀγωνιζομένοις· ἀρχόμενοι γὰρ ὥσπερ ἀπὸ βαλβίδος φέρεσθαι μονάδος παρὰ μυριάδα τὸ τέλος ἴστανται.

- 77 Μειτόντες οὖν ἀπὸ τούτων τινὲς ὡσανεὶ συμβόλων ἔφασαν τὸν θεὸν ἀρχὴν καὶ πέρασ εἶναι τῶν ἀπάντων, δόγμα κατασκευαστικὸν εὐσεβείας· τοῦτο τὸ δόγμα φυτευθὲν ἐν ψυχῇ κάλλιστον καὶ τροφιμώτατον καρπὸν, ὁσιότητα, τίκτει.
- 78 Τόπος <δ' > ἐστὶν οἰκειότατος τῷ φυτῷ τὸ φρέαρ, ὃ κέκληται ὄρκος, ἐν ᾧ κατέχει λόγος μὴ ἀνευρεθῆναι ὕδωρ· “ παραγενόμενοι ” γὰρ φησιν “ οἱ παῖδες Ἰσαὰκ ἀπήγγειλαν αὐτῷ περὶ τοῦ φρέατος οὗ ὠρυξαν, καὶ εἶπον· οὐχ εὕρομεν ὕδωρ, καὶ ἐκάλεσεν αὐτὸ ὄρκος.” τοῦτο δὲ ἦν ἔχει
- 79 δύναμιν θεασώμεθα· XIX. οἱ τὴν τῶν ὄντων φύσιν διερευνῶντες καὶ τὰς περὶ ἐκάστων ζητήσεις μὴ ὀλιγώρως ποιούμενοι παραπλήσια ποιῶσι τοῖς τὰ φρέατα ὀρύττουσι· καὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνοι τὰς ἐν ἀφανεί πηγὰς ἀναζητοῦσι. καὶ κοινὸς μὲν πόθος ἅπασιν ἐστὶ ποτὸν ἀνευρεῖν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς μὲν δι' οὗ σῶμα, τοῖς δὲ δι' οὗ ψυχὴ
- 80 πέφυκε τρέφεσθαι. ὥσπερ οὖν ἔνιοι τῶν ἀνατεμνόντων τὰ φρέατα τὸ ζητούμενον ὕδωρ πολλάκις οὐχ εὕρον, οὕτως οἱ προσωτέρω χωροῦντες τῶν ἐπιστημῶν καὶ ἐπὶ πλέον ἐμβαθύνοντες αὐταῖς ἀδυνατοῦσι τοῦ τέλους ἐπιψαῦσαι. τοὺς γοῦν πολυμαθεῖς φασιν ἀμαθίαν δεινὴν ἑαυτῶν

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 76-80

not wide of the mark which some have made between 1 and the post from which runners start, and 10,000 and the post at which they finish, all the intervening numbers being like the competitors in the race ; for beginning their course from 1 as from a starting-post they come to a stop at 10,000 as the finish.

Some have found symbols in these things and have 77 gone on with their help to proclaim God as the beginning and final goal of all things, a teaching on which religion can be built ; this teaching, when planted in the soul, produces piety, a fruit most fair and full of nourishment.

The well, entitled Oath, in which, as history says, 78 no water was found, is a place most appropriate to that which grew there. What we read is this : " The servants of Isaac came and brought word to him concerning the well which they had dug, saying ' We found no water,' and he called it ' Oath ' " (Gen. xxvi. 32 f.). Let us observe the force of these words.

XIX. Those who thoroughly 79 investigate the nature of existing things, and prosecute their inquiries into each one of them in no indifferent spirit, act as those do who dig wells ; for the investigators, like the well-diggers, are in search of hidden springs. And all have in common a desire to find water, but in the one case it is water naturally adapted to the nourishment of the body, in the other to the nourishment of the soul. Now just as some 80 of those who open up wells often fail to find the water of which they are in search, so those, who make more than ordinary progress in various kinds of knowledge, and go deeper into them than most of us, are often powerless to reach the end they aim at. It is said that men of great learning accuse themselves of κατηγορεῖν, μόνον γὰρ ὅσον τοῦ ἀληθοῦς ὑστερίζουσιν ἦσθοντο. καί τινα τῶν παλαιῶν λόγος ἔχει θαυμαζόμενον ἐπὶ σοφία εἰκότως φάναι θαυμάζεσθαι· μόνον γὰρ εἰδέναι ὅτι οὐδὲν οἶδεν.

PHILO

81 ἐλοῦ δ' εἰ θέλεις ἦν ἂν διανοηθῆς μικρὰν ἢ μείζονα τέχνην καὶ τὸν κατὰ ταύτην γενόμενον ἄριστόν τε καὶ δοκιμώτατον, εἶτα κατανόησον εἰ τὰ ἐπαγγέλματα τῆς τέχνης ἰσάζει τοῖς ἔργοις τοῦ τεχνίτου· σκοπῶν γὰρ εὐρήσεις ταῦτα ἐκείνων οὐ βραχέσιν ἀλλὰ μεγάλοις διαστήμασιν ἀποδέοντα, σχεδὸν ἀδυνάτου καθεστῶτος πρὸς ἡντιοῦν τελειωθῆναι τέχνην πηγῆς τρόπον αἰεταίνουμένην<sup>1</sup> καὶ θεωρημάτων παντοίων ἰδέας ἀνομοβροῦσαν.

82 διὰ τοῦθ' ὄρκος ὠνομάσθη προσφύεστατα τὸ πίστεως βεβαιότητος σύμβολον [342] μαρτυρίαν θεοῦ περιεχούσης. | ὡς γὰρ ὁ ὄμνυς τῶν ἀμφισβητουμένων καλεῖ θεὸν μάρτυρα, ἐπ' οὐδενὶ οὕτως ἔστιν εὐορκῆσαι ὡς ἐπὶ τῷ μηδεμιᾶς ἐπιστήμης εὐρίσκεισθαι παρὰ τῷ τεχνίτῃ τέλος.

83 ὁ δὲ αὐτὸς λόγος καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς ἄλλας ὅσαι περὶ ἡμᾶς δυνάμεις ὀλίγου δεῖν κεχώρηκεν· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐν τῷ λεχθέντι φρέατι ὕδωρ φασὶ μὴ εὐρεθῆναι, οὕτως οὐδὲ ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς τὸ ὄρατόν<sup>2</sup> οὐδ' ἐν ὠσὶ τὸ ἀκούειν οὐδ' ἐν μυκτῆρσι τὸ ὀσφραίνεσθαι οὐδὲ συνόλως ἐν αἰσθήσεως ὀργάνοις τὸ αἰσθάνεσθαι, κατὰ τὸ παραπλήσιον δὲ οὐδ' ἐν νῷ τὸ καταλαμ-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. κινουμένην.

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps read ὄραν or ὄρατικόν.

<sup>a</sup> See Plato, Apology 21 A.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 80-83

terrible ignorance, for all that they have come to perceive is how far they fall short of the truth. There is a story <sup>a</sup> that one of the men of the olden days, when people marvelled at his wisdom, said that he was rightly marvelled at ; for that he was the only man who knew that he knew nothing.

Choose, if you will, whatever science or art you may <sup>81</sup> be minded to choose, be it a small one or a greater one, and the man who is best and most approved in this art or science. Then notice carefully whether the professions of the science are made good by what its votary does. If you look you will find that the one fails of the other not by short but by long distances. For it is practically impossible to attain perfection in respect of any science or art whatever, seeing that it is being continually replenished, as a spring is, and ever welling up results of thought and study of many a kind.

That is why the <sup>82</sup> name of " Oath " given to it was so perfectly suitable : for an oath represents that surest form of trustworthiness which carries with it the testimony of God. For as the man who swears calls God as a witness of the points in dispute, there is no point on which it is more possible to take a sure oath than upon the fact that no subject of knowledge whatever is found to have reached the goal of perfection in the person of him who is an expert in it. The same <sup>83</sup> principle holds good for almost all the other faculties which we possess. For, just as in the well that we read of we are told that no water was found, so neither is sight found in eyes, nor hearing in ears, nor smelling in nostrils, nor, to say all at once, is sense-perception found in organs of sense ; and apprehension in like manner is not found in mind

PHILO

- 84 βάνειν. πῶς γὰρ ἂν παρορᾶν ἢ παρακούειν ἢ παρανοεῖν συνέβαινεν, εἶπερ ἐν τούτοις πάγια ἦσαν αἱ ἀντιλήψεις ἐκάστου, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἐπ' αὐτῶν θεοῦ σπεύροντος τὸ βέβαιον ἐπεφύκεσαν;
- 85 XX. Ἰκανῶς οὖν καὶ περὶ τοῦ χωρίου διειλεγμένοι, ἐν ᾧ τὸ δένδρον ἀνθεῖ, καὶ περὶ τοῦ καρποῦ τελευταῖον ἐξεργασώμεθα. τίς οὖν ὁ καρπὸς αὐτοῦ, αὐτὸς ὑφηγήσεται. “ἐπεκάλεσε” γὰρ
- 86 “τὸ ὄνομα κυρίου<sup>1</sup> θεὸς αἰώνιος.” αἱ τοίνυν λεχθεῖσαι προσρήσεις τὰς περὶ τὸ ὄν ἐμφαίνουσι δυνάμεις· ἡ μὲν γὰρ κύριος καθ’ ἣν ἄρχει, ἡ δὲ θεὸς καθ’ ἣν εὐεργετεῖ· οὐ χάριν καὶ τῇ κατὰ τὸν ἱερώτατον Μωυσῆν κοσμοποιία πάση τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ὄνομα ἀναλαμβάνεται· ἤρμοττε γὰρ τὴν δύναμιν, καθ’ ἣν ὁ ποιῶν εἰς γένεσιν ἄγων ἐτίθετο καὶ διεκοσμεῖτο, διὰ ταύτης καὶ [κατα]κλη-
- 87 θῆναι. καθὸ μὲν οὖν ἄρχων ἐστίν, ἄμφω δύνатаι, καὶ εὖ καὶ κακῶς ποιεῖν, συμμεταβαλλόμενος πρὸς τὴν τοῦ δράσαντος ἀπόδοσιν· καθὸ δὲ εὐεργέτης,
- 88 θάτερον μόνον βούλεται, τὸ εὐεργετεῖν. μέγιστον δ’ ἂν ψυχῆς γένοιτο ἀγαθὸν μηκέτι ἐνδοιάζειν περὶ τῆς πρὸς ἑκάτερα τοῦ βασιλέως ἰσχύος, ἀλλ’ ἀνενδοιάστως τὸν μὲν ἔνεκα τοῦ κράτους τῆς ἀρχῆς αὐτοῦ φόβον ἐπικρεμάμενον καταλύειν, τὴν δὲ ἐκ τοῦ προαιρετικῶς εἶναι φιλόδωρον ἀγαθῶν κτήσεως καὶ χρήσεως ἐλπίδα βεβαιοτάτην ζω-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. κύριος ὁ.

<sup>a</sup> τὴν δύναμιν . . . διὰ ταύτης: an irregular construction for καθ’ ἣν δύναμιν . . . διὰ ταύτης.

<sup>b</sup> πρὸς τὴν τοῦ δράσαντος ἀπόδοσιν: this genitive of the person requited is very doubtful Greek. Mangey proposed δρασθέντος, “the deed done.”

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 84-88

either. For how would it ever happen that we 84 should see or hear or conceive amiss, if the power to apprehend each object had been inherently fixed in the several organs, instead of the power to apprehend springing from the seed of certitude sown upon the organs by God ?

XX. Now that we have adequately dealt with the 85
further subject of the plot in which the tree blooms,
let us work out as our last point that of the fruit.
What its fruit is, then, Moses himself shall inform us : for 'tis said " he called upon it the Name of the Lord, as God eternal " (Gen. xxi. 33). The titles, 86
then, just mentioned exhibit the powers of Him that IS ; the title " Lord " the power in virtue of which He rules, that of " God " the power in virtue of which He bestows benefits. This is why the name " God " is employed throughout all the record of Creation given by Moses, that most holy man. For it was fitting that the Creator should be spoken of by a title coming to Him through that power in virtue of which,<sup>a</sup> when bringing the world into being, He set and ordered it. In so far as He is Ruler, He has 87 both powers, both to bestow benefits and to inflict evil, changing His dealing as the recompense due to the doer <sup>b</sup> of every deed demands : but in so far as He is Benefactor, He wills only the one, to bestow benefits. Very great good would come to the soul 88 from ceasing to be of two minds in face of the King's readiness to put forth His might in either direction, and if it would resolutely break down the fear that hangs over it owing to the dread force of His sovereignty, and kindle the flame of that most sure hope of winning and enjoying good things, which is afforded by the fact that to be bountiful is His choice and

PHILO

89 πυρεῖν. τὸ δὴ “θεὸς αἰώνιος” ἴσον ἐστὶ τῷ ὁ χαριζόμενος οὐ ποτὲ μὲν ποτὲ δὲ οὐ, αἰεὶ δὲ καὶ
 συνεχῶς, ὁ ἀδιαστάτως εὐεργετῶν, ὁ τὴν τῶν δωρεῶν ἐπάλληλον φορὰν ἀπαύστως συνείρων, ὁ τὰς χάριτας ἐχομένας ἀλλήλων ἀνακυκλῶν δυνάμεσιν ἐνωτικαῖς καθαρμοσάμενος, ὁ μηδένα καιρὸν
 τοῦ ποιεῖν εὖ παραλείπων, ὁ κύριος ὢν, ὡς 90 καὶ βλάπτειν δύνασθαι. XXI. τοῦτο καὶ ὁ ἀσκητῆς Ἰακώβ ἠτήσατο ἐπιτέλειαν<sup>1</sup> τῶν ἱεροπρεπεστάτων εὐχῶν· εἶπε γάρ που· “καὶ ἔσται
 κύριος ἐμοὶ εἰς θεόν,” ἴσον τῷ οὐκέτι μοι τὸ
 [343] δεσποτικὸν ἐπιδείξεται τῆς αὐτοκράτορος | ἀρχῆς,
 ἀλλὰ τὸ εὐεργετικὸν τῆς ἰλεω περὶ πάντα καὶ
 σωτηρίου δυνάμεως, τὸν μὲν οἶα ἐπὶ δεσπότη
 φόβον ἀναιρῶν, τὴν δὲ ὡς ἐπ’ εὐεργέτη φιλίαν 91 καὶ εὐνοίαν τῇ ψυχῇ παρέχων. τίς
 ἂν οὖν τοῦθ’ ὑπολάβοι ψυχῇ, ὅτι ὁ δεσπότης
 καὶ ἡγεμὼν τῶν ὄλων οὐδὲν τῆς ἑαυτοῦ φύσεως
 μεταβάλλων, μένων δὲ ἐν ὁμοίῳ, ἀγαθός ἐστι
 συνεχῶς καὶ φιλόδωρος ἀνελλιπῶς, τῶν<sup>2</sup> ὄντως
 ἀγαθῶν ἀφθόνων καὶ ἀενάων αἴτιος τελειότατος 92 τοῖς εὐδαιμονοῦσι; βασιλεῖ δὲ πεπιστευκέναι μὴ
 τῷ μεγέθει τῆς ἀρχῆς ἐπαιρομένῳ πρὸς βλάβας
 τῶν ὑπηκόων, ἀλλὰ φιλανθρωπία τὸ ἐνδεές<sup>3</sup> ἐκάστω ἐπανορθοῦσθαι προαιρουμένῳ, μέγιστόν ἐστι πρὸς
 εὐθυμίαν καὶ ἀσφάλειαν ἔρκος.

<sup>1</sup> Conj. Tr.: mss. and Wend. ἐπὶ τέλει.

<sup>2</sup> τῶν is substituted for ὅθεν, and note of interrogation placed after εὐδαιμονοῦσι on Mangey’s conj. <sup>3</sup> mss. ἀενδέες.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. although at the same time He is Lord. But the addition is strange in view of the emphasis laid on the difference of the two names. Perhaps insert οὐχ or οὐ τῷ before ὁ κύριος; i.e. the title God eternal is equivalent to

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 89-92

delight. The title " God Eternal " is equivalent to 89
" He that is, not sometimes gracious and sometimes not so, but continuously and always ; He that without intermission bestows benefits ; He that causes
His gifts to follow each other in ceaseless flow ;
He who makes His boons come round in unbroken
cycle, knitting them together by unifying forces ;
He who lets no opportunity of doing good go by ;
He who is Lord," and so is able to hurt also."

XXI. This is what Jacob, the trainer of self, claimed 90
as the fulfilment of those vows of most sacred import.
He said, you remember, " And the Lord shall be to me for God " (Gen. xxviii. 21), as much as to say,
He shall no longer exhibit towards me the masterful-ness that characterizes the rule of an autocrat, but the readiness to bless that marks the power that is in every way kindly, and bent on the welfare of men. He shall do away with the fear we feel before Him as Master, and implant in the soul the loyalty
and affection that goes out to Him as Benefactor.

What soul, in fact, would imagine that 91
the Master and Sovereign of the Universe, without undergoing any change in His own nature, but remaining as He is, is kind continuously and bountiful incessantly, supreme Author of real good things coming without stint in ceaseless flow to happy souls ? It is a strong bulwark of cheerfulness of 92 spirit and freedom from danger to have reposed our confidence in a King who is not urged by the greatness of His dominion to inflict injuries on His subjects, but whose love for man makes it His delight
to supply what is lacking to each one.

Benefactor etc., but not to Lord, which implies power to hurt. Negatives are frequently omitted in the mss. of Philo.

PHILO

93 XXII. Ἄ τοίνυν ὑπεσχόμεθα, ἤδη σχεδὸν ἀποδέδεικται, [τὸ] φυτὸν μὲν τὸ ἀρχὴν τε καὶ τέλος<sup>1</sup> λαμβάνεσθαι τῶν ἀπάντων εἶναι θεόν, χωρίον δὲ τὸ ἀκόλουθον τὸ ἐν μηδενὶ τῶν ἐν γενέσει τέλειον εὐρίσκεσθαι, ἐπ' αὐτῷ δ' ἔσθ' ὅτε χάρισι τοῦ αἰτίου προφαίνεσθαι, καρπὸς δὲ τὸ τὰς τοῦ θεοῦ διαιωνίζειν χάριτας καὶ ὀμβρούσας ἀπαύστως μηδέποτε λήγειν.

94 Οὕτως μὲν δὴ καὶ ὁ σοφὸς ἐπόμενος τῇ τοῦ πρώτου καὶ μεγίστου φυτουργοῦ τέχνῃ τὴν γεωργικὴν ἐπιδείκνυται. βούλεται δὲ ὁ ἱερός λόγος καὶ τοῖς μήπω τελειωθείσιν ἡμῖν, ἔτι δὲ ἐν μέσοις ἀριθμοῖς τῶν λεγομένων καθηκόντων ἐξεταζομένοις, διαπονηθῆναι τὰ γεωργικά· φησὶ γάρ·

95 “ὅταν εἰσέλθητε πρὸς τὴν γῆν, ἣν κύριος ὁ θεὸς ὑμῶν δίδωσιν ὑμῖν, καὶ καταφυτεύσητε πᾶν ξύλον βρώσεως, περικαθαριεῖτε τὴν ἀκαθαρσίαν αὐτοῦ· ὁ καρπὸς<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῦ τρία ἔτη ἔσται ἀπερικάθαρος,<sup>3</sup> οὐ βρωθήσεται· τῷ δὲ ἔτει τῷ τετάρτῳ ἔσται πᾶς καρπὸς αὐτοῦ ἅγιος, αἰνετὸς<sup>4</sup> τῷ κυρίῳ· τῷ δὲ ἔτει τῷ πέμπτῳ φάγεσθε τὸν καρπὸν, πρόσθεμα ὑμῖν τὰ γεννήματα αὐτοῦ. ἐγὼ εἰμι κύριος ὁ θεὸς ὑμῶν.”

96 οὐκοῦν τῶν ξύλων τὰ ἐδώδιμα, πρὶν εἰς τὴν ὑπὸ θεοῦ δοθεῖσαν χώραν μετανασθῆναι, φυτεύειν ἀδύνατον· “ὅταν γὰρ εἰσέλθητε πρὸς τὴν γῆν, φυτεύσετε πᾶν ξύλον βρώσιμον” φησὶν, ὥστε ἕξω διατρίβοντες οὐκ ἂν δυναίμεθα τὰ τοιαῦτα τῶν δένδρων γεωργεῖν· καὶ μήποτ'

<sup>1</sup> MSS. τινα κάλλιστον.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἀκάθαρος.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. τὸν καρπὸν.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. ἐν ἔτος.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

<sup>b</sup> Or “for giving praise to.” So from §§ 117 ff. it appears

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 93-96

XXII. We may take it, then, that the points which 93 we undertook to prove have now been demonstrated. That God be presupposed as Beginning and End of all things has been shewn to be the plant : as a corollary to this, that perfection is found in no part of creation, though by special grace <sup>a</sup> of the First Cause it is ever and anon displayed upon its face, has been shewn to be the plot of ground ; while the perpetuity and unceasing downpour of the gifts of God's grace has been shewn to be the fruit.

Of such sort, then, is husbandry as exhibited by 94 the sage also, treading in the steps of the first and greatest Planter. But the intention of the inspired Word is that we too who are not yet perfected, but are still classified as in the preliminary and undeveloped stages of what are called natural duties,<sup>a</sup> should make husbandry our serious business : for It says : " When ye shall have entered into the land, 95 which the Lord your God giveth you, and shall have planted any tree for food, ye shall cleanse away its uncleanness : for three years its fruit shall remain not cleansed away, it shall not be eaten : but in the fourth year all its fruit shall be holy for a thank-offering to the Lord <sup>b</sup> : but in the fifth year ye shall eat the fruit ; its crop <sup>a</sup> shall be added to your store. I am the Lord, your God " (Lev. xix. 23-25).

Accordingly it is impossible to grow 96 fruit-trees before migrating into the country given by God ; for the words are, " When ye shall have entered into the land, ye shall plant every tree yielding food," so that while staying outside we shall be unable to cultivate such trees. And this is what that Philo takes the word, which elsewhere means " praise-worthy."

PHILO

97 εικότως· ἕως μὲν γὰρ εἰς τὴν σοφίας ὁδὸν οὐ
 προσελήλυθεν ὁ νοῦς, τετραμμένος δὲ πόρρω
 πλανᾶται, τῶν τῆς ἀγρίας ὕλης ἐπιμελεῖται φυτῶν,
 ἅπερ ἦτοι ἄγωνα ὄντα ἐστείρωται ἢ γεννῶντα
 98 ἔδωδύμων ἐστὶν ἄφορα. ὅταν δὲ εἰς τὴν φρονήσεως
 [344] ἐμβὰς ὁδὸν συνεισέρχεται | τοῖς δόγμασι καὶ συντρέχη πᾶσιν, ἄρξεται<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἡμερον καὶ καρπῶν ἡμέρων οἰστικὴν ἀντὶ τῆς ἀγρίας ἐκείνης γεωργεῖν,
 ἀπάθειαν ἀντὶ παθῶν καὶ ἀντὶ ἀγνοίας ἐπιστήμην 99 καὶ ἀντὶ κακῶν ἀγαθά. ἐπεὶ οὖν<sup>2</sup> ὁ ἄρτι<sup>3</sup> εἰσαγόμενος μακρὰν τοῦ τέλους ἀφέστηκεν, εἰκό-τως φυτεύσαντι αὐτῷ προστέτακται περιελεῖν τὴν
 ἀκαθαροσίαν τοῦ φυτευθέντος. τί δὲ τοῦτ' ἐστὶ, 100 συνεπισκεψώμεθα· XXIII. τὰ μέσα τῶν καθηκόντων ἡμέρων φυτῶν ἔχειν μοι δοκεῖ λόγον·
 ἐκάτερα γὰρ ὠφελιμωτάτους φέρει καρπούς, τὰ
 μὲν σώμασι, τὰ δὲ ψυχαῖς. πολλὰ δὲ ἐν τοῖς
 μέσοις συναναβλαστάνοντα καὶ ἐπιφυόμενα τῶν
 βλαβερῶν ἀναγκαίως ἂν τέμνοιτο<sup>4</sup> τοῦ μὴ ζημιου-101 σθαι τὰ ἀμείνω χάριν. ἢ οὐκ ἂν εἴπομεν φυτὸν
 ἡμερον ψυχῆς παρακαταθήκης ἀπόδοσιν; ἀλλὰ τοῦτό γε τὸ φυτὸν καθάρσεως δεῖται καὶ περιττοτέρας ἐπιμελείας. τίς οὖν ἢ κάθαρσις ἦδε;
 παρὰ νήφοντος λαβῶν παρακαταθήκην μήτε με-
 θύοντι μήτ' ἀσώτῳ μήτε μεμνηότι ἀποδῶς—ὁ
 γὰρ λαβῶν ὄνησιν ἐκ τοῦ κομίσασθαι οὐχ ἕξει

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἄρξεται OR αὔξητε.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἀρετῆς.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. οἰκείων.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. ἂν γένοιτο.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 97-101

we might expect ; for, so long as the mind has not 97
come near and entered the way of wisdom, but turns in another direction and wanders away far off, its attention is given to trees of wild growth, which are either barren and yield nothing, or, though they are productive, bear no edible fruit. But when the mind 98 has stepped on to the way of good sense, and in the company of all its teachings comes into and runs along that way, it will begin instead of those wild trees to cultivate trees of the orchard bearing orchard fruits,
instead of passions freedom from them, knowledge
in place of ignorance, good things in the place of evil things.

Since, then, the pupil just 99 beginning his course is a long way from the end, we can quite understand why he is directed after planting to remove the uncleanness of that which he has planted. Let us get a good view of what it is to do this. XXIII. Natural duties which are 100 indifferent <sup>a</sup> seem to me to correspond to garden or orchard trees : for in each case most wholesome fruits are borne, for bodies in one case, for souls in the other.
But many harmful shoots that spring together with the trees of the preliminary stage and many harmful growths that come on them have to be cut away, to save the better parts from being injured. Might 101
we not speak of the returning of a sum entrusted to us as a tree grown in the soul's orchard ? Yet this tree at all events requires cleansing and more than usual attention. What is the cleansing in this case ?
When you have received something in trust from a man when he was sober, you should not return it to him when he is drunk, or when playing fast and loose with his money, or when mad, for the recipient will not be in a fit condition to derive any real benefit

PHILO

- καιρὸν ὠφεληθῆναι—, μηδὲ χρεώσταις ἢ δούλοις ἀποδῶς δανεισῶν καὶ δεσποτῶν ἐφεδρευόντων— προδοσία γὰρ τοῦτ' ἐστίν, οὐκ ἀπόδοσις—, μηδὲ τὴν ἐν ὀλίγοις πίστιν φύλαττε <ἐπὶ> θήρα<sup>1</sup> τῆς
- 102 ἐν πλείοσι πίστεως· δελέατά γε οἱ μὲν ἀλιευόμενοι μικρὰ καθιέντες ἐπὶ τῷ τοὺς μείζους ἀγκιστρεύεσθαι τῶν ἰχθύων οὐ σφόδρα ἂν <εἶεν> ὑπαίτιοι τῆς κατ' ἀγορὰν εὐετηρίας προνοεῖσθαι φάσκοντες καὶ ὡς ἂν ἄφθονον τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τὴν
- 103 καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ποιήσωνται δίαιταν· δέλεαρ δὴ μηδεὶς ὀλιγοχρημάτου παρακαταθήκης ἀπόδοσιν ἐπ' ἄγρα μείζονος προφερέτω, χερσὶ μὲν τὰ ἐνὸς καὶ ὀλίγα προτείνων, διανοίᾳ δὲ τὰ πάντων καὶ ἀμύθητα νοσφιζόμενος. ἔαν οὖν ὡς δένδρου τῆς παρακαταθήκης περιέλης τὰ ἀκάθαρτα, τὰς ἀπὸ τῶν ἐφεδρευόντων βλάβας, τὰς ἀκαιρίας, τὰς ἐνέδρας, τὰ ὁμοιότροπα πάντα, ἡμερώσεις τὸ μέλλον ἀγριαίνεσθαι.
- 104 XXIV. Κὰν τῷ φιλίας μέντοι φυτῷ τοιάδε<sup>2</sup> τὰ παραβλαστάνοντα τεμῆιν καὶ ἀποκόψαι φυλακῆς ἔνεκα τοῦ βελτίονος ἀναγκαῖον. τὰ δὲ παραβλαστάνοντα ταῦτ' ἐστίν· ἑταιρῶν πρὸς ἔραστὰς γοητεῖαι, πρὸς τοὺς κολακευομένους οἰκοσίτων
- 105 ἀπάται. τὰς γὰρ μισθαρνούσας ἐπὶ τῇ ὥρᾳ τοῦ σώματος ἰδεῖν ἔστι περιεχομένας τῶν ἔραστῶν ὡς δὴ σφόδρα φιλοῦσας—φιλοῦσι δὲ οὐκ ἐκείνους, ἀλλ' ἑαυτὰς καὶ τοῖς καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν λήμμασιν ἐπικεχῆνασι—, τοὺς τε κόλακας ἄλεκτον μὲν ἔστιν
- [345] ὅτε μῖσος πρὸς τοὺς | θεραπευομένους φυλάττοντας,

<sup>1</sup> mss. θήρας: Mang. ἐπὶ θήρα.

<sup>2</sup> τοιάδε conj. Tr. for ταῦτα δη.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

<sup>b</sup> See note on De Agr. 73.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 101-105

from recovering it. And do not return it to debtors or slaves,<sup>a</sup> when the creditors and masters are lying in wait for them. To do so is betrayal, not payment of a due. And do not be strict about a small sum entrusted to you, with a view to ensnaring people into trusting you with larger sums. It is true that 102 fishermen drop small baits with a view to hooking the bigger fish, and are not seriously to blame. They can plead that they are providing for a good market, and to secure people an abundant supply for the table every day. Then let no one parade the 103 payment of a trifling sum entrusted to him by way of a bait to get a larger deposit. To do so is to hold out in one's hands an insignificant amount belonging to one person, while in intention one is appropriating untold sums belonging to all men. If, then, you treat the deposit as a tree and remove its impurities, to wit payments entailing injurious treatment to the recipient, ill-timed payments, payments that are really ensnaring tricks, and everything of this kind, you will make fit for your orchard what was turning wild.

XXIV. In the tree of friendship there are out- 104 growths, such as I shall describe, to be pruned and cut off for the sake of preserving the better part. Such outgrowths are practices of courtesans for taking in their lovers, ways parasites <sup>b</sup> have of deceiving their dupes. You may see women, who earn money by 105 the prostitution of their bodily charms, clinging to those enamoured of them as though they intensely loved them. It is not these that they love; they love themselves and are greedy for their daily takings. You may note flatterers cherishing often enough hatred that words cannot express for those upon ὄψοφαγίαν δὲ καὶ λαιμαργίαν ἀγαπῶντας, ὕφ' ὧν ἀναπέιθονται τοὺς χορηγοὺς τῶν ἀμέτρων ἐπι-106 θυμιῶν περιέπειν. τὸ δὲ τῆς ἀκιβδηλεύτου φιλίας<sup>1</sup>

PHILO

 δένδρον ἀποσεισάμενον καὶ μεθέμενον ταῦτα καρπὸν
 τοῖς χρησομένοις ὠφελιμώτατον οἶσει, τὸ ἀδέκα-στον. εὐνοια γάρ ἐστι βούλησις τοῦ τῷ πλησίον εἶναι<sup>2</sup> τὰ ἀγαθὰ αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> χάριν ἐκείνου. αἱ δέ γε χαμαιτύπαι καὶ οἱ κόλακες αὐτῶν ἔνεκα σπουδά-ζουσιν, αἱ μὲν τοῖς ἐρασταῖς, οἱ δὲ τοῖς κολακευο-μένοις τὰ ἀγαθὰ προσάγειν. τὰς οὖν εἰρωνείας
 καὶ γοητείας καθάπερ ἐπιφυομένας κῆρας τῷ
 φιλίας φυτῷ περικοπτέον.

107 XXV. Ἱερουργίαι γε μὴν καὶ ἡ περὶ τὰς θυσίας
 ἀγιστεία<sup>4</sup> βλάστημα κάλλιστον, ἀλλὰ παραναπέφυκεν
 αὐτῷ κακόν, δεισιδειμονία, ἣν πρὶν χλοῆσαι λυσιτελεῖς ἐκτεμεῖν. ἔνιοι γὰρ ὠήθησαν τὸ βου-θυτεῖν εὐσέβειαν εἶναι, καὶ ἐξ ὧν ἂν κλέψωσιν ἢ ἀρνήσωσιν ἢ χρεωκοπήσωσιν ἢ ἀρπάσωσιν ἢ λεηλατήσωσι μοίρας ἀπονέμουσι τοῖς βωμοῖς, οἱ
 δυσκάθαρτοι, τὸ μὴ δοῦναι δίκην ἐφ' οἷς ἐξήμαρτον 108 ὄνιον εἶναι νομίζοντες. ἀλλὰ γὰρ, εἴπομι' ἂν αὐτοῖς, ἀδέκαστόν ἐστιν, ὧ οὗτοι, τὸ θεοῦ δικαστήριον, ὡς τοὺς μὲν γνώμη κεχρημένους ὑπαιτίῳ,
 κἂν καθ' ἅπασαν ἡμέραν ἑκατὸν βόας ἀνάγωσιν,
 ἀποστρέφεισθαι, τοὺς δ' ἀνυπαιτίους, κἂν μηδὲν
 θύωσι τὸ παράπαν, ἀποδέχεσθαι. βωμοῖς γὰρ ἀπύροις, περὶ οὓς ἀρεταὶ χορεύουσι, γέγηθεν ὁ θεός, ἀλλ' οὐ πυρὶ πολλῷ φλέγουσιν, ὅπερ αἱ τῶν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. σοφίας.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. τούτων πλησίον γὰρ εἶναι.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. αὐτὰ.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. πίστις.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "cutting debts." Cf. Plutarch i. 87 B χρεωκοπίδης.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 105-108

whom they fawn, in love with rich dishes and over-eating, and induced by nothing else than these to court those who glut their measureless greed. The tree of genuine friendship will shake off and be quit of these things, and will bear fruit most beneficial to those who shall eat of it, namely honesty. For real goodwill is a desire that good <sup>a</sup> should befall your neighbour for his own sake, whereas it is to further objects of their own that harlots and toadies take such pains to offer the things that will please, the former in their designs upon their lovers, the latter upon their patrons. So we must treat everything that smacks of sham and quackery as we treat hurtful ongrowths, and cut it away from the tree of friendship.

XXV. Again, sacred ministrations and the holy service of sacrifices is a plant most fair, but it has a parasitic growth that is evil, namely superstition, and it is well to apply the knife to this before its green leaves appear. For some have imagined that it is piety to slaughter oxen, and allot to the altars portions of what they have got by stealing, or by repudiating debts, or by defrauding creditors,<sup>b</sup> or by seizing property and cattle-lifting, thinking, in their gross defilement, that impunity for their offences is a thing that can be bought. "Nay, nay," I would say to them, "no bribes, O foolish ones, can reach God's tribunal." He turns His face away from those who approach with guilty intent, even though they lead to His altar a hundred bullocks every day, and accepts the guiltless, although they sacrifice nothing at all. God delights in altars beset by a choir of Virtues, albeit no fire burn on them. He takes no delight in blazing altar fires fed by the unhallowed sacrifices of men to whose hearts sacrifice is unknown.

PHILO

- ἀνιέρων ἄθυτοι θυσίαι συνανέφλεξαν ὑπομιμνήσκουσαι τὰς ἐκάστων ἀγνοίας τε καὶ διαμαρτίας·
 καὶ γὰρ εἶπέ που Μωυσῆς θυσίαν “ἀναμιμνή-109 σκουσαν ἁμαρτίαν.” πάντ’ οὖν τὰ τοιαῦτα μεγάλης γιγνόμενα ζημίας αἷτια χρῆ περιαιρεῖν
 καὶ ἀποκόπτειν ἐπομένους τῷ χρησμῷ, ἐν ᾧ διείρηται περιαιρεῖν τὴν ἀκαθαρσίαν ξύλου τοῦ 110 φυτευθέντος ἐδωδύμον. XXVI. ἀλλ’ ἡμεῖς μὲν οὐδὲ διδασκόμενοι πρὸς εὐμάθειαν ἐπιδίδομεν· ἔνιοι δὲ αὐτοδιδάκτω τῇ φύσει χρησάμενοι τὰγαθὸν ἐξέδυσαν τῶν ἐνειλημμένων
 βλαβῶν, καθάπερ ὁ ἀσκητῆς ἐπίκλην Ἰακώβ·
 οὗτος γὰρ “ῥάβδους ἐλέπισε λεπίσματα λευκὰ
 περισύρων τὸ χλωρόν,” ἵνα τῆς ἐν μέσοις ποικιλίας
 σκοταίοις καὶ ζοφεροῖς πανταχοῦ ἀναιρεθείσης
 τὸ μὴ τέχνη ποικιλλόμενον,<sup>1</sup> φύσει δὲ γεννώμενον ἀδελφὸν αὐτῆς λευκὸν εἶδος ἀναδειχθῆ.
 111 παρὸ καὶ ἐν τῷ περὶ τῆς λέπρας | τεθέντι νόμῳ
 [346] διείρηται τὸν μηκέτι διηνηθισμένον ποικιλία χρωμάτων ὄλον δὲ λευκωθέντα δι’ ὄλων ἀπὸ κεφαλῆς <ἄκρας> ἕως ποδῶν ἐσχάτων καθαρὸν εἶναι, ἵνα κατὰ τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος μετάβασιν τὸ ποικίλον
 καὶ πανοῦργον καὶ ἀντιρρέπον καὶ ἐπαμφοτερίζον
 τῆς διανοίας μεθέμενοι πάθος τὸ ἀποίικilon καὶ
 ἀνευδοίαστον ἀληθείας ἀπλοῦν χρῶμα δεξώμεθα.
 112 Τὸ μὲν οὖν τὸ ξύλον φάσκει περικαθαίρεσθαι
 λόγον ἔχει βεβαιούμενον ἀληθεία, τὸ δὲ τὸν καρπὸν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ποικιλλομένη.

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 108-112

Nay, these sacrifices do but put Him in remembrance of the ignorance and offences of the several offerers ; for Moses, as we know, speaks of sacrifice " bringing sin to remembrance " (Num. v. 15). All such defile- 109
ments entail great loss. We must clear the way and cut them off in obedience to the oracle, in which a command is given to clear away the uncleanness of the fruit-trees that have been planted.

XXVI. But, while we, even under teachers, fail to 110 make progress and become apt pupils, some, taking advantage of a nature which is its own teacher, have released the good in them from the hurtful growths which had fastened upon it. It was so with the trainer of self, whose name was Jacob, for he " peeled rods, stripping off the green bark, and causing them to shew white where they were peeled " (Gen. xxx. 37). His aim<sup>a</sup> was to do away entirely with the variety and changeableness of hue, which is associated with the misty darkness and gloom of the undeveloped stages ; and to bring into full view the whiteness, which is due to no artificial variegation, but is akin to Nature, to which it owes its birth. It is in accordance with this that in the law laid down regarding leprosy it is enjoined that the leper is clean whose body is no longer particoloured, shewing a variety of hues, but has turned white all over from head to foot (Lev. xiii. 12 f.). The aim of this ordinance is that, by way of leaving behind us bodily concerns,<sup>a</sup> we may abandon the condition of mind which is changeful and vacillating, ready to put its hand to any project and to face both ways, and may take the plain hue of truth with its freedom from changefulness and indecision.

The statement that the trees undergo a cleansing 112
is quite reasonable and accords with facts ; the

PHILO

- οὐ πάνυ τῷ ἐναργεῖ πεπίστωται<sup>1</sup>. σῦκα γὰρ ἦ σταφυλὴν ἢ συνόλως καρπὸν οὐδεὶς γεωργῶν
 113 περικαθαίρει. XXVII. καὶ μὴν φησί γε· “ὁ καρπὸς αὐτοῦ τρία ἔτη ἔσται ἀπερικάθατος,<sup>2</sup> οὐ βρωθήσεται,” ὡς εἰωθότος δήπου περικαθαίρεσθαι αἰεὶ. λεκτέον οὖν, ὅτι καὶ τοῦθ’ ἐν ἔστι τῶν ἐν ὑπονοίαις ἀποδιδομένων, τοῦ ῥητοῦ μὴ σφόδρα συναδοντος. ἡ δὲ λέξις ἐστὶν ἀμφίβολος· δηλοῖ γὰρ ἐν μὲν τι τοιοῦτον “ὁ καρπὸς αὐτοῦ τρία ἔτη ἔσται,” εἶτα ἰδίᾳ τὸ “ἀπερικάθατος οὐ βρωθώσεται,” ἕτερον δὲ “ὁ καρπὸς αὐτοῦ τρία ἔτη ἔσται ἀπερικάθατος,” ἔπειθ’ οὕτως “<οὐ>
 114 βρωθήσεται.” κατὰ μὲν οὖν τὸ πρότερον σημαινόμενον ταῦτα ἂν τις ἐκδέξαιτο, τῶν τριῶν ἐτῶν ἀντὶ τοῦ τριμεροῦς χρόνου παραλαμβανομένων, ὃς εἰς τὸν παρεληλυθότα καὶ ἐνεστῶτα καὶ μέλλοντα τέμνεσθαι πέφυκεν,<sup>3</sup> ὁ τῆς παιδείας καρπὸς ἔσται καὶ ὑποστήσεται καὶ μενεῖ σῶος κατὰ πάντα τὰ χρόνου τμήματα, ἴσον τῷ δι’ αἰῶνος φθορὰν μὴ δεχόμενος· ἄφθατος γὰρ ἦ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ φύσις. “ἀπερικάθατος δὲ καρπὸς οὐ βρωθήσεται,” παρόσον οἱ μὲν κεκαθαρμένοι καὶ ὑγιαίνοντες ἀστείοι λόγοι ψυχὴν τρέφουσι καὶ νοῦν αὔξουσιν, οὐ τρόφιμοι δὲ εἰσιν οἱ ἐναντίοι νόσον καὶ φθορὰν
 115 ἐπιπέμποντες<sup>4</sup> αὐτῇ. κατὰ δὲ τὸ ἕτερον σημαινόμενον ὡς περ ἀναπόδεικτος <λόγος><sup>5</sup> λέγεται διχῶς,

<sup>1</sup> MSS. πεπιστευται.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἀκάθατος.

<sup>3</sup> The first sentence of § 114 is punctuated after Mangey and Heinemann.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. ἐπιλάμποντες.

<sup>5</sup> λόγος is inserted before λέγεται with Cohn (conj.).

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 112-115

statement that the fruit does so is by no means made good by what we see before our eyes ; for no gardener cleanses figs or grapes or any fruit at all. XXVII. And yet it says, "The fruit shall remain unclesed for three years ; it shall not be eaten," as though it were the custom to cleanse it regularly as a matter of course. Let me say, then, that this again is one of the points to be interpreted allegorically, the literal interpretation being quite out of keeping with facts. The sentence can be taken in two ways. Read in one way, it means something of this kind, " Its fruit shall be for three years " ; then, as an independent sentence, " it shall not be eaten unclesed." Read in another way, " Its fruit shall be unclesed for three years," and then the words " it shall not be eaten." Led by the sense yielded 114 by the former punctuation, we arrive at this result. We take the three years to represent time in its natural threefold division into past, present, and future. The fruit of instruction—so we understand the words—shall be, subsist, remain free from interference, through all the divisions of time. This is equivalent to saying that throughout eternity it is exempt from corruption ; for the nature of good is incorruptible. " But unclesed fruit shall not be eaten." This is due to the fact that right teaching, having submitted to a cleansing which makes it wholesome, nourishes the soul and makes the mind grow ; while teaching of a contrary sort is devoid of nourishment, and lets loose upon the soul corruption and disease. An illustration will help us to see the senses which the other arrangement of the words may convey. An argument is called " in- 115 demonstrable," either when it has such inherent

PHILO

- ὁ τε δυσκόλως ἀργαλεότητος ἔνεκα ἐπιδεικνύμενος
καὶ ὁ ἐνθένδε γνώριμος ἐξ αὐτοῦ, τὸ σαφές οὐκ
ἐκ τῆς ἐτέρου μαρτυρίας, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῆς ἐμφαινομένης ἐναργείας αὐτῷ πιστούμενος, ᾧ<sup>1</sup> πρὸς τοὺς συλλογιστικούς εἶωθεν ἢ διαλεκτικῆ λόγους χρῆσθαι, οὕτως ἀπερικάθατος καρπὸς ὁ τε δεόμενος
καθάρσεως καὶ μὴ κεκαθαρμένος, καὶ ὁ τηλ-116 αὐγέστατος. τοιοῦτός ἐστιν ὁ παιδείας καρπὸς “ τρία ἔτη,” τουτέστι τὸν τριμερῆ χρόνον, τὸν σύμπαντα αἰῶνα, καθαρώτατος καὶ διαυγέστατος,
ὑπ' οὐδενὸς βλαβεροῦ συσκιαζόμενος, λουτρῶν καὶ
περιρραντηρίων ἢ συνόλως ἐτέρου τινὸς τῶν εἰς 117 κάθαρσιν τεινόντων οὐδαμῆ οὐδαμῶς χρεῖος ὢν.
- [347] XXVIII. “ Τῷ | δὲ ἔτει ” φησί “ τῷ τετάρτῳ
ἔσται πᾶς ὁ καρπὸς αὐτοῦ ἅγιος, αἰνετὸς<sup>2</sup> τῷ
κυρίῳ.” τὸν τέσσαρα ἀριθμὸν πολλαχοῦ μὲν τῆς νομοθεσίας, μάλιστα δὲ ἐν τῷ καταλόγῳ τῆς τοῦ
παντὸς γενέσεως, ἀποσεμνύνειν ἔοικεν ὁ προ-118 φητικὸς λόγος· τὸ γὰρ αἰσθητὸν καὶ τίμιον φῶς,
τὸ καὶ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων σαφέστατον γνώρισμα,
καὶ τοὺς τοκέας αὐτοῦ ἥλιον καὶ σελήνην καὶ τὸν ιερώτατον χορὸν τῶν ἀστέρων, οἳ νύκτα τε καὶ ἡμέραν, ἔτι τε μῆνας καὶ ἐνιαυτοὺς ἀνατολαῖς καὶ
δύσεσιν ἐπεράτωσαν ἀριθμοῦ τε φύσιν ἀνέδειξαν, 119 οἷς τὸ μέγιστον ψυχῆς ἀγαθὸν<sup>3</sup> ἀνάκειται, ἡμέρα
τετάρτη φησὶ δημιουργηθῆναι. διαφερόντως δὲ
καὶ νῦν αὐτὸν ἐκτετίμηκεν, οὐκ ἐν ἐτέρῳ χρόνῳ
τὸν τῶν δένδρων καρπὸν ἀναθεῖς τῷ θεῷ ἢ ἐνιαυ-120 τῷ τῆς φυτείας τετάρτῳ. λόγον γὰρ καὶ φυσι-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. καὶ: Cohn conj. ᾧ καὶ.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἐν ἔτος.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἀπάτη. See App. p. 497.

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 115-120

difficulties that it is hardly capable of demonstration, or when its force is recognized at once by its mere statement, when it relies for its certainty not on any proof drawn from elsewhere, but from its self-evident character ; the kind of argument which Logic usually employs in formal syllogisms. Just so can the word "without cleansing" be used either of fruit that needs cleansing and has not received it, or of fruit that is perfectly bright and brilliant. Such is the 116 fruit of education "through three years," that is through past, present, and future, that is all eternity, wholly pure and bright, bedimmed by no hurtful thing, utterly exempt from need of washings or lustrations or anything else whatever whose purpose is to cleanse.

XXVIII. "And in the fourth year," it says, "all 117 its fruit shall be holy, for giving praise unto the lord" (Lev. xix. 24). In many parts of the Lawgiving, but above all in the record of the creation of the universe, we see the prophetic word glorifying the number 4. For (Gen. i. 14) it ascribes to the fourth day the making of those things on which depends the soul's chiefest good<sup>a</sup>; the precious light of the senses. 118 which gives us most sure knowledge of itself and all other objects; light's parents, the sun and moon and that most holy choir of the stars; these by their risings and settings determined the bounds of months and years, and revealed number's place in nature. And in the passage before us it has accorded 119 highest honour to the number 4, by making the fruit of the trees an offering to God at no other time than in the fourth year from their planting. The number indeed involves deep principles both 120

<sup>a</sup> See App. p. 496.

PHILO

- κώτατον καὶ ἠθικώτατον ἔχει· τὰς τε γοῦν τοῦ παντὸς ρίζας, ἐξ ὧν ὁ κόσμος, τέτταρας εἶναι 121 συμβέβηκε, γῆν, ὕδωρ, ἀέρα, πῦρ, καὶ τὰς ἐτησίους ὥρας ἰσαριθμούς χειμῶνα καὶ θέρος καὶ τὰς μεθορίους, ἕαρ τε καὶ μετόπωρον. πρεσβύτατός τε αὐτῶν τετραγώνων ὁ ἀριθμὸς ὧν ἐν ὀρθαῖς γωνίαις, 122 ὡς τὸ κατὰ γεωμετρίαν δηλοῖ σχῆμα, ἐξετάζεται· αἱ δ' εἰσὶν ὀρθότητος λόγου σαφῆ δείγματα, πηγὴ δὲ ἀέναος ἀρετῶν ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος. ἀνάγκη μέντοι τὰς τοῦ τετραγώνου πλευρὰς ἴσας εἶναι· δικαιοσύνην δὲ ἰσότης τὴν ἐξάρχον καὶ ἡγεμονίδα τῶν ἀρετῶν ἔτεκεν· ὥστε ἰσότητος καὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ πάσης 123 ἀρετῆς χωρὶς τῶν<sup>1</sup> ἄλλων ἐπιδείκνυται τὸν ἀριθμὸν εἶναι σύμβολον.

- Καλεῖται δ' ἡ τετράς καὶ “πᾶς,” ὅτι τοὺς ἄχρι δεκάδος καὶ αὐτὴν δεκάδα περιέχει δυνάμει.
 XXIX. ὅτι μὲν οὖν τοὺς πρὸ αὐτῆς, παντί τῳ
 124 δῆλον· ὅτι δὲ καὶ τοὺς μετ' αὐτῆν, ἐξ ἐπιλογισμοῦ ράδιον ἰδεῖν [ἐν ἀριθμῶ μὲν ἕξ]· ἐν, δύο, τρία, τέτταρα συντιθέντες ὃ ἡποροῦμεν εὐρήσομεν. ἐκ μὲν γὰρ ἐνὸς καὶ τεττάρων πεντὰς ἔσται, ἐκ δὲ δυεῖν καὶ τεττάρων ἑξᾶς, ἑβδομάς δὲ ἐκ τριῶν καὶ τεττάρων· καὶ κατὰ τὴν διπλὴν σύνθεσιν ἐξ ἐνὸς καὶ τριῶν καὶ τεττάρων ὀγδοάς, καὶ πάλιν ἐκ
 125 δυεῖν καὶ τριῶν καὶ τεττάρων ὁ ἐννέα ἀριθμὸς, δεκάς δὲ ἐκ πάντων· ἐν γὰρ καὶ δύο καὶ τρία καὶ τέτταρα δέκα γεννᾷ. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ Μωυσῆς εἶπεν, ὅτι “ἔτει τῷ τετάρτῳ ἔσται πᾶς ὁ καρπὸς αὐτοῦ ἅγιος”· ἄρτιον γὰρ καὶ ὀλόκληρον καὶ

<sup>1</sup> mss. ὧν, which might be translated “besides the other things which it (i.e. the number four) displays.”

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 120-125

of physics and ethics.<sup>a</sup> For the roots of the universe, out of which the world grows, are four—earth, water, air, fire. Of the same number are the seasons, Winter and Summer, and those that come between, Spring and Autumn. And, since it is the first of all numbers produced by squaring another number, it is in right angles that it presents itself to view, as is made evident by the geometrical figure. And right angles are clear pictures of rightness of reasoned thought, and right reason is an everflowing spring of virtue. Again, the sides of the square are necessarily equal: and equality is the mother of justice, empress and queen of the virtues. Thus the word of prophecy shews that this number is the symbol of equality, and righteousness, and every virtue in a way that the other numbers are not.

The number 4 is also called "all" or "totality" because it potentially embraces the numbers up to 10 and 10 itself. That it so embraces those which precede it is plain to everyone: and it is easy to see by further reckoning that it so embraces the numbers that come after it also. Add together  $1 + 2 + 3 + 4$ , and we shall find what we wanted. For out of  $1 + 4$  we shall get 5; out of  $2 + 4$  we shall get 6; 7 out of  $3 + 4$ ; and (by adding three instead of two numbers together) from  $1 + 3 + 4$  we get 8; and again from  $2 + 3 + 4$  we get the number 9; and from all taken together we get 10; for  $1 + 2 + 3 + 4$  produces 10. This is why Moses said "In the fourth year all the fruit shall be holy." For the number 4 is, in relation

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Leg. All. i. 39. The "ethical" interpretation begins at "right angles are pictures of rightness." What precedes is "physical" in Philo's sense of the word.

<sup>b</sup> See App. p. 497.

PHILO

πλήρη, ὡς καὶ σύμπαντα, ὡς τύπῳ φάναι, λόγον ἔχει, διὰ τὸ δεκάδα, ἣν τετράς ἐγέννησε, πρῶτον καμπτήρα τῶν ἀπὸ μονάδος συντιθεμένων ἀριθμῶν [348] ἑστάναι· | δεκάς δὲ καὶ τετράς “ πᾶς ” ἐν ἀριθμοῖς<sup>1</sup> εἶναι λέγεται, ἀλλὰ δεκάς μὲν ἀποτελέσματι, τετράς δὲ δυνάμει.

126 XXX. Τόν τε παιδείας καρπὸν οὐ μόνον ἅγιον, ἀλλὰ καὶ αἰνετὸν εἶναί φησι προσηκόντως· ἐκάστη μὲν γε τῶν ἀρετῶν ἔστι χρῆμα ἅγιον, εὐχαριστία δὲ ὑπερβαλλόντως· θεῷ δὲ οὐκ ἔνεστι γνησίως εὐχαριστήσαι δι’ ὧν νομίζουσιν οἱ πολλοὶ κατασκευῶν ἀναθημάτων θυσιῶν—οὐδὲ γὰρ σύμπας ὁ κόσμος ἱερὸν ἀξιοχρεῶν ἂν γένοιτο πρὸς τὴν τούτου τιμῆν—, ἀλλὰ δι’ ἐπαίνων καὶ ὕμνων, οὐχ οὕς ἢ γεγωνὸς ἄσεται φωνή, ἀλλὰ οὕς ὁ ἀειδῆς καὶ καθαρῶτατος νοῦς ἐπηγήσει καὶ ἀναμέλσει.

127 παλαιὸς γοῦν ἄδεται λόγος <ὁς><sup>2</sup> ὑπὸ μὲν σοφῶν εὐρεθεῖς, μνήμη δέ, οἷα φιλεῖ, κατὰ διαδοχὰς παραδοθεῖς τοῖς μετέπειτα, οὐδὲ τὰς αἰὲ παιδείας λίχνους ἡμετέρας παρήλθεν ἀκοάς. ἔστι δὲ τοιοῦσδε· ἠνίκα, φασί, τὸν σύμπαντα κόσμον ὁ ποιητῆς ἔτελεσφόρησεν, ἐνὸς τῶν ὑποφητῶν ἐπύθετο, εἴ τι ποθεῖ μὴ γενόμενον τῶν ὅσα κατὰ γῆς καὶ καθ’ ὕδατος ἢ ὅσα κατὰ τὴν μετάρσιον αἴρος ἢ τὴν

128 ἐσχάτην τοῦ παντὸς φύσιν οὐρανοῦ γέγονεν. ὁ δὲ ἀπεκρίνατο τέλεια μὲν καὶ πλήρη πάντα διὰ πάντων εἶναι, ἐν δὲ μόνον ζητεῖν, τὸν ἐπαινέτην αὐτῶν λόγον, ὃς τὰς ἐν πᾶσι καὶ τοῖς βραχυτάτοις

<sup>1</sup> MSS. μὲν ἀριθμὸς.

<sup>2</sup> <ὁς> conj. Tr.

<sup>a</sup> Or “prophets,” “interpreters.”

NOAH'S WORK AS A PLANTER, 125-128

to other numbers, even and complete and full and, in a loose sense, universal, owing to the fact that 10, the offspring of 4, is fixed as first turning-point of the numbers from 1 onwards in a series. And 10 and 4 are said to be "all" or "totality" among numbers; 10 being so in realized actuality, and 4 potentially.

